I do want to make a remark with reference to the speech just delivered by the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Morningstar) in respect to unemployment. I think it is pertinent I should say something about that matter, inasmuch as it is referred to in the amendment moved by the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas).

The figures for unemployment in this province are substantial, as the hon. members of the House well know, and I am not going to argue this afternoon that the province has the initial responsibility for unemployment. I think I could make a much better argument for the other side of the picture.

I have said in this House many times in the days that are gone that I believe—with other hon. members—that the primary responsibility for unemployment does lie with the federal administration in this country, inasmuch as the Federal Government is the national government and unemployment is a national problem. But having said that, Mr. Speaker, one should go on and say that even if you accept that premise, we in this province cannot fail but be aware of the unemployment situation, and the implications it might have on the economy of our province and on the lives of our people. I agree very heartily with the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Morningstar) when he made the suggestion that the government of this province should sit in with the federal administration and try to work out a plan which would be a common attack on the problem of unemployment.

Although the Federal Government has the basic responsibility for unemployment, I am not sure—and I do not think this government would argue—that we should not accept financial responsibility to a certain extent. I think the problem resolves itself into this: that if the Government of this Province and the Federal Government could sit down together and work out what would be a unified solution to the problem of unemployment, then we would get somewhere, because to me, Mr. Speaker, it is incredible—and I think it is to every hon. member of this House—that when these periods of recession appear, in which there is an increase in unemployment, there is always a wrangling, there is always a dispute or a difference of opinion as to whose responsibility unemployment really is.

After all, the responsibility for unemployment belongs to the people of Canada, and Ontario is part of this great country, and consequently must enter into the picture. I am not saying for a moment, that I feel this government is not prepared to sit down and work out a long-range programme to combat this problem, but I am saying it should be done, and that plans should be laid and programmes put forward which will meet this problem head-on.

I want to say just one other word with respect to the problem of unemployment. I, for one—and I think this is concurred in by a majority of the hon. members of this House—would not again countenance the cash relief system for able-bodied men, because, in this province and in this country, there are things to be done; there are great projects which can be moved forward which will be beneficial, not only to the workers but the body politic of the country itself.

I make those remarks, Mr. Speaker, to indicate that I think in Ontario we must recognize there is a problem, and that our duty, it seems to me, is to sit down with the federal authorities and try to work out a long-range programme, which will adequately meet the problem, and find a solution to it, in the days which lie ahead.

I do not want to refer to many of the speeches which were made in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne, but I will say, in a general way, I think the speeches were up to par, if not above it.

We have listened to some very well-considered speeches, which were very well delivered, indeed. All of them were thought-provoking and all brought something new to the attention of the hon. members of this Legislature. If I do not refer to the various speeches, I do not want the speakers to assume that I have had any lack of interest in their contribution to the debate. It is, rather, because it would be not only impossible, but, I think, unwise on this occasion to deal specifically with the various speeches that were made. I want to say, however, in reference to the speech last night of the hon. member for Kingston

(Mr. Nickle)—and I regret that he is not in his seat at the moment—the thing that impressed me about his speech was that it seemed to me he was much less a crusader than he was a year ago. He has mellowed much in the 12 months that have passed, and in that mellowing process, I imagine, he has rendered himself more liable to a position in the Cabinet than if he had maintained the attitude he displayed in this House a year ago.

And may I say further in reference to that particular point, that I think the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) would make a valuable addition to the present Cabinet. I am sure the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) would welcome any addition to the present Cabinet that he has in the House. Any addition is bound to be for the good, it could not, I think, be otherwise. I just leave that thought with the hon. Prime Minister and say to the hon. member for Kingston that he can expect a call now that he has mellowed to the point that he does not criticize the government much any more. In spite of that, however, his speech was interesting and I am glad to see that he has now taken his seat, because, as I proceed, with my remarks, it may be I shall have further reference to something that he said.

Following the remarks of the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) in moving the amendment to the amendment, I say now, as I said in a former speech in this House, that I feel the Ontario Government should do something more than it is doing for housing in the Province of Ontario. I cannot get it out of my mind that we have a responsibility to provide good houses for our people in this province. The hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) reminded me last night that I should know there was some $40 million in this big budget surplus that came from the Federal Government. I do know that I have taken that into consideration. But it just serves to point up the fact that we have in the Federal Government a great benefactor. May I point out to the hon. member (Mr. Nickle) and to the House that in this windfall that you receive from the Federal Government, there are ample funds to provide this province with a housing programme supplementary to the National Housing Act and a housing programme worthy of the name. I cannot help but reiterate that there is a place in this province for the government of the province to step into the housing field and do something of a worthwhile character.

Mr. Speaker, I want to devote the rest of my time to the question of highways and I want to deal with this subject as dispassionately as I can, and I think I can do it in that spirit.

An announcement was made the other day by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) that 6 contractors in this province were under the careful eye of his officers and that the books and records of those companies would be seized under a warrant executed by the officers of the provincial police. Now that was a statement of fact, Mr. Speaker, and I am not unduly concerned at the moment as to why the hon. Attorney-General made the announcement, rather than the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). One might draw conclusions as to why the statement was made by the hon. Attorney-General, but that matters very little. The statement was made that the government of this province had taken it into its own hands to raid the offices and collect the books and documents belonging to 6 contractors who had contracts in Northern Ontario and on, I presume, the Trans-Canada Highway.

That simply points up, Mr. Speaker, the growing dimensions of the gathering immensity of this highways problem. It served to point out to the people of Ontario that this is no ordinary set of irregularities; it is a set of irregularities that transcends anything we have had in this province for many years past in respect to dealing with corrupt practices and irregularities.

It points up that when one is mindful of the fact that this deals with only one division of the Highways Department in this province, one is reminded that it is hardly likely that skullduggery is so rampant in one particular division of the Highways Department of this province and that in the other 16 divisions there would be no skullduggery. I think it is rather obvious to those who have listened to this matter being discussed, that where you find these irregularities to such an extent in one particular division, you are apt to find that they are prevalent in other divisions of the Highways Department. So I say this chapter-by-chapter that we get from day-to-day of the growing irregularities in the Highways Department serves to emphasize to the people of Ontario the immensity of this problem and the great source of worry and concern that it is to the province.

Moreover, Mr. Speaker, because of the immensity of the set of circumstances—and I say to the hon. Prime Minister—that it calls for the most exhaustive examination of the policies and practices of the Department of Highways, not in one division alone, but in all 17 divisions of that department in this province.

The people of Ontario, who pay the taxes in the form of gasoline taxes, licence fees and driving permits, have a fundamental right to expect a most thorough investigation, and those of us in this House who represent the people back home and who speak for those people, regardless of our political affiliation, will be, I suggest, derelict in our duty if we do not implement the rights of the people in regard to finding out what is done with their money and assuring them that it is spent properly and that no irregularities will continue to exist.

The hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) in his remarks made, I believe, last night, expressed confidence that the Leader of the Government (Mr. Frost) would see to it that there was a thorough examination of this whole problem. May I say to him and to this House, Mr. Speaker, that it is not enough that the government should ask for its own interest and from its own viewpoint in regard to this whole problem. It is essential, I say, that the Legislature, which is in essence outside the government and which, as a whole, acts for all hon. members of the House irrespective of party and speaks for the province as a whole, should cast aside anything that stands in the way of a complete investigation. Assuming therefore, Mr. Speaker, that we are agreed there should be a complete and exhaustive investigation, how are we going to go about it? What avenue are we going to use and what set of rules are we going to adopt?

We have proposed in the Amendment to the Speech from the Throne that there should have been a judicial commission of some kind set up to examine this entire situation. The government of course is adverse to that proposal and it is not going to accept it, I understand. Indeed, I would be greatly surprised if at this late date it does accept that suggestion.

If we do not accept the suggestion of a judicial commission, how then are we going to probe into these matters and do so in a way which will be exhaustive and complete enough to satisfy the people of Ontario that from this time on there will be a clean sheet in the Department of Highways?

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) suggested that the Public Accounts Committee could be called and that this matter could be examined by that committee. May I say to him and to you, Mr. Speaker, that the function of the Public Accounts Committee, as I understand it, is to deal with specific items that appear in the public accounts from year to year, one item or a number of items. But never in my experience have I known the Public Accounts Committee to be called upon to deal with an examination so wide as this one needs to be and dealing with the ramifications of the administration of a whole department of government. I repeat, because I think it is important, that the function of the Public Accounts Committee, and the way that it has been used down through the years, has been to examine a particular item in public accounts, but never to my knowledge has it been used to examine the complete administrative practices and the whole setup of a particular department of government.

Instances have occurred time after time, Mr. Speaker, where this problem has arisen. I remember, and so does the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) a few years ago when the hon. Mr. Drew, who was then leading the Opposition, made some charges in respect to the Department of Lands and Forests and suggested that they be dealt with by a Select Committee of the House. That suggestion was acquiesced in by the government of the day, because it felt, as I think the government should feel today, that to go into the ramifications of an entire department of government is not the function of a Public Accounts Committee. So a Select Committee was set up in that instance and carried on in the interval between sessions, and, in due course, rendered its report to this House.

I do not know, Mr. Speaker, just how we can take this before the Public Accounts Committee and do the kind of job which the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) suggested should and would be done by this administration. Quite frankly, I do not see how we can do that, because as hon. members of the House are well aware, the Public Accounts Committee dies with the House. When the House is over, the Public Accounts Committee is likewise over. It does not continue after the session of the House prorogues. There are, I suppose, only 3 weeks or so left in this session of the Legislature, and even if there were no other committees to interfere, Mr. Speaker, it would be impossible to give this matter the attention it deserves and the scrutiny it must have, if we sat for the whole 3 weeks between now and the date that this session prorogues. But as well as that, Mr. Speaker, there are 17 committees of the House sitting, 2 or 3 of them every day from now until the end of the session. The Committee on Redistribution set up yesterday by motion of the hon. Prime Minister, is a very important committee. We will have to consider the legislation that comes before it and the other 17 committees between now and the time at which the session prorogues. I make the suggestion to the House and to the hon. Prime Minister that it is just fooling with nothing to say that we can meet and give this matter the examination it deserves before the Public Accounts Committee and during the life of the legislative session we are now engaged in. Because, Mr. Speaker, and I want to emphasize this point for a moment or so, this examination, if it is to be the kind of examination that I think we should have and that the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) suggested last night, is going to take a long time. It is going to take many weeks of examination.

For instance, we will want to know, and properly so, I suggest, how it was possible for these irregularities to persist under the very noses of auditors and inspectors of the Department of Highways. How did they get away with the things that are supposed to have gone on, when we had auditors and inspectors who were supposed to be working for us? This matter will have to be thoroughly examined by the committee. We will have to draw our conclusions after evidence from many witnesses will have been adduced by the committee. Another thing that will have to come before the committee, and upon which a decision will have to be reached, is this, Mr. Speaker: we want to find out, through the channels of a committee or some investigating body, if the divisional engineers were instructed to "bail out" contractors who had bid too low. That, of course, is the root of this problem, and the House is well aware of it.

It is suggested on some sides that, from the divisional engineer down, there is some trouble. I cannot conceive, Mr. Speaker, how all the trouble would lie from the divisional engineer level downward. I cannot conceive how there was not collusion of some kind between those at the divisional engineer level and below on the one hand and those above the divisional engineer level on the other. We have got to find those things out. Those things are important, indeed, and it strikes me, Mr. Speaker, after listening the other day to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) calling for the books of these contractors—and this expresses my own personal opinion and I think perhaps it coincides with the views of many other hon. members in this House—I doubt very much if the engineers and those from that level down were wholly to blame for the mess that we are in. I believe there must have been direction in some way and some form by those above the engineering level and that it was left to the engineers to carry out those instructions.

To me, Mr. Speaker, that is the crux of the whole matter. I cannot believe that all is bad from the divisional engineer level down and that everything is in order in the higher levels of administration. I would suggest to the government and to the Department of Highways that the "high brass" in the Department of Highways should stop shouting "thief" and stop pointing an accusing finger at those from the engineer level down, and turn the spotlight on their own front door and determine if some of the instructions issued to the divisional engineers could be carried out without inviting corruption and irregularity. I suggest that is the crux of the whole matter. I think it will be found as we move forward in this examination that some of the things we have been saying—for instance the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope) suggested the other day that we on this side of the House were trying to go after the little fellow—

MR. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): May I inform the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that this is quite incorrect. The investigations conducted by Messrs. J. B. Woods and Gordon Limited and the auditors involve the whole department.

MR. OLIVER: I am glad to have the assurance of the hon. Prime Minister on that point; I would expect that that would be the sort of investigation that is carried out. When we go before the House Committee we want to know, as I said a few minutes ago, if conditions similar to those prevailing in Fort William are prevalent in other divisions. I think it is fundamental that that knowledge should be before the committee. And we will want to know, in addition, Mr. Speaker, if the department was aware that, prior to the end of the fiscal year, it was the practice of departmental officials under its divisional engineers to step up expenditure in the various districts in order to exhaust the appropriation within that particular district, the idea in mind, of course, being that in that way they would keep their expenditures high. I do not think there is a doubt, Mr. Speaker, certainly not in my mind, that that practice has been in vogue for some time and that there is a practice on the part of those within the divisional engineer's office, as the end of the year draws near, to sort of urge upon the foreman to take on more men. If he tells them he does not need any more men and cannot usefully employ them, that does not make any difference. He is to take them on anyway. The idea behind that is that if he goes past the end of a year with a surplus, his appropriation will be cut the following year.

I think those practices, if they exist in the Department of Highways, should be stopped forthwith.

HON. MR. FROST: I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that he will find tomorrow that the Department of Highways has operated within its estimates. Furthermore, I assure him if in any department, there is the tendency to spend money, in order to live up to an appropriation, that will not be tolerated. Such is not the case. I expect all departments to operate within their appropriations; and the compliment that they receive from me is that they remain well below them.

MR. OLIVER: I am afraid the hon. Prime Minister's expectations sometimes fall on the hard rocks of unreality. What he has in mind is not achieved.

HON. MR. FROST: Look at what we have achieved in the past few years.

MR. OLIVER: I have some little knowledge of what has gone on; and my friend, I think, has too. It is time these practices were stopped, not only in the interests of economy, but in the interest of the welfare of the people generally.

There are other matters which would naturally come before this committee, whatever form it takes. I ask the hon. Prime Minister, as well as the House, seriously to consider the question as to whether we will go before the Public Accounts Committee or if he will recommend the appointment of a Select Committee of the Legislature. So far as the Public Accounts Committee is concerned, the hon. Prime Minister said the other day the provincial auditor would be prepared to make a statement to that committee. I would say that is proper procedure. If the auditor has information arising out of the examinations to date with respect to these irregularities, it is quite proper he should present it to the Public Accounts Committee. But when it goes beyond that, I ask the hon. the Prime Minister to consider the advisability of not making the Public Accounts Committee the medium of examining this whole problem. I suggest to him that, if he is sincere—and I think he is—in wanting to get this thing cleaned up, he cannot conformably, and with sincerity, take this matter before the Public Accounts Committee; it has to go before a committee, or a body of some kind, where ample time will be available, and where the most minute examination can be carried on.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that there will be the most minute and complete examination. He will be satisfied—I think, in fact, everybody will be—with what is done.

Within a day or two I am hopeful the Provincial Auditor, and perhaps others, will produce to the Public Accounts Committee a statement of what has been done, and what procedures have been followed. I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition that no effort will be spared, to see that there is the most complete and minute examination. I assure him of that.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, the hon. Prime Minister said "no effort will be spared." Did he mean to add to that, that nothing would be withheld?

HON. MR. FROST: Absolutely.

MR. OLIVER: That is quite a good understanding to have and to which we can look forward.

I want to say it is my position, Mr. Speaker, that the interests of the province, as a whole, will be best served by the appointment of a Select Committee. If the hon. Prime Minister feels otherwise, we shall have to meet him as best we can. But if he has in mind a full examination of the whole problem, I would suggest to him that it cannot be done before the Public Accounts Committee. So if he wants to pursue that course, we shall just have to see what develops before that committee.

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, I have listened with very great interest to the many excellent speeches which have been given during the course of this debate. As I listened to my hon. friend opposite (Mr. Oliver) again—twice in this debate—very much to my surprise I found that he has pretty well repeated himself. In its main aspects, his second speech covers pretty much the subject-matter which was contained in his first speech. It may be that the hon. Leader of the Opposition thinks he must repeat in order to emphasize. He is limiting his criticism of this government to the same points which he introduced in his original speech. I have read again the amendment put forward to the Address in reply to the Speech from the Throne. It is confined entirely to one point:

That this House regrets that the Speech from the Throne contains no assurance from the government that the serious and widespread irregularities in the Department of Highways will be thoroughly investigated by a Judicial Commission.

That amendment, Mr. Speaker, does not look to me like any attempt to secure a vote of want of confidence in the government. It is an amendment confined to one specific subject, and deals only with a question of procedure. He prefers an investigation by a Judicial Commission. Now he says he is advocating one by a Select Committee. First by a Judicial Commission, or as an alternative by a Select Committee.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition in his amendment this year, has not suggested the government has not carried on in all its branches, in general, in the best interests of the people of this province. He has not suggested that at all. I have just been reading the first speech he made, to see what he did say—and this is the first time I have read Hansard this session—and I think my recollection of his speech is very clear. In that speech I find very much the same type of criticism of this government by which he has attacked it on many occasions before.

This amendment with which we are now faced is in no sense a suggestion that there is any want of confidence in this government; it is merely a suggestion that we are not carrying out—in investigating the situation which is now under inquiry, just the sort of procedure which would suit the hon. Leader of the Opposition and his followers. I need add nothing to what the hon. Prime Minister has said, not only this afternoon, but on other occasions, as to the sort of inquiry which is being undertaken, and the steps which are being carried out to investigate to the very fullest degree any possible defects and irregularities which may have occurred in the department concerned.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition seems to suggest there is something peculiar about the announcement as to search warrants being executed against certain contractors. Surely he knows that the conduct of the prosecutions are being proceeded with, and everything that has to do with the criminal aspects of any of the matters involved, is entirely in the hands of the Department of the Attorney-General. The Special Prosecutor who has been retained for this purpose is a prosecutor for the Attorney-General. In the course of his investigation he made a recommendation that search warrants be issued; and as the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows, a search warrant can be obtained only if there are reasonable grounds for believing there is some information in the books to be seized, which may have some connection with the commission of a crime. It is not a power which can be exercised merely at the whim of any official or of any Minister of government, or by the government itself. The power to execute a search warrant can result only from certain evidence which has to be placed before the judicial officials, to satisfy them there are reasonable grounds to believe that a search might bring forth something which would be relevant to the matter in hand.

On the recommendation I have mentioned those search warrants were issued, and were executed, as I stated in the House the other day. That was a perfectly reasonable proceeding, I think, and surely the hon. Leader of the Opposition does not criticize the fact the announcement was made in this House. As a matter of fact, this is the proper place. I think the House should be informed when an action of that kind is taken, in view of all the circumstances. The search warrants were executed at 10.30 in the morning and the announcement was made at 3 o'clock in the afternoon. Surely there is no complaint about the promptitude of the government in informing the hon. Leader of the Opposition and his followers of what we were doing in order to further the investigations which are being carried on.

Now as to the part played in this whole debate by the hon. Leader of the Opposition: he has touched upon the question of unemployment, and when the assertion was made that there were a number of unemployed the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) beamed; he was happy; he gloated; he was delighted. The only trouble with the hon. member was that he did not find there was as much unemployment as he would have liked to see.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I must say I beamed at seeing that the followers of the hon. Attorney-General, the government party, are also seeing the light. I raised the matter first, and I am glad to see others now see it too.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I thought the hon. member was unduly delighted.

MR. SALSBERG: No. I am very unhappy over it.

HON. MR. PORTER: He did not look unhappy, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SALSBERG: I must have looked at you for a moment, and happiness came over me.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. Leader of the Opposition has suggested the province should confer with the Federal Government on this whole matter. I may remind the hon. members of this House that some years ago—and from time to time in the interim—the hon. Prime Minister of this province has strongly urged upon the federal authorities the setting up of a Joint Economic Committee, on a high civil service level, with experts at its disposal, to keep in touch with the changing economic trends in this country, to advise the various governments as to changes in those conditions, and make recommendations which might involve joint action by the governments concerned. That was not a suggestion which was made on only one occasion. It was made by the hon. Prime Minister some years ago, at a Dominion-Provincial conference, and was raised at every subsequent Dominion-Provincial conference; when the hon. Prime Minister repeated that request from time to time. I do not know whether the hon. Leader of the Opposition could use his influence with the Ottawa government, so that they might come to the very sensible conclusion that the recommendation should be accepted. I am in entire agreement with the hon. Leader of the Opposition when he suggests there should be conferences of this kind, and should be continuous, and that they should be on a basis which would enable the very best expert brains to be assembled to consider this problem and keep the government alive to the situation and make recommendations as to what joint action could be taken. As the hon. Leader of the Opposition himself says, until that is done, how can we take joint action?

The hon. Leader of the Opposition, I must say, is a very fair man. As a matter of fact, he recognizes the difficulty, as he admitted in his speech, when he referred to the government alone, single-handedly, dealing with the problem which, once entered into, might be beyond the capacity of a provincial government, with its resources, to follow through.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition, however, says that we had a "windfall from the federal government of $40 millions."

MR. OLIVER: The hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) said that.

HON. MR. PORTER: I know, but the hon. Leader of the Opposition confirmed it. He said that was a "windfall from the federal government." He well knows that it is no "windfall." He went on to talk about the Ottawa government being a great benefactor by handing over to this province—the same place from where they received it—the sum of $40 million. The hon. Leader of the Opposition knows perfectly well that we in this province transferred, leased, handed over—whatever one wants to call it—our rights to collect corporation tax and income tax during the term of the Dominion-Provincial agreement with us, and that it is from that money this so-called "windfall" was obtained; that it was from tax fields which we could have used ourselves, if it had been left with us to raise that money, that the Federal Government has collected the money to hand back to us. I am not criticizing the benefits derived from the agreement. I think that, under all the circumstances of the time, the agreement was a sound one; it has simplified the whole problem of raising this money and it has provided many advantages to this province. But to suggest the Federal Government as a result of that agreement, is raising, from its own ordinary sources of revenue, $40 millions which we could not have had otherwise and which we did not have before is an entire misstatement of the situation. It is far, far from the truth.

MR. SALSBERG: Are you sorry for the years we might have had that money, if you had not been so long in coming to terms?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, that is a hypothetical question.

MR. SALSBERG: It is very real. You robbed us of this money.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that, up to the time of the offer of 1950, which became effective on April 1st, 1952, we made more money by staying with the old arrangement than we have with the new.

MR. SALSBERG: Things changed when you became Prime Minister.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, no, no.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. Leader of the Opposition has put his case in a way which—to express it mildly—is not in proper perspective. I think his perspective has been a little bit out, in his discussion of that so-called “windfall” from the Federal Government.

Then, of course, the hon. Leader of the Opposition has once again hammered away at the government's policy with respect to municipalities. I do not like to repeat things too often, but since the hon. Leader of the Opposition has seen fit to make two speeches on the same subject, perhaps a little repetition on my part will not do him any harm.

I do not know whether he realizes that in the year 1953-54, the subsidies by the Provincial Government to municipalities covering local grants of all kinds—education, health, and all the other grants which were made at that time—amounted to $138,999,000.

MR. OLIVER: That was the “windfall”!

HON. MR. PORTER: If the hon. Leader of the Opposition wants to call the $40 million a “windfall” to us, I would say that $138,999,000—which is nearly $140 million—might be fairly called a “windfall” too. But the hon. Leader of the Opposition does not admit that.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition speaks in the most despairing terms of the municipalities being ground down by the lack of enlightenment by this government. But does he, when he makes his speeches, speak about what we have done? Again, it is a matter of perspective.

Let me refer to what the hon. Leader of the Opposition has said, according to a news item in the Evening Tribune. The name Tribune sounds rather familiar, but I would point out this is the good Tribune, from Welland. The article carries the heading “Farquhar Oliver Seeks Clear Liberal Policy.” When I read that heading, I was anxious to read of any clarification which might come out of the fog on the opposite side of the House, and so I read the article. It contains these words:

He had been round the province quite considerably in the past few months, and it was quite clear that the Liberal Party was determined to improve their political position. They were being helped in their campaign by the tactics of the Tory Party at Queen's Park because of the bad government they were giving the people, he said.

MR. OLIVER: The article is alright so far.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is extraordinary to note the hon. Leader of the Opposition did not say that in his speech to this House. He did not refer to the government in his amendment. He merely said our procedural technique was not quite correct.

MR. OLIVER: That was generally understood.

HON. MR. PORTER: Then why did the hon. Leader of the Opposition make that statement to a public gathering, and not make it in this House, if he thought it was generally understood? Why would he have to remind the people of something as ingrained in their minds as that, if it was so generally understood? Nevertheless, he said there was bad government. The news item continues:

The Liberals, he declared, felt that the present government had dealt most unfairly with the municipalities.

Yet, here are the figures: almost $140 million for the year 1953-54, and it will be higher next year by reason of the unconditional grants. I ask the hon. Leader of the Opposition what would he do for the municipalities? I hate to remind him of events of the past, for he is reminded so often, but the government contribution to the municipalities in the years 1943-44 was only $19,697,486. That is what his government did.

MR. SALSBERG: But the winds did not blow; there was no windfall.

HON. MR. PORTER: There was a great deal of wind, though.

MR. SALSBERG: But there are 80 of you here now.

HON. MR. PORTER: I hesitate to "rub it in" so often, but when the hon. Leader of the Opposition tried to attack us for what he calls "miserable treatment of the municipalities," he did not tell the people at this Liberal gathering in Welland the whole story. Why should he, just because he is speaking to a Liberal group, tell them only part of the story? But when he comes before a Conservative gathering like this, he does not tell us that he thinks we are a bad government. Why would he not tell his Liberal friends about such a significant thing as government contributions totaling $140 million? Perhaps it would be of interest to point out to the House that this sum of $140 million represents between one-third and one-half of the whole provincial budget. In other words, almost one-half of all the money this government collects, in the province, is turned back in grants of different kinds to the municipalities. How can anyone say this government has dealt unfairly with municipalities, with almost half our revenue going to them? And, as hon. members will hear tomorrow, that sum will be increased.

Further, I would point out that the sum which the municipalities receive by way of provincial grants, represents about 50 per cent. of the total municipal expenditure. Yet, the hon. Leader of the Opposition complains that municipal taxes have tripled since 1943. I scarcely know what he means by that. It may be that some municipalities have had a rather sudden growth of population, and compared with the taxes they formerly paid when their land was vacant, higher taxes are now levied on the same land with buildings on it. It is, of course, obvious that in those circumstances the amount of taxes would be increased considerably.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition goes on to suggest that the municipalities should be given some further grants. In other words, the cry of the opposition over the past few years has been, "You have been doing a wonderful job, because you have given the municipalities perhaps eight or nine times what we gave them in 1943, and the people like it so much, they want more." That is about all they can say.

While the hon. Leader of the Opposition complains that municipal taxes have increased in some places, I would point out that the value of the dollar has decreased, and the amount of taxes collected has increased, as the population increased.

When he spoke in Welland, he did not analyze the whole situation. When I look at this amendment before us, I question whether the hon. Leader of the Opposition feels in his heart that the amendment is intended to suggest any lack of confidence in the government as a whole. In my opinion, he does not sincerely intend it to so indicate. He has had too long and varied an experience in government to have framed an amendment in that way, if he intended it to carry a general vote of want of confidence. So I take the most charitable view of it I can, because I think he really admires, in a general way, what this government has accomplished, and the programme we have laid before the House.

MR. OLIVER: It must be in a very general way.

HON. MR. PORTER: It may be general admiration, but it is never very generous. I wonder why the hon. Leader of the Opposition is not a little more generous and fair about this matter?

MR. OLIVER: Don't you get that habit now.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, as I said a few moments ago, we have heard in this House many fine speeches from hon. members on all sides. I wish to make some brief comment on the work done by the Select Committees which sat during the recess of the House. It has been my privilege to be associated with the work of some of these committees over the past few years, and I believe they have served a very useful purpose. With a government which has a somewhat large majority, it is very gratifying to have our own followers take an active part in the administration of the affairs of this province, by sitting on these Select Committees and investigating the various problems laid before them. In this way, they find out what is being done in certain departments; they learn not only the good things, but very often the weaknesses and where they lie. No government can claim that everything it does is perfect. We are ordinary people: we can be helped, and sustained, and we can learn a great deal about our own deficiencies, when we have members who devote themselves to work of this kind, and lay before us, in an official way, after the fullest investigation, some of their views as to what changes should be made. The committee work which is being carried on throughout the province at the present time inspires a great deal of confidence in the government.

Mr. Speaker, again referring to this skilfully worded, cautious and narrow amendment, I must say that I cannot see in it anything which would indicate a lack of confidence in the government. I had hoped the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and those who support him, would perhaps do something a little different this year, and vote according to their conscience, and with the government instead of against it.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, MARCH 11, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Today, we are honoured by the presence of Division "B" of the Toronto Teachers' College. If I remember correctly, yesterday we had about 250 students from this college, and today we are very, very happy to welcome the second group from this splendid institution located in the City of Toronto.

MR. H. E. BECKETT (York East): I beg leave to present the first report of the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Beckett from the Standing Committee on Municipal Law presents the committee's first report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 32, An Act to amend The Territorial Division Act.

Bill No. 55, An Act to amend The Department of Municipal Affairs Act.

Bill No. 70, An Act to amend The Municipal Corporations Quietening Orders Act.

Bill No. 71, An Act to amend The Municipal Drainage Act.

Bill No. 72, An Act to amend The Vital Statistics Act.

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 56, An Act to amend The Municipal Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): I have here two messages from His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor signed by his own hand.

MR. SPEAKER: The Lieutenant-Governor transmits Estimates of certain sums required for the services of the province for the year to end 31st March, 1955, and recommends them to the Legislative Assembly.

The Lieutenant-Governor transmits Supplementary Estimates of certain additional sums required for the services of the province for the year ending 31st March, 1954, and recommends them to the Legislative Assembly.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to call your attention to this morning's issue of the Globe and Mail. There was a statement on the proceedings in the Assembly yesterday afternoon. The statement was that "Mr. Thomas criticized municipal legislative powers in our communities," pointing out that the Local Improvement District of Ajax, a well-planned community which grew from a wartime housing project, had been refused municipal status by the Municipal Board.

May I correct that statement, Mr. Speaker. What I did say was this: That the Pickering Co-operative, a producers' organization, had applied for a licence to sell milk in the Improvement District of Ajax, and the licence had been supported by the 3 trustees appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor. I do hope that the Globe and Mail will give this the same prominence they gave the mis-statement. I am very happy to say that the Hansard report was quite accurate.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

BUDGET ADDRESS

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Provincial Treasurer): Mr. Speaker, it was a Thursday, March 16th, 1944—10 years ago—that I brought down my first budget. It was a wartime budget, but I am sure that what I now say bears out the prophecy of that time, when I said:

We are building not only for these times, we are planning for a greater population, for industrial expansion, for prosperous farms and for a happy and healthy people. We are laying the sure foundations for a greater and stronger Ontario.

The years which have elapsed since that occasion have brought a fulfilment of those aims, and on this tenth anniversary, actually involving 11 annual budgets, it is my intention to give to the House a more comprehensive review of our activities than I have heretofore.

The years which have passed since that date 10 years ago have been remarkable by any standard. They have brought difficulties and imposed arduous tasks, but they have also been years of more concentrated growth and progress than this province has seen in any other corresponding period of its history.

The past year has been no exception. Although there have been some soft spots, all the chief economic indicators, such as capital investment, industrial production, mining and forestry output, housing, and employment, reached higher levels and in most cases the highest level ever attained in our history in Ontario. Capital investment in 1953 was about 7 per cent. higher than in the previous year—reaching for the first time an annual rate of over $2 billion.

I have spoken of soft spots. Rippling the broad surface of Ontario's economic prosperity have been the downward trend in farm incomes and the slackness which has arisen in the farm implement and textile industries and several other branches of industry, particularly in the electrical appliance sector. As a result, unemployment has been somewhat in excess of that which can be attributed to a normal seasonal trend. The plight of the gold mining industry, which has been the subject of study and attention by both the Ontario and Federal Governments, has also been a matter of concern. Serious as these dislocations have been, general employment in this province has been more favourable than in the rest of Canada, and with the coming of spring, the normal seasonal pick-up in activity is expected to provide relief.

Every year presents its problems and it is important to keep them in proper focus. Not long ago, we were in the throes of a great inflationary rise in prices which was causing hardship to people on relatively fixed incomes. For 2 years now, we have enjoyed a stable consumer price level. As average wages and salaries have continued to advance during this period there has been a rise in real living standards.

There are many strong and vigorous elements in our economy which justify an attitude of confidence. For one thing, our domestic market is expanding rapidly. Ontario's population is currently growing at a rate of about 150,000 a year, 110,000 more than when I introduced my first budget. I might say, Mr. Speaker, I do not take the credit for that entirely. Since then our population has grown by over 1 million and, as I forecast a year ago, we now have passed the 5 million mark. It is not only that more than 50 per cent. of the immigrants who come to Canada settle in Ontario, attracted by its fine living conditions and its opportunities for advancement, but that the number of persons born in Ontario has climbed steadily, reaching 130,000 last year—61 per cent. more than in 1943.

Several effects follow from this growth, which in percentage terms, has been greater than that in the rest of Canada. Each year, we require an increase of at least 2½ per cent. in the supply of a great variety of structures, commodities and wearing apparel just to keep our living standard from falling. Moreover, with our larger market, there will be a better balance between agriculture and manufacturing, and through doing more of our processing at home, we shall also secure, in greater measure, the economies of large scale production, with corresponding reductions in unit cost, which is most important.

Aside from population growth, there are other factors that engender confidence. It is anticipated that the value of capital investment which forms 22 per cent. of all private and public spending in the province, will be at least 4 per cent. higher in 1954 than in 1953. Personal incomes and consumer spending continue to advance. The excesses which have foreshadowed economic slumps in the past have, in the main, been avoided. Farm indebtedness in relation to value of output has been reduced. Many corporations have large reserves, while the savings of the people, despite the inroads made by instalment and credit buying, are still at a high level.

We are hopeful that a start will be made this year upon the construction of the St. Lawrence River power project and the natural gas pipeline from Alberta to Central Canada, which, with its ancillary and interceptor pipelines, will create many new employment opportunities. The province and the municipalities are proceeding with a large volume of construction which will extend into the next fiscal period. The tempo of housing construction will be sustained and probably accelerated, giving rise to demands over many years for electrical appliances, household furnishings and other products. All these demands come at a time when the ratio of our labour force to our total population will be at the lowest level that it has been for many years, which I think should indicate a high rate of employment.

To meet the adjustments which will occur in various sectors of our economy, we need constantly to aim for flexibility and adaptability to changing conditions. We should recognize that in a dynamic economy, adjustment in industry and employment is the natural process by which production is adapted to demand. If normal influences fail, there is a variety of measures that will be brought into play to help cushion the downward swing.

The Federal Government is committed to the policy of a high general level of employment and income, and the province on its part will keep the situation under review and do everything possible within its more limited financial power to maintain stability. Furthermore, when these measures are brought into effect, we shall have reasonable assurance that similar steps will be taken on a fairly broad international basis. It is important, however, that we should keep in mind that the decisions governing the spending of 75 per cent. of the gross national product in Canada are made by private individuals. An attitude of confidence will therefore do more to maintain high levels of income and employment than any other single factor.

Mr. Speaker, having given that very brief survey of conditions generally in this province, may I at this time table the budget. It is a voluminous document consisting of some 80 pages, including the budget survey, the various schedules, and appended thereto is a list of some 40 reports on various phases of our economy. They are of very great interest. They include reports on almost every phase of our economic life in Ontario.

First of all, may I say this document is the result of the work of many people. I have previously in this House referred to Mr. Hugh Brown, the Deputy Treasurer, Mr. Harry Cotnam, the Provincial Auditor, Doctor Chester S. Walters, Mr. Philip Clark, Mr. George Gathercole, Mr. Harold Walker, to whom I referred yesterday, to Mr. H. J. Chater, and many others who have assisted in the preparation of this budget.

Mr. Speaker, there is the budgetary statement and review, the reports, and the schedules involving a host of subjects. I will not inflict the reading of this document upon the House, but I propose, as last year, to table the budget, and to refer to the various items as I go along, in rather an informal manner.

I well remember the criticism last year by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), and I assure him that this year I will confine my statement to the economics, and—as I think he put it last year—to a “coldly factual statement of the position of the province.” Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether I can do it “coldly,” but I will try to keep it “factual,” and as much in line with what the hon. member for Brant said last year, as possible.

I will table the budget, and will refer to matters contained in it, without boring the House by reading this voluminous document.

In preparing this annual budget, I have again made certain changes in its form, which I hope will be conducive to a clear understanding of the financial and economic position of the government and its programme.

Our fiscal programme, ordinary and capital, now exceeds $450 million annually. The task of preparing a budget of such formidable dimensions not only requires months of very careful screening of departmental Estimates and reconciliation of competing demands for our revenues, but also imposes a need for modernizing the form of its presentation.

Traditionally, the province's expenditures have been classified as “ordinary” and “capital.” This system follows sound accounting procedures, which are widely used in both government and industry, and it has merit.

This is for the benefit of those who referred to a “$58 million surplus,” which I said was applied to “pay off the mortgage on the farm.”

A surplus on ordinary account should, however, always be considered in the light of expenditure for new capital construction. If we run into any substantial volume of unemployment, we would be expected to play an active part in financing an expanded public works programme without increasing taxation. In such a period, we would resort more extensively to financing our capital programme by using our credit. But if we are to adhere to that policy in periods of general unemployment, then we should apply as much of our current income as possible to capital account. Only in this way can we conserve our credit to meet the problems which lie ahead. Thus, there is no mystery to our plan of budgeting. It is this: to meet as large a proportion as is reasonably possible of our overall expenditures out of current revenue, while at the same time keeping our burden of provincial taxation well within moderate limits. On this latter point, I am glad to say there is incontrovertible evidence that the people of Ontario enjoy about the lowest provincial taxation in Canada.

This year, for the first time—and when I say this, I give credit to my very able assistants, who have made a very great study of this problem—I am presenting in an appendix to this budget detailed statements showing a 4-year comparison of the province's ordinary and capital revenues and expenditures, surplus and the effect of capital financing on the net debt. These statements afford the fullest information on the operations of the government.

For the current fiscal year ending March 31st, 1954, the net ordinary expenditure of the government is estimated at $361,167,000. This includes a number of special grants and payments, which I shall mention later, as well as a provision for sinking funds of $16,945,000. The net ordinary revenue is estimated at $362,176,000, which leaves an interim surplus on ordinary account of $1,009,000. That is the eleventh successive surplus which we have achieved.

Mr. Speaker, I have mentioned special payments. We shall be introducing supplementary estimates which will provide for certain special payments to be made before the 31st of March. These include the following grants to the hospitals of Ontario to assist them in meeting their debt and rehabilitation problems, at the rate of $300 per bed, for every bed which was in service as of December 31st last. There is a schedule attached to the budget showing the estimated payments to all the hospitals of Ontario, but I might read some examples so hon. members may have an idea of what these grants mean. They will total something over $7 million.

Peterborough, Civic Hospital	$ 67,800
Peterborough, St. Joseph's Hospital	54,000
North Bay, Civic Hospital	30,300
North Bay, St. Joseph's Hospital	34,800
Toronto, East General Hospital	110,400
Toronto, St. Michael's Hospital	225,600
Galt, South Waterloo Memorial Hospital	50,700
Fort Frances, La Verendrye Hospital	30,000
Sioux Lookout, General Hospital	11,700

The list, Mr. Speaker, is attached to the budget so hon. members will find it available. These grants will provide assistance to hospitals of this province, for rehabilitation, and will permit payments, if they want to make them, on debts they have incurred.

A special capital payment of $1.0 million will also be made to the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation for the new institute building. The total cost of the whole cancer project, including equipment, will be about $9.5 million, of which the province's share will be $8.5 million and the Federal Government will contribute the remaining $1.0 million. Mr. Speaker, I hope to persuade the Federal Government to increase their contribution, to bring about lower ratio than 8.5 to 1, and to make the sharing in the costs a little more equal.

With this grant, the province will have paid out $6.3 million towards the cost of this project, which includes the site, the erection of the Nurses' Residence and the provision of other facilities. As against an estimated cost of $4.5 million for the new institute building, the foundation will now hold over $3.0 million, including the $2.0 million paid in 1952-53 and the above special grant of $1.0 million, with which to proceed with the construction of the building.

We are making this year a special grant which has never been made before in this province, and that is a grant of $1.0 million to the University of Toronto, for the expansion of the Ontario College of Dentistry. This Mr. Speaker, is the situation: in the 10 provinces of Canada there are only 5 dental colleges, the largest of which is the Ontario Dental College. My recollection is that less than 80 dentists are graduated per year, and those of course, have to provide for Ontario's needs, as well as helping to provide dental treatment for many people in other parts of Canada. Mr. Speaker, federal authorities tell us that no health plan can be successful unless this dental situation is corrected, so we are meeting that situation to the extent of granting $1.0 million to the University of Toronto to enable it to expand its facilities. I am hopeful the Government of Canada will follow Ontario's lead, and make a substantial contribution towards the cost of this project—and I know hon. members will agree with me when I say—we shall match anything they may do. As time goes on, there should be dental facilities established in some of the other universities. The reason I mention the University of Toronto is because it has the only dental college in Ontario.

Dealing with the universities, we are making capital grants in addition to the $1.0 million to the University of Toronto, $525,000 to Queen's University and to the University of Western Ontario; $250,000 to McMaster University for instruction in the sciences, and the same sum to Ottawa University for the Faculty of Medicine; $150,000 to Carleton College, and to the Ontario College of Art, $200,000. I may say the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) used his great powers of persuasion in that connection. A grant of $100,000 is also made to the Royal Botanical Gardens which is attached to McMaster University.

These grants total $3 million.

We are asking the House to provide for payments of $1 million each to the Teachers' Superannuation Fund and to the Public Service Superannuation Fund, in order to strengthen them. We have been doing that for some time past so that the teachers' fund in particular might be placed in a stronger position. And we are recommending payment of $350,000 to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind as a contribution to enable the institution to establish facilities for rehabilitation and occupational services.

Supplementary estimates will be introduced providing for the payment of these sums before the close of the present fiscal year.

Mr. Speaker, in the budget we have included certain services and matters in broad groups. The first is "human betterment," "education," "health and welfare."

May I refer to some of these things. Education continues to be, again, our most pressing problem. School accommodation must be found for more than 60,000 new students each year, and in another 5 years this annual increase will exceed 70,000. To cope with last year's increase, $48 million was spent to provide 1,610 classrooms in new schools or additions to existing schools, and it is apparent that an even larger building programme is foreordained.

Mr. Speaker, we have, of course, to realize that to meet this requirement we have to tighten our belts—either that or increase taxation. That has to be faced, if we are to meet the requirements of our programme.

I commend this section to hon. members indeed, as I do all of these sections, but I will pick out certain items. In the universities, for instance, enrolment has receded from the postwar high level, and it probably will continue to decline somewhat for several years; but later, as the tide of school population moves upward through the elementary and secondary school grades, it will flow into existing university facilities. That is the reason for making the grants to universities. We are trying to meet beforehand the problem which the universities will have to face probably 6 or 7 years hence.

As I said before, if we are to meet our problems in a practical and reasonable way, we must confine our assistance to the basic essentials, and strive for the strictest economy.

In Ontario, salary scales have been revised and there have been successive improvements in the superannuation plan, for 32,000 teachers. More than 2,000 teachers must be recruited each year to staff the additional classrooms, and provide replacements for retirements. That is why progress in building two new teachers' colleges is a matter of the greatest importance.

The Ontario Government's expenditure on education in the current fiscal year ending March 31st, 1954, including school grants of $57.8 million and the special capital grants to universities and the College of Art, will total $81.9 million. Next year, school grants, payable on the same formula, will rise $3.6 million to $61.4 million. Maintenance grants to the universities are also being increased, and for the fiscal year 1954-55 they will be as follows:

MAINTENANCE GRANTS	FISCAL YEAR 1954-55
University of Toronto	$4,700,000
Ontario College of Education	470,000
Queen's University	675,000
University of Western Ontario	675,000
McMaster University (Hamilton College) for instruction in the sciences	225,000
University of Ottawa—for Medical Faculty Carleton College	225,000 145,000
	$7,115,000

In developing this educational programme, we have not overlooked the need for assisting deserving students who have financial or physical handicaps. Under a programme inaugurated in 1943, over 1,500 students now receive bursaries every year to assist them to carry on their studies. A greatly increased number of scholarships are also provided by the Ontario Research Council, and just last year we inaugurated a plan for providing assistance of $250 per year per pupil for the education of retarded children. Of more general benefit, are our grants of up to $3 per pupil per year for "free" text books in Grades I to X.

The health programme is being carried forward on a broad front. The ordinary expenditure this year, including the $7 million in special grants to hospitals, is estimated at $53.3 million, an increase of $2.6 million over last year. With this special payment of $7 million, $20 million will be paid out to the public general hospitals during 1953-54 to help meet their cost of operations, to retire debt and facilitate expansion. Since the inauguration in 1947 of the present hospital construction grants, the province has committed itself to an expenditure of $32.6 million, of which $26.1 million had been paid out by December 31st, 1953. These grants provide for the construction of over 18,000 hospital beds and 2,600 nursery bassinets.

I will not refer, except in passing, to the Ontario mental hospitals, because full particulars are contained in the budget and its schedules, but our programme in this respect is coming along very well. We are making very definite progress. I am glad to be able to say that before long, those who are mentally ill in Northern Ontario will not have to come to Toronto for attention, but will be treated in their own section of the province.

Another very important matter is the provision we have made for psychiatric treatment in the public general hospitals, which was started under a pilot plan in Ontario some 3 years ago. Then hospitals have established psychiatric divisions, providing 311 beds, for which the province has approved capital grants amounting to $2.6 million. That provision is more important than it may appear to be. The fact of the matter is that it gives the general practitioner—who is one of the great assets of this province—an opportunity to become a specialist in psychiatry. The lack of doctors with this specialized knowledge creates one of the difficulties with which we are faced in dealing with the problem of mental health.

I have already referred to the Ontario Cancer Foundation, and will only add, in this connection, that Cobalt-bomb therapy units have been installed, or are being installed, in 3 hospitals.

The hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) will tell you about the fight against poliomyelitis. I think there are grounds for believing that we are on the verge of conquering that disease. I do not want to be too optimistic, but I believe the progress which has been made justifies optimism. I would not say that we are on the way to conquering hay fever, but the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) will be pleased to know that we have grounds for hope in this matter.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I am very happy to hear it.

HON. MR. FROST: There will be legislation introduced in this respect.

I am sorry that the hon. minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) is not in his place, but he is out looking after the needs of the 30,000 to 35,000 Indians, comprising some of the finest citizens of this province. He is at present in British Columbia, and I hope when he returns in a few days, he will have a satisfactory report to make as to the efforts being made to improve the welfare of these good citizens. I know our hopes are shared by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), because in common with us all, he is wholeheartedly in favour of all the aid we can render to the Indians.

For charitable institutions which are taking care of those in the indigent class, grants for construction will be increased from $1,000 to $2,000 per bed, and the per diem rate of assistance will be increased.

I think we in this Province can take credit for having pioneered the giving of assistance to those who are totally and permanently disabled. The federal government is now coming into this field, and proposes to make such assistance available throughout Canada.

The expansion of these 3 humanitarian services has been a notable feature of the government's programme of social development. The year before I became Treasurer, the expenditures of the government for education, health and welfare amounted to only $34.6 million. This year, our expenditure on these 3 services will total $159.6 million, a five-fold increase.

As predicted a year ago, more housing units were completed in Ontario in 1953 than in any previous period in Ontario's history. The total completions of new housing units and conversions amounted to 36,504—8,000 or 28 per cent. more than in 1952, and 12 per cent. more than in the previous record-breaking year, 1951. In the 9 years since 1944, more than 250,000 houses have been built in Ontario, providing accommodation for a million people. On December 31, 1953, there were 24,130 dwellings under construction in Ontario, 18 per cent. more than at the end of 1952. Thus, there is every likelihood that a new record in housing construction will be attained in 1954.

Housing activity increased rapidly in the Toronto region following the introduction of the Metropolitan plan. By the end of 1953, there were 31 per cent. more units under construction than on the corresponding date a year earlier, portending a much higher rate of completions this year than last.

To assist housing, we have developed a variety of partnership arrangements with the Federal Government. In many municipalities experiencing rapid population growth, urgent demands have arisen for serviced lots which can be made available at reasonable prices to private persons or builders who are desirous of constructing medium-priced houses. To facilitate this programme, large tracts of land have been acquired in many municipalities. Under agreements already signed, 7,000 serviced lots have been, or are being, made available. Land has been acquired and negotiations are proceeding which should ultimately raise this total to 18,000 serviced lots. Rental housing projects are also being undertaken in an increasing number of municipalities. Here, sir, I think I should give credit to the hon. member for York South (Mr. Beech) who represents a riding which now, and always has been one of the leading townships in the Province of Ontario. What has been done in that community is a great inspiration to us all, and I recommend to hon. members that before returning to their homes they visit that district and see what has been done there.

We are hoping to make marked progress in the Metropolitan Toronto area, where a considerable amount of land has been acquired to provide additional living accommodation under these various plans.

In addition to the serviced lot and rental projects, a subsidized rental housing plan has been projected as part of the Toronto Regent Park Development. This will consist of 20 blocks of 48 units each, making a total of 960 units. It will be the first time that multiple units have been constructed under the joint federal-provincial partnership, giving effect to the 1953 amendments to the National Housing Act.

I am again able to report progress in the repayment under the government's second mortgage plan. By February 28th, 1954, 3,480 loans out of a total of 14,695 had been fully repaid. That is a great record.

Under the heading of "Natural Resources" are included agriculture, forestry and mining. As time is passing, I shall refer to them rather briefly.

Despite the fact that farm income has declined from its peak level, last year's was still one of the best in the industry's history. Moreover, during the last decade, the long-term trend in Ontario farming has been very favourable. Farm indebtedness has been reduced, farmers have been retaining a much larger proportion of the income from the sale of their produce, and despite a 25 per cent. smaller labour force, they have raised their physical output by over 10 per cent.

The rural areas of Ontario will continue to benefit from provincial assistance for the extension of electric power lines. Since December 1943, some 235,691 rural power customers have been added to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission lines, an increase of 173 per cent. Of these, 28,318 were connected in the past year. The Provincial Government's contribution in grants to this programme of rural electrification has totalled $64.1 million in the last 11 years. So rapidly have lines been extended and customers provided with power in recent years that we are gradually narrowing the number of rural dwellers to whom it is economically feasible to provide electric power.

The latest survey shows that about 85 per cent. of rural dwellers are now supplied with electric power, and this percentage is even higher in the case of farmers.

It is not necessary for me to elaborate on Ontario's great record in this regard—a record, I believe, unsurpassed anywhere. Imagine the advances which have been made in providing for our rural people the benefits of refrigeration, electricity for cooking, bathroom equipment, and hot and cold running water. All these amenities add not only to the enjoyment of living but to the betterment of life and to the health of our people. I should say that this service is one of the great achievements of Ontario.

The mining industry of Ontario enjoyed another prosperous year. The value of its mineral output rose in 1953 to the unprecedented level of $460.5 million, a rise of 3.6 per cent. above that of a year ago. This increase was achieved despite a downward trend in the price of some metals and the depressed state of the gold mining industry. A committee to consider and report upon the economics of the gold mining industry of Ontario will shortly be appointed.

After all, this was one of our great foundation industries. It helped to pull Ontario and Canada through the depression of the 1930's. There are many of us here, particularly the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and myself, who have been engaged very deeply with problems arising from that industry. We are seized with the fact that anything we can do, provincially and in co-operation with the federal and other governments, to improve the state of that industry, should be done. Ten years ago I also held the portfolio of Minister of Mines. I cannot say, in that capacity, I was especially distinguished for knowing a great deal about the industry. I confess that at the end of 6 years, when I left the department, I must have been distinguished by the fact that there was so much about it I had yet to learn. But the picture in those years was a different one. I well remember—and this may interest the hon. member for Temiskaming (Mr. Herbert)—that at the time I was advised by many people to close out Cobalt and move the people away. Hon. members, and particularly the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) know how false that advice was. As a matter of fact, Cobalt is one of the most important areas in Ontario, and it will become more important as time goes on.

When I look at the list of new metals, I find it difficult to pronounce the names of some of them, let alone describe them. Ten years ago uranium, as I recall, was almost unknown; certainly I, the Minister of Mines at the time, was unfamiliar with it. Now there are uranium rushes and stakings all over this province, including the districts represented by the hon. member for Peterborough (Mr. Scott) and myself; and today I see that there is a uranium rush near Orillia. Just imagine! I may say I have had nothing to do with that.

I can assure you it is a strange thing to read headlines in the newspapers, "Uranium Rush Near Orillia," and "Report A Find At Sparrow Lake." Just imagine what changes science is making in this province. It is only a day or two ago I heard one of the hydro engineers in this province—a very prominent engineer—say that there was more power in uranium buried in the ground of Ontario—many, many times more—than all the water power we can hope to develop in this province. It may be that some who were here 25 years ago now have a different picture of the autonomy of Ontario, brought about by bringing into the orbit of things, resources about which they knew so little.

In hurrying along, I may say that in forestry, we have also made advances.

In forestry, where the value of production again resumed its upward trend after a moderate decline in 1952, a new stage is being introduced in the management of these renewable resources. The White Paper on Forestry has been presented to the Legislature for study and consideration. Inevitably, it involves long-range planning to ensure that the best methods will be adopted. To assist in the carrying out of this programme in its initial phases, the appropriation of the Department of Lands and Forests is being increased by $150,000 for the use of the Timber Management Division. Additional funds will be allocated as this new programme takes more definite shape.

The combined net ordinary expenditure of these 3 departments—agriculture, mining and forestry—has been increased by 136 per cent. since 1942-43. For 1954-55, it is proposed to increase the appropriation by $486,000—approximately $500,000 higher.

In connection with conservation, Mr. Speaker, many departments of the government are concerned with the conservation of natural resources. It was back in 1944 that the Conservation Branch was first established to give special attention to this phase of our activities. Since that time, 15 Conservation Authorities have been established throughout the province, with a total membership of 256 municipalities embracing an area of 10,505 square miles. Moreover, municipalities in 4 additional watersheds are now considering plans for establishing such authorities. Up to the present, 25 surveys have been made covering watersheds, either in whole or in part, and as a result of the recommendations in these reports, major conservation projects have been undertaken as follows:

Conservation projects completed up to the present time:

Long Branch Flood Control	$ 80,000
Ingersoll Channel Improvement	1,000,000
Port Franks Flood Control	120,000
Total	$ 1,200,000

Work completed and in progress during the year 1953-54:

Fanshaw Dam and Reservoir	$ 4,890,000
Conestogo Dam and Reservoir	5,400,000
Luther Marsh Dam	247,123
Deloro Dam	52,000
Brampton Flood Control	920,750
Total	$11,509,873

In addition to these projects, a shelf of plans for further conservation and flood control has been prepared which, when carried out, will entail a capital investment of $52 million. Additional sums will again be provided in the Estimates of the Department of Public Works to finance the province's share of the cost of next year's capital programme. For instance, the land for the reservoir required in connection with the Conestogo Dam has been acquired and tenders will be called immediately to enable an early start on construction to be made.

Reforestation by organized Conservation Authorities is also being stressed. There are now agreements between 7 of the authorities and the Department of Lands and Forests for this work, and so far, $440,000 has been spent for land purchases, planning and management.

The Conservation Authorities serve as an effective educational force in promoting, with the co-operation of various government departments, farm planning through little valley studies, the building of farm ponds and reforestation. More than 450 farm ponds have been built with the assistance of grants from the authorities since this programme was introduced. Public relations and educational activities in connection with schools, forestry clubs and other groups in the watershed are also important phases of their work. Grants for this purpose to the end of 1953 amounted to $140,000.

During the coming fiscal year, 1954-55, expenditures on conservation by various departments will total $16.5 million.

In regard to highways: during 1953—and these figures are very enlightening indeed, giving some indication of the great pressure there is for building of new roads, by-passes, and things of that sort—the number of motor vehicles in service in Ontario increased by 112,000, or 8.7 per cent. continuing the unbroken upward trend which has now lasted for 8 years. That is a striking fact. It is a striking fact that while our population has increased by 25 per cent. since 1945, the number of Ontario motor vehicles on our highways and roads has risen by 112 per cent. Nor does this extraordinary increase fully measure the demands upon our provincial highway and road system. There are several reasons for this. Tourist travel by automobile has climbed even more. The number of traveller's vehicle permits issued last year was 177 per cent. higher than in 1945. There has also been a pronounced tendency for Ontario motorists to drive more miles per year than heretofore. Another factor is the relatively greater increase in the number of motor transports, particularly of the heavier types, that are now using our highways system. For instance, the number of motor transports with a gross loaded weight of 5 tons or more rose between 1945 and 1953 by 126 per cent. and those of 10 tons or more by 883 per cent. There is little doubt that the amount of freight carried on Ontario's highways system has increased tremendously in that period of time.

It is anticipated that expenditures by the Department of Highways in the fiscal year 1953-54 will amount to $127.2 million, made up to $55.4 million on ordinary account ($95.9 million gross, less $40.5 million transferred to Highway Reserve Account) and $71.8 million on capital account, of which $37.0 million will have been expended from the Highway Reserve Account. The department lived well within its appropriation on both Ordinary and Capital Accounts. Nevertheless, for the third consecutive year we shall have spent on highways more than we have obtained in revenue from gasoline tax and motor vehicle licences.

May I refer the hon. members of the House to pages 19 and 20, which contain a great deal of detail with reference to highway construction, which I shall not read at this time.

The 5-year plan of highway expansion announced in 1949 is ahead of schedule in the mileage of roads completed and in the number of bridges constructed and placed in service. The use of heavier and more efficient equipment and machines and the employment of mass-production techniques have helped make this possible. Besides carrying out these greatly expanded activities of construction and maintenance, the department has been able to place in service additional snow-plowing and sanding equipment and to extend the coverage of its teletype reports on driving conditions. With the steady climb in motor vehicle registrations and the mounting use of our highways, we must proceed with our expanded highway programme. Accordingly, $124.3 million, including $1.0 million for mining roads, is being provided in the fiscal year 1954-55 for this purpose. This provision will still leave an unexpended balance of $21.5 million in the Highway Reserve Account which will be used as required, as soon as the preliminary engineering work is completed.

That is a matter of fact. If my figures are correct—and I believe they are—of this $145 million for highway construction, nearly $125 million is allocated to various projects at the present time.

In connection with Public Works, Mr. Speaker, may I say that to keep pace with the growth of our population and the expansion in our industry, we have undertaken a large scale programme involving the acquisition of land and the construction of buildings for Ontario hospitals and the Ontario Agricultural College, conservation projects, the food terminal building at Etobicoke, warehouses, stations and other buildings to be used by the Department of Lands and Forests and Reform Institutions, and the provincial police, teachers' colleges and the new provincial administration buildings.

In my last budget, I listed a number of major construction projects that were either under way or planned, having a total value of $65 million. During the present year, we will spend on capital account on these various projects the amount of $18.0 million. In some cases, of course, these projects will require several years before they are brought to completion. An additional amount of $20 million is therefore being included as capital expenditure in the Estimates for 1954-55 to continue these projects.

While the work under way represents a large programme of construction in itself, it is considered advisable to include an additional sum of $7.5 million to enable a start on new work to be made. This will make the total amount to be voted for the construction of new public buildings $27.5 million. Particulars are shown in the appendix.

Now a word about hydro. Great progress has been made in regard to hydro. I will not give the hon. members of the House the very lengthy figures which could be given, because there has been a committee of the House sitting, which will inform the hon. members as to the progress which has been made.

Work is proceeding favourably at Niagara Falls, and it is estimated that in the next 3 years, the hydro's dependable peak capacity will have increased by another 1.6 million h.p., giving a total available supply by the end of 1956 of 5.5 million h.p. The next largest source after Niagara is the 1,100,000 h.p. representing Ontario's share of the St. Lawrence River Power Project. Accordingly, we are making every effort to expedite the development of this site at the earliest possible date. Ontario Hydro has spent $1.0 billion on the construction of new generating plants, lines and equipment since November 1st, 1945, but despite this expenditure, there is still a tremendous demand for energy.

In reference to rural hydro; this year a further sum is being placed in an account to assist in financing rural power extensions, which we believe will result in 28,000 new rural customers being added to the lines.

I come now, Mr. Speaker, to assistance to municipalities, but because of the very able speech by the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) the other day, I do not think it will be necessary for me to refer to it again, but I think it is a matter of great interest because basically our government starts in the municipalities.

The coming fiscal year marks a signal event in the development of our programme of assistance to municipalities, with the payment of $12 million under the new unconditional grants plan. It is estimated that in this current year we will pay out to municipalities, local school boards and associated agencies a total of $125.1 million, equal to 35 per cent. of the province's net ordinary expenditure and 45 per cent. of last year's total municipal tax levy. This coming year, instead of giving the municipalities $125 million, we will give them $134 million.

With the introduction of the new unconditional grants, we are terminating the payment for fire and police services, except for the province's contribution to Superannuation and Workmen's Compensation funds, but the net result from this change is an increase of $7.0 million in grants to the municipalities. I think it may fairly be said that we have been doing our best to assist the municipalities. Of course, there is a limit to what any province can do. During the last 11 years, when demands for direct provincial services have also been heavy, we have stepped up our provincial assistance seven-fold.

As I am sure hon. members will appreciate, it is difficult to continue that tempo, and maintain our position of having the lowest taxes in Canada.

I think we are doing a splendid job this year, when we consider that almost 40 per cent. of the total monies voted, will go to the municipalities.

I would like to hurry along now to "Federal-Provincial Relations."

Nearly 2 years ago, Ontario entered into a Tax Rental Agreement with the Federal Government for a 5-year period on a basis which we felt was to the advantage of both governments. Although we have never regarded this arrangement as the last word, we have considered it, for the time being, to be a reasonable approach to a difficult problem. I am now convinced that there is a more urgent need than ever for a fuller understanding of the problems of all governments—federal, provincial and municipal.

I have increasingly felt the need for a closer integration of federal, provincial and municipal policies to ensure the continuation of a high level of employment. In recent years, we have accelerated our capital spending for new highways and other public projects, and, if necessary, we are prepared to extend that programme, which will be supplemented by Ontario Hydro's large capital expansion.

On several occasions I have urged that an Economic Committee be established on the federal-provincial level, such as the 1945 committee.

This committee—a fact-finding body, composed of technical advisors of the various governments—would not confine its inquiry solely to questions pertaining to the allocation of responsibilities and tax sources. It would also undertake the study of problems dealing with economic stability, income and employment, timing of capital investment and public works, and public borrowings. The committee would submit plans on these problems to a conference of provincial representatives or to their respective governments. Recently, rather painful adjustments have occurred in several industries and undoubtedly there will be others. Where these adjustments are acute and result in substantial unemployment—and this was a point the hon. Leader of the Opposition brought up yesterday—there should be some action when we meet, and methods and plans formulated whereby federal, provincial and municipal governments can act together to meet the problem.

Unfortunately, the division of responsibility between the federal and provincial governments on unemployment matters is not clearly defined, nor have we made progress in implementing the public investment proposals discussed at the Dominion-Provincial Conference of 1945-46.

During this conference in 1945-46, discussions were held concerning capital investment and planning and timing grants. The time has certainly come, indeed, if it has not passed, when we should be resuming our discussions on these questions.

There is nothing I would like better for our government than to sit down in an atmosphere of understanding, not only on government level, but on a technical level, with the representatives of other governments, and discuss this great problem. As a matter of fact, our country is getting smaller because of the influences of the days in which we live, and it is more important than ever, that we should act together. I never look upon Ontario as being a single entity. We are part of Canada, and conditions in other parts of Canada affect us, just as our conditions affect them.

It may be necessary in the future to undertake, as stabilizing measures, a larger capital programme than that upon which we are now engaged. We have to recognize that. We have to lay the foundation for it and strengthen our organization to build up those things.

In Canada, most of the projects which lend themselves to timing lie within the field of provincial and municipal jurisdiction. Accordingly, a working partnership between the Federal and Provincial Governments is necessary. The task of maintaining high levels of income and employment will be difficult enough, even if we use every opportunity for co-operation, without adding to our problems the disabilities which result from pursuing diverse courses in dealing with this problem. An Economic Committee would help to keep under review our everchanging problems, which are not going to be any less in the days ahead. Even with the very much larger employment and expansion, our problems in Canada and Ontario are going to be great, and are going to be trying, in prosperous conditions, and they will be more difficult and trying in conditions of recession.

I now come to "Provincial Net Debt and Investment in Resources."

Mr. Speaker, I always like to talk about our credit, because that is the means by which we do things. About a week ago, on March 2nd last, the province sold in New York $50 million of debentures having an average maturity of 18.8 years at an average interest cost of 3.11 per cent. in order to raise money for hydro's capital expenditure. This was one of the best issues any province has sold for several years, and it demonstrates that despite the formidable demands we have made on the money market, our credit ranks with the highest among the Canadian provinces.

Those figures are somewhat staggering and I want to clarify them.

In the 11 years that I have been Treasurer, the province has issued its own bonds, or guaranteed Ontario Hydro bonds, totalling $1.651 million—that is a great development. Remember those bonds are in the portfolios of investors, big and little, across Canada and elsewhere. Of this immense total, only $285 million was raised outside Canada, while the remainder—amounting to 83 per cent.—was obtained in the home market. Hydro's capital requirements absorbed $1.0 billion of these total borrowings. I know the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will recognize it is to keep the wheels of industry turning and to provide lights, refrigerators and farm machinery for our rural people. We had to have the power. We had to step out and get it, and there has been invested in the safest investment in Canada $1.0 billion, borrowed from our people at home and abroad.

In preparing every post World War II budget, we have been confronted with inevitable commitments arising out of the deferment of construction and repairs during the war years, upon which have been superimposed the post-war expansion of our population and industry. Over this period of 11 years, we have brought into service physical assets—and these figures, Mr. Speaker, are striking—in new highways, buildings, conservation projects and rural power extensions to a value of $466.9 million; and it is a source of great satisfaction to us that we have capitalized only 35 per cent. of this investment. We have paid out in cash, right out of the pocket, 65 per cent. of that, and only 35 per cent. has been capitalized.

One of the reasons for going to New York to get money in the period I have stated, at 3.11 per cent., was because we took the $58 million to which I have referred earlier, and applied it to a “mortgage on the farm.” That is why we do it now, and that is why we shall do it in the future. In other words, we have used our surpluses above ordinary expenditures wisely to build up sinking funds and retire debt, as an offset against the cost of these large capital undertakings. It is our intention to continue this policy, but it is apparent that with our capital spending geared to such a high level and our revenue showing considerably less buoyancy, we shall be obliged to keep an even tighter rein on our expenditures, and exercise the most diligent care in husbanding our revenues.

Some people say that as a Treasurer I have a different personality than I have in any other place, but that has to be the case.

We have been able to add to the physical assets of the province the value of $466.9 million—and this does not include the grants paid out for the construction of schools, universities, hospitals and charitable institutions. Those things have been paid for by us out of cash, in addition to the 65 per cent. of these capital commitments which we paid in cash. That again, is one of the keys to our physical position. I am able to report that the net debt per capita is still considerably less than it was when I first became Treasurer. It is true that the net debt rose from $495.4 million on March 31st, 1943, to $604.1 million on March 31st, 1953, but on a per capita basis, it dropped from $126.71 to $123.91, and, of course, in terms of real purchasing power the reduction was even greater. Remember, that when we had $495 million debt, we had a revenue of about $118 million. Today, with a $604 million debt, we have a revenue of $370 million, so there is a very great difference there, and there is a very great difference in the value of the dollar.

I point out to the hon. members who will be taking this budget apart, the truth of the statement I have made. It is by such a policy of applying every dollar of current revenue surplus to sinking funds, debt reduction or capital expenditures that we are able to assure the province a high reputation among the investing public, and thus facilitate our borrowing at low rates of interest.

For the sixth consecutive year, I am able to announce that there will be no additional tax burdens imposed upon the people. Indeed, for 6 years we have been able to make some minor tax reductions. It is proposed to amend the Security Transfer Tax Act to provide that bonds and debentures guaranteed by the Government of Canada or any of the provincial governments will be exempt from this tax. This will mean that Ontario Hydro bonds guaranteed by the province will be exempt from the security transfer tax. There will also be certain minor reductions in succession duties and the race tracks' tax for the next fiscal year will be 7 per cent.

I am sure hon. members of the House are familiar with the problem which has often been discussed here. The high tax level of 15 per cent. plus the additional costs race tracks have had to meet, has a tendency to increase the book-making problem in this province, and we have endeavoured to bring the tax down to help eliminate that problem. Mr. Speaker, of course, it is always a debatable problem, but I think the indication is that is being accomplished.

Ontario has about the lowest provincial tax structure of any of the provinces. Although there are over 62,000 miles of paved or hard-surfaced highways in Ontario—more than double that of any other province—our gasoline tax is some 2 to 4 cents per gallon less than that in 5 of the provinces. Our motor vehicle licence rates are the lowest in any of the Canadian provinces. For the last 3 years our revenue from gasoline tax and motor vehicle licences has been less than our expenditure on highways. Half the provinces of Canada impose a general sales tax, where rates range up to 5 per cent. of the retail price.

I have no criticism of that except to point out that in Ontario we have no sales tax imposed by the Provincial Government. We have not taxed meals, cigarettes, tobacco, or liquor. Those things do not apply in this province. Ontario has no general sales tax, nor any specific taxes on such commodities. In other fields, our rates are comparable with those in the rest of Canada. Although our budget has increased very rapidly, we are actually spending a smaller proportion of the taxpayers' income than before World War II.

In giving you the Estimates for the coming year, our Estimates of net ordinary expenditures for next year are $353,863,000, and net ordinary revenue $354,402,000; I am therefore budgeting for a surplus on ordinary account of $539,000, which, if realized, will be our twelfth consecutive annual surplus.

Budgeting is at all times full of uncertainties. As I stressed in my address 2 years ago, our Estimates are predicated on sound grounds. Any change in federal taxation or the imposition of restrictions on trade affects our revenues. Changes in income or in the driving or beverage-drinking habits of our people will also influence our revenues. For these reasons, our Estimates are made on the safe side.

We hope to do better, and if we do, we will apply it in the way I have indicated. I will not give further details, because it is all there for the hon. members to read.

However, in conclusion, I should like to say a few things about the highlights of this budget. Again, I do not want to burden the hon. members, as the highlights consist of 40 different items, appearing on pages 28 to 33, to which I commend your reading, but I may say this is the eleventh surplus of this government.

Supplementary grants of $7 million will be paid to hospitals, amounting to $300 per bed. $1 million will be paid to the Cancer Research Foundation. $1 million will be paid to the Dental Faculty of the University of Toronto. $100,000 will be paid to the Royal Botanical Gardens. Special grants will also be paid both for capital and maintenance to our universities. $350,000 will be paid to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. To strengthen the Public Service Superannuation Fund and the Teachers' Superannuation Fund, $1 million will be paid into each of those funds.

Highways expenditures are as I have outlined them. Expenditures this year for education totalling almost $82 million, for the great humanitarian services, nearly $160 million; our assistance to the municipalities this year, $134 million. The fact that we have been able to pay out of cash 65 per cent. of our capital commitments; the fact that we have raised 85 per cent. of our physical requirements right here in Canada, and only $285 million abroad; the fact we have been able to do such a striking job in connection with New York financing; the fact that our per capita debt, even after all these extensions, is less than it was 10 years ago; the fact that our grants to rural hydro over the 10-year period have been $65.0 million, and nearly $10.0 million this year; the fact we are adding rural subscribers and users to our lines by the tens of thousands, and the fact that next year we are budgeting for another surplus, the twelfth consecutive surplus; the fact that our grants will amount to $134.0 million to the municipalities, that we are giving great assistance to charitable institutions for their beds, that we are providing $16.5 million for the conservation plans; that we have a shelf of $52 million which can be used as required; that our maintenance grants for universities are being increased, are only some of the 40 points which I mention in this budget, and which I give to the hon. members of this House for consideration.

In conclusion, throughout the present fiscal year, this government has established a high record of achievement—one which has rarely been equalled. To some, this may appear as a challenging statement, but we believe the claim will be accepted by reason of its fidelity to fact. Those who have followed the account of the year's conduct of the business of the province will recognize that the government has not been un-mindful of the needs of the people.

With Ontario's unprecedented growth in population, new problems and new responsibilities have confronted the government. Insofar as human foresight could be exercised, most of these problems have been anticipated and every possible preparation made to deal with them effectively. Some indication of this awareness on the part of the government may be found by recalling a pledge made in the Budget Statement delivered in this House one year ago tomorrow when I said:

Entering as we are upon another year of opportunity, we dedicate ourselves to the task of making 1953-54 a notable year of progress—a year outstripping the best of our former years.

That was a promise made. Today, I affirm that the promise made is now the promise kept.

Today for the fiscal year 1954-55, I make a pledge equal to the one I gave in this House one year ago. I believe that I speak for my colleagues. I assure you I voice my own convictions when I assert that, supported by the united efforts of the hon. members of this Legislature, and with the help and guidance of Divine Providence, we shall acquit this—our solemn obligation—to the satisfaction of the people of Ontario, whose servants we are.

In striving for the betterment of all the people of this great province, we shall not approach our tasks in any narrow spirit of provincialism. We who live in Ontario love this grand old province and are proud of her contribution to the building of Canada. But, Mr. Speaker, we are Canadians, first, last and always!

We have a goodly heritage. For what we have inherited from our fathers, we can never repay. Theirs was not only a triumph over the hardships which belonged to a pioneer life. Theirs was, in fact, a miracle of the spirit. Inspired by the example of those who have laid the foundations of Canada, we shall find the inner strength to prove worthy of our heritage.

In keeping with these sentiments, I ask your permission, Mr. Speaker, to close, by quoting words used by another, on a former occasion. These words I commend to you in the hope that they will never lose their meaning for the Canadian people:

Realizing the inherent greatness of Canada as a nation and recognizing the strength that can come only from unity of purpose, we believe that all the peoples of Canada should unite in fostering a common pride in Canadian achievement and institutions and a common loyalty to our ancestral traditions of equality, justice and toleration, and should seek with due regard for constitutional rights to achieve that profound sense of the importance of national interests which will ensure harmony and co-operation and that future for our country which was the aim of Confederation.

MR. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, before the motion to adjourn the House is moved, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) from whom he was quoting?

HON. MR. FROST: I was quoting my late brother Cecil.

MR. NIXON moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Before the House adjourns, Mr. Speaker, I desire to give hon. members a notice of motion, and in so doing may I make these observations.

At the opening of the session I made reference to the Public Accounts Committee and the highway investigation. Four weeks have now elapsed, and the investigation is continuing, as was evidenced by the announcement on Monday.

It has not been practicable to have the auditor and the investigators appear before the committee, as yet. In the normal course of events about 3 weeks remain of this session. They are going to be very busy weeks and any dealings with the highway matter would have to be hurried and perhaps inconclusive. That, Mr. Speaker, is not what I had hoped for. I am therefore going to present a motion in order not to take from Parliament—the peoples' representatives —the right of full disclosure to which they are entitled, by reason of the course of the present investigation and the nearness of the normal prorogation.

The committee which I propose to have appointed will be given the widest terms of reference. I am not one who believes a committee of the Legislature is bound by the sub judice rule. It is only bound by the limitation of good sense, judgment, and fair play. Parliament is supreme in these matters, and I have every reason to believe that any committee of this House will use good sense, judgment and fair play. I know it will observe these standards.

I have said before the investigation was started by the government. Those in charge have done, and will do, their full duty. The object will be, among other things, to see that the methods employed by the Department of Highways, and by every other department, and in all other places will be no less than the very best and an opportunity will be given for the committee to investigate all those things, and make such recommendations to the House as it sees fit.

Therefore, I give notice of this resolution:

That a Select Committee of the House be appointed to study all phases of the plan of organization and methods of operation in the Fort William Division of the Department of Highways, and in any other divisions of the said department that the committee deems necessary, and to investigate any irregularities or irregular practices in such divisions, and to recommend such improvements in the organization and administrative practices of the Department of Highways which the committee considers necessary to meet the growing volume of work of the department through the province.

And that the Select Committee have authority to sit during the interval between sessions and have full power and authority to call for persons, papers and things, and to examine witnesses under oath, and the Assembly doth command and compel attendance before the said Select Committee of such persons, and the production of such papers and things as the committee may deem necessary for any of its proceedings, and deliberations, for which purpose the Honourable the Speaker may issue his warrant or warrants.

Mr. Speaker, the members of the committee can be chosen later when this resolution has been adopted. I had hoped, when the House convened, that perhaps matters would be sufficiently advanced for the question to have been considered by the Public Accounts Committee. Again I say, I am not one who believes that the sub judice rule applies to proceedings of a committee of the Legislature.

Four weeks have elapsed. In the normal course, there are 3 weeks remaining of the session and, may I point out, Mr. Speaker, there were motions before the House, and it seemed to me to be proper to make this announcement when the Budget Address and the motions had been disposed of. I will move the motion at a later date, but I desired to give notice of it today.

MR. OLIVER: Has a decision been reached by the government as to how many hon. members will sit on the committee?

HON. MR. FROST: I will discuss that point with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), but I should think the number would probably be 11.

MR. OLIVER: What was the number which sat on the Reform Institutions Committee?

HON. MR. FROST: Eleven.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House, and in so doing I may say that tomorrow the bills on the Order Paper will be considered. I think we can follow the usual custom of discussing anything on the Order Paper, but if any hon. member wants anything deferred, I will be glad to hold it over.

MR. NIXON: The Estimates are usually distributed at the time of the Budget Speech. Are they available?

HON. MR. FROST: I am sorry, sir. I will see that they are distributed at once. I will make arrangements to ensure that hon. members get copies immediately, if they so desire.

In view of the point raised by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), I think we could distribute these Estimates at the present time if you, Mr. Speaker, would withhold adjourning the House.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.51 o'clock p.m.

Introduction of bills.

THE MENTAL HEALTH ACT, 1954

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Mental Health Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) tell us the purpose of this bill?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The Mental Hospitals Amendment Act of 1954 consists of three parts. The first has to do with what is known as "Observation Units." Those are units within the psychiatric unit for disturbed patients. This bill is really a further development in the field of community mental health, and authorizes a number of public hospitals to extend their psychiatric treatment service.

The second part has to do with municipal rates, especially as it affects the Ontario Hospital at Woodstock, that is, the epileptic division. It is proposed to relieve the municipality of the charge of 50 cents per day for the treatment of indigent patients in the Ontario Hospital, Woodstock. This is the only Ontario Hospital where this charge was previously made.

The third part provides for certification.

The amendment is designed to authorize municipalities to increase the maximum payable for examinations and certifications of mentally-ill and mentally-defective persons, from $5 to $10. This only involves a very small number of patients, really those ordered to be examined by the magistrates.

The maximum fee of $5 was originally fixed in 1882 and I really think it is reasonable the maximum fee should be increased to $10.

THE MENTAL HOSPITALS ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Mental Hospitals Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in case of both the Mental Health Act and now the Mental Hospitals Act, 1954; they will both be referred, after second reading, to the Committee on Health.

This bill is a further development in the community mental health programme. By this bill, we are establishing the means whereby the best advice and assistance in regard to mental health will be available to local public health agencies, local hospitals, and others throughout the province, in respect of this very important field of public health.

Thirdly, in addition, the bill recognizes the participation of public hospitals in the community mental health programme. In this regard, we are establishing the machinery necessary to supervise and assist public hospitals in this field.

In the Budget Address yesterday, the hon. Prime Minister and Treasurer of this province, stated we had already approved of or put into operation, psychiatric units in 10 general hospitals, located in 6 different cities, which would provide 311 beds.

To that, I might add that at the present time we have 4 units in operation, that is, 123 beds in the 4 units. We have also another 6 units with 188 beds, which have been approved and are now in varying degrees of planning and development. That makes up the total of 311, about which the hon. Prime Minister spoke yesterday.

I may say further that, in a measure, the proposal follows established principles laid down many years ago, and which have been found, by lengthy experience, to be satisfactory, both in the interests of the patients and the institutions concerned.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

The following bills were separately given third readings, and passed as intitled in the motions:

Bill No. 1, An Act respecting The Frontenac High School District.

Bill No. 2, An Act respecting the Toronto East General and Orthopaedic Hospital.

Bill No. 4, An Act respecting the Town of Fergus.

Bill No. 6, An Act respecting the Town of Mimico.

Bill No. 15, An Act respecting the Sao Paulo Light and Power Company Limited.

Bill No. 29, An Act respecting the Town of Palmerston.

THE CITY OF ST. CATHARINES

MR. JOLLEY moves second reading of bill No. 16, "An Act respecting the City of St. Catharines."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CITY OF TORONTO

MR. E. L. WEAVER (St. David): Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill No. 26, "An Act respecting the City of Toronto," I would like to inform the hon. members that pursuant to Rule 87, I have given the Clerk of the House notice of motion to amend the second clause of the bill, when the bill comes to Committee stage, by adding thereto, the following words:

provided that the full value of such land and buildings, except the land and buildings that are exempt from taxation under section 4 of The Assessment Act, shall be included in the assessment of the city for the purpose of the apportionment of the levies of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto among the area municipalities under The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, 1953.

Mr. Speaker, I move second reading of Bill No. 26.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

YOUNG MEN'S, YOUNG WOMEN'S CHRISTIAN ASSOCIATION

MR. J. A. FULLERTON moves second reading of Bill No. 3, "An Act respecting the Sudbury Community

Young Men's, Young Women's Christian Association."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWNSHIP OF SCARBOROUGH

MR. H. E. BECKETT moves second reading of Bill No. 21, "An Act respecting the Township of Scarborough."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves second reading of Bill No. 84, "The Schools Administration Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves second reading of Bill No. 85, "An Act to amend The Public Schools Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill No. 85, I would like to mention again that this bill, together with the others, will go before the Committee on Education.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP, with the same qualification, moves second reading of Bill No. 86, "An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TEACHERS SUPERANNUATION ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves second reading of Bill No. 87, "An Act to amend the Teachers Superannuation Act."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) care to explain to the House what arrangements have been made, or are planned to be made, for the protection of that small but important group of elderly teachers, whose superannuation allowances are extremely low, and totally inadequate for their minimum living requirements?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), may I inform the House that the Committee on Education heard a delegation from the group mentioned by the hon. member, last Wednesday, and discussed the matter fully, but did not arrive at a decision, and proposes to discuss the matter within the committee itself at its next meeting, when the bill will again come before it, and it is expected a decision then will be made.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CORPORATIONS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. WELSH moves second reading of Bill No. 65, "An Act to amend The Corporations Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CORPORATIONS INFORMATION ACT, 1953

HON. MR. WELSH moves second reading of Bill No. 66, "An Act to amend The Corporations Information Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 67, "An Act to amend The Unemployment Relief Act."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) whether this is the only legislation to which we can look forward to in this session dealing with the problem of the unemployed and needed relief? This bill deals only with the amount required for the burial of indigents. I would be very sorry to think this is all the government will have to say in this critical year in regard to the matter of relief for the unemployed.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, I think the hon. Prime Minister has made it abundantly clear as to the position we take in connection with the unemployment situation.

This is a very minor amendment to the Unemployment Relief Act, and, as the hon. member well knows, only applies to unemployable people.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, what was the practice previously?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, previously we have had an item in the Estimates to take care of burials of indigents. We have transferred that to the Unemployment Relief Branch, and burials in unorganized areas will be paid from the Unemployment Relief vote.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PROFESSIONAL ENGINEERS ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves second reading of Bill No. 69, "An Act to amend The Professional Engineers Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE INFANTS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 73, "An Act to amend The Infants Act."

He said: This bill provides for investigations and reports to be made by the Official Guardian in any case relating to the custody, maintenance and education of a child where the custody of the child is involved. Under an amendment of the Matrimonial Causes Act, passed in 1949, similar provision was enacted to assist the courts in dealing with the custody of children in divorce actions of the parents. This amendment will extend that procedure to all cases which involve the custody of children. I propose that this bill, as well as the next three bills to be called for second readings, shall be referred to the Legal Bills Committee.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CREDIT UNIONS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Credit Unions Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I ask whether the Credit Union organizations have been consulted with respect to this bill?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. The change in procedure provided in this amendment, and which is substantially all that is involved in the bill, has been discussed with the association, and they are satisfied with it.

MR. OLIVER: They will be acquainted with the fact that the bill is going to a committee?

HON. MR. PORTER: I shall see that they are. The bill enacts certain desirable changes of procedure. As the House will recall, last session provision was made for the transference of the administration of Credit Unions from the Department of Agriculture to the Department of Insurance. This transfer has been made, and the Department of Insurance has been functioning under the provisions of that statute. The amendments contained in this bill are designed to bring the Act into line with the new administrative policies of the Department of Insurance and the present practices of Credit Unions. There is a slight change in the definition, and there is also provision for the appointment of a new officer to perform the duties which are now performed by the registrar of the department. All the amendments are procedural.

MR. OLIVER: Has the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) any information at hand which would indicate the growth of Credit Unions?

HON. MR. PORTER: I have not it here, but I would be glad to supply it—

MR. OLIVER: In the committee stage?

HON. MR. PORTER: I will obtain the information and produce it in committee stage.

THE JUVENILE AND FAMILY COURTS ACT, 1954

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of bill intituled, "The Juvenile and Family Courts Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Is it the intention of the government to establish these courts in every county of the Province of Ontario?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, eventually that will come about. As a matter of fact, there has been a considerable extension of the juvenile courts system. Up to the present time, no action is taken unless the municipality, or some organization concerned with child-welfare matters, requests that a juvenile court be established. In some counties, there is as yet so small a volume of work of this kind, that they have not asked for this court, but we expect that eventually, even though gradually, one will be established in every county.

MR. CHARTRAND: How are these problems handled in jurisdictions where there is no juvenile or family court? Are they dealt with by the magistrate's court, the county court judge, or by what tribunal?

HON. MR. PORTER: Cases come before the magistrate in the ordinary way. When a charge is laid against a juvenile, the magistrate disposes of the case, either by acquittal, suspended sentence, probation, or otherwise.

MR. CHARTRAND: Where there is no special family court tribunal, how are these family cases handled?

HON. MR. PORTER: Very often, where a juvenile and family court is established, a juvenile court judge is appointed, and frequently he is the magistrate. Or it may be that the county court judge is clothed with jurisdiction to act as juvenile judge, in addition to his other functions. In the City of Toronto, where there is a very large volume of work in the juvenile and family court, the organization is entirely separate, with a juvenile judge, a deputy judge, and quite an elaborate staff. In Ottawa there is a similar organization. The juvenile court judge in Ottawa is not a magistrate or a county court judge. He has been appointed specifically as a full-time judge for this purpose. But where the work is not too heavy, it is customary to have one of the existing judicial officers appointed to carry it on.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, in districts where the amount of work is not sufficient to require a separate court, the magistrate will clear the court and hold the hearing in camera. That is really the only difference.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, that is really the only difference. He is given authority to deal with these matters in the special way provided for under the juvenile courts legislation.

MR. SPEAKER: I have, by allowing this discussion, practically permitted this bill to go to committee stage.

THE REAL ESTATE AND BUSINESS BROKERS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act."

MR. OLIVER: Will it go to committee?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. All these bills, the second readings of which I have just moved, will go to committee. I explained, on first reading, the purposes of the bill. It contains several rather minor amendments to The Real Estate and Business Brokers Act which have been recommended by the department under which that Act is administered; and it will be further considered in committee.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks on this bill, and I hope to get some enlightenment from the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). I have in mind especially certain practices which we thought we had eliminated as a result of legislation adopted by the House in the last few years, but which, I am afraid, have not been wholly done away with. As recently as the past week or two, a case was brought to my notice of a man who, having bought a house through a licenced real estate broker, found, after a considerable period of time, that the person from whom he bought it had received $2,000 less than the sum he—the purchaser—had paid. This was discovered as a result of a quite accidental meeting of the vendor and the purchaser. Upon investigating the transaction, they found that, somewhere during the course of negotiations, there entered a fictitious "Mrs. Smith," from Hamilton, who was supposed to have purchased the house from the former owner and in turn, had sold it to the present owner at a profit of $2,000. No one was aware of the existence of any "Mrs. Smith." Obviously, what happened was that the agent, realizing that he could get more for the house than the then owner was asking, made this fictitious transaction and charged the purchaser the extra $2,000. I was asked whether this proceeding was legal, and what could be done about it. At this moment both the former owner and the present owner are ready to co-operate in order to lay claim to the $2,000. The former owner would like to get it, since obviously it was paid for the property; the new owner would like to regain it, because obviously it was not received by the former owner. The incident indicates the existence of a loophole which I had supposed was pretty well plugged by the legislation passed a few years ago for the purpose of making it more difficult to carry on such unsavoury practices in the real estate business. But if these things are still possible, evidently the Act requires more amendments than are now being presented to us, and I would earnestly ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) to look into this matter and, before the session is over, to introduce such additional amendments as may be necessary to safeguard the interests of people of the class I have mentioned.

HON. MR. PORTER: If what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has told us did actually happen, and if complaint was made to the Department of Insurance, I am sure the licence of that broker would be cancelled immediately.

MR. SALSBERG: Of course, Mr. Speaker, there may be a difficulty, owing to the injection of a third party, in proving what was done according to my information.

HON. MR. PORTER: Action would be taken if the facts as stated by the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) are correct. But he has not given the names of the parties. He has never complained to me about this matter. I do not know whether anyone has made complaints to the department about it. The department has power to licence people, whether brokers or salesmen, who deal in real estate with the public; and if any fraudulent practice of this kind takes place, the licence of the man responsible would be immediately cancelled. I cannot understand anybody allowing a thing of that kind to develop, and harbouring it in his breast for months, without anything being done about it. We have not had information from anyone. How could we do anything about it? If the hon. member wants to facilitate a proper disposition of this matter, let him tell us who the parties are, and where they are, and we will go after them.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Attorney-General need not be so belligerent and so demanding.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not belligerent at all. I want to ascertain what took place.

MR. SALSBERG: I can assure him that nobody "harboured it in his breast" for any length of time.

HON. MR. PORTER: When did it happen?

MR. SALSBERG: This thing came up without the "harbouring" of a secret in the breast of anybody.

HON. MR. PORTER: When did it happen?

MR. SALSBERG: Two people met.

HON. MR. PORTER: When did it happen?

MR. SALSBERG: I can give you all the information given me by my constituents. But since you are—

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I asked the hon. member when did this happen?

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest that the hon. Attorney-General should not get excited about it.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not. I want to know when it happened.

MR. SALSBERG: He should only show concern, not excitement—

HON. MR. PORTER: I am showing great concern.

MR. SALSBERG: —because he is not being blamed for it. I am merely inquiring whether our present legislation is sufficient to safeguard people in a transaction of this kind. He will know if it does, and in what manner.

HON. MR. PORTER: The legislation is completely sufficient for the purpose, if the hon. member (Mr.

Salsberg) will take the necessary steps under it, to lay the facts before us. But how can we get after anybody if we do not know who the parties are, and where the transaction took place? All we know is that he says there is a fictitious "Mrs. Smith" and that "Mrs. Smith," apparently, does not exist. What are we to do about it? We do not even know yet whether there is a house.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Speaker, there is a house. The hon. Attorney-General and his friends might not call it a house, but for 90 per cent. of factory workers that is a house and that is a home.

HON. MR. PORTER: We have never seen it.

MR. SALSBERG: So far the hon. Attorney-General has not been charged with neglect of duty, so he should not "get hot." I am inquiring of him as the chief law advisor of this government whether there is sufficient protection in such cases. As for the suggestion of hearsay, Mr. Speaker, what happened was that two people met accidentally at a social gathering; one asked the other where he lived and the other told him. The first man said, "That is the house which I sold." "Why," says the other, "are you Mr. So-and-so?" "Yes."

HON. MR. PORTER: Mister whom?

MR. SALSBERG: "I have bought it from him." So they began exchanging notes, and they found to their amazement that they were cheated somehow; one got less than he was supposed to have received, and the other evidently paid more than he was supposed to pay. I will bring the information to the hon. Attorney-General's office. I am very glad to know that in the hon. Minister's opinion our present legislation is sufficient. But he did not answer my question, whether under the existing law the party who improperly obtained this additional $2,000 can be forced to return it.

HON. MR. PORTER: I would say, yes, if the proper procedure is taken.

But first I must hear the facts of the case. I have not heard one fact yet.

MR. SALSBERG: Despite the brilliance for which the hon. Attorney-General is famous among his own supporters, I do not expect him to know the facts of a case I have not presented to him.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am glad the hon. member feels that he has not presented them.

MR. SALSBERG: And I am glad he understands the nature of the complaint, and I hope he will take the necessary action to protect the best interests of our citizens in these matters.

MR. T. L. KENNEDY (Peel): Who is "harbouring" the $2,000?

HON. MR. W. K. WARRENDER (Minister of Planning and Development): May I ask the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) if the contract entered into was offer to purchase for a specific sum of money? If there was a contract for a specific sum, how could the purchaser pay more than the sum specified in the contract, or the vendor receive less?

MR. SALSBERG: I shall be extremely glad, in the interests of the people affected, to bring all the documents to the desk of the hon. Attorney-General. According to the information given to me by these citizens, the agent offered this house at a certain price. The prospective purchaser thought the price was a little too high, but indicated his readiness to purchase at around the price asked. It seems that the agent then went to the owner and put through a sale to a "Mrs. Smith" for $2,000 less than the prospective purchaser was prepared to pay, and then came to this man and sold it to him. Whether all the documents are in order, I cannot say. Unfortunately, I am not a lawyer; fortunately, I am a member of the Legislature who is always ready to defend the interests of his constituents.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is all anonymous.

MR. SALSBERG: But my constituents are not anonymous at all; they are very well known.

HON. MR. PORTER: We will go into the case immediately we know what it is.

MR. SALSBERG: I will bring the material.

MR. SPEAKER: I think we have had a very enjoyable and amusing time—

MR. SALSBERG: It is the fault of the government!

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): As I understand it, the amendment proposed in this bill is intended to differentiate between "broker" and "salesman". I do not know whether different bonds are to be filed by a salesman and by a broker, but it seems to me that we should not make objections or raise barriers to a salesman becoming a broker. Will the hon. Attorney-General tell us whether this is merely a matter of what bonds shall be filed, or has he any objections—and if so, what—to a salesman becoming a broker?

HON. MR. PORTER: Very often, of course, a salesman is a man who has not the qualifications of a broker. A broker is a man who has to take the responsibility if a salesman makes a mistake or does anything wrong. A salesman is an employee of a broker. A man who might be suitably qualified as a salesman might not have the qualifications which would enable him to become a broker. On the other hand—I am not quite sure, but I think there is a higher bond required for a broker than a salesman. If the hon. member wants complete details of the procedure under this Act, he can attend the committee meeting. We shall have Mr. Whitehead there to answer any questions—and perhaps "Mrs. Smith" will be there as a witness.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TREES ACT

HON. WELLAND S. GEMMELL moves second reading of Bill No. 82 intituled, "An Act to amend the Trees Act."

MR. H. C. NIXON: Would the hon. Minister give the House some explanation of the bill?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: This is more or less a tightening up of existing legislation. Under the original Act the organized municipalities, or most of them, had the privilege of passing by-laws to regulate the cutting of trees within their boundaries.

It has been discovered that certain municipalities and townships in Northern Ontario were not covered by the Act, and this Act gives them the legal authority to pass these by-laws regulating the cutting of trees.

The Act also gives the municipalities the power to appoint inspecting officers in addition, to ensure that the by-laws are carried out. It was discovered that in certain sections of Southern Ontario, some people were evading the by-laws by using fire, bulldozers, and other means to destroy wood lots, causing destruction in order to get the land for agricultural purposes. This measure would give to municipalities and townships the privilege of passing by-laws and enforcing them.

MR. OLIVER: Does the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Gemmell) suggest some cities come under this Act?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I believe the matter first arose in connection with one of our organized municipalities which was not legally entitled to pass a by-law in connection with the cutting of trees. That is when it was brought to our attention. In studying the Act it was discovered that certain organized municipalities did not have the authority to pass by-laws.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE WOLF AND BEAR BOUNTY ACT

HON. MR. GEMMELL moves second reading of Bill No. 88 intituled "An Act to amend the Wolf and Bear Bounty Act."

MR. OLIVER: Is the hon. Minister going to raise the bounty this year?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: No. As I explained the other day, this bill will now permit trappers to present the head of the animal only. Previously they had to present the whole carcass in order to collect the bounty in territorial districts.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE CROWN TIMBER ACT, 1952

HON. MR. GEMMELL moves second reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Crown Timber Act, 1952."

MR. OLIVER: I think the hon. Minister should say something on this. The explanatory note is not very helpful.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Mr. Speaker, I should say that all these bills will go to the Lands and Forests Committee. The original 1952 bill, as I explained the other day, provided that concessionaires holding concessions of 50 square miles and over, must prepare plans for our department, to cover cutting in the concession area. Such plans, after they are submitted, must have the approval of the department. Secondly, concessionaires must present annual cutting plans, and we thought, in order to ensure that proper schemes for reforestation were provided, the Minister should be given power to require the submission of information as to how concessionaires are going to handle the regeneration and reforestation of the cut-over area. The bill will also give the Minister power, if the submission is not in accordance with the wishes of the department, to require further work to ensure the adequate regeneration of the forest area held by concessionaires.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways) moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

TERRITORIAL DIVISION ACT

House in committee on Bill No. 32, "An Act to amend the Territorial Division Act."

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive agreed to.

Bill No. 32 reported.

DEPARTMENT OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS ACT

House in committee on Bill No. 55, "An Act to amend the Department of Municipal Affairs Act."

On section 1.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I just want to ask the hon. Minister whether it is really necessary to include the last two lines of section 1:

and the department may require the inclusion in the notice of such other information as it deems advisable.

After all, in addition you have to account for every 5 cents you ever gave to the municipality. Surely you do not require words which say, in effect, "Or anything the department might think of." Surely it is enough to say that the amounts which are given to the municipalities shall be included on the tax bill, and I would say that some hypothetical matter ought not to be included afterwards.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): For no reason, as far as I can see, other than there might be a change in the Act. But the slips have been sent out to each municipality and I am sure these slips contain the information normally sought. I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that there is nothing whatever at the back of this. I have no objection to those lines being deleted—none whatever—because there is nothing in my mind except that we continue doing what we have been doing in the past. I suppose the staff of the department, in preparing the section, thought perhaps some occasion for the use of those words might arise in the future, but at the present time I can see no reason for them.

MR. OLIVER: Above those words it says:

By which the municipality and local boards benefit by reason of payments by the province to a metropolitan municipality or a county, or a local board thereof, or to a local board which functions in more than one municipality.

That would cover completely, I would suggest, any revision or change which might be contemplated. I say the last two lines are unnecessary, and should not be included.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I agree with the hon. member (Mr. Oliver). It is not necessary to have them in at all. If my legal advisers hold they should not be there—

MR. OLIVER: I move that the last two lines be deleted.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I want to assure the hon. member (Mr. Oliver) that on my part there was no intention to take any power other than that which has always been exercised.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): While the Minister is making up his mind—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I do not need any time to make up my mind. Do not be personal.

MR. SALSBERG: This is nothing personal. I am giving you time.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I will hold the bill.

Bill No. 55 held.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 56.
"An Act to amend the Municipal Act."

MR. H. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine) :
Can this bill be held over for a couple of weeks?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Would the hon. member give an explanation? Why does he say "a couple of weeks" when this has gone before the committee and been agreed to?

MR. FISHLEIGH: The Town of Malton desires time to appear before a county hearing at a meeting on the 18th.
If we pass this bill they cannot appear before their own County Council to request to become a village in accordance with a procedure which has gone on for 100 years. This bill will preclude them from ever becoming a village. If you bring this bill in after the 18th they will have a chance.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon.
member's words demonstrate he has misunderstood the issue. We did not have a Municipal Board 100 years ago.
Does the hon. member not think that when a village makes a request of this sort, it should come before the Municipal Board?

A municipality may have issued a great many debentures. Debentures may have been sold—and no doubt were—at a price which took into consideration the fact that Malton was "in," and that the sewers and water mains had been constructed. Does the hon. member not think it is fair, then, to have a public hearing before the Municipal Board, so that all parties concerned can put their cards on the table?

I suggest to the hon. member it is not proper to say that Malton should not be considered by the Municipal Board but that the County Council should deal with it. The County Council does not have to deal with it. You cannot tie the hands of a County Council. They are not obliged to deal with a matter at their first meeting, or at their second meeting.
They may delay their meeting for a time.

I think the fair way for all concerned is to go to the Municipal Board, and for a public hearing to be conducted, so that a decision on what is to be done may be arrived at on the basis of expenditure, and on the basis of Malton being in the township.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane
South) : I agree with the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) in the discussion that has so far taken place in connection with this bill. But this discussion simply shows up what happens in connection with our present procedure of sending bills to committee. All along I have been in favour of sending bills to the appropriate committee, but there is just one weakness. Those of us who are not in attendance do not know what takes place.

Hon. members attending one particular committee may constitute one-tenth or perhaps one-fifteenth of the membership of the House and the rest of us do not know what takes place.
Some hon. members may say that I have the opportunity of attending committee meetings, even if I am not a member of a particular committee, in order to hear what matters are being discussed. But this is not correct. Some of us are members of 8 or 9 standing committees.
It is impossible for me, for instance, to attend a meeting of a committee of which I am not a member. Thus I am unable to know what discussion took place.

I believe there is one way in which we could remedy this situation: When the bill comes back from the Standing Committee and comes before the Committee of the Whole House, one member of the committee, perhaps the chairman, could make a report to the House.

I would like to know what discussion took place, but it is impossible for me to know, and our present procedure limits discussion on a bill which usually takes place on second readings.

I agree with the limitation all right, but I would like to see something done which would give hon. members some knowledge of just what happened in the Standing Committee's discussion. I would like some further explanation of the bill, perhaps from the hon. Minister, or perhaps from the chairman of the committee or from some hon. member. I agree wholeheartedly with the procedure of sending these bills to committee, but there is just the limitation that we lose touch in some way with the whole principle and subject matter that is contained in the bill.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I would like to ask the chairman of the committee to say something about it. I was not present at the committee meeting because we had a meeting of the Cabinet.

MR. GRUMMETT: Neither was I, Mr. Chairman, but I was interested in the problem. I agree with what the hon. Minister has said today, but I would have liked to have known what took place at the meeting.

MR. BECKETT: As chairman of the committee, I would say a very fair discussion was held with regard to this section of the bill. Everybody was heard, and I think it was explained what the procedure was under the present Act, and what it would be after this amendment.

At the present time, when an application is received by the County Council, and they want to press that application, there is hearing before the County Council, to hear all aspects of the application before it becomes law. Everybody understood the situation very clearly, and I do not think any further explanation can be given. They were told what the procedure is today and what it will be after this amendment is passed.

MR. GRUMMETT: The hon. member for York East (Mr. Beckett) has just pointed out what I was trying to say. He says in the committee meeting everything was explained very clearly. That is quite correct. All the hon. members attending the meeting of that committee understood it, but what about the other 50 or 60 hon. members of the House who were not present at that committee meeting and want to know what happened?

MR. BECKETT: As a matter of fact, we had a very good attendance. Practically every member in attendance had something to say and they fully understood what the procedure would be after this amendment went through.

What else can I tell the hon. member? We had a very thorough discussion of the entire matter.

MR. OLIVER: Could I ask the hon. member if there was a vote, if there was a division of opinion on this particular matter in committee?

MR. BECKETT: No, there was no vote taken. It was not necessary, because everybody seemed to be in agreement.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Do you not think it unfair to ask a County Council to decide a thing like that? The Municipal Board has been sitting on all these hearings regarding sewers, debentures and water mains, and they know what it means to that particular township if they lose it, or not. Everything has been brought before them. As the hon. member has stated, Mr. Chairman, this has been on the books for 100 years. We are accused, very often, of the Municipal Act not being brought up to date.

MR. BECKETT: Another point I should mention: under the present legislation, there is no opportunity for the municipality to express its views. Now, they will be able to do it more than before.

The only opportunity existing now is for the respective reeve or deputy reeve to sit in County Council, where they can only express their views if the Statute is mandatory. Under the present legislation, anybody can appear before the board.

THE CHAIRMAN: An hon. member has made a request that the bill be held, and that is now the decision.

MR. SALSBERG: Is it not a fact that even if this bill goes through committee stage, it will not necessarily deprive the village of its right to appear before the County Council, because it will not have had third reading, and even if the bill receives third reading, it will not necessarily come into effect unless and until it is proclaimed? I doubt if that will take place before the 18th of the month, which is the date, I gather, on which the County Council is meeting. That would be the case unless the government has the intention of proclaiming the bill as quickly as it can get it through the various stages of consideration; otherwise, in the normal run of events, it will not be effective on the 18th.

MR. FISHLEIGH: If that is the case, I am perfectly happy. I am anxious to give them a chance to appear. They seem to feel we are hasty in this, and moreover, I believe, it is very important because the Town of Malton has representatives of industries from the Old Land who wish to come here. A decision has to be made by them whether they have that, or whether they do not; whether they build apartment houses out there for their 14,000 employees, or whether it will be a "mud town."

MR. OLIVER: Could I ask the hon. Minister if it is the government's intention to push the legislation through and proclaim it before the 18th?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I have no idea. I have not heard.

MR. OLIVER: Are you anxious to have it proclaimed?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No.

HON. MR. PORTER: So far as we know, there is no intention of calling the Lieutenant-Governor in before the end of the session.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: This was not "cut and dried" for Malton.

HON. MR. PORTER: Malton just happened to come in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Sections 1 to 3 inclusive agreed to.

On section 4.

MR. SALSBERG: Just before the bill is passed, I want to say the following. Without taking exception to any portion of the bill, I think it should be stated, as it was in committee, that quite a few of the hon. members of the House, and quite a few people outside the House, are seriously concerned over the tendency of designating additional power and authority to the Municipal Board.

I confess I share that feeling. I say this without having any specific objection to the board as it is composed, as individuals, or to its entire administration, but it has a tendency which gives me and a great many other people great concern, in that we allow an appointed board to assume powers over the life of municipalities which was never dreamed of, and which makes it necessary for large communities, such as Toronto, to come to them for approval, before the corporation can proceed with the fixing of sidewalks, for instance, if the payment for that operation is not going to be made in the year the work is done.

I think it is time we came to grips with this problem, and give it most serious consideration. I say these few words because I think they must be said, and this may be as good a time as any. The hon. Minister feels you cannot amend or change the Municipal Act, because it is a very big Act and has been in operation for a long time and additions have been made to it.

I respectfully suggest to the hon. Minister that precisely because the Municipal Act has grown in the manner it has, by meeting exigencies of the day and problems of the moment which arose because of certain specific developments, precisely because of this history, the time is long overdue for a most thorough study and examination of the Municipal Act, and the role and responsibilities of the Municipal Board. This Act merely gives additional power to that appointed board.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It has grown, but there is one thing I would like to say about the Municipal Board.

It never enters any municipality without being asked.

The hon. member has said, they have control over the municipality. The City of Toronto can build all the sidewalks and roads it desires if it wants to pay for them. It can raise the tax rate and pay for that work. But if the city wants to borrow money on debentures, do you not think the ratepayers should have some little security? They have to go to some board before they borrow money, and mortgage a man's house, because if you put a debenture on that, that is the first mortgage. You may think some other fellow has the first mortgage on a house, but he has not. That debenture is the first mortgage, and if a municipality goes into default, that is the first mortgage. It does not matter about anything else.

I think that is a very serious situation. I think it is very necessary to have a Municipal Board, which, before they issue debentures, look up the financial standing of the municipality and give their "yes" or "no" on the issue of the debentures. It would be a sorry day for the Province of Ontario, if that power was ever taken away from the Municipal Board, and the municipalities were allowed to borrow all the money they could—knowing municipalities as I know some of them—and putting a first mortgage on the home owner.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): I am interested in subsection 7:

The vice-chairman of the board, during the absence of the chairman through illness or otherwise or if the office of chairman is vacant, shall have all the powers and perform the duties of the chairman except that he shall not act in the place of the chairman on a County Council.

In my riding we have the Improvement District of Ajax. The district was set up about 3 years ago; the chairman of that board is Mr. Hunt, who is a very fine man and the president of Doughty Construction Company at Ajax. During the summer, he will be away from Ajax for 2, 3 or 4 months. According to that section, during the time Mr. Hunt is away from Ajax, the vice-chairman of the board is not allowed to sit on County Council, which means the Improvement District of Ajax has no representation on County Council during that period.

The Improvement District of Ajax contributes $40,000 a year to the County of Ontario. Surely, there must be some way for a chairman of a board, while away from his district or area for any length of time, to delegate some other person to take his place on County Council, to see the interests of the local community are protected.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister if he has considered that angle at all?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, it was considered in every way. The deputy reeve does not attend County Council, as many hon. members in this Assembly know. This man should not be the chairman of a board if he is absent from the municipality for that length of time. What could be done is appoint him a member of the board, which should be just as good for him, and appoint another man, who would attend the County Council regularly, as chairman. What difference does it make if he is chairman, or simply a member of the board? We are prepared to make the other man, who can be present at the County Council, chairman, and make him a member of the board.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): What would be the procedure? How long would that take?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We amended the Act for the entire Province of Ontario, so that the deputy reeve is not allowed to sit in County Council.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS QUIETING ORDERS ACT

The House in Committee on Bill No. 70, "An Act to amend The Municipal Corporations Quieting Orders Act."

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member may keep quiet now.

MR. SALSBERG: If the reference was to me, I want to inform the hon. Attorney-General that because I was a member of this committee, I learned all the secret meanings of this "Quieting Act" which he, and other lawyers, managed to inject into normal procedures between men. I have learned it, and now I know what it means.

THE VITAL STATISTICS ACT

The House in Committee on Bill No. 72, "An Act to amend the Vital Statistics Act."

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: In view of the fact the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs is in the House, but was unavoidably absent from the committee when this bill was discussed, I would like to ask a question which was raised in committee by some of the hon. members.

The question raised was: Whether the government would agree to drop the present practice of charging $1 for a birth certificate and send the certificates out automatically with the receipt of the registration forms properly presented and signed, so that every new-born child would receive his or her birth certificate and would not have to come back in later years and pay $1 for it.

We were advised by the officials of the department it was a matter of policy—and I think we were quite correct—and only the government can make that decision. We were told, also, it results in an income of about $250,000 a year for all the certificates issued.

That idea appealed to me, and now the hon. Minister is here, I think this question should be raised officially.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It has not been considered. Of course, it would have to be considered by the government.

MR. SALSBERG: What is your opinion?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: My opinion is, no. I think it might be handled in this way, that the birth certificate could be sent out on the payment of $1. The clerk could issue the birth certificate, and we would send it out. $1 could be paid to the clerk, and not have a delay in receiving it.

I do not think the people of Ontario expect us to maintain our offices, carry out our duties, pay our help, and so on, without some charge for the birth certificates. They are worth something.

MR. SALSBERG: Why do you want to charge little babies? Leave the children out of it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It would not affect you one bit.

MR. R. E. ELLIOTT (Hamilton East): With regard to that point in the bill, it was discussed with Mr. Orr and the other officials of the department at the committee meeting. In fact it was I who brought it up, and not the hon. member for St. Andrew. They said they would take into consideration giving birth certificates to the children after a certain date, written on printed forms, when they were born, so that throughout their lives the parents and family could keep them, and if they needed them in school, or when changing from one district to another, they would have them.

That was taken up with Mr. Orr and his staff, who said they would investigate the matter and bring it forward next year, and they would see if they could give some consideration to doing the very thing the hon. member has suggested.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I am very glad the hon. member for Hamilton East has spoken, and I now recall it was he who originally raised the point. However, I thought since the officials of the department eventually have to go to the hon. Minister, and since we have the hon. Minister here now, there is no time like the present for striking while the iron is hot.

I had hoped the hon. Minister would agree to drop the nuisance charge of $1 for a birth certificate on a little child, because after school is closed in the summer he must buy it, and I think it is unfair.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Do not get me to weeping.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it is unfair. A young boy who wants to play on a baseball team or join the Scouts, has to come here, because his birth certificate was not issued in the first place, and you hold him up for $1. It is unfair.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I am reminded that in the midst of life, we are in death, and I must say, sir, that I feel inadequate to the task of paying tribute this afternoon to a young man of only 46 or 47 years of age, a man of great brilliance and personality.

I am reminded of that famous reference of John Bright who, under different circumstances, on a great occasion, referred to the Angel of Death being so close that he could hear the beat of its wings.

We all regret the passing of Charles Gordon MacOdrum, B.A., Q.C., member of the Legislature for the great riding of Leeds, and a resident of the great City of Brockville. A son of the Manse, he came from a distinguished family. His late father was, in 1938, the Moderator of the Presbyterian Church of Canada. His brother, well-known to us—Doctor M. M. MacOdrum—serves as President of Carleton College, and another brother—Rev. A. S. MacOdrum—is the minister of Kydd Memorial Presbyterian Church in the Rosemount District of Montreal.

A young man, with the background of the clergy, coming, as so many distinguished Canadians have come, from the atmosphere of the Presbyterian Manse, he was born at Moncton, in the great old Province of New Brunswick, was educated at Dalhousie University, and at Osgoode Hall, Toronto. He was first elected to the Legislature in 1951. The manner in which he discharged his duties since then, indicated him to be a worthy representative of a great riding, that of Leeds, which goes back in history to the very beginnings of this province.

He had a genial and understanding personality, and was possessed in abundant measure of those great and human qualities of heart and mind which endeared him to all those with whom he came in contact. Gordon MacOdrum's first concern was for his country, and his province. He was always interested in the welfare of his constituents, and that characteristic was evidenced to the very last, and they held him in the highest regard. Indeed, the confidence thus reposed in him has been reflected far beyond the confines of his riding of Leeds. His passing evokes today feelings of great regret, and a prayer for his everlasting memory in the hearts of the many who felt the touch of his warm and engaging personality and understanding.

In the realm of his chosen profession of law, he had a distinguished career. Community activities also allowed full scope for all the attributes by which he demonstrated his true worth as a good citizen. He did not spare himself in the service of his municipality of Brockville, which he served first as an alderman, and subsequently as mayor for the years 1939 to 1943 inclusive.

Mere words are futile on an occasion such as this to express our deep personal loss here today. It is in his own household, however, where he shone as a good husband and father, that the blow will be most severely felt. To his wife and two sons, and others of the family including his distinguished brothers, goes our deep sympathy on this occasion, as we mark the passing of a distinguished Canadian, whose great service in so many capacities has benefited the province and the community over the years. We all owe him a deep debt of gratitude which it is our privilege to acknowledge, sad though the occasion may be.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition: I join with the hon. Prime Minister in expressing our sympathy to the family of Gordon MacOdrum, and to say to the House that in the last few weeks the hand of death has stricken two of our number, both in the prime of life, and both in their greatest period of usefulness.

The government also has suffered, I would say, very greatly in the loss of the late hon. member for Leeds because it was significant that as the days went on, more and more confidence was being placed in the late hon. member for Leeds, by the government, in the House. He was, as the hon. members will recall, chosen as chairman of the Redistribution Committee, which is an indication of the merit which the man had, and the ability which he possessed. He was a good debater, and was, as the hon. Prime Minister suggests, a man of the people, whose first thoughts were for the people, and was always staunch in supporting and in advocating legislation which would be for the benefit of the people as a whole.

The hon. members of this House mourn the passing of Gordon MacOdrum, and extend to his family and friends their sympathy on this occasion.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Leader of the Opposition in extending our sympathy to the family of the late Gordon MacOdrum. This has been another serious blow to the members of the Legislature. Those of us who knew Gordon MacOdrum, knew him as a friend, as an able member of the Legislature, and an able debater, and one who played his part in all the activities of the Legislature, in committees, and in the House. He was a member who discharged his duties faithfully on behalf of his constituency.

As the hon. Prime Minister has correctly stated, words of ours cannot express our feeling of loss at the passing of this able, young member.

It may be significant that both of the hon. members who have recently passed away were approximately the same age, I believe, about 47. They were in the prime of their manhood, when they would be giving of their very best in the service of the country. Both Gordon MacOdrum and "Bill" Harvey have passed on during this session.

The veterans have also lost a great friend in the passing of Mr. MacOdrum, and I am sure those of us who are ex-legionnaires—members of the Legion—mourn the passing of a young officer and soldier who served so well during World War II.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, will you permit me to join with the hon. members who have spoken? I, as have other hon. members, felt the sudden shock of the passing of the late hon. member for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum). It is only a couple of days ago when we were together in committee, and it seems like yesterday when we were sitting side by side at a luncheon—only three days ago. It is shocking and painful to realize how quickly one may go.

I do want to add, however, something which has not been mentioned, but which I believe is to the honour of his memory. Mr. MacOdrum, to the best of my knowledge, took a very keen interest in the problems of labour in his community and served it as a lawyer.

It should also be added—and again to his credit—that he undertook to act on behalf of labour at a time when the organized trade union movement in his community was not strong, and was not able to offer him any substantial remuneration for his services. He, nevertheless, acted on behalf of quite a number of labour unions in his community and in his area, up to the very last days of his life.

MR. SPEAKER: May I, on behalf of all the hon. members of the House, add my word on the passing of the late hon. member for Leeds.

The honourable members of this House have experienced this morning the profound sorrow through the passing of one of our most esteemed and kindly members of our Assembly in the person of Charles Gordon MacOdrum. To be called away in the midst of an active and useful life reminds us so forcibly of the shortness and uncertainty of human life. Yet, there is always the firm assurance of our reasonable religious and holy hope, which enables us to accept the return of a soul to its Maker with a sense of gratitude and thanksgiving. Gordon MacOdrum was one whom every honourable member of this Assembly came to admire, respect and honour. His keen interest in his own people and in the larger welfare of his province made him stand out, as these qualities expressed themselves in his life. Ever aware of these responsibilities, he literally gave himself to his task with enthusiasm, earnestness and devotion. We give thanks for the gift of his life to our day and generation, and to his family extend our understanding, sympathy and prayers for strength and faith and courage.

May we observe one minute's silence please, in grateful recognition of the life of Charles Gordon MacOdrum.

One minute's silence: all standing.

Almighty God, with Whom do live the spirits of those that depart hence, we most humbly beseech Thee to look in love and mercy upon the soul of Thy child, Charles Gordon, whom Thou hast called from the cares and duties of this world, into Thine Eternal Presence. Grant that as we believe in the reality of Life Eternal, so too may we, his friends and associates, find comfort in that same knowledge for him. Graciously look upon those bereaved by their loss, and may they find in Thee—the God of all mankind—a sure refuge and strength in their time of sorrow. For all his weaknesses and shortcomings we beg Thy mercy. For all his good deeds performed in the midst of this world may he be a lasting memory of thanksgiving and may his human understanding add to the betterment of all with whom he came in contact. May he find Eternal Rest in Thine unbounded love. All of which we ask in the name and for the sake of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, who is the Resurrection and the Life. Amen.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would request you revert to "Motions," and I would like to move the following:

That out of respect for the memory of the late hon. member for Leeds, Mr. Charles Gordon MacOdrum, whose funeral service will be held on Wednesday of this week, that when this House adjourns tomorrow, Tuesday, it do stand adjourned until 3 of the clock on Thursday afternoon.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the information I have is that the funeral service for the late Mr. MacOdrum was set for 2.30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, at the First Presbyterian Church, Brockville.

Of course, I would not in any way suggest interference with the time, but I have asked the Clerk of the House to get in touch with the family relative to holding the service at three o'clock, or later, because of the train service from Toronto. This would enable hon. members to go down in the morning, and return in the evening. I think that was done at the time of the passing of the late Mr. Reynolds, one time member for Leeds, some years ago.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

REPORT OF THE COMMITTEE ON CEMETERIES ACT

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I was asked to adjourn the debate on this matter because one or two hon. members wanted to speak. I notice they are not here today, so I will adjourn the debate.

HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT ACT

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves second reading of Bill No. 81, "An Act to amend the Highway Improvement Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this bill the other day, I stated we had four recommendations to make to the House. They are as follows:

Section 1: The purpose of this section is to make it clear that a county council may pass a consolidating by-law with respect to the county road system. At present the Act provides as follows:

Section 11: (17) Where a by-law has been passed for the purpose of establishing a county road system, the council of the county with the approval of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may amend the by-law by adding roads to or removing roads from the county road system, or in any other manner.

This does not say specifically that the council may pass a consolidating by-law. I think it should be clearly stated in the Act that the council has that power. There is a very real necessity for the passing of consolidating by-laws because, after a number of amending by-laws have been passed, the records become unwieldy and confusing. In 1925, all counties passed amending by-laws revising the county road systems which in effect were consolidating by-laws. Since then a number of counties have passed consolidating by-laws and others find it necessary to do so.

The amendment is intended to remove all doubts by stating specifically that the county council may from time to time pass a by-law consolidating its county road by-laws.

The purpose of section 2, is to confer on the council of a county the power to regulate, by by-law, the use of land abutting on a county road for a distance of 150 feet from any limit of the road subject to the approval of the Municipal Board.

In the development of the county road systems it has been found that the width of the established road allowance is, in many cases, inadequate for the purposes of a county road. A number of counties have, therefore, embarked on a programme of widening to 86 feet. This is difficult and expensive where buildings have been erected too close to the limits of the road and, therefore, the counties desire to control the erection of buildings or other structures on land abutting on the road. They find, however, that they haven't the power to do so and must rely on the co-operation of the local municipalities within which the road is situate. The local municipalities have that power under section 390 of The Municipal Act, but, due to the need for uniformity in the regulations, reliance on the local municipalities is not satisfactory.

In section 92 of The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, 1953, this power is conferred on the Metropolitan Council with respect to land abutting on a metropolitan road. Section 2 of this bill has been drafted in the same form. As a safeguard, approval by the Municipal Board is required which affords ample opportunity for review.

Section 3 and 4 are complementary and their object is to control the use of land adjacent to a controlled-access highway for the purposes of a stadium, fair ground, race track, circus, drive-in theatre or any similar purpose. The control will be exercised by permit and is intended to ensure that the free movement of traffic on the controlled-access highway will not be impeded.

The Minister will have power to give notice to the owner or occupant of such land, which is used for the said purposes, after the day on which the amendment comes into force, and has not been used for those purposes before that date requiring him to cease using the land for those purposes.

Any land used for the said purposes before the day on which the amendment comes into force will not be affected, nor will any land situate at a greater distance than one-half mile from the controlled-access highway.

In regard to section 5: In order to provide proper facilities for the free movement of traffic, various planning boards throughout the province recommend the establishment of controlled-access roads in any municipality where the need exists. The purpose of this section is to give effect to this recommendation by permitting any municipality to pass by-laws, subject to the approval of the Municipal Board,

(a) to designate any new road established under section 469 of The Municipal Act as a controlled-access road;

(b) to close any municipal road which intersects or runs into such controlled-access road; and

(c) to prohibit or regulate the construction or use of any private road, entranceway or gate which is connected with or opens upon such controlled-access road.

Mr. Speaker, I think this sets forth the four changes we have recommended.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves second reading of Bill No. 83, "An Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act."

MR. H. C. NIXON: Mr. Speaker, did the hon. Minister have in mind saying something on this bill?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

In moving second reading of Bill No. 83, "An Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act," I would like to enlarge upon the explanation made the other day on the introduction of the bill.

We have several changes we are recommending, through you, Mr. Speaker, to the Legislature. In regard to the first section, the maximum speed limit for motor vehicles operated in built-up areas, outside of cities, towns, villages or police villages, is the same as that provided for such places; i.e., 30 miles per hour. The definition of a built-up area is amended so as to make it clear that both churches and schools are included with dwellings and places of business in determining whether or not the area is built-up as required.

Previously, Mr. Speaker, it was a little ambiguous as to whether a church or school was included in a "built-up area," that is, within the designated 300 feet on each side, or 600 feet in all. This clarifies that, and makes it definite that churches and schools are included.

Section 2 of the bill: At present, it is an offence for a person to make any false statement of fact in any application, declaration, affidavit or paper writing in order to procure the issuance to him of a licence, permit or certificate of registration. This section is amended so as to make it an offence for any person to make such a false statement either for the purpose of securing a permit or licence in his own name or any other person's name.

We have cases of this kind, from time to time.

The next section, section 3: At present, two separate means of attachment are required when a motor vehicle is drawing a trailer or other device upon a highway. This section is amended so as to require farm tractors when hauling farm wagons, implements of husbandry, etc., to also have two separate means of attachment so as to prevent the possibility of accidents caused by the wagon or implement becoming detached while on the highway.

Section 4: Many serious accidents are caused by reason of a passenger car running into the rear of a motor truck or trailer, the bottom of the body of which is considerable distance from the ground. To date, no suitable method has been found for the attachment of bumpers to all vehicles of this type. I am advised however, that one trailer manufacturer has devised a method of attaching rear bumpers to his equipment and the subject is one which is receiving consideration in many directions. The amendment will authorize the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to require such equipment on motor vehicles of this type, if a suitable means of attachment can be found without awaiting an amendment to the Act. The amendment will also serve as a notice to both the manufacturers and the users of these vehicles that such a regulation is under consideration.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, that we feel possibly by next year we can do this by regulation, and eliminate many of these very disastrous tragedies.

Section 5 provides: These amendments provide that the council of a city, town or village and the trustees of a police village, may by by-law, approved by the department, reduce the present maximum speed limit of 30 miles per hour for motor vehicles to 25 miles per hour, such speed limit to be applicable to all highways under the jurisdiction of the council, and the council of a township may, by by-law, reduce the maximum speed limit from 30 to 25 miles per hour in built-up areas within their township. The councils of cities, towns and villages and the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto and the trustees of a police village may, by by-law, increase the present speed limit of 30 miles per hour. Such by-laws are also subject to approval by the department. The purpose of this amendment is to authorize the City of Toronto and the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto to increase the permissible speed on certain designated highways, where such increased speed would appear to be safe and the volume of traffic to be moved requires that it move at a greater rate than 30 miles per hour.

May I add, in the event they may have roads, such as controlled-access roads, it may be they will want to move the traffic much faster on those roads.

Section 6 is the so-called "right-of-way rule." This was made necessary by reason of a decision of the Supreme Court that the section, as worded, although it has been in effect for many years, does not prescribe a penalty for one who fails to yield the right-of-way to the person on the right. This amendment rectifies this apparent error.

Sections 2, 3 and 4 of the bill deal with the matter of signals to be given for right turns and when decreasing the speed of a motor vehicle, or stopping same. At the present time, the law requires a signal for the left turn only and the reason for not having required signals for stopping and for right turns is that there has been a lack of uniformity in the various provinces and in the United States in this regard. Gradually, the legislation in effect in other jurisdictions has become uniform and now most of the states and most of the provinces of Canada require the signals prescribed in this section for left turns, right turns and for stopping or decreasing speed.

The signals may be given either by the hand and arm, as indicated, or by an electrical or mechanical device. The enactment of these provisions does not make it compulsory for all vehicles to be equipped with a signalling device. If the signals can be given by hand, such a device is not compulsory.

Subsection 5 of this section is also amended as a result of a court decision which indicates the necessity of clarifying the point at which a motor vehicle must stop before entering a through highway. At the present time, the law requires that the stop be made immediately before entering the nearest cross-walk. Inasmuch as there are many rural highways where there are no cross-walks, it is necessary in such cases that the point of stopping must be designated. This is accomplished by requiring the stop to be made immediately before entering the nearest cross-walk, or, if there is no cross-walk, at a clearly marked stop line, or if there is no cross-walk or stop line, then immediately before entering the travelled portion of the through highway.

Section 7 is a new section designed to validate signs now being displayed on the King's Highway, such as "Detour", "Keep in Single Line", "Keep to Right", "No Left Turns", "Keep Off Boulevard". While such are now being displayed, there is at the present time no authority for erecting them and no requirement that they be obeyed. This is a matter of legalizing, Mr. Speaker, what we have been doing for some years. Many hon. members who travel in the St. Andrew's district will have seen the signs at the swing bridge by means of which we try to bring motorists into a single line. The present Act makes no provision to enforce this.

Section 8 is an amendment to the present section which prohibits the throwing of glass, nails, tacks, scraps of metal, etc., which may be injurious to tires. It is enlarged to include rubbish of any kind. There has been quite a campaign started, I think, by the Women's Institute against litter bugs and we come up against this litter nuisance especially in our roadside parks where picnickers and others have created a number of unsightly places. We think that this provision will help to clean up this state of affairs.

Under section 9, the penalty for failure to remain at the scene of an accident and render all possible assistance is increased. The penalties at the present time are:

Not less than $25 and not more than $100, imprisonment for a term of not more than 30 days and suspension of licence or permit for a period of not more than 60 days for the first offence.

For any subsequent offence, a penalty of not less than $100 and not more than $500, imprisonment for a term of not more than 6 months and licence suspension for a period not exceeding 1 year.

As this is a most despicable offence, we are recommending that the minimum penalty be increased to $100 and the maximum to $500, plus imprisonment for 6 months and suspension of licence for 1 year for the first or any offence. This amendment will give the magistrate wider discretionary authority to impose a severe penalty if the circumstances of the offence would appear to justify same.

Section 10 deals with the distribution of penalties collected for violations of the Highway Traffic Act. At the present time, if the offence is committed on the King's Highway, the penalty is payable to the department, and if on a county highway, to the county; in all other cases, to the local municipality in which the offence was committed.

As many sections of the King's Highway now extend into or through cities, towns and villages who maintain their own police departments for the enforcement of the law, it would seem to be proper that a penalty collected for an offence committed on the King's Highway within such urban municipalities should be paid to the municipality.

As police forces for the enforcement of the Highway Traffic Act are not now maintained at the county level, it would also seem to be proper that penalties collected for offences on other than the King's Highway, should be paid to the municipality in which the offence was committed.

In regard to sections 11, 12 and 13 of the bill: These 3 sections provide for amendments to the Unsatisfied Judgment provisions of the Highway Traffic Act, which amendments are designed to further protect the fund. The first section provides that any amount paid out of the fund on a judgment, shall not include compensation or indemnity already collected by the judgment creditor, from any one other than the driver or owner of the motor vehicle which occasioned the injury or damage, such as amounts paid under an accident or sickness policy, or under the Workmen's Compensation Act. A similar provision was enacted in 1950, but, unfortunately, was made applicable only to judgments arising out of so-called "hit-and-run accidents", in which the Registrar of Motor Vehicles was the defendant. The next section is similar to one enacted last year prohibiting payments out of the fund to non-residents of the province, unless the province or state of the judgment creditor has a similar law in effect for the protection of residents of Ontario. This amendment applies the same rule to so-called "hit-and-run accidents" where action is taken against the registrar.

The third amendment makes it clear that in the case of judgments secured against the registrar, no amount shall be paid out for interest on the judgment, or interest on costs.

In regard to section 14, may I say that the section of the Act being amended was enacted in 1930 and under it every accident resulting in personal injuries or in damage to property apparently exceeding $50, was required to be reported to the department. At that time, if a motor vehicle was damaged to the extent of $50, it indicated rather a severe accident. That is not the case today. Parts or repairs which would have cost $50 in 1930 would in all probability cost $150 today.

The amendment provides that accidents reportable under this section will be for personal injuries or death or property damage apparently exceeding $100. This amendment has the support of police departments generally, including the Ontario Provincial Police Commissioner, and is in line with amendments being made to similar accident-reporting laws in effect in the other provinces and in the United States.

Uniformity in this matter is desirable so as to enable comparisons to be made between various authorities compiling statistics relative to accidents. The amendment will also relieve police officers of a great deal of paper work which now seriously affects their time for patrolling streets and highways.

That is the explanation of the bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. H. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, I find myself in complete agreement with most of the suggestions in this bill except, of course, the ones which step on my toes. I suppose that is only human.

With regard to leaving rubbish on the highway, I wonder whether the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) has considered the situation where road users toss their rubbish over the fences into the farms on either side of the highway? This has been one of my troubles since tables were erected alongside the highways at which tourists could stop and enjoy their luncheons in the shade. Instead of carrying their rubbish to the receptacles which have been provided, they simply throw their cans, papers and other rubbish over the fences, creating an eyesore and a nuisance. Certainly, I myself have found it a real nuisance.

With respect to the provision for increasing by by-law the speed in built-up areas where ordinarily the speed is 30 miles an hour, I am in agreement that there should be some provision for that. On almost every occasion when I motor into this city on duties at this building, I find myself travelling in or going out during the rush hours. Along the Lakeshore Highway the signs are very plentiful warning motorists that the speed limit is 30 miles an hour. But they do not drive at that speed, Mr. Speaker. If anyone does, he is a real menace to the traffic as it now proceeds in those sections. A legislator who helps to make these laws naturally tries to observe them as far as possible, particularly when a traffic officer has an eye on him, but if a driver slows down to 30 miles an hour, other traffic cuts in front of him on both sides and he becomes a real hazard on the road.

On one occasion, Mr. Speaker, I saw an officer looking at me and I slowed down to approximately 30 miles an hour. He ordered me to close up the gap and get out of there fast, because I was obstructing the traffic. So if traffic does drive at 40 miles an hour on a particular section, University Avenue or Lakeshore Drive, let us have that as the speed limit so that we shall not feel we are breaking the law if we are driving along there at the same speed as the rest of the traffic seems to have adopted as a matter of course.

For some years the speed limit now proposed seems to have met with the approval of the Toronto police force, though I have had instances in the past when members of my family have received summonses for driving at speeds anywhere from 34 to 37 miles an hour.

Section 3, Mr. Speaker, brings a new principle into the Highway Traffic Act which is of great concern to all of us who live on highways, particularly to those who use farm tractors to haul the implements of farm husbandry either across or along the highway for short distances. May I ask the hon. Minister if the term "highway" includes county highways?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes. I think in this case the principle would apply to travel on any road. But I would not think that on back roads, they would be too particular. I may say, Mr. Speaker, we have had many applications concerning this. There have been some accidents caused by this. We are not interested in people crossing the road, but in some sections it is a common practice for people to draw their produce to market. I myself saw a bad accident in the Kent area when I was there attending a meeting, and it was because of such happenings that we decided to make the change we are recommending to the House.

MR. NIXON: The hon. Minister for Highways will, of course, remember that he brought this provision in some 3 or 4 years ago and then agreed to remove it before the bill was enacted by the House. At that time my understanding was it only applied to provincial highways. As I interpret the term "highways" it would certainly apply now to all other important roads, and particularly to county roads. For some of us who are so unfortunate as to have to live beside one of these highways, the provision will constitute a real hardship, as I am sure the hon. Minister appreciates, if it is going to be interpreted by the officers of the law in accordance with the direct letter of the Act.

My own farm, Mr. Speaker, is bisected by No. 5 highway, which is a very important and thickly-travelled road, and also by the CNR railway line, so that I cannot get across to 80 per cent. of my land without going on the highway. Most of it is on the opposite side of the road or on the opposite side of the railroad. I foresee I am going to be in great difficulty if everything I take out on the highway in future is required to have these attachments.

Horses in rural Ontario today are becoming almost as scarce as buffalo and hauling on the roads is practically all done by tractors. I would like to see some saving provision brought into this bill exempting all manner of implements of agricultural husbandry from the necessity of having these attachments, at least when they were crossing directly over a road. The regular practice is, of course, when we are cutting across, to bring in the hay 4 loads at once. We hook one wagon behind the other and use two tractors. And I can assure the hon. Minister that I am afraid that if I do not keep an eagle eye on those who are attaching the wagons I shall find myself in the police court very regularly indeed. In fact, I was wondering just what penalty this section of the Act provides?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I see it is not a jail sentence anyway.

Motion agreed to. Second reading of the bill.

PROVINCIAL AID TO DRAINAGE ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves second reading of Bill No. 80 intituled, "The Provincial Aid to Drainage Act, 1954."

He said: I do not know whether I mentioned the other day when we were discussing the change in provincial aid to drainage, that our proposals had met with the approval of those who are doing the work. We brought in 3 men who have a great deal of experience—Mr. W. G. McGeorge, of Chatham, Mr. L. P. Steadwell, of Cornwall, and Mr. R. Blake Irwin of Niagara Falls, all men who have wide, practical experience of this Act, and they have gone into it fairly thoroughly and agreed that the changes are commendable.

None of them is drastic. One of them is to emphasize that only drainage schemes being done under The Municipal Drainage Act, for which an engineer's or surveyor's report has been obtained, will be accepted for consideration of a grant.

We have defined the word "Minister," who is given a share of certain powers under this new Act that were vested solely in the Lieutenant-Governor in Council under the previous Act.

The 1950 Act states that the Act shall apply to the construction, improvement and reconstruction of drainage works, but left out major repairs. Instead of adding "repairs" it is considered better to leave the class of work open, so that it will be all-inclusive.

Since the removal of the $5,000 cost minimum in 1950, "branch" drains can be submitted for aid on their own merits as "trunk" drains in their own individual drainage areas. This would multiply administration work greatly. It is considered wise to remove the "branch" requirement, and accept the complete drainage system, which may contain one or more branches, in one application.

Secondly, this amendment allows a grant to be paid on the agricultural sections of a drainage work that may have a section disallowed because of its use for sanitary or domestic purposes. A drainage work used wholly for storm or sanitary service is still not allowed for consideration of a grant. That has been in force for many years.

Thirdly, where grants are payable, under any other Act, towards a portion or the whole of a drainage work, the Public Works Department will pay the grant on the whole of the cost of the drainage project and then an adjustment will be made of the grants payable under the other Act when the statements of the municipalities are checked each year.

The reason for that, Mr. Speaker, was that the Department of Works did not have the facilities, and most of these other grants are made by the Department of Highways.

Coming to section 4, which was section 3 of the former Act: the experience in administering the Act during the past 4 years shows the municipalities find it very difficult to have the petition forwarded before passing the by-law for undertaking the work. The 3-months' grace will greatly assist the municipalities, especially during periods of great drainage activity, such as at the present time.

Some municipalities feel they should not be required to supply information setting forth the reasons why the whole cost of the work should not be assessed upon the land which would be liable to assessment therefor under The Municipal Drainage Act, and that it should, therefore, be granted as required under the 1950 Act.

They consider that grants should apply without a "means test." This section of the 1950 Act is, therefore, deleted.

The new Act directs that petitions be forwarded to the hon. Minister, rather than to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. This will remove a considerable burden of incoming correspondence from the office of the Clerk of the Executive Council.

It is considered proper that the engineer or surveyor should be required to differentiate, on the plan and in his report, between sections of drainage work which are to be used for agricultural or sanitary purposes, which will tie in with section 2 (2).

To make provision for emergency work to be eligible for a grant, where it is impossible to obtain an engineer's report and to forward the petition for aid before the commencement of the work. That, Mr. Speaker, is for emergency work only. This is the only condition under which the municipalities will be able to submit a petition, after commencing the work, but they must notify the Department of Public Works of their intention to submit a petition, within 10 days of the commencement of the emergency work.

Section 5 substitutes the "Minister" for the "Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council." Also some slight re-wording for simplification.

"To give the Minister power to pay grants not exceeding $5,000." This would greatly relieve the Cabinet Council of the burden of a large number of Orders-in-Council regarding grants towards the cost of drainage works. This amendment will allow about 98 per cent. of the grants to be authorized by the Minister.

(a) No change.

(b) No change.

A few words are added in section 3 to simplify the meaning.

Section 6 authorizes the hon. Minister to pay grants not exceeding $5,000 for the same reasons as stated in section 5(2), to bring them both into uniformity.

MR. CHARLES E. JAMES (Lambton East): I would like to express the thanks of our municipality to the government for bringing in these amendments to The Drainage Act. This Act is a very fine piece of legislation. It has been especially beneficial to the farmers of our section of the province. It has been rather difficult during the last number of years to get the work done, to get our applications to the hon.

Minister in time, and get them back without too much delay. At the present time, I think we have about 25 applications which have been sent to the Department of Public Works for various reasons, particularly, reasons which section 4 will clear up, which are at present being delayed for months before they are returned.

I do want to express the thanks of our municipalities to the hon. Minister for these amendments.

Motion agreed to.

THE PROVINCIAL PARKS ACT, 1954

HON. MR. CHALLIES moves second reading of Bill No. 79, "The Provincial Parks Act, 1954."

He said: On the introduction of the bill, I went into a rather lengthy description of the purpose of the bill, and I think it is hardly necessary to re-state the principles of the new bill.

It is a bill, which I am sure will meet with the approval of all hon. members of the Legislature. Its purpose, to state it very simply, is to provide better and more parks for the Province of Ontario.

Because of the social and economic strides the province is making, there are more people who have more leisure time and more finances to enjoy themselves out-of-doors in the summer months. There are a great many people, who, for various reasons, do not feel they can own a cottage on a lake, and who like to move around from one place to another, and see different parts of the province.

We have a beautiful province, and I think a good motto for the Department of Travel and Publicity would be "Ontario people to see Ontario."

There are a great many week-end trips which our people can take in the Province of Ontario, and they would be agreeably surprised at the scenery. The main idea is to provide places to which families can go by car, for as many hours as they like, some out-of-the-way place, where they can build a fire for cooking a meal, and enjoy the swimming and the out-of-doors atmosphere.

This will not only be of great value to the people, from an educational point of view, but from a health point of view as well.

As I have said, the purpose of the Act is to provide more and better parks for our people in the Province of Ontario. The Act has not been revised for some years, and this bill is a compilation of a number of Acts and enactments.

Firstly, it deals with the larger parks, such as Algonquin, Quetico, Timagami, and others belonging to the Department of Lands and Forests. Part 1 of the bill definitely states that these shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests.

However, it does contain a new provision, not in any other Act, which provides that, in the wisdom of the government, any of these parks which are now under the Department of Lands and Forests may be transferred to another jurisdiction.

Part 1 provides that these parks, now called "Provincial Parks" shall remain under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests until such time as they may be transferred to another department, and makes provision for Presqu'île Park and Long Point Park to be brought under parts 2 and 3 of the Act. Further, by Order-in-Council, any new park can be placed under parts 2 or 3. If the government in its wisdom wishes to set aside any park, such as Algonquin park, naturally, it can do so without a special Act. Part 1, as I have stated, is under the jurisdiction of the Department of Lands and Forests.

Part 2 provides for a commission form of administration for each park designated as being under the control and management of the hon. Minister, and which shall be under the charge of a commission to be appointed by the Lieutenant - Governor - in - Council and composed of such number of persons as the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may determine.

It provides for the appointment of a chairman, vice-chairman, secretary, etc. for the collection of revenue. This would apply to any park from which revenue would accrue, such as Presqu'île. Part 2 also provides that there shall be an approved audit. The audit shall be made yearly, and a yearly report shall also be made to the Provincial Secretary, which shall be placed on the table of the House.

It also provides for parks, such as Presqu'île where there is a combination of open space, and very excellent bathing beaches, a section of which may be set aside for summer cottages on a rental basis. The purpose of the bill which, I think, represents the policy of the government, provides that any further leases of lands in these parks, when new parks are set aside, must be cautiously leased, and only for a short period of time, because, after all, it is very difficult in a park to combine the ownership of the lease on a piece of property, without the party who sold the lease feeling he has a primary right to a fair share of all the rest of it. This applies to areas where there is a large amount of space for both classes of visitors to the park.

In part 2, the duties and rights, and what can be done, by the passing of a by-law, is set out, providing for the laying out, improving, developing and enclosing parks, the construction of buildings, wharves and so on. The operating on public lands of dressing rooms, bathing facilities, cooking facilities and so on; the construction and operation of public picnic grounds, the acquisition of boats, vessels, motor vehicles and everything else which could be done in a rather large-sized park, can be done under this bill. As I have said, the commission has the right and is authorized to act, almost as a council in a municipality, for looking after the highways.

Part 3 deals with smaller parks where there are not so many administrative duties to be carried out, and there may not be the same number of cottages, and so forth. Under part 3, they could be administered by a superintendent, or by some other official, call him what you like.

That gives you the 3 different types of parks in the province.

Then there is the general part of the bill, part 4, which gives you a general outline of what can be done regarding enquiring into leases, and so on. The hon. Minister is to decide that right. Cancellation of a lease may be desirable at some time, in certain parks. This also provides for acquiring possession, and this bill also provides, for the first time, that the hon. Minister may purchase or expropriate land for park purposes.

The question of fish and game is covered. Fish and game regulations now under the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests of the Fish and Game Division, and the laws in any parks are to be the same as the general laws for the rest of the province, so far as fish and game are concerned.

MR. NIXON: You should bring yourself up-to-date. That is now "Fish and Wildlife."

HON. MR. CHALLIES: It is called "The Fish and Game Act," nevertheless. The Fish and Game Act shall apply to the entire province.

I think that covers the bill, Mr. Speaker, and I think it is a bill in which we should prepare now for what may be required by our people many years in the future. We should congratulate the municipality of North York for purchasing a farm bordering on Lake Simcoe. In talking to the hon. member for York North (Mr. Mackenzie), he said, even now they have begun to realize it is getting too small. Although there is considerable mileage along the shore line of Lake Simcoe, it is regrettable that on a large lake such as that, the general public can only use a small fraction of the shore line for their public enjoyment.

The more we have of these parks in the province, the happier our people will be, and I think they will have a greater appreciation of our great province.

MR. JANES: I would like to say a word about parks. I think this is one of the finest pieces of legislation we have had in years, and one that has been needed for a long time.

I might say, parks have been a "baby" of mine for some years. When I was first elected to this House, I found it was necessary for me to look after a park called "Ipperwash Park."

It was in a very bad state of repair, and had been badly neglected. The result was I started to make a nuisance of myself in the Department of Lands and Forests, but the former hon. Minister turned out to be a very good friend, and was kind to Ipperwash Park.

I also want to extend my thanks to Mr. Cram, who has gone, for his support.

I can well remember when I started coming down and telling the department about Ipperwash, and what it needed, I was laughed at. I know they did not believe what I was telling them. Finally I asked Mr. Cram to come up and I would show him the conditions.

The day he came up there happened to be a very nice day, and it was estimated there were over 40,000 people there.

This is a very small park and we are very lucky to have a very fine beach stretching several miles each way from the park and because of that we can accommodate a large crowd.

Lake Huron is one of our finest lakes for bathing because of its long length and the north wind brings in the warm water, at the surface, and we nearly always have warm water there.

After Mr. Cram saw the crowd he came back and said: "I will support you in anything you want"—which was quite a big order.

Then, I found there was another division to which I had to go, at St. William, where Mr. Newman was forester in that area. Still hoping to get things through, I went to see Mr. Newman and said: "Frank, how long has it been since you were at Ipperwash?" and he said, "Oh, about 20 years." I asked him to come up on Sunday. He said, "all right, I will be there."

I met him there and drove him all around the park, and showed him the people who were up there holidaying. When he was leaving, he said: "I must confess to you, I didn't believe you, but I know now you were not exaggerating in any way. You have over 40,000 people there today." The result was I was able to get quite a number of things done for Ipperwash Park.

We have had many compliments paid to the government and the province for the condition the park is in today.

We are situated in an area where at one time we had quite a few private parks operating, but they are all closed but one. We are near an area containing a large population, and are fortunate in that we have a very fine bath-house.

We keep a book there in which we ask people to sign their names. These names fan out over an area including Goderich, Waterloo, Kitchener, Brantford, Hamilton and down through Windsor, Detroit, Port Huron and all intervening points.

It has been my ambition to have some place to which any garage operator, farmer or labourer can take his wife and family, to the lakeshore, and unless we soon take action the government is now contemplating, it will be too late.

There is another very fine area in my riding, known as the "Pinery," mentioned in this House many times. It lies about 9 miles from Ipperwash Park. It has a very fine beach, and an area of 4,000 acres. Most of this area must be retained as bushland because it is covered with sand and sand dunes sometimes as high as 125 feet.

Directly adjacent to this area we have what used to be called the "flood lands," now called "bog land." It is some of the highest-priced land in Ontario, and very productive. At any time, if this land gets into private hands and they strip the timber off, our foresters tell us—and I am sure they are right—the sand would move across this very valuable land, so, it must be kept under forest cover.

We can use the beach—and a very fine beach it is—as a playground for the people of Ontario, and I hope action will be taken very soon by the government to take over this area.

There are two other matters I would like to mention. I am a little disappointed with the bill, in one sense; it does not say that parks shall pay taxes.

I feel that can create a real hardship. In one important township, with an Indian name, they have the Ipperwash Military Camp, Ipperwash Park and a large Indian reserve and they have a large Boy Scout area, all exempt from taxation, which creates a real hardship for the people in that area, and to come in and take over the Pinery and make it tax exempt would create further hardship. They now get between $4,000 and $5,000 in taxes from that area, and to deprive them of that money is going to create a further hardship for these people.

As hon. members know, I always flare up when they talk about "tax exemptions". I believe every building, no matter what it is, and every piece of property should pay taxes. Also, I think parks should be self-supporting, and I am sure they will be, if a slight charge is made—it need not be very much—for people using the parks.

If you cross this country and enter a federal park, you pay an admission fee of $2, which will take you into any federal park.

If we are going to have a line of provincial parks—and, as I have said before, it is one of the smartest moves we have made in years—there should be a charge at the first park entered, which will cover all the parks. If a charge is made, the parks can be taxed.

When the department takes over land for reforestation, they pay taxes on that land.

I have had the opportunity, Mr. Speaker, of being a member of the Ausable Authority, and have been chairman of the Parks Board for several years. If the government had not taken action, we were going to take over the Pinery. We had not the slightest idea where we would find the money, but we would have borrowed it somewhere, and I am sure it would have paid its way.

Mr. Speaker, I will not take any more time, except to say how happy I am at the action taken by the government. I will add just one more word, that I hope none of the parks will ever become a Coney Island.

MR. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a word on the parks question. We have some very beautiful parks in our section of the country, one in particular, Sibley Peninsula, being reached by a road some 30 miles long, through a very beautiful area, going to Silver Islet, on Lake Superior. We have many smaller parks, all of which are a great asset to our citizens.

Not only are we interested in them, because of their commercial value alone, but we are interested in the great beauty and attractiveness, which wild life and fish bring to our lakes and rivers, our forest areas and our air, our parks' preserves, and all these things.

I would say, Mr. Speaker, that this is a very good bill indeed, in that it will preserve our parks, and beautify them for the benefit of the people of Ontario. I think the government is to be congratulated on the step it has taken.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I wonder why the government does not acquaint the House with its plans for the administration of the provincial parks. We learned from the press that the government may create a new Ministry, and may make certain changes in several departments, but I do think, when the House is in session, and we are debating this bill, we should be told how it will be administered, whether by this or the other department. Normally, it would be taken for granted that the Department of Lands and Forests would be charged with the administration of this bill, indeed, it should have been introduced by the hon. Minister of that Department. However, that was not done, and ever since the bill was introduced, there has been speculation in the press as to the Ministerial responsibility for it, and speculation as to the intention of the government.

I would say, Mr. Speaker, it would be far more appropriate for the government to tell the hon. members of this House what its intentions are, rather than having us learn what little we know from speculations appearing in the press.

After all, we are not between sessions when this is taking place, and there is such a thing as responsibility to the House.

I do not want to read to the government such a statement as was made by Mr. Diefenbaker to the Liberal Government at Ottawa about "ignoring the House," "governing by Cabinet," and so on, but this is not an unimportant matter, and I do not see why we should be kept in the dark about it.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. member for St. Andrew, and to the other hon. members of the House, that consideration has not been given to a final point in connection with this bill.

I think it will be apparent that the situation shows it involves at the present time, three departments, the Department of Lands and Forests, with such parks as Algonquin Park; to an extent, the Department of Municipal Affairs in connection with some of the smaller parks at Rondeau and Presqu'île, and others, and the Department of Highways in relation to the roadside parks. There is also the Department of Planning and Development which is involved to some extent in this matter.

I may assure the hon. members that very careful consideration will be given to this. I have some hesitation in mentioning any of the larger departments, such as the Department of Planning and Development, and further adding a burden to that very busy department, concerned with matters of very great importance, as this is.

I am not overlooking the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) who introduced this bill, and who is very greatly interested in parks.

MR. SALSBERG: He would not let you overlook him.

HON. MR. FROST: These matters will all be given careful consideration.

MR. SALSBERG: Is it correct to conclude that a new department will be established?

HON. MR. FROST: Oh no, there is no suggestion of a new department.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister has not that under consideration?

HON. MR. FROST: No. I would like to make that plain, Mr. Speaker. The question by the hon. member for St. Andrew implies the setting up of a new department. To that, I would say emphatically "no."

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity of congratulating the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) for bringing in this bill. I certainly agree it is a very forward step, and offers great opportunities for a great deal to be done in the park situation throughout the Province of Ontario. I particularly have in mind that some of these parks could be developed, even in the northern areas around some of the larger centres, although there are great spaces available there for recreation now, but there may not be in years to come, and this will afford an opportunity to provide for the future.

Speaking of the Metropolitan Toronto area; I would like to offer a suggestion for the consideration of the hon. Minister, which has to do with the Zoological and Botanical Gardens. We have had a great deal of discussion about it in the City of Toronto as the facilities are totally inadequate, and a proper Zoological and Botanical Garden would provide amusement and recreation for people from all over the province, and it seems to me this new legislation might be enlarged or be programmed in such a way that something could be done to assist in establishing this much-needed Zoological and Botanical Garden on the outskirts of the Metropolitan Area of Toronto.

I had the pleasure, while a member of the City Council, of serving on a special committee set up to study this matter. Although we still have Riverdale Zoo in Toronto, it is totally inadequate to meet the needs of the people, so I am offering the suggestion to the hon. Minister that when considering parks for the Province of Ontario, it might be a splendid idea to consider something along the type I have mentioned for the outskirts of this city, which would serve a great need, and care for many thousands of tourists from the other sections of Ontario.

I think it is a wonderful bill.

MR. W. MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, I, too, would like to say a word about this bill. I said in the House last year that in Essex County, we had a real shortage of public beaches, and those we already have are municipally-controlled and owned, and present quite a problem to these municipalities.

I thought, when the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) rose to his feet, he might try to say a word or two for the "little people," which seems to be his habit, but he got away from that in connection with this bill, and was simply trying to "needle" the government.

MR. SALSBERG: The little people can "needle" the government, too.

MR. MURDOCH: It is a fact that a great many of our public parks are close to centres with large populations. I appreciate having the Point Pelee National Park in Essex County, which serves a good purpose, and attracts many thousands of people every year.

I would like to offer the suggestion that perhaps when we get a little farther into the park situation, we might go one more step and do something to help these municipalities to maintain public beaches on our lake shores, for other people to enjoy, that is, people from other municipalities.

I know that in Essex County people come from Detroit and Windsor to these municipal beaches at Leamington, Kingsville, and Colchester South, and almost crowd out the taxpayers of the municipalities, and it would appear to me that some consideration should be given to studying this question, and making some form of grants available to such municipalities, because, after all, it is a provincial problem, rather than that of a municipality.

MR. A. T. WARD (Kent East): Mr. Speaker, I am very much interested in these parks, because we have one of the greatest parks in Ontario situated in my own riding. We have a park there of 5,000 acres, on one of the best fishing bays in the southwestern part of Ontario, and, like many other places we have many American tourists, even from as far away as Texas—although I think we get them from every state of the union—who have cottages there. I refer to Rondeau Provincial Park.

I am quite in sympathy with this bill. I think it is one of the greatest bills which have been brought up in the Legislature, in regard to parks for some time. I am very much in favour of it, I think we are on the right track and I think also that such parks should be made to pay their own way at least, which Rondeau has not been doing.

Mr. Speaker, I am quite in accord with this bill, and I hope to see such proposals continue so that parks may be brought to the forefront, where, I think, they belong.

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): Mr. Speaker, I am sure we are all very much pleased at this particular piece of legislation which we are discussing at this time. When one thinks of parks, one immediately associates with that term recreation and the benefits which it will provide to the citizens of this province.

In the County of York, as was mentioned a few moments ago, we have one of the largest parks in this section of the province, which was purchased by the County of York in 1950, and consists of approximately 500 acres of land on the shore of Lake Simcoe. This park site is for all practical purposes the last of the large acreages which are available for park purposes, and, as I have indicated, was purchased by the County of York in 1950, which was prior to the introduction of the Metropolitan Toronto Act.

At that time the County of York consisted of 26 municipalities which included 12 of those municipalities which are now part of Metropolitan Toronto.

It was felt by those in the County of York at that time, that this was a most desirable purchase for a park site and very desirable for the citizens of York County. Now, Mr. Speaker, I have made this suggestion before, and I make it again, because I think it is a very practical one. I consider that it would be a step forward if that park were to be purchased by the Provincial Government from the County of York and made a provincial park, rather than a county park as it now is.

The reasons for that are multiple. In the first instance, the investment is very substantial, but inasmuch as the County of York as it is presently constituted is somewhat less in municipal numbers than it was in 1950, it has been suggested that the present County of York may have difficulty in developing the park to the extent and as quickly as it was originally intended.

The park, as I say, consists of some 500 acres on the south shore of Lake Simcoe, beautiful land, sandy beaches, with some buildings; it has all the potentialities which any park site could develop or anyone could hope to see.

Mr. Speaker, I want to draw to the attention of hon. members of this House that we have, within a 40-mile radius of the City of Toronto, a park site which can very adequately service not only the citizens of Metropolitan Toronto, but also the citizens of the Province of Ontario.

MR. T. PRYDE (Huron): Mr. Speaker, it is evident this bill is finding much favour amongst hon. members of this House. So many have had something to say about it, because it affects so many people.

We in Huron County do not have any great stretch of land available for park purposes. The only one which we have, and in which we are interested, is the one to which the hon. member for Lambton East (Mr. Janes) referred, "The Pinery," which is of vital importance to all the people of Western Ontario.

The hon. member for Lambton East as a member of the Ausable Authority said it was the intention of that authority to take this piece of land over if there was no action taken by the government. In my opinion that was a very large project, possibly too large for the Ausable Authority to handle themselves, and I hope something will be done to take this into the provincial parks system as is now provided for in this bill.

I am pleased to have this opportunity of saying something in favour of the measure that is before the House.

There is only one other small public park available in Huron County. All the land on the lake shore is privately owned with the exception of one small park in the village of Bayfield. That property was taken over and preserved for public use by a small group in that village, who put on events of one kind and another to raise money in order to preserve that little piece of lake front for public use. That is another thing, although it may be very small, yet when this bill becomes law I hope something will be done to help people of that kind, who are trying to preserve small pieces of land in a lake front for public use.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, I should like to say a word about this subject. All references have been in connection with Southern and Central Ontario. No person has said a word about Eastern Ontario.

I should like to mention something about Eastern Ontario and about Renfrew County in particular. In the centre of the Ottawa River just below Pembroke, is an island, 684 acres in extent. A bridge from Quebec is going to touch that island this year, and it will be a most beautiful location for a park, right in the centre of the Ottawa River.

Some time when hon. members are in that district, we should be glad to take them on a little drive and show them some of the beauty spots we have.

Since we are on the subject of parks, and no person mentioned Eastern Ontario and in view of the fact that the representatives from Renfrew are not in their seats today, I thought I would take the opportunity of saying that we should not overlook this great old part of Ontario, by the Ottawa River.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

HON. CHARLES DALEY moves second reading of Bill No. 90, "An Act to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I made a brief explanation of the contents of this bill on introducing it at first reading, but I think a little further explanation at this time would be in order.

The first section increases from $100,000 to $200,000 the amount which the board may spend in any calendar year for rehabilitation. That is quite an important feature of the Workmen's Compensation Act, it has to do with finding suitable employment for the injured workmen, in keeping with the nature of his disability, jobs of like work or sometimes entirely different kinds of work from that which he has been formerly doing. It has been found that $100,000 is not sufficient, as of today, to do the job we want to do in this connection.

This does not include the cost of operating the Malton Rehabilitation Centre. At this point I should like to advise you, Mr. Speaker, and through you the hon. members of the Legislature, what we contemplate for Malton.

Some years ago, when the Malton Clinic was established, we purchased the buildings from the federal government. We could not purchase the land, as it was not available, as it was supposed to be reserved for any increase in airport facilities, or any activity the federal government, who own it, might deem desirable. However, they did sell us the buildings, which were of a temporary nature, being built for war purposes, and as such not being of a kind which tends to make maintenance easy.

been brought from all parts of the province, housed, fed and given what we think is the very finest treatment available to anyone, in an endeavour not only to heal their injuries, but to improve their morale and bring them back where they would be capable of taking their normal place in society. That I believe is a very important work. We have had tremendous assistance from the medical profession. In addition to our own staff we have had the advice of the most eminent practical people, in connection with the injuries of these people. While we started out a few years ago in the temporary buildings on more or less of a "trial-and-error" basis, it has proven itself to be of inestimable value. Mr. Speaker, to the injured people of this province. As a result we are confronted now with huge expenditures in connection with maintaining these buildings. The foundations are not adequate, and it will be readily understood that with 540 injured people, and all the necessary staff required, it is quite a big institution.

Therefore we are looking for a property on which to build a permanent and more suitable rehabilitation centre. We have looked at a piece of property which we believe would be very adequate and suitable, located to the rear of Sunnybrook Hospital. There is a big area of land there, with some buildings on it which are now occupied by some part of the army. I went to Ottawa and interviewed hon. Mr. Lapointe, and hon. Mr. Gregg, in an endeavour to get them to assist us to acquire this property, as a great deal of our work is actually connected with Sunnybrook Hospital, in that every day we transport patients from the Malton Centre to Sunnybrook and back, so this projected site would make an ideal location.

I thought it might be of interest to the House to know that the Rehabilitation Centre at Malton, which I presume most hon. members of the Legislature have seen—and if they have not, I suggest it would be worthwhile to visit it—has proved to be a successful venture, after some years. It is now inadequate, and we are going to have to build on a new location, at a cost which we estimate to be somewhere in the neighbourhood of $3 million or $4 million. Of course, Mr. Speaker, this money comes from the compensation assessment. It does not cost the public any money out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. The money is derived from assessments of industry, and, as a matter of fact, we have the money and I am very anxious to move along with the project, as I feel if we come to—which I do not think at the moment we are in any sense of the word—a period of recession or levelling out, about which I will have a little more to say later, this might be a very excellent time to get on with this project and I do hope the federal authorities, the department of National Defence, and those who have control of this property, will seriously consider letting us have it for this purpose.

The second section of the bill is a very simple one. It provides that when the secretary of the board is absent for any reason, the board may appoint some other officer to certify copies of, or extracts from the board's books. That is really an internal proposition, and while necessary, is not shattering any principles.

However, sections 3 and 4 are quite important, inasmuch as they serve to clarify the position the board is in, in connection with penalizing through their pockets, industry which has shown itself lackadaisical, or has not attempted to provide protection from accidents by good housekeeping, and safety measures, which are advocated by our Factory Inspection Branch, and by our accident-prevention inspectors.

People who neglect to do the things they actually are required to do in the interest of the worker, can be penalized in this way. There is a class set up of a certain group of employers who are in the same category, and who have approximately the same amount of hazard in industry, and in this class there is a fixed assessment. Under this bill, the board will be able to say to an industry: "Your accidents are occurring at a high rate. You have been in a class which sets your assessment at so much, but your record of accidents has been at a higher rate." This does not mean over a year or two, because anyone may have a little bad luck, they may go along for quite some time without an accident, and, all of a sudden, have 3 or 4. I do not refer to that type. I am referring to cases where it is generally known to the board and the accident-prevention people that carelessness is rampant, and that little or no heed is being paid to active participation in preventive measures. In such cases, the board may penalize that industry by assessing its members at a much higher rate.

I think that explains the bill, Mr. Speaker.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): If hon. members wish to applaud the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Daley), I shall wait a minute.

Mr. Speaker, before we proceed with the bill, I would like to make a few comments. First I want to protest, as strongly as I can, against the policy of the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) of refusing to bring such bills to the Standing Committee on Labour. I cannot understand it, and I, for one, will never condone it. There is no earthly reason why legislation of this sort should not be presented at the Committee on Labour and all interested parties be given an opportunity to express an opinion. That is what that Standing Committee is supposed to do, and it seems to me to be an evasion of responsibility and duty, to dodge this elementary process which is adhered to, I should say, by all other hon. Ministers and all other departments, and employed with respect to measures which are far less important than labour legislation of the sort we have before us.

I want to appeal to the hon. Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost) to see that an end be put to this practice of having a Standing Committee on Labour which meets once in 3 or 4 years—whole sessions are allowed to go by without a meeting being called—even though we have labour legislation with which to deal. I do not know why the hon.

Minister (Mr. Daley) continues to be afraid to face the committee or to face the deputations of organized labour who might care to appear before the committee in dealing with this legislation.

The second remark I want to make is about an aspect of the work of the Workmen's Compensation Board which we may not have another chance to discuss again this session. I do not know whether there will be other legislation, and only the Estimates may give us an opportunity to speak about it, but this bill deals in part with the treatment of working men who have met with accidents. There is of course no objection to the amendment brought in to increase the amount of money the board may employ to treat those who need special help to recuperate and become useful again, that is, to be rehabilitated. I suggest, however, that the biggest offence of the whole scheme—and it is an offence for which the government rather than the board is responsible—is the failure to implement the recommendation of the Royal Commission for the complete changing of accident-prevention work as now carried on. It is known—and if not, it should be made known to every hon. member in this House—that the organized workers have for years been protesting against the present method.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, may I interrupt the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg)? I have presented here a bill of which 3 or 4 sections have to do with policy, and, therefore, there is no point, as I believe I explained, in taking it before the Committee on Labour.

MR. SALSBERG: It will be?

HON. MR. DALEY: No, I say I do not think there is any point in doing so. It is very definite and I do not see where there is anything to be gained.

The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has introduced another matter, that of accident prevention. It would seem to me there will be a time for that, and I would be very happy to discuss the matter then, but I do not think it should be done now, in connection with this bill. In my opinion it is not in order.

MR. SALSBERG: I stated before that I do not think there will be another opportunity. If the hon. Minister tells me that there will be, I am quite willing to have a full-dress discussion on this matter at any time.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has full latitude in the budget debate to speak on anything. The discussion is wide open, as was the debate on the Speech from the Throne, but the matter he is mentioning is not relative to this.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister does not realize how many matters I want to speak on during the budget debate. I would seek your ruling, Mr. Speaker, as to whether this is in order or not.

MR. SPEAKER: If this is an entirely irrelevant matter, as the hon. Minister has explained, it is naturally out of order. It is not, of course, the hon. member's concern whether other legislation will come before the House which would give him an opportunity to discuss this question, but there is the budget debate ahead of us and I think the hon. member will have ample opportunity to speak then on any subject he may choose. Ample opportunity is given for the discussion of any part of the Estimates. I must ask the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) to confine himself to the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: I accept your ruling, Mr. Speaker. But since this deals with the result of accidents, I thought I might be able to deal with accident prevention.

MR. SPEAKER: I am not making any exception to my ruling. The hon. member must confine himself to it.

MR. SALSBERG: Very well.

MR. LEAVINE (Waterloo North): As one who, in the main, is behind the compensation provisions, which I consider desirable, I find myself as a loss how to explain that section which includes the words:

Where in the opinion of the board sufficient precautions have not been taken,

That means that industry will get a little slap on the wrist if it creates a hazard. If it allows an individual to be hurt or even killed, the authorities say: "Your assessment goes up."

I must admit I cannot support this, because it seems to me only fair that the board should have the right to step in and say: "You repair this, you correct your omission and we will bill you with the cost."

That is my feeling, and that is the form in which I will support this.

HON. MR. DALEY: We could have a full discussion on this during the committee stage. I would suggest the hon. member (Mr. Leavine) discuss that particular item in committee when an appropriate amendment could be put in to change it.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

CEMETERIES ACT

The House resumed consideration of the report of the Select Committee on the Cemeteries Act.

MR. R. MACAULAY (Riverdale): I am grateful, Mr. Speaker, for this opportunity which has been afforded me of speaking on this subject. I am aware of the great ability and affability of my learned colleagues who sat as members of this Cemetery Committee, and I have a tremendously high regard for them. In addition to this, the report was unanimous, this therefore makes it difficult for any hon. member, and particularly for myself, to offer observations in relation to it.

Nevertheless, I would feel I had not executed the responsibility I undertook when I became a member of this House if I did not make one or two comments in relation to the report for the consideration of the government and of the committee, if and when legislation is undertaken.

Firstly, Mr. Speaker, in regard to item III (II), which recommends that the organizations which maintain cemeteries should be limited in the number of salesmen they may employ at any one time. I recognize that the operation of a cemetery is in a special category, because there is the composite requirement which it must fulfill. It must meet the public demand and the public need, but at the same time some consideration should be given to some of the precepts upon which our country operates, namely, certain degrees of freedom of trade. Public need must be satisfied, and, at the same time, some freedom must be given to the industry itself.

Bearing that in mind, the first recommendation of the Cemeteries' Committee to which I would like to refer is the recommendation that there should be a limitation of the number of salesmen who may be employed at any one time by a particular cemetery. I appreciate the purpose the committee had in mind. I believe the committee felt that by limiting the number of salesmen it could reduce the pressure which salesmen might exert on behalf of some of these cemeteries.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that we must strike a balance between public need and the need of the industry. In doing this we should keep in mind some of the inherent characteristics for which our Party has stood for more than 100 years since the 1840s. It should not be forgotten that we, above all Parties in Canada, have stood for the protection of the individual, and for his right, under the hand of God and of society, to follow his own interests having regard to the safety and protection of the public.

I say, Mr. Speaker, the Liberal Party has not done that. The CCF has not done that. Our Party has. The question is whether several of the recommendations contained in this report encroach upon those principles. I humbly and respectfully submit, unless there is some great need for limiting the number of salesmen who may be employed by the institutions, consideration should be given to the desirability of this particular section.

There is a second section to which I desire to make reference. The committee recommends that if a purchaser is solicited, and has not personally viewed a plot before entering into an agreement to purchase it, all monies paid by the purchaser must be refunded on the purchaser's request in writing within 60 days of entering the agreement to purchase, and the contract shall be considered null and void.

With great respect, Mr. Speaker, I question whether the 60-day period is not, perhaps, too long. I also wonder whether it is desirable.

I realize, again, that the section has been put in so as to limit pressure salesmanship. Whether any other industry or public service has to operate under similar rules, I do not know. But I would ask the government and members of the committee to consider the desirability of including this particular recommendation in any legislation which might flow from this report. It is surely incumbent on the purchaser of a cemetery plot to pay some attention to the object of his purchase, particularly when he is purchasing something as sacred as a resting place for himself or for members of his family.

I do not think these things should be bought lightly, in the same way as trinkets for children are obtained by sending in bottle tops. And I do not think such a recommendation is consistent with the sound planning of cemeteries. I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I do not own a cemetery and have no connection with anyone who owns cemeteries; I am more interested in the principles of my Party than I am in cemeteries as such. I approach these recommendations not so much to consider their effect upon cemeteries as to see how they affect the principles which are inherent in the very existence of the Party which forms this government. I say again, I question whether the 60-day period should be included in the legislation, or whether it should be as long, if a period has to be allowed.

There are two other recommendations which I wish to draw to the attention of the House. One of the big problems of operating a cemetery, as I understand it, is the tremendous capital outlay at the start. There is land to purchase. Before plots can be sold there has to be an extensive amount of surveying done. Roads must be driven through the property, a certain amount of sculptural decoration is required, and extensive drainage may have to be undertaken, all of which costs a great deal of money.

Nevertheless, the next recommendation, number 3, subsection (5), says in effect:

That in the event of any purchaser buying a plot, that purchaser may always get back his money so long as the cemetery has not been sold out 95 per cent. In those circumstances the purchaser can get back all of his money with the exception of certain administrative expenses.

I cannot myself see how a cemetery, which is required to undertake the tremendous capital investment necessary for its organization, can put any money into capital investment if it must, at the same time, accept that, at any time, a purchaser to whom a plot has been sold can obtain his money back.

The recommendation states that a purchaser should be able to recover anything he has paid less administrative costs. If the cemetery has spent money on capital improvements those cannot be called administrative costs. I submit that, notwithstanding a cemetery may have paid out money on capital improvements, the administrative costs provision would not permit retention of these payments.

The last point to which I want to make reference is with the necessity of placing 35 per cent. of the payments into a perpetual care fund. With great respect to the hon. members who sat on this committee, I think the government and the House should consider carefully whether this proportion of 35 per cent. is not rather high. If 35 per cent. of these payments has to be placed in a perpetual care fund, and if, at the same time, there is to be an obligation to return all the money paid in, save for a sum which may be retained for administrative expenses, I question whether the effect of this in practice will be in the interests either of these institutions, or of the public itself.

Now, Mr. Speaker, may I say in conclusion, that one of the great arguments of our Party—and I hope it will remain so—is there should be a limitation upon Ministerial discretion. We have asked for that on a national scale, and I think it is also applicable wherever it may apply provincially. Several of these recommendations, I feel, emphasize perhaps unnecessarily or extensively Ministerial discretion. The only question is as to the thinness of the line between its desirability and its lack of desirability.

I have submitted these observations, not thinking of whether they were popular or unpopular, but merely because they were the observations of a young man who feels strongly his responsibility in this House, regardless of how that responsibility may appear to the public to have been shouldered. I would have deceived my riding and this House, feeling as I do, if I had not taken this stand in regard to this report regardless of whether that stand may find favour in any quarter.

MR. SPEAKER: There being no further speakers on this report, I declare the discussion of the report of the Select Committee on Cemeteries now concluded.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the adjournment of the House. In so doing I may say tomorrow we will proceed with the Budget Debate. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), and the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), I think are both going to speak on this matter. It will be a hard day for the government.

At the conclusion of their addresses if there is time—and I by no means would suggest they limit their addresses, because what they both say is always well worthwhile—I should like to deal with Estimates, that is, the Estimates for next year, and the supplementary Estimates to the end of this fiscal year, which should be the first Estimates to be dealt with.

I should like the House to be prepared to consider the Estimates in the order in which they appear in the printed Estimates. I have asked all the hon. Ministers to be ready to go ahead without further notice in connection with these matters, and we will deal with the Estimates as we have the opportunity.

May I say that on Wednesday, of course, the House will not sit in the afternoon, but the committees can meet in the ordinary course, because they have made arrangements, as they did 10 days ago under similiar circumstances. I just received word that the funeral, instead of being at 2.30, will be held at 3.30 on Wednesday, at the First Presbyterian Church in Brockville. The railway is making arrangements to provide accommodation on the train leaving here at 9.15 a.m., arriving at Brockville at 2.40 p.m., and leaving Brockville at 5.30 p.m., or thereabouts, arriving back in Toronto at 9.45 p.m.

I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.25 of the clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, MARCH 16, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I beg to inform the House that the meeting of the Select Committee on Bill No. 88, "An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly," which was arranged for tomorrow, has been cancelled in view of the death of the chairman Mr. MacOdrum.

I wish to welcome on behalf of the hon. members of this Assembly, students from the Bowmore Road School, Toronto, and the Cathedral High School, Hamilton. I can assure you, it is always a distinct pleasure for us to have students from various parts of the province visiting us during one of our sessions. We hope that you will thoroughly enjoy your visit to our Assembly this afternoon.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I hope you will not rule me out of order at this time, but while you are giving your customary welcome to the school children, who sit in the galleries of the Assembly, may I take this opportunity of welcoming on behalf of the hon. members of this Assembly a representative from the Legislature of Quebec, Mr. Desjardins. It has been our pleasure, Mr. Speaker, at various times to welcome to this Assembly hon. ministers and hon. members from the other provinces of Canada, but I cannot recollect having had the privilege and pleasure of extending our greetings to one from the Province of Quebec. However, today, it is my pleasure to welcome the gentleman, who is sitting beneath the clock, an hon. member of the Legislature of Quebec, our sister province, which has been our close partner now for at least 162 years.

As a matter of fact, the Province of Quebec was our partner long before that, but more especially since Canada began to take shape and form through the Constitutional Act of 1791, and since the first legislatures met. Quebec has had its own legislature, which is a successor to the legislature which met in Quebec City in December, 1792. The Legislature of Upper Canada met on the banks of the Niagara River in September, 1792.

It is always a great thing to note the histories of Ontario and Quebec, the old Upper and Lower Canada—and the names of those men of the different periods, who have been closely associated in the development of this country. Some people say, we are divided by the Ottawa River. We are joined by the Ottawa River, Mr. Speaker, as two of the partners in the great confederation project the strength of which is evidence of the success which has been attained in the development of Canada today.

It is a very great pleasure, Mr. Speaker, to welcome an hon. member of the Parliament of Quebec to the Parliament of Ontario.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): I beg leave to present the fifth report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the Committee's fifth report as follows:

"Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 7, An Act respecting The Home of the Friendless and Infants' Home.

Bill No. 12, An Act respecting Royal Botanical Gardens.

Your committee would recommend that the following bills be not reported and would further recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted:

Bill No. 8, An Act respecting the Town of Hespeler.

Bill No. 11, An Act respecting the Town of Paris.

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 7, "An Act respecting The Home of the Friendless and Infants' Home," and on Bill No. 12, "An Act respecting Royal Botanical Gardens."

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE ONTARIO FUEL BOARD ACT

HON. MR. DANA PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to establish the Ontario Fuel Board."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this bill, I should like to present a general view of the future fuel requirements of Ontario as a background to the special problems to be dealt with in the bill itself, and secondly, I propose to outline in a general way some of the problems to be faced in the introduction of Alberta gas to the Central Canada market, and thirdly, I shall outline the terms of the bill.

First, let us look at the growth of consumption of energy of all kinds, coal, oil, water power and natural gas over the last 12 years. With this in mind we may conjecture what an expanding economy will need to support its development in the future. In 1940, with a population of somewhat less than 4 million, Ontario used approximately 500,000 billions of energy units (British Thermal Units). In 1952, with a population approaching 5 million people, we used about 850,000 billions of BTU's. Thus with a population increase of 25 per cent., our increase in energy consumption was in the neighbourhood of 70 per cent. If then we anticipate a continuous population growth on a similar scale from 1952 to 1964, accompanied by a similar industrial expansion, we may expect to use in the year 1964, at least 1,450,000 billions of energy units, or nearly 3 times as much as we did in 1942.

Let us see what this amounts to in terms of coal. In 1952, we used about 22 million tons of coal in Ontario. With the exception of 650,000 tons, this coal was imported, almost entirely from the United States. It represented about one-half of the energy consumed. The balance consisted of petroleum fuel—about 40 per cent., hydro electric power—about 9 per cent., and a quantity of natural gas distributed in Southwestern Ontario, west of Hamilton, Ontario.

In 1940, the amount of coal used was about the same, but it represented more than 65 per cent. of the total energy. The other sources of energy were considerably less. The greatest increase in sources of energy was in petroleum products, which were tripled.

It is apparent, in comparing the quantity of fuel used in 1952 with that of 1940, that with increased hydro electric power and oil, the quantity of coal consumed did not decline. The hydro electric power and oil supplemented coal which remains still the largest single source of energy. With the further growth of population and the increasing demand for fuel of all kinds, it is expected that coal in the long run will tend to increase in its use rather than diminish. It will be vital to the successful continued industrial and population expansion of Ontario, that provision be made for the introduction of all possible forms of energy. It is therefore essential that this province cooperate in every conceivable way to bring about the transportation and sale of natural gas from Alberta insofar as it can be done on an economic basis.

Central Canada is almost entirely dependent upon the United States for its supply of coal. I may interject that during the war years, when the North American continent faced shortages of coal for wartime industrial expansion, the authorities in the United States saw to it that Canada would have its fair share of the coal supply. We may look back upon this incident as one of the many significant examples of the good-neighbour policy of the United States as applied to this country. We shall, as far as we can foresee, continue to be dependent on the United States for coal and may confidently expect the fair dealing that we have experienced in the past.

Nevertheless, it is undoubtedly in the national interest that we should supplement this source of imported energy to the greatest degree possible with all types of energy such as hydro electric power, oil and natural gas produced within Canada, and the disposition of which we are in a position to control. With respect to hydro electric power, it is obvious that there is a physical limit to the amount of water-power resources within our province, and this limit may soon be reached. Our natural gas resources in Southwestern Ontario have been small in relation to the total amount of energy required. Although there is always the possibility of new developments of natural gas produced in our own province, it is considered unlikely that it will be sufficient to meet the vast expansion that is underway. At the present time it is insufficient to meet the demands of the southwestern part of the province where its distribution takes place.

Secondly, to touch upon some of the factors involved in the supply of western natural gas to the eastern market. No pipeline has ever been built in the world of the combined length and capacity of the proposed pipeline from Alberta through Saskatchewan, Manitoba, Ontario to Quebec. It will run a distance of more than 2,000 miles. Its capacity must be large if it is to supply a sufficient quantity of gas to justify its existence. It will probably be a line of at least 30 inches in diameter. It will be sufficient to deliver at least 100 billion cubic feet a year and considerably more. To obtain some conception of what the maximum deliverable quantity amounts to in energy, it would be equivalent in BTU's, to between 7 million and 8 million tons of coal. Since a considerable proportion will be delivered to points in the Province of Quebec, the gain to Ontario would be the equivalent of say one-half of this; approximately 4 million tons of coal.

Thirdly, let us turn for a moment to the problems of supply and distribution. The prospects for increasing supplies of natural gas in the western provinces is immense. There appears now to be sufficient reserves of gas that may be allotted to the trans-Canada pipeline to provide for a continuous annual flow of at least 100 billion cubic feet of gas for 20 years. In view of the fact that this is approximately the amount that might be presently available so as to guarantee the continued operation of the line for that period of time, the financing of the enterprise must be figured on this basis. Although we may have confidence that within the next few years, the supplies of gas in Western Canada will continue to increase at a rapid rate, in raising money for a project of this magnitude, the scope of operation must be conditioned to the actual amount of gas presently in sight. However, if there was not reasonable ground for confidence in the future expansion of gas supplies in the west, it would hardly be worthwhile to build this long and costly line to supply markets in the east for a mere 20-year period.

To indicate the future prospects may I indicate the possibilities in a very simple way. The sedimentary rock formation on the North American continent favourable to the accumulation of oil and gas extends throughout the south of the United States and into the western provinces of Canada far to the north. The general formation is similar; the rate of discovery per footage for drilling is much the same in Canada as the United States. In the United States there is about twice the area of this formation as we have in Canada. In the United States, of course, exploration and development have proceeded over a much longer period and much more extensively than in Canada. There are now 500,000 producing oil and gas wells in the United States. So far, there are only 10,000 in Canada. It is fairly safe to conclude that the present known reserves of gas and oil in Canada are only a small fraction of what ultimately will be found. We may, therefore, anticipate that as the years go by, further supplies of gas will become available for the eastern market as the demand develops and that when necessary the now projected pipeline will be supplemented by increasing and additional piping.

The basic problem of financing and operation of the line will be to deliver gas in Central Canada at a price that will be competitive with coal and oil. The problems of financing must take into account certain essential items; first there is the cost of the gas at the production source. The producers of gas will expect, and will be entitled to an economic price. That means a price which is related to the general level of prices that they may obtain for other outlets in other directions and it should be a price sufficient to encourage further exploration and drilling.

The producer must not only bear the capital and other costs involved in drilling for gas and oil, but also he must be ready to deliver gas of a quality that will meet the conditions of the market. Gas in its natural state in Alberta contains a number of constituent elements, such as butane, propane and sulphur, and other elements, all of which must be separated from the gas that is to be delivered. This is a further costly project which involves large capital outlay for a plant, and the price to the producer must be sufficient to cover this cost.

Then further, a gathering system will be required to pipe the gas from the source of supply to the trans-Canada pipeline. This will mean a network of smaller pipelines of varying lengths and sizes. It is very roughly estimated that the capital cost of the works required in the Province of Alberta to produce and deliver gas to the main pipeline in a suitable condition may amount to something in the neighbourhood of $200 million. Thus at the Alberta end the cost of the gas delivered to the pipeline would have to be sufficient to cover these substantial items.

It is estimated that the trans-Canada pipeline itself will cost approximately $300 million or perhaps more. There will be in addition costs of operation involving the working of machinery for maintaining adequate pressures, inspection, repairs, and the capital cost of the line will have to be depreciated and interest paid. When the gas reaches the points of delivery in Ontario, further expenditure will be required to bring it to the ultimate consumers. If we visualize a number of municipalities that are not served with any form of gas at the present time, providing for the distribution of gas within their borders, a substantial capital investment will be required. Capital investment will also be required to deliver the gas from the main pipeline to many of these municipalities and again further capital expenditure will be involved in changing over systems now distributing manufactured gas to equip them to substitute natural gas therefore. It is impossible to estimate with any degree of accuracy what this additional capital cost will amount to, but it may not be far from the mark to say that a possible $200 million will be required in capital investments in Central Canada, that is Ontario and Quebec, for the purpose of local distribution here. Thus the whole project will represent a total investment that may reach, within the next few years, a total of $700 million dollars. This does not include the capital outlays that may be involved in other provinces between Alberta and Ontario.

The trans-Canada pipelines, running across the boundaries of several provinces, is a work and undertaking within the legislative jurisdiction of the Federal Parliament. It comes within the scope of section 92 (10) (a) of the British North America Act. The Federal Government has decided that the line should be built and operated by a corporation now formed and functioning under an Act of Parliament. The lines that will have to be built in Ontario to connect it may be constructed either by the Trans Canada Company itself as part of its enterprise, or by the utilities that wish to buy the gas. It is not the intention of this government to enter directly into any phase of the distribution of gas. Nevertheless there is need for regulation of many aspects of the distribution.

The bill contains a number of sections which will no doubt be considered in due course. The main purpose of the bill is to provide a comprehensive system of control over the distribution, transmission and storage of gas, and the local franchises which will no doubt be given from time to time to govern the conditions of supply, and rates to be charged to the ultimate consumers.

Provision is made for appeals from certain decisions of the board. I may also mention that the Well Diggers' Act, together with the Fuel Supply Act, the Natural Gas Conservation Act and the Natural Gas Conservation Amendment Act are repealed, and under the provisions of this proposed legislation, are incorporated in this bill. This measure really enlarges and expands the policy which has already been applied, in many respects, to the distribution of natural gas in Southwestern Ontario.

To supplement this bill, a number of other amendments have been made to certain other Acts, such as the Public Utilities Act and the Municipal Franchises Act. It was considered desirable that anything having to do with the control of natural gas should be placed under the jurisdiction of the Ontario Fuel Board.

The Well Diggers' Act contains certain provisions respecting persons who bore or drill wells for water. It was not considered proper this should be included in this bill, so I propose to introduce a bill which will take over these provisions which have to do with the wells dug for water.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Are there provisions in the bill which bear upon the present production of gas within this province?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, it covers that.

MR. OLIVER: Is the market protected in any way? How are you going to protect the present production of gas within the province?

HON. MR. PORTER: The present situation will be controlled in the same way as it has been in the past, except that the board will be controlling it, as part of its operations.

MR. OLIVER: There will still be a market for all we produce?

HON. MR. PORTER: Oh, yes. It is not anticipated that the importation of Alberta gas will interfere with the market for Ontario gas. It will supplement it. I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) of that.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Will the proposed legislation give the government authority over the proposed pipeline that the Consumers' Gas Company is planning to build in the Province of Ontario?

HON. MR. PORTER: The legislation gives certain powers as to the control of pipelines within Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member might wait and read the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) can answer a simple question like that.

HON. MR. PORTER: I would say that is just the same as any other.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Granted, of course, by federal charter.

HON. MR. PORTER: So far as it is inter-provincial. The proposed pipeline, I believe, connects with some pipeline in the United States, and I do not know whether it is in two parts, or is all one. I do not know that at the moment—or whether it is going to be done at all.

MR. SALSBERG: The only thing is whether we will have any control over the construction of this pipeline. Do they need any authority from us?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not imagine they do. As long as it is an inter-provincial pipeline, or an international pipeline, they probably do not. But, as I say, I do not know what is going to be done. I do not think anybody does.

THE PUBLIC UTILITIES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Utilities Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the bills I am about to introduce are complementary to the others, as I have explained. I presume all these bills dealing with the gas business should be referred to the gas sub-committee of the Committee on Mining for consideration.

THE MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

THE GAS PIPE LINE ACT, 1951

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Gas Pipe Line Act, 1951."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

PERSONS WHO BORE OR DRILL WELLS FOR WATER

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act Respecting Those Persons Who Bore or Drill Wells For Water."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill is for the purpose of selling water in grocery stores.

THE PETTY TRESPASS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Petty Trespass Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill, which is of an entirely different nature from the bills which have been introduced, has to do with a situation often arising in certain municipalities, where people park their cars on other people's front lawns and trespass in one way or another, but under the present law there is no effective way of dealing with them.

Every time there is a rugby game in Toronto, there are cars parked up the side streets, on people's front and back lawns, and there is nothing people can do, unless they sue in a civil court for damages, and sometimes the amount involved does not warrant such action.

The Petty Trespass Act is an Act which has been on the Statute Books for years, but it did not go quite far enough to cover this type of trespass. The new provisions now proposed will make it unlawful to park an automobile on private property where notice has been given. If a notice has been posted saying there must be no parking or trespassing, it is provided that the municipality may pass a by-law covering that, and a person will be liable to a fine of not less than $1.00 or more than $10.00.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, does that cover the parts of a boulevard, not really private property, but belonging to the municipality?

MR. PORTER: Municipalities can look after their own property, Mr. Speaker.

MR. SALSBERG: I hope so.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Health Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this amendment is simply enabling legislation to authorize regulations prescribing arrangements for the care of poliomyelitis patients.

Secondly, the proposed amendment is designed to give legislative authority to the scheme for the care of poliomyelitis sufferers, originally instituted in 1937.

After the second reading of this bill I would like the consent of the House to refer it to the Committee on Health.

THE ONTARIO SCHOOLS TRUSTEES COUNCILS ACT

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Ontario Schools Trustees Councils Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, The Ontario School Trustees Council is made up of 7 Trustee Organizations, each of which appoint two members to the council. The purpose of this amendment is that these Trustee Organizations, at their first meeting, may appoint not only their representatives, but alternates to their representatives, so they will always be represented, in case of illness or anything else which may occur.

The alternate who is appointed, must be a qualified trustee, and a member of the organization.

It also provides that vacancies, which may occur, can be filled immediately by other appointments.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, will go to the Committee on Education.

THE TRENCH EXCAVATORS PROTECTION ACT, 1954

HON. MR. DALEY moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Trench Excavators Protection Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is a new bill designed to provide protection for persons working in trenches. It can be recalled by most hon. members, that too often we read of some fatality taking place in a trench or sewer being constructed.

This bill provides that sewers and trenches must be planked and shored in accordance with the standard regulations and provides for an inspection system, to be administered by the municipalities, and in territories without municipal organizations, by inspectors appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council. It further prohibits the employment in trenches of persons under 16 years of age.

THE ELEVATORS AND LIFTS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DALEY moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Elevators and Lifts Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; first reading of bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is one bill which is often termed a "tidying up Act." We passed this Elevators and Lifts Act as of last year. We have provided a number of inspectors, and a chief inspector, who are inspecting the elevators of the province, and now find the Act needs amendments, which are of some importance, in connection with administrating this Act, as proposed here, and will be explained on second reading.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) whether he intends to send this bill and the previous bill, to the Standing Committee on Labour.

MR. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Mr. Speaker, is there no limit to the number of times an hon. member can ask the same question?

MR. SALSBERG: That does not answer the question, Mr. Speaker.

MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, these are Acts which are pronouncements of government policy, and, in my opinion, should be discussed right here in the House, and I will be quite happy to have that done.

MR. SALSBERG: So was the gasoline bill.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it is a shameful procedure.

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I will have order. The question has been answered.

Orders of the day.

THE CONSERVATION AUTHORITIES ACT

HON. MR. W. K. WARRENDER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Conservation Authorities Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, by way of explanation, may I say with respect to sections 1 and 3 in the proposed amendment, although this Act has been administered by the Minister of Planning and Development, the creation of the Authority, and perhaps other matters, have been dealt with by the hon. Minister of Public Works. In other words, a number of applications have come to the hon. Minister of Public Works, who has been forwarding them to the Department of Planning and Development, and we took over from there. This proposed amendment provides that they shall come directly to the Minister of Planning and Development.

Section 2: section 2 of the Act, which now provides that the Act does not apply to any part of Ontario lying within a territorial district, is repealed so that the Act will in future apply anywhere in Ontario.

Section 4: at present 3 is the maximum number of representatives that a municipality may send to a meeting for the creation of an Authority and the maximum number of members a municipality may appoint to an Authority. Section 3 is amended to authorize 4 representatives and members from a municipality having a population between 100,000 and 250,000 and 5 representatives and members from a municipality having a population of 250,000 or more.

Section 5: a new section (6a) is added to authorize the amalgamation of 2 or more authorities established for 2 or more adjoining watersheds.

This has arisen on several occasions, where Conservation Authorities would like to combine their activities for some common purpose.

In regard to section 6: new provisions are added to section 15 of the Act to give Authorities power to enter into agreements with private landowners to facilitate schemes or projects and to acquire and use lands for recreation purposes.

We think this is desirable, because on many occasions we have not been able to deal with private landowners, and this section will give us the legal power to do so.

Section No. 7: when an Authority has apportioned the benefit of a scheme among the participating municipalities it is required under subsection 1 of section 16 to notify the municipalities and under subsection 2 any dissatisfied municipality may on 10 days' notice to the Authority apply to the Municipal Board for a review of the apportionment. Subsection 2 of section 16 is rewritten to require that the application for review be made within 1 month after the municipality is notified of the apportionment.

We have had some occasions where, after 10 days' notice, nothing has been done by the municipalities at all. This is simply to limit the time within which some action must be taken.

THE PLANNING AMENDMENT ACT, 1954

HON. MR. WARRENDER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Planning Amendment Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, there are several small amendments here to several sections in the present Act, which I will explain briefly.

Section 1: the present definition of planning area refers only to municipalities. As a planning area may now include territory without municipal organization, the definition is rewritten.

Section 2: the authority to establish subsidiary planning areas is rewritten to provide for such areas consisting of more than one municipality and to provide authority for the Minister to define the functions of the board of a subsidiary planning area.

Section 3: the appointments of members of certain Planning Boards require the approval of the Minister. This amendment ensures that in such cases a member holds office not only until his successor is appointed but also, to ensure that there is no interval during which a vacancy would exist, until the appointment of the successor is approved.

Section 4: this amendment corrects a typographical error.

Section 5: under subsection 2 of section 245 of The Municipal Act, where a local board functions in more than one municipality, its accounts and transactions shall be audited by an auditor of the municipality in which the local board functions most. This does not work satisfactorily with respect to Planning Boards so a new section is added providing that the auditor shall be an auditor of the designated municipality in the planning area.

Section 6: the present subsection 1 of section 11 requires the deposit of a certified copy of an official plan in the office of the clerk of every municipality in the planning area. Since that official plan may not in some cases affect all the municipalities in the planning area, the provision is amended so that the copy will be lodged only in such municipalities as the Minister designates.

The requirement in subsection 2 for lodging duplicate originals of official plans in registry offices is limited to the lodging of one duplicate original.

Section 7: the present subsections state that the Planning Board may constitute itself or not less than 3 of its members as a Committee of Adjustment. The amendments are to make it clear that what the board really does is constitute "its members" or not less than 3 of them as the committee.

In other words, it was thought, by the previous interpretation, when the Planning Board constituted itself as a Committee of Adjustment, both members were to hold exactly the same office, as they did on the Planning Board. By this amendment, they may be shifted around.

Section 8, subsection 1: the power of a Committee of Adjustment to permit a change in use of land which, on the day of the passing of a zoning by-law, was used for a purpose prohibited by the by-law, is revised so that the committee may authorize a change to a similar use or to a use that is more compatible with the permitted uses. The present authority is limited to authorizing a change to a use that conforms more closely to the permitted uses.

The thought we have in mind here, Mr. Speaker, is that under the present Act, it is considered by a great many Committees of Adjustment as being too inflexible, and it is our hope by this amendment to make it a little more flexible; on the other hand, not to make it so broad that the whole effect of the zoning by-laws will be lost.

Subsection 2: under subsections 10 to 19 of section 15a, an appeal may be taken to the Municipal Board from a decision of a Committee of Adjustment. If no appeal is taken the Minister has the option of either approving the decision or referring the matter to the Municipal Board. These subsections are rewritten to simplify and shorten the procedure. The Minister is now given a right of appeal from the decision of the committee. If no appeal is taken by the Minister or any other person within the required time the decision of the committee is final, and there is no need of obtaining the Minister's approval.

Section 9: the definition of "redevelopment" is amended to make it clear that a redevelopment plan may be carried out in respect of an area which, although perhaps not built-up, is improperly subdivided for the uses for which the area is suited.

Section 10: subsection 1a of section 24 now authorizes a subdivision control by-law to provide that where land is within a registered plan of subdivision, no person shall convey the land by part lot description without the consent of the Planning Board or, where there is no Planning Board, of the Minister. The amendment will authorize a by-law to designate specific plans of subdivision or parts thereof, to which the prohibition will apply.

And finally, Mr. Speaker, section 11: the provision requiring applications for approval of subdivision plans is amended so that the applicant must be the owner or must be authorized by the owner to make the application. This will avoid the work that has been involved in the past in processing applications by unauthorized persons which are later abandoned.

We have had cases where people have come to our department representing themselves as being the owner of certain land, and we have found out, after a great deal of detailed work, that they were not the owners at all, and had no authority to deal with that property. This section will cover that situation.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, as I did not participate in the previous debate, I should like to give myself the pleasure of extending my felicitations to you in your official capacity, and my very warm personal regards. It is a matter of a great measure of satisfaction to all of us that you are again with us, with your gracious lady, enjoying good health, and discharging the important duties of your office in such an acceptable manner.

This day is saddening to us all, by the passing of our friend, Mr. MacOdrum, and I find it quite a shock to look across the floor of the House at his desk, where I always found an interesting and friendly face, even sometimes an approving eye when I was addressing you, and to find today that desk draped in mourning for the untimely passing of this most esteemed member. Surely it is a great loss to his family, and his community, and particularly to this House, and the province at large.

He had a very brilliant future in the public service, had he been spared to have been with us for a greater time.

Mr. Speaker, I have listened with a great deal of interest and profit to many of the addresses, most of them in the previous debate, and I would have liked to have had time to comment on many of them today. There were interesting and profitable suggestions brought forward, but in hurriedly passing, I would like to mention one part of an address delivered by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay). I am always particularly interested in him, because I sat opposite his good father in this Legislature for many years, when he was a member of the government and I was in Opposition, and when he was in Opposition, and I in Government, and I hope to have the same pleasure regarding the hon. member for Riverdale, his worthy son.

It is a matter of regret I cannot commend wholly this particular address. I had hoped I could. He did bring forth some suggestions of great value, which a Select Committee of this House will, I believe, enquire into during the recess. His charges against the administration of justice and the Toronto police force have already been dealt with by the hon. Attorney-General, and the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) who are certainly more capable to deal with this than I, and I find myself in complete accord with the attitude taken by the hon. Attorney-General, and the hon. member for Kingston.

I do deprecate the attack on the Toronto police force. I have known many of them individually for a great number of years, and I consider they constitute one of the finest police forces on this continent, and I think the hon. member (Mr. Macaulay) should have said, when he laid the charge that a confession was taken by torture from this particular defendant, that the police officers denied under oath that any torture was used, or that they had laid a hand in violence on the man in any way.

But it is with respect to an amazing attack he made on the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), upon which I would wish to make a few comments.

I have sat in this House with my honourable friend and leader for many, many years—26 or 27 now—and in all that time he has been one of the most popular members of this Legislature, and has certainly never invited the comments the hon. member for Riverdale saw fit to direct to him in his remarks.

May I refer to one or two of them? At page 184 of Hansard we find the following:

He next turned the might of his water pistol upon the hospital plan of Ontario, which he said he felt we should have.

I cannot pass such a comment without saying that if the debating ability of the hon. Leader of the Opposition can be termed a "water pistol." I am sure that I, and some other hon. members of this House, would like to have one also.

Then he went on to say:

I should have thought my hon. friend had been smacked across his electoral bottom less than two years ago—

That is certainly a very debatable point, Mr. Speaker. The hon. member for Riverdale will find out before 2 years have passed that it is a very easy matter to be elected to this House when riding on the crest of a landslide, but when one has to climb against the landslide, and still is able to be elected, that is really a remarkable victory.

Instead of the hon. Leader of the Opposition being "smacked," as the hon. member for Riverdale suggests, I submit that his victory was one of the most notable in his long career, with many elections to this House.

Then we go on. On page 185, the hon. member for Riverdale said:

What we want is more houses, not money, of which the hon. Leader of the Opposition I think perhaps has more than he knows what to do with.

Mr. Speaker, that is the worst attack of all. Why should the hon. member accuse the hon. Leader of the Opposition of "having more money than he knows what to do with"? Is that just talk, or what? That statement particularly amazed me.

I have known the hon. Leader of the Opposition for many, many years, and have been a frequent visitor at his farm on the back concessions of Grey South, and, believe me, Mr. Speaker, any money he has, he earned the hard way. I wish the hon. member for Riverdale would try making money that way for about 10 years, and he would appreciate it when he got it.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition has been a very successful farmer. I think that is something upon which we should congratulate him. I know of no more difficult way of making a living than wresting it from the top 6 inches of soil. That has been my avocation, and that of my forebears for many generations in this country.

Then we go on, and we come to a word which is certainly offensive, if it was intended to be. At page 186, we find:

What I think is so despicable, is for the hon. Leader of the Opposition to stand there and say, "We want a Royal Commission."

The definition of the word "despicable" is, as I understand it, "contemptible; fit or deserving to be despised."

The hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) used the term, I thought in a very proper way, when referring to offenders who leave the scenes of accidents, and do not remain to take their share of responsibility, assist the injured, and so on.

But to apply the word "despicable" to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, Mr. Speaker, I say comes very close to the margin of being unparliamentary and offensive.

Then we can pass on to other comments. He accused the hon. Leader of the Opposition of "trying to suck and whistle in the same breath" and said that his "suggestions were vacuums, that his policy is a hiccough on the breath of progress," and so on.

Then, he mentioned in another portion of his address,

I may be wrong, and I am prepared to stand here and apologize in public.

I suggest to the hon. member for Riverdale that he was wrong, and it would be very graceful indeed if he stood and apologized here in public, as he promised to do.

I cannot say what motivated this, Mr. Speaker. We all know, of course, the hon. Leader of the Opposition—the hon. member for Grey South—will, in a few weeks' time, be contesting at a very important convention in this city, the leadership of the Liberal Party. I know there will be no doubt but what he will have my unqualified support. I have enjoyed sitting under his able leadership, on this side of the House, and I hope, in the near future, to be sitting under his leadership on the opposite side. I assure the hon. members that I will support the hon. Leader of the Opposition, as long as I am able to discharge my duties as member of this House.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Let us be fair about it.

MR. NIXON: I have taken the liberty in times past, in addressing you on the budget, to divert to some mention of problems in my own riding, and you have been very kind in giving me leeway in this matter.

Last year, you will recall, at this time, I brought to your attention the problems of the Indians in Brant, and the hon. Prime Minister showed very great interest, indeed, in the matter, and indicated in his address on the budget that he still had a great interest in the problems of the Indians, and we will shortly have presented to us a report from the Select Committee which was dealing with the problem.

I want to convey to the hon. Prime Minister and this House the appreciation of some 6,500 Indians in my riding for the interest the House has evidenced in their problems, and the great encouragement this has given them.

To show this appreciation, last year they invited the hon. Prime Minister to become an honorary Chief in the Band of the Six Nations of the Iroquois in Canada. It is a matter of very great regret to me that mutually acceptable occasion could not be found upon which the hon. Prime Minister could accept this great honour—and it is a very great honour, Mr. Speaker.

In the course of a somewhat lengthy public life, I have enjoyed my share of ups and downs, but I can say in all sincerity that there is no honour I have received which I value more highly than being an honorary Chieftain in this great Iroquois Band. These honours are not lightly cast around, I can assure you of that. Since the beginning of time, there have been only 33 granted, and only about 20 or 21 who have received the honour, are still living. The honour they conferred upon me was is Chief Sha-deh-gah-Ren-hes, "Trees of equal height"—and you will be surprised I have to refer to my notes to remember my own name. Nevertheless, it is a very great honour, and I hope during this coming year they will have an opportunity to induct the hon. Prime Minister into the tribe. While I have never been able to convert him into being a Liberal, I would consider it a very great honour indeed to assist in his induction as an honorary Chief of this tribe.

HON. MR. FROST: It would be a very great honour indeed. I would appreciate that.

MR. HANNA (Huron-Bruce): They are very fine Indians in Brant.

MR. NIXON: We are very proud of them.

MR. HANNA: We were there in December with our committee.

MR. NIXON: This House has passed the Theatres Act, and I would like to point out, from its application to my riding during this last year, that I do not consider it is in the public interest that the Act should be applied as it is.

This matter had to do with the granting of a provincial licence for a drive-in theatre just north of the City of Brantford in my riding, off highway No. 24. This was the second theatre of this nature—a drive-in theatre—which has been forced upon one township. There is another one a few miles to the west on highway No. 53, on the road to Burford.

This application was opposed by the local council, but they were informed by long-distance telephone from Toronto from the Theatres Branch I believe, that as the branch had approved the application of this drive-in theatre, the local council had no authority or power in the matter whatever and must, as a matter of law, issue a permit for the building. The council refused to issue that permit, and the applicants took the case to court here in Toronto, by way of a writ of mandamus. I would like to read you this report from the Brantford Expositor:

Court Over-rules Township Regarding Drive-in Theatre

A writ of mandamus, over-ruling the Brantford Township Council, has been issued at Osgoode Hall, Toronto, ordering that a building permit be issued to Allan Gazer, Brantford, to erect a drive-in theatre south of the Power Line road in the Tranquility district.

This district has been called, "Tranquility" for a century. I can assure you it was not very tranquil when they found this theatre was to be forced upon them.

The order, handed down by Mr. Justice R. A. Danis of the Supreme Court of Ontario, directs the township and its building inspector to issue the permit. It over-rides the council's formal revocation of an earlier decision to grant the permit.

On November 23, the council heard objections from a delegation protesting the building of the theatre in what the residents of the area termed a residential district, traffic from the theatre causing unnecessary hazards to children. That night, the council conditionally revoked its earlier decision to grant the permit. On December 9, the earlier decision was formally revoked.

I respectfully submit that the local council, if they have no discretion in the matter, should not be put in the position of having to be the "goat" for the protests from all the outraged citizens and home-owners of the district, which centres upon them instead of upon the Theatres Branch here in Toronto, where it should centre.

In piloting this bill through the House, the hon. Minister of Planning and Development had this to say:

When I was speaking with regard to the bill covering public halls, I said the people closest to the local situation should be the ones to say whether a licence should be granted or not.

And this is with regard to theatres:

There is a wide general principle under which the government has control, and we say to the municipalities they may not refuse a licence if we think it should be granted.

The municipality is only looking at it from some local aspect such as fire hazard or something of that nature. We say that we have gone into it thoroughly and the municipality may not refuse the licence.

If they cannot refuse the licence, I submit they should not be pulled into the picture in any way. But I think they should have authority to refuse that licence, and the provision we passed in the Theatres Act of last year that no municipality shall refuse to licence a theatre when a licence therefor is in force under this Act,

Certainly, there is no case of necessity made out for hoisting this theatre upon us. Brantford is well supplied with splendid theatres, which are all having a difficult time today to keep up with the competition of television and so on. These drive-in theatres are particularly undesirable, I think, to be forced on any community, and to have two of them forced on one township is, I submit, Mr. Speaker, extremely unfair.

The year 1954 constitutes something of a milestone in my own public life. Should I be spared by merciful Providence until this fall, and should the electors of Brant also spare me, and if there is a general election in the meantime—those are two pretty big "ifs," I will admit—on the 20th of October I will have completed 35 years of public life. That period includes 10 general elections and one by-election, as in former days when you were appointed to the Cabinet you had to go back to your constituency, as your seat was automatically vacated.

I thought it might be of interest to you, Mr. Speaker, in directing your attention to the budget, to direct your attention to the Public Accounts of 1919.

Those Public Accounts, were, of course, prepared by the government of Sir William Hearst and the hon. Mr. McGarry, Provincial Treasurer, both of whom were defeated in the 1919 general election. In fact, as I remember, we only came 60 votes short of "taking" Mr. Ferguson, too, on that occasion.

It is of interest to note that this budget, the first on which we worked 35 years ago, had a revenue of less than $20 million. Some $19,900,000 was the ordinary revenue of the province at that time, and it took over 1,000 pages of Public Accounts to deal with that comparatively very small expenditure.

It might also be of interest to note that the entire annual revenue from the Board of Liquor Commissioners, which included sales, fines, transference of franchise, and what-have-you, amounted to $316,000, whereas today it is $44 million.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Did you have the four-point programme?

MR. NIXON: Not until later. Perhaps we did not get much revenue from it, either. However, we had no gasoline tax. The public highways produced $1,500,000 where now they produce $110 million. Those figures will give you some idea of what the passing of a few years has meant in the development of the revenues of the Province of Ontario.

The contingent liabilities guaranteed debt was $19 million at that time, the complete direct debt was $97.5 million.

One of the interesting items of revenue was that of $2 million as a direct assessment by the government against the real property of the province. So when the hon. Prime Minister wants to get back to fundamental policies, he should go back to the Public Accounts of Mr. McGarry and the government of that day, which had taken some $2 million by direct assessment against real property.

HON. MR. FROST: I am a Progressive Conservative. I gave $134 million to them.

MR. NIXON: I would like to congratulate the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) upon his presentation of the budget this year. He recalled, to my embarrassment, that I criticized it very moderately last year, when, for the first time in my experience, he had simply closed the budget, laid it on the table, and then proceeded to give a desk-thumping partisan address to this Legislature.

This year he improved his presentation very much indeed, to my way of thinking. It might not have given the hon. members as much chance to applaud by pounding their desks, but he has many opportunities and he takes advantage of them. I enjoyed it as much as any of the hon. members. Possibly the presentation of the budget is not one of the occasions for that type of demonstration. Personally, I did like his factual analysis of the budget and thought it was a very decided improvement.

He presented to us a budget setting out tax revenues of some $362 million. They have progressed many, many times from those we enjoyed when I first entered this House, as I have pointed out, Mr. Speaker. He presented a gross debt of $1,038,000,000—one thousand million dollars—which is truly a staggering figure.

I remember well just about 30 years ago when the hon. William Price was Provincial Treasurer. In presenting his budget, he brought in a debt retirement scheme by which a certain sum was to be set aside each year to the credit of the debt retirement, which at the end of 30 years would retire all the debt of the province. I suggested to him then that after this scheme had been in effect for 30 years, the way I understood it, the way he was borrowing money to put to the credit of the debt retirement scheme, and after it had worked itself out for 30 years, and the debt was all retired under that scheme, we would have a debt of $1 billion.

I had no idea, at that time, how accurately I was predicting the course of events, but 30 years after the first institution of the debt retirement scheme, that is exactly what we have, a debt of $1,000 million and an additional $38 million.

I find each year a cause for continuing alarm in the rapidly increasing debt of the Province of Ontario. Mr. Speaker, this debt can be reduced, as one will see in the Auditors Report in the early years of the present government. In 1944, the gross debt was $666 million; the next year, $646 million; the next year, $639 million, a very healthy decrease in the gross debt every year; and the net debt $482 million, $480 million, $478 million—a decrease in those 3 years of some $6 million or $7 million in the net debt, a very healthy condition if it could only have been maintained.

However, for some reason in 1947 and from then on, the brakes were simply taken off and the machine of government has been accelerating and accelerating, and the debt has increased every year since then.

HON. MR. FROST: I think the hon. member will see the reason for that. In those years which he mentioned there was no hydro construction. In the years following 1946, there has been tremendous hydro construction with the result that the cost of that construction is reflected in the gross debt.

I may say to the hon. member that I would not want to do anything but tell him what I think will happen with the coming of the St. Lawrence and the great capital investment which will have to be made there. I should say that by 1958 or 1959 our gross debt, very probably, will be one and one-half billion dollars, but we would hold against that a great revenue-producing asset in the hydro plants and other works of the St. Lawrence project.

MR. NIXON: Yes, I agree with the hon. Prime Minister in that, Mr. Speaker, but that does not enter into the picture of the net debt because the net debt is that debt against which you have no realizable assets.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say to the hon. member for Brant that there appears to be enough in reserve. To say that we should supply all of our capital commitments from cash seems to be going a little far. We are paying 65 per cent. of that now. It is not unreasonable that we should pay no more than 65 per cent. of our capital costs out of ordinary revenue. I think the hon. member is taking a very extreme view. We are capitalizing about 35 per cent.

MR. NIXON: Well, those are the debt figures, Mr. Speaker. The auditor has prepared a very interesting chart showing how the gross debt has gone up from 1944 to 1954. It is right on the last line now. Another 2 years and it simply goes off into space and there is no more room for it in the report.

I am always interested, when the auditor's report comes down, to see how accurate our Treasurer has been in his Estimates in the past year. He has not a good record, as he will himself admit. The auditor seems to find this very interesting too. A very substantial part of his report consists in bringing to the attention of hon. members of this House differences between the expenditures forecast in the budget and the actual expenditures, and between the interim statement we have now and the actual figures as they eventually turn out. We shall not know this final figure until we meet in session next year. But in the year just past, the year ended March 31st, 1953, the budget Estimate for ordinary revenue was $291 million. The actual revenue received was $349 million, a surplus over the budget estimate of $58,500,000.

The hon. Prime Minister shrugs that off with a smile. Believe me, Mr. Speaker, in the school in which I was brought up, a sum like that was not considered "peanuts." We would certainly have liked to have seen a revenue of $58 million, quite apart from a surplus of revenue over the budget Estimate of that tremendous amount.

HON. MR. FROST: I went down to Ottawa and shook the tree.

MR. NIXON: I also note that actual expenditure over the budget Estimate amounted to $36 million. I almost wonder, Mr. Speaker, what is the use of budgeting or guessing at all if we cannot get closer than that to the amounts as they eventually turn out? He might as well turn his financial "Brain Trust" out to grass, and take the figures as they finally are presented to us when the year is completed.

HON. MR. FROST: I would point out to the hon. member for Brant that, apart from the Ottawa Agreement, my budgeting was fairly accurate, considering everything. I did not know in March we were going to enter into an agreement with Ottawa. We did enter into the agreement, on August 31st. I convened the House and explained it and provided for the money. I think my hon. friend cannot object to that.

MR. NIXON: Let us see how accurate the hon. Prime Minister's budgeting was, apart from the agreement with Ottawa. The Highways Department gave him the $6 million he budgeted for. Now we come to liquor. The Prime Minister only budgeted for $36 million, but actually received $44 million, an increase of $8 million there. That was not very accurate budgeting.

As a matter of fact, I distinctly remember asking at the time why the Prime Minister had budgeted for a decrease of $8 million, whether or not he intended on taking the water out, and so making less profit.

Here we are back again, budgeting for $36 million from the Liquor Board, and I was wondering, Mr. Speaker, if that Estimate was made before or after the fusel-oil speech by the Hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips).

I think one paragraph is worth repeating, Mr. Speaker. Some hon. members may have missed it. This year, in connection with the tabling of the third annual report of the Alcoholism Research Foundation—it is remarkable what they can discover about alcohol in 3 short years—he said:

You may ask me, what the aging of the liquor has to do with it. First, in the distillation, if that is properly done, there should not be over an ounce and a half to 2 ounces of these so-called oils in an Imperial quart. Today, in a great number of liquors, there is as much as 2 to 2½ ounces of so-called fusel oil. What is done, is we actually shake it up. What we should do is siphon it off the top, because that part is really poison. These fusel oils—so-called—are deadly poison. What we actually do is shake them up, and we get it in a diluted form.

I suggest to the government and to the hon. Minister of Health—because this year the statement was made by a responsible Minister before the Orders of the day—that if this “top” should be siphoned off, as the hon. Minister suggests, it should siphoned off by the hon. Prime Minister. He should do the siphoning. Certainly you cannot expect the poor customer who pays, maybe, $5 for one bottle to siphon off the top 10 per cent. Even then he might have to siphon off 10 ounces of water which the government has put into it, from the bottom. There would not be much left for his money. With respect to this particular matter I saw a statement given to the press by some citizen of your own community, Mr. Speaker. It was headed, “Official Disputes Stated Estimate of Fusel Content.” The text read:

Health Minister Phillips’ statement in the Legislature recently that most of the liquor in Ontario contains up to 10 per cent. of fusel oil, a deadly poison, is challenged by a distillery official.

Carl T. Carson, Vice-president in charge of production, Hiram Walker & Sons Ltd., described the statement as “inaccurate and misleading.”

“It was alleged that a 26-ounce bottle of liquor contains 1 to 3 ounces of fusel oil, depending on its age,” Mr. Carson said. “This would be equivalent to 4 to 12 per cent. fusel oil content. Laboratory records show that Canadian whiskey contains only 10 to 17 parts per 100,000, that is, .01 per cent. to .017 per cent.

“In other words, the statement in the Legislature claimed that whiskey contains about 1,000 times as much fusel oil as it actually does,” Mr. Carson said.

Thus, while the hon. Prime Minister is giving his Cabinet a bad example in estimating for the budget, another responsible Minister is a thousand times out and that, I suggest, is a little far out, even for a Minister of this government.

The hon. Prime Minister has said: “What a fine budget.” He claims that his taxes are about the lowest imposed in any province of Canada. I was very interested to read the budgets from the Western Provinces, particularly from Alberta, and compare them with our own. The Alberta budget is pretty shiny too. May I read an excerpt:

In a 1954-55 budget that featured increased pensions for the aged and blind and higher indemnities for provincial lawmakers, Premier Manning also raised the possibility that the foreseeable future would bring the elimination of all existing municipal school and hospital taxes.

He announced the province will increase by $5 monthly—to $15 from $10—its supplementary payments to recipients of old-age security pensions, old-age assistance and blind allowances. The ceiling of their allowable annual income will be increased by $60.

I suggest to the government that their revenues are very buoyant, and that their surpluses would be tremendous, if they were not packed away in the Highway Improvement Fund, and the Debt Retirement Fund. No one is more anxious than I am to see the mortgage paid off the old farm, but I do suggest to the hon. Prime Minister that this House would certainly never hesitate for a moment in voting necessary monies for the Highway Improvement programme. Why does he not consider some supplemental assistance to our old-age pensioners? Alberta is now giving $15 in supplemental assistance. British Columbia has also increased its assistance, I believe, and Saskatchewan also gives supplemental assistance. Certainly the old-age pensioners of Ontario are having an extremely difficult time, with the cost of living as high as it is, to get by on their $40 pension. Instead of putting $24 million into the Highway Improvement Fund, the government might very well consider using some of this money for additional assistance to these pensioners.

Now I will turn to page 4 of the budget as presented by the treasury. And I would invite the attention of hon. members to the summary of expenditure and revenue shown there. Our fiscal programme, ordinary and capital, now exceeds $450 million annually. I suggest to the hon. Prime Minister that he should not permit these terms to creep into the budget—terms that are rather confusing and misleading and which may even pull the wool over the people's eyes. I know that in almost every report which I read in the press said this was a budget of $450 million. The word "fiscal" is certainly in ordinary use in connection with the handling of public revenue but it has attained a much wider application. It is possible to talk about a "fiscal year" in which "expenditure" as well as "revenue" is considered in addition to "taxes" and "borrowings."

What is important, of course, is that revenues, both capital and ordinary, total together away over $450 million. But many people interpreted the reference which the Prime Minister made to "expenditure" this year as meaning that the figures of ordinary and capital expenditure as given on pages 37 and 38, added together, total $581 million. According to the auditor, last year the government was about $19 million short in its interim Estimates which the hon. Prime Minister presented to the House as compared with the actual total at the end of the year. So we can add $20 million to that $580 million, and we come out with a nice round sum of $600 million of actual expenditure, capital and ordinary, in this current year.

I submit that the hon. Prime Minister, having totalled up the revenues, should have totalled up the expenditures side by side. The result might impress even him. The figures would show a deficiency that is leading us to an alarming debt position—an income of $450 million, and an expenditure of $600 million—a difference of $150 million a year. There is nothing to be done with this deficit except to add it to existing debt. To say we are "paying off the mortgage," that we are putting $16 million to debt requirements, and then at the same time to add $150 million to the debt is surely, Mr. Speaker, to take an unrealistic view. We might as well take a realistic view of the situation and admit that the debt is increasing in an alarming manner.

One of the most fruitful sources of revenue, as has been stated, is the federal agreement for the use of certain tax fields which this year produced more than $134 million and next year will produce $140,008,000. These are truly very substantial sums and I fancy the hon. Prime Minister must indeed regret the years which went by during which he failed to accept our sound advice that he should make this agreement with Ottawa. When he sees these fine cheques coming in he must surely regret that he did not make this agreement some years previously.

HON. MR. FROST: Under that agreement I would not have received these cheques, which are certainly coming in nicely.

MR. NIXON: I would be very much interested if we could have a breakdown of this $134 million, making clear what part of it is corporation tax, what part of it is income tax, and what part is succession tax. Is there no succession tax?

HON. MR. FROST: No. But that is quite a good question to ask. I think we could give the hon. member for Brant a reasonably accurate statement of the break-down, both of the $134 million and of the $141 million. The figures would have to be approximate, because they are based on a complicated formula, but I think it could be done approximately.

MR. NIXON: At this point, Mr. Speaker, I desire to turn to the debt position again because I submit that this is the meat in the coconut. These pages which the hon. Prime Minister read with such satisfaction are really only words and alibis. This is where we find out our exact financial position. We now have $1 billion of gross debt, and that increased this year by $142 million, which is a tremendous increase. It is estimated on page 43 that the net debt for the year will be $650 million, an estimated increase this year of $45,879,000. That is part of the debt against which we have no realizable assets. That margin is, of course, becoming narrower and narrower in proportion to the gross debt. And not only, Mr. Speaker, have we this gross debt of $1 billion, but we have also backed the other fellow's notes for $780 million—$787 million of guaranteed, or indirect debt. And while we hope the province will never have to pay all that, nevertheless this is an indirect debt and if the other fellow does not pay for any reason, we shall have to pay. These commitments are now rapidly approaching the $1 billion mark, and this year they, too, were increased by a very substantial sum of money.

I would like to make here a very brief reference to hydro. I submit that the debt position is the highlight of the budget, and for that reason I have directed the attention of hon. members to it for a longer period than I otherwise would have done. I hope my observations will not be entirely overlooked by the treasury.

Hydro this year received, as a direct advance, $100 million, and the province guaranteed their bonds for some $60 million, a total of some $160 million. Hon. members will see that the hydro debt has increased very substantially, too. In my own mind there is no question but that the hon. Prime Minister is somewhat concerned when he considers the ever-increasing projects for the development of hydro. I notice in a brochure which they issued recently they say that 29 cents of every dollar earned are needed to pay the interest on their debt. Since then they have, I think, increased their debt by $160 million, so they must now pay some 30 cents in debt interest out of every dollar of revenue received.

We were told, in connection with the conversion scheme, that it would certainly cost $400 million and possibly $440 million. You will recall, Mr. Speaker, that when the scheme was first recommended to the Legislature the estimate was $191 million, and we were notified that it was hoped the scheme might be completed in the 1960's.

That is still 6 years away, and I would urge upon the government and upon the Hydro Commissioner that this project should be expedited as rapidly as possible. As an island narrows, the water rises upon those who are left, and they are more or less left out on a limb. The supply houses show less and less interest in the demand for 25-cycle equipment, and certainly industry now is avoiding the 25-cycle towns and cities, but are going to those which are equipped with 60-cycle.

HON. MR. G. H. CHALLIES: Mr. Chairman, may I interject just a word? As the hon. member well knows, as far as industry is concerned, we have a supplementary cycle, 60 cycle, available to large municipalities.

MR. NIXON: Have you it in Simcoe?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I believe so.

MR. NIXON: I notice that the people in my riding are seriously objecting to industry passing them by, because they have not 60-cycle power. In any case, I, for one, would be delighted to see this matter completed, and I urge upon the government to expedite the completion of the change-over as rapidly as possible. It seems to me, in many of these cities and towns, the local Utility Commission could take on the entire job.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Brantford is doing that now.

MR. NIXON: Yes, I understand so. In that way, Comstock and the hydro could be relieved of a great deal of the actual work in connection with this change-over.

In that connection also, Mr. Speaker, I noticed in the report of the Municipal Electric Association, Mr. Saunders said:

The decrease in the total rebate could be traced to an increased levy for the change-over from 25 to 60 cycles. The increase was charged after Ontario Hydro realized the programme would far exceed the original Estimate of $191 million.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I wonder if the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) would permit me to make a short statement as to the costs? I am making this under the authority of the Assistant General Manager in charge of Administration. Had the factors remained static up to the present time, the Estimate of $191 million would have taken care of the cost of the frequency conversion; in other words, the unit cost is not exceeded, in fact, it is a little less. The factors of labour, materials, the normal increase in population, with the increased loads for industry and individuals remained normal, also the value of the dollar remaining normal, the estimated cost would have taken care of the cost of the conversion.

MR. NIXON: Nothing remains static in this world, Mr. Speaker. When an Estimate is being made, provision should be made for some allowance for changing factors.

We were assured, in no uncertain terms by Mr. Drew, when he recommended this scheme to the House, that the $191 million was a fair Estimate. Furthermore, he said most emphatically, speaking in the City of Brantford on June 2nd, 1948, in the election campaign:

"No municipality in Ontario, whether now on 60-cycle, or 25-cycle, will pay one cent more because of Hydro frequency change-over," Ontario Premier George A. Drew told a Brantford audience Tuesday evening as he spoke in the BCI auditorium in the interests of C. C. Slein, Progressive Conservative candidate here.

"No domestic user of electricity will pay one cent," said Mr. Drew. "No commercial user will pay one cent. No farmer will pay one cent for his change of equipment."

I gave to the House an instance last year where the Chairman of the Board said that some $500,000 had already been taken from rural revenues for conversion, and here he said the charge would have been much larger had it not been for the levy made against them to pay the cost of conversion. So these promises by Mr. Drew have not been carried out.

Now, Mr. Speaker, just one feature of this borrowing-and-debt question I would like to mention and then I will conclude.

You will recall last year I moved an amendment pointing out the alarming increase in the debt. I think that is an important feature of a budget. If I were to move an amendment along that line at this time, the hon. Prime Minister might say, "This is old stuff to us."

There is a feature in the budget, in regard to borrowing, in particular, to which I wish to direct the attention of the House for a moment. That is the tendency of the government to turn more and more to the New York market for its funds. That might be an easy place to secure money, and it has certainly been found to be so in the past, but, believe me, Mr. Speaker, there has always been a day of reckoning when those monies have to be repaid as to principal and interest in New York funds.

In 1932, the Henry Government, of which the hon. member, the Vice-Chairman of Hydro (Mr. Challies) was a member, found it had to spend $4,447,000 in one year to pay for the adverse exchange rate which at that time I believe was 24 per cent.

I would like to read to the hon. members a statement by a former Prime Minister and Treasurer of this province, the late Mitchell Hepburn, who listed on page 11 of his budget speech, the payments by years, for example, 1932, $4 million, in round figures; 1933, $2 million in round figures; and so on, and shows there was a sum of $7,800,000 in 6 or 7 years which had to be found, under the most difficult conditions, to pay for the unfavourable American exchange, when paying off our principal and interest each year, which we had to pay.

Believe me, Mr. Speaker, in those days it was difficult to find that kind of money. I brought to the attention of the House last year one occasion during this very period, when the Bank of Montreal, the official bank of the Province of Ontario — refused to loan us \$4 million for three months at $4\frac{3}{4}$ per cent. That will give you some idea of the difficulties encountered.

In 1939, Mr. Hepburn said:

The foregoing summary indicates the unhappy experience of the province during the past few years in regard to its Foreign Exchange problems. The future threatens a similarly gloomy picture. American Exchange during the financial crisis of 1932-1933 reached a premium of over 20 per cent.

I am informed it was 24 per cent. at its highest. Then he goes on:

If such condition should again occur during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1945, when we have over $31 million to meet in the highest of these exchange markets, the province will be called upon to pay in exchange a sum of over $6 million. I have had prepared a summary showing the Interest and Principal Maturities of Province of Ontario bonds payable in Canada, London or New York, at the holders' option.

Just now, our Canadian currency is at a premium of some 3 per cent. Mr. Speaker, so I presume we only received $97 for every $100 bond we sold in New York. The reason for that favourable situation—if you can call it so—is because of the tremendous investments of American funds in Canadian bonds, and our natural resources being developed, in many cases, by American investors, but the day is coming when this money will move the other way, when these investments are going to be paid back in principal, interest and dividends. And when this swing of the pendulum comes, as it has come in the past, and will certainly come in the future, we will find the rate of exchange will go the other way, and probably in 15 or 18 years, when these sums of money have to be repaid, in principal and annual interest, we will again find the exchange rate 10 per cent. against us, or may, as it was for some years, reach 15 or 16 per cent. and even 24 per cent.

So we actually do not know what we are facing.

If we sold these bonds in Ontario and in Canada—and it has never been suggested they cannot be sold here; certainly the hydro has sold bonds at a very favourable rate in the past, I think as low as $2\frac{3}{4}$ per cent., and their sales have always “gone over” successfully—I submit that these monies we would be owing to our people, by way of interest and principal, would then be paid to our people, and the interest would always be available to the corporations to pay corporation income tax, and to the individuals to pay individual income taxes, and we would be in a far safer and more sound position than we are when we owe these vast sums of money to foreign powers, particularly to the United States. I do not know that for many years to come, England will have an adverse exchange rate so far as our currency is concerned, which would embarrass us as it did in days gone by, when our borrowings had to be repaid in Sterling.

I do submit, Mr. Speaker, there is almost a certainty that in the future, when these sums of money are being paid back to the United States, the rate of exchange will be the other way, and may be very substantially so.

Mr. Speaker, to put myself on record in this regard, I propose to move, in conclusion:

That the Motion before the House that “Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into a Committee of Supply” be amended by adding thereto, the following words: “But this House does not approve the policy of the government in borrowing hundreds of millions of dollars in the United States repayable as to principal and interest in United States funds.”

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) moves the adjournment of the debate, may I say to the hon. members of the House that the statement made by the hon. Minister of Health

(Mr. Phillips) the other day, relative to fusel oil was all right, except the decimal point got out of place. It is very easy to happen, with a person using bifocals. The hon. Minister of Health will revise that very shortly, and I can tell the hon. members the products which are sold in the Ontario stores are up to the standards required.

MR. NIXON: Mr. Speaker, I presume the hon. Prime Minister can revise his Estimates upward.

HON. MR. FROST: I will have to look into that.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I call the order in relation to the report of the Committee on Reform Institutions? I regret that I will have to be away for a few hours, but before leaving, perhaps you will pardon me if I refer to this headline, in the Toronto Daily Star, "Frost In Row With Union Men." That headline is quite inaccurate. We had a lovely meeting.

REPORT OF COMMITTEE RE REFORM INSTITUTIONS

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): Mr. Speaker, before I make any comments in connection with the all-Party report in connection with Reform Institutions, I would like to say a word in reference to the death of a man who came into this House after the General Election of 1951, the late Mr. Gordon MacOdrum.

He and I have been friends and members of the bar for a quarter of a century, and after the last opening of the Legislature, I was returning to my riding in Kingston on the train, with my wife, and he, at that time, was accompanied by his wife and his two little boys, aged 12 and 10.

Sometimes, as hon. members know, casual conversations take place between two friends which do not impress you at the time, but later events cause you to recall them. As we were going eastward, he said, "You know, one of the reasons I brought the children up for the opening of this Legislature, was because I wanted them to see the sittings of Parliament at a time when their father was in his seat, and in his place, as the elected representative for the County of Leeds." Whether that was a premonition or not, I cannot say.

Tomorrow, hon. members of this House will go east to pay their respects to a very able lawyer, a loving husband, and a good father. Last Friday, before he returned to his riding of Leeds, and his home in Brockville, he dictated a letter which he never lived to sign, and as we think of him tomorrow, as we are going east, or as we think of him this afternoon—as was so ably stated by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon)—I would like to read a sentence from this letter which will never be mailed. I think it illustrates, if I may say so, a living memorial to the high integrity and sincerity of purpose of our departed friend.

This is what he said:

Please be advised that I am at all times most anxious to assist every person in the County of Leeds, and that regardless of any Party affiliations. If a cause is right, then I want to support it.

In reading that extract I would like it to be in the record for all time as a tribute to the outstanding and high qualities of a very dear friend, not only of my own, but yours, Mr. Speaker, and of every hon. member of this House.

It is my privilege this afternoon to say a few words in connection with the bill which was tabled, in connection with Reform Institutions.

As the result of having been on that committee, I would say, first of all, it is a very great pleasure to have been a member of that committee. Perhaps my reasons are personal, but I will give them to you for what they are worth.

I think one of the first reports which was ever made in either the Dominion or Provincial Parliaments in connection with penal reform was when the Honourable C. J. Torch was the Minister of Justice. Sir Robert Borden was Prime Minister. That was a 3-man committee consisting of Mr. O. N. Baker, Mr. Charles M. Draper and my father.

The next step with relation to penal reform was something with which I had something to do. I think, Mr. Speaker, you may be a little surprised at this observation that, in my opinion, the Archambault Report would never have been written and would never have been of the value it has been to both Federal and Provincial Governments across Canada, and would never have been possible, if it had not been for the outstanding leadership given by the late Harry Anderson, who was the editor of what was known at that time as the Globe. With that paper I want to be associated, coupled with the Kingston Whig-Standard. Those two newspapers took the position there was something wrong, and which should be made right.

I could not do it alone in Kingston. I had to get some outside support, and I came to Toronto to see Mr. Harry Anderson, a man as great in heart as he was in size, who believed in the sincere and fundamental principles of humane treatment of those who were suffering.

I should like to tell you this: prior to the Archambault Report there were, what were called down in Kingston, some "riot trials" which took place in the Kingston Penitentiary. I became connected with them in a very peculiar way. I was walking through the lobby of the Court House in Kingston one day when the jailer told me there was a man charged in connection with the "riot trials" in the penitentiary, who had said he would like a lawyer.

First of all, I was not very interested in seeing him, because at the time I was busy. Then I thought to myself, "I had better go," and I did. They said to me, "Why don't you go out to the Kingston 'pen' and see the 35 or 37 men? They are separated, incarcerated in what is now the female prison, and they might want you to defend them."

I said to these 2 men the reason I had not gone out, was for the simple reason I had not been asked. I was told at the time the Warden of the day had made representations that I was not interested, was not available and could not be reached.

A day or two ago the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) made a reference about me. He said I was "beginning to mellow." I am only "mellow" when people do not get in my way and step on me. When I want to go forward, when I believe something is right and sincere in my belief, it does not make any difference to me if the crowd is against me. Principle is something which is worthwhile. I have not "mellowed," may I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition and to my colleagues in this House, if something comes up and I believe I am right, they will hear from me.

I believed at the time of the riot trials things were wrong with relation to the administration of justice insofar as they concerned federal institutions. The "whitewash brush" was out, the paint mixed, and the Department of Justice did not want anyone in there. The judges were going to hurry these cases along. I thought to myself, "You won't hurry very much, because I will elect trial by jury." Since I was defending all the accused persons, I could only be in one court at one time. The Department of Justice realized that they had someone with whom to contend, who put principle ahead of everything else.

A County Court Judge, His Honour George E. Burtch of Belleville, who had courage and independence, made a finding that the riots, so-called, which took place in the Kingston Penitentiary so many years ago, started out as a peaceful demonstration, to bring to the attention of the Department of Justice certain wrongs, the righting of which were long past due, from the point of view of investigation. As a result of His Honour's findings in these trials, and the outstanding leadership given by the late Harry Anderson and the Globe, and Rupert Davies, now Senator, of the Kingston Whig-Standard, who brought these facts to light, the government of the day was afraid not to appoint a commission, and they did appoint a 3-man commission known as the "Archambault Commission." I gave evidence before that commission because I thought there were wrongs which needed to be made right. That is how that commission came about.

One of the members of the Archambault Commission was Mr. J. C. McRuer, who is now the Chief Justice of the High Court of the Province of Ontario. To him, this afternoon, I would like to pay my respects, in that he came before our committee and submitted himself to questioning in a fearless and frank manner, answering, as best he could, questions regarding the problems we had in relation to penal reform. It is interesting to note that the Minister of Justice of Canada has appointed him as one of a committee of 5 to investigate federal institutions.

For some reason that I will never be able to understand, the committee would not, when I suggested it, come down and inspect the Kingston Penitentiary and the Collins Bay Penitentiary, because I saw improvements in those institutions as a result of the Archambault Report. When we were in Ottawa one day interviewing the Minister of Justice, hon. Stuart Garson, I suggested to him that a committee of 3, consisting of the CCF Leader (Mr. Grummett), the Liberal House Leader (Mr. Oliver) and the chairman of our committee, the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart), should go down and inspect the Kingston and Collins Bay Penitentiaries. They could see for themselves what was taking place there: teaching the men trades as against laziness, teaching men to have some self-respect, which, after all, is most important in penal institutions.

Mr. Speaker, I want to say a word about the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Foote). I am satisfied that the institutions in the Province of Ontario, from the point of view of food and care of the inmates, is good. Outside of Brampton, I think our institutions are nothing but places to encourage laziness. I do not think there is very much progress being made with relation to teaching men trades, and I want to say that insofar as my colleague and friend, the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions is concerned, I think he took over a most discouraging portfolio, and I think the "mess" he assumed to try and straighten out, was something that is beyond description. I can only say, as a member supporting the government of the day, that I do hope the courage for which the hon. Minister was recognized, in the hour when the nation needed brave men, will remain with him until such time as he has a chance, with courage and faith in himself, to bring into effect some of the reforms which we have recommended.

The hon. Minister has never had a chance. He has not been there long enough to put the great policies and principles into effect. I want to make it very clear, that no matter what is contained in the report in relation to Reform Institutions, it is not critical of the hon. Minister, who has not yet had an opportunity to right the glaring wrongs which should have been attended to long before this.

Another point I would like to mention is that it seems to me there are 4 great principles which have to be considered in relation to Reform Institutions in the Province of Ontario: probation, parole, vocational training, and alcoholism. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. Attorney-General, that I think he should bring in an amendment to the Liquor Control Act at this session, providing, in the case where a man has been intoxicated 3 times within a year, he should not be sent to a reformatory for 3 months, but the sentence should be a year or such less period of time as the presiding magistrate, in his opinion, thinks should be the sentence of the court, having regard to all the circumstances. It is my view that at the present time this 3-months' period, where people go in and out for being intoxicated, come out no better than when they went in, and to try and save them, their sentences should be sufficiently long so they could go to the hospital where alcoholics can be treated and cured.

Mr. Speaker, may I say I think the idea of sending people in for 3 months is a waste of time, energy and money. I say that the hon. Attorney-General will make no mistake in recommending to this House a "jacking up" of a sentence to help these people, so that they can be treated and cured against the desire over which apparently they have no control. Therefore, I think that will be a proper amendment.

Another thing I want to say to the hon. Attorney-General and to the hon. Prime Minister is this: I think the hon. Prime Minister, as soon as possible, having regard to the fact that amendments to the Criminal Code are now being considered by the Federal Government, should make a special trip to Ottawa to meet with the hon. Prime Minister of Canada who will be returning to Ottawa within the next 24 hours, and with whatever advisors they may each choose to have associated with them at the time, and consider amending the Criminal Code so that all people in Ontario reformatory who are there serving a definite sentence can be granted parole, when the Ontario Parole Board deems it expedient that should be done.

I take the position with some fervour that we have the custodial care over the inmates of these institutions, and we should be able to release them at a time and on conditions we think proper. The Ticket-of-Leave Act is cumbersome and, in some cases, administered by some people who are inefficient. If we are going to constitute a new Parole Board, the sooner we can do it and deal with our own prisoners the better for them and for us.

It is all very well for us to talk about "parole" and "probation" and "trades," but there is something a little bit more important than that, of which we must never lose sight, and it has been something I have been asking myself ever since I have been on this committee. What is coming over the youth of this province? They are committing so many terrible crimes. Where is society breaking down? It is all very well to talk about "parole" and "probation," but let there be no misunderstanding that, because we believe in those basic principles, we are going to encourage crime.

Every day you pick up newspapers and read about serious crimes against one another, murder, manslaughter, and all kind of things. I say perhaps the fault lies with the homes, perhaps education, perhaps our newspapers, perhaps the movies, perhaps magazines, I do not know. However, the thing which arrests my attention is the serious increase of crime in this country. It cannot be blamed on post-war conditions. That period is over. But, for some reason or another, the youths are not growing up, as I see it. Maybe it is the zoot-suiter, I do not know. But there is a complete disregard for law and order, and just how it is going to be dealt with is something which gives me grave concern.

Mr. Speaker, I also want to say, if I may, that if we are going to have in this country an economic slump, then it necessarily follows, as day follows night, that there is going to be a surplus of labour on the market, in relation to employment, which means that the employer will not take men who have been in a reform institution, if he can get men who have not been in such a place. Therefore, I say we must try to teach the men in these reform institutions some sort of trade so when they are released, they will be able to compete with their fellow men, from the point of view of employment.

Another point I would like to mention, and about which I was thoroughly disgusted, was the fact that they discharge prisoners from our reform institutions on a Friday. That is utterly ridiculous. There is no sense in it, because the men come down to the large centres for the week-end with little or no money in their pockets, and by Monday they are broke, and in trouble again. If I were running that department, I say with respect to the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions, I would never discharge a man after Wednesday, and I would see to it that he not only had a ticket to the place to which he wanted to go, to try and re-establish himself, but that sufficient money, somehow or other, could be given to him to keep him in funds until the following Monday. I would agree with the philosophy that "sometimes the long way around is the shortest way home," and this idea of giving these men $25 or $30, in my opinion, is very bad policy.

Those are things which I recommend for the consideration of the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions.

In conclusion, I want to say as a member of the committee—which was an all-Party committee—we may have had a sharp divergence of views on one subject or another, but in the main, when we brought in our report it was with a common united front. I hope that this time next year, those of us who are spared to be in this House will look forward with satisfaction, and indeed anticipation, to see what principles and recommendations we have made, have been brought into effect.

MR. S. F. LEAVINE (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker, in rising to participate in the discussion on this report of the Select Committee, I do so with some concern, following the able presentation by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle).

I think it would be only fair to state that I found the chairman of that committee all that could be desired; in fact, possibly a little more than what could be desired at times, insofar as getting work out of individuals was concerned. All the members of the committee were competent and quite willing to do their share of the work.

I suppose the findings which were made are now general knowledge, the submissions which were presented to this committee at their various sittings, and the journeys we made, even into far-off lands, but I would like to mention one phase in particular which I do not think has received sufficient mention, and that is the Menlo Park experiment which was mentioned last session by the hon. Minister of Reform Institutions.

Menlo Park, of course, as you may very well know, is a diagnostic centre in New Jersey, one in which they make an attempt to evaluate scientifically the likelihood of reclaiming each individual. So far, they only have beds or rooms for youngsters, and in that sense they resemble ourselves, as they have not reached the point of being able to accommodate adults.

The youngsters are taken there with very excellent case histories presented by social workers—possibly by their pastors or priests and teachers—and by the local police, and submitted to the superintendent, who, in this particular institution, happens to be a psychiatrist of rather unusual ability.

There is one particular means they have in New Jersey of getting people of outstanding ability for outstanding jobs, and that is by granting the Director of Welfare for the city the right to go out and hire the best possible men he can find. They are also able to make some allowance for previous experience and qualifications. On this particular occasion they obtained a man from the City of New York who had been very successful in practice, and who was very enthusiastic about the task with which he was entrusted. He was allowed to gather his own staff. This consisted of an assistant superintendent, who happened to be surgeon prior to his becoming interested in this work, a couple of psychologists and teachers, and, in a consultant capacity, two nationally-known psychologists.

When a case is presented, it is presented very much as it would be before a board. The man who has been working on the case makes his suggestions as to the likely cause of the trouble, and how it may be solved. He then has to stand up to the counter-suggestions from every other member, and at the end of this joint discussion, they come up with something very much, I presume, in the way that the Select Committee itself presented a composite report, consisting of all the best ideas of which members had thought.

And before an individual is sentenced or returned to his original place of detention, this report goes with him, and the courts follow its recommendations to such an extent that this panel may recommend the individual be paroled or placed on suspended sentence, perhaps, even, for the full period of his lifetime, or for 10 or 20 years.

It may be quite natural I should be more interested in the diagnostic possibilities of the reclamation of juveniles. That is not to say there is no possibility of salvaging a fair proportion of the older people. Under this particular plan the adults are treated as out-patients, which necessitates their making a number of visits to the institution. There are a number of very agreeable things in connection with this hospital, not the least of which was the genuine admiration and respect shown to the members of the staff by the youngsters who were being diagnosed. I am in agreement with the previous speaker that much has been done in Ontario on behalf of reform. I would not be too critical of that which has taken place in the immediate past, but I suggest that if we were to go back into our history, we would find the first great attempt was made by the then Provincial Secretary, hon. Mr. Hanna, I believe it was. Since then we have tried to advance a great deal, but we have done it by fits and starts, departures, first in one direction, and then in another. Then we have slowed down. Possibly we have not co-ordinated these various measures as we should have done. I believe that given such co-ordination we could expect, even with our present plan, and even with only a partial acceptance of the recommendations of this committee, that the outlook for those who are unfortunate enough to be in our institutions will be much better. Diagnosis will improve, and certainly the cost to the people of Ontario will be much less and the citizens of this province will have much greater cause for satisfaction.

I make this apology. The assistant Whip said some hon. members had better speak on this subject, and I think my duty is done.

MR. T. PRYDE (Huron): The hon. member for Waterloo North (Mr. Leavine) intimated that he was not given too much notice that he would be required to say something in connection with this report, but we know he is always prepared, and he has made a contribution which, I am sure, all hon. members feel was worthwhile.

When the chairman of our committee made his report to the House, he indicated that the committee worked on an entirely non-partisan basis. We all worked together with the idea of bringing in a report to this House which would be of benefit to the reform institutions of the province.

The chairman also intimated the various members of the committee had been allocated certain fields of work, to which they were to give particular attention. When he first allocated the tasks, he gave me the task of reporting on the quarries. I think, possibly, we all had the idea that there would be a great deal of hard labour done in the reform institutions and that there would be quarries all over the place. This turned out not to be the case. There is only one quarry in operation, and that is at Burwash. We soon discovered that the hon. member for Renfrew South (Mr. Dempsey) knew a great deal more about quarries than I did, and he undertook to pay particular attention to them, and I will let him make his own speech on that aspect of the investigation.

I was next given the task of reporting particularly on the industries in the institutions. Information about these is contained in the report and I do not wish to take up a great deal of time in discussing them. I would like, however, to bring just a few of these activities to the notice of hon. members.

In considering these industries, there is a division of labour to be taken into account. There are industries which are producing things of value. And there are other activities which come under the heading of "vocational training." But for each man learning a trade there are many who are beyond the age where they can acquire a new skill. A great many men are just semi-skilled or unskilled. A great many of them are engaged in agriculture and forestry, and other employments which may require some skill but do not call for it to the same extent as if the men were employed in, for example, a machine shop.

I think most hon. members are aware that in Guelph we have a very efficient plant turning out licence plates for the Department of Highways. They are turning out in the neighbourhood of 1,750,000 plates annually. They employ about 50 men, and we came to the conclusion that they were fully employed, and that this was a very efficient operation. There is also a very efficient abattoir where 35 head of cattle and 50 pigs a week are processed, on an average, for the use not only of Guelph but other government institutions across the province.

Then there is also at Guelph a very efficient cannery which employs a great many men during the canning season and throughout the remainder of the year. This factory turns out 2,500,000 lbs. of produce a year. There is also a machine shop and a factory where office furniture, school desks and articles of that nature are made. They also have a woollen mill which turns out a great number of articles each year, in addition to a laundry which handles 670,000 articles a year, and a bakery which produces 312,000 loaves.

In Mimico there is a brick and tile plant which is considered one of the most modern in the province. We were much impressed by the efficiency with which this plant was conducted and with the work it produced. They are very fortunate in having very easy clay deposits with which to work, and they produce a tremendous number of bricks and tiles.

I turn now to the reformatory at Brampton. This is not a productive project. The work engaged in there is more in the nature of vocational training. In other places, such as Burwash, the work is mostly farm work, and it was not my particular duty to report on those activities. In the institutions to which I have referred, unskilled men are employed in industry under the supervision of skilled instructors.

I do not think we should minimize the importance of these activities. They are turning out a tremendous amount of goods which are of value to the province. The committee reported on the fact that these goods are sold to other governmental departments. They also feel that they are not getting full credit for the goods produced, and I believe it was incorporated in our report, that consideration should be given to the Department of Reform Institutions receiving credit for the market value of goods which are produced. It would not mean a loss to anyone; it would only mean a bookkeeping entry, but it would give the department credit for producing something of value, and it would not appear to be entirely a spending department.

There is one other thing upon which I must comment, which was included in our report, and endorsed by everyone on the committee. That is in regard to the question of "probation." I have found that a great many people are confused over the meaning of "probation." Apparently a great many magistrates will impose suspended sentences, and when an accused is placed on suspended sentence, he more or less takes it for granted he is discharged, as he had not been sent to jail, or made to pay a fine. That is the wrong impression altogether, and the wrong attitude.

The committee felt that a magistrate should be allowed to place a man, not on suspended sentence, but on probation, where he would come under the supervision of trained probation officers, which would—to use a phrase used quite often in the committee—"take the pressure off the front doors of the institutions." With that I heartily agree, and we were very glad to see the suggestion is being acted upon, and that an increase has been made in the number of probation officers throughout the province.

We were told on many occasions there was a great need for segregation. The report has been discussed in the press and by others. The report covered many things and made many suggestions. But everything is not all wrong within the institutions. There is a great deal that is right within them, but we may be overlooking that.

Segregation is one of the things which has been proposed as being of great importance, and with that, I heartily agree. But segregation can only be carried out if you have the money to go ahead and make the necessary changes, to make provision for proper segregation, and that can only be brought about when we have an aroused and enlightened public opinion. I feel sure the report by the committee will be of great value in arousing public opinion to the seriousness of the whole problem, and that government support should be given to the reformatory measures, and by that, I mean in regard to the expenditure of public money.

The hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) has again included a certain sum of money for the Department of Reform Institutions. That will provide for a certain amount of work, but it will not provide for the necessary expansion which has been recommended. I do not think anybody expects that.

The reason I bring that up is that we can only go as fast as public opinion dictates in this matter.

I would like to put a hypothetical question to the hon. members of this House and let them answer it each in his own mind.

For instance, if the hon. Provincial Treasurer had said, "We have $9 million to spend on reform institutions, and $15 million we are going to set aside for grants to municipalities to reduce their tax rates, but I will leave it to this House, and will reverse the figures, if so directed, and we will take $9 million and give it to the municipalities to reduce their tax rates, and give $15 million to reform institutions, which means we would give less to the municipalities to reduce tax rates, and give more to the institutions."

I think all hon. members can answer that question without hesitation.

I suppose that means when the public is aroused, and willing to back up the government in regard to the expenditure of money for reform institutions, for the erection of new buildings, and so forth, then will they be able to carry out a greater degree of segregation. I have no doubt then but that the department will receive the necessary money.

MR. SALSBERG: A little will help along now.

MR. PRYDE: I know there is another member of the committee who wishes to say something, and I will only draw attention to one other phase of the work of reform institutions which I think deserves special credit, and that is the Alex Brown Memorial Clinic and hospital at Mimico for the treatment of alcoholics.

It is a pioneering project. There were no examples by which to go; it is the brain-child of the present hon. Minister of Reform Institutions (Mr. Foote), and has been instituted since he became Minister. I always believe credit should go to where it is due, and I do think that a real effort is being made there to do something for those poor individuals who are unable to overcome their excessive use of alcohol, and I believe we should keep in mind that this being a pioneer project, the Department of Reform Institutions of Ontario will be able to show to other jurisdictions just how valuable it is, and I am sure it will be emulated elsewhere.

I would like to draw this to the attention of the House, Mr. Speaker, because I think it is something of which we should be very proud.

I was very happy to be a member of this committee, Mr. Speaker, and to serve under the energetic chairmanship of the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart). Much has been said about his leadership and his drive. He was known to the individual members of the committee as a "slave driver," which may sound rather rough, but he never "spared the horses," so to speak, because he was at this work early and late, never sparing himself, and I do think we should give a great deal of credit to the hon. member for Parkdale for the production of this report.

It was a very happy experience for me, and I think I may conclude by saying that perhaps I did not contribute a great deal to the efforts of the committee, but I learned a great deal from my work on it, and I am quite sure, as the government has time to study this, and it gets public opinion behind it, more money will be devoted in the years ahead toward the improvement of these institutions.

In the meantime, I would like to say that I believe the department is doing a grand job with what it has available. We should keep in mind they are using many old buildings of a temporary nature. That has been cited by other speakers, and is contained in the report.

A portion of the report is taken up with considering a greater system of segregation, and it seems the matters of diagnosis treatment and segregation are the two essential things, but they cannot be carried out until more buildings are available, and it would seem that the people at the present time would rather see the government spending more money on hospitals and schools than building palatial homes for prisoners.

I am quite sure the report will be very valuable in the years which lie ahead.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on this subject. I see our time is getting short, and while usually I do not take up too much of the time of the House, I would have liked to have had about an hour to speak on this subject, but I will try to crowd it into about 7 minutes.

When we approached this work, at our first meeting, we found we had a tremendous task ahead of us. I think every member of the committee realized the terrific problems which faced us, and we were very fortunate indeed in having the sort of chairman we had. He was most progressive, and put more time on this work than perhaps anyone else would. He put his entire energy into this work, and worked almost day and night, and apparently was not able to think of anything else except prison reform.

We toured around, and looked at the institutions, and then compared ours with some of those in the United States. We even went to Montreal and looked at the institutions there, after we had completed our visits in this province, and I believe, Mr. Speaker, if this report be studied, and implemented, it will provide something which will be for the benefit of the Province of Ontario.

I do not feel, as other people seem to, that we should spare money when trying to help these unfortunates in our institutions. The idea was to try and keep them out of jail, and I think a great deal can be done in that regard.

The question of crime is becoming a big problem in Ontario, and is requiring large expenditures, in caring for these people in our institutions, and I believe there should be some plan formulated in this province whereby we can reduce the number of inmates in these institutions, and instead of having to build more institutions, we will find that we already have enough.

I believe in segregation, keeping the "bad boys" away from those who are not quite so bad, and I believe in giving the young fellows a chance, and if he be a first offender, instead of sending him to jail, give him even 2 or 3 chances. If it is possible, we should keep them out of the jails, and we should have more people interested in seeing that they obtain work, and are able to look after themselves. But if they do get into an institution, when they get out there should be somebody there to look after them. You are well aware of the fact that society turns against those who have been in institutions, and it is very difficult for them to get employment. The government itself will not hire anyone who has been in jail, the railroads will not, and none of the big companies, and there are those in our society who never want to have anything to do with them at all.

I think the general public should bend over backwards to help these fellows, and give them a "break," and to assist them, by having those from the outside world talk to them, endeavour to do something for them, and not turn them down, saying, "Oh, he is just a jailbird." I believe we should help any man who is even temporarily down. In that, the general public can do more than anybody else.

In our tours of inspection, we found the places very well kept, good food provided, everything kept in a clean condition, and we heard no "kicks" about cleanliness, nor about the food.

The question of idleness is one of the things which strikes me as being very important. We should find more work for these people to do. The taxpayers have to foot the bills, and I think work should be provided for those men who have to go to the institutions.

You will find quite a number who like to go in, because they are well fed, are provided with good accommodations, and so on.

There has been something said about "hard labour." I would not like to be considered too tough, but I do think these people who are sent to these institutions should be made to work, and no doubt they would not like it quite so well. Some of these men really seem to like the jails, as they find them better than running the streets, and they are satisfied to stay there.

Another thing I would like to see would be the government taking over the jails in the province, because we have found places where there were only one or two prisoners, and yet they have to have an entire staff, including the governor, to look after a very few prisoners. In fact, I think there are some places where the figure went down to one prisoner.

I understand that in the jail in the riding of the hon. member for Huron (Mr. Pryde) it cost $12.80 a day to keep a prisoner in jail. For that money, they might better have brought him down and kept him in the Royal York Hotel. I firmly believe we should do away with that jail.

I think it would be much better, if the government would take these jails over, and then they could advise each of the counties what its share of the cost would be.

Mr. Speaker, I do not want to take up too much of the time of the House. I was very happy to be associated in the work, with the other members of the committee, which was a very representative one. We had a clergyman on the committee, two farmers, a doctor, two lawyers, and some competent business men, and I feel that we did a good job, which is what we set out to do. Certainly we were anxious to do our very best in every way possible.

I again want to pay tribute to our worthy chairman, the hon. member for Parkdale (Mr. Stewart) who worked so hard on this committee. He took it very much to heart. He is one of those who is like my father, if a man lost five minutes in the morning, and did not make it up all day, he had to stay up all night to catch up. I certainly enjoyed working with him, and he demonstrated in many ways his ability to do the job.

I was very pleased to see the institutions we visited well conducted, and under the management of capable people. I do hope this report will not be shelved as so many have been, but there will be something constructive done about it, because there is a great deal of good which can come out of it.

I do not think we will be wasting any money trying to save people from going to jail. I do not think we should look at the money angle at all. I believe when the hon. Minister comes here seeking a few thousand dollars, the government should be ready to give it to him, because they are really saving souls, which, to my mind, is much more important than mere dollars.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about this. I do not know whether I should do so now. It may require from 15 to 20 minutes.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest the hon. member for St. Andrew move the adjournment of the discussion.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the discussion.

Motion agreed to.

THE MENTAL HEALTH ACT,
1954

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves second reading of Bill No. 92, "The Mental Health Act, 1954."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I ask the permission of the House to have this bill referred to the Committee on Health.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MENTAL HOSPITALS ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves second reading of Bill No. 93, "An Act to amend The Mental Hospitals Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, again I would ask permission to refer this bill to the Committee on Health.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6 of the clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, MARCH 18, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: I have been asked to call the attention of the members of the Standing Committee on Private Bills to a special meeting of the committee, which will be held tomorrow morning at the hour of half-past nine, in Committee Room No. 1. A special meeting of the Standing Committee tomorrow in Committee Room No. 1, at half-past nine.

We are very glad today to welcome quite a number of representatives of schools and organizations to our Chamber, the 4-H Club of Paris Plains, the Port Perry Public School, the Humber Valley Village School, and the John A. Leslie Public School. It is always a fine opportunity for us to have you as our guests, and we sincerely hope that your visit with us this afternoon will prove to be profitable and educational.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. NICKLE (Kingston): I beg leave to present the sixth report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the committee's sixth report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 13, An Act respecting the City of Niagara Falls.

Bill No. 20, An Act respecting St. Michael's College.

Bill No. 30, An Act respecting the Town of Fort Erie.

Your committee begs to report the following bills without certain amendments:

Bill No. 9, An Act respecting the Township of Toronto.

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 20, An Act respecting St. Michael's College.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. JOHN ROOT (Wellington North): I beg leave to present the first report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Root from the Standing Committee on Agriculture presents the following as the committee's first report:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendments:

Bill No. 59, The Bees Act, 1954.

Bill No. 60, An Act to amend the Agricultural Societies Act.

Bill No. 61, The Plant Diseases Act, 1954.

Bill No. 62, An Act to amend the Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. W. H. Collings, the hon. member for the electoral district of Toronto Beaches, be appointed Chairman of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. 78, "An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly," in place of the late Mr. MacOdrum.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that, notwithstanding any application which rules 8, 9 and 14 may have to this motion, any Minister of the Crown when presenting his Estimates to the House, may occupy a seat in the front row of the House and may have his Deputy Minister and another member of his staff seated in front or adjacent to him to supply any information required by the Minister.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. A. Kelso Roberts, the hon. member for the electoral district of Toronto, St. Patrick, be appointed Chairman of the Standing Committee appointed to consider Legal Bills, in place of the late Mr. MacOdrum.

I may say, I have taken a little liberty with the wording there.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

THE PUBLIC HOSPITALS ACT

HON. MR. M. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Hospitals Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the purpose of this bill is to assist public hospitals financially, by increasing payments by municipalities for the hospital care and treatment of indigent patients.

If hon. members will look at the financial difficulties of hospitals in the last few years, they will find that in 1948, 119 hospitals operated at a net loss of $3.5 million. In 1949, it is estimated that the operating costs will exceed those of 1948 by some 10 or 12 per cent; or some $4 million to $4.5 million.

In 1953, although the figures are not yet available, it is understood the situation financially has become aggravated since 1950.

This amendment is for another purpose; to provide for a more equitable distribution of the incidence of cost. Municipalities in which hospitals are located, in practice, not only pay statutory rates for the care of indigent residents, but make contributions towards deficits incurred by hospitals in the care and treatment of indigent patients from outside the municipality.

It is interesting to observe that in 1948, municipalities voluntarily contributed $1,599,000, which is more than the amount the municipalities were required to pay when the municipal rates were increased in 1950.

It is universally agreed that the purchasing power of the Canadian dollar today is substantially less than it was in 1939. Economists suggest that in terms of purchasing power the dollar today is worth about 48 cents, as compared with the 1939 dollar. Today an indigent patient receives what he requires in the way of treatment, regardless of cost. There is no discrimination in the treatment received, in the maintenance supplied, nor in the type of surgery performed, between the rich and the poor. Medical services and hospital facilities are the same for both.

Medical knowledge has improved significantly since 1939. Surgical procedures are performed today which were unheard of 13 or 14 years ago. Rapid strides have also been made in the medical field, especially in what is known as antibiotic therapy, or so-called "wonder drugs."

All this will increase the statutory rates in our various hospital grades. Rates in our "A" hospitals—our university hospitals, of which we have 13 in this province—will be increased from $4 to $6 for indigent patients. In our "B" hospitals—those hospitals having 100 beds or more—rates will be raised from $3.50 to $5.25; in our "C" hospitals, hospitals of 100 beds and under, rates will be advanced from $3 to $4.50. Red Cross hospitals will come into the same category, and the convalescent chronic hospitals, where rates have been $2.50, will be increased by 50 per cent., making a new rate of $3.75.

THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS ACT

HON. MR. W. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Charitable Institutions Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, two of the principal amendments of this Act are in connection with capital grants on new construction, and payments in connection with maintenance costs.

We have found, over a period of years, that charitable institutions in this province have been doing remarkably good work. Their activities are very efficiently and very effectively administered and our policy is to encourage private organizations, religious groups, and similar bodies, not only to build new institutions, but also to persist in the job they are doing under existing circumstances.

Some time ago we introduced capital grants on new construction to charitable institutions at the rate of $1,000 per bed. This is in comparison with 50 per cent. which we were paying, in connection with the Homes for the Aged.

We hope that by increasing this grant from $1,000 to $2,000 per bed—which we propose to do at this time—we shall provide further encouragement to those charitable organizations which desire to build new accommodation for elderly people, and also for children who need that type of accommodation in this province. For a number of years the children's institutions in this province have been receiving the sum of 5 cents per day for each child. We propose at this time to bring this payment in line with the per diem payments we are making to charitable institutions which are taking care of elderly people, and in this amendment we are raising our per diem rates to 20 cents per day in respect of all children in institutions in the province.

THE MOTHERS' ALLOWANCE ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Mothers' Allowance Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, there is only one amendment of any significance in this bill. That is to simplify administration in connection with the payment of allowances to mothers whose children have reached 16 years of age, and will be continuing at school.

At the time of the last amendment to the Act, the House agreed to payment of a mothers' allowance to mothers whose children were continuing at school until they reached the age of 18. The practice which we followed was that the mother would receive her June cheque, but the cheques in respect of July and August would be withheld until our authorities had been able to ascertain whether or not the child would return to school.

We now feel, in the light of the experience we have gained in the administration of this allowance, that it would be better for us to ascertain prior to the closing of the school year whether a child proposes to continue at the school, in the following term or not.

If it is learned the child will be returning to school, under this amendment, we shall continue the allowance through July and August, and in September, when we have had verification that the child has returned to school, the allowance will be continued until the child reaches 18 years of age.

THE FARM PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Farm Products Marketing Amendment Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, as I intimated to the members of the Agricultural Committee yesterday when we were discussing the Dairy Industry Act, we are submitting an amendment to the Farm Products Marketing Act to make more specific the percentages required in connection with the taking of a vote on a farm marketing scheme.

Apparently, down through the years, since the Farm Products Marketing Act has been in effect, votes on marketing schemes have been more or less by "rule of thumb." It is felt that this places too much responsibility on the Minister, and though we do not feel at this time it would be advisable to stipulate in the Act just what those percentages should be, we are making provision by this amendment whereby we shall stipulate by regulation what percentage is required in order to carry a marketing scheme vote of the producers of any particular farm commodity.

The only other change of any significance is the introduction of a new section in connection with penalties. We felt that where a group of producers have properly reached an agreement as to minimum prices, any individual producer who may make some private arrangement to sell at less than the minimum price, should be liable to a penalty, and that any penalties which are imposed should be paid either to the commodity group or to the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

HON. G. ARTHUR WELSH: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the following to the House.

The 53rd annual report of the Ontario Northland Transportation Commission for the year ended December the 31st, 1953.

THE LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

HON. MR. C. DALEY moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill has been the result of very careful consideration of the Labour Relations Act, as it presently exists, and of the results obtained from past administration. It deals to a great extent with the interval which elapses during the course of conciliation. For some considerable time now, there has been criticism of the length of time which has been taken up by conciliation proceedings, and this bill endeavours to reduce the period of time. As a matter of fact, it has accomplished a saving of some 24 days.

It also gives to the Minister some permissive power to appoint, or not to appoint, a Board of Conciliation. That is quite a step in the administration of this Act. It proposes to recognize Trades Councils. We are getting now to a period when a great many unions endeavour to negotiate, as Trades Councils, particularly in the building construction industry. For a long time we have had employers' associations and we are now, by this Act, endeavouring to recognize Trades Councils, which are comprised of a group of unions.

In that connection it will not be necessary for each individual employer, or each individual union to have representation on bargaining committees.

One of the sections of the original Act is clarified to make sure that no trade union or employer can alter working conditions during the period of negotiations. It gives to the board the power to bar unsuccessful applicants, or anyone else, from making new applications for a period of at least 10 months. The purpose of this: supposing an application is made for certification, which is unsuccessful, and somebody else appears for the same group of employees. The result is, that sometimes the employer finds he is concerned with negotiations with the same employees, to whom certification was not granted.

The bill also liberalizes inclusions in connection with craft unions so that the board may include persons commonly associated in their work. For example, the operating engineers and the coal drivers. At present, operating engineers cannot include in their union, people who actually work normally with them. This measure would permit such inclusions in a bargaining unit. The bill also clarifies the position of guards in bargaining. It has always been a very contentious matter to define what a "guard" in industry actually is. This defines the meaning of the word.

Also, it will be an unfair practice, under this new legislation, for an employer or a union to bargain, or conclude an agreement, on behalf of employees who are already covered by an agreement with another trade union, or where bargaining rights have been established.

There are a great many other sections in this bill, and since I presume this will be covered again on second reading, I will conclude with those remarks.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Will the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) send this bill to the Standing Committee on Labour?

HON. MR. DALEY: This bill will be decided in the House.

MR. SALSBERG: Does that mean the hon. Minister will not send it to the Labour Committee?

HON. MR. DALEY: Exactly.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister refuses to send it. Is that the position?

MR. SPEAKER: The hon. Minister has said it will not go to the Labour Committee, and I take it that it will not.

MR. SALSBERG: Shame.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

THE PUBLIC PARKS ACT

HON. MR. G. H. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Public Parks Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Several municipalities have asked authority to combine the different park boards and playgrounds into one board to look after all the work, if they so desire, in a municipality. We are amending the Act so they can have either 3 or 5 members on the board. If they have 3, it will not be necessary to have any of the council on the board, but if they have 5 or more, they must have 2 representatives from the council.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: This is quite a lengthy bill, containing a number of amendments. This bill, together with the former one, will be sent to the committee.

MR. SALSBERG: To the Committee on Municipal Law?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister is setting a good example.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Assessment Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: The same applies here. Mr. Speaker. This bill will be referred to the committee.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I say I do not think it has been the sad duty of the leader of any Party in this House to announce during the session of the Legislature, the passing of three members in so short a period of time as some two and one-half weeks. I can assure you, sir, and the hon. members of this House, that I feel very keenly having to announce as a leader, or chieftain—if I may put it that way—of a Party, of the death of three warriors, two of them young men with all the possibilities of great futures before them, and the other a grand old veteran of his community and of this Chamber with a great record of public service to his credit.

As one who has enjoyed the type of warfare in which we have been engaged, in the House and elsewhere, it is with sadness that I recall—as an old soldier, going back some 40 years—other days when we were engaged, as young warriors in the armed forces of our country; which brings to mind that during that time, many comrades and friends have fallen around me. I do not think we ever become used to this, Mr. Speaker. On the contrary as we become older, we feel more painfully the force of these blows, and perhaps, to a greater extent, the void created by the passing of our friends. The ordeal is not lessened; it becomes greater. This afternoon, with these indelible memories—because they are imprinted on us all—it is with sorrow that I announce to the Legislature, the passing of Joseph Daniel Nault, the member for the constituency of Russell.

Over a period some very considerable time, the late Mr. Nault was plagued with indifferent health and his death occurred early this morning.

Of exemplary character, he has gone to his eternal reward. We find comfort in the thought that while he has left behind the things "temporal," he is fortified by the everlasting virtues of the things "spiritual."

It has been said that "the day of one's death is greater than the day of one's birth," and as the member deserved praise in his lifetime so, in the well-merited words which will be spoken by many in these circumstances about the late member, special mention might be made now of his record of public service.

He was first elected to the Ontario Legislature in 1948, and was the first member of our Party in 24 years to represent the great constituency of Russell in this House. He was chosen by the people of his constituency, among other things, because he was a veteran municipal leader. He served for 11 years as reeve of the council of the Municipality of Eastview, in addition to other years as a councillor, and in that capacity also sat for many years on the Carleton County Council.

Mr. Nault was a worthy representative of that constituency. He was very much at home in the great Party of which I have the honour to be Leader. Representing the fine French-Canadian folk who sent him to this Legislature, their culture and their ideals—he did so in a manner which won for him, and for them, the respect of all members of the House. Their confidence in him was indicated when he was returned to this House as their representative in the general elections of 1951. Truly he was a man of the people!

Employed by the Canadian National Railways, he had a fine record of service with that organization, and was highly esteemed by all those with whom he came in daily contact.

In this House today, we pay tribute to his memory, and the flag in front of the Parliament Buildings again, for the third time during this session, flies at half-mast for one of the hon. members of this House.

Our deep sympathy is extended to his sorrowing widow and her family, for it is by them the loss will be most keenly felt.

We salute our good friend and colleague, as he passes from this mortal scene, leaving behind him a great record of public service.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I would join with the hon. Prime Minister in paying tribute to another member of this Legislature. On three occasions within the last few weeks, and while this House has been in session, our members have been visited by Death, and today we mourn the passing of the late hon. member for Russell.

Mr. Nault was a kindly, unassuming man, a man truly, as the hon. Prime Minister said, of the people, one who understood their problems, who moved amongst them with an ease which perhaps many of us wish we possessed.

Mr. Nault, as we all remember, was not able to take a full part in the deliberations of this House, as he was restrained by failing health and illness, and was not able to participate in the debates, in a way in which he otherwise would have done.

I am sure we all share with the hon. Prime Minister in paying this tribute, and extending our sympathies to the family of the late Mr. Nault.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I wish to join with the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Leader of the Opposition in expressing our very great sympathy to the family of the late Mr. Nault.

As stated by the hon. Prime Minister, Mr. Nault was a representative of the French-Canadian people. Coming, as I do, from a riding almost 60 per cent. French-Canadian, I was interested in Mr. Nault, and spoke to him on every occasion I had the opportunity of meeting him. I found him a quiet, gentlemanly member, and I feel greatly his passing from this House today. I wish to extend to his family, our very great regret at his passing.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, for myself, I wish to extend my sympathies to the family of the late hon. member for Russell, to his many friends, and the Party with whom he was associated, and the government, which has lost a supporter.

It was my privilege during one session, to be a deskmate of the late member, and during that period I learned to admire and respect him for his gentleness and friendliness and his consideration for other people. It was then I learned of his long years of work in the trade unions amongst the railroad workers, something I had not known when I first met him in the House.

I am sure he would have wanted to have been with us during the last couple of years more frequently than he was. He was interested in all legislation, and sometimes, while it did look odd to me, yet it was true that he had a continuing interest in labour matters, even though he did not share my views, and was a supporter of the government of the day.

I am sure he will be missed by all of us.

MR. SPEAKER: Within the space of less than three weeks the hon. members of this House have been called upon to pay tribute to three of our colleagues who have been called from the cares and duties of this life. Today, we learn of the loss of Joseph Daniel Nault, the hon. member for Russell. Mr. Nault, while perhaps not too well known to many hon. members, was to those who knew him one of the most kindly, gentle and sincere men of our acquaintance. His quiet manner only carried his convictions that much further, and his simple sincerity attracted worth-while attention. Suffering from ill health for some years, he bore his affliction with courage, fortitude and faith. His influence will be greatly missed. To his family we extend our heartfelt understanding and our prayer is that they will find in God their sure refuge and strength. We are grateful for having known him.

May we observe one minute's silence please, in grateful recognition of the life of Joseph Daniel Nault.

One minute's silence; all members standing.

Almighty God, with Whom do live the spirits of those that depart hence, we most humbly beseech Thee to look in love and mercy upon the soul of Thy child, Joseph Daniel, whom Thou hast called from the cares and duties of this world, into Thine Eternal Presence. Grant that as we believe in the reality of Life Eternal, so too may we, his friends and associates, find comfort in that same knowledge for him. Graciously look upon those bereaved by their loss, and may they find in Thee—the God of all mankind—a sure refuge and strength in their time of sorrow. For all his weaknesses and shortcomings we beg Thy mercy. For all his good deeds performed in the midst of this world may he be a lasting memory of thanksgiving and may his human understanding add to the betterment of all with whom he came in contact. May he find Eternal Rest in Thine unbounded love. All of which we ask in the name and for the sake of Thy Son, Jesus Christ, who is the Resurrection and the Life. Amen.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to make a statement. I wish to announce that Mr. C. H. Nelson, former Chief Engineer of the Department of Highways, has been suspended for failure to co-operate with the Provincial Auditor and other officials in charge of the investigation. It was felt that Mr. Nelson's co-operation in this matter could have very greatly expedited the investigation, and his suspension is ordered until certain information is made available.

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Speaker, in connection with the investigation of certain contracts with the Department of Highways, I have been informed today that warrants were executed by the Provincial Police at 10.30 this morning, at the business premises of the following contractors:

Klimack Construction Limited
Standard Paving Limited
Fort York Construction Limited and examinations of the books and records seized are being made by Clarkson, Gordon & Company.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Are these in addition to the ones announced the other day, Mr. Speaker?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: That makes 9 or 10?

HON. MR. PORTER: There were 6, I believe. This makes 9.

MR. W. ELMER BRANDON (York West): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. members of this House, an article which appeared in the issue of Tuesday, March 16th, of this year, in the Toronto Globe and Mail. The article purported to be a report, in part, of a meeting of the Education Committee of this Legislature which was dealing with Bill No. 84, "The Schools Administration Act, 1954," and had under consideration at that particular time, section 4, which is the section of the bill dealing with school holidays.

The article in part reads as follows, under the caption: "M.M.P. Says Remembrance Day Only Half-Hearted Holiday."

Although Chairman Elmer Brandon (P.C.) York West, maintained Remembrance Day was a half-hearted holiday, the House Committee on Education yesterday voted to continue it as a school holiday.

Mr. Speaker, the article is correct in part, but it has an ambiguous, or two-fold meaning, which I think should be clarified to the hon. members of this House.

It is quite true that I did say that Remembrance Day appeared to be a half-hearted holiday, but may I be allowed to elaborate as to the details in that connection?

As we all know, over the years, Remembrance Day, as we now know it, was formerly called "Armistice Day," and it commemorated the signing of the Armistice at the end of World War I, at the eleventh hour of the eleventh day of the eleventh month, of the year 1918. Some 21 years after the signing of the Armistice, we found ourselves involved in World War II, which came to a conclusion in 1945, and subsequently the words, "Remembrance Day," became associated with both World Wars, I and II.

Mr. Speaker, the purpose which I had in mind in making the remarks which I did before the Committee on Education was to draw to the attention of the committee at the time that school holidays were being considered, how Remembrance Day could be better impressed upon the minds of our school children and the citizens of our country. Remembrance Day is one of the greatest of all holidays throughout the entire year. It is a holy day, rather than a holiday. It is a day wherein we commemorate the memory of those who made the supreme sacrifice and of those who have participated by way of sacrifice and effort to uphold those democratic principles which we, in this country, believe in and desire to protect.

The facts which I desired to bring forward at that time and which were expressed, were these: That it is a fact, unfortunately, that inasmuch as many of the people of this country take Remembrance Day as just another holiday and do not take part in municipal services where Remembrance Day services are held, by their attendance and by their participation. It is my belief and my opinion that Remembrance Day should be brought to the attention not only of the people of this province but the people of the Dominion of Canada, and in particular to the new Canadians who are coming into our midst every day.

The fact is that Remembrance Day is an institution of remembrance, as far as the people of Canada are concerned, as far as remembrance is concerned we desire from year to year to commemorate the memory of those who have gone before in battle, and have given the complete sacrifice, or of those who have suffered physical or personal injury as a result of their war services.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, that as far as Remembrance Day is concerned it is with regret that I bring to the attention of the hon. members of this House that it is not observed the way I think it should be. I think that something perhaps should be done by way of suggestion to the several Boards of Education throughout the country as well as other groups by way of preparing a programme whereby the children in our schools might the more readily be enabled to appreciate and be fully informed as to what Remembrance Day is, and in order that they might participate in services of the kind.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

THE TERRITORIAL DIVISION ACT

HON. MR. PORTER, in the absence of Mr. Dunbar, moves third reading of Bill No. 32, "An Act to amend The Territorial Division Act."

Motion agreed to: third reading of the bill.

THE OPERATING ENGINEERS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DALEY moves third reading of Bill No. 54, "An Act to amend The Operating Engineers Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to: third reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

HON. MR. PORTER, in the absence of Mr. Dunbar, moves third reading of Bill No. 56, "An Act to amend The Municipal Act."

Motion agreed to: third reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS QUIETING ORDERS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER, in the absence of Mr. Dunbar, moves third reading of Bill No. 70, "An Act to amend The Municipal Corporations Quieting Orders Act."

Motion agreed to: third reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL DRAINAGE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER, in the absence of Mr. Dunbar, moves third reading of

Bill No. 71, "An Act to amend The Municipal Drainage Act."

Motion agreed to; third reading of the bill.

THE VITAL STATISTICS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER, in the absence of Mr. Dunbar, moves third reading of Bill No. 72, "An Act to amend The Vital Statistics Act."

Motion agreed to; third reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in connection with these third readings may I mention to the hon. members of the House that the passage of the bills on third reading leaves the legislation then in the position that it only requires the assent of His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor to make it law, unless there are other provisions in the bill itself.

I am not sure I will call upon His Honour to enter this House between now and prorogation to give assent to the legislation which has been already passed, but I might say that it is always possible. I would not want any hon. member of this House to feel the fact that third reading has been given to any bill would mean it would not be assented to until the prorogation of the House. As a matter of fact, we have very often in the past brought in His Honour to give assent to legislation so that immediate effect might be given to it.

I do not see anything at the moment to make it desirable to ask His Honour to do that in connection with any of the present legislation, but, owing to the fact that the point was raised in the House the other day during my absence, I make that plain, that His Honour might, for instance, come here tomorrow and assent to bills which have been passed if it should be in the public interest to do so.

Mr. Speaker, I beg to move that you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Before putting that motion, may I point out to the hon. members that the passage of this motion under these circumstances in no way constitutes a vote of confidence. As a matter of fact, if the government were unable to sustain the assaults of the Opposition in connection with the passing of the budget, then, of course, the motions which will be made from now on relative to the Estimates of course would not be effective. However, this is a procedure, I would point out to the House, that we adopted some few years back to facilitate the orderly consideration of the Estimates.

It used to be years ago that the Estimates were never considered until the budget was adopted by the passage of the supply motion, and that resulted in the consideration of the Estimates being left until the last two or three days of the session. I recollect some occasions on which the House sat all day to consider Estimates, all of which were put through within a period of some 12 hours. Sometimes we sat all night to do that. We felt that was completely undesirable and there should be the opportunity for an orderly consideration of the Estimates, and a technical matter should not stand in the way.

Therefore, I point out to the hon. members of this House, and particularly to the hon. members of the Opposition, that the adoption of this motion in no way takes away from their constitutional right to defeat the government if they can raise the necessary force.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply, Mr. Dent in the Chair.

THE CHAIRMAN: Supplementary Estimates of the Province of Ontario for the fiscal year ending March 31, 1954. Vote No. 1, 205.

MR. OLIVER: On the First Vote, in 205, Mr. Chairman, when the hon. Prime Minister was delivering his Budget Address, he drew the attention of the House to the very great importance of the facilities for teaching dentistry in this province. He said in Canada, there are only 5 dental colleges, the largest of which is in Ontario. However, with Ontario's growth in population alone, extension is necessary, and with the demands of some other provinces, the need is immensely magnified.

I would like to say this, Mr. Chairman, that it seems to me from what I have been able to learn—and there will be those in this House more conversant with the situation that I am—that it is almost a mistake of the government to grant to the present dental college $1 million for increasing and extending the present facilities.

There are two points which are raised in one's mind when discussing this grant of $1 million to extend the present facilities. In the first place, it would mean that we are, in a sense, perpetuating what may be at the moment an unsatisfactory condition so far as housing and accommodation of the dental faculty is concerned. It would, in the second place, keep the building there in perpetuity if we are going to try to renovate or improve it. It would mean a stabilization of that institution on that particular site for many years to come.

I would like to know from the government if they are satisfied that this building as it is presently located is adequate and if it is, in their judgment, sound economy and wise spending of the public money to add to this institution; or, rather, does the hon. Prime Minister not think it would be better to start building a new faculty of dentistry away from the present site, into which could be woven all that science has provided during the years, to have it up-to-date, and to have a faculty of which the people of Ontario would be proud, and one which would serve the dentistry profession better than the present building is able to do?

HON. MR. FROST: The question of the hon. Leader of the Opposition is a very fair one. Here is the problem: we are faced, not only in Ontario, but right across Canada, in some places more acutely than here, with a very critical shortage of dentists. The problem which faces us is this: if you go to a new site now, you have involved in that, the construction which probably would run into a commitment of $5, $6, or $7 million. When you are spending that amount of money, you have to make sure you are right.

You will readily see that the planning of such an institution as that would probably, with the present pressure on architectural services in Ontario, require a study of the technical men which would involve a year's time before anything was done, as a matter of fact, after that, there would be the construction of the building.

It seemed to us that with the present Royal Dental College, we all admit, there are inadequacies, but how do you make progress in the most rapid way? We felt the method to progress the more rapidly is to make an addition or additions to that building. The building itself does not become useless by any means. It can be used for other purposes; and by that method, you make the most rapid approach, and you are able to get into the production, as it were, of more dentists more quickly than you would if you took the other course, with all the delays which there must necessarily be in a matter of that sort.

MR. NIXON: How adequate are the grounds?

HON. MR. FROST: Of course, the expropriation of certain property will be required, but that has been canvassed, and I do not think it should preclude the planning and building of a completely new building in the course of time, because with the extension of the Toronto University, these buildings can readily be used. That does not, as I say, stand in the way of the future building of a completely new plant.

May I point out to the hon. members the unbelievable difficulties there are when you get into the construction of a place of that sort. The Cancer Institute, which is mentioned later in these Estimates, is a case in point. Part of the problem in connection with the Cancer Institute has come about because of the difference in views of expert people in connection with that problem. You have certain people, doctors and others, who take a certain point of view; others adopt a completely different attitude. A settlement of all that, before you actually give it over to the architects, involves time to iron out all the difficulties and see what the correct approach is.

The minute you start out into a brand new dental college and building, you are going to be faced with the inevitable differences which should, in all common sense, be settled before you proceed with the building.

We felt that we would proceed more rapidly, at the same time, not lose our money, because the building may be used by the Toronto University which is going to require added accommodation about 1960. It is inevitable that we will be able to use that, and it will provide the opportunity, first to plan, and then to decide the right course to take, with a very large sum of public money.

I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition—and I know he will agree because he has obviously read the budget statement with relation to it—it would give an opportunity to the Federal Government, by providing a place where they could extend their health grants and assistance, because we are helping to bear the burden.

MR. OLIVER: They are not doing too badly.

HON. MR. FROST: That may be, but remember we are bearing the burden for the country in connection with this. I am not one of those who thinks it is an interference with our constitutional rights to accept a grant in connection with the dental college. I would be delighted to accept it, and I leave the door wide open for such an offer.

MR. OLIVER: Can the hon. Prime Minister tell me whether this money is to be used for renovation, or for a new addition, or for what purpose?

HON. MR. FROST: We have discussed this with the Board of Governors of Toronto University and we specify nothing in that regard. We give them $1 million to assist them to produce more dentists.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the government to help me out.

HON. MR. FROST: I would be delighted.

MR. SALSBERG: I am somewhat bewildered by the supplementary Estimates. Not that I have any objection to the $1 million we are due to give to the dental college. I think it is a very good idea. But I am wondering what yardstick the government used in deciding to dispose of these enormous surpluses which they obviously did not know how to dispose of otherwise. It does look to me as if the hon. Treasurer (Mr. Frost) and his immediate aides were closeted in a room with surpluses continuing to pour in on them while they were nervously seeking ways to hide or get rid of some of this revenue they had not counted on getting.

How did they arrive at this decision to put $17 million into the Highways Fund and to devote nothing toward a supplemental allowance for old-age pensioners? It is quite obvious that one is certainly as important as the other. To my mind the latter is of greater importance. Thousands of aged citizens are struggling to "get by" on an allowance which keeps them at starvation level, and one might imagine with such a surplus something would be done for them. But, in fact, nothing is done. Yet there is this fairly large sum of $17 million which is allocated to highways.

To take another item: $1 million is provided in the supplemental Estimates for the Public Service Superannuation Fund. I have no objection to the government doing that. But having done so, why did it not think of setting aside the necessary amounts to take care of the most deserving section of the retiring teachers who are compelled, because of the whole background of our retirement fund system, literally to starve?

These are the teachers who served our people and helped to raise the generation which is now active, including some of the hon. members of this House. I know that some of my former public school teachers are now existing on a pittance simply because the fund, as established at that time, was inadequate. How does the government explain, rationally and reasonably, the disposition of such a large surplus, when it fails to include such vital needs as those of the teachers, old-age pensioners and similar groups?

This is the reason for my bewilderment. I would be thankful if the hon. Treasurer would explain the logic of his conclusions, and the yardstick that he used, so that hon. members may have a more intelligent understanding of what is being done.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I despair of being able to rescue the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) from the bewilderment and confusion in which he finds himself. I may say to hon. members that the matter of the introduction of supplementary Estimates here in this House is a development of responsible government. In other words, instead of making the expenditure and then coming to the House and saying the money has been spent, the government has been living within the votes granted by the Legislature last session. That is good parliamentary and constitutional practice. I feel that we are coming here, telling the House what we propose to do, and asking the House for its authority to go ahead.

In connection with the other part of the question by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg), these Estimates, which are before the House, are all to provide an investment in the future of our great province. They are designed to do that. As a matter of fact, inasmuch as they are paid for out of ordinary revenue, they are, nevertheless, a continuation and an expansion of our policy of paying as much as we can of capital expenditures from ordinary revenue.

As I pointed out to the House when the budget was brought in, in the last 10 years we have succeeded in paying something over 65 per cent. of our capital commitments from ordinary account. We are living at present in days of great expansion and development—a process which I know hon. members of this House will agree has been contributed to by the action of this government. We have been in the forefront of expanding our province and of course, with the expansion that has taken place, we have been able to increase our revenues without increasing taxes.

In these days I think it is a matter of wise policy to take these things and invest them in the betterment of the province. What better thing could we do, for instance, than vote $4½ million, approximately, to our universities, to enable them to meet the stresses and strains which we know are going to come, half-a-dozen years from now? To give to our public general hospitals, that are doing a great job, monies they can apply on debts or the rehabilitation of their buildings?

The same applies, sir, to superannuation. May I point out, it is a matter of strengthening the resources or the funds upon which these matters depend.

In connection with old-age pensions, this government could introduce a supplementary type of pension which the honourable Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) knows full well would be the root and genesis of dissatisfaction. We did that some years ago when some of the hon. members now here were not in the House. May I inform them that fully three-quarters of the speeches of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)—and they were not short speeches either—were directed against the iniquities of the supplementary payments. We got away from that around 1950, or thereabouts, and I never want to get into it again, if for no other reason than to avoid having to listen to the interminable speeches of the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) on that particular subject.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): The Honourable Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) will hear more now.

HON. MR. FROST: Our position is this. Old-age pensions are a national matter. Pensions to those over 70 are payable without a means test, and this government had a major hand in obtaining that for our people. Pensions for those between 65 and 69 are payable on a partnership basis, fifty-fifty under federal regulations. Shortly, pensions for disabled persons are going to be payable in the same way, I assume. The hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) can tell us about that.

If the Federal Government raises the level of pensions from $40 to $50, or whatever it may be, then we will be pleased to pay our share of the "shot". I can assure you, sir, that this business of going back to where we were a few years ago, with the chaos of misunderstanding which then existed in trying to give one person a supplementary pension of $2.50 and another person some other amount, is thoroughly unsatisfactory. We have a great deal more satisfaction, justice and equity, the way things are now.

MR. SALSBERG: And a great deal more starvation, too.

HON. MR. FROST: After all, these things develop with our economy. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) talks about "starvation." I sat in this House, as have other hon. members, when pensions of $20 a month were given to a very limited number of people. Now we have scores of thousands of people, without regard to any embarrassing tests and examinations, who are getting pensions. I think we have to be honest and recognize that no government can do everything. We, in Canada, have done very well, when one looks at the whole picture. We are a young country; we have to sell our goods on the markets of the world to keep up our standard of living. We have to be sensible. I think, in Canada, federally and provincially, we have done a very reasonable job.

May I say this, that so far as the pensioners are concerned I recognize that pensions contracted for years ago, today in the light of a 40c. dollar, may be quite inadequate. That is one of the reasons why this government insisted at the Federal-Provincial Conference on giving all people over 70 years of age a pension without a means test. That has been stated in this House. As the country and our economy can afford it, with good judgment and good sense, I think the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr.

Goodfellow) will probably say the age limit could be lowered to 65 years. That does not rest with us as our responsibility but lies with another government. It has been openly discussed, and it is known to the people.

In course of time, I should say that such improvements will come about, as the country can afford it, as the taxpayers can afford to produce the money, and as our ability to produce goods so we can compete on the markets of the world, reaches a point where this can be done.

Concerning the $17½ million for highway reserve fund; this year it brings the amount to $30 millions, which is the same amount as in the last fiscal year. In setting up that fund, we are placing an amount there voted by the representatives of the people, which can be used in a reasonable, proper way for highway extensions, and, particularly, if employment demands in this country require it. I, by no means, come to this House and say that because the money is there we will spend it. We will not. We will spend it if we can spend it well, and if the plans and specifications and surveys can be properly prepared and if the needs require it. If they do not, then we will carry it forward to another day.

That sir, is the explanation of the supplementary Estimates.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, may I say a word on the subject which is under discussion, in reference to supplementary allowances? The Hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) will not mind if I inform him that I think he made out a very weak case.

HON. MR. FROST: My cases are always weak with the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

MR. OLIVER: A very weak case in respect to the government's position in this matter. In other words, we have, as the supplementary Estimates would indicate—and other matters which have been brought before the House—the money to do the job.

We have, correspondingly, a great need for those supplementary Estimates; and, with that, we have the examples of at least 3 other provinces in Canada, which I suppose are less wealthy than we are.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, may I point out to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that they all have sales taxes, one of them has a 5 per cent. sales tax. Would he advocate that?

MR. OLIVER: I do not think the hon. Prime Minister adds anything to his argument by saying that. It is a fact that in this province, because of the buoyancy of revenue, we do not need to impose a sales tax in order to do the job which they are doing.

HON. MR. FROST: We might have to next year.

MR. OLIVER: We might have to?

HON. MR. FROST: Certainly we might.

MR. OLIVER: But if I were the hon. Prime Minister, I would take a chance on next year, and pay to these old people a supplementary allowance. The hon. Prime Minister says he is not going to do it because of the difficulties involved in administration. The difficulties, no matter how immense they are—and certainly there are difficulties in administering a supplementary allowance—really fade into insignificance as against the great need there is for such an allowance. And if there is a will toward these things, certainly there is a way, if we have the money to pay for it.

MR. SALSBERG: It should also be pointed out that 65 to 69 years of age pension is entirely based on the means test as it is. There is a periodic check-up of income as well as of need. So all you might be burdened with is the additional group of 70-and-over group who might apply because of need. Actually the basis is all there, and the machinery of the government functions very well. I think, in the 65 to 69 years' group. Sometimes, I feel, too well.

HON. MR. FROST: I can assure hon. members that I have no intention of jeopardizing the fiscal future of this province. Before us today we have great opportunities. If we just use common sense and good judgment, we can provide great employment, or, at least, assist in those things which are going to maintain a high level of employment in the province.

With the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) I entirely disagree. Because we have money this year that can be used for a particular thing, should we pledge ourselves to that in perpetuity? He is like a treasurer who at one time was in this House—many years ago—and who had some money left over. They asked him what he did with it, and he said, "I had the money and I spent it." I am not doing that. I do not think we should. I think we should look at these things sanely.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition says, "Take a chance." Mr. Chairman, what a chance we would be taking! This year, due to a buoyancy of business, which has been, to a large extent, stimulated by this government, we have money we can apply to things which are going to be a great investment in the future of this province and this land of ours. The hon. Leader of the Opposition says, "Turn around and commit yourselves to a policy that is going to make sure that you spend that money next year." If, Mr. Chairman, we do not have this buoyancy, then we probably would be confronted with the predicament of some of the jurisdictions and provinces, which the hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned, which have sales taxes running as high as 5 per cent. I by no means criticize those places, but I point out that you cannot have your cake and eat it. If you put these things in, you are going to pay for them.

What would be more difficult and harder on our people: the present situation we have here, with the lowest taxes in Canada, and with an economy that is bounding forward, or to do something like this requiring the imposition of a sales tax which in itself falls on all the little people?

MR. OLIVER: If your economy is bounding forward, you still think you would need a sales tax?

HON. MR. FROST: Of course you would run into that situation. The hon. Leader of the Opposition should sit down and read the budget, and he will see how careful the housekeeping and the financing have been to achieve these things.

MR. SALSBERG: And a lot of sweeping under the carpet, a lot of gold-dust underneath it.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, before the vote is carried, may I say the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) last Thursday mentioned that $300 a bed was given for the retirement of capital debt or rehabilitation. I was wondering, if the Hospital Boards wished to make further extensions of the hospitals some time in the future, would they be allowed to use that money? Because, the hon. Prime Minister definitely stated the money was to be used for capital debt or rehabilitation.

HON. MR. FROST: That is correct.

MR. THOMAS: You would not allow it to be used for the extension of the building in the future, would you?

HON. MR. FROST: I beg your pardon?

MR. THOMAS: Would you allow that amount of money to be expended on some future extension?

HON. MR. FROST: I never like to "prime the pump" too much. We make grants, for instance, of $1,000 a bed, or whatever the schedule may call for; I think it would be quite unfair, from our standpoint at least, if we were to use this money for the extension of certain plans which would, in addition, involve grants. I mean, that would be "snowballing" things.

No, Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the grant is this. I know one very fine hospital in Toronto, at the lower end of Church Street, which has a rather considerable debt, which has been worrisome and difficult for them. They can take their money and apply it to that. Another hospital, say the one in Oshawa or some such place, may be free of debt, but they want to fix their roof or fix the boilers, or something of that sort. If so, they can go ahead and do it. I think this money should be used for such purposes as that.

Vote No. 205 agreed to.

On Vote No. 206.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On 206, Mr. Chairman, there is a vote of $1 million, and on the next page there is another $1 million for the Public Service Superannuation Fund. May I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), does this sum make these funds actuarially sound?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. OLIVER: Then, are we going to keep putting it in, year by year? Is there no way of arriving at a conclusion as to what is required?

HON. MR. FROST: We, of course, in 1954, have the sins of the fathers visited upon us; the sins of other governments.

MR. OLIVER: If that is all the "sins" the hon. Prime Minister had, he would be all right.

HON. MR. FROST: And the sins of other governments. For instance, the government to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition belonged—or series of governments.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Those sins were all washed away long ago.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. members that over the years there has been accumulated an actuarial deficit in the Teachers' Superannuation Account and in the Public Service Superannuation Account. Each year, for some years past now, we have been putting a certain sum of money into these accounts. I think this is about the picture. The Teachers' Superannuation Account, as I recollect it—and the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) can correct me if I am wrong—will at the present rate continue to increase in amount without any additions from us, until about 1970, thereabouts. Even if we added nothing more every year, we would have more in that fund until 1970, but then it would start to decline, and by the time we reached approximately the year 2,000, there would be a deficit of $90 million or more, according to my recollection. That is what the actuaries tell us, and one has to be guided by what the experts tell us to a certain extent. What we plan to do by the addition of $1 million this year as we did last year and the year before, is to help extend that 1970 period up to perhaps, by now, 1980, and by gradually going ahead, we can better the situation.

There is, of course, the expedient that one could take of voting, for instance, $25, or $30, or $50 million, which hardly seems a fair thing to do. It hardly seems to be necessary. As a matter of fact, the government underwrites these accounts anyway, and I think if this procedure is followed, as and when we can do it, then we will gradually overtake the deficit that was left to us by other governments which have preceded us.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, has the hon. Prime Minister given any consideration to the situation of those placed on Workmen's Compensation, who are being paid on the basis of 50 and 66 2/3 per cent. of a wage rate, which was much lower than it is today?

HON. MR. FROST: That, of course, does not enter into these Estimates, Mr. Chairman. The hon. member (Mr. Thomas) might ask the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) when the Workmen's Compensation Bill is brought down. I might point out, however, the same difficulty is inherent here, as in the payments to which the hon. member refers. They are actuarially computed at the time. For instance, a railroader who subscribed to a pension plan contract in 1925, with the feeling that in 1955, he would be in an adequate position from the standpoint of pension, is faced with this situation. Quite obviously, with a complete change in the economy of the country and the value of the dollar, he is now in quite a different position than he expected to be. However, as I say, that was one of the reasons for the old-age pension being changed.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) could give us an idea as to just how much money would be required at the present time, if we were to put a certain sum into the Teachers' Superannuation Fund as of today, to place that fund on a proper operating basis?

HON. MR. FROST: At the present time, if one follows the actuaries, it might be $40 million, or something of that sort, and that would take all the money in the supplementary Estimate and a little more. We are meeting that situation in a gradual way.

MR. OLIVER: Does what the hon. Prime Minister has said apply to the Public Service Superannuation?

HON. MR. FROST: I should say the Public Service Fund is very considerably less than that—around about $20 million. Of course, we must remember there are half the number of people involved. Perhaps relatively, the cost may be the same. In any event, the government underwrites both of them. Our idea is to try to bring them into a proper position, which can be done if the plan is followed in succeeding years.

Votes 206 to 209 agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply reports that it has come to certain resolutions, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, on Monday afternoon, just before the adjournment of the House, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) made the statement that on Tuesday, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) and myself, would "take the government to task" for expanding its budgetary expenditures. At that time, I had no intention whatever of getting into the Budget Debate. As a matter of fact, the hon. Prime Minister practically "pitch-forked" me into this debate. I did not intend to speak in this debate.

I do not intend in the debate to refer to the hon. Prime Minister's speech. I do not like figures, and I am not going to become involved with them. I am afraid if I tackled some of the figures here, the hon. Prime Minister would immediately "tie me up," and I would not know "where I was at." So, I am going to take advantage of what many hon. members have done in previous years, and that is to wander widely afield in speaking in the Budget Debate.

I am going to speak about some matters pertaining to my own riding. In the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne, I did not make any reference whatsoever to the riding of Cochrane South, so I am going to take a few moments this afternoon to speak about matters pertaining to that riding.

I should like first to mention highways. I am not going to speak of anything pertaining to the Fort William scandal, or anything of that nature. My remarks will be confined strictly to the highways of my own riding, and I am very pleased indeed to see that the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) has just come into the House, as the majority of my remarks will be addressed to him in his Ministerial capacity, in which he provides funds for the mining access roads.

The first road to which I wish to refer is Highway 101, extending from Timmins to the Quebec boundary, through Matheson. I have spoken on several occasions in this House about this highway, and have addressed my remarks on previous occasions to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett), but he has turned a deaf ear to all pleas, so I am going to turn now to the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) to see if he will give us a little consideration.

The hon. Minister will recall that 3 or 4 months ago he and I both attended a meeting of the Northeastern Municipal Association, at which time members of the different municipalities very strongly impressed upon us the necessity of completing Highway 101 through to the Quebec boundary.

The majority of Highway 101 was completed in 1947, I believe. The road extends from Timmins through Matheson, and then cuts across to the Quebec boundary. In 1946 or 1947, the Minister of Highways of the Province of Quebec, constructed a road right to the Quebec boundary, in fact I believe it extends a couple of hundred feet into Ontario. This road was constructed in anticipation of the completion of Highway 101.

I do not know why Highway 101 stopped short of the Quebec boundary, but there is a small section of 7.2 miles remaining to be constructed. It is not a very expensive proposition, if it were constructed under the Mines Development Road Plan or mining access roads. I think it could be constructed as a secondary road, and I am sure that it would satisfy the people of both Ontario and Quebec.

At the present time, anyone living in the northwestern portion of Quebec desiring to come to Timmins or any of the other towns in the Porcupine area, have to travel southward to Rouyn, and then across to Kirkland Lake, and then northward on Highway 11, which means a trip of about three times the length of the journey from the border to Timmins if Highway 101 were completed. I am hoping the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) will provide sufficient fund in his Estimates to complete this short section of road.

Another road I want to refer to is the Warren Lake extension. The hon. Minister of Mines has done a great deal of work in connection with the Warren Lake extension, and I congratulate him on what has been accomplished. This has meant a great deal to the Timmins area, or the Porcupine Camp. If that road can be extended so that it will link up the highways coming up from Sault Ste. Marie it will mean that American tourists can cross the border at Sault Ste. Marie, and travel up to Timmins, and then pass down Highway 11 to North Bay. That is, they can make a loop without having to travel just one way, turn around and go back again. It will mean a great deal to the Porcupine Camp in bringing in the tourist trade, and I am sure the hon. Minister has plans for the extension of this Warren Lake road, and I am hoping the construction will be completed this year.

I want to say a few words to the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett)—and I am not going to criticize him at all—in connection with Highway 11. Highway 11 in my riding has every foot of it paved, and I think that is a great accomplishment. Some 10 or 11 years ago, when I first came into the House, very, very little of Highway 11 was paved in Cochrane South. Today it is all paved, and in excellent condition. I can realize the benefit, if I happen to travel over the portion of Highway 11 in the riding of the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly), Cochrane North. Much of Highway 11 in Cochrane North still remains to be paved.

Another matter I want to mention in connection with highways has been mentioned here on several occasions. Several hon. members have referred to the very great death toll on our highways. I think it is time that something is done to prevent so much destruction, both of life and to property, on our highways. Several hon. members have suggested remedies which might be taken. Some suggested putting governors on the engines of cars; others suggested increasing the penalties. I do not think either method is effective. The governors can be "monkied with"; they can be taken off or disconnected. Besides that, I have heard it suggested that a governor slows down a car in a "get-away" at lower speeds, that is, at 35 to 40 miles per hour. The mere presence of the governor on the engine will slow it down. It might be that a little spurt of speed under 50 miles an hour might avert an accident, and if governors were on, a person might be in a dangerous situation, in that he could not prevent such an accident.

Therefore I do not think a governor on an engine is the answer. Nor do I think that increased fines, or increased penalties mean very much to those who offend on our highways.

I think there is only one way, and that is to take away the privileges enjoyed by drivers. If those who operate motor vehicles lost their privileges for some considerable period of time, it would mean that a great many more drivers would hesitate to break the law. That is, for offences where we now impose perhaps a fine or imprisonment for 10 days, why not take away the privileges of driving for 1 year, or 2 years or 3 years, and in that way I think we would do much more than at the present time with our small fines and a very short term of imprisonment.

Many of us have been shocked to see cases in court where someone has lost his life and the driver of a car has been charged with careless driving or dangerous driving, with the result that a fine of perhaps $25 has been imposed upon him. That is shocking. Some one has lost his life and yet a very small amount is assessed against the person who has done wrong.

I believe it was yesterday we had a meeting of the Fish and Game Committee. In this committee, some of the Game and Hunting Associations suggested a licence of $50 for a non-resident hunter who killed a moose. Here we have our courts assessing a fine of $25 upon one who kills another motorist or pedestrian on our highways. This is merely the price of a licence. I think it is time we woke up and did something to curb the very great loss of life on our highways.

I perhaps may be unduly disturbed over this great loss of life, but, Mr. Speaker, as a coroner for 33 years, I have investigated a large number of fatal accidents on our highways, and it is a depressing thing when you go to the scene of an accident and see some poor youngster, or even a grown-up, crushed and battered in an accident, and you know right well the accident is the result of carelessness on someone's part, or the result of drinking or something of that nature. Every time I visit one of those scenes of an accident, I feel we in Ontario should do something to reduce the number of deaths on our highways.

Some years ago, I made the suggestion that we erect on our highways signs at the site of every fatal accident, such as a skull and cross-bones. I believe it is in effect in some of the states of the United States of America. I still think that is a good suggestion. About 4 or 5 years ago, I made the suggestion that signs be erected on our highways, and our highways would be pretty well cluttered up with signs today if we had started that practice 15 or 20 years ago.

For myself, driving along the highways and in areas where I have acted as coroner, quite often I find I unconsciously lift my foot from the gas pedal of the car whenever I approach a place where I have investigated a death. Unconsciously, I slow up. I think that if we had signs, such as a skull and crossbones, showing that an accident had occurred at a particular point, it would prevent a great many of our accidents. People would slow down. If we went back over the past 20 years, there would be a sign every few miles along the highways of Ontario today.

Mr. Chairman, I want to refer to another matter which was peculiar to my riding during the past year, and that is the great industrial unrest in the Porcupine area. On or about July 11th, strikes broke out in several of the mines in that area. Those strikes continued until a short time ago, and did irreparable harm to the Porcupine Camp.

Such strikes were the result of working men attempting to secure what they considered necessary benefits, which they could not secure in conferences with industry. Industry had completely refused to meet the men, and they were forced, as they considered it, to go out on strike. The strikes continued for a considerable period of time, and resulted in terrific losses both to the men and to the communities wherever the strikes took place.

I think it is time this government did something to put an end to industrial disputes of that nature. The strikes were called for increases in wages, fringe benefits, and union security. There is no doubt in my mind but that the increase in wages and fringe benefits could have been arranged very peaceably between the unions and the mines employer involved, but on the question of union security, the mines' management stood fast, and refused to give union security in any shape or form, with the result that the strikes were prolonged.

Complicating the situation in the Porcupine area to a great extent is the position of labour in the paper mill centre of Iroquois Falls, which is scarcely 45 miles from The Porcupine.

There, for a great number of years, we have had no difficulty whatsoever between labour and management. In 1917, the check-off was given and in 1926, the union shop was secured by the papermakers in Iroquois Falls. The demands of the unionists in the Porcupine area were in no way comparable to what was secured in 1917, which is 37 years ago, or in 1926, which is 28 years ago. They were in no way the same.

The papermakers secured the irrevocable check-off, but they could not get it.

The whole thing is the difference in attitude of management. I would like to give you an experience which was quite close to me in Iroquois Falls. When my son came out of the air force, he started his course here at the university, and during the summer he went back and secured a job in the paper mill. I have to pay my respects to the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, in that they on each occasion helped out students by giving jobs to young men who were going through university and school. They helped them in every way.

My son went down as soon as he returned home during the summer holidays, and asked for a job. He got it. The employment supervisor, who is, in effect, a "boss" of the plant, told him, "You have 14 days in which to take out a union card." He said, "Yes." On the date of the first union meeting he happened to have an appointment somewhere and did not appear. The next one came along, and he forgot about going to the meeting and joining the union. He went to his job the next morning and his card was pulled from the rack. He went over to the desk and said, "What is the matter? Why is my card not in the rack?" He wanted to put it through the time clock.

The clerk said, "You had better see the employment supervisor. You are in for it." He did not know what was the matter. He went into the employment supervisor's office and stated his case, the supervisor answering, "Don't you recollect I told you, you had 14 days to join the union?"

Well, he said, "I just forgot about it."

The supervisor said, "I will give you 5 more days." He certainly did not forget again. He had 5 days in which to get his union card.

That is the difference.

It was a "boss," as it were, one of the senior executives of the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, who said to the men, "You are not going to get a job in here unless you join the union," and joining the union meant the compulsory, irrevocable check-offs, as well as all the other obligations of the union.

HON. MR. DALEY: That was according to the agreement, was it not?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, but these agreements were entered into many years ago. Those privileges, as I have pointed out before, were secured in 1917 and 1926, and you could not get the Abitibi Power and Paper Company, or any of the paper-making companies to wash out those agreements or take a different stand. They are all co-operating with their men.

However, it is a different thing when you come to the mining industry. In mining, they do not want to give any concessions whatsoever.

Mr. Speaker, the whole thing is this: In paper-making the men who are now at the top, started at one time at the bottom. "Doug." Ambridge is the president of all the Abitibi Companies—I recollect when I went to Iroquois Falls 33 years ago—he was a young engineer at Iroquois Falls, starting at the very bottom. He worked his way up but he never forgot the men he worked with, and never forgot his union.

Therefore, the same thing applies to all of the mill managers. All the big executives of the paper-making industry were men who worked their way up; their sympathies rest with the working men. But in mining, men have taken on the presidency of a mine simply because of financial positions which they were able to command, and they have no sympathy whatsoever for the men working in industry.

During the period the strikes were in progress, the men appealed to this government on several different occasions, but I do not think the government went to any trouble whatsoever to try and overcome the difficulties. The government was in sympathy with the employers, the mine managers, and did nothing whatsoever to assist in solving these difficulties. In fact, mine management had an arrogant attitude towards the government. I recollect that during the summer while one mine was on strike, the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) asked management and labour to come to Toronto for a meeting. A mine manager made the statement, "I am not going to talk to that man, Daley, and if Frost calls me up, I will hang up on him."

HON. MR. DALEY: He did not do it, though.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Speaker, I ask you, is that any way to refer to two important Ministers of the Crown? Surely, he could have said, "The honourable Mr. Daley," or "the honourable Prime Minister," but instead of that, he adopted a manner which showed the general attitude of management.

HON. MR. DALEY: Would it be asking too much, Mr. Speaker, for the gentleman's name?

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Brown of Broulan Reef. He made that statement and it was published in the Timmins press. Broulan Reef was the one mine where all the difficulty occurred, where the manager armed a group of guards and sent them in, ordering them to shoot down strikers who trespassed on the property.

Now, I think that much more could have been done by this government to solve the difficulties in the Porcupine area. In fact, these difficulties were never solved. The men were driven back to work because they could no longer stand the economic pressure of the situation in which they found themselves. I think this government could do a lot to enhance the position of the working men. When the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) introduced his bill today, I had very great hopes that it would assist the men in regard to union security. I thought that was what the bill was going to cover. But all it does is make some very slight improvement in the Labour Relations Act. It means nothing whatever to the working men of the Porcupine area.

The trouble will occur again. The same trouble will break out, maybe in 1 year, maybe in 2 years. These men are bound to demand their rights. As far as wages go, it is quite clear they have a legitimate case. They knew what was being paid at Iroquois Falls in the paper-making industry. The rate there was $1.41 an hour. The basic rate in the Porcupine area ranged from 83 cents to $1.01. That was the highest basic rate in the Porcupine area at the time of the strike. As I say, the men working in the Porcupine area knew what was being paid in the paper mill at Iroquois Falls, and they knew the mining industry could afford to pay them a better wage in the Porcupine, and you cannot blame the men for going on strike at that time for an increase in wages.

Mr. Speaker, I think the government could do a good job by acting at this time. Do not wait until a strike comes, but get the mine management and labour together, and do a public-relations job, so that the difficulties can be ironed out, and proper concessions granted to the working men of the Porcupine area.

I did not think, Mr. Speaker, I would be able to speak at this length. I have been suffering from laryngitis all week. As a result, I shall have to shorten my remarks. I am appealing again to the government to do something which will prevent further serious strikes, as we had in the Porcupine area last summer. Some 50,000 people live in that area, and 50,000 people knew very great fear and suffered intense hardship. This government owes it to the working men of the Porcupine area to see that this situation never again occurs.

MR. A. R. HERBERT (Temiskaming): Mr. Speaker, I would like at the outset (of my remarks) to tell you how much I have admired the way you have been able to carry on your duties as Speaker of this House so that this session of the Legislature has been running very smoothly, and in a business-like fashion. You are held in respect by all hon. members, because of your unquestioned competence in your demanding position, and also because of your polished approach to the conduct of the affairs of this House.

I would also like to avail myself of this occasion to congratulate our hard working hon. Prime Minister for the good news he has brought to us in his 11th consecutive Budget Address. This is quite a record—an all-time record I understand—and I have no doubt that he will add many more Budget Addresses to the number he has delivered up to this time.

As a representative of a northern constituency to this House, I would like to make a few general remarks on the situation there. The news of the developments which have taken place is a mixture of good and bad. I am sure that all hon. members were saddened by the prolonged stay of operations in the Porcupine Gold Mines. A disastrous strike has done a great deal of harm to the cities, towns, companies, the gold miners and the families who depend on them, as well as to the business organizations situated in the affected regions. I say it is regrettable that such a strike should have taken place because first of all, the gold mining industry—which has long been a prime developer of our northern regions—has been for some time now in a depressed condition for reasons well known to the hon. members. Kirkland Lake never quite completely recovered from the strike there some years ago, and I am afraid that irreparable damage has been done in Porcupine. Such is the curse which strikes at a single industrial community. In this regard, Mr. Speaker, I think the time has come for the Federal Government to start doing something for these single-industry communities in Northern Ontario. There is no reason in the world, in my mind, why some of the Crown Companies could not be established in such areas as around Porcupine, Kirkland Lake, and Cobalt, where power, transportation, communication, housing, educational and public service facilities already exist; and where production, owing to uncontrollable causes, has fallen below the level where all the above-mentioned facilities and services could be used.

As a northern member of this Assembly, I find it difficult to understand why so many industries establishing themselves in the southern regions, should not look to the north as possible sites for their plants. The industrial expansion in areas which are primarily agricultural, because of the rich soil there, is definitely hard to understand. It certainly does not fall in line with the dictates of proper land use. The day is not far off when we will regret this turning over to industrial use of the vast areas of Southern Ontario, which should have been kept under the plow.

If I may be permitted, Mr. Speaker, I would suggest that a serious study of this problem should be made. If economic reasons are given as an excuse for not using these facilities and services available in the north, then I hold that the governments of our province and of our country should get together and figure out the answers.

I know freight rates come in to the picture. I think Ottawa could well look into the matter of subsidizing the transportation of goods coming from newly-organized industries in our moribund gold mining areas—and such a move would be to the good of all.

And while on the subject of Ottawa, where decentralization of federal services seems to be a fashion keynote these days, I would like to suggest to the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe that the Porcupine area would be indebted to him for quite some time, if he decided to move the gold refinery section of the Royal Canadian Mint from Ottawa to Timmins or Kirkland Lake because most of the gold refined in Ottawa comes from these areas. And if, through such action, Mr. Howe displeases the touchy Mayoress of Canada's capital, on the other hand, I think he would make quite a "hit" with another no less formidable political personage, namely, Mrs. Anne Shippley, of Kirkland Lake.

What I have just said about the precious-metal refinery, should also apply to the Federal Government's metallurgical services. By establishing such services in the depressed gold mining areas, it would serve the dual purpose of helping these communities to survive, and, at the same time, bring the invaluable technical services of the Dominion Government closer to the seat of mining operations. The established mining camps of Ontario are all centrally located and are serviced by unequalled highway, rail and air facilities.

The above suggestions are made because, although the problems of gold mining communities are extremely serious to the communities themselves, they are in fact much less difficult of solution than, for instance, those confronting the Metropolitan government of Toronto, the trans-Canada pipeline, or the St. Lawrence development.

But small as the problem of gold mining communities may appear in the over-all picture, the fact remains that its solution in the long run will be just as important to the whole of Ontario and Canada, as the happy conclusion of our efforts in any other direction.

Those communities are our far northern bastions. They must not be permitted to deteriorate and become "ghost towns," because, in the foreseeable future, they should play a great role in the development of colonization in our great clay-belt areas.

So much for the gold mining communities.

Now for a look at the brighter side of Northern Ontario.

I learn from the Ontario Department of Mines that an all-time high production figure of nearly $½ billion has been credited to the mining industry of Ontario for 1953. Besides this, the outlook for the future is such that one can foresee the time when the production figure could be nearly doubled when all the new mining discoveries come into production. Prospectors have been making the front pages of our newspapers by reporting Ontario mineral finds of untold significance to the future of this country. And while most of the big mining news in the past few years originated in Labrador, the Provinces of Quebec, New Brunswick and the Western Provinces, it is a fact that 1953 nearly entirely reserved to Ontario minewise.

The hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) has a good story to tell this House, and I will not steal too much of his thunder. But there are certain mining developments within sight of Cobalt, my home town, to which I would like to refer.

The hon. members are all familiar with the name Cobalt, but to many, the fact that Cobalt has made a comeback after many years of somnolence, is not so well-known.

This "best old town of all," as it is known in song, has surprised even the least pessimistic of mining engineers by the extraordinary revival of production which has taken place there in the past few years. The biggest news in a long time, is reserved for the coming weekend, when the refinery of Cobalt Chemicals will be officially opened. This plant, one of two on the continent, will treat concentrates from the district mines, and its output of strategic metals will go a long way in strengthening the position of the western nations, not to mention what it will mean to the whole of the Cobalt area.

The other day I read in the Financial Post that a huge deposit of iron ore had been discovered near Red Lake, in the northwestern part of Ontario. Well, Mr. Speaker, I would like to bring to the attention of this House that a large ore body of magnetite iron ore is on the verge of development in an area close to Swastika. I hear that this mineral occurrence was discovered in the course of an aeromagnetic survey, and that a highly-responsible mining company owns the rights and, further, that negotiations are under way with the transportation companies with regard to bringing concentrates from these deposits to a lake port. In this particular instance the railway facilities are close at hand, and the cost of running a spur line into the property is believed to be very small.

The projection of mining access roads, a programme instituted by the present hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell), member for Sudbury, a few years ago, and carried forward with such dynamism by the present hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly), is doing more toward the development of Northern Ontario than possibly any other measure attempted by any past government of this province. The present administration deserves the congratulations of the whole province for having pioneered in this direction. Discoveries have been made as a result of this policy, known mines have been brought into production because such roads made them easy of access, and besides this, such roads have opened to the forest protection services of the province a whole new network of ground communications to help them preserve our timber resources from fire.

Besides this, virgin territories have been made available to the people of this province, as well as tourists from without, to enjoy the beauties and pleasures inherent to our great out-of-doors.

I hope, Mr. Speaker, that this worthwhile programme of mining roads will be continued for many years to come, and that the amounts set aside each year for mining roads will be commensurate with the needs as they arise.

In closing my remarks about Northern Ontario, Mr. Speaker, I would like here to commend this administration for the deep insight it possesses in matters relating to this vast area of our province. Not only is it "insight," but rather, "positive attitude," which the government has translated into acts such as a mining road programme, the development of new highways, improvement of older roads, direct aid to mining municipalities, the improvement of hydro facilities, expansion of hospitals, increases in school space and an overall amelioration of conditions for new Ontario.

The government's record prior to the last general election gave the Frost administration a near complete representation from Manitoba to Quebec. I feel sure in the next election that position will be improved.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to observe that the deep-down qualities of this Administration could not be more admirably described than in the words used by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), in terminating his budget statement on Thursday last. Those words should be an inspiration, not to be reserved to the citizens of this province alone, but they should be broadcast to all parts of this country. They are a profession of faith in Canada such as few of our great men have ever brought forth. The credo of the late Cecil Frost in his native country, will go down in our history as a jewel of patriotic eloquence; an illuminating, resolute yet simple call to Canadian unity for the good of Canada.

When his brother, the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) echoed his words with such evident emotion last Thursday afternoon, I felt—as must have most hon. members—that the future of this province was in good hands.

MR. D. McM. KERR (Dovercourt) :
Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate on the budget, may I be permitted, first of all, to express my personal sympathy to the family of my colleague who passed away last night. Sitting beside the late hon. member, and realizing his loyalty and devotion to his family, and knowing the man, perhaps more than anyone else in the House, it is with deep regret I learned of his passing. May I say to his family, and to the historic riding of Russell, that their loss is great indeed.

I would also like to couple my expression of sympathy, to include the other families who are finding themselves bereaved during and since the last session of this House.

Looking back over my experiences in this, the Twenty-fourth Parliament, since first assembled, I find myself faced with some interesting facts.

I remember the first session when the Opposition tried to find fault with this present government on the question of unemployment, and, from all parts of the Opposition ranks, there came pressure for something to be done for the then unemployed.

If my memory serves me correctly, by the next session, the unemployment situation had increased, but from the Opposition there came not one word about unemployment. Then there came a feeling that there was a possibility of a provincial election, and we find echoes of the old cry that something should be done for the unemployed at the present time.

How some political Parties can sway for the "poor fellow," when they think the "poor fellow" has a vote which they might secure, is beyond my comprehension.

Turning to the third session of this Parliament, the whipping post was hydro, and the Opposition whipped hydro, high, wide and handsome, with regard to state dinners and all the rest of it. Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the other hon. members of this House saw what I did in that virulence on their part in regard to hydro? Sitting at that time, as a member of the Opposition, was one who had sat on the Hydro Commission, the member for Niagara Falls (Mr. Houck) who knew hydro backwards. But was he the one who led this spearhead against hydro? No. The hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), who knew nothing at all about the situation in regard to hydro, was the spearhead.

I am reminded of the fact that the hon. Leader of the Opposition, after listening to the various hon. members of the government making their speeches in this House, saying something about, "He was reminded about preaching for a call." I would suggest to the hon. members of the Opposition that the boot is now on the other foot, as between the hon. member for Kenora and the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and we are having a great deal of fun listening to both of them "preaching for a call," which I understand will be extended sometime in April, by the Liberal Party.

We are face-to-face today with a budget which is really outstanding, in the fact that in it is a repetition of the statement by the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) that there will be no increase in taxes. I wish the Federal Government would take a leaf out of the book of the hon. Provincial Treasurer in that regard, for we find constantly, federal grabs of the tax dollars leaving less for the municipalities, and less for this province.

There is one suggestion I might put forward in my somewhat limited time. Being accustomed to preaching for 15 minutes, perhaps I can "put it over" and perhaps I cannot.

I want to commend the Department of Lands and Forests for the excellent job it has done at the entrance to Algonquin Park, and in the establishment of the museum in that park.

It was my privilege to visit this park last summer. I went just as a visitor; no one knew who I was, or why I was there. I discovered that the entrance has been vastly improved through the efforts of the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Griesinger). I found a very courteous and helpful institution in the museum, and I would advise any hon. members who have not visited this park, to pay a visit to it. As yesterday was St. Patrick's Day, perhaps it would be appropriate to say there is a stone in the middle of the park which bears the name of an Irishman, who, in his wisdom, had Algonquin Park set aside as a national park.

Mr. Speaker, after last session, and after all the statements which were made with regard to hydro by the Opposition—about one month after the House prorogued, there appeared in the mouthpiece of the Liberal Party, the Toronto Star, an editorial entitled, "Another Great Hydro Year."

After listening about all the money which was being foolishly spent, and all that had been said and done with regard to hydro, the Star says:

The provincial hydro constitutes a huge financial investment; its assets approached $1,200 million at the end of 1952. And it is on the way to becoming an even greater enterprise, as the St. Lawrence project, in which Chairman Saunders has been so active, takes form at last.

Then it goes on, and says in regard to Mr. Saunders—after all we heard said about him by the Opposition:

Mr. Saunders has done a great job for the people of Ontario since assuming the chairmanship of the provincial commission.

It goes on to say; after referring to Mr. Saunders as the "liaison" with the public:

This personal touch in which Mr. Saunders has always believed has explained and popularized the hydro to vast numbers of people, and, second only to the hydro's actual achievements, has been the most valuable and effective winner of goodwill at the commission's disposal.

This editorial appeared during the summer, after listening to all that had been said with regard to Mr. Saunders' management of this great public enterprise.

We have heard a great deal during this session concerning various ideas, coming from individual hon. members. We have heard something this afternoon in regard to the old-age pensions.

Mr. Speaker, I have a suggestion to make to the government in regard to old-age pensions, which, I think, deserves earnest consideration.

We find ourselves at this stage of our existence having to make some provision for the men and women who were placed on pensions 10 or 15 years ago. I can recall one friend of mine who was drawing a pension of $110 then, which was adequate for his needs. He now finds himself barely existing on that pension. My suggestion is the assets which provide that pension might, in some way, best suited to the need—I would suggest about 25 per cent. of those assets—be permitted to be invested in stocks which fluctuate so when there is a "boom" in our land, the value of the stocks would rise, and some of the amount of the investment could be returned to him to compensate him for the cost of living, which, as we all know, has increased as the days go by.

This is only a suggestion, but I think it might be given consideration. Instead of having a fixed sum of $100 per month, as a pension, if he was sure of $80 a month pension, and the other $20 was in a fluctuating stock, which went up as times were good, then he would receive the benefit of the good times, added to his pension. Of course, he would have to take the risk of the stocks going down. But he could take that risk for the simple reason living expenses would be less costly under depressed conditions.

May I be permitted to return to the riding of Dovercourt-Davenport for a moment. In that riding, we have a building built by this government and handed over to the Canadian National Exhibition. I am suggesting to the hon. Minister of Public Works he might spend a dollar or two on that building, bringing it more into line with the present-day needs of that great institution known as the Canadian National Exhibition.

We did spend a great deal of money in erecting that building. I do not think it is in a dilapidated condition. I say that a little help towards keeping it in repair by this government would be beneficial. When people see it as an Ontario Government building, we are judged by its condition, and the Province of Ontario is being judged by it. I think we could spend a little money on it, and not leave all the repairs up to the Canadian National Exhibition.

May I suggest to the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) regarding the packaging of food, we have a great modern invention today known as "cellophane." Most cooked foods, such as cooked ham, are placed in this cellophane wrapping, and it is placed in refrigeration. When it was placed in this refrigeration nobody knows how old it is. You take it home and open it. As one hon. member says, "The smell would raise to high heaven." True, we do not go back to that store anymore, but I think if a date were placed on the packaging of food, and made compulsory, we would find it would, at least, be inspected before the purchaser received it.

During the strike up north we, in the City of Toronto, were kept informed of the various statements made by various people. I would like to counteract some of the statements made by some of the union leaders during those strikes.

We found ourselves in the position of listening to people, paid organizers, making statements about the hon. Prime Minister of this province, or the hon. Minister of Labour, statements made by men who could step on a stepladder at the highest point and not even touch the ankles of those they were criticizing.

I personally am in favour of trade unions. I think they have a wonderful place in our economy, but I would like to say to the trade unions that they have a job to do, and it is not within the factory that they have to do it. They have to do it within their own unions.

In the Old Country, we have a bird known as the "cuckoo." The cuckoo lays its egg in every other bird's nest, and gradually growing larger, it pushes the others birds out. The unions have a cuckoo in their nest—and it is time they got it cleaned out—in the paid organizers they employ who are nothing less than parasites living on what the working man has earned for himself. These paid agitators make conditions such as we have at Porcupine and other centres in the north.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I think that is a statement which should be withdrawn. Even if it does not refer to hon. members of the House, he called union officials "parasites." I think he is going a bit too far, even if one wants to criticize union leaders, as he may have a right to do.

MR. KERR: If the Speaker so rules, I will withdraw it, but, like the Irishman who was fined for calling his neighbour a bad name, he asked the judge, "Is there any fine for thinking it?" and the judge said, "No," so the Irishman said, "I still think it."

MR. SALSBERG: I hope his thinking will improve, too.

MR. KERR: Mr. Speaker, I shall draw my remarks to a close by saying that in the presentation of this budget, its grant to the superannuation fund of the teachers, its grant to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, its work in setting apart special grants to hospitals, and all the other welfare grants which have been made, are proof that Ontario is being kept strong because we, the Government of Ontario, are still close to the people and know their needs and grant them.

MR. J. EDWARDS: I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I move the adjournment of the House. We will go ahead with any bill on the Order paper tomorrow.

MR. OLIVER: Will the hon. Prime Minister not designate a little more closely than that? Are there any important bills coming up tomorrow, for instance?

HON. MR. FROST: I think the hon. Attorney-General will deal with the bill relating to gas, and there will be some debate on it. If there are any bills that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wants held over, we will do that.

I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6.00 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, MARCH 19, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK, P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We have, as visitors to our Assembly this afternoon, members of the Service Guild of Christ Church, Port Stanley: the students of the Haliburton High School, Haliburton—the area from which our hon. Prime Minister comes, I understand—and the students of the Queen Mary Public School in St. Catharines.

It is a very great pleasure to welcome these guests to our Assembly, and we hope, with the knowledge you gather here, you will go back as more keen students, and certainly more enthusiastic coming citizens of our great province.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. J. STEWART: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Seventh Report of the Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Stewart, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the committee's Seventh Report as follows:

Your Standing Committee on Private Bills begs leave to present the following as its Seventh Report:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 19, An Act to incorporate The Hamilton Foundation.

Bill No. 22, An Act respecting the City of Peterborough (No. 1).

Bill No. 27, An Act to incorporate The London Foundation.

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments as recommended by the Commissioners of Estate Bills:

Bill No. 17, An Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital.

Bill No. 23, An Act respecting the City of Peterborough (No. 2).

Your committee would recommend that the fees less the penalties and the actual cost of printing be remitted on Bill No. 17, An Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital; Bill No. 19, An Act to incorporate The Hamilton Foundation; and on Bill No. 27, An Act to incorporate The London Foundation.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MR. S. F. LEAVINE: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the First Report of the Standing Committee on Health, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Leavine, from the Standing Committee on Health, presents the committee's First Report as follows: Your Standing Committee on Health presents the following as its First Report:

Your committee begs leave to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 92, An Act respecting Mental Health.

Bill No. 93, An Act to amend The Mental Hospitals Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE REGISTRY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Registry Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the main amendment contained in this bill is supplementary to an amendment which was introduced yesterday to the Municipal Act, with respect to restrictive by-laws. This amendment provides that such by-laws are not, and never have been, deemed to be required to be registered in order to bind the land.

The Municipal Act provides for a system of recording these by-laws in the office of the municipal clerk, which will be a system designed to enable persons to find out what by-laws might affect the use of their lands.

Persons who may have acquired these rights, under a decision rendered in a case recently in the Supreme Court, are protected by a section of this bill. It does not affect anyone who has actually acquired rights, under the decision of the court, to which I have referred.

There are a few other provisions in this bill. One is with regard to making photographic reproductions of documents in the Registry Office; a provision regarding plans to be registered, and so forth.

This bill, Mr. Speaker, I will refer to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE LAND TITLES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Land Titles Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is a companion bill to the amendment to The Registry Act, covering the same main point. There are one or two other minor amendments. This bill also I shall refer to the Committee on Legal Bills.

THE MAGISTRATES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Magistrates Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the effect of this amendment is that where the amount of municipal fines in the magistrates' courts is insufficient to pay the operating expenses of the court, the deficiency is to be made up from provincial funds.

THE JUDICATURE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Judicature Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this amendment deals with the powers of a judge—in cases where the onus section in the Highway Traffic Act applies—to direct the jury, in his discretion, to specify the negligent acts or omissions which caused the damages in automobile cases.

This amendment expressly restores the discretion which formerly was exercised by the trial judge. When this onus section was first introduced, many years ago, it was the practice in cases where the judge thought the evidence warranted it, to direct the jury to specify the particular negligent acts, if he saw fit.

A recent decision, however, reversed that practice, and this bill is for the purpose of legalizing a practice which has always been followed under that Act.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Before the Orders of the day, Mr. Speaker, I want to ask the Minister of Highways (Hon. Mr. Doucett) one or two questions in relation to his statement yesterday that the chief engineer had been suspended.

I have been informed the chief engineer has recently left the country. Has the government any information in respect of this? I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, as a basis for a further question, that if the chief engineer's lack of co-operation was so important as to cause his suspension, why were steps not taken to keep him within the jurisdiction of the province so that he would be available for questioning and the submission of evidence before the Select Committee? I would also like to ask when, and in what way, the chief engineer refused to co-operate?

HON. MR. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): I may say, Mr. Speaker, in reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), I do not think any of us knew the chief engineer was going away. What was the second question?

MR. OLIVER: The second question was: Why, if his lack of co-operation was so important as to cause his suspension, the government did not take steps to keep the chief engineer within the country?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I do not think we had sufficient information to take that step. We did not know he was going to leave.

MR. OLIVER: I think the hon. Minister should inform the House as to when and in what way the chief engineer refused to co-operate.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I was not present at the examination, but I understand from the Provincial Auditor and the solicitor that the engineer would not answer the questions they were asking of him.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day I would like to table answers to questions number 14, 18, 20, 22, 28, 29, 33, 46, 48, and 49.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

THE HOME OF THE FRIENDLESS AND INFANTS' HOME

MR. ELLIOTT (Hamilton East) moves second reading of Bill No. 7, intituled, "An Act respecting the Home of the Friendless and Infants' Home."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

ROYAL BOTANICAL GARDENS

MR. PRYDE, in the absence of Mr. Connell, moves second reading of Bill No. 12, intituled, "An Act respecting Royal Botanical Gardens."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWNSHIP OF TORONTO

MR. PRYDE, in the absence of Mr. Kennedy, moves second reading of Bill No. 9, intituled, "An Act respecting the Township of Toronto."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CITY OF NIAGARA FALLS

MR. PRYDE, in the absence of Mr. Jolley, moves second reading of Bill No. 13, intituled, "An Act respecting the City of Niagara Falls."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE ACT

MR. ROBERTS (St. Patrick) moves second reading of Bill No. 20, intituled, "An Act respecting St. Michael's College."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF FORT ERIE

MR. JOLLEY (Niagara Falls) moves second reading of Bill No. 30, intituled, "An Act respecting the Town of Fort Erie."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

ONTARIO FUEL BOARD

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General) moves second reading of Bill No. 94, intituled, "An Act to establish the Ontario Fuel Board."

He said: I explained the main principles of this bill on first reading, but, no doubt, some hon. members will desire to have a debate on this measure. Before the debate proceeds, however, I may say that I propose in the committee stage to introduce an amendment to section 16, which, as it now reads is as follows:

Without restricting the generality of section 15, the board may make orders fixing the rates and meter rentals to be charged to ultimate consumers of natural gas.

I propose to move an amendment of that section to cover rates and charges for the transmission and storage of natural gas.

I also propose that this bill be referred to the natural gas section of the Committee on Mining, which meets, I believe, on Monday at 10 a.m.

If hon. members now wish to discuss this bill I shall be pleased, after such discussion, to deal with any questions they may raise.

MR. OLIVER: I can say at once, Mr. Speaker, that insofar as the principle of the bill is concerned, we are favourably impressed. We are going to support the principle of the bill. In committee, of course, as the hon. Minister will probably agree, there will be room on some of the suggestions for some difference of opinion. I was glad to hear the hon. Attorney-General say the bill was going into committee. I think a bill of this character should be sent to committee where the most minute examination may be given it. I think the hon. Attorney-General will himself appreciate, together with most hon. members of this House, that this is one of the most important bills which have come before the Legislature this year.

The bill seeks to deal with a very great problem—a problem which is not immediately upon us, but for which we are preparing by passing this legislation which, in effect, will be complementary to the federal legislation in connection with the main pipe line from Alberta.

There are two or three things that I wish to say to the hon. Attorney-General in connection with this whole matter. One of them is: Has the government in any way made an agreement on how much gas it will take from Alberta? If so, for what length of time? It seems to me that is a very important point on which we should have a definite answer from the hon. Attorney-General. Is there a commitment on the part of the province in any shape or form to buy any amount of gas for a stated period of time from the Province of Alberta?

If the hon. Attorney-General can tell us in his answer that there is no agreement of any kind on the part of the province then, of course, the problem becomes one of creating or building up a market for this gas when it does finally arrive in Ontario.

It would appear from press reports that 1 or 2 years must elapse before the gas is finally here and available for consumption in this province. In that period of time it would seem that a market must be created to absorb and consume this gas when it is available for distribution within this province.

Has the government made any agreement as to the preparation of this market when the gas finally arrives from Alberta? I think this matter is important. I would like to hear what the hon. Attorney-General has to say on the subject for a moment.

HON. MR. PORTER: If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) does not mind, I would prefer to wait until the end of the debate rather than answer questions from each hon. member as he enters into the discussion. This is being discussed on second reading and I think we should deal with it along those lines.

MR. OLIVER: If the hon. Attorney-General prefers to answer later, that is all right. I want, now, to throw this other idea into the arena for discussion so that the hon. Attorney-General can answer that, too, at the same time.

As I understand it, in order to create a market for this gas when it arrives, arrangements are being made, or are in process of being made, for gas to be brought from, I think, the State of Tennessee and to be distributed here in Ontario. It is felt that the availability of this gas would create a market for the Alberta gas when it comes.

I think the hon. Attorney-General should make it clear to the House that when the Alberta gas comes to Ontario there will be reasonable confidence, in the opinion of the government, that at the appropriate time the Tennessee gas will stop coming and the Alberta gas will take its place. This seems to me to be an arrangement of tremendous significance. I want to be assured that the government is sure in its own mind that this reversal of trade can take place—that the gas can come in for 2 years, and then, when all is ready, it will be able to turn the valve to shut off the gas from Tennessee and let in the gas from Alberta. I think this point might well be given some attention.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, I have a few remarks to make about Bill No. 94 and I would be interested in hearing the views of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) when he replies at the conclusion of the debate.

The people who live in the northern part of the province are keenly interested in the development of the pipe line across that part of Ontario, for it will be of great value to industry and to potential industry in the north.

There are, however, many aspects of this picture which need clearing up, both in our minds, and in the minds of many who live in the southern part of the province.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has raised an important question about a market for Alberta gas when it is eventually available for distribution. He also asked about the shutting off of the import of American gas when Alberta gas is available to take its place. There is one other aspect of this question, however, Mr. Speaker, which I think deserves some consideration. Perhaps it has already been well considered by those who have prepared this legislation. I wish, Mr. Speaker, to raise the question of the future of the Ontario producers when this legislation becomes law and when Alberta gas is ready for the market. In Southwestern Ontario particularly, farmers and other land owners retain, with their deeds, the mineral rights of their property. There is a certain fear abroad that when Ontario gas becomes available in large quantities a situation may develop where local producers will have difficulty in finding the right market at the right price for new sources of gas.

It has been suggested by some responsible geologists and others with knowledge of the oil and gas industry, that the future potential of Southwestern Ontario as a producer of gas has scarcely been explored. The suggestion has been advanced that, as the work of exploration proceeds and more capital becomes available for these activities, further important discoveries will be made.

I am told, again by people with reliable geological experience, that the average deepest point of wells in Southwestern Ontario is now about 2,000 feet. They suggest, once the drills start getting down to 6,000, 7,000, 8,000 and 9,000 feet, the picture is going to change and we are going to find vast resources of oil and gas in this part of the province. I want to be assured, before this bill is given parliamentary approval, that all Ontario producers will be protected, inasmuch as they will be able to market in this area in future any natural gas which may become available.

There is a suggestion in Alberta now that the financial position of that province has reached a point, where, in the foreseeable future, the government may be able to take drastic steps to limit many fields of taxation as the result of royalties being received. Some years ago, a Party leader in that province predicted the day would arrive when the government might be able to give a $25-a-month bonus to every citizen. I would not want to see that bonus given to the people of Alberta—though I would not deny them having it—by the farmers and producers of Southwestern Ontario.

I would like to see a complete review undertaken of the whole natural gas situation in this province so that everyone concerned might be assured that our own producers are fully protected both at the present time and, in respect of time, 25 years hence.

There is a further aspect of this question which will bear some examination later on. Perhaps during discussion of the Estimates. But I can only agree with the statement which has been made by many people connected with mining and oil that the activities of the government in survey and exploration work are most inadequate. I notice in the Estimates this year we have set out $34,000 for this purpose. Last year $32,220 was allocated for this work. I suggest, Mr. Speaker, that these sums are wholly inadequate to meet the needs of expansion in this field.

I hope the committee will go into this field and take some time to examine the activities of the National Gas Commissioners office. Not from the point of view of criticism—I do not suggest that at all—I suggest the activities of this office should be examined to determine its extent and how it can be best augmented and improved to develop the industry, which I think has great potentialities.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): The subject matter dealt with in the bill now before us for second reading is unquestionably of historic proportions. I am sorry that the same cannot be said for the legislation. The fact is, we are at a turning point on a matter of historic long-range significance. What we do now will affect the course of events for many years to come.

Now, Mr. Speaker, it is from this an approach such as this that I feel very unhappy about the legislation which is before us. Not that I object to what the hon. Attorney-General's proposed—

HON. MR. PORTER: In other words, you will vote for the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: But the bill is hopelessly inadequate, and constitutes, in my opinion, a terrible retreat on the part of the government on a matter of such historic significance.

It is, I think, undeniable that the government has pursued a policy on the question of natural gas which was both hot and cold at the same time. It has offered from time to time, brave words which caused us all to gain confidence, faith and renewed hope, only to realize that the brave words were followed by very timid and ultimately retreating steps.

In short, it is my conviction that the government has failed to give consistent leadership on a fundamental question as was done in years gone by, by another government and under the inspired leadership of Sir Adam Beck.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Sir James Whitney was the Prime Minister.

MR. SALSBERG: Sir James Whitney was the Prime Minister, and it is regretted that this Conservative Government did not seek inspiration and guidance from that government and from Sir Adam Beck on a matter of equal significance.

What is the question? It is one of determining for a long period of time how and under what circumstances, this great province is to gain a natural—and we hope—cheap type of fuel, which is in abundance, so that industry and private consumers can benefit from it.

The government did, on occasion, come out with statements which deserved universal support; for instance, and I think I mentioned this on a previous occasion during this session when the hon. Prime Minister came out with the statement—that the construction of an all-Canadian natural gas pipe line is as important for this country as was the building of the first trans-continental railroad. We struck a note which received warm response, and, I think, general approval across the country, not only in Ontario.

Then there were indications from Queen's Park the government not only would take a hand in assuring the natural gas pipe line would be an all-Canadian project, rather than a north-south diversion, which was advocated by certain privileged groups, but that the government would go further and seek to establish what amounts to a public ownership administration.

HON. MR. PORTER: When did the government ever make any such statement?

MR. SALSBERG: I will come to it.

HON. MR. PORTER: You never come to it, though.

MR. SALSBERG: If you will only have a bit of patience—

HON. MR. PORTER: We have had patience for 10 years and you have never come to the point yet.

MR. SALSBERG: My friend, the hon. Attorney General is the most impatient man when we are dealing with any question about which he is touchy. He is a touchy man. Particularly, when his position is vulnerable. He becomes very impatient.

As I said, the first statement was that of the hon. Prime Minister. Then, we received word that the government had set up a subcommittee, headed by the hon. Attorney-General, the fuel controller of Ontario and the chairman of the Ontario Hydro to deal with this question. When that committee was set up, I am sure members of all Parties and the public at large approved of it and were hopeful that their efforts would be successful. We were led to believe that the subcommittee would not only work energetically to make sure we would have a Canadian pipe line, but that it would be publicly owned.

HON. MR. PORTER: There never was any such inference or suggestion. If the hon. member had examined closely any statements which did come from the government, he will know that the committee was merely for the purpose of exploring every aspect of the problem, and that no decisions were made until now. This bill is the first indication of any decision as to government policy in this matter.

MR. SALSBERG: I will supply a portion of the available evidence to substantiate my point, if the hon. Attorney-General will permit me. But I will say, in reply to his remarks, that the government, or, at least, he as head of the subcommittee, was careful not to issue statements which I can now produce, and that all statements bore the explanation, "It comes from an authoritative source."

HON. MR. PORTER: I just wish to say, Mr. Speaker, that these quotations from "authoritative sources," did not come from the government or from anybody authorized by the government to speak. I do not know where they came from. They are just like most of the "stuff" that the hon. member "dishes out" in this House.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General again reveals his fear of coming to grips with this problem in a grown-up manner. He acts in the style to which we are accustomed.

HON. MR. PORTER: So do you.

MR. SALSBERG: He does not like "some of the things I dish up." Well, I "dish up" what I think is necessary, and not what the hon. Attorney-General will like.

For instance, I "dish up" annually the hon. Attorney-General's promise to the people of this province that he will clear the slums in 10 years. I have presented that every year. Now, this is the ninth year of his 10 years. He does not like it, but I will bring it up again during this session. The hon. Attorney-General will excuse me when I "dish up" what I think is necessary in the interests of good government and in the interests of the people.

The committee travelled to New York, Quebec, Alberta, and it was quite obvious these trips were for the purpose of not only clearing up the situation, but that the Ontario Government, quite properly, was doing what it is expected to do, to make sure that the best interests of the people will be served.

HON. MR. PORTER: And they will be served by this bill.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not true, and the hon. Attorney-General knows it.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: He has retreated. I think it would be far better if he were to come here and say, "I am sorry, I will have to retreat."

HON. MR. PORTER: We have never retreated in 10 years.

MR. SALSBERG: Only the hon. Attorney-General does not retreat.

When the chairman of the Ontario Hydro was there, it, of course, lent colour to the belief that it would be a publicly-owned utility.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is ridiculous.

MR. SALSBERG: And the further proof was in the reports that came out. We have, for instance, a review of the situation by a person I consider responsible, the financial editor of the Toronto Star. On January 5th, 1954, he said in his column in the financial page of the Star:

The Ontario Government has indicated some interest in public ownership and the matter apparently is to be considered further at a Cabinet meeting shortly.

HON. MR. PORTER: "To be considered."

MR. SALSBERG:

What the government has in mind is not clear. But there has been some suggestion that Ontario Hydro might take over distribution of natural gas in much the same way as it now distributes hydro.

HON. MR. PORTER: Does the hon. member consider that a declaration of government policy?

MR. SALSBERG: It indicates the government was seriously considering it.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what he said.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes. I am sorry if he was wrong. I would be very sorry, indeed, to learn the committee did not even consider it. I gave the members more credit than that.

HON. MR. PORTER: We considered everything.

MR. SALSBERG: Now, the hon. Attorney-General says he considered everything. Therefore, he considered public ownership.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is right.

MR. SALSBERG: We have that much out of him, that the government did consider public ownership as it considered everything else.

HON. MR. PORTER: Of course we did.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to say, to the extent that public impression was created, the government was considering public ownership of the natural gas distribution in this province—to that extent the people by and large were very happy. There were at that time a great many resolutions adopted by the labour movement and others, expressing the hope that the government would establish public ownership of the distribution of natural gas through some commission, either as hydro, or administered by Hydro. There would have been no objection to making it part of Hydro's task. But after that, the newspaper reports began to cast clouds upon the horizon. The news was—and I am reading a headline: "Hint Hydro Leaving Gas to Private Firms."

This heading is over a story in the Star of January 20th, 1954, under the by-line of Mr. Roy Greenaway, one of the best informed men in the gallery. The story is as follows:

It seems certain now that the distribution of natural gas in Ontario will be by private companies and not by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, it was learned today at Queen's Park in official circles.

"Spokesman," "official circles," "well-informed people." You know how newspaper men are obliged to resort to this method.

Then he continues:

For some time now, the Natural Gas Committee of the Provincial Government has been considering the problem of distribution and will soon make a recommendation. At the start distribution by the Ontario Hydro was considered, but even the Hydro Commission was opposed to such a move and indicated it did not wish to mix sale of electricity and natural gas.

That may be a reasonable view on the part of the Hydro officials, but if it was not to be Hydro, then it should have been another government commission which would operate it as a publicly-owned utility.

From then on, it went from bad to worse until we have complete capitulation as expressed in the legislation now before us.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when I make such a big point of the public ownership of the natural gas distribution, I do so for two reasons: First, because I believe in public ownership. I am opposed to a scheme which will grant to an American-dominated company, a company primarily of Texan financiers, to get a strangle hold on the distribution of natural fuel for generations to come. That is what it will mean if we allow a private company to saddle us with the distribution of natural gas.

It is pretty well known to the government—and the hon. Attorney-General knows more than I do, I am sure, as he has more access to facts than I have—that the two companies which are now being combined into one are dominated by United States' interests. Mr. Speaker, that company will be given the franchise for as long as we, and those who follow us, live. It will extract the maximum profit it is capable of extracting from the people of this province, and other provinces. I say it is illogical, it is unreasonable, it is wrong to pursue such a policy. Why should the people of Ontario, industry and private consumers, or the people of Quebec or Alberta, have to pay tribute to financiers from Texas, who will invest $500 million dollars or more in the building of the pipe line?

This country is not in its colonial stage: it is not short of finances, and it has more than enough money to finance this and other big enterprises.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Supposing it operated at a loss?

MR. SALSBERG: They will make a minimum, we are told, of 8 per cent. on the investment.

HON. MR. PORTER: Where did the hon. member hear that?

MR. SALSBERG: I heard that. If the hon. Attorney-General, the chairman of the subcommittee, did not know that, I shall be very glad to enlighten him. There are definite statements from these companies that the Alberta Government is intending, or has already, limited their profits to 8 per cent. At least 2 companies have boasted of this as an indication of the limitations put upon them, and to convince the people that they will not rob them too much.

We do not need that. Furthermore, if we were to develop the gas pipe line service as a publicly-owned utility, we could supply natural gas to industry and private consumers at a greatly reduced rate, thus, helping industry as well as home owners. We could finance the whole enterprise on money at 3 to 4 per cent., not 8 per cent. If there is $300 million invested in the building of the pipe line, and other hundreds of millions of dollars in subsidiary development, then that money will earn for United States investors 8 per cent. per annum.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what you say.

MR. SALSBERG: Because it is a monopoly, and nothing will stop them from "upping" the rates, if the dividends should decline by as much as 1 per cent.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): The consumption will control the rates.

MR. SALSBERG: The Consumers' Gas Company, acting under a charter given them by the Legislature away back, limiting their profits to 10 per cent. has been able to establish for itself a position as a gilt-edged security investment, because of it being a monopoly and being able to raise prices.

That is exactly what this monopoly we are about to establish will do. Certainly they will not fall short of what we allow them. They will continue to make up to 8 per cent. We could finance it at 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. and let industry feel the benefits of cheaper fuel, and let the home owners have fuel at a lower rate.

Now, Mr. Speaker, I agree with the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) in one respect. When introducing the bill, on the first reading, he said, "This is not just an Ontario problem, it is a national problem." I agree with that. But that does not eliminate the need for bold leadership from this government, nor does it prevent us—this Legislature—from acting other than will be the case in other provinces, insofar as this province is concerned.

First, I would say that this government should give leadership. It started a few times to act as if it were going in the right direction, and then it gave us the feeling as if somebody had slapped it over the wrist, and said, "Now boys, do not become too rambunctious," and they began backing up. Then, a few days later, another group made a statement, and somebody else knocked them over the wrist, and again they stepped back.

That is not good enough. I think this government should—and this Legislature would support it—come out boldly and say during this session—now, the time has come for Ottawa, and the governments of Alberta, Manitoba and Quebec to get together with Ontario in an emergency meeting, and set up a national body, appointed by the governments, and that body will operate a publicly-owned gas distributing agency.

I think, frankly, there are very many members of this government who feel the same as I do. I think that is true. I am sure there are many supporters of the government who feel the same way. I am sorry the pressure from other sources compels this government to back down. They should not.

HON. MR. PORTER: I can assure the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), Mr. Speaker, there has been no pressure.

MR. SALSBERG: Then the government has changed its way, and Bay Street has changed its colours, which I doubt very much, because, like the leopard, Bay Street will never change its spots.

I think there should be leadership toward getting Ottawa and the other provinces to act jointly with us. If that fails, then we should go it alone.

We should have another bill, not Bill 94, but one which would say, as far as we are concerned: "Acting on behalf of the people of this province, we will have a publicly-owned utility to handle this gas distribution in this province, as we are doing with hydro."

We could find the money and do a good job, I am confident.

So, in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I am sorry we have Bill 94. Do we need control? Of course we do. Do we need some of the things suggested in the bill? Of course we do. But that does not improve the situation. We need an entirely different bill, and to take an entirely different position.

May I say that what we need today is the spirit and courage and the convictions of historic men like Sir Adam Beck.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: And Whitney.

MR. SALSBERG: All right, and Whitney. Let us rise to the occasion. I say to the hon. members of the Legislature that this is not a routine bill. Unfortunately, it can become a routine bill, setting up certain controls and setting up a commission. To do what? To facilitate a Texas-dominated corporation getting its grip upon the distribution of Canadian natural gas for generations to come. That must not be. I think the hon. Prime Minister of this province who has made some very fine promising utterances in connection with this matter, and the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), whom I thought shared the views of the hon. Prime Minister, and who has gone to a great deal of trouble travelling up and down the country, would come to this House and say, "We are sorry but we have to fight on this issue, as was done a few generations ago."

If there had not been men like Sir Adam Beck, and Whitney, there never would have been hydro in this province, and the development of this province would not have been as rapid as it has been, if we had no hydro system, owned and operated by the people of Ontario.

I say this despite criticism I have offered in regard to Hydro.

HON. MR. PORTER: I always understood the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) thought Hydro was no good.

MR. SALSBERG: That is beside the point.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member never liked Hydro.

MR. SALSBERG: That is another question.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: Hydro is not a matter which has anything to do—

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) never did think very much of it.

MR. SALSBERG: This differs from Hydro, in that Hydro has grown up through various administrations. I say the progress of this province would not have been as it has, if hydro had not been established.

Let us now seek examples—yes, I will use the word "inspirations"—from what Sir Adam and some of the others may have done: not from what the Government of Alberta may be doing, but from the annals of the past, to which so many of the supporters of this government turn, so that some positive action may be taken. Let us do it at this time, before it is too late. If we pass this bill at this session of the Legislature, then we are missing an historic opportunity: we will be saddling the people of this province with something they will resent, and condemn those who have been responsible for carrying it through.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, the bringing of gas to Ontario will mean a great deal to the northern part of the province. We in the north suffer from one-industry communities, and we feel if gas could be brought to these northern communities, it will mean other industries will establish branches in our northern towns, which will assist to develop the north.

There is one question I would like to ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), and which I will ask him to answer when he speaks, and that is this: The distribution of gas will be by feeder or branch lines to the different towns in the north. What would be the attitude of the government toward several municipalities combining resources and running their own distribution line to the main line, and then distributing it to the municipalities, as they pass by? At the present time, municipalities have no power to go beyond their own limits in building lines of this nature. Would the government facilitate a union of several municipalities carrying on a public-utility venture, such as this, getting their gas from the main line, and bringing it to the different municipalities?

Another question, Mr. Speaker, in regard to distribution: It may be that as it comes across Ontario, the wants of some of the municipalities may exhaust, or partially exhaust, the supply of gas. What provision is there in the bill to see that no one community gets a major share of the gas, to the disadvantage of any other community?

As discussion on this bill proceeds, it becomes more and more apparent that this government does not intend, in any way, to distribute gas as a public utility. That is why I asked my first question of the hon. Attorney-General. Will the government facilitate or permit—I am not asking that it build a line, or hand over the necessary funds—but will it facilitate the opportunity for municipalities to combine in Northern Ontario, to distribute their own gas, that is, bring the gas from the main line to the different municipalities?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I would like to reply to the question put by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in this debate. He asked whether there was any commitment by the province—and I presume he means the provincial government—to take any specific amount of gas, for any specific length of time.

Mr. Speaker, I can assure this House the government has not made any commitment of that kind whatsoever.

As I indicated on first reading of this bill, the trans-Canada pipe line will be privately owned, as opposed to being government-owned.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is a federal matter.

HON. MR. PORTER: I will come to the questions raised by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) a little later. At the moment, I am dealing with the question asked by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

The main transmission lines will be financed and operated by what may be termed a "private company," which no doubt will have shareholders widely separated, and bonds widely distributed, for all we know at the moment.

This government is not in a position—nor do I think we should—find ourselves in a place where we are going to pledge our own taxing resources to make sure that a specific amount of this gas will be consumed during any particular period of time.

This is a private enterprise, and as such, it will find the gas, will transmit it, and sell it. If they cannot sell it, that is their own loss. It would seem the best guarantee that gas would be consumed in the greatest possible quantity, lies in the fact they will want to sell as much as possible, to assist in paying for the cost of the line, the costs at the Alberta end, for the operation of the line, and, no doubt, to provide some return on their investment. As far as I am concerned, I cannot see anything wrong with that. I believe that private enterprise is what has made this country go. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) spoke about the first trans-continental railway being financed by government funds—

MR. SALSBERG: They took it over from private enterprise.

HON. MR. PORTER: We find the gas in Alberta—

MR. SALSBERG: We will be taking the gas over—

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Has the hon. member completed his remarks?

MR. SALSBERG: For the moment.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Speaker, I would suggest he round them out, and then keep quiet.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, I will be back again.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Who built the original trans-continental railway? Was it the state? No; it was private enterprise. It was built by men who risked their own money; many of them spent money on the chance of securing some benefit, and some of them "went broke" doing it.

The hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) suggested the Alberta Government is using some of this gas for the benefit of its people. How do they get it? Does the state create it? No; private enterprise handed it to them on a platter. If the money we distribute by way of grants to municipalities is earned by private enterprise—

MR. SALSBERG: Why do you not sell hydro?

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: We are not discussing hydro at the present time.

MR. SALSBERG: Of course, we know more about hydro than we do about this gas.

HON. MR. PORTER: At the time the legislation was before the House, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) spoke about it as if it were no good.

MR. SALSBERG: It was only because I liked hydro.

HON. MR. PORTER: No doubt, Mr. Speaker, the hon. member will say the same thing about the public gas situation, that it will be no good.

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Attorney-General runs it, it will be bad.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: I wonder what it would be like if the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) were to run it?

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. PORTER: This government, as I say, has not been called upon, nor do I think we should be called upon, to make any financial commitment as a government.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): If it was not called upon to make a financial commitment, was the government called upon and did it furnish, an estimate of what gas might be used?

HON. MR. PORTER: Oh yes. I may say a great deal of work was done in exploring the different markets, and various marketing possibilities. It may be of interest to hon. members if I gave a brief summary indicating some of the problems involved.

There is the domestic market in the municipalities to which gas is distributed for the heating of houses and for domestic use. Gas provided for these purposes is generally the highest priced, principally because the supply varies from month to month in accordance with the quantity consumed, due in great measure, the weather. When gas is sold on that basis a higher price can be obtained.

Then there is gas which can be sold to industry on an interruptable basis. There are industries which are prepared to instal gas equipment, despite the fact that they may use coal or oil in normal circumstances. If they can secure gas at a price that is low enough, they are willing to change over to gas, from time to time, when there is a surplus—during the summer months, for instance, when the domestic consumption is down.

The great objective of any company operating a pipe line of this kind is to provide a market which will consume the total flow of gas in its pipe line 24 hours a day, 365 days of the year. That is a very difficult problem, and one which requires great experience and great engineering skill, and ability to find markets, before it can be solved. It requires ability, in other words, to sell the gas. This gas must be sold. If the price is too high, people will buy oil for heating their houses, and industry will make use of an alternative fuel. It will be necessary for the company selling this gas to make sure the prices are low enough to appeal to the various utilities, and to the municipalities, so that the maximum quantity may be sold.

I may interject at this point, that this is one reason why this would be a most undesirable type of activity for a public distributing system. Hon. members will appreciate that it comes into conflict with other fields which compete with gas, such as coal, and oil.

There may be a great deal to be said by various industries which are in the business of distributing oil and coal. There may be certain virtues about their products as against gas.

MR. SALSBERG: You are competing with hydro.

HON. MR. PORTER: It does to some extent. But it should be remembered the main usefulness of hydro is in providing light and power for homes and industry. I do not think gas would be considered an important competitor in that field. The main competition is in respect of water heaters in houses, and I am informed by the Hydro-Electric Power Commission that the Hydro has now a great many of these water heaters installed throughout the province — installations which use a great deal of our electricity. They represent a large consumption of power, and as the feeling in this province is that there must be conservation of power, because sooner or later the physical water-power resources of the province will have reached their limit. Hydro would be very glad to get out of that type of installation. This would enable hydro to be used for the purposes for which it is best fitted.

Of course, gas also has certain uses for which it is better fitted than any other type of fuel. It is, perhaps, the ideal fuel for space heating in houses, and although some people might prefer to use electric stoves, a gas stove is also very desirable. Moreover gas can be used to operate refrigerators and a great many other household appliances of that kind.

The problem of this company will be to sell the gas. It is all very well to talk about "cheap gas." In my view it is quite impossible to visualize gas coming in from Alberta to this province and available at a price which might be termed "exceedingly cheap." If they can sell gas at prices which will be the equivalent of, or slightly lower than the prices of coal and oil for domestic and industrial use, and sell the total quantity of it, they may be able to pay for the pipe line.

This is an enormous project which involves calculation as to the future development of markets, and one which has an element of risk in it. Why should the government be involved? In the first place, the government would have to devise some general system of distribution. It would be competing with oil and other products which are being sold on the free competitive market.

MR. SALSBERG: You are doing it now with hydro.

HON. MR. PORTER: Hydro does not compete with any of these other fields.

MR. SALSBERG: Of course it does. In regard to water heaters.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is just a small point.

MR. SALSBERG: It is a very big item.

HON. MR. PORTER: Returning to the main aspect of this picture, the government should not put itself in a position where it is going to compete in the free, competitive market, with other legitimate businesses, which are carrying on and serving the public very well.

Moreover, this is not a project which is for the development of the natural resources of the Province of Ontario. There might be an entirely different argument if it was a question of producing or harnessing some natural resource, such as we do with water power, and turning it over for the use of the people.

This is a project whereby gas will be provided in Alberta and transported down here. We shall have to pay for it in this province at the point where it is delivered in the pipe line, and at the price which is charged, in accordance with the contract, which will be worked out between the Pipe Line company and the utilities.

How can anyone be justified in thinking the government should step in and set up some sort of distributing commission to buy a commodity from a private enterprise, and distribute it for a few miles in a few pipes and sell the gas to municipalities at the other end?

There is no possible justification in the public interest for getting into that sort of "half-baked" type of business. If the Federal Government decides that the main trans-Canada pipe line is to be a publicly-owned pipe line, built and administered by some organization of the Federal Government, our position in dealing with the matter might be altered.

MR. SALSBERG: How about asking them?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not intend to ask them. I have no intention of asking them. It is their decision, and as far as I am personally concerned, I agree with it 100 per cent. I think they are right.

MR. SALSBERG: This is "Toryism 1954."

HON. MR. PORTER: Let it be "Toryism," or anything else: it is right.

MR. SALSBERG: There is not even a small "p" in progressive.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) seems to be following sometimes the tactics of a certain senator in the United States. Only he is going in the opposite direction.

To proceed with the questions asked by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). The hon. Leader of the Opposition asks whether the problem of building up a market has resulted in our making any commitments. As I have outlined, we have made surveys in conjunction with the federal authorities, and we gave the information to the Pipe Line company and the Federal Government. We have fairly accurate estimates of the market prospects in both Northern and Southern Ontario. The history of the consumption of gas in the United States has been that the great difficulty generally lies in the first 3 or 4 years after the introduction of the pipe line. It takes time to build up the market. The pace of development in the early stages is limited. Somebody has to do some selling, and equipment has to be changed over. But once the companies become established, the market expands very rapidly, and once this pipe line has been in operation for 4 or 5 years I would be prepared to say the company will not only sell all the gas which is available, but there will be further demands for its products.

As I indicated the other day, the amount of the average supply expected from this pipe line in relation to the total amount of energy we consume is really not so great as it might be thought. The new supply of gas will only provide part of the additional energy we require over the next 10 or 12 years. It will not be the complete answer to our problem, unless, as time goes by, they can supplement the supply to meet the increasing demand.

Mr. Speaker, I now turn to arrangements for gas to be brought into Ontario from the United States to supply the market.

That again is the subject of negotiation at the present time between the Federal Government and the United States authorities. We have laid before the federal authorities all the information we have as to possible sources of gas in Southwestern Ontario and the extent to which those reserves of gas might be drawn upon for a temporary period, while a market is being built up during the next few years. It appears it would be a very risky proposition to rely upon Southwestern Ontario gas to do that job. The reserves would have to be considerable, and I am informed that in the next year or so, some supplemental supply will be desirable.

I do not want to say what may be in the minds of the federal authorities with regard to this matter, but I am sure they are approaching it very much as we have done, and taking a proper share in the exploration of this problem. They are doing their best to see what can be worked out in the interests of everyone. I think it has been stated on a number of occasions by the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Hon. Mr. Thomas) that he would be opposed to allowing gas to come in from the United States, which would compete with gas coming through the Alberta pipe line.

The hon. member for Kenora (Mr.

Wren) raised the question of Ontario production. He said there might be a great increase in the production of gas in future years. That may be so. We do not know. Gas has been produced in Ontario for many years. The extent of production has varied from time to time, but it is being produced now at the rate of about 8,500 million cubic feet a year, which compares with 100 billion cubic feet which will pass through the Alberta pipe line. Ontario gas production is, therefore, a very small percentage of this larger figure. I would point out to hon. members that this proposed production could be stepped up considerably by the use of compression, as well as by what is called "looping." By building additional lines, and by compression, it is possible that the supply of Alberta gas can be almost doubled.

It would, therefore, seem to me that Ontario production at the present time is a comparatively small proportion of the total amount of gas which will probably be available in this province. However, if the supply does increase, it means we shall have more cheaper gas and that will be "all to the good." I think there would be no difficulty in marketing the gas we produce in Southwestern Ontario. It will be cheaper gas because it will not have to be conveyed over such a vast distance. The capital cost of pipelines will be very much less, and this will be reflected in a lower cost to the consumer.

I have dealt with the aspects of public ownership. Much as I try to, I will never convince the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) about anything. On the other hand, I can say he has never convinced me about anything, either.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has asked me about the possibility of distributing gas by branch lines to towns in the north, and whether the government would facilitate the provision of such branch lines.

I am not certain whether this would not require an amendment of some statute—we have 2 or 3 years in which to consider that—but if this problem is raised, and if municipalities think this would be a convenient and economic way of proceeding, I am sure this government would, as always, do everything possible to facilitate measures of that kind. Although I cannot say what might be done in circumstances which have not yet arisen, it seems to me this is a proposal which might very well be considered. I should not be at all surprised if this were not a very useful way of dealing with certain aspects of this problem.

The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) also mentioned that some municipalities might get a greater share of gas than others, and that as a result there might not be enough to go round.

I think, when the time comes, Mr. Speaker, provision will be made for increasing the capacity of the line. I think that will answer the question.

I do not think we should look at this as a line which will produce 100 billion cubic feet a year for all time, and that will be the end of it. I think it is a great trans-Canada project. It does not go across the whole of Canada, and that may be one of the reasons the Federal Government may have for not attempting to build the line with taxpayers' money, when it only affects 3 or 4 provinces of the entire Dominion of Canada. They might feel it would not be the proper way to spend the money of the taxpayers of Canada. I would think that might be one reason—and a very good reason—for leaving this to a private company which will raise the money, take the risk, and do the business in those portions of Canada which they can conveniently reach.

I would think, so far as the supply of gas is concerned, regarding the demands for gas in future years, if the Alberta fields extend the way they seem to be doing, if the future of those fields is as great as well-informed people seem to think it is, the great problem in the future would not be a shortage of gas, but would be where are they going to sell all the gas they produce? I do not think that is a problem with which we will be faced for some time to come—certainly not in our lifetime.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask if the hon. Attorney-General is doing anything to bring about a condition where the pipe will be manufactured in the only plant in Canada where it can be manufactured, namely in the Page Hersey pipe plant in Welland, where there is a great deal of unemployment at the moment?

HON. MR. PORTER: That matter was raised a few days ago by the hon. member for Welland. He is the one who thought of that, not the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: It does not matter who thought of it, it should be answered.

HON. MR. PORTER: I answered it at that time. The hon. member should have been here.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General never answered the question then. He was evasive, as always. I have just tried to "pin him down."

MR. SPEAKER: Order, please.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Attorney-General one question? Would the legislation, now proposed, give the Fuel Board authority over the prices charged for gas in all parts of the province?

HON. MR. PORTER: It will give authority to fix rates for gas to the ultimate consumer. By an amendment I propose to introduce, where there is transmission between different points, which sometimes is done by separate companies or organizations, authority will be given to fix the costs of transmission and, also, to fix the price of storage. Some of this gas, during off-peak periods, must be stored in storage fields in Southwestern Ontario, and there is some cost involved in moving gas, and the cost of the pipe line itself. Those are things which we cannot control.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Attorney-General is aware, as we all are, that in Toronto, and some other centres, manufactured gas is being used. Is it true that the equipment now used to burn manufactured gas will not be suitable for natural gas?

HON. MR. PORTER: That is right.

MR. OLIVER: Does the consumer, in this case, have to bear all the costs of changing the equipment over from using manufactured gas to using natural gas?

HON. MR. PORTER: I know something of what is proposed in the City of Toronto, where they have a manufactured gas distributing system. As a matter of fact, the manufactured gas distributing systems are not as universal as they were at one time, because of the cost of the gas. They cannot compete with other fuels. I understand, The Consumers Gas Company has arranged with some firm which is still in this sort of business to formulate plans for the conversion of all the equipment in Toronto. Just what the financial arrangements will be, I do not know. I do not know whether they will make a charge for that or not. I do not know whether that has been settled, but I understand it is a very highly-skilled operation, perhaps somewhat similar to the hydro conversion type of operation, but on a different scale, and in a different way.

Natural gas has twice the BTU's of manufactured gas, therefore, every burner will have to be reduced to one-half the volume of flow. They will have to cut down the outlets of every burner by one-half. I understand, there is a device in some burners which provides for that, and the change will be simple. But, in other cases, they will have to replace the burner entirely. I understand that sort of equipment does not involve a very large item of cost, nothing like replacing an electric motor, or something like that. It is a point which has not yet been decided.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT,

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 77, "The Child Welfare Act, 1954."

MR. OLIVER: If this is the bill which includes some suggestion that the parents might be "emotionally upset," I wonder if the hon. Minister would tell us why he wants to include that.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: In moving second reading of this new Child Welfare Act, I do not want to repeat the explanation I gave on introducing the bill in the House. I would like to say that I do appreciate the apparent favourable reception which it has received from the various organizations across the province, which are interested in child welfare, and also the favourable comments received from hon. members as well.

This was a very large undertaking. A committee was appointed, invited to study the problem, make a survey, and bring in a report to our department in connection with the revision and consolidation of all our Child Welfare Acts, so we would have what would be rated as good as, if not better than, any child-welfare legislation in any jurisdiction.

I want to again pay tribute to those people who comprised that committee, and brought forward recommendations which have been incorporated in this bill, after a great deal of study, not only by them, but also by the officials of the Child Welfare Branch of my department. There has been some comment in the press, and elsewhere, in connection with certain new features and new principles which have been introduced into this bill.

Perhaps on second reading, it might be preferable to answer any questions to any doubts, which may be in the mind of any hon. member of this House, in connection with these new principles.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has raised a point in connection with a new feature respecting "emotional neglect" of children. This is an entirely new concept of neglect, and is only intended to cover those rare cases where, despite adequate physical care, the child's well-being is endangered by the attitude of the parents.

There are cases which have been brought to the attention of people who are responsible for the care of neglected children in this province, where it was quite definitely felt some steps should be taken to provide legislation, whereby "emotional neglect" could be established as a ground for creating a wardship of the child.

I might give you an example which came to my attention not many months ago, where a family had already 2 boys of their own, and had taken a little girl into their home, to give her foster-home care. They became attached to the little girl, and after a few years, decided they would like to adopt her. The adoption took place, and she became their legal child. As she developed over a period of years, it was found she was not developing mentally as rapidly as she should. These people, realizing the child whom they had adopted was not going to develop into a normal adult, became more or less estranged toward the child, and she was definitely being mentally persecuted in her adopted home. Yet she was their child legally, just as if she had been born to them in wedlock.

This legislation would take care of a case of that kind.

Another case has been brought to my attention, about which I can tell you.

MR. OLIVER: Would the hon. Minister tell me what would happen to the child in such a case?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The authorities would be able to bring evidence before a judge to secure an order that the child be committed as a ward of the Children's Aid Society.

Another case came to my attention, that of a mother with a child born prior to her husband leaving for overseas in the Second World War. He failed to return because he found someone over there whom he thought he liked better than his wife. She secured a divorce, married again, and after a few years she and her husband adopted another child. A year elapsed, and they had a child of their own, and for some reason or other, they decided they did not like their adopted child. That child was persecuted in that home through the attitude which the mother had assumed toward the adopted child.

We have had several such instances brought to our attention, and we feel it is perfectly safe to have these cases referred to a judge to decide, on the evidence presented, whether there are sufficient grounds to establish "emotional neglect," and in that way, the child can be made a ward of the Children's Aid Society.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): That does not apply to adopted children only, does it?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: No. We have found cases of that nature, one of which I will bring to your attention.

In one particular home, it has been brought to my attention by an official of my department, that a child was found—one of a large family—who was being emotionally neglected. The father had taken a dislike to this particular child to the point where they had a curtain in the middle of the table, the child sitting on one side of the curtain and the other members of the family on the other side.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to make a few remarks if no other hon. member is going to. I want to say that the government has, I believe, introduced a measure which is generally of an advanced character, and to that extent, deserves a measure of recognition. I say this not with "tongue in cheek." As you know, I am always anxious to give credit to the government, but unfortunately they do not give me that opportunity very often.

In this measure, I am, as I am sure many hon. members are, guided by the opinion of those most interested in the legislation, who have had a great deal of experience with the problems the legislation is covering. I, like a great many other hon. members—and as the hon. Minister has indicated—have been influenced by the opinions of organizations and bodies which are expert in the field. Having said that, I would like to say a few words, with a degree of hesitation, on the question of "emotional neglect." I know this measure has provided a safeguard in that such decisions will be made by acknowledged, recognized and established experts in the field; nevertheless, it is true it will depend upon the experts, and the law will be interpreted by them.

I am not raising this point by way of objecting to the section as it now is written, but I think I would not be honest with myself if I were not to express, despite opinions of the experts, some measure of hesitation on this one section, and I hope that experience will show whether or not a more definitive form will not have to be resorted to.

There is one point which I am sorry to say has been omitted, and it is very important from the viewpoint of preventing the "trafficking in babies," as it is commonly referred to. It is a case of omission, rather than commission.

I understand that the opinion I am about to express is shared by some people in the profession, and I understand that something to that effect has been stated, but I have not been able to locate it, I confess, and I will speak therefore for myself, giving my reaction to it.

In order to prevent the black marketing of babies, I think we must not only provide rigid and strict controls, and not only increase penalties, but provide conditions which will make it unnecessary for the prospective unmarried mother to turn to people who traffic in babies. I am afraid we have not, as yet, provided such conditions. What I have in mind, Mr. Speaker, is this—and I think it is not an uncommon experience—that an unmarried girl who becomes pregnant will, in most instances, seek a way of escaping from her immediate environment, and the area in which she lives, and will seek to live elsewhere during the difficult period which lies ahead.

When a girl, in such circumstances, comes, let us say, to the City of Toronto, unless she has private funds to take care of her needs, she is compelled either to turn to private or public agencies for assistance, or to turn to those who seek to profit from the sale of children. The difficulty, as I understand it, at this moment, is that once a girl applies to either a private or public agency—particularly is this true of public agencies—she is of necessity asked to give her place of origin or the last place in which she had established residential rights, so that her community may be charged for the amount of money advanced.

It is quite evident, Mr. Speaker, that when this is done, the girl will prefer not to seek assistance from such organizations, because she is obviously desirous of keeping her condition from the knowledge of her own community and the people whom she knows. Under such certain circumstances, she may be directed to either a medical practitioner or another person who will provide what funds may be necessary for the pre-natal period—when the girl is incapable of working in any public place—who will take care of her, pay the hospital costs, and perhaps take care of her immediate post-natal needs, and then take the child, and try to profit from the transaction.

I say, Mr. Speaker, we will not stop the trafficking in babies entirely unless and until the province assumes the financial responsibility for caring for prospective unmarried mothers, who are in such circumstances as I have described. I do not think it would amount to a very large sum of money, but I do think it would be money well and wisely spent.

If my presentation of the present situation is correct, then I would suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the government seek to amend the bill which is now before us, before it reaches its final stage, so that this dangerous loop-hole may be plugged. As I said a moment ago, at present, the door is wide open for a continuation of the illicit trafficking in babies, and we are forcing the unmarried mothers into situations of this nature by the rigid demands made upon them when they come for assistance to governmental or other agencies.

I make this earnest appeal to the government to amend the bill before it is discussed in the committee stage, so that it will be much better than it is now, and constitute a piece of legislation in which the government will be able to take great pride.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, I think in order to clarify, to some extent, the remarks made by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)—inasmuch that I feel he has been misinformed in connection with the case of unmarried mothers—may I say, in the first instance, that I was in municipal life for a great many years and I cannot remember any charge-backs to any municipality with respect to the care of an unmarried mother who had gone elsewhere to give birth to her child.

It is true that in a great percentage of cases unmarried mothers display a tendency to go to the large centres to have their children. However, we have some very fine organizations in this province which are willing and which are doing a very splendid job of handling such cases. I refer to the Church Homes, the Salvation Army, and other organizations which are furnishing accommodation regardless of whether the mother is able to pay or not.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): The Victor Home?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The Victor Home is the United Church Home. In addition to that, of course, an effort is made on the part of the organization operating the institution, the home or the hospital, to collect, if possible, from the putative father. If that is not possible, in a great many cases the parents or the unmarried mother herself pay for it or the mother pays for it when she goes back into employment. But in every case, wherever the mother so desires, the child is signed over. Of course, it immediately loses its identity. I do believe that in practically every case it is a "state secret" in respect to children of unmarried mothers in this province. I do not think it would, in any way, either increase or decrease any "racket" which might be going on, and which I doubt is being carried on to any extent in this province at the present time.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, this is an extremely important statement.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): This is second reading. In 10 years, the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has never learned.

MR. SPEAKER: This is second reading. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has made his address on second reading.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

PUBLIC UTILITIES ACT

HON. MR. D. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 95, "An Act to amend The Public Utilities Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I propose that this bill be referred to The Mining Committee, The Natural Gas Section.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 96, "An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I propose that this also be referred to The Mining Committee, Natural Gas Section.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) would there be any necessity to amend this particular bill, if we were to meet what I thought was the very reasonable request for enabling legislation made by the hon. member for Cochrane South

(Mr. Grummett): If you are going to meet his suggestion, would there be any necessity to amend this bill?

HON. MR. PORTER: Under The Municipal Franchises Act, gas franchises are provided for, all of which have to be approved under that Act by The Municipal Board. This merely transfers the right of approval to the Fuel Board.

MR. OLIVER: That is all right. I see that now.

HON. MR. PORTER: Because we think it is appropriate that the board has complete control over the entire fuel situation.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

GAS PIPELINES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 97, "An Act to amend the Gas Pipelines Act, 1951."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I propose that this bill also be referred to the Committee on Mining, Natural Gas Section.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

PERSONS WHO BORE OR DRILL WELLS FOR WATER ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 98, "An Act respecting Persons who Bore or Drill Wells for Water."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether it is appropriate to send this to the Mining Committee, but I propose that it be sent there to be dealt with, if necessary, by the Natural Gas Section.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

PETTY TRESPASS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 99, "An Act to amend the Petty Trespass Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

ONTARIO SCHOOL TRUSTEES' COUNCIL ACT

HON. W. J. DUNLOP (Minister of Education) moves second reading of Bill No. 101, "An Act to amend the Ontario School Trustees' Council Act, 1953."

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is such a simple matter, dealing with the matter of providing alternate representatives to council, that I think there is no need for it to go to any committee.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to; House in Committee of the Whole.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I beg to inform the House that the Honourable the Lieutenant - Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the proposed resolutions, recommends them to the consideration of the House.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Concurrence is prayed to the following resolutions:

By HON. MR. DUNLOP:

(a) there shall be payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund annually the sum of $6,000 to be awarded by the Minister in accordance with the regulations as scholarships to residents in Ontario for the purpose of enabling them to pursue courses of study outside Ontario; and

(b) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may authorize the Treasurer of Ontario to guarantee payment by the province of any debentures issued by an elementary school board in Ontario or by a municipality in a territorial district for any school purpose for which the board or municipality is authorized to issue debentures; and

(c) the cost of establishment, maintenance and conduct of a provincial technical or polytechnical institute, school for the deaf, school for the blind, teachers' colleges and summer and winter courses and leadership training camps shall be payable out of such moneys as may be appropriated by the Legislature for these purposes, as provided by Bill No. 33, "The Department of Education Act, 1954."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. PORTER:

That, where a chief coroner of a city is also supervising coroner and the corporation of the city has appointed or appoints a secretary for him, the corporation shall be reimbursed quarterly out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to the extent of one-third of the salary and the cost-of-living bonus, if any, of such secretary and one-third of the amount, if any, paid by the corporation under the civic pension fund or plan in respect of such secretary, as provided by Bill No. 36, "An Act to amend The Coroners Act."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. PORTER:

That, where the judge of the Surrogate Court is not also a judge or junior judge of the County Court, the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may fix his salary to be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, as provided by Bill No. 48, "An Act to amend The Surrogate Courts Act."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. GOODFELLOW:

That, the Minister may make annual grants on account of capital expenditures to any society or class of society in such amounts and on such terms and conditions as the regulations may prescribe out of such moneys as are appropriated therefor by the Legislature.

as provided by Bill No. 60, "An Act to amend The Agricultural Societies Act."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. PORTER :

That, (a) the salary of every full-time judge and every full-time deputy judge shall be paid out of moneys that are voted therefor by the Legislature and an amount equal to the salary, cost-of-living bonus, if any, superannuation credits, if any, and any other allowance paid in the first instance by the province shall be paid quarterly to the Treasurer of Ontario by the municipality or municipalities that would, but for subsection 3 of section 10 of The Juvenile and Family Courts Act, 1954, be responsible for the payment of such salaries; and

(b) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may direct the payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to any municipality of such portion of the cost to it of a Juvenile and Family Court as he may determine, as provided by Bill No. 75, "The Juvenile and Family Courts Act, 1954."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. GOODFELLOW :

That, (a) annual grants shall be paid out of such moneys as are appropriated therefor by the Legislature to each Children's Aid Society in such amounts as may be provided by regulations and an amount equal to 25 per cent. of the amount of funds obtained each year from campaigns conducted to obtain private donations; and

(b) stenographers' fees for taking down and transcribing evidence in proceedings with respect to a child belonging to territory without municipal organization may be paid out of moneys appropriated therefor by the Legislature; and

(c) where the municipality is ordered by a judge to pay the average daily cost to a Children's Aid Society of providing for the welfare of a child or ward who is living in an institution or home other than a home of his parent there shall be paid to the municipality out of moneys appropriated therefor by the Legislature an amount equal to 25 per cent. of the amount of the net expenditure of the municipality under such order; and

(d) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may make special grants out of the moneys appropriated therefor by the Legislature to any municipality in a territorial district to relieve, in whole or in part, any such municipality that is unduly burdened in any year by reason of its liabilities under Part II of The Child Welfare Act, 1954; and as provided by Bill No. 77, "An Act to consolidate and revise The Children's Protection Act," "The Children of Unmarried Parents Act" and "The Adoption Act."

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. DOUCETT :

That (a) grants in respect of the cost of drainage works may be paid to municipalities out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund where the grant does not exceed $5,000 by the Minister and in other cases by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council; and as provided by Bill No. 80, "The Provincial Aid to Drainage Act, 1954."

(b) grants in respect of the cost of drainage works in a territorial district but not in a municipality may be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund where the grant does not exceed $5,000 by the Minister and in other cases by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

Resolution concurred in.

By HON. MR. FROST :

That (a) the Treasurer may pay for securities purchased by him out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(b) the payment of interest by the Treasurer shall be a charge upon and payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(c) money received by the Crown for a special purpose and paid into the Consolidated Revenue Fund may be paid out of the Fund for that purpose; and

(d) refunds shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(e) amounts required to be paid under a guarantee for the payment of any debt or obligation may be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(f) public moneys may be paid under warrant of the Lieutenant-Governor and on order of the Treasury Board out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(g) the Treasurer may pay out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund accounts for legislative and departmental supplies delivered to the Queen's Printer; and

(h) moneys raised by way of loan or securities issued are payable out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(i) payments in respect of lost securities and loan expenses may be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund; and

(j) where public money has been received by a person to be applied to a purpose and has not so been applied, money out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund may be applied to the purpose, as provided by Bill No. 91, "An Act to provide for the Financial Administration of the Government of Ontario and for the Organization of the Treasury Department."

Resolution concurred in.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, may I point out that the resolution just read is not in the Routine Proceedings?

By HON. MR. PORTER:

That, moneys required for the purposes of the Ontario Fuel Board shall be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, as provided by Bill No. 94, "An Act to establish the Ontario Fuel Board."

Resolution concurred in.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, is it proper to bring on these resolutions when they do not appear in Routine Proceedings? They have been taken out of Votes and Proceedings, instead of taking them out of Routine Proceedings.

THE CHAIRMAN: They were approved by the Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor today.

PROVINCIAL PARKS ACT

CITY OF TORONTO

House in Committee on Bill No. 26, "An Act respecting the City of Toronto."

Section 1 agreed to.
On section 2.

MR. WEAVER moves,

That section 2 of the bill be amended by adding thereto the following words:

provided that the full value of such land and buildings, except the land and buildings that are exempt from taxation under section 4 of The Assessment Act, shall be included in the assessment of the city for the purpose of the apportionment of the levies of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto among the area municipalities under The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, 1953.

He said: The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has asked for an explanation of this. This addition to the section is proposed, in order to make it perfectly clear that, while exempting certain of the buildings of the Canadian National Exhibition from taxation it is solely for the purpose of avoiding double bookkeeping; in other words, the City of Toronto owns the land and buildings and merely pays taxes to itself on them. We want it to be clear that those lands and buildings are to be calculated in the assessment of the City of Toronto for the purpose of taxation, or levy for Metropolitan purposes. It was always so intended, but this amendment is proposed in order to make the situation perfectly clear.

Sections 2 to 5 inclusive agreed to.

Schedules A to B agreed to.

That Bill No. 26 be reported; agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the committee rise, and report certain bills, with and without amendment.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumes, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, The Committee of the Whole House begs to report certain bills, with and without amendment, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the adjournment of the House.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Can the hon. Minister indicate Monday's business?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We shall proceed with what will be on the Order paper, and perhaps with some Estimates.

MR. OLIVER: There will be no debate on the budget?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think not. I think that will continue on Tuesday.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.39 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

MONDAY, MARCH 22, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M. on Education presents the Committee's Second Report as follows:

And the House having met.

Prayers.

Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

MR. SPEAKER: I have been asked to make two announcements. For those who may need a little money before the end of the session, I would remind you that Wednesday of this week is the last day for securing any advances you may require.

Bill No. 85, An Act to amend The Public Schools Act;

And the following bills with certain amendments:

There seems to be some misunderstanding with regard to the time of the Annual Press Dinner. The tickets, I am informed state "seven-thirty"; however, I am advised that members of the press will be on hand shortly after six o'clock to meet any who would care to arrive at that time.

Bill No. 33, The Department of Education Act, 1954.

Bill No. 63, The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act, 1954.

Bill No. 84, The Schools Administration Act, 1954.

Bill No. 86, An Act to amend The Separate Schools Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

We are very glad to welcome students of Humewood Public School in the City of Toronto. Day by day, we are privileged to have as our guests those students from our schools who are able to attend, and we sincerely hope they will thoroughly enjoy their visit this afternoon with us.

MR. C. MAPLEDORAM (Fort William): I beg leave to present the First Report of the Standing Committee on Mining, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Mapledoram from the Standing Committee on Mining presents the committee's First Report as follows:

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 53, An Act to amend The Mining Act.

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): I beg leave to present the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Education, and move its adoption.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Brandon from the Standing Committee

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

THE SECURITY TRANSFER TAX ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Security Transfer Tax Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this matter was mentioned in the budget, and relates to extending the exemption for payment of security tax on bonds which are guaranteed by the Ontario Government, or any Provincial or Federal Government. It would include, for example, the boards of each organization such as Hydro, Canadian National Railways, Ontario Northland Railway, and anything of that sort, and would apply to any of the governments in Canada.

SUCCESSION DUTY ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Succession Duty Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I will not go through each section of this bill. They can be considered in committee. It is an Act which clarifies certain matters relating to the sections as set out in the bill. These matters can be discussed in committee, as I have said.

I point out that the bill itself, makes no reference to the bill introduced by the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) relative to the status of adopted children. The provisions contained in that bill are such that it will automatically follow that, in all respects, adopted children will be treated as natural-born children.

THE MUNICIPAL SUBSIDIES ADJUSTMENT ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the first part of this bill gives the Minister of Municipal Affairs power to adjust the subsidy of unconditional grants to municipalities where they would receive less than they received previously in relation to police and fire department services.

There are 27 such municipalities in the Province of Ontario, most of which are in the northern part of the province. There are many summer places, such as Crystal Beach, Wasaga Beach, and so on, where they require fairly substantial fire and police protection during the summer months, but the per capita grant based on the permanent residents is very small compared to the number of people who are there during the summer months. The same thing would occur in Marathon, Terrace Bay and Kapuskasing. The great percentage of the people in the Kapuskasing area are living outside the town, and that municipality would not be receiving a per capita grant for those outside of the municipality, but they would still have to furnish police and fire services.

Then, we go a little farther and say that:

Notwithstanding the provisions of The Municipal Unconditional Grants Act, 1953, where part of a rural municipality is annexed to an urban municipality, the Minister of Municipal Affairs shall adjust the payments under the said Act for the first 5 years immediately following the annexation. . . .

Therefore, the rural municipalities will not lose anything on the grants they would have received for 5 years. For instance, the grant would be $3 for the City of Hamilton, while Saltfleet, after annexation would still receive its $1.50 per capita grant. The same would apply to Brantford and London, etc., where annexations of that sort have taken place. The rural community will not lose those grants for 5 years, and the only gain for the larger municipality in each case will be the difference between the lowered grant in the township and the higher grants they would receive.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): I beg leave to present to the House the following:

The Twentieth Annual Report of the Department of Municipal Affairs for the year ending December 31st, 1953;

The Report of the Minister of Public Works for Ontario for the 12 months ending March 31st, 1953.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I refer to my Budget Address of March 11th, in the course of which I referred to the government's intention of establishing a committee to make inquiry into the economics of the gold mining industry.

The plight of this important industry has been of increasing concern to us, Mr. Speaker. The number of active gold mines in Ontario has declined from 72 in 1941 to 38 last year. More than a dozen promising new mines which began operations in recent years have been obliged to close. The number of wage-earners has been reduced to nearly half the total employed 12 years ago. The value of gold production has dropped from $122 million in 1940 to less than $75 million last year. This situation is, of course, not peculiar to Ontario or even to Canada; gold mining is a depressed industry throughout the whole world—in South Africa, the United States and Southern Rhodesia, no less than in this province. Nevertheless in our own province, having regard to the importance of gold mining in the past and the effect which it has had on our economic position, the matter is of great seriousness.

The single major factor which has brought the industry to its present state is this: that while over the past 20 years the price of most other commodities and the cost of labour and materials have doubled, the price of gold has remained fixed at $35 per oz. in United States currency and in terms of Canadian dollars it has actually declined, leaving out of account the effects of the gold-aid policy of the Federal Government.

No solution would therefore be better tailored to the needs of this industry than a rise in the price of gold. But this is not a matter which lies within the control of the province or, indeed, of the Dominion. It is a matter for the decision of the International Monetary Fund, the member countries of which have agreed not to buy or sell gold above the prevailing price; and in all deliberations concerning the price of gold the voice of the United States, which is by far the largest purchaser of gold, is the determining one.

During the recent disputes between the labour union and the gold mining companies, in the north country, it became apparent that the controversy arose to some extent from a lack of agreement as to the main factors affecting the industry and its future. It is hoped that from the work of the committee which is now being set up will come a better understanding of these factors and that this will promote the industrial harmony which is so essential to the gold mining industry in this difficult period.

May I say, sir, that in the negotiations which the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and I conducted—negotiations which involved almost countless hours; I would not say countless days but it seemed to be an interminable time—one of the greatest difficulties we experienced was to arrive at any common understanding as to what were the problems of the industry on one side, I mean representing the mechanics of the gold mining industry and on the other side—the men who were working in the industry. They were very far apart on that point.

The suggestion of appointing a committee to study this whole very involved and complicated problem arose, Mr. Speaker, out of that situation. It was felt that there should be an enquiry to establish what were the basic economic facts relating to this industry. From such a study and report may also come observations which will assist in the shaping of provincial policies for the sound economic development of the mineral resources of the province and the promotion of industry and welfare in these northern areas.

It is not my idea, nor is it the intention of the government, that this committee should be in the form of a Royal Commission. I know this will please the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver). The idea is that it will be quite open to the committee to discuss problems with the various persons, parties and interests concerned. In other words this committee will be composed of men who are of great capacity and who have thorough knowledge of this problem, and it seems to me we should not put them in a position in which, as would be the case with a Royal Commission, they would have to sit for days and weeks taking evidence. It would be a matter of obtaining all the information that is available—that is all the information that would be submitted to them, and which they could gather—and then making a report on the situation.

The members of the committee who have agreed to serve are:

Professor F. A. Knox (Chairman), Head, Department of Political and Economic Science,
Queen's University,
Kingston.

Professor E. E. Reilly,
Professor of Economics,
University of Western Ontario,
London.

Professor H. R. Rice,
Head, Department of Mining Engineering,
University of Toronto,
Toronto.

The terms of reference are very broad. They are obviously very able gentlemen, and we are very fortunate indeed in getting them to serve. The reference given to them is to examine and report on:

(a) the conditions affecting the present position of and prospects for the gold mining industry in Ontario;

This is a very big subject, and:

(b) the causes underlying trends in employment, wages, working conditions, profits, dividends, etc., in the industry; and

(c) the effects of these developments on communities in the northern parts of the province.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the government why they failed to include on the committee a representative of the miners. I would imagine that would have been the government's first consideration when appointing a committee of this sort. I also wonder why the government did not include a representative of the northern municipalities who are so vitally concerned in the subject matter this committee will be considering.

HON. MR. FROST: In answering the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) I may say, Mr. Speaker, that I did not want, and I do not think hon. members of this House would want, this committee to be turned into what would amount to a Board of Arbitration. The hon. member will see if that were done, and we were to follow his suggestion, we would select a chairman, then we would appoint a representative of labour and it would, of course, follow, that there would have to be a representative of industry. Then, if this concerned municipal matters, there would have to be a representative of the mining municipalities. After that it would probably be necessary to balance that appointment with a further appointment.

The result of such an arrangement would be to place the committee's deliberations on an arbitration basis of ideas and submissions. I have avoided that, Mr. Speaker. We have chosen men who have no direct connection with any of these interests. They are men who have great ability and intensive training in the field of economics. We have taken 3 of these men, who have knowledge of the general economic situation, and who are trained to look impartially at these problems, and we have reinforced them with an engineer, who is quite detached, one of the staff of the University of Toronto. That appointment brings to the committee a knowledge of the technical matters which might relate to such subjects as gold resources, ore reserves and the proper use of those assets. From such an impartial committee we will, I think, receive a report which will be of very great value to our province.

MR. SALSBERG: Why could not this committee be enlarged to 5 so that in addition to having the economic experts and the engineer, it would include representatives of the people most concerned with the problem of mining—the men who work in the mines and the heads of the municipalities who have to administer those hard-hit communities. I would say, Mr. Speaker, that the mountain is giving birth to a mouse, and that the government is missing the opportunity of establishing a committee consisting of representatives of all interested groups and parties—I am not using the word “parties” in a political sense—in an effort to get to the fundamentals of this question, and make recommendations which would help to solve this very serious issue.

HON. MR. FROST: I have endeavoured over a long period of time to find some point on which I would meet the approval of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) but now, after nearly 11 years, I cannot think of a single occasion when I have been successful.

MR. SALSBERG: There were a few.

HON. MR. FROST: I have come to this conclusion; that if I should ever reach the point where the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) agrees with me, then, Mr. Speaker, I may be wrong.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I wish to ask the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) a question arising out of an article in today's Telegram. The heading of the article was “Hear Nelson Was Silenced ‘On Advice.’” The article read:

It is believed at Queen's Park that C. H. Nelson, suspended Highways Department chief engineer, refused to answer investigations on the advice of counsel.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether that was the reason why Mr. Nelson refused to answer questions—because his lawyer was not present.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): I was not present, but I understand he told those who were present that he would like to have counsel if he was going to have to answer direct questions.

MR. OLIVER: Was that not felt to be a fair thing for Mr. Nelson to ask, to have counsel present?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think that is quite fair. But he was our employee and we thought it was quite fair that he be asked those questions.

MR. OLIVER: The senior Crown prosecutor was there?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is correct.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do leave the chair and that the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

The House in Committee of Supply.

ON ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Before proceeding further, Mr. Chairman, I would like to say a few words to enlighten hon. members on a few of the things that are being done. I cannot begin to cover the whole ground, but a great deal of work has been done, and I want to mention some of the activities which have taken place in the northern part of the Province of Ontario. The hon. members who were on the Conservation Committee a few years ago, which covered a large part of the northern section of this great province, will know something of the work that is being done.

In 11 of the districts of Northern Ontario during the past year, 8,573 acres of land were cleared and 8,081 acres were broken up at a cost, in subsidies, of $149,889.65.

I will not weary the House by reading the figures contained in these tables, but will file them in Hansard, for the information of the hon. members, if any are interested in them. They cover, "Assistance to Farmers and Settlers in Northern Ontario, in Clearing and Breaking Land," "Farm Water Supply," "Live Stock," "Veterinary Services," "Potato Production and Weed Control," "Freight Assistance on Seed Potatoes," "Special Grants," and "Field Men."

Contributions were also made, as hon. members will recall, to the finding of water in that section. This is a very difficult proposition in certain areas, as hon. members from Cochrane South and Cochrane North will readily understand, for I find that in Cochrane North assistance was given in 64 places. In the wider area, assistance was given in 142 cases, at a cost of $30,628.57, which included the drilling of 109 wells, the digging of 11, and other sources, the sum of 22. I might point out that the 22 other sources include assistance to the piping of springs or water sources, which would serve the same purpose as that of a well.

There was also assistance given in Northern Ontario for livestock, that is, for the selection of foundation stock, men to help the farmers purchase, shipping charges or trucking, where trucking is equivalent to freight, and the travelling expenses of buyers, amounting to $8,566.00.

Then, in the north country there are grants made for veterinary services, in practically the same districts, for which the government pays a grant of $1,600.00 to each veterinarian, which totals $18,400.00.

We also assist in the potato production and weed control up there, which costs a further sum of approximately $1,600.00. Grants were paid to the Women's Institutes in the amount of $1,255.10, Agricultural Societies $5,051.77, and the Community Halls and so forth, $3,060.93, making a total of $9,367.80, for the special grants.

In regard to the Agricultural Societies: in the Province of Ontario there were 243 field crop competitions last year, with 3,361 competitors. There was a grant of $50.00 paid to each competition.

Agricultural Societies consist of 265.

Fall Fairs, 251, 7 of Class "A", and 31 of Class "B".

Horticultural Societies; there are 200, with a membership of almost 35,000.

There were 66 senior plowing matches, 21 junior matches, and 7 home plowing competitions.

In regard to community centres; 86 grants paid to March 17th, 1954, for a total of $164,930.

The types of projects include 8 arenas, 5 arenas and halls, 31 halls alone, 34 athletic fields, 5 outdoor rinks, and 3 swimming pools.

A great deal of work has been done in co-operation with the Marketing Branch, and there were 16 schemes, marketing some 28 crops. These schemes are the legally-constituted means for the sale of farm products coming under their jurisdiction.

In the Province of Ontario, we have 254 cheese factories, 232 creameries, 11 creamery inspectors on the permanent staff, 14 cheese inspectors on the permanent staff, 1 on the temporary staff, 7 on a nine-month temporary, and three-month daily basis.

In regard to farm labour. During the past year, in 1953 the Federal-Provincial Farm Labour Committee supervised the placement of men on farms, which was a considerable increase over the previous year. We find that in 1952 there were 11,619 placed in agricultural fields across the province, which rose last year to 19,364, or an increase of nearly 8,000.

In regard to field crops. The Ontario Department pays 50 per cent. of weed inspectors' wages and expenses in Old Ontario, in connection with weed control. The amount paid from 1953 to date is $26,609.88. The Ottawa Government pays one-half of the cost, and the Ontario Department pays the other half, and pays the cost of the township weed inspectors up to $50.00, and the cost of 5 part-time district inspectors in Northern Ontario, which cost $9,013.12.

We also assisted in agricultural limestone, which is reimbursed by Ottawa to Ontario, to the extent of approximately 60 per cent., leaving the net cost to Ontario of $19,224.33.

In regard to the Livestock Branch: warble-fly control was carried on in 177 Ontario townships. To date, 197 townships filed by-laws to carry on this work this year.

In regard to brucellosis, the Act concerning which was introduced last year: to date by-laws have been filed by 30 municipalities, and it is our understanding that petitions are being circulated in at least 50 other townships.

In regard to Women's Institute Branch, and the Home Economics Service, last year there were 88 junior institutes, and 1,400 senior institutes. The number remains approximately the same at present; 5 or 6 either way would be the only difference.

On Vote No. 1.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister how the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. F. S. Thomas) is progressing? Is he improving? Do you expect him back in the department?

HON. MR. FROST: I understand he was out for a walk yesterday. He has been very seriously ill; no doubt about that. When he returned last September, my warning and injunction to him was to do as I do, and do no work at all. But apparently he disobeyed that injunction.

MR. PETER MANLEY (Stormont): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) a question in connection with land breakage? Does that apply only to Northern Ontario?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman, just to Northern Ontario, the districts which I mentioned at the outset.

Vote No. 1 agreed to.

Vote No. 2 agreed to.

On Vote No. 3.

MR. OLIVER: Has there been any change in the basis of grants for community halls?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, there has been no change recently in the basis for community halls.

MR. OLIVER: In connection with the Agricultural Committees; how many of those have you now? You could not have very many for $2,000. Why not do away with them?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Just one.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister tell us where it is?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, the remaining one is in Thunder Bay.

Vote No. 3 agreed to.

On Vote No. 4.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Vote No. 4, Co-operation and Marketing Branch; I would like to say a few words on the very important question of price spreads on farm products. I think this is the item under which it would logically come.

As is well known to hon. members who have been in this House for some time, the former Minister of Agriculture, the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Kennedy) spoke on this question inside the House and out, and on all occasions when he dealt with the question of the prices of farm commodities and the incomes of the farmers, he stressed what is generally known as a fact, that there is a widening spread between what the farmers get, and what the city consumers pay. As far back as 1948, the then Minister of Agriculture spoke about this, and he cited figures to illustrate the seriousness of the problem. He said at that time that out of $2.18 which the consumer paid for a 75-lb. bag of potatoes, the farmers in Essex or Kent, received 90c. or 41.3 per cent.

Later on, in September, 1950, the then Minister of Agriculture—and I am quoting from the Toronto Globe and Mail—is quoted as having said:

Food costs in Toronto are more than in New York and Washington. Agricultural Minister Kennedy said yesterday. The department, he said, had figures to prove it.

Further on, he gives quite a number of details, figures to show that prices were declining on farm produce, while the prices to the consumers were rising.

In February of this year—to be exact, on February 4th, 1954—the Ontario Agricultural Council, meeting in this building—and I am quoting again from the Globe and Mail— voted to ask for an investigation of the spread between the producer and consumer prices. The spread was widening, and in most consumer circles, the farmers were getting the blame, even though prices to the producers were declining. The representatives of the council decided they wanted an investigation, and, further, that a detailed statement of the findings resulting from the investigation be made public.

Obviously the people from the countryside feel very strongly about the need for a thorough investigation of the price spread between what our farm producers are receiving, and what the city consumers are called upon to pay.

I want to say I had a bit of a shock a few weeks ago, while addressing a meeting in the Niagara Peninsula. A number of farmers who asked questions of me, during the question period showed that they were deeply concerned with the problem of the prices spread. One farmer said that peaches for which they received 35c. for a 6-quart basket—and I hope I am giving the information correctly—sold in North Bay for $1.80 for 3 baskets. I repeated the figures he gave me, and he insisted they were correct.

He told me the fruit growers of the area had a man go up to North Bay to check the prices, so as to compare them with the prices they were receiving from the truckers who buy from them, and take them to the northern part of the province. That, it seems to me, is a terrific spread.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. member please repeat those figures?

MR. SALSBERG: I hope the figures I have written down here are correct. My figures are that they received 35c. for a 6-quart basket—that is, the late peaches—and in North Bay, they were sold at $1.80 for 3 baskets.

MR. MURDOCH: That would be 60c. apiece.

MR. SALSBERG: That is the way it figures out. Another farmer said they were getting from 20c. to 25c. for prune plums, and the basket cost them 13c. That the same basket sold in North Bay—and this sounded almost fantastic to me, but he repeated the price—at $1.49. Whether those figures I am giving as I took them down at the meeting are absolutely correct or not, the fact, nevertheless, indisputably remains there is a widening spread between the prices the consumers pay and the prices the farmers receive.

What is worse, there is a definite tendency in that direction. It is not just one year's experience; it is not just a one-season spread, but a continuing process of the widening of the scissors in reference to the prices paid by the consumers and what the farmers receive.

I want at this time to ask the government to come to grips with this question. We all agreed, when the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Kennedy) spoke on this subject, that there was a need for an investigation, and the hon. member practically promised this House that an investigation would be made, and I would like now to ask the government to make a statement as to its intentions on that score. Is it planned to have an investigation, either by a special committee, a Royal Commission, or any other media to establish the trend that is under-way, and has been for a number of years, and to bring forward some constructive proposals. I would strongly urge the government to do that, and I would appeal to it not to delay the matter any longer. The fact is that farm prices are declining. There is a difference of opinion as to just what the decline has been. I see in one paper the farm income declined by some 12 per cent. in 1953, as compared with 1952. That appears to me a very impressive figure. With all this taking place in the province, I think it would be criminal to further delay an investigation into the price spread on farm commodities in the Province of Ontario.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I might say in reply to the hon. member, that when he was talking about "price spreads," he was speaking of something which is out of our jurisdiction. As I said, this government has given authority for 16 schemes for 28 crops, and they can have authority to bargain with canners or others to whom they sell their produce, but "price spreads" are not within the jurisdiction of this government.

MR. R. ROBSON (Hastings East): Mr. Chairman, on section 5—

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman. I thought the hon. member was going to speak on item 4.

I would hate to see this question dropped at this time, as much as I dislike pressing this point in the absence of the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas). I am aware the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) is piloting the Estimates through the House, and although he is acquainted with the situation, he is, nevertheless, handling another Minister's department.

I feel the hon. Minister's reply is not satisfactory, in the sense that it is an onus on the department, and the responsibility of the government to order an investigation. I do not think you can leave it to the farmers themselves and their selling organizations, and certainly the former hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Kennedy) never left any doubt in this House about the right of the government to intercede in this matter.

I am sure there is a record of what the hon. Minister has said, and the older hon. members in the House will probably remember that he as much as promised this House he was going to have an investigation made into price spreads.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I never heard of it.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know of anything which would prevent the department or the government from ordering a public enquiry or investigation of one type or another into this problem, which concerns such a large portion of our population. I am not a resident in a farming area, and the hon. members of the House who do come from such areas will, I hope, excuse me, if I presume to speak authoritatively, as I assure them I am speaking very earnestly and sincerely, based on my observations, my contacts with a limited number of farmers—but contacts nevertheless—and my reading of farm material, all this convinced me this is a serious question, and I think the farm population of the province would welcome such an investigation.

The extract from the resolution adopted by the Ontario Agricultural Council, which I quoted, would seem to indicate there is a widespread demand, and I submit again there is nothing to prevent the department or the government from ordering an investigation into the spread of prices of farm produce.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Chairman, I would like to say that the hon. member for St. Andrew should check his figures very closely before he gives them to the House. May I point out to him that peaches originating in Essex County and selling for 35c, if sold in North Bay for 60c, that would seem to be a very reasonable price. The hon. member did not state whether that was the retail price in the stores, but I presume it was. But the truckers' costs have to be paid; they sell them to the wholesaler who, in turn, distributes them to the various stores, and naturally there are charges incurred.

I would like to point out further that it is quite obvious to me—and I am sure it is so to my colleagues on this side of the House—why this spread is rising all the time.

In Windsor, a very few weeks ago, the Dominion Store employees—who handle food products—were threatening to go on strike. The people handling farm products have holidays with pay, and pension schemes and all of these things which enter into the prices of farm products from the time they leave the farm, until they reach the consumers.

A little while ago, again in the City of Windsor, there was a milk strike. It came out during the strike that drivers delivering milk were earning as much as $70 a week. Let us assume there was a driver who had a son, and they were both working at the dairy. They would earn $140 a week between them.

I know many dairy farmers in Essex County who are working 7 days a week, no holidays with pay, just taking some whenever they can get them, no pension scheme or anything else, who have thousands and thousands of dollars of capital invested, and yet I know of no father-and-son combination in Essex County in the dairy business who are making $140 a week, clear money.

The same thing is true in Toronto. It is the same in packing houses, and the hon. member must obviously see that all those things which are granted in one place must be paid for in another.

MR. SALSBERG: I welcome the remarks of the last speaker, the senior Whip of the House, but I must say to him that I am sorry he used that type of argument, because I do not think the interests of the farmers would ever be served by arraying them against the city workers. As I see it, the two very important groups of our population, the industrial worker and the farmer, have a great deal in common and, in most instances, are up against the same combination of big interests, so there is no use counter-poising the interests of a farmer to that of a worker.

It would be no more fair if I were to quote from the last findings of the Gallup Poll, that farm income is superior to the income in the cities. Not only did the city people express that opinion, but I see where the farmers, according to the Gallup Poll, also voted along those lines that farm income is safer and more even than in the cities. At any rate, that is the Gallup Poll, and it seems fair to quote that.

The fact is, farm income has declined by 10 or 12 per cent. over the period of a year. It is enough to know that farm exports are declining. The latest information from Ottawa is there is a drop of farm exports by about 3 per cent., in other words, a growing seriousness of the farm problem.

What I say is, therefore, we should investigate the cause. The hon. member (Mr. Murdoch) thinks it is due to the wages of the city worker. I do not think that is so. There are other authoritative people—who are far more authoritative on this question than I—who think it is due to altogether too much profiteering in the processing and distributing of farm commodities from the soil to the table on the consumer.

I think we should go into all these facts, study them, unearth them, and I think we, in this House, can be guided on a question of this sort by what amounts to a unanimous opinion of the Ontario Agricultural Council. When that council met here, it decided to ask for a study of the price spread. I think that is a very authoritative opinion, and a very authoritative voice, and I think we should follow it and act accordingly.

Vote 3 agreed to.

On Vote 4.

MR. R. ROBSON (Hastings East): I would like to say, as a farmer, that I do not think I would be very averse to an investigation into the price spreads. I do not think the farmers would be too averse to having such an investigation. In fact, many of the groups of the Federation of Agriculture are asking the central group to ask, in another year possibly, that there be some investigation. We have good reasons for asking that.

During the last 2 or 3 weeks, the growers and processors of canned goods have been trying to get together. They know the prices of the goods are not going down, and the prices of the raw products have not gone up in 3 years, in fact, today they are offering us less. Yet, we know the prices of the canned goods have gone up. We do not know who is making the profit, or taking the extra money, whether it is the processors, the distributors or the fellow who comes in between, or the retailer, but we would like to know why, when the price of the cans go up and they do not "kick" because of that, if we ask for more money for peas, corn, or tomatoes, they offer us less. Yet when they get them into the cans, and put them on the shelves the next year, we know the prices will be up.

I think an investigation in that regard would be welcomed by most of the farmers, let the chips fall where they may. We might learn something.

Vote No. 4, agreed to.

On No. 5.

MR. ROBSON: I would like to say something about No. 5, the dairies branch.

Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask a question. It may be a rather suggestive question, but we are used to them.

In view of the fact that the cheese people had such trouble getting rid of their cheese in the last few years, due to the loss of export markets, and since we know that the consumption of cheese is very small, but perhaps gone up a little bit per capita, and since we know that people seem to want more cheese, and since they cannot get what they want in the package they want, and since the manufacturers of cheese are very small manufacturers—in fact they are doing it themselves, and have to be told by the trade how to package the cheese—and since the trade has not done much towards packaging or telling the cheese factories how they should package it, has the government ever given any thought to the possibility of the Department of Agriculture setting up some sort of Research Committee? It might be done through the Agricultural College at Guelph. They could make a study, first of the kind of packages the people want, and the way it should be marketed and so on, and give some guidance to the cheese factories.

If it does not want to do that, it might give some aid to the Cheese Producers Association, to set up a Research Bureau, and possibly pay a portion of the cost of the research. In my opinion, it is very important.

We were eating $4\frac{1}{2}$ pounds of cheese per person in Canada. That has gone up very slowly in the last 25 years to almost 6 pounds, but we feel it could easily go up to 10 pounds. We find the people want the cheese.

If you take some one into your home and you have a nice piece of black diamond cheese, he asks where he could get cheese like that. It is unfortunate we do not have a service to tell us how to get it. If we knew how to package it properly, to get people interested, I think we would have the consumption of cheese going up to 10 pounds per person. If that were so, we would not need any export market, we would have a market at home for our cheese. I wonder if it is possible for the government to make a grant towards that.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I might say in answer to the hon. member (Mr. Robson) that last year we suggested merchandising research, toward which we would contribute a certain amount, but the cheese producers at that time—or shortly thereafter—entered into an agreement to sell a certain quantity of cheese to Great Britain, and it did not appear there would be any surplus left, so they did not accept our suggestion. The Ontario Agricultural College has a great deal of research going on, and we have in the main Vote some funds which could be used for that purpose, if it is necessary.

MR. ROBSON: But the cheese they undertook to sell to England sold for $5\frac{1}{2}$ c. or 6c. less than the current price, and the farmers had to take a loss on that. In fact, we have to pay 2c. a pound on all our cheese this year to make up for the loss. If the cheese producers were given encouragement to go into this thing, and if they had help, they might establish something which would be a very great help to the cheese people.

MR. PETER MANLEY (Stormont): In connection with cheese, and cheese marketing, I am certainly in accord with what the hon. member (Mr. Robson) has said. Last year, realizing the difficulties we were in, and the necessity for more advertising of the cheese industry, we in the County of Stormont put on an advertising campaign of our own. The cheese producers contributed a certain amount of money, the Federation of Agriculture, an equal amount, and a cold storage which we have there, an equal amount, and we also received contributions from public-spirited citizens.

We went out on a campaign to sell cheese, and I am happy to announce this has been very successful. We doubled our sale of cheese in the county. We operated a "cheese school" in the City of Cornwall two days last fall, and on each one of those days we had over 500 of the consumers—that is the wives of the people of the City of Cornwall and surrounding districts—attend those cooking schools.

We had people from the department come down to operate the cooking schools, and advertise various recipes in which cheese could be used. Samples of cheese were also given to those attending the school.

I am happy to say that has been very successful, and when the consumers were asked if they wanted that school repeated this year, there certainly was a great applause, signifying their desire to have it again another year.

We found ourselves in this position, with the limited funds which we have at our disposal, both in the cheese producers and the federation as well, that we cannot go on indefinitely every year putting on a campaign of that kind. I agree that during the war years our cheese was ear-marked for Britain, and we as producers did not take the opportunity, possibly, which was afforded us in doing something about marketing and looking forward to the marketing of cheese in the Province of Ontario, but I think it has been well demonstrated over the past few years that the markets in Ontario and Canada are the best markets we have for dairy products. I think we must turn our sights to some sort of a marketing programme to further the sales of dairy products in this province. I do think the Department of Agriculture should provide the money at this particular time to help establish a fund to market cheese and dairy products.

I think it is a known fact that we have the best cheese there is anywhere in the Province of Ontario. I know that Great Britain or England will vouch for what I am saying, that we have a premium cheese, but, as I say, Ontario and Canada are the best markets we can find for these products, so anything we can do along the lines of advertising and packaging of our Ontario cheddar cheese, I think, will be well worthwhile and will be of great benefit to the cheese producers of this province.

Vote No. 5 agreed to.

On No. 6.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I wonder if the hon. Minister would explain the work of this branch.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Is this No. 7, Mr. Chairman?

MR. GRUMMETT: No, No. 6.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: They make various cost studies, which are available to all dairy groups, Mr. Chairman.

MR. OLIVER: Just dairy groups?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, they are available to canneries or, in fact, anybody.

Vote 6 agreed to.

On 7.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): I was interested in the remarks of the hon. Minister. He said there were over 8,000 placements last year over the previous year. I would like to ask him if he is expecting a reduction in the service this year, because last year the Estimate for this branch was $50,000, and this year it is down to $35,000. I wonder if the hon. Minister would care to comment on that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Farm camps were abolished last year, and that is why the reduction was made.

Votes Nos. 7, 8 and 9 agreed to.

On Vote 10.

MR. MANLEY: I see there has been quite an increase this year in the appropriation in this Vote, and I wonder if the hon. Minister would explain that increase?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: The only difference there, Mr. Chairman, is in regard to salaries in the Live Stock Branch, etc.

MR. MANLEY: I am sorry, I did not hear that.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I said, Mr. Chairman, I think the change there would be in regard to salaries. That would account for the increases over the previous year in the Live Stock Branch.

MR. MANLEY: In connection with live stock and agricultural displays at fairs, I have had a number of live-stock breeders in the eastern part of the province, contact me on several occasions asking for some assistance so that they could show their stock at the Royal Winter Fair.

I believe the department will pay a certain amount of freight assistance to the Chicago Fair, and some of the other provinces are doing likewise, but the breeders feel in Eastern Ontario they are so far away from the Royal Winter Fair that they are unable to transport their stock here and compete at this fair.

I was talking to the hon. Minister of Agriculture last year a few days after the Ottawa Fair, and he told me he was very much surprised at the quality and the calibre of the stock shown in Ottawa. He also said, "They certainly should be competing against the cattle being shown at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto." At that time, I said to him that if the department would grant a bit of assistance, the owners could transport their cattle to Toronto, and we would have many more exhibitors at the Royal Winter Fair.

I think that is something to which the eastern breeders are entitled. I think it would be an aid to them as breeders, and it would be a better way of displaying stock from Eastern Ontario in this central exhibition here at the Royal Winter Fair in Toronto.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the hon. member, we pay a grant which is used as prize money, but the provinces do not pay the freight on their stock. That is paid entirely by them.

Vote No. 10 agreed to.

On Vote 11.

MR. SALSBERG: On No. 11, Mr. Chairman: I believe this will provide perhaps the only opportunity to deal with the matter which aroused the working people of this province during the strike of the milk drivers and dairy employees. We are now providing salaries for the Milk Control Board of Ontario. I am not arguing at this moment that we should not provide the funds for them, but I am seriously questioning whether we are justified in providing funds for this board, if it is to continue to act as a dictator over the working conditions of the dairy employees of this province.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member that this board is there by Statute, passed by Parliament. How can it be a "dictator"? The hon. member should read the Act.

As a matter of fact, when that Act was passed in the spring of 1950, my recollection is the hon. member voted for it.

MR. SALSBERG: You see, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Prime Minister remembers exactly how I voted. I do not. But I remember certain legislation he actually piloted through the House, about which he has forgotten. I do not want to bring that up, though I have in mind the Forestry Bill which went through this House. But whether this is authorized by legislation or not, I say the legislation which was passed dealing with the rights and powers of the Milk Control Board was never understood by hon. members of this House, as providing the board should have the power to decide dictatorially how many days workers should be employed in the industry and how workers must cope with their tasks.

By the action of this board, Mr. Chairman, hundreds of milk distributors in the City of Toronto have been driven into a position in which they are obliged to do 6 days' work in 5. That is what has happened. Collective bargaining was killed. The hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) shakes his head. I say it was. It was not the normal process of collective bargaining which resulted in the agreement between the dairy employees and the dairy industry. The industry looked on a 5-day delivery with favour. The men have no objection to working a 5-day week, provided they are not saddled with an extra day's work. The process of collective bargaining was "kicked out of the room" when the board took it upon itself to issue a decree that there should be a 5-day delivery of milk in the City of Toronto. And then the men had to fight the government, rather than the industry. That is the position we have before us now.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member, that this matter was dealt with very, very carefully. As a matter of fact the Milk Board delayed to the very last minute before making any order. The matter was left to labour and to the industry to make their settlement, and everything possible was done to assist them in arriving at a settlement. But they were advised if they did not reach a settlement, the board would exercise its responsibilities in the interests of the community and of all the people in this province. They knew that if they failed to reach agreement, somebody would have to accept responsibility and act. That was the situation and I may say the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), who had to handle this matter, made it very plain to them that if a settlement was not reached, the matter could not, in the public interest, go beyond a certain point. That was the situation, and it was entirely fair.

MR. SALSBERG: The explanation given by the hon. Prime Minister does not in any way alter the accuracy of the facts as I have presented them to him.

That is, that after a certain stage of negotiations had been reached, a government board stepped in and arbitrarily decided the matter.

HON. MR. FROST: Why, of course. That was their job. They were given that job by this Legislature, and that is what they should do.

MR. SALSBERG: They were not given the job of putting on the shoulders of milk drivers an extra day's work, which they find they can hardly carry through.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out that in all these negotiations there was a Conciliation Board report which was unanimous, and which represented everybody. I am not one who says that either labour or industry is bound by a Conciliation Board report, but there is evidence in this of the fairness of that situation. I would also point out to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that in every major area in the United States, certainly—and I imagine, to some extent in Canada—there are, linked with refrigeration, restricted deliveries made possible by improved refrigeration, which result in increased pay. It is true that we all have to make adjustments, because of the times in which we live, and this is just one of them. It is not an arbitrary action. After all, public bodies have to assume their responsibilities.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish further to make it clear to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) that the position which I am taking here is not entirely due to the fact that he fails to convince me. What I say is not only my opinion, but the unanimous opinion of the entire organized labour movement of this province. I do not wish to add to the difficulties of the government by reminding it at this time that Labour Councils and national conventions of labour have dealt with this matter, and have gone on record as protesting the action of the Milk Board. I have in my hand one item from the Globe and Mail, the heading of which is "Labour Council Attacks Ruling by Milk Board." The story reads:

Immediate repeal of the Ontario Government legislation giving the Milk Control Board authority to determine the number of milk deliveries per week and delivery days was called for last night by the Toronto and District Labour Council (AFL-TLC).

In a resolution the delegates, who represent 60,000 Toronto district unionists, said the legislation ignored the interests of labour employed in the industry.

Endorsed by the council, too, was a resolution forwarded from Local 28, International Brotherhood of Bookbinders, which called on delegates to protest to the Ontario Government against "the arbitrary action of the Ontario Milk Board in setting conditions of work for milk drivers and dairy workers."

In addition, it protested against the action of the Provincial Cabinet in endorsing such action and placing a statute on the record approving such legislation.

"It is regrettable at this time to be forced to take issue with authorities, directing affairs of the country," said William Jenoves, council president.

It was unfortunate the government saw fit to appoint a Milk Board on which labour was not given a seat, he continued, charging that the board used poor timing in allowing a strike to take place and then ordering the 5-day week and lifting the price ceiling.

I mention this because I feel the attitude of organized labour on this question should find expression in this Legislature, at this time, apart from the fact that I feel the same way about this, too. I am sure that is also the feeling of the whole organized labour trade union movement, and because of that I move that item No. 11 be reduced to $1.

THE CHAIRMAN: You have heard the motion by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). What is your pleasure?

MR. SALSBERG: Aye.

CHAIRMAN: I declare the motion lost almost unanimously.

Item 11 agreed to.

Items 12 to 17 inclusive agreed to.

On item 18:

MR. NIXON: Item 18 is a pretty big item. Can the Minister give us any information as to how we are getting along at Guelph?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Special students for the whole of 1953—one. First year diploma course, 73; First year degree course, 101; second year diploma course, 67; second year degree course, 82; third year, 94; and fourth year, 67.

Item 18 agreed to.

On item 19.

MR. NIXON: With regard to the MacDonald Institute, item 19, some very extensive development was carried out, was it not, in new-building accommodation there?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, there was an extension built there.

MR. NIXON: What is the additional enrollment there now?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Economics, first year, 39; second year, 37; third year, 38; fourth year, 35; diploma course, 36.

MR. NIXON: That is the capacity of the school?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, that is about its capacity.

Items 19 to 21 inclusive agreed to.

On item 22.

HON. MR. CHALLIES (Minister Without Portfolio): May I, Mr. Chairman, present to the committee a short review of rural hydro development this year?

Rural hydro is a continuing operation, to maintain and improve existing systems and to bring power to the rural areas of this province. This operation can be said, now, to be reaching a new phase, for the programme of betterment to improve power supply is becoming the major part of our work.

In 1954, for example, major and minor betterments will involve an expenditure of some $8 million while the new extensions will cost about $7,363,000. In order to maintain a sound agricultural economy in the post-war years, Ontario Hydro, with the backing of the Ontario Government, launched a tremendous programme of expansion in the rural areas. One result of this programme has been to increase the saturation of electrified farms in the province from 47.32 per cent. in 1947 to nearly 90 per cent. in 1953. Today there are said to be some 400 applications for electric power on the farm, and modern electrical living has become an accepted fact in our rural areas.

We have long passed the stage when rural hydro was considered a luxury. It is now considered a necessity. Hydro's approved rural programme for 1954 involves a total expenditure of $23,933,034, of which $20,769,878 is capitalized. Grants-in-aid to the extent of $10,384,939 are, therefore, requested for 1954. The figure of $23,933,034, which was approved by the Commission on January 20th, 1954, includes the following:

(1) Major betterments for 1954 and approved betterments in 1953 but not completed	$ 7,260,663
(2) Minor betterments	1,760,850
(3) Temporary installations	68,900
(4) Routine pole replacements (Capital increase only)	387,800
(5) The construction of 1,141 miles of rural lines to extend service to 5,480 new customers and 107 miles of rural line approved but not completed in 1953 to supply service to 492 customers	7,363,460
(6) The addition to existing lines of 23,279 customers	2,911,851
(7) Transformer and meter regional pools	4,179,510
Total	$23,933,034

Hon. members will find, as I have indicated, that the major part of the programme has been for the betterment of existing installations and appliances. We have provided 1,248 miles of rural power lines to serve 27,251 consumers. When I mention the figure of 90 per cent. of farms as having been served, this refers to farms that can be mechanically served in the province, in addition to our programme of new extension.

Hon. members may be interested in seeing the following list of equipment now available in the homes and on the farms. It shows the tremendous increase in the use of electricity on farms, and it will be observed that since 1942 some 14 pieces of electrical equipment have been added to those which were formerly available.

LIST OF ELECTRICAL EQUIPMENT IN USE

RESIDENCE

Electric range; toaster; vacuum cleaner; *floor polisher; electric iron; *electric ironer; *television; radio; Mix-master; *oil burner; water system, soft; *water system, hard; *electric grill; *radiant heater—14 pieces (7 pieces added since 1942).

DAIRY BARN

Milking machine, $\frac{3}{4}$ h.p.; milk cooler, $\frac{1}{8}$ and $\frac{1}{2}$ h.p.; *ventilating fan; out-roller, 1 h.p.; *feed mixer; *gutter cleaner, 3 h.p.; water-pump, $\frac{1}{2}$ h.p.; water-pump, $\frac{1}{2}$ h.p.; *water pump, $\frac{1}{3}$ h.p.; fanning mill, $\frac{1}{3}$ h.p.; workshop; *grinder, $\frac{1}{3}$ h.p.; *compressor, $\frac{1}{3}$ h.p.; poultry house; *9—poultry water warmers—13 pieces (7 pieces added since 1942).

Of 27 pieces of equipment in use today on the average good farm, some 14 have been added since 1942. This creates a problem because of the increased consumption of electrical energy by farms in the province. Hon. members will understand the significance of this when I say that the increase in rural electrification since 1943 has amounted to 250 per cent., while, during the same time, the average use of electricity in the farms has increased by over 600 per cent.

In addition to our programmes for new extensions, the trend towards mechanization on the farm and the increased use of appliances in the rural homes has made it necessary for Ontario

* Indicates equipment added since 1942.

Hydro to maintain a firm policy in regard to rural betterments. The changing picture of power consumption indicates that rural customers no longer look to hydro merely to supply their lighting load, but regard the supply of power as essential to maintain labour-saving equipment both on the farm and in the home. Average annual farm consumption in 1945, for example, was only 2,199 kilowatt-hours. By 1953, this had increased to 3,886 kilowatt-hours per year. Rural customers who were using an average of 2,026 kilowatt-hours per year in 1945 are, today, using 3,504 kilowatt-hours.

The commission's rural customers, therefore, have a right to expect and, indeed, to demand, an extensive programme of maintenance in order to safeguard the supply of power to their equipment.

The Provincial Government has agreed to pay, as Grant-in-aid, 50 per cent. of the capitalized portion of the betterment programme in addition to 50 per cent. of the capitalized cost of extensions. It should be realized, therefore, that even when 100 per cent. saturation of farm electrification is reached, Ontario Hydro's annual rural programme may still be extensive. If existing systems are not maintained and, at times, replaced, then serious consequences may result—even to the extent of damage claims against the commission. It should also be realized, if comparisons of costs are to be made with early years, the cost of materials and labour have increased tremendously since the war. In 1945, for example, the cost of constructing 1 mile of 3-phase primary, wood-pole line was $2,342. In 1952, this cost had increased by 89.6 per cent. to $4,440.

We who live in cities and towns or in rural communities that have for many years been blessed with electricity tend to take its benefits for granted. Think, however, of what electrical service must mean in security and mental relief to—let us say—the thousands of elderly couples on small farms or hamlets somewhere in Ontario. Picture them putting aside their inefficient oil lamps that will no longer require daily filling and cleaning. Picture them boiling the kettle for a cup of tea without lighting a fire in the woodstove. Think of the fire hazards which electricity eliminates from the farm home and other buildings. Think of the labour-saving appliances and the comforts electricity provides to make the farmer's toil and long working day more acceptable to young and old.

Not only in regard to the extension of rural hydro, but in regard to the extension of equipment can we see not only the problems we have now, but what problems we will be facing in the future. There will have to be a great deal of work done, and a great deal of extensive planning for the future in order to maintain the services we are giving the people in the rural areas, and that is the objective of the commission, to increase the betterments in the service, and at the same time, look after the applications as they come in.

MR. PETER MANLEY (Stormont): Mr. Chairman, may I ask a question? The hon. Minister has pointed out what a benefit hydro is to the rural people, especially the older people living on the farms. I was wondering if the commission was considering doing anything in regard to the rural people in the more sparsely-settled districts.

Let us consider, for instance, a family living down a concession road, where the regulations call for so many subscribers per mile. I think every rural home should have the benefit of hydro, and these people, simply because they are living a little beyond the set limit, feel it is a great burden upon them to defray the costs of bringing power into their homes, and I think they are being penalized enough at the present time owing to the power rates, and being long distances off the main travelled roads, and it is a hardship upon them which is not felt by those living in the other parts of the community.

I was wondering if the Hydro was thinking of modifying their rules, to possibly give those people hydro without that extra cost.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Mr. Chairman, the matter of added costs or guaranteed contracts is so little, as compared with the service they receive, that there is no reason why everyone in Ontario could not have rural hydro, within economic reason.

One must remember, however, that hydro is sold at cost. One must also remember that even with the 50 per cent. furnished by the government by way of grants, to get the power to the farmers on primary and secondary lines and there are no funds from which the commission can take money to subsidize those living beyond a certain point.

However, the rules and regulations are very flexible. If there is a farmer living a certain distance beyond the limit, he can do one of two things; either pay for the extra line himself—and the commission is always ready to help in any way they can to engineer the line for anyone who wishes to put it in, by private contractor—or, on the other hand, have the guaranteed contract. That means so little when one thinks of the average cost of electricity today, over the province, being a little over 2.2c. per kilowatt hour, and when one thinks of the service received, compared with anything else. I do not know of any method by which we could extend the amount of units per mile, or beyond the economic areas, and still give the service.

MR. NIXON (Brant): Is the hon. Minister not going to tell the House the farmers are getting their hydro for less than they were 10 years ago?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I will be very glad to.

MR. NIXON: I thought the hon. Minister might tell us how many were getting it.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member for Stormont is receiving his hydro for .92c. per k.w.h. cheaper in 1953 than in 1942—1942 cost, 3.45c. k.w.h.; 1953 cost, 2.53c. per k.w.h. The hon. member from Brant for the first quarter in 1953, paid 1.54c. per k.w.h.

MR. NIXON: Mr. Chairman, I was going to ask the hon. Minister about the conversion from 25 to 60 cycles in the rural areas. What percentage of that is now completed?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I would assume that about the same percentage as over the 25-cycle area. I think over half of the area has been converted.

MR. NIXON: How is that being paid for?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: They pay for it out of the contingent rate, in the rural areas.

MR. OLIVER: All of it?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: It is all being charged back to rural communities?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes.

MR. NIXON: Is there any item in the Estimates for conversion?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: There is no item in the Estimates for conversion, Mr. Chairman.

MR. ROBSON (Hastings East): Mr. Chairman, we know the Department of Agriculture is paying 50 per cent. by way of grant for rural lines, but supposing a rural community decides to set up a public utility, and put their own line in, does the department require them to pay the 50 per cent. back to Hydro?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: When a municipality takes over a rural line, the amount which has been paid in in the form of grants by the government, is included in the amount the newly-formed commission has to pay for that line.

MR. ROBSON: The Hydro really only pays 50 per cent. If the line cost $400,000, the Hydro would only pay $200,000 of that. The other $200,000 is paid by the province?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: With the increasing value of the line, one-half of it would go back to the government.

MR. ROBSON: That means a rural municipality which forms a commission, has to pay back to the Department of Agriculture, that proportion of the grant they put in?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes.

MR. ROBSON: Is that not unduly severe on the people who are trying to help themselves? Are you not handicapping them a bit in that regard? You advocate municipalities owning their own, and now you are making it doubly difficult for the municipalities to do so. We pay back the entire $400,000, and it only costs the Hydro $200,000.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: When a municipality takes over, it immediately is taken out of the rural hydro system, and it becomes a municipal system not subsidized by the government.

MR. ROBSON: But they are still rural.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is quite true, but their system is set up entirely differently.

Every year there are a number of lines which extend beyond the municipality into the rural area, and after the rural area is taken into the municipality, the municipality pays for this line at the depreciated cost, and that goes back into the funds of Hydro, with the government share credited to the government.

MR. ROBSON: Why should it be that way, if the Department of Agriculture pays for half the line?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Not the Department of Agriculture, but the Provincial Treasurer.

HON. MR. FROST: I never heard of the government being paid back any money in one of these deals.

MR. ROBSON: I have. The question came up the other day.

MR. NIXON: Does the government get it back?

MR. ROBSON: It did not cost the Hydro $400,000 to build; it only cost $200,000. Yet if we take it over, we have to pay the $400,000. What will you do with the other $200,000?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: If it is taken over by a municipality the municipality provides $400,000, of which $200,000 goes to the general hydro fund, and the other $200,000 goes back to the government.

Incidentally, I think the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) was asking about his hydro account. All I can say is his rate is 1.54c. per k.w.h. for the first quarter of 1953.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, may I try and get a word in edgeways? My heart bleeds for the poor farmers in the east, and the terrific rates they have to pay for hydro.

On my own small farm up north, I have all the benefits of hydro, for which I am very thankful, at a cost of some $20 per month. We have places in our part of the country—and listen to this, you rural farmers in the east—who are buying power from the Canadian National Railway. I am thinking of Nakina, amongst others. There is a small merchant there, who has electric lights, and an electric refrigerator, and his bill for three months was $436. We certainly would like to have hydro in places like Nakina and Hornepayne, and we are pleading with Hydro to put it in there, because these people have none of the benefits of the people in the eastern part of the province.

When you are complaining about a few cents extra to obtain the benefits of hydro, I say give it to us, and we will be glad to pay even double what you are paying here.

We hear a great deal about "conversion" in the east; the hon. members should come up to our part of the province, and see what we are up against.

MR. SALSBERG: You want to be converted?

MR. WARDROPE: I ask the hon. Minister to give Nakina and Hornepayne—municipalities with a population of around 2,000 each—hydro, because they are compelled now to buy it from the Canadian National Railway, and at certain times of the day, the housewives cannot use their electric irons and stoves, and they are telephoned, and told they cannot use their washing machines.

It is not a question of paying a few dollars. It is a question of getting this priceless thing we call "hydro." If you want us to pay a few extra cents, we will be glad to do it, if you will put in the hydro. That is all we want.

MR. SALSBERG: The farmers want it.

MR. ROBSON: That is all very fine for the hon. member for Porth Arthur, coming as he does, from Northern Ontario. We are comparing our rates with ones just across the border in the towns and cities, and our rates are exorbitant; we are paying about three times as much. We are going to form the Utilities to try and cut it down a little bit, as the burden is terrific, but the cost for establishing these Utilities is away up. It is nearly double what it would cost the hydro people.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): The hon. Minister, Mr. Challies, is saying how much more it costs him now to build lines than it did 10 or 12 years ago. I wonder to what extent he is checking on the efficiency with which these lines are being built?

I am in the most unhappy position of having one of these lines being built across my own fields, as well as those of my neighbours, for which I am getting the magnificent sum of $75 a tower, and, Mr. Chairman, that is all I shall ever get. One hundred years from now those towers will be there, the same as they are today. My son and, I hope, my grandsons, will be working around them, but $75 is the cash settlement for all time.

I would cheerfully have given $300 a tower if they would have kept them off the place. I would not have them there for any consideration. We have spent 139 years trying to clear the land, so that it can be farmed advantageously, and now those horrible things come upon us.

However, Mr. Chairman, that is not what I was going to talk about. If one happens to be in the road of progress, one simply has to suffer for it, that is all. But we have just come through a very heavy winter, the ground has been frozen hard, and they could have gone in there and delivered the steel on the ground where the tower is going to be built, in a half-hour's time. Instead of doing that, they are going through when there is no frost on the ground, one truck winching through with another one, and I am horrified to think of the condition that land will be in when we have to go on it next year. Why, for heaven's sake, if you want to have some efficiency in your lines, do you cross the fields when the frost is coming out of the ground? If you went on the highways when they are in that condition, with an overload, you would end up in the police court.

It certainly seems to me there is poor planning and lack of efficiency in trying to build a line and truck the steel in on the farm when the frost is coming out of the ground.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I appreciate what the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) has said. He is perfectly correct. I know that the trucks should not go on the farms when the frost is coming out of the ground, and it is worse when you cross land with tiling. Instructions have been given to the engineering section not to do that, and all I can say is if they do so, I think I would put in a good bill for damages.

Going back to the subject of the towers—and I always like to get back to those—in 1940 all a farmer got for a steel tower was $50. We increased that amount in 1947, and paid an occupational rate for the land under the wires, which brought it up to an average of $101.20. We thought that was not sufficient, and we increased it again, so the farmer today is getting, on an average, $151.80 for a steel tower, for which back in 1940 he received only $50, so we can at least say we are sympathetic to the problem.

In other words, if that is reduced to the equivalent of dollars per acre, in 1940 it was $13.74; it was then stepped up to $27.80, and it is now $41.70. In terms of equivalent dollars for the use of the land the tower is on, as well as the occupation right under the line.

MR. NIXON: Of course, there are acres and acres, Mr. Chairman, as you well know. In the case of my own land, you can put up towers on any wasteland, and leave them there forever, for nothing, but when you pick out the very best part of cultivated farms, with a short rotation, what is fair in the case of permanent pasture, waste land, or scrub land, is not a consideration concerning the damage you do to a farmer who is trying to make a living off that field.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is already taken care of, Mr. Chairman, in the question of arable land. The tower is S75.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): But there is arable land and arable land.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes, which increases the value of the land the tower goes on. It is too bad someone cannot invent a method for the transmission of electrical energy without poles or towers.

As far as going over certain types of land, the practice now is to take an aeroplane picture of the land the power line is to go over, and try to arrange the route so it will skip the centre of the fields and put towers into the corners and onto the worst land. We do the best we can. We have raised the price; I do not say it is high enough, but as long as we have to use towers to transmit energy, I am afraid that problem will remain with us. We will do the best we can to ease the results of it.

Vote 22 agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report progress.

Report concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed. Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply begs to report that it has come to certain resolutions, and asks leave to sit again.

Report concurred in.

Motion agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we will go ahead with the Budget Debate, and will have a night session tomorrow night. We will take the Estimates in alphabetical order.

Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5 of the clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, MARCH 23, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very glad today to welcome students from the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, the Earls court Public School, the Warden Avenue Public School, and the Rolph Road Public School, all of Toronto. A little earlier, we had students from 10 schools in Nassagaweya Township, who went through the Chamber and received the lecture at that time.

We welcome the students from the City of Toronto and Owen Sound to the Assembly this afternoon. We hope those from out-of-town will enjoy their stay in Toronto, and that they will go back more enthusiastic about the great province in which they live.

I beg leave to announce that the Private Bills Committee will not meet at 5 o'clock this afternoon, but at 7 o'clock tomorrow evening.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. JOHN ROOT: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the second and final report of the Standing Committee on Agriculture, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Root from the Standing Committee on Agriculture presents the committee's second and final report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 68, An Act respecting the Milk Industry.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

HON. MR. FROST moves the time for receiving reports by Committees on Private Bills be extended to Thursday, April 1st.

MR. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Can we receive reports on the last day?

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know what the hon. Leader of the Opposition means by "the last day" — perhaps the second last day.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

THE HOMES FOR THE AGED ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intitled, "An Act to amend The Homes for the Aged Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, these amendments will only apply to homes which have been built or will be built in districts. They provide for a method of securing an equalized assessment, so that not only the maintenance but capital costs can be apportioned back each year, and in the case of debentures, they will be apportioned back to the various municipalities in the district, each year over the period during which these debentures are being paid off.

THE GRAND RIVER CONSERVATION ACT

HON. MR. WARRENDER moves first reading of bill intituled "An Act to amend the Grand River Conservation Act, 1938."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this is a very short amendment. When the Grand River Conservation Commission has apportioned the benefit of a scheme among the participating municipalities, it is required under subsection 1 of section 9 to notify the municipalities, and, under subsection 2, any dissatisfied municipality may on 10 days' notice to the commission apply to the Municipal Board for a review of the apportionment. Subsection 2 of section 9 is rewritten to require that the application for review be made within 1 month after the municipality is notified of the apportionment.

HON. MR. WELSH: I beg leave to present to the House the following:

The 34th Annual Report of the Department of Labour of the Province of Ontario for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1953.

HON. L. M. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before Orders of the day, may I refer to the announcement you made a few moments ago relative to the Private Bills Committee meeting tomorrow night.

I find now that is not satisfactory, and I would like to leave it this way, Mr. Speaker—that the meeting of the Private Bills Committee be postponed pending the fixing of a later time. It may be, sir, that we should have the meeting on Thursday afternoon at 5.30. I am planning a night session on Thursday, but the House might adjourn at 5.30, and the Private Bills Committee might meet at that time. I will make an announcement about this later.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

COMMITTEE OF SUPPLY

MR. J. F. EDWARDS (Perth): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in the Throne Speech debate, I would first like to compliment those who have already spoken for their contribution to this Legislature. I would also like to pay tribute to the capable and fair way in which you, sir, perform your duties in this House and your many friendly acts will not soon be forgotten.

I would like to spend a short time on a few points regarding the budget so ably presented by the Prime Minister. In connection with the special grants and payments, I can assure you that every hospital in my riding is very grateful for the $300 per bed for retirement of capital debt or for rehabilitation purposes. In connection with hospitals, I would like to publicly pay tribute to those who serve on the various boards in all our communities, charged with the operation of our hospitals. The only unhappy feature in a few cases is the rising charges per day for hospital care. This creates a fear in a great many who want to pay their way and cannot afford to have even inexpensive treatment.

One fact we frequently lose sight of in connection with various services is that we have groups of people in our economy—those who are well-to-do and can afford to pay for any necessary medical service; those who cannot pay anything and are helped by our various free clinics, and the vast middle-class, who are caught between the upper and nether millstones. These people struggle to pay their way and often, because of fear of the expense, they put off early treatment of diseases, such as cancer. It would appear to me that our government could and should take the lead with a Contributory Health Insurance Plan. This and free cancer clinic service from one end of our province to the other is, I consider, a must, and would allay the fears and worries of many who postpone early treatment, because they are afraid of the cost. I have mentioned before that it is my belief that hospitals should be set up on a plan similar to secondary school areas. In this way all municipalities taking advantage of the service would be duty bound to share the capital cost.

Regarding the per capita gift to the municipalities, I would also submit that the sooner the $4 paid to the large areas is made uniform across the province, the fairer it will be. Our smaller communities still do not have large assessing possibilities, which limits their taxing abilities for improvements. I also maintain that our urban centres and the few separated towns in this province should be freed entirely from the upkeep, in whole or part, of provincial highways. We recognize the fact that amendments submitted several years ago permitting suburban roads commissions to be set up has brought some small relief, but we should go much further. I might point out that St. Marys, a separated town in the riding which I have the honour to represent, has 2½ miles of provincial highways in its municipality. It is admitted by all that they have a real problem with their upkeep in view of the present heavy all-day and every day traffic on No. 7 Highway.

I would also like to mention the decentralization of industry. Our whole province would be much better off if every village, town and small city could be assisted by having one or two light industries locate in their confines. I would urge that both our own government and that at Ottawa should get together on such a plan and try to assist the smaller municipalities. A great many people would enjoy and benefit by the rural way of life, if opportunity of employment was there.

Further, in connection with the decentralization of industry, I would like to speak briefly on transportation and shipping costs. I would urge that some thought and study be given to the elimination of the unfair practices carried on by some trucking firms in connection with rates charged. Surely now is the time when either the province or the Dominion, or both, should have control and should use it for the equalization of all rates.

Let us consider the traffic on our roads (and possibly a lot of it should be still on our railroads); long-haul traffic, huge tractor-trailers going from our large motor-vehicle plants in Ontario, as far as the western coast. These vehicles create a definite hazard on our highways and in quite a number of our towns through which they pass. This constitutes one of the many problems arising out of this immense trucking movement at the present time. Other trucks come into this province bringing tractor-trailer loads of butter and what do they take back? They take margarine back. The question arises—are we charging enough for licences for these vehicles which contribute largely to the deterioration of our highways and more particularly those which have not been hard-topped?

Then we have our bus services, a network through this whole province. Are they paying sufficient licence fees to compensate for the upkeep necessary on our highways and for the franchise they have?

It was my happy experience this last week-end, along with others, to pay a visit to Cobalt, travelling via the Ontario Northland on fine new equipment supplied by the Canadian National Railways. It would seem to me that if all our railways would provide the same service all over our province, they would reclaim their rightful place in the passenger field, as well as the freight field and in so doing relieve unemployment in Stratford and Palmerston, both railway centres.

I would like also to bring to the attention of this House a few problems in connection with conservation. We have seen the good result of planning in the Fanshaw on the Thames. It has proven its worth in more ways than one, but let us go further with immediate action by the upper Thames River conservation authorities. This flood danger was most imminent a few weeks ago in the Town of Mitchell. At that time a menace was created and the Thames River swelled to within 4 feet of an all time high—even more dangerous, the water supply of the town is within 10 feet of the Thames and must be safeguarded for the health of the residents. This last Wednesday a 4-man delegation from the Town of Mitchell presented a brief to the Upper Thames Authority at their annual meeting, asking for immediate action to set up a flood control in this area. Mitchell Town Council have approved the sum of $54,000.00 as their share of the cost.

Another problem hinging on when this project is undertaken is the urgent need for proper sanitation facilities and sewers. This is a job much needed for the protection of local health and for the proper care to prevent pollution, not only for the Thames River, but others, including the Grand River. Let us hope the time is not too far distant when government assistance will be available to permit the carrying out of these projects.

I could mention other municipalities in my riding which have similar and possibly just as large a problem in connection with flood control and sewage. I refer to the Towns of Mitchell and St. Marys.

I would be very remiss if I did not bring to the attention of this House a few points regarding the position of Perth County in connection with agriculture. Earning power has been greatly reduced. There are 4,357 farms in Perth County, with approximately 510,000 acres, 452,000 of which are improved. The total population of the county is approximately 52,500, with nearly 19,000 farm population. This group, you see, accounts for a sizeable proportion of produce for the markets of our country. In 1953, 6,616,696 lbs. of butter and 1,464,141 lbs. of cheese were produced in Perth County. Besides, every day many truck loads of whole milk find their way to the dairies of this city. I would again point out that just because milk is 15c. a glass here the farmer is not making a large profit. If we were to be fair, 10c. a glass should still show the restaurant operator a good profit. Many people do not know that 38 to 39 quarts of milk comprise 100 lbs. of milk for which the farmer gets maybe $4.70 per 100 lbs. less transportation.

Too many people think the farmer gets the large end. In fact, with the prices you and I and John Public pay for bacon, milk and other products produced on the farm, the farmer should get half as much again. We must never forget that they do not have a 40-hour, or even a 48-hour week, but work every day of the week, all the year round, particularly those engaged in the dairy branch of agriculture.

I would like to say a few words regarding education in this province. From day to day, we read and hear of presentations of briefs to the government requesting increased aid for education. As a taxpayer I pay my share of the cost and know the need of assistance to our municipalities. $3.00 per student for text books and $1.00 for library needs, does not go too far with the costs as they are today. I submit it might be a better plan if the government would supply all the text books for all grades, and beyond that let the pupils buy their notebooks, exercise books, pencils and other supplies wherever they choose. We doubt with all the new courses and text books covering same if the basic truths in connection with arithmetic and grammar are changed. The same goes for correct spelling. Since 1919 I have either worked in or owned a drug-store which supplied local school books and I know that year after year, fewer dealers are left who are willing to handle these books because of the confusion resulting from the number of text books required and the change in courses. I would suggest that fewer texts are required and not so many options. I might mention one case in this connection in the primary schools. Two neighbouring schools, in different township areas use two different texts in connection with the teaching of arithmetic, at the discretion of the teacher. This I maintain is not necessary.

We should have standard text books and the department should supply them. We all recall in our own childhood days when the primer cost 4c. If I remember correctly they ran, 6, 8, 12 and 15 in the different grades. Going back to those times the government of the day paid the author of the approved text a royalty and then further subsidized the printing of same, resulting in the low prices of text books. Today the author of the approved text is paid a royalty by the publisher, and no doubt this has a great deal to do with the high cost of our text books, along with increased labour costs. I would submit it might be a good policy for the government again to pay the royalty to the author of the approved text, and call for public tenders on a competitive basis for the printing of the books. Today it costs over $22 for text books to start a student in our secondary schools. I submit we would be doing more for the children of the future and be of greater assistance to the parents of this province if such a course were undertaken.

Regarding child welfare and protection, I would like to bring to the attention of this House the real service being rendered by the Department of Welfare under the capable direction of the hon. Mr. Goodfellow and his Deputy. In the field of child welfare, it has been my privilege over the past few years to become acquainted with the good work being done by the Children's Aid Society of the riding which I represent. Early this year, they suffered a severe loss in the passing of the late Mr. E. M. T. Griffith, past president of the society, who was formerly prominently connected with the work for many years. He was held in high esteem in the whole community and will be greatly missed. The co-operation of the Minister and his Deputy in this field of work has brought many plaudits from the groups interested in children's welfare.

Before closing, I would again like to bring to your attention Canada's Stratford Festival, the greatest achievement on record in its first year, 1953. It was a startling example of the success of the Canadian pioneer spirit on a new and unexplored frontier. Over 68,000 persons attended in a 6 weeks' season last year, grossing $205,942 in box office receipts. It was a well-planned and boldly imaginative exploitation of resources which are no less valuable for being intangible. It attracted a large number of visitors from outside Canada and established a standard which assures that its drawing power will ever increase.

A clipping from the Financial Post reads: "no event this year (referring to 1953, of course) has so enhanced in non-material ways the name of Canada, but it has done something even more important than spreading the good name of Canada abroad. It has established within Canada a self-confidence in a vital field of expression and thereby enriched the life of our nation."

This year over a longer period, from June 28th to August 21st, Stratford Shakespearean Festival presents three more Shakespearean plays. It is my sincere hope that many of you who did not have the opportunity to visit the County City last year may avail yourselves of the opportunity this coming summer.

MR. ARTHUR CHILD (Wentworth): Mr. Speaker, I am very pleased to have this opportunity to join with my colleagues in the Budget Debate, and to congratulate the hon. Minister of Health for his successful efforts to have the 600-bed extension to the Ontario Hospital in Hamilton and the 125-bed nurses' residence included in the 1954-55 budget. This is something I have been fighting for since 1951 and, at times, I thought I was fighting a losing battle as it had been suggested that the 600 beds should be built in the Port Dover area. Had this been done, it would have put a tremendous hardship on the relatives of the patients in the Hamilton district that pay regular visits to their loved ones. Once again, I congratulate the Minister for his wisdom in keeping the present hospital site: as it is so convenient to transportation and encourages visitors to the hospital, so necessary in the patients' treatments. From time to time, I have visited the hospital to get a more accurate picture of present conditions. It has always amazed me that our superintendent at the hospital, Dr. Senn, has been able to do such an outstanding job with regard to the treatment and service to the patients under such crowded conditions. Actually, the hospital cares for double the number of patients it was originally built for. Also to Dr. Senn's credit, is the record of patients discharged annually, which amounts to, approximately, 450. Last year 66.7 patients were discharged per 100 admitted. A remarkable record. I mention this, Mr. Speaker, because, unfortunately, many people today are not cognizant of the work being done in our mental institutions.

I am sure the news of the extension was also greeted with open arms by many of our leading churchmen who have also been concerned with the overcrowding of our elderly patients. Many relatives of patients have already spoken to me saying how pleased they were to know that the much talked of addition was going to become a reality.

I might say, I have also heard of some very complimentary remarks from some of our labour people as the hospital project will mean employment for a large number of our local tradesmen.

We are, at the present time, very concerned in Hamilton with our employment problem, and I would ask the hon. Minister of Health and the hon. Minister of Public Works to expedite this most welcome project so as to help ease the unemployment situation in Hamilton as soon as possible.

And now Mr. Speaker, I would like to turn to another problem which is a very difficult one in my riding. It is one concerning housing. We have at the present time, approximately 400 rental war-time houses on the mountain. These were built during the war to take care of the increased number of war workers, and there was an agreement made by the City of Hamilton and the property owners, before they were built, that these temporary homes would be removed within 6 months after the cessation of hostilities.

At the present time, there have been two extensions to the original agreement. As it stands now, the expiry date of the last extension, is June 30th, 1955. The problem is Mr. Speaker, there are some people in the homes that are not in a position to pay a large down payment on a permanent type home, although there are some who could. Due to the temporary type of construction of the houses, the property owners in the adjacent area are demanding the city live up to its agreement to remove the homes and to allow homes to be built that will be in keeping with the rest of the houses in the district.

I believe at the present time, the tenants in the war-time houses can buy the house they are renting, provided they agree to move it to another location outside the city, as they claim they do not comply with the city's building by-laws.

Information I have received, leads me to believe the city will honour their agreement in June, 1955. Although I realize this is an agreement between the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the City of Hamilton and the property owners, and does not directly concern the Provincial Government, it does effect the provincial member for Wentworth, inasmuch as it is, I believe, my responsibility to assist the people in my riding whenever possible, and so I would ask the hon. Minister of Planning and Development to see if he could find some means (under the land assembly scheme that has already been started on the mountain) of setting aside sufficient land for these houses, which could be serviced and cement foundations put in on the federal, provincial and municipal agreement. I believe if such a suggestion can be carried out, it would go a long way to relieve our present housing condition, and I would urge upon the Minister to give this his most serious consideration.

In closing, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on education. As it is today, educational costs make up a large part of our municipal tax bill. The problem of keeping abreast of the demand for more classrooms is getting bigger each year.

I was fortunate to be present at the official opening of the Charles H. Bray School in Ancaster, and it was announced by the chairman of the school board on the opening night that the school was already overcrowded.

One of the points that pleased me with the school was that all unnecessary frills had been eliminated. One of the main faults with some of our school boards in the province is that they pass on architects' plans that cost the taxpayers up to $30,000 per classroom, when actually they can be built for half of this price.

From information I have received, both Burlington and Guelph have built schools for $15,000 and $15,500 per classroom, and are finding their needs adequate to teach their pupils.

Last year I recommended to the Department of Education that the department draw up a number of sets of standard plans for schools, specifying the materials to be used for the various types of schools required, and that government grants should only be paid on a school if the school board uses one of the government plans. With several sets of plans of various types, the school boards would be in a position to choose a particular type of design that would be adaptable to their particular location.

All we require to educate our children today is a good dry shelter, well ventilated and heated, with ample light and seating accommodation, and decorated in a harmony of colours that would be pleasing and restful to the children.

I fail to see the advantage of building schools to last 75 to 100 years when they are outdated and outmoded in 25 to 30 years at the outside.

If we are going to start economizing to assist the taxpayers, I believe the leadership or direction should come from the Provincial Government and I suggest, as a means for starting this programme of economizing, we reduce the figure of $20,000 per classroom, which we will pay a grant on, to $17,500, and no government grants should be paid on any classroom that costs in excess of $22,500.

In this way the taxpayers in the municipalities would receive some protection on educational costs from over-ambitious school boards that have in the past been building monuments to themselves.

I am not sure that my observations will be welcomed by some of the school boards in the province, but I can assure the hon. Minister of Education they will have the blessing of many of our taxpayers, as it was the taxpayers in my riding who brought this to my attention and made some of the suggestions I have recommended today.

I understand if we do not curtail our expenditures on school construction the salaries paid to the teachers may be jeopardized in the future.

This, I am sure, would be a definite mistake. The most important person connected with the school is the teacher and the quality of the teachers we employ will reflect the quality of the citizens we look to to govern our country in the future.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister for a very outstanding budget, and, having spoken on the important subject of conservation in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne, I am pleased to find the hon. Prime Minister saw fit to include $16½ million for conservation in his budget.

I would like to say another word on an important point, which has to do with our young people. We speak about the conservation of our streams, our rivers, watersheds, trees, and so on, and I sometimes think we should consider the conservation of our young people. The department is doing a great job for the province in this connection, and the young people are taking advantage of it.

Incidentally, the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) said in an address here a day or two ago that he thought the young people of today were getting into trouble too much, or words to that effect—I cannot just recall how he put it.

I would like to disagree with him, and say that in my opinion the young folks of today are even better than they formerly were. I speak of Toronto particularly, Mr. Speaker. Not so many years ago we were having a great deal of trouble in our city with juvenile delinquents, young people getting together in crowds or gangs in our parks and other areas, and making things most uncomfortable for themselves, and for the citizens generally. I think congratulations are due to the police department and the council of the City of Toronto for the great job they have done there.

In my own riding of High Park, we had a group called the "Junction Gang." They were notorious in that district, and it was through the co-operation of the citizens' groups, the police and the government, that we were able to do something about that gang, to eliminate it, and we have not heard of any gangs of any description in the City of Toronto now for several years.

The point I am presenting is that our young people are good people. Our young people are interested politically, they are taking an interest in politics on a civic, provincial and federal level. As a matter of fact, it was my pleasure a week or so ago to attend the regional public speaking contest held by one of our good service clubs in the City of Toronto, and we had 8 teen-agers speaking on any subject they chose, and it was very amazing, and very pleasing, Mr. Speaker, to notice that all through the talks given by these young people, there was a trend toward good government, and what the young people of today could do to help in giving good government.

So I say, Mr. Speaker, they are taking an interest. They are interested in government; they are interested in people; they are interested in whom they elect to represent them, and I sometimes think the suggestion of reducing the voting age from 21 to 18 may have some merit, but at the same time, 2 in particular of the young people who spoke in the contest were very definitely opposed to reducing the voting age, because they did not feel they were qualified, or had enough understanding of the present-day situations to cast an intelligent vote. I just give that for what it is worth, Mr. Speaker.

But I do feel that in our young people's organizations, and in our young political organizations, we have a great opportunity for the future. After all, they are citizens of the days to come; they will take our places in this House, and will continue the good government we have had for so many years. I am pleased to see their interest and I am sure the hon. members of the House take the same interest in them as I do.

Turning for a moment to our senior citizens, our older folk—I do not like to use the expression "old folks"; I would rather call them "senior citizens"—I want to congratulate the hon. member for London (Mr. Robarts) for making some reference to this class of people, in his address. I was very pleased to hear the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) mention something along the same line in his address a day or two ago, something about the old folks and what could be done for them.

I am not in a position to say whether any supplementary grants can be given to the old-age pensioners now, but I think our hon. Prime Minister covered that pretty well in his reply to a question put by one of the hon. members.

But let us see if something can be done, particularly in co-operation with the government at Ottawa, whereby we can do something to assist the old folks in their later years, and provide them with the wherewithal with which to enjoy life a little more fully.

As a member of the Toronto City Council, I had the opportunity of becoming acquainted with the situation at Lambert Lodge. The Lodge residents are enjoying things there. I think there are about 750 of them.

We must be reasonable. We must consider that the old folks of today were the young people of yesterday, and we must stop to realize the great contributions they have made to our Canadian way of life.

Mr. Speaker, if there is any way we can assist in helping them make their declining years happier, I am sure it is the intention of this government to do so.

There is one subject which I bring up annually, and I hope it will pay dividends, and a decision arrived at by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett). I refer, Mr. Speaker, to the live stock crossing our thoroughfares at St. Clair Avenue West in High Park riding. A couple of weeks ago, I took the opportunity, with members of the Standing Committee on Agriculture, to visit the new food terminal in the Township of Etobicoke. Following that, we had a very nice luncheon at the Canada Packers, and made a tour of the packing houses, and also had a very good look at the Ontario Stock Yards. I am sure the hon. members were much impressed, as I was.

In the annual report of the Ontario Stock Yards, they say that the net profit for 1953 was more than $48,000, an increase of more than $20,000 over the previous year, resulting from the handling of a record high of 758,214 live stock, up about 65,000 head over the previous year.

Mr. Speaker, most of the live stock crosses St. Clair Avenue during the working day. I ask the hon. members if they can think of any other large city in the Dominion of Canada, where live stock are still permitted to cross a main thoroughfare. I would like to know, Mr. Speaker, I hasten to say to the rural members, that I am not condemning the live stock. After all, we need the steaks, and I am not saying a word about the fact that it may be a good place to have them, but the point I am making is: we do not want them to cross the city streets during rush hours.

As a member of the Toronto City Council in 1950, with some of my colleagues, I was able to have a by-law passed which prohibited the use of city streets for live stock between the hours of 7 a.m. and 7 p.m., so it just remains for the hon. Minister to "o.k." that, and we will have the live stock off the streets.

If you will remember, the Globe and Mail had a series entitled, "This is Toronto," depicting some of the not too pleasant aspects of our great Metropolitan City. I took the liberty of cutting this one out, Mr. Speaker, which is a very good photograph showing a number of good fat cows crossing St. Clair Avenue, and the trucks and cars lined up away back on the road.

In addition to the fact that they tie up traffic, Mr. Speaker, on one of the busiest Metropolitan roads, they are dangerous. We have had loose cows and steers in our parks adjacent to these crossings, and I understand from some of my farmer friends that when a bull or steer becomes unruly on the farm, the best thing to do is to ship it to the stock yards for beef.

Can you imagine some of these unruly bulls getting loose on a main thoroughfare, getting down to the parks where the children are using swings and into the area where they play? It just is not right, and I think the time has come for some action.

MR. SALSBERG: How about a tunnel?

MR. COWLING: Every time I attend our St. Clair-Maybank Ratepayers Association by the Stock Yards—and it is an outstanding ratepayers group—they raise this question of the live stock. Following a meeting the other day, they put me right "on the spot," by asking, "What are you going to do about it?" I say there are several solutions. We could dig an underground passage and have the live stock go down below; we could put a bridge across the top, such as they have in Montreal; or else, we could say they must use big transport trucks.

I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that all the local packers, with the exception of the two big packing houses and I am not condemning them, they are doing a great job and I would like to say that the packing house business is the largest single industry in this great Metropolitan Area of Toronto; they are providing a great deal of work and that part is fine—but I say this, that if the local small packing houses can send a transport to the Ontario Stock Yards and take their live stock away, then the same thing should apply to the two packing houses adjacent to the Ontario Stock Yards.

For years and years, they have been able to use the city streets at no charge. I think it is high time we took some action in this regard. As far as the people of High Park are concerned, and the people in the other areas, they are behind this thing 100 per cent. The live stock are sometimes dangerous; they hold up traffic; they create a very nauseating odour during the summer months, by constantly crossing the highway, and they are a danger to the children and citizens in that area.

I would like the hon. Minister to give very serious consideration to some way of eliminating this danger.

Incidentally, I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I understand the packers are transporting hogs in trucks. If they can transport hogs, they can transport cattle. So let us get the live stock off the streets; let us become a big town, because that is actually what we are. We have a million and a quarter people in this area. Let us not have the other large centres across the country ridiculing us because we still permit cows on the streets.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): Mr. Speaker, I have a few observations I would like to make at this time with relation to the budget.

One of the matters which has given me some concern in the last several weeks is the report I read in the newspapers that Mr. Blair Fraser, who writes for Maclean's magazine and other newspapers, as a result of a libel action was ordered by the court to disclose the source of his information. In my judgment if that is good law—and I do not question it at the moment—then I say the time has come for those of us who believe in the freedom of the press to amend the law, so there may be freedom of the press without fear on the part of those who express themselves fearlessly and frankly of having to disclose the sources of their information.

As a matter of law, any action of libel according to the Judicature Act must be tried by a jury, unless counsel representing the plaintiff and the defendant in the action, consent to have the action tried by a judge without the intervention of the jury.

Then the Libel and Slander Act as enacted in the Statutes of Ontario, states that:

In any action for libel contained in a newspaper, may at any time after the delivery of the statement of claim or the expiry of the time within which it should have been delivered, apply to the court for security for costs, upon notice and an affidavit by the defendant, or his agent, showing the nature of the action, of the defence, that the plaintiff is not possessed of property sufficient to answer the costs of the action in case judgment is given in favour of the defendant, that the defendant has a good defence upon the merits, and that the statements complained of were published in good faith, or that the grounds for action are trivial or frivolous, the court may make an order for the plaintiff to give security for costs which shall be given in accordance with the practice in cases where a plaintiff resides out of Ontario, and the order shall be a stay of proceedings until the security is given.

As a matter of law, anybody who has had any experience in the courts must know, and indeed does know, if you are going to institute an action against a newspaper, you serve a newspaper, and if you know the name of the reporter who wrote the article, his name may be added to it. Then as a mark of prudence, you not only sue the newspaper, but the reporter who wrote the article.

At the same time, if an aggrieved person wants to get damages as a result of a libelous article which appeared in a newspaper, all he need do, per se, is to prove his damages, and his damages may not be substantial if the alleged libel was published in good faith, on the grounds that it was believed that the publication was for the public benefit and did not involve a criminal charge.

It seems to me that the time has now come when the hon. Attorney-General of this province and those who advise him, should carefully consider The Evidence Act, particularly section 7, which states:

(1) A witness shall not be excused from answering any questions upon the grounds that the answer might tend to criminate him or may tend to establish his liability to a civil proceedings at the instance of the Crown or of any person or to a prosecution under any act of the Legislature.

(2) If with respect to any question a witness objects to answering upon any grounds mentioned in subsection 1 and if, but for this section or any act of the Parliament of Canada, he would, therefore, have been excused from answering such question, then, although the witness is, by reason of this section or by reason of any Act of the Parliament of Canada, compelled to answer, the answer so given shall not be used or receivable in evidence against him in any civil proceeding or any proceeding under any Act of the Legislature.

If we are going to have, as I have indicated a moment ago, outstanding and fearless press reports, then I say the individual who writes the article, and the gentlemen or companies which publish the newspapers, should be protected to the extent that the source of information which the writer of the article had at the time of the publication should not be divulged in any court of law.

It is my submission that section 7 of The Evidence Act should be amended, and amended indeed at this session of the Legislature by the following words:

No newspaper and/or the reporter for any newspaper on an examination for discovery and/or by reason of a demand made by a solicitor acting for a plaintiff should be forced to disclose the source of the information on which the action for libel is based.

I think that will lead to freedom of the press as we understand it. Any other programme, as I see it at the moment, is not conducive to the freedom men have fought for in two wars.

I would like to take this opportunity of indicating to my leader the satisfaction his budget gave to the people of Kingston, and I think I can best express this view from an editorial which appeared in the Kingston Whig-Standard on Friday, March 12th. I would like to read in part what this newspaper had to say:

The budget tabled by Prime Minister Leslie Frost in the Ontario Legislature yesterday was typical of all the budgets he has presented to the Legislature, in that it reported a surplus, forecast a surplus, and showed the province's finances to be in excellent condition.

Since the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) assumed office in the Drew Government he has announced 11 consecutive budget surpluses, and the current budget is also the sixth in succession in which no new taxes have been announced.

The special and maintenance grants to universities, including increases, and the increased grants to hospitals, are also important features of the new budget. These will be generally approved, in our opinion. The people of this community, with its concentration of hospitals and Queen's University, are perhaps more aware than the citizens of many other communities of the difficulties encountered by such institutions because of mounting costs.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and his advisers are to be congratulated and commended on the new budget. It is documentary evidence of another year of most capable management of the financial affairs of the province, and it holds the promise of a year of similar management to be added to the record. It will be, we predict, highly satisfactory to most citizens of Ontario.

I would like to say a word concerning Queen's University, and make reference to a statement made quite a number of years ago, in fact in April, 1903, by Daniel Miner Gordon, then principal of Queen's University, whose daughter showed me a love and affection that otherwise I would probably never have had in my life, due to the fact that my own mother died when I was a little boy, and she in every sense of the word, after she married my father, was everything to me that a mother could be. Principal Gordon said:

Queen's has its friends, benefactors and graduates throughout the country, a constituency distinctively its own, whose members are united by their loyal attachment to the university and by their interest in its progress and prosperity. One after another passes away from her council board and from her list of benefactors, but Queen's remains a living, growing organism, not dependent upon even the wisest of her counsellors, or the most bountiful of her benefactors, because drawing to herself, by the very power of her vitality, the elements requisite for her support. The life so strenuously maintained in the past, so vigorous and helpful today, is the best pledge of what awaits her in the years to come; and our hope is that with increasing equipment, by wisely directed effort, through the earnest co-operation of all who seek her good, Queen's may share and may assist the expanding life of our country, and may from year to year become more capable of rendering the loftiest kind of service to the nation.

As the result of the capital and maintenance grants made by the Province of Ontario to Queen's University, it has rendered, is rendering and will continue to render the loftiest kind of service to the Province of Ontario and to the Dominion of Canada.

As I understand it, the budget carries out the policy of the administration, and the government must play a vital role in maintaining economic growth and stability. It is my opinion that the great development of this province in the last 20 years has been, to a great extent, as a result of the solid financial policy of the Progressive Conservative Party.

The sound financial position of the Province of Ontario has gone forward with leaps and bounds as the result of Canadian genius for creative initiative, which has had the effect of multiplying our production.

One of the grants in the recent budget was to the Canadian Cancer Foundation, and at this time I would like to say that some few days ago it was my very unique pleasure and privilege to be the guest speaker at the Annual Dinner of the Ontario Division of the Canadian Cancer Society. We in Kingston are very proud of the leadership that Mrs. Frank Archer has given in connection with the work on cancer, its treatment and cure. At this time I would like to pay my respects to the early outstanding leadership given to the Canadian Cancer Society by Mrs. Egmont Frankel, who, when this society needed encouragement, gave to this splendid organization the inspiration that was needed. To this fine woman the Province of Ontario is indebted, and no words of mine can adequately express the appreciation that is due her.

One of the problems in relation to cancer, is to try to find out what makes cancer grow, and it seems to me that it is fair to say that without research, the expectation of survival from cancer is greatly reduced. The cancer cell in the body is much more violent in growth, as I understand it, than any other cell. It is highly self-reproductive and, as nothing can grow without nourishment, then the nourishment to cancer comes from the other cells in the body.

The Honourable the Provincial Treasurer announced in his budget speech that, in reference to the Canadian Cancer Institute and the Cobalt bomb, there had been spent a total of $9,500,000, and of this amount $1 million had been contributed by the Federal Government. Treatment with the Cobalt bomb means that the ray of radio-activity can be focussed very accurately to cancer in any part of the body, and one of the great problems that still leaves the medical profession in the dark is the diagnosis of cancer of the stomach, and its treatment in this area, in that the treatment sometimes has an adverse effect on the healthy cells of the body between the outer surface in the region of the stomach.

There are two callous murderers in the world today—war and cancer. Freedom from war depends on the nations of the world. Freedom from cancer lies within our own grasp. And as we know so little about what makes cancer grow, there is still so much to be done by research to cure this dread disease. I am not unmindful that Pasteur made surgery possible, Crawford Long made operations painless, Dr. Curie placed treatment by radium within our hands, Fleming discovered penicillin, and Dr. Best was one of the co-discoverers of insulin. Whose name will be blazed forth in the medical records of tomorrow for finding out what makes cancer grow is yet to be determined, but may I express the hope that with the great brains possessed by the medical profession, and the research programme instituted by my leader, the day is not far distant when we will have a drug and/or treatment that will arrest the growth of cancer.

I go along with the observations of the Prime Minister in a recent statement made by him in which he said that it is the desire of the province to establish for the people of Ontario a research and treatment organization which would develop the latest in medical knowledge for cancer patients.

Another matter to which I would like to refer is the grant made to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Last fall, the cornerstone was laid at a building in Kingston which will extend its programme of useful service to more than 420 blind people in the Counties of Leeds, Grenville, Hastings, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington, and Prince Edward. This organization is known as the Quinte-St. Lawrence District. The Province of Ontario made a grant to this institution in the amount of $30,000. The total cost of this building has been estimated at $255,000. A grant of $30,000 has been received from the Ontario Division of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. Cities, towns and villages in the above counties have made grants.

The Quinte-St. Lawrence District is still short about $25,000 to complete their project. At this time I want to pay tribute to Dr. Stewart M. Polson, of Kingston, a retired eye specialist, who has fired this organization with enthusiasm and was one of the main men to blaze a trail to make possible this new institution in Kingston. To him and his colleagues, men and women of the 6 counties, goes a vote of thanks from our sightless friends.

The grants that are made to the Agricultural Fairs of this Province are money well spent. A century ago, robust yeomen from the Old Land, sometimes driven by poverty but often lured by the opportunity to share in the wealth of the New World, the United Empire Loyalists who sought the right to live under the Union Jack, left the gentler civilization that then existed south of the line and brought to the Kingston district the traditional county fair, at which was shown the products of their toil and the handicraft work, as well as the pickled vegetables, preserved fruits, relish of all kinds and the home-made cooking of their women folk. Vying with one another in friendly competition, they very often seriously talked Party politics, discussing the solution of their common problems and expressing their opinions of how the Ontario Government should be run.

Measured by the conditions that exist today, the county fair of a century ago was an insignificant occurrence, but it is not to be overlooked that great oaks from little acorns grow.

As we all think of the fair today, we must be impressed by the superb advances that have been made in the production of live stock, the improvement of cereals and vegetables, and the lessening of manual labour by the ingenious advances in modernizing processes that have driven almost into forgetfulness the scythe and flail. The ingenuity of man has controlled and conquered the forces of nature to assist those who make their living in the first 6 inches of the top-soil. Those who attend a county fair today go to compare, and analyze, perhaps to criticize, to see what is displayed, even the proverbial horse races, without which traditionally the county fair would not be complete. In a word, I commend to the Prime Minister favourable consideration in the future of grants to the county fair. It is money well spent.

Last September Sam Carr was discharged from the Kingston Penitentiary. He was one of the big figures in the Soviet espionage ring uncovered in Ottawa in 1946, at one time the national organizer of the Labour-Progressive Party. The Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Federal Bureau of Investigation sought Carr for 3 years, following the 1946 spy trial. He was finally arrested in New York.

He was convicted of uttering and forging an application for a passport for a known Russian spy who was a member of the Labour-Progressive Party in this country. Carr, on his release from Kingston Penitentiary, stated that he was still a Communist, and I suggest to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) that this man should be still watched by the police of this province if he is within our boundaries.

I want to direct a word to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) who frequently goes to Ottawa for top-level conferences, and I am going to ask him to discuss with the Rt. hon. Prime Minister of Canada (Mr. St. Laurent) the question of giving a Silver Cross to the mothers of men who have been killed in the last war and/or Korea or to the eldest sister if the mother is dead. Many a sister would be honoured to wear such an award, and I can see no good reason, when there is no mother, why the sister should not be recognized in this regard.

When I went on the Parliamentary trip to Northern Ontario in 1952, I was impressed by the number of engineers that I met who had passed through the halls of the Faculty of Science at Queen's University, and I would like the Province of Ontario to know that recently the Dean of Engineering of this University, Dr. Douglas S. Ellis, was recently awarded the Julian C. Smith medal which is presented each year by the Engineering Institute of Canada to the one who renders the greatest service in the development of Canada. My view is that the sound policy in the Faculty of Science at Queen's, headed by Dean Ellis, has meant much to the development in recent years of Northern Ontario.

I would like to make an observation in relation to an editorial which appeared in the Globe and Mail on January 2nd, 1954, which was headed "Slaughter On Our Highways." There have been certain amendments to the Highway Traffic Act this year, but there is still a section which must be amended or there are going to be more killings, serious injuries, and great damage to motor cars.

That section is section 41, subsection 3A, which states:

The operator or driver of every vehicle or car shall, before entering or crossing a through highway, bring the vehicle or car to a full stop immediately before entering the nearest crosswalk.

The driver or operator of any vehicle who has come to a full stop as required above, upon entering the through highway, shall be subject to the usual right-of-way rule, which is to the effect that the car on the right has the right-of-way. I have said before in this House, and let me repeat, that this section should be amended to read that the operator or driver of every vehicle, before entering a through highway, shall bring his car to a full stop and shall only proceed on his way with caution. If this section is not amended as I suggest, the day will come when it is known as the manslaughter section, and let me be frank to say that in my opinion this section is bad law, having regard to the great traffic on our provincial highways.

Section 41, subsection (1) states:

When two persons in charge of vehicles approach a crossroads or intersection at the same time, the person to the right shall have the right-of-way.

Then, according to subsection G (ii), it states that:

Where an amber light illuminated by rapid intermittent flashes is shown at the intersection, the driver of the vehicle shall approach the intersection and may only proceed through the intersection with caution.

This section should be amended to read, by adding the following words:

"That the man on the right entering the intersection shall not have the right-of-way."

After 12 o'clock, or sometimes later, a motorist driving through cities often finds four amber lights flashing at each corner, and it has been argued by good lawyers that the vehicle to the driver's right as he enters into the intersection has the right of way.

My statement is that where there are four amber lights blinking on four corners of an intersection it seems to me, generally speaking, that the car on the right should not have the right of way, but that the common law rule should apply. The first into the intersection should have the right of way, and where these amber lights are working each vehicle must enter with caution.

Old man Ontario is satisfied with the sound financial policy of this government and the Watch Dog of our Exchequer, the hon. Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost), who has made it very clear in the immediate past that he will stand for no dishonesty, fraud, carelessness or negligence in reference to the spending of the taxpayers' dollar.

With all humility and reverence, let me say that it is my earnest prayer that my leader may be blessed with the best of good health to carry out the policy of his late brother, Mr. Cecil G. Frost, that there may be in this Province of Ontario, equality, justice and toleration.

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): Mr. Speaker, it gives me a great deal of pleasure this afternoon to participate in the budget debate, and to review some matters which have been discussed heretofore, and to introduce some new matters for further consideration.

As has been mentioned by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) this is the eleventh year in which the province has enjoyed a surplus on a financial basis, and it is the sixth year in which there has been no increase in taxation, and no new taxes have been introduced.

For a province—or for any institution, for that matter—to carry on with the increased financial expenditures from year to year without increasing the sources of revenue on a per capita basis, is really an accomplishment. I know in these modern times the matter of heavy expenditures is something which is increasing from year to year. I know, for example, at the municipal level, we expect to have higher tax bills in 1954 than we had in 1953, and so on, from year to year, simply because of the fact that the cost of the administration of government, and of matters of personal import, increase as times go by. So I suggest the hon. Prime Minister is to be complimented in being able to introduce a budget in this House in 1954, without any increases in taxation, nor the introduction of any new taxes.

One of the matters I presume which the average individual who does not reside in an urban centre appreciates more than perhaps any other is the introduction of hydro during the past few years into the rural sections of the Province of Ontario. Within the last day or two, we have had the opportunity of listening to some of the observations which have been made by hon. members of this House relative to the cost of hydro in their respective communities. We have heard, for example, of excessive costs in one community where hydro-electric power has been developed by, and purchased from, the Canadian National Railway. We have heard, on the other hand, of the cheapness of power which has been developed through the natural waterpower of this great Province of Ontario.

A few years ago, during World War II, many of us in the City of Toronto experienced a most inconvenient practice of having to almost crawl up the stairs of office buildings in the downtown area, when the hydro-electric power was cut off for one hour in the mornings and one hour in the afternoons, in order that it might be conserved for the general benefit of the citizens at large. It was a happy day indeed when it was announced that Hydro was able to alleviate that particular inconvenience through the installation of a steam-plant operation as a supplementary power development to that of natural power.

Now, this year, in the budget, mention is made that for rural power development, by way of hydro-electric power in our rural areas, more than $9 million is in prospect for the benefit of those who live in our non-urban areas. That is something which is undoubtedly going to react to the benefit of the people of this province. I suppose that many of us, prior to the introduction of hydro-electric power, in our summer cottage areas, for example, experienced the use of the old type of lighting by coal-oil lamps, gasoline lamps, and other old-time services, which we were glad to have, but we are also glad they have undoubtedly been supplanted with great benefit, by hydro-electric power.

We are, accordingly, glad to know as well, that there is a great prospect of improved development of the St. Lawrence, in order to provide additional energy by way of hydro-electric power for the people of this province.

Last week-end, with other hon. members of this House, it was my privilege to visit the Town of Cobalt, and to inspect the plant of the Cobalt Smelting Company, a plant which is modern in every sense of the word, and one which will undoubtedly bring great benefit to the development of the municipalities in Northern Ontario, which have suffered for a lack of the development of mineral wealth which lies in such vast quantities in that particular area.

I was very much interested to learn that this particular smelter will be the second smelter in the Province of Ontario. Heretofore, it apparently has been necessary to have the materials forwarded to a smelter in Southern Ontario, in order that the mineral wealth might come to proper refinement. With the development of this plant in Northern Ontario, not only will we have facilities closer at hand, which will permit a great deal faster development and the re-opening of many of the mining properties in that part of the country, but it also will increase the possibilities of employment in that area, and will afford the possibility of development of that part of the country at a rate which has hertofore been unknown.

I am sure that each hon. member of this House is quite delighted with the prospect of the introduction of this particular industry in the Cobalt area.

Now, coming to the matter of highways, and we all needs must think of highways; it is the common denominator of transportation, not only in this province, but in this country. We know there is a proposed Estimate of $127 million allocated for the development of our highways system.

A few weeks ago I had the privilege of participating in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne, and among the things which I mentioned in that particular speech, was a reference to the Central Registry system of motorcar ownerships, and also the registration of titles, and of liens, and chattel mortgages, pertinent to motor vehicles as being a very desirable thing.

I said it then—and I still feel—that the day is not too far distant when a common registry system for the ownership of motor vehicle permits and of chattel mortgages and lien registrations is not only desirable, but absolutely necessary.

Within the past month, there has been a judgment in the Court of Appeal in a case wherein a person purchased a motor truck in a community not too far distant from the City of Toronto, from a motor car dealer, and on the bill of sale was printed a memorandum in very small type, which I suppose not one person in a thousand ever reads, which contained reference to the effect that no statement or understanding not set forth in writing in the contract would be valid, unless it appeared in writing on that particular contract.

What happened in this particular case was that the farmer purchased the truck for $1,200. He had the privilege of driving it for approximately 2 weeks, and at the beginning of the third week, a bailiff visited his premises and seized the truck on behalf of the prior lienholder.

The farmer brought an action against the vendor of the truck, the motor car dealer. His action was dismissed, and that judgment was re-affirmed in the Court of Appeal. So the farmer not only lost his $1,200, but he also lost the truck. In other words, the innocent purchaser of a vehicle under the laws of this province was not helped at all; but he could have been helped had there been a common registry of title and of chattel mortgages and liens and encumbrances for such vehicles.

In some States to the south of us, not only do they have a common registry office system for such matters, but they also have a tabulation of title in the form of a document which the owner retains, and which he produces when necessary to those persons who may be purchasing or otherwise interested in the establishment of title, or a lien or encumbrances to any such chattel.

Such a system has many advantages and it is something which, I submit, should be given serious consideration by the hon. Minister of Highways.

In this Province of Ontario, we have some 62,000 miles of hard-surfaced or paved highways, which is more than double that of any other province in this great Dominion, and which indicates to us the magnitude of development of the highway system in the Province of Ontario. I am sure it is something of which we, as citizens of this great province, can be and rightfully are proud. When we stop to think that the gasoline tax we pay in this province, although it is 11 cents a gallon, is some 4 to 5 cents a gallon less than that paid in some four or five other provinces of this great Dominion, and that the motor car licence fees in this province are the lowest of any province in the whole of the Dominion of Canada, it is a great thing. When we realize full well the fact that we have such an extensive highway development in our province, and operating at the minimum cost to those persons who contribute directly to their upkeep, we should be justly proud.

In the riding of York West, which I have the honour to represent, we have one or two problems. One of them I mentioned a week or two ago in my speech in the debate in reply to the Speech from the Throne. I am going to speak about it again, today, because something important has happened in that area since I made my last speech concerning it. That is, the "death-trap intersection," as I will call it today, at Royal York Road and Dundas Street in the Township of Etobicoke. I do not think there is another intersection of highways and railways which could be worse than this in the immediate vicinity of suburban Toronto. There have been deaths occur at that intersection on many occasions—not just one, but several. I want to emphasize the necessity of having something done with regard to that intersection.

Royal York Road is the through highway from No. 2 Lakeshore Highway, New Toronto and Mimico on the south, northward to the town of Weston. It is a very well travelled highway and should be. It is a good road: it is a service artery, and as one might say speaking in metropolitan terms, it is an "arterial highway" for the Metropolitan Area. But, what do we have at this intersection of Royal York Road and Dundas Street? We have a level crossing despite very heavy morning and night, east and west-bound traffic on Dundas Street, and north and south-bound traffic on Royal York Road. To cap it all, within a matter of 100 feet of that intersection on Dundas Street there is a level railway crossing, and within another 100 feet on Royal York Road there is another level railway crossing. At these railway crossings, which are on a curve, more than 72 trains a day travel on the Canadian Pacific Railway, and some of them do not travel 5 miles an hour, but they travel at very high rates of speed.

That is the particular reason why I am bringing this matter to the attention of the hon. members of this House today. We all read in the press about a week ago of a very serious accident which occurred on this same railway line, a few miles to the west of this intersection, when a large cement-mixer truck and a railway freight train and a diesel passenger train came into collision as a result of a level railway crossing accident.

So I say to the hon. members of this House, that while that accident happened at the Dixie sideroad: it could just as well have happened at the corner of Dundas Street and Royal York Road in the Township of Etobicoke, either on Dundas Street or on Royal York Road. Double railway tracks, trains passing in both directions heavily-trafficked highways, and yet, it would appear that it almost has to come to the point where many people will have to be killed before we can get something really necessary done at some of these intersections.

I know the matter of Royal York Road and Dundas Street has been up for discussion many, many times. It has been discussed in Metropolitan Toronto Council; it has been discussed in the Township Council of the Township of Etobicoke; it has been discussed in the Council of the Township of York. There is not a council of any municipality in and around that particular area that is not fully aware of the matter, and that has not brought this matter to the attention not only of members of the council, but also to their own individual residents in the area, and to the Department of Highways. I would certainly suggest that definitely something should be done in regard to that particular intersection, not a year from now but in the immediate future, if we are going to avoid future accidents at that and other similar railway crossings.

The other point I want to bring forward relative to the Department of Highways is the old "chestnut" Brown's Line, that is No. 27 Highway which runs from No. 2 Highway at Long Branch, across the Queen Elizabeth and Dundas Highways, towards Malton and up to Barrie. From the Queen Elizabeth Way down to No. 2 Highway, which is a comparatively short distance—about a mile or a mile and a half; maybe less—that highway, although it is very heavily travelled, is still a 22-foot pavement in width, with a shoulder on either side.

Something has to be done to widen that into a four-lane highway in order to take care of traffic which has been using that highway for many, many years, but now in addition, we are going to pour a great deal more traffic onto that particular highway because of the completion of the Toronto by-pass which joins No. 27 Highway just north of the Queen Elizabeth and Dundas Highways. Coupled with that, of course, is the renewal of a railway bridge on No. 27 Highway just north of No. 2 highway.

In order to accomplish that, I fully realize that the Canadian National Railway and the Metropolitan Toronto Council have to be consulted. The Department of Highways is interested, and also the Council of the Township of Etobicoke. There are many people who have an interest in that highway, from a municipal standpoint, but at the same time we should take into consideration the fact that it is a highway which has a tremendous amount of traffic upon it, and one which should be relieved at the earliest possible moment.

Turning now to the Department of Education, I know that in the budget we have set aside $61 million, plus certain grants to universities, and the College of Art, which bring the total grants up to some $81.9 million. That is a great deal of money, but every dollar of that is being used, and will be used, for the benefit of the people of this province. There is not a thing one can give to anybody better than something which has the possibilities and the great potential of education. With an education they can help themselves; without it they are dependent on a lot of people and a lot of contingencies. And so, insofar as the budget for education is concerned, I wish to congratulate the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) in the amount of the budget and the potential in educational work which will be accomplished during the year 1954-55.

There are some interesting facts in regard to the matter of education. In this province we have some 915,000 students attending our public and secondary schools and in addition those attending our universities. We have some 30,000 teachers who are employed in teaching those students and providing them with the wherewithal that they may be enabled to look after themselves in times ahead. More recently we have had come into our midst many New Canadians, people who have not had the privilege of learning the English language even abroad; they have had to take time and trouble and sustain themselves, earn a living, and acquire unto themselves an education in our culture and in our educational system and habits. They are doing a great work for themselves; they are anxious to get ahead; they want to be able to make a contribution to this country, and I am sure that each and every one of us welcomes the New Canadians to our midst. We are a country of some 15 millions of people with the vast areas undeveloped which we have in this great country of ours. There is room not only for ourselves but for all these New Canadians who are coming, and what is more, together we can all go ahead shoulder to shoulder, and develop the national wealth of this great country of ours, and in particular this great province.

Turning now for a moment to the matter of municipalities, I have a great yearning in my heart for municipalities. I had the privilege of being associated with municipal work for a great number of years, and I know some of the headaches and some of the heartaches that members of municipal councils have experienced over the years in trying to meet budgets, finance the municipalities, and provide the essential services which they are called upon to provide by the citizens of their respective municipalities. I can well recall the day when municipal councils used to receive grants from this province, which were earmarked grants; they were designated for certain specific purposes. We received a grant for the police department; we received a grant for the fire department, but before one became entitled to those grants, one had to qualify, and if one did not qualify, they did not get the grant. There have been some municipalities in past years which, through not qualifying, did not receive any grant for certain services.

However, last year we came to realize this, and introduced a system of unconditional grants to municipalities in this province. This is something which has proven its worth over and over again in the last 12-month period, because municipalities today have a freer hand of operation as individuals, and also in providing services to the citizens of their respective municipalities. And after all, that is what a municipal council desires to do, to provide adequate, fair and reasonable services to its citizens. Today, as I say, municipalities are enabled the better to do that by reason of the system of unconditional grants which presently is in vogue.

In the case of municipalities, the budget this year provides $125 million, which is an increase over last year, and there is a possibility that it may even go as high as $134 million this year. That, too, is a great deal of money. In certain quarters, we sometimes hear individuals associated with municipal effort, either by way of municipal council or school board, or even a ratepayers' association, who will criticize the government by saying that the percentage of grants that the province is paying this year is not as large as it was last year.

They like to give the impression that the province is lessening its interest in municipal welfare. That certainly is not the case. The fact of the matter is this. Never before have there been the dollars poured into the municipal treasuries of this province by way of grant than there will be during the year 1954-55. Never before have there been the demands made upon municipal councils by the citizens of those communities that will be made during the year 1954-55. The people of this country are progressive; they are desirous of accomplishing things, and the way you accomplish things is by doing, by being active.

The province, as I have indicated, is pouring more money into municipal treasuries this year, but, as I mentioned in opening, there are not any new taxes levied; there are not any new sources of revenue being sought provincially, but simply by the natural increase of taxation on an existing basis do we find that the province is able, not only to increase its grants to municipalities, but in all avenues of services increased grants are being made.

We realize, of course, that every dollar which comes into the Provincial Treasury comes from the individual resident, or from industry or from a natural resource in the province. It is all home-produced, so to speak, and produced for the benefit of the people of this province. A few weeks ago we read in the press of a neighbour province where it was hoped that sometime in the not too far distant future a dividend might be declared by that province to the individual residents, and it was suggested in one newspaper article that I read, that there might be an emigration into that particular province in order that they might be enabled, as individuals, to acquire a certain per capita grant. All that is happening in that particular province is a development of natural resources, something which has heretofore laid dormant, today is being developed, and I hope that there will be more people go to that province to develop those particular natural resources.

In the case of the Department of Health, there is a matter which has a local tinge here which I want to refer to; something that I think can be alleviated from recurring in the future. It all had to do with a development during the past 12-month period, but it does indicate to a degree the disinterest some people can take in their neighbours. It has to do with the erection of a sewage disposal plant on the Etobicoke Creek, which is the boundary between Toronto Township in Peel County, and Etobicoke Township in York County. Apparently what happened was this. Naturally, Peel County, and Toronto Township, in particular, desired to extend their residential areas. They went ahead. They contacted the Provincial Department of Health, and received a blessing from that department for the installation of sewers, in the development of an area, and the installation of a sewage disposal plant. Ultimately, the people in Etobicoke found themselves in a completely built-up residential area, staring out their kitchen windows one morning, at steam-shovels and bulldozers, in action preparatory to the erection of a sewage disposal plant, in one case within 81 feet of the backyard of a neighbour whose property abutted it on the rear. Never at any time had there been any communication between those municipal councils as to what the project was.

Now a little bit of co-operation, and a little bit of appreciation of the other fellow's viewpoint would have saved many headaches and heartaches, and I sincerely trust, not only in the case of those two municipalities but in the case of municipalities at large, in a metropolitan area such as we have here in Toronto where we have growing pains and growing problems, that no matter how those problems may be sought to be remedied, they may be remedied on a co-operative basis between the respective councils of the adjacent municipalities, to the benefit of all concerned, and not, on the other hand, by trying to disregard the viewpoint of the other people in the area.

Now I turn my remarks to the Department of Agriculture. I have a complaint in regard to that particular department, or a phase of its operation. Very recently, acting in a professional capacity, I had occasion to appear before the Transportation Committee of the Milk Control Board, acting on behalf of a client who is in the milk transportation business. The situation has developed, in regard to this particular problem, along these lines. This individual had purchased a milk transportation business some 19 or 20 years ago, and had been servicing a number of farms by picking up their milk and delivering it to certain dairies in the City of Toronto, for which he had obtained the usual and necessary licence from the Milk Control Board. Two or two-and-a-half years ago, a competitor started picking up milk on the same route without a licence. The matter was brought to the attention of the Transportation Committee of the Milk Control Board, and

I believe ultimately to the attention of the Milk Control Board itself, but, believe you this, gentlemen, for the past two-and-a-half years that condition has been existing, and there has not been a thing done to correct it.

If our licencing system under the Milk Control Board, and in particular the Transportation Committee of that Board, is going to mean anything at all, that licencing system should be on a proper basis. The issuing of a licence should mean something. If, on the other hand, anyone who wants to, can simply start a milk transportation business and infringe on anyone's route after he has paid for it, the fact of the matter is that the licencing system does not mean a thing. I feel that in that particular matter something should be done directly to remedy the situation, and to set up the licencing system of the Milk Control Board on a proper basis, so that there will not be a half-a-dozen trucks running up and down the same township road, picking up from one farm and another. All of that adds to the cost of milk production, which is something that we, in the city here, are asked to pay additional costs for in order to meet those transportation costs, and we all know that from the consumer end, at least, we are paying plenty for milk in Toronto today.

There have been some observations made in the last day or two, by hon. members of this House, in connection with the cost of agricultural products as paid to the farmer, and as paid for by the consumer, and as to whether that differential is too broad. I have not had the opportunity to investigate personally phases of costs of farm products from beginning to end, but I do know that, as was mentioned yesterday, in the case of the cost of a bag of potatoes costing a matter of cents less than a dollar at the farms, and the consumer in some of our organized centres paying not one but two and three times the cost of the article as paid for to the farmer, it seems to me that the spread is too great, and the farmer should either be getting more for his product or we, in the city, should be paying less; and I think that either one of those two things should be investigated, and an answer found to it.

Dealing now with the matter of one of the appointed boards of government, there is one observation I want to make, and then I am through. I want to say a word, if I may, concerning the Ontario Municipal Board. The Ontario Municipal Board is a board which has functioned in this province for a great number of years, and which has served a very useful purpose over those years, but at the same time there have been, during that time, a number of matters which have gradually found their way onto the platter of that board for decision and determination, until now we find ourselves in this position, that the Ontario Municipal Board has accumulated unto itself, through the provisions of various statutes, a tremendous amount of work, with the end result that in many cases the board is unable to deal with matters quickly and efficiently.

We find, for example, a situation where a hearing was held by the board in July, 1953, and a decision has yet to be given. A matter such as the great Metropolitan problem, with which the board was faced, undoubtedly required a great deal of study and a great deal of research and individual effort. That particular problem took more than one year to solve, and ultimately, as we know, it found its way into our Statute Books, in The Metropolitan Toronto Act of last year. But when citizens of this province are required to go to a board, whether it is the Municipal Board, or the Milk Control Board, or the Liquor Licence Board, or whatever board it may be, I do not think it is fair to the citizens of this province to ask them to wait a matter of months before a decision is given. If an individual goes into court and has a trial, in 9 cases out of 10 judgment is rendered immediately, or within a matter of days, and then he is on his way to the Court of Appeal, but as I say, in the case of a board where a person is obliged to take his matter to the board, to have to await the pleasure of the board for months, before a decision is rendered, I do not think is fair.

What is the answer to it?

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): That is the thing; give us the answer.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): If the hon. member (Mr. Brandon), gives the answer, we do not need a Minister of Municipal Affairs.

MR. BRANDON: The answer I am going to suggest is that the problem resolves itself, as I see it, into the fact that the Municipal Board presently is overworked. They have too much work on their platter. There are some things with which the board deals, such as the approval of debenture issues, with regard to which I see no reason why they could not be stamped "approved," and investigated by a member of the Department of Municipal Affairs, a person who has full knowledge of the affairs of the individual municipalities. Why should a municipality have to be required, in order to issue debentures, to send a programming of those debentures to the Municipal Board; wait a matter of a week or maybe two weeks before they get approval, and then, when they get it, they are on their way, simply because it takes a little time to put the rubber stamp of approval on those debentures?

In my opinion, the Municipal Board should deal only with matters which require a judicial function; in other words, separate the administrative function of the board from the judicial function of the board, and let it deal with the judicial function of statutory matters which have been placed before it, and matters which can be dealt with by individuals or by officials of a department, whether it is the Department of Municipal Affairs or any other department, let those matters be taken care of by officials in departments. That, to my way of thinking, would relieve, to a very great extent, in particular the burden which presently finds itself resting upon the platter of the Municipal Board. The board consists of men who are well experienced in matters of municipal affairs; engineers, lawyers, and persons who have been versed in matters of municipal affairs. It is not a case that they have not got the experience, but it poses a problem like this; this morning, the Private Bills Committee had an agenda of some four bills, and they dealt in part with one, and there are still more that are put over to another day; in other words, the agenda was too great for the committee to deal with today. Similarly, I think if something could be done to spread the work of the Municipal Board, to give them the function of a judicial character which is laid upon their shoulders, as I say, by statute, and let officialdom take care of those matters which do not require that particular type of care and treatment. This problem then would resolve itself.

With these remarks, I am through, Mr. Speaker, but ere I sit down, may I say that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), and his Cabinet, are to be congratulated on the budget which they have brought down this year, because there is not a single department of public service but into which more money is being poured for the benefit of the people of this province.

The Province of Ontario today is a better place to live in than it was in 1953, and with a budget coming down in 1954 and the prospect of good government that we have in the year 1954-55, there is no doubt that Ontario will be a better place to live in, in 1955, 1956 and for years to come, as the result of good government by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), and his colleagues.

MR. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine) moves the adjournment of the debate.
Motion agreed to.

The following bills were read the third time and were passed as intitled in the motions:

Bill No. 21, An Act respecting the Township of Scarborough.

Bill No. 26, An Act respecting the City of Toronto.

Bill No. 79, The Provincial Parks Act, 1954.

Bill No. 18, The Provincial Aid to Drainage Act.

Bill No. 82, An Act to amend the Trees Act.

Bill No. 88, The Wolf and Bear Bounty Act.

Bill No. 89, An Act to amend the Crown Timber Act, 1952.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS (Minister of Health) moves second reading of Bill No. 100, intituled, "An Act to amend the Public Health Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

REPRESENTATION OF THE PEOPLE

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister) moves second reading of Bill No. 78 intituled, "An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly."

He said: Mr. Speaker, I had overlooked the fact that this bill has to receive its second reading before it goes to the committee which has been constituted to deal with it.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words on this bill. I tried to comment on this procedure when the motion was before the House, but I was a little slow in getting to my feet.

I am opposed to the entire principle of the bill for the handling of the redistribution procedure. I am opposed to it because it displays a total lack of principle and consistency on the part of the Party which is in power, and because the bill, and the motion which accompanies it, makes possible the carrying through of an undemocratic, improper revision.

Let me explain what I have in mind by this statement. I would point out, Mr. Speaker, that one would expect the Progressive-Conservatives, whether with a big "P" or a small "p" to show some consistency in the matter of redistribution. But this bill reveals a complete lack of consistency. In the House of Commons the Conservative opposition—both big "P" and small "p"—voted against a measure to set up a House Committee to deal with redistribution, and suggested instead an impartial committee, or a Royal Commission which could be fully relied upon to approach the question objectively and disinterestedly.

That was the position which the national leadership of the Conservative Party took at Ottawa. They made a lot of capital out of it. Mr. Drew, Mr. Diefenbaker and all the other "bigwigs" of the Party spoke on it, and they rode onto the rostrums of the House of Commons like knights into battle, for a democratic redistribution policy as against the "grabbing" method in which the Liberal Party in power was going to engage. In fact there was a real outcry against the St. Laurent government which, however, overruled the official opposition and carried through the old and tried method of setting up a committee which included a majority of the Party in power, and handling redistribution in the manner that might best suit their purposes and interests.

As a result we had, of course, instances like the Diefenbaker case. The committee set up by the government at Ottawa gerrymandered the Diefenbaker riding and trimmed others.

I wish to assure you, Mr. Speaker, that I am not concerned about the danger to my own riding. If this government wants to gerrymander it, they will do so regardless of what I say. In fact I have already been given a detailed description of the plan for St. Andrew; it has been fully prepared and worked out. I understand that some of the "smart boys in the back room" have it all figured out. Some want to cut it into a triangle and others want to make a rectangle out of it. Then again, others want to snuff it out entirely and say "Finish." I do not know why they picked on St. Andrew, rather than on St. Patrick or some other ridings. I assure hon. members that this advice and intelligence was brought to me. I did not go seeking it. If this government and this Party still want to pull a "Diefenbaker arrangement" on me, good luck to them.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Did you get the information from Mrs. Smith in Hamilton—the fictitious Mrs. Smith who was mentioned in the House in connection with real estate?

MR. SALSBERG: I will give the hon. Minister of Planning the names of the real people who have been cheated in connection with the case of this lady as he says is fictitious, if he desires. But to go back to my subject. The information which has been given to me about the intentions of the "smart boys" in the Party is not the reason why I speak as I do on this bill. I speak on grounds of principle, and I say to this government that if the Party to which it belongs, voted with a pretense of concern for the democratic process in Ottawa, then at least they should have done something here and practiced what they preached. But they did not do that. And not only in Ontario but in the Province of Manitoba, the question of redistribution arose, and what happened? The Conservative minority objected to the method of appointing a committee, even a Select Committee. They asked for a Royal Commission so there might be a fair, impartial redistribution on the basis of population and not on the basis of Party interests.

But the Liberals in power there laughed at the Conservative minority and continued the old, partisan traditional method. They chose a Select Committee to do the work. Hon. members might imagine that after the stand the Conservatives took at Ottawa and in Winnipeg that here in Ontario, the only province in which they are in power, they would have set an example.

MR. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Why not get up to date?

MR. SALSBERG: New Brunswick, I understand. Nevertheless one would expect the Conservative Party, being in power in this province, would set an example and say: "We are not like the Liberals. We are going to have a democratic redistribution. We are going to have an impartial committee, almost as impartial, at least, as the committee set up to investigate the mining question."

HON. MR. PORTER: You did not like that committee. What sort of committee do you want?

MR. SALSBERG: I want an impartial committee, a non-partisan committee, a democratic committee that will approach this question objectively. The government would like to set up a committee which would ride roughshod, if they so desire, a committee which will be able to manipulate things, if they so desire, a committee which will gerrymander if this will fit into the plan of their Party interest. Does this not belie the position of the national Leader of the Conservative Party, and make a mockery of the attitude of the hon. Minister's colleagues in Manitoba? Hon. Ministers who stand up in this House are just like the rest of them. The only defence they have to offer is that this is the traditional way of doing things. Those in power gerrymander. Those who have a majority redistribute to suit themselves, and all the talk which hon. Ministers' Party colleagues put up elsewhere about the undemocratic character of this procedure is evidently just a lot of talk.

I, for one, will not go along with such a practice, and I am opposed to this bill.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I must say the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) never "goes along" with anything that is suggested over here, at any time. Yesterday he opposed the motion proposing that three very distinguished Canadians should serve on the committee in relation to mining. Today he admits that the committee should be an impartial committee.

MR. SALSBERG: I said "even as impartial a committee as—"

HON. MR. FROST: I see. As I said before, I think that redistribution which does not have regard to the community interests of people, or which upsets people, by destroying the old traditional areas and settings, in which people are used to voting, and working is undesirable. I must admit that I do not know of any group with a better understanding of this situation than the people's representatives. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) talks about "gerrymandering." That means altering things in order that some particular Party or interest may have an advantage. I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that I do not think there is any hon. member in this House who wants anything of the sort.

MR. SALSBERG: St. Laurent said that too.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, sometimes he is right.

May I point out to hon. members opposite that I am sure this committee, and those who sit on it, chosen from this House, proceed from the standpoint of trying to carry out the objectives which we all have in mind—not to break people away from their old traditional historic moorings, but, at the same time, to have regard to population increases in this province.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Is it the hon. Prime Minister's intention to add another member to the committee?

HON. MR. FROST: I had not thought to do that. I thought we should leave the committee as it is. I am quite satisfied.

MR. NIXON: There is a vacancy on the committee caused by the death of the late hon. member, Mr. MacOdrum.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. I am perfectly prepared to nominate another hon. member if the House desires, but I had in mind that the committee would remain as it is now, with the vacancy left by the passing of the late Mr. MacOdrum.

THE PROTECTION FOR PERSONS WORKING IN TRENCHES ACT

HON. MR. DALEY moves second reading of Bill No. 102, "An Act to provide for the Protection of Persons Working in Trenches."

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Minister care to have this bill go to the Standing Committee on Labour?

HON. MR. DALEY: I think I have already made myself clear on that question.

MR. SALSBERG: Has the hon. Minister not learned anything? Does he not change his mind? Does he not think it should go to the Committee on Labour?

MR. SPEAKER: Order, please. The motion has been carried.

THE ELEVATORS AND LIFTS ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DALEY moves second reading of Bill No. 103, "An Act to amend The Elevators and Lifts Act, 1953."

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member can repeat his question here.

MR. SALSBERG: I will. On this bill, I suggest that it is necessary to have some such legislation for the protection of people in this type of employment, but I suggest it is impossible to provide the necessary legislation unless the workers affected and directly involved have an opportunity to make presentations, and to appear before a committee of the House where such legislation is considered.

I suggest to you, Mr. Speaker, that what I say is properly within the discussion on the principle of the bill. In other words, it is my suggestion that no labour legislation affecting the working conditions, safety and health of working men and women can be properly considered unless they know all the proposals, and unless they have an opportunity of appearing.

Mr. Speaker, when we are dealing with dumb animals, live stock, poultry and farm items of all sorts, those who handle animals who cannot speak for themselves are invited to come and express their opinions on the legislation affecting those animals. That is what happens every time legislation is introduced dealing with agricultural problems, with live stock, and other elements of agricultural life; but, when it comes to the protection of the health, life and limbs of workers, we do not give them the opportunity of appearing before the committee of the House which is provided by the rules of the House, and where they could speak and make presentations on legislation affecting their lives, health and well-being.

I suggest we cannot feel we are doing justice to the groups of workers affected by each of these pieces of legislation, whether it deals with large or minor matters, unless and until we give the affected groups of workers notice of what we are introducing, and give them an opportunity to appear before us.

Here is a bill dealing with elevators and lifts. It is a very serious piece of legislation. I do not think we are adopting good legislation unless those interested are given the opportunity of appearing. That applies also to the previous bill. I am not going to get tired, and I am not going to cease. I am not threatening, but I am advising the government, Mr. Speaker, that I will on every possible occasion so long as I am in this House rise to my feet and fight for the establishment of a procedure which exists in this House, and in other Houses, about all other matters except labour. I say we will have to break down the inhibitions of the hon. Minister of Labour toward the committee.

HON. MR. DALEY: The hon. member is talking so much nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: Why is the hon. Minister afraid to call the committee together?

HON. MR. DALEY: The hon. member has a good enough sounding board right here. All he wants is to get a sounding board.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to say, Mr. Speaker, as it affects this bill, that the hon. Minister of Labour, unfortunately, has suffered a severe shock he experienced when he first became Minister, and the CCF was the Official Opposition. I remember those nights. There were some hon. members who really "went to town" on him and on his department. But he has learned many things since then, and he is now an experienced Minister.

HON. MR. FROST: Look where it landed the Opposition, carrying on that way.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not saying for one moment that what the members of the Opposition did to the hon. Minister was wrong, or that they should never have done it. Let that be clear. I do say, as a new man, he received a number of shocks and since then he shies away from the Labour Committee like—I am sorry I do not want to make the comparison, but I am thinking of "riding the buggies" in the early days of the railroad.

There is no need of shying away from it. He has held the portfolio for a good many years and I think he should be prepared to appear before the Standing Committee on Labour. He should give all the unions affected an opportunity of expressing their points of view as they relate to this and other pieces of legislation.

HON. MR. DALEY: This Elevators and Lifts Act was thoroughly discussed with all the people mentioned by the hon. member, over a long period of time last year. The elevator people came in, the manufacturers, the union workers for the elevator construction and erection, the insurance companies which insured these elevators, all these people were in conference with us a great many times in developing the Act. In the Act which we have here today, there are a few little things to which the legal fraternity seems to feel should be altered as there might be a wrong interpretation put upon some of the clauses.

That is all there is in this, Mr. Speaker, and all that the hon. member is requesting now was done completely and thoroughly, and the Act was developed with the approval of all these people I have mentioned, the unions, the elevator builders, the erectors and the insurance companies and everybody concerned.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to say again, I was—

MR. SPEAKER: Order. I have allowed the hon. member to be completely out of order, but I have known for some weeks he had this speech ready to be delivered. I think it has been well worth-while having a speech on the Labour Committee delivered, in order that we may go right ahead with any labour legislation.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CONSERVATION AUTHORITIES ACT

HON. MR. WARRENDER moves second reading of Bill No. 104, "An Act to amend The Conservation Authorities Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PLANNING ACT

HON. MR. WARRENDER moves second reading of Bill No. 105, "An Act to amend The Planning Act."

He said: At this time, may I say I will have an amendment to section 10 of this Act, which I shall present to the Committee of the Whole House and, at that time, will discuss the features of it.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PUBLIC HOSPITALS ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves second reading of Bill No. 106, "An Act to amend The Public Hospitals Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): If no one else wishes to speak, I would like to say a few words. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) to tell the House on what basis he arrives at the figure for payments to hospitals for indigent patients. This is a very grievous thing for municipalities. The hospitals complain continuously, despite the increased grants—that their losses are mainly due to the indigent patients for whom they are obliged to provide hospital accommodation. Invariably they come back to the municipalities and ask them for a lump sum at the end of the year to cover such deficit, and when questioned, they tell the municipality it is because of the indigent patients.

The government introduced a bill which obviously provides for some increase, but I believe the time has come, in view of the prosperity of the province for a number of years, and the fact that the government is being congratulated by all its supporters for having surpluses year after year, that the province should arrange with the hospitals to relieve the municipalities entirely by a contribution for the maintenance of indigent patients, and take that matter over entirely. At least, that would relieve the municipalities of one of the very heavy burdens which the home owners and the taxpayers have to bear. I think it would be a far better way of handling the matter than is done in this bill.

Let the hon. Minister of Health meet with the Hospital Association and find out exactly what the minimum costs of caring for indigent patients are, and let the Province of Ontario, as prosperous as it is, and with the surpluses it has, undertake to repay the hospitals for the full cost of caring for such people.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that it is only a matter of perhaps 6 years—not more than 7, in any event—since we introduced the provision for assistance by way of contributions toward public-ward beds in the hospitals. The problem at that time was one of indigency. We considered the matter very fully, and it has been explained in the House a number of times. We felt instead of placing the government's contribution directly on the sole matter of indigency, it would be far better to leave room for municipal participation, and indeed hospital participation. The hon. member will see why. I think if the government was to assume the total cost of indigency, a great deal of trouble would be caused by the difficulty in determining who was indigent, and perhaps the incentive might be to pass persons as indigents. As a matter of fact, that was considered at the time and we felt it was far better to permit hospital and municipal participation in regard to that problem. But in lieu of that, we gave a grant based upon the number of public-ward beds. That grant in most hospitals exceeds the costs in regard to indigents.

One of the difficulties, of course, is that in some hospitals, they segregate indigents, and disregard the public-ward grants across the board, and only apply the public-ward grants to indigent cases, and of course, that creates a deficit. But if the government's contribution were applied to indigents, in most cases, it would completely take care of the costs.

I discussed the matter with the Hospital Association, and I said, "Ladies and gentlemen, you do not expect us to pay twice. If you want this grant applied to indigents, we will do that. As a matter of fact, probably our contribution would not then amount to as much as it does now." Unanimously, the Hospital Association said, "That is good business; it is far better the way it is." So that is the way in which it has been left.

The Mayors and Reeves Associations, and many cities, particularly localities where hospitals are located, have asked for this particular increase. It does not approximate the total costs, but I think it does even the matter up a little. Instead of leaving the municipalities to pay the deficits, it spreads it across the board. That is the situation, and that is the answer to the question raised by the hon. member for St. Andrew.

I admit that in the whole question of hospitalization, there are many things to be learned. I have not found any province or any country which has the answer to this problem.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh yes; health insurance.

HON. MR. FROST: Where?

MR. SALSBERG: If you have health insurance, that would cover hospitalization.

HON. MR. PORTER: Where would the hon. member find it?

MR. SALSBERG: It has been promised. Doctor Vivian promised it, when he was Minister of Health. Housing was promised, and also health coverage.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

HON. MR. FROST: There has not been any sound hospitalization insurance plan in Canada, or in the world, so far as I know. It has been impossible, as determined by the experience of the States and other jurisdictions, to have it applied on an actuarial basis. It has been attempted, and has been completely unsatisfactory.

In the United Kingdom, they have tried it, and have run into enormous difficulties, but, as the hon. members will know, the United Kingdom plan is administered under a central government, while we are a provincial government, and our financial powers are very strictly limited. There, they have had to subsidize the fund very heavily out of the consolidated funds.

Mr. Speaker, in one of the provinces, just recently they abandoned the direct-contribution plan, after some years of trial, as I understand it. In place of that, they substituted a five-per cent. sales tax. I think one of the other provinces which had a plan of that sort, also has a sales tax. The incidence of that on the "little people" is extremely heavy.

I realize this is a very grave problem, and one in which we are looking for methods of improvement in connection with all the problems relating to illness. I think, Mr. Speaker, it would be on the side of reason and common sense to study the experiences of others, and go slowly and soundly in connection with something for which nobody seems as yet to have the answer. That, I think, is the position.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. SPEAKER: It being 6 of the clock, I do now leave the Chair.

—It being six of the clock, the House took recess.

The House resumed.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT moves that Mr. Speaker now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to; House in Committee of Supply.

ESTIMATES OF THE DEPARTMENT OF THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, I am taken aback at the applause at the untoward enthusiasm of the affairs of the most unpopular department.

SEVERAL HON. MEMBERS: Oh no.

MR. PORTER: This department is one whose main object over the years has been—in the minds of some people—to put people into the jails. What they do when they get into jail has been examined by the committee appointed to investigate reform institutions, which is something about which I am not prepared to speak, so there is really very little for me to comment upon which involves any new departures in the Department of the Attorney-General.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): $12 million worth.

HON. MR. PORTER: Is it that much?

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The hon. Minister should know.

HON. MR. PORTER: You astonish me. I had not added it up. Oh, that is the total. I thought the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) suggested it was a $12 million increase, and I wondered what Santa Claus had done.

Most of the items which appear in the Estimates of this department follow the same headings, and very much the same course, as they have in previous years. There is, however, one matter upon which I would like to comment before the items are discussed, and that has to do with the probation services of the Department of the Attorney-General. In view of the fact that so much interest has been aroused in the last few months, in matters relating to probation, not only in reform institutions but the probation services, which are designed primarily to keep people out of those institutions, may I say that probation services have been carried on for many years by the Department of the Attorney-General. In view of certain changes which have been made, and some expansive policies which have been adopted, I would like to make some comment upon that subject.

The item concerned with probation is 29(S).

The amount provided there for salaries is $177,000, which is an increase over last year of $42,000. That is to provide for additional staff, and to provide for the one-step increase, and to incorporate part of the cost-of-living bonus, but to a large extent it is for the salaries of additional probation officers, who have been taken on during the course of the last year, and provision for further probation officers in the year ahead.

In 1952, the post of Director of Probation Services was created. This was done after a thorough survey had been made of the existing situation, both in the Juvenile and Family Courts, and in the Criminal Courts. This survey was made just prior to 1952, and a plan to expand probation services, especially in the Criminal Courts, was initiated at that time. At the beginning of 1953 there were 17 probation officers serving in the Criminal Courts. These officers are appointed by the province, under The Ontario Probation Act, and are paid by the province. They are provincial employees. There have been probation officers for a number of years in the courts in the larger centres. At that time, that is, in 1953, these officers were stationed in Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and London, which were the only places where probation services were provided. By December, 1953, 24 additional officers had been appointed to the Criminal Courts, making a total of 41 officers covering Criminal Courts in 20 areas of the province, so that not only was the total number of probation officers increased, but they were spread out to various other sections of the province, which had never had any probation service of this kind before.

Since January of this year—that is, just in the last 2 or 3 months—9 more officers have been appointed to supplement the services in existing probation areas in the Criminal Courts, and to cover 5 new areas. That makes a present total of 50 officers in 25 areas of the province. The appointment of at least another 20 officers is contemplated during the year 1954, so the total will then be 70 officers, and this number should give probation coverage to the Criminal Courts in most areas of the province.

The work of a probation officer requires training and skill. It is not just a matter of picking up anybody who wishes to do that sort of work, and putting him in as a probation officer. The problem is to explore every application that may be received, and to seek some people who may have these qualifications.

There are two standards of qualifications for work of this kind. One, of course, is educational. Many probation officers have had university education, having taken special training in the university for this sort of work. On the other hand, a great many of them have not. In every case, an attempt is made to have, not a person who merely has some academic qualification, but someone who, in addition, has had a number of years of practical experience in some type of welfare work, or human-relations work, of a kind which would better equip him for the work of a probation officer. Although a university course is of great value, and should equip a man for this sort of work better than if he did not have it, nevertheless—as happens in many cases—a man who has not had a university course at all, very often, if he is a person who has the right approach, the right understanding of the problems, and experience along these lines, is equally good at that sort of work, as one who has had such university training. So there is no absolute standard which can be imposed.

The problem is to pick men who, as far as we can see, are best equipped for this sort of work. The Director of Probation Services, Mr. Coughlan, has devoted his attention to this problem, and from all reports I have received, he has been extremely successful in attracting a very high type of person to this work.

As I believe I explained, when introducing the Estimates of my department a year ago, the work of a probation officer is to examine into cases which come before the magistrates in the Criminal Courts, in order to ascertain something of the backgrounds of the accused persons who come before that court: the accused man's family relationship, his general history, the sort of work he does, and the sort of place he has made for himself in the community.

The probation officer is then in a position, if he is reasonably skilled at this sort of work, to make a recommendation to the court as to whether this is the type of offender who might be better off if he were not placed in an institution but allowed to remain on probation for a time, to return to his family and to his job without interruption, in the hope that he will not get into difficulties again.

I think it is quite apparent there are many cases where men or women get into difficulties for the first time, and find themselves in an institution, and rather than it having a salutary effect upon them, the stigma attached to incarceration in an institution, the economic difficulties they suffer due to the interruption of work, and the disruption of their family life, and everything that goes with it, tends to make that person a repeater, rather than a reformed individual. So the main purpose of the pre-trial probation—the matter with which the Attorney-General's Department is concerned—is to determine whether an accused is a proper person to be granted probation, and whether justice will be served by placing him—or her—on probation.

We are concerned with either putting people into jail, if we can prove a case, or dealing with them in the best interests of justice and society. There are many cases where proper probation can be granted in the interest of society, and for the benefit of the Provincial Treasury, in that the province does not have to keep them in an institution, the family does not find itself a charge upon the community, and the offender himself is more liable to learn his lesson and "go straight" in the future.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Attorney-General permit a question?

HON. MR. PORTER: I always permit a question. If I did not, I would never hear the end of it. Go ahead.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General will hear the end of this one tonight. I would like to know whether the hon. Attorney-General does not think perhaps this type of probation work would more appropriately belong to the Department of Reform Institutions rather than his department, since his main task, as he outlined a moment ago, is to convict people if he can prove a case against them.

HON. MR. PORTER: I did not say that was my main task at all. I said my main task was to deal with people who had committed offences, and either see that justice is done by putting them in an institution or by keeping them out of an institution, whichever is in the best interests of themselves and society.

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Attorney-General thinks he can handle it both ways—

HON. MR. PORTER: The Attorney-General's Department has never taken the position that it is our business to get convictions at all costs.

MR. SALSBERG: He left that impression a few minutes ago.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is the impression the hon. member would take out of it.

MR. SALSBERG: Does the hon. Attorney-General think probation work should be under his department, or under the Department of Reform Institutions?

HON. MR. PORTER: I really do not know. I have no choice in the matter. The fact is, it has always been in the Attorney-General's Department and when I came into this department, I thought it was a good thing. I had a survey made as to the results of probation as we have it, as a matter of fact, into the entire workings of the Juvenile and Family Courts as well, to find out what improvements might be made in the system in the administration of justice.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Attorney-General not allow it to go to the Department of Reform Institutions?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know. Some time that might be decided, but it has not as yet. At the present time, it is in my department, and as long as it is, I am going to do a good job. I do not care what department it is under, as long as it is well done. All I know is, that is the way it is right now.

MR. SALSBERG: I will have to ask the Department of Reform Institutions what they think of it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Anybody can have it if they want it. If they can do a good job, that is all right.

HON. J. W. FOOTE (Minister of Reform Institutions): No, thank you.

HON. MR. PORTER: I was handing it to the hon. Minister on a platter. May I proceed?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes.

HON. MR. PORTER: Thank you. In 10 of the 25 areas which I mentioned as now covered by probation, the existing Juvenile and Family Court probation officers are paid by the municipality. That is the difference. The Family Court and the Juvenile Court probation officers are paid by the municipality, whereas, under the Statutes, our probation officers are paid by the province.

There are some places, however—10 of them at the present time—where the work of the probation officer in the Magistrates Courts, the adult Criminal Courts and the Juvenile and Family Courts, is not sufficient to warrant two probation officers, so the one probation officer is appointed to take charge of both. In those cases the province pays the salary. Therefore, some of them have been reappointed under the Probation Act, thus making them available to serve all courts in the area. He is paid by the province, in keeping with the over-all long-term plan, which will eventually be a unified plan over all the courts in the province.

That is something toward which we intend to work, so the whole service will be one service, Juvenile Courts, Family Courts, etc.

I do not think there is much more I can add to these general comments about probation. I cannot say it is a new departure, but we have attempted in the last 2 or 3 years to extend and improve it and set it up on a basis where the entire province will be served, rather than just a few areas. I think I can take some satisfaction in the way the Director of Probation has performed his functions in the last few years.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Before the hon. Attorney-General leaves the question of probation, it is apparent, I am sure, to all the hon. members of the House, that the interest of the hon. Attorney-General's Department in the appointment of a probation officer, and in probation, generally, has increased very much in the last 15 or 16 months. The hon. Attorney-General has stated in 1953 there were 17 probation officers, and now there are 50. That is an indication, I would say, that the hon. Attorney-General and his department are "sold" on the merits of the probation system.

I was wondering if the hon. Attorney-General would indicate to the House with the experience already gained, just what has been the saving both in the reclamation of offenders to the "straight and narrow path" again, and in dollars and cents, because I am sure that there are savings in both directions.

The other question I wanted to ask the hon. Minister was: How many are now on probation? It would be interesting, I am sure, to compare the increased numbers of probation officers with the increased numbers on probation.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know. I do not think I have those figures available here, but I will be very glad to get them. I believe I gave some information along that line before the Committee on Reform Institutions. On that occasion, I took as an example, the activities of the probation officer, I think it was in St. Catharines, or some place about that size, over a short period. He was only there 2 or 3 months, but his work had resulted in a very great difference in the number of people placed in institutions, as the result of trials, and those who were not. The number who were committed to institutions was cut down very materially.

But, in a general way, I would hesitate to come to any conclusion yet as to the real effect of this expansion of the probation service. I do not think it has been in existence long enough. One or two years is barely enough to prove much. However, I should be glad to get the figures as to the actual number of people on probation. I suppose we have those figures, and perhaps we can also get some figures showing the savings.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): It might be of interest also if we had the number who failed under probation, and where it had become necessary to incarcerate them as repeaters.

HON. MR. PORTER: Two years would hardly give sufficient time, but I suppose if we had the figures in prior years without probation, it would indicate something.

MR. OLIVER: I think the hon. Attorney-General will agree that Hamilton is a very good example. That would indicate how many failed on probation.

HON. C. DALEY (Minister of Labour): I was going to suggest St. Catharines would not be a very good place to take as an example, as there is such a small amount of law breaking there.

HON. MR. PORTER: I was astonished at the small number. It was just a handful. I do not know why they wanted a probation officer at all. The only reason they wanted one, I suppose, was because they knew we would pay his salary.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 23, item 4, "Crown Counsel Prosecutions": I presume that covers cases where a special counsel is sent to prosecute at the Assizes and so forth.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. That is to cover the Crown Attorney's fees and expenses when prosecuting in the Assizes.

MR. GRUMMETT: Not the Crown Attorney's, the special counsel's.

HON. MR. PORTER: The Crown Attorney's. We have not used any special prosecutors. They all get special fees for prosecuting in the Assizes.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On item No. 3, special item 11, "Grants to County Law Libraries." Would the hon. Attorney-General tell us on what basis the grants are made?

HON. MR. PORTER: $150 per library, and there are 42 libraries which are all certified by the Law Society of Upper Canada. I might say that was increased a year ago, and has been trebled within the last 5 years.

MR. GRUMMETT: On Vote 23, item 13, I was just wondering what that covered. I believe the one matter is the case of a magistrate or Juvenile Court judge who was shot and killed, but I do not know the other case.

HON. MR. PORTER: There have been certain officials in the Registry Offices—registrars—who were appointed years ago, and were not under the civil-service regulations as they are now. They could really stay on until they died if they wished, and could not be forced to retire at 65.

MR. GRUMMETT: I do not think that is the right Vote.

HON. MR. PORTER: First of all, it deals with Judge McKittrick. The hon. member is familiar with that.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes.

HON. MR. PORTER: And Constable Nathan, who was shot and killed on duty in Port Arthur. There was a pension allowance paid to his widow.

MR. NIXON: But he would be entitled to superannuation, would he not?

HON. MR. PORTER: Apparently he was not. He was appointed at an earlier time, or for some other reason, was not entitled to superannuation.

This allowance is only because these people were not entitled to superannuation. There are a few persons in this category, such as registrars in the Registry Office—two cases that I know of. Their health was not good enough to enable them to carry on, but they were, strictly speaking, entitled to hold the position. An arrangement, therefore, was made under which a rather limited allowance was granted and it was found acceptable. They were retired and replaced. We have been able to do that in some cases. As time goes by, I suppose such cases will cease to exist.

MR. OLIVER: On item 8, how do we stand in respect of the cost-of-living bonus now? I understand that a proportion of it has been written into salaries. Can the hon. Minister tell the committee what the proportion is? And what is the reason why it was not all incorporated into salaries?

HON. MR. PORTER: The decision as to what should be done with the cost-of-living bonus is something which does not come within the scope of this department. We simply follow the policy. The cost-of-living bonus was $420 a year and it was decided, within the last year, to incorporate $300 of that into salary. I think that was done throughout the whole service. There still remains $120 as cost-of-living bonus.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, with reference to item 13, the last item. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) has just explained the two items listed in the Estimates, and I am sure the entire House agrees with the procedure which was followed. I wish to proceed further to an extension of the principle employed in those two cases, and I refer to citizens who are wrongfully imprisoned and deprived of their freedom—citizens who are incarcerated and who later are released without the benefit of compensation. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that such citizens are entitled to compensation, and the principle applied in the two cases before us on this occasion should be extended and applied also to the type of case I refer to.

This is not a whim of my own, but it is something that every citizen—I wish to refresh the minds of hon. members of this House about the position taken by Saturday Night a year ago in the case of Mr. Ronald Power. Saturday Night, in a front page editorial, took very serious issue with the Attorney-General.

HON. MR. PORTER: All I can say is I disagree with Saturday Night in the position it took.

MR. SALSBERG: That may be the opinion of the hon. Attorney-General. I very often disagree with Saturday Night—

HON. MR. PORTER: So long as Saturday Night disagrees with the Attorney-General, you agree with Saturday Night.

MR. SALSBERG: I have no desire to make the task of the Attorney-General, an important member of the government, more difficult than it is, but as hon. members know, I am in a position where I fill all Cabinet posts.

HON. MR. PORTER: A "Shadow Cabinet."

MR. SALSBERG: At this moment I take the place of a member of the "Shadow Cabinet" who takes his place opposite the hon. Attorney-General. I have no special reason to engage in controversy with the hon. Attorney-General.

Saturday Night in my opinion was quite right. It went out of its way to disassociate itself from the position taken by the hon. Attorney-General and the government. In fact the paper went so far as to apologize to Mr. Power for the failure of the government to acknowledge its responsibility to him, after he had served 7 months' imprisonment for a crime he did not commit. After his release, the hon. Attorney-General, according to Saturday Night let him go with a bland "So sorry."

This matter came up again a few days ago when the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) raised a case—

HON. MR. PORTER: This is out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not out of order in any way.

HON. MR. PORTER: It has nothing to do with this item.

MR. SALSBERG: It has everything to do with the hon. Attorney-General's Estimates contained in Vote 23.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not going to argue with you.

MR. SALSBERG: If you decide that you have nothing to say on this matter, that is your right, but I am trying to elicit information. The hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay) raised the question a week or so ago of a young man who was incarcerated, though he was innocent. The question arose as to why he should not be compensated. The hon. Attorney-General said there was no provision for compensation, and no one had ever heard of compensation being given in such a case.

A visitor in the gallery, totally unknown to me, sent me a note—

AN HON. MEMBER: Not Mrs. Smith?

MR. SALSBERG: Do not worry. The hon. Attorney-General will be embarrassed by that "Mrs. Smith" case. Judging by the handwriting this note was sent by a male. It said:

I see by the newspapers that the Attorney-General stated in the House that the principle of compensating persons who have been wrongfully imprisoned is unknown in any British country. In this he is mistaken. In England, about 20 or 25 years ago a certain party by the name of Oscar Slater was liberated after several years in jail because the authorities found he had been wrongly imprisoned.

THE CHAIRMAN: I had better ask the hon. member to stick to the Estimate.

MR. SALSBERG: I am, or I would not be speaking.

As compensation, the British Government awarded him the sum of 10,000 pounds Sterling. This case is very well-known.

I suggest, Mr. Chairman, that on this occasion the government should consider this problem, and agree to find the necessary funds to compensate people such as Mr. Ronald Power, whose case was mentioned in Saturday Night—and the case of the young man mentioned by the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay).

I do not agree at all with the attitude of the hon. Attorney-General nor of the government—for this is a Cabinet responsibility—when he says "we will offer no compensation, we will have no more to do with a person after we release him."

When a person has been deprived of his freedom for a long period of time, I believe compensation should be given, and I raise the matter because I think, just as the hon. Attorney-General and the government agree to offer compensation in cases of the sort dealt with in this item, they could find the funds to carry out the suggestion I have advanced. And I think they should, as a matter of principle, deal fairly with persons who have been unfairly dealt with previously, and who have been deprived of their freedom.

HON. MR. PORTER: What the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has said has nothing to do with the subject. Nevertheless, he talked. We are quite accustomed to that. This is the third time since the hon. member has been in the House this matter has been raised. He has heard my explanations on previous occasions, but nevertheless, since he either has no recollection of what I said, cannot remember, or cannot understand, if he wishes me to answer the question a third time I am willing to do so.

MR. SALSBERG: If you can make it any clearer, please go ahead. On the last two occasions you did very poorly.

HON. MR. PORTER: What the hon. member suggests—although in a very vague way—is that any accused person who is acquitted in the court after he has had to await his trial in custody, or if he was convicted and had to await the hearing of his appeal in custody, should be compensated. That is the substance, I think, about which the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is talking.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh no. You are putting not only words but thoughts into my mind which were never there. The hon. Attorney-General would be a very poor counsel. I did not suggest any recompense for a person in those circumstances. All I am suggesting is if a person is wrongfully convicted and later proven to have been so, the government should take some responsibility.

HON. MR. PORTER: Thus, if a man were convicted at a trial and appealed, and his conviction was quashed on appeal, would the hon. member say he had been wrongfully convicted?

MR. SALSBERG: To make the case very simple I will limit it to the case of Mr. Ronald Power who served 7 months and then was released.

HON. MR. PORTER: He was released after a new trial by the Court of Appeal. He was given a new trial and was acquitted. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) suggested he should be compensated. He was entitled to bail, but, in fact, he either could not or would not raise it. He was not held in jail wrongfully for one day. He could have had bail at any time.

MR. SALSBERG: Could he? The poor often cannot get bail.

HON. MR. PORTER: Are you suggesting we should do away with the whole system of bail, because a man is poor?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) is complicating a very simple matter. He is a master of complication.

HON. MR. PORTER: Let me tell the hon. member this: This man, Ronald Power was associated with some people who held up with guns reputable and innocent citizens on the streets.

Those were his associates. One night, a couple of these people held up a man in a motor car, and the driver saw their faces, and he thought he remembered the faces of these two men. Sometime later, Ronald Power and the other man were brought into the police station, and the man who was driving the car and who laid the complaint, recognized one of those who he thought was Ronald Power, and Ronald Power was convicted on that evidence, which the jury believed.

Certain things developed, and Ronald Power appealed, and eventually was given a new trial because there was some new evidence, I think, which came out, which indicated he was not actually present at the time, but the whole course of his difficulty arose because he gave a wrong statement of the facts to the police which involved him with these criminals, who eventually were convicted—and quite rightly so—and went to jail.

The man who claimed to recognize Ronald Power as one of the persons who was involved in the holdup, swore again in the new trial that he thought it was Ronald Power, but the jury gave Power the benefit of the doubt. He was not found guilty on his second trial, but was acquitted.

If every case where a man is accused goes to trial and is acquitted, were to be compensated, we would probably be compensating a great many people who were actually guilty, but against whom the offence could not be proven. If a person is involved with the police, and gets before the courts, and becomes involved with some gang, which commits a crime which would be very dangerous to the innocent people on the streets—and, after all, you must think of the innocent people once in a while—but if they get into difficulty, and are too poor to raise the bail, or have no friends who can raise the moderate bail which is usually asked for, they must remain in custody. Perhaps they choose to stay in custody. From reports I have heard of the reform institutions, I think many men would be delighted to stay in one of those institutions, under the capable guidance of the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote, V.C.).

MR. SALSBERG: That man certainly put up a battle to get out of there. It is all very unfair.

On Vote 24.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Attorney-General tell us how many employees' salaries are covered by this item, and if they are determined on a commencing minimum basis, and being increased annually until the maximum is reached?

HON. MR. PORTER: There are 8 on the staff, Mr. Chairman. There are 2 legislative counsel, Mr. MacTavish, and Mr. Treadgold. Then there is the secretarial staff, and one other solicitor, Mr. Alcombrack.

MR. CHARTRAND: How is the minimum salary determined?

HON. MR. PORTER: Do you want their salaries?

MR. CHARTRAND: No, but I would like to find out if they start at a minimum when they enter the service, and go up to the maximum?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

MR. CHARTRAND: What is it?

HON. MR. PORTER: There are categories for those. I can get the exact figures. In most categories in the Civil Service, there is now fixed a certain minimum and certain maximum, and they can work up from the minimum to the maximum. I am informed that regarding the legislative counsel, the maximum has not yet been fixed.

MR. CHARTRAND: What is the minimum?

HON. MR. PORTER: There are some parts of the service which have not completed that as yet.

MR. CHARTRAND: No minimum and no maximum?

HON. MR. PORTER: The minimum is $5,000, plus the cost-of-living bonus of $120.

Vote No. 24 agreed to.

On Vote No. 25.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): In connection with Vote 25, Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister how many full-time employees in the Registrar of Regulations Branch?

HON. MR. PORTER: A staff of 5, Mr. Chairman. Mr. D. W. Rose, is the Registrar. Mr. Wherry was the first Registrar, but he retired this year, having reached the age of retirement, and Mr. Rose, who was his assistant, is now the Registrar.

MR. NIXON: How can you keep 5 people busy registering regulations?

HON. MR. PORTER: I find they are always flooded with work.

MR. NIXON: I do not see how they could be. If the Lieutenant-Governor was sitting day and night, how could they get enough registrations to keep 5 people busy?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, I assure the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) that they are busy. I do not know where they come from. We are turning out these regulations, all the time. We are the only department which does, I think.

MR. SALSBERG: Do they come under the Factory Act?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mass production.

Votes 25 to 28 inclusive agreed to.

On Vote No. 29.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I know that 29 is a statutory provision, the Administration of Justice Expenses Act, special expenses. It is not a very large item, but I would like to know what it covers, and to what it refers.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is an item which has been unchanged over the years. They are special expenses. I will ascertain exactly what was spent last year to show the nature of the expenditures under this Estimate.

I am informed that last year about $250 only was spent under that item. That is a statutory item.

Section 11 of the Administration of Justice Expenses Act is the authority for it. It says:

Where services are rendered by any person in connection with any prosecution, and such services are rendered by the direction of or with the approval of the Attorney-General, the person who has so rendered the service is entitled to such sum as the Attorney-General may direct, the sum to be charged upon and paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

Last year, there were a few dollars paid under that item. That is, other than Assize work.

MR. GRUMMETT: Other than cases in the Supreme Court?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): On item 10, Mr. Chairman; I notice the maintenance for this year is $15,000. Last year, it was $35,000. Would the hon. Attorney-General care to comment on that?

HON. MR. PORTER: A year ago, there was some expensive equipment purchased, which accounted for the size of the amount allowed. This is decreased by $20,000 this year, because we do not need that equipment again. It was a spectograph. I have seen spectographs some years ago. They have something to do with picking out and analyzing colours. It is very important in the detection of crime. As a matter of fact, I saw some of these spectographs in the office of the FBI in Washington. Perhaps the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) will accompany me on my next visit.

MR. SALSBERG: I have no reason to accompany the hon. Attorney-General anywhere.

HON. MR. PORTER: They use it in cases involving automobile accidents, or hit-and-run drivers. That is where they find great use for these spectographs.

They have information there about the paint which is used on every model of car turned out in the United States; every group of cars which is turned out on the assembly line, goes through the paint room, and perhaps a number of them are painted with the same mixture of paint. When the next line of cars goes through, they have prepared a new mixture of paint. To the human eye, it might appear to be all of the same colour, but there are very fine differences in each mixture of paint, and by the use of the spectograph, they can identify a car by the paint which has been used on it. Sometimes they get a piece of chipped paint from a motor car, which might be clinging to the body of a person who was hit, or to his clothing, or they might find it lying on the roadside, and from it they can tell exactly what group of cars, the make, the model where it came from, within perhaps a few hundred cars. They get it down to that narrow point, and they try to find out where these cars are in the United States.

MR. SALSBERG: Did you have to go to the FBI to learn that?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. Their spectographs are much more expensive than ours. I do not say we can do that much with our modest spectograph.

On item No. 6.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In regard to the general administration of justice, including "fuel, water, light, rent, maintenance" and— and here is what I am interested in, Mr. Chairman — "clothing of prisoners." Why is that referred to only in the question of expenses for districts? Why not in other institutions?

HON. MR. PORTER: In the districts, we pay everything.

MR. GRUMMETT: Even to the clothing?

HON. MR. PORTER: Sure, sure. You do not realize how well off you are in the north country. It almost pays to be a prisoner.

On item No. 12.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On item 12, of Vote 29, Mr. Chairman, "Salaries of Magistrates."

We have what we consider quite a problem in Ottawa. As the hon. Attorney-General well knows, there is a senior and a junior magistrate for the City of Ottawa, and also a magistrate for the County of Carleton. Since annexation has taken place, and the suburban parts of both the Townships of Gloucester and Nepean have been incorporated into the city, there is very little with which the magistrate for Carleton County has to concern himself, and very often the magistrate for the County of Carleton has been called upon to sit in the City of Ottawa—which we approve.

The point is this, that with 3 magistrates, there is only one Magistrates' Court sitting every day.

Of course, for the last few years it would have been difficult to have two magistrates sitting due to the fact the courtroom was being renovated. Now that this has been accomplished, I think there would be no difficulty in having two Magistrates' Courts sitting every day, but the difficulty, I am told, is that they cannot obtain an official reporter. They are using a reporter from the House of Commons, but they are available only in the mornings.

The situation which stems from that is that the court house is crowded with witnesses, and members of the bar must spend hours waiting for their cases to be called. We think there is accommodation for holding one Magistrates' Court at the Police Court, and another Magistrates' Court in the County Court every morning.

HON. MR. PORTER: Does the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) think the Mayoress would allow us to use the County Court building?

MR. CHARTRAND: I think so. I believe this matter was brought up before, but I think it was delayed, due to the fact that there was no space available until the County Court could be fully renovated. Now this has been accomplished.

HON. MR. PORTER: I understand that one of the magistrates has been using the court house.

MR. CHARTRAND: The County Court Magistrate has been using that—for the county, not for the city.

HON. MR. PORTER: We will look into that.

MR. CHARTRAND: I am told the only thing that is preventing it now—the magistrates would be quite willing to sit—is they cannot get an official reporter. Could that not be arranged?

HON. MR. PORTER: I believe the difficulty may be to obtain one.

MR. CHARTRAND: That may be, but cannot the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) work that out?

HON. MR. PORTER: We will look into the matter. As a matter of fact, official reporters are very difficult to obtain today. They are becoming very scarce. There is so much talk going on in the world today, that reporters are at a premium.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): It is because you do not pay them enough.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In connection with the same Vote, No. 29, "Probation Officers": I was wondering why all the salaries, travelling expenses and maintenance, were shown here, in the sum of $205,000, as a statutory expenditure. How does the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) decide what sums are put under a statutory expenditure and which are carried in ordinary? Looking at some of the other items, such as "Magistrates' Salaries," "Judges' Salaries," "Public Trustees' Salaries," and so on, I see those are in ordinary expenditures. How does the hon. Minister decide just what items go into the statutory column of the Estimates?

HON. MR. PORTER: There is a provision in the Statute that it be paid out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. That is a definite provision in the Statute. Then, of course, we have to estimate how much will be necessary, and it is an estimate, just as it is if it appears in the other side of the column. However, that is an accountancy matter, and I am not at home in accountancy of any kind, or with anything having to do with figures. I am like the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) in that respect.

MR. GRUMMETT: I was wondering just how you determine what items should be covered by the Statute and what should not.

HON. MR. PORTER: Where it is specifically authorized by Statute.

MR. GRUMMETT: I know that. But how do you, when you are setting up the expenditure in the first instance, decide; "This item will be covered by Statute, or it will not."

HON. MR. PORTER: Compare this, for instance, with item No. 12, "Salaries of Magistrates."

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, that is what I was doing.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is not statutory in the same sense.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is right.

HON. MR. PORTER: So that it goes in the column, "To be Voted."

MR. GRUMMETT: But the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) does not get my point. Why could you not have said, when you set up the Magistrates' Salaries, that they would be covered by Statute, and have them go in the statutory column as well?

HON. MR. PORTER: It just happens that the Statute does not cover it in the same way. I must confess to the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) that I do not see very much rhyme or reason to this, but this is the way the accounts are set up, and I do not know that it makes any difference in the long run, because the net result is the same. I think what the hon. member might have in mind is this—and perhaps he will correct me if I have it incorrectly—that a statutory amount should be some amount which is authorized.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, some definite amount.

HON. MR. PORTER: So that we have to provide $177,000 for that, and we have no choice. That is perhaps what the hon. member has in mind?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, and you may not use all of it, or you may.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, you must have that provided for.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes.

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, apparently it is a little more flexible than that. It also includes any expenditure which, under the Statute, must be met out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. In so many words, apparently that is what it means.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes. Well my difficulty—

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know why it should be, and I am not prepared to justify it.

MR. GRUMMETT: Neither am I, and I thought maybe I might be able to find out. I was just wondering how the decision was arrived at, placing it in the "Statutory" column.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is because it was in the wording of the Statute.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is right.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, in that particular item there is an increase of $58,000 this year. Would the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) care to comment on that?

HON. MR. PORTER: I explained that in my opening remarks. I commented about the increase of probation officers, and this increase is to take care of the 20 additional officers whom we hope to appoint during the next year, as well as the number who were appointed last year. That is the explanation.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, the Vote we are on now, No. 29, items 7 and 8 deal with costs of Juvenile and Family Courts in the provisional judicial districts. I want at this stage to bring to the attention of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) a very serious problem which, in my opinion, contributes greatly to the difficulties of family life, the difficulties parents encounter with their youngsters, which causes a great deal of delinquency, and, therefore, problems for our Juvenile and Family Courts. I have reference to the crime comics and the horror comics which are being distributed throughout the length and breadth of the province, as they are in other provinces.

I am aware of the fact that there is a very small minority of people who seem to think these types of comics are not harmful, but that opinion is not shared by the overwhelming majority of educators, religious leaders, and parents who are active in Home and School Clubs. They are certainly considered a very harmful and very dangerous problem in Great Britain and elsewhere. The opposition to the wholesale distribution of crime and horror comics ranges from the Pope down to the neighbourhood Home and School Club, and indeed to our own Committee on Reform Institutions.

HON. MR. PORTER: Once again, I wish to point out to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that this has nothing whatsoever to do with this Estimate. He is talking about something dealt with by the Criminal Code. If the hon. member were to be elected in some constituency, which would send him to Ottawa, he would be then quite in order to make a speech on the Estimates there.

MR. SALSBERG: I disagree, Mr. Chairman, and I challenge the opinion of the hon. Attorney-General, and I will soon tell him why, in spite of the interruption.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am just registering my objection.

MR. SALSBERG: Because the enforcement of criminal law is the responsibility of the Attorney-General of this province. That is true?

HON. MR. PORTER: Let us get down to the enforcement, then.

MR. SALSBERG: What is the difference if I raise it in this item or an item down below?

HON. MR. PORTER: Go ahead.

MR. SALSBERG: But a moment ago, the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), in order to prevent the discussion of this, said blandly, that this does not belong to this Legislature.

HON. MR. PORTER: Get down to the enforcement, then.

MR. SALSBERG: And now he wants to get down to it.

HON. MR. PORTER: What is the problem? What is the question?

MR. SALSBERG: You just sit and listen, because in my humble opinion you are failing in your duty. That is that. Is that straight? And I will tell you why.

HON. MR. PORTER: Very concise. Why not stop there, why spoil it? Stop at a good point.

MR. SALSBERG: Don't try to get away from the issue by pretending the problem does not belong here, but to another jurisdiction, maybe the House of Commons. It belongs here, first, and if it belongs here, then this is the time and place to discuss it, because when this matter is taken up at Ottawa by parents' associations, teachers and ministers and so on, they are always told that the enforcement of the law rests with the provinces.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick) : Why do you not initiate a prosecution?

MR. SALSBERG: And that the amendment they put in the Act—which I on a previous occasion have read in this House, I think it is an amendment to section 207 of The Criminal Code—should be enforced by the Attorney-General. However, I must say the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) has a very cynical attitude to this whole problem. When I spoke in this House about the dangers and harmful effect of comics a couple of years ago, I presented to the hon. Attorney-General a number of comic books which were purchased in his riding, and at that time he said—

MR. J. W. HANNA (Huron-Bruce) : We do not want the story of your life.

MR. SALSBERG: He said he would read those comic books, and look into them, and see what could be done. Mr. Chairman, do you know what happened? A week later I had occasion to be in the Attorney-General's office, and in the outer office where the clerks and telephone operators are, I found a young lad sitting at one of the desks, and, lo and behold, he was reading the comics I sent to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) as material evidence of the crime that is being committed against the youth of this province.

THE CHAIRMAN: Will the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) confine himself to the Estimates?

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I am very sorry, but I am speaking to the Estimates, the enforcement of law as it affects the Criminal Code, and the section that deals with crime and horror comics. Now, you see, the Attorney-General was just cynical about it; he took those horrible books, and allowed juveniles in his department to read them. I suggest that is nothing to laugh at. Our own committee—and this is what I was about to say when the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) interrupted me before—our Committee on Reform Institutions in its report gave some prominence to the problem of comics, and its report to the Legislature urged that "comic books should be closely scrutinized by the proper authorities with a view to an increased number of prosecutions for flagrant violation of the present laws governing their sale and publication," and I want to bow to the chairman, and all members of that committee, for having made that recommendation. I think it is good. I think it is correct.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick) : Do not spoil it.

MR. SALSBERG: But the only one who can enforce it is the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) if he would have the will to do so, but if he takes these horrible things—and I am going to send across some of them—

HON. MR. PORTER: Send them over.

MR. SALSBERG: Only with the understanding that he will not distribute them to the minors in his own office.

HON. MR. PORTER: We have no minors.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, they are minors.

HON. MR. PORTER: They all look young, but they are not all as young as they look.

MR. SALSBERG: Such books are really horrifying. Look at this, Terror Tales in the Night, and Astonishing Comics.

HON. MR. PORTER: Send it over.

MR. SALSBERG: With the most horrifying scenes depicted on the front page.

MR. ROBERTS: Have you one for me?

MR. SALSBERG: Another one here. This is called, Young Men, and the story at the top is—"A Human Torch," with a human torch murdering or massacring other people. To the hon. Attorney-General.

Now then, here is another one which the hon. Attorney-General allows to be sold and refuses to take any action against, though the Criminal Code has made ample provision. It is called Black Cat and there is a semi-nude figure of a man with rats creeping upon and gnawing away at his body. This is displayed in stores across the province and young lads and young girls look at these things, buy them and then have nightmares.

HON. MR. PORTER: I want to take exception, Mr. Chairman.

MR. SALSBERG: Here is another one, Chamber of Chills. This is displayed in the riding of the hon. Attorney-General.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, will the hon. member put that in an envelope when he sends it across the floor, please?

MR. SALSBERG: That illustrates the attitude of the hon. Attorney-General. He takes it very lightly and would like it sent to him in an envelope. I suppose a perfumed envelope, otherwise the hon. Attorney-General will not like it, but he is allowing our children to read it.

HON. MR. PORTER: I did not want the hon. members of the House to see it.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General should worry about the young children of the province who are exposed to this, and not worry about the hon. members, who have been around so long they have developed immunity to a great many things.

Here is another one, The Chamber of Chills, with some grotesque figure choking a woman.

A clamour rises from the back benches. For them, I have copies of, Love Experience, Love Diary, Love Journals, Love Problems. That is what the hon. Attorney-General permits our public and high school children to buy. Here are all of them. I will send them to the hon. Attorney-General.

The back benchers will get them through the back door of the Attorney-General's office. I want to say this is a very serious matter. Not only have demands been made repeatedly to the hon. Attorney-General, but there is quite an outcry.

The journal published by the Ontario Public Schools Trustees Association went to the length of reprinting a very famous article on the harmful effects of comics, which appeared in a national American magazine. They reprinted it in their own journal for the public school trustees throughout the province. I think this article would make excellent reading for the hon. Attorney-General.

HON. MR. FROST: Might I check the hon. member. These are not crime comics necessarily, they are just lurid stories and pictures, not crime comics.

MR. SALSBERG: I disagree.

HON. MR. FROST: They should be sent back. The hon. member gets up and makes a great many statements to the House, and submits the House to a "Chamber of Chills." As a matter of fact, these are not crime comics at all. All the hon. member is doing is taking some magazines with lurid covers and lurid names and submitting them as "crime comics."

MR. SALSBERG: I protest. It is all right for the hon. Attorney-General to try to confuse issues, but when the hon. Prime Minister gets into a matter of this importance, and tries to act in the same manner as the hon. Attorney-General—I resent it, and am extremely sorry he does so, because it is not becoming a Prime Minister of this province to refer to them as being, "only lurid covers."

HON. MR. FROST: Just because the hon. member produces something with a bright red cover, or something of that sort, and says, "This is a crime comic," does not make it a crime comic at all.

I would point this out to the hon. member, I think we should get down to business. Just send over those things and we will submit them to the law officers of the Crown and the police to see whether they are crime comics or not. I am very doubtful whether they are anything of the sort.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister has made the statement he is doubtful whether those are crime or horror comics. I will take this bundle to those who are concerned. I did not choose those either, I asked someone to pick them and bring them to me, and they were picked at random by young parents who are very much concerned with the problem, and presented to me. The hon. Prime Minister has said these are not crime or horror comics. I shall submit them to the authorities, and teachers, and educators.

HON. MR. PORTER: The fictitious "Mrs. Smith."

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General should be original. That remark came from the back benches. I shall submit them to authorities and ask whether those are in the category dealt within the magazine article which I refer to. This article was distributed throughout the world, and led to a conviction in England of publishers, who turned out some of this stuff, and resulted in denunciation of this sort of poison being sold.

HON. MR. FROST: Will the hon. member send them over to me?

MR. SALSBERG: They were given back. This bundle will go to authorities, and we will let them decide in what category they are. We will send them to the journal of the Public Schools Trustees Association, which carried these articles. Let them decide whether they should be sold freely on the streets and over the counters to our youth, or whether something should be done about it. They will decide what they are. Let them conclude whether they should be sold to their children.

MR. EDWARDS: What about the radio?

MR. SALSBERG: The radio should be looked into, too. But I am dealing with matters directly under the hon. Attorney-General's Department and his Estimates.

On previous occasions I have suggested—and I do not know why the government has refused to follow the suggestion—that a committee of parents, teachers and other suitable people be set up to advise the government on this problem, people who are not concerned with either printing, selling or distributing this "stuff", but who are concerned with the welfare of the children. Let them advise the government how to cope with this. I am not suggesting reckless and unconsidered raids on places, or mass trials. I am suggesting, however, that we are confronted with a very serious problem and a different attitude is required than the one we are getting from the government, and have been getting all along.

I suggest the setting up of such a committee to make possible some official designation and identification of comic books, placing them in categories that will indicate whether they are suitable to be allowed into our homes, perhaps a stamp of approval of such a committee, or some other method will be found to deal with it, but to turn one's back on the problem and laugh at it cynically, or to try and resort to artifices here, I suggest, is unbecoming and is failing in the responsibility to the youth of the province.

Notes 29 and 30 agreed to.

On Vote 31.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I wonder if the hon. Attorney-General would explain Vote 31, items 5 to 10?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, a few years ago, provision was made under The Matrimonial Causes Act for procedure, whereby the Official Guardian would have power to investigate cases involving a divorce, where custody of children was also an issue. The Act provided the Official Guardian should investigate the circumstances of the children, whose custody was in question, and be in a position to advise the court in deciding how the matter should be disposed of.

I introduced a bill this session to extend that to all cases, whether or not there was a divorce involved, as long as there was custody of children involved. This procedure should apply to every case involving the custody of children. I understand it has worked out very successfully.

MR. GRUMMETT: Item 10 is to cover additional expenses which might arise owing to the introduction of the bill, which was introduced the other day?

HON. MR. PORTER: No, item 10 is for payment made to Children's Aid Societies assisting in these investigations. We use the Children's Aid Societies, through the Official Guardian, who authorizes the Children's Aid Societies in many places to make these investigations, and some scale of payment is made for this sort of assistance.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): May I ask the hon. Attorney-General what is the explanation of the $1,000 salary to the supervising coroner? That is not all the salary he receives?

HON. MR. PORTER: That is the provincial share of his salary. The supervising coroner is the coroner for Toronto, and as such he gets his main salary. He also has provincial jurisdiction as well, and for that extra dignity and work he receives $1,000.

Votes 31, 32 and 33 agreed to.

On Vote 34.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On Vote 34, Monthly Allowances to Judges, $98,000. I think the hon. Attorney-General will remember I brought up at a previous session the matter of having a third County Court Judge in Carleton. At the time I was advised that no representation had been made, and that in any event the judge from the adjoining county would be able to give some relief.

I find out there have been new developments, and the Clerk Registrar of the County of Carleton has written to the hon. Attorney-General, and also to Mr. Hugh H. Donald, Inspector of Legal Offices, and some of these matters were taken up with the Inspector in Ottawa. I understand a copy, which I will read, of a letter sent to Mr. Donald has been also forwarded to the hon. Attorney-General in which the matter was fully explained.

HON. MR. PORTER: What date does that bear?

MR. CHARTRAND: January 28th, 1954. This letter reads as follows:

DEAR SIR:

Re: Third Judge for Carleton

I beg to enclose Sessions Civil List starting Monday. You will note there are:

Jury	-	-	14
Non-jury	-	-	58
			72
Add criminal cases	-	-	2
			74

This is not a record but close to it. What troubles me mostly is the Remanets. There are 33 on this list. Also we have a large backlog of Remanets from former lists.

With two judges always busy with,

1. Chamber work.
2. Division Courts.
3. Assessment &c. Appeals.
4. County Court Judges Criminal Courts.
5. Surrogate audits.
6. Surrogate contentions &c. &c., we cannot keep up with the parade of trials.

Our Criminal work is in pretty fair shape, we only have two cases for the sessions.

By next Monday night I hope to have our Magistrates' Appeals cleaned up.

May I quote the "Guid Buik" in closing,
"Come over into Macedonia and help us."

I know that in quite a few cases counsel just cannot get on smartly with their trials and I know some are indolent. I also realize that Judge Madden's sudden death threw a monkey-wrench into our machinery.

Nevertheless, we do need another junior judge and as clerk-registrar I cannot help feeling that nobody knows better how great our need is than I.

Yours faithfully,
Clerk-Registrar.

I understand that recently an article appeared in the Ottawa Citizen, during the present session of this House. Under the caption, "Three Judges Tackle County Court List," it reads as follows:

Three judges will preside at County Court hearings next week in a drive to clean up 51 cases remaining out of a total of 76 slated for the current session, County Court Clerk, S. Rupert Broadfoot, Q.C., said this morning.

Three civil actions on the list remain to be tried before a jury. The balance are non-jury cases.

Beginning next Tuesday, County Judge C. W. A. Marion is scheduled to hear 10 cases.

Judge A. G. McDougall is listed to try 15 cases and Judge J. Peter Macdonald will proceed with hearings of non-jury cases.

Mr. Chairman, it has always been said in past years, when I have brought up this matter of a third County Court judge for Carleton, it would be quite possible to carry on with the aid of visiting judges. The experience of the court does not justify that contention. As a matter of fact, as every solicitor in this House knows, the one thing you cannot accomplish in the field of litigation is accurate planning. Sometimes you think a case is going to take 2 days and it is settled in 15 minutes. Sometimes you estimate a case will be settled in a day, and in fact it lasts for 2½ days. If it had been possible for the senior judge to plan in advance, the solution offered by the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) in the past would be workable, but it has been found there is no possibility of planning in advance, and the senior County Court judge is reluctant to have to bring in a judge from another county and saddle the County of Carleton with expenses of $20 to $25 a day, if it is not known definitely there will be work for him to do. Our experience in the last 2 years has been that whenever there is a surplus of work the only legal work that can be assigned—

HON. MR. PORTER: I understand the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) to say that the county was saddled with an additional payment. My understanding is that that cost is paid by the federal authorities.

MR. CHARTRAND: I think the county has to pay the judge's expenses at the rate of $20 to $25 a day.

HON. MR. PORTER: Oh no. It is paid by the Department of Justice at Ottawa. These accounts come into my office, and if they appear to be correct I send them to Ottawa.

MR. CHARTRAND: Well, it does not change my argument. The senior judge of the County of Carleton is reluctant to ask the judge of another county to come in, when he is not sure there is work waiting for him. Our experience in the past 2 years has been that Judge Marion would come into Ottawa and dispose of the divisional court cases, the rental court cases and other cases listed for the County Court sittings. Outside of that, the senior judge is unable to say in advance when there will be the need for a third judge, with the result that the administration of justice is quite impaired and is why there are so many cases in arrears and pending.

I have raised this matter on several occasions before. I would remind the hon. Minister that second junior judges have been appointed in the Counties of Essex and Wentworth, and that the County of Carleton stands, from the point of view of population, midway between those two counties, and if there is a need for an additional judge in either of those counties, there is need for one in Carleton. I would ask the hon. Attorney-General to make some comment on this matter.

HON. MR. PORTER: The letter from Mr. Broadfoot is the first official intimation we have had of any need for further judicial services in that area. That has now set an inquiry in motion as to whether or not this is necessary.

It is all very well for us to introduce legislation in this House to provide for an additional county judge in any county, but it is quite useless to pass legislation, unless the Department of Justice makes the appointment.

MR. CHARTRAND: I think there is a postscript to the letter which deals with that matter. It is being looked into.

HON. MR. PORTER: By the Department of Justice? They usually do not look into it until we ask them to. Well, it would be a nice thing to have an extra judgeship in that vicinity. There might be a by-election.

MR. GRUMMETT: Vote 34, item 10. I wonder if the hon. Attorney-General would explain that?

HON. MR. PORTER: This is for office supplies and maintenance items of one kind and another for Divisions Courts, sheriffs' offices, registrars, and court officials of that kind. We "pay the shot," to put it shortly.

MR. GRUMMETT: Vote 34, item 13. That is a different story. There is no necessity for back-bench members to be perpetually shouting "Carried" when an hon. member is asking a question. There is no need for back-benchers to try to drown out hon. members who wish to speak.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): There is no intention of drowning out Opposition members, but when you have stayed here for 2 hours listening to some of the hon. members on the other side, it gets pretty tiresome. I was not referring to the hon. member for Cochrane-South (Mr. Grummett).

MR. GRUMMETT: But I resent the action of a back-bencher trying to cut down the opportunity for Opposition members to ask questions, and who do not ask questions themselves.

MR. COWLING: I will ask my question when the time comes.

MR. GRUMMETT: It is the duty of the Opposition to ask as many questions as they wish, and to get information about these Estimates, and it certainly does not become a supporter of the government to keep continuously shouting "Carried," to drown out any questions.

MR. COWLING: Some of the other hon. members have taken a great deal longer than they should have done. So far as the explanation is concerned, it was sufficient for me, and I shouted "Carried." I was not particularly referring to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett).

HON. MR. PORTER: I can understand that the hon. member's temper is becoming a little frayed as a result of the long speeches.

MR. SALSBERG: Do not defend him. He can defend himself.

HON. MR. PORTER: What are you getting "touchy" about now? Who is making the long speeches?

MR. SALSBERG: I am giving you time to think up an answer.

HON. MR. PORTER: Item No. 13. $6,000 covers certain surveys which were made in that particular district. I will refer to the hon. member to a previous item, to Crown contributions toward preparing plans. That is a statutory provision, whereby judges make orders in certain situations to have a plan survey prepared in certain areas. There are some towns which require almost an entirely new survey, and we have instituted a policy over the last few years of making contributions to these plans and facilities. In many cases it has been a very expensive business to do all the work required. These survey plans are to clear up the title situation in certain areas where there has never been a survey, and it is very difficult, sometimes, to certify to a clear title. We are making plans to clear up that situation. The two townships mentioned are townships which were not financially able to bear the normal proportion of the cost of the plan, which was particularly involved, in relation to the size of the municipalities, so there was a special item to look after that situation.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, a small matter, but a very, very serious one. The question I would like to present is this: In Toronto, where there are a number of County Courts, 4 to be exact, it has become the habit—a very vile habit—of some collection agencies, not of all, but of some, to take their documents, affidavits or whatever you call them, not to the court nearest to the person they are after, but to the court that is farthest away.

The reason for this is so they can add mileage costs, serving costs and so on. Unfortunately this hits the poorest section of the population. These collection agencies handle small amounts due for household furniture and other items bought for the home, and some people may not always be able to make their payments on time.

When a person falls in arrears, the experience has been that collection agencies take these documents to New Toronto, or to the Eglinton Court, away out at the other end of the city, for people who may live in the Bathurst Street area, in Bellwoods, or St. Andrew. In High Park, they would not take them to the old Junction Court. I have seen them take them to the Eglinton East Court. This adds a great deal of expense and cost to those people, and I think we should stop it.

I have discussed this with the Inspector of Legal Offices of the Attorney-General's Department last fall, when this matter was brought to my attention, after which I also went down to the City Hall to the First Division Court, and discussed it with officials there, and they agreed the practice is being carried on. It is an old system. They say they cannot stop collection agencies from taking 25 or 50 or 100 cases out to New Toronto, and serving from there. One messenger will take them out, and one messenger will bring them back, but each person served is charged mileage for the service. It is a bit of a "racket," and a horrible "racket" if you ask me.

I wonder if there is any legislation on our books which would compel a collection agency to present its documents in the court nearest to the person about to be served? If the person lives in the centre of the City of Toronto, it should be the City Hall, Division Court 1; if it is in the west end, it should be in the court out around Keele Street. If it is in the suburbs, then probably in New Toronto or in the east end at Eglinton. If there is not legislation to compel them to do that, then I suggest it is high time we enact some legislation to stop this evil practice from continuing one day longer.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Here is another "racket"; Detroit 3, Toronto 0.

MR. SALSBERG: I did not get that, but I heard some visitor sigh. I would like to hear something from the hon. Attorney-General.

HON. MR. PORTER: The Legislation as at present, provides for various Division Courts in Toronto having equal jurisdiction over the whole area. I think there are 4 in the city. There is no provision whereby it has to be in a court which is nearest to the defendant's place of residence.

MR. SALSBERG: Do you not think we should provide such legislation?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know. That is something I would have to think about. I am not prepared to give an answer now. It has worked very well.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, it has not worked very well. It has worked out very well for the collection agencies.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is the way the hon. member always talks. If he will give me one specific instance. He talks in a general way, without mentioning any specific matters.

MR. SALSBERG: I will not let you "get away with that."

HON. MR. PORTER: I have let the hon. member "get away with murder" for a long time.

MR. SALSBERG: Then you are falling down on your job. You should be fired.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member is the one who should be fired. I have given an answer to the question.

MR. SALSBERG: You have not.

HON. MR. PORTER: Does the hon. member want to make a speech all over again?

MR. SALSBERG: I do not want to make a speech. The record will show what you said in reply. I raised a serious question, and it has not been denied. I am not blaming the present Attorney-General for it. It has been the practice for a long time, but he asks me if I will present specific instances. Of course, I cannot. But is it necessary, when he knows they can serve papers from New Toronto and charge mileage for 5 or 6 miles?

HON. MR. PORTER: No.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes they can, and they do.

MR. JOHN YAREMKO (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for St. Andrew has an idea but unfortunately he has been unable to express it. I will correct him to a certain extent.

MR. SALSBERG: So you are going to help me correct it?

MR. YAREMKO: The hon. member has implied that collection agencies are serving—

MR. SALSBERG: Some of them.

MR. YAREMKO: Well, some of the collection agencies are serving from inconvenient Division Courts in order to gain mileage. That is completely incorrect. The collection agencies do not gain one penny in mileage from their costs, because the costs in the Division Courts in the County of York are very small, ranging from $4.00 to $10.00, and the mileage involved does not go to the collection agency, but it goes to the bailiff of that Division Court, who has to travel longer distances to serve the requisite papers. The bailiffs do not ask the collection agencies to come and deal with their courts so they will get more mileage. The collection agencies may choose a court of their own convenience in which to have these cases tried. But I can assure you, Mr. Chairman, and through you, the hon. member for St. Andrew, that the collection agencies do not benefit by one penny in regard to mileage. Some of them, I must agree, may have other reasons for serving in such a way, but it is certainly not a "racket" to get additional mileage.

I know of certain collection agencies which sue in the most inconvenient courts for a man to defend himself, because he must take a streetcar, and if it is a claim for only perhaps $10.00, and he may have some "beef," and he will say, "I will not bother, because I will have to travel to New Toronto to defend the case."

The hon. member for St. Andrew should get his complaints straight, and maybe the hon. members of this House would then be able to follow him. But when he says it is a "racket" in order to gain additional mileage, he is completely "off base."

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know what you are so happy about, with that explanation.

HON. MR. PORTER: We were happy to have you sit down. We are not happy now.

MR. SALSBERG: A big section of this province will be very happy, too, when you have another seat than that of the Attorney-General.

I am very happy the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) has given some further information in regard to this problem. He has more knowledge and information about the operation of these collection agencies than I. I present an evil which exists, and which is continuing. Insofar as the mileage charges are concerned, and it may be I may have been wrong, but I presented the information given to me in the City Hall of Toronto in No. 1 Division Court.

HON. MR. PORTER: I may inform the hon. member—

MR. SALSBERG: Will you let me finish?

HON. MR. PORTER: No.

MR. SALSBERG: You will have to let me finish, because I will not yield.

THE CHAIRMAN: Let the hon. Attorney-General answer the question. The hon. member for St. Andrew is out of order.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not out of order. I am on the floor, and he is interrupting me. You had better stop him, and make him sit down.

THE CHAIRMAN: The Attorney-General has arisen on a point of order.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, on all points. I forgot now what the point was.

MR. SALSBERG: There is a good example.

HON. MR. PORTER: May I say to the hon. member for St. Andrew that in the Toronto courts, within the City of Toronto, there is no mileage whatsoever?

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I have been assured there is mileage.

HON. MR. PORTER: We do not know who assured you.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member for Bellwoods said there was a mileage charge, but it is not the agency which gets it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Look into the facts and bring them forward.

MR. SALSBERG: All I am asking of you—and it is very reasonable—is, will not something be done to prevent the adding of thousands of dollars of costs—

HON. MR. PORTER: It will be studied and carefully considered.

MR. SALSBERG: It should be carefully considered, and a way found to do away with this evil.

HON. MR. PORTER: If it is an evil, it will be done away with.

Vote No. 34 agreed to.

On Vote 35, item 6.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Attorney-General explain this item?

HON. MR. PORTER: There is an agreement between the province and the City of Niagara Falls under which the City of Niagara Falls polices the Rainbow Bridge, and we pay them for doing that policing of the bridge, and the approaches to it.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Attorney-General tell us if any of the municipalities asked to be relieved of the provincial policing last year?

HON. MR. PORTER: Four asked to be relieved.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Were any new ones brought in?

HON. MR. PORTER: No, we did not take on any new ones last year at all.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Would the hon. Attorney-General tell us what portion of the cost of provincial policing a municipality is expected to pay?

HON. MR. PORTER: Under the policing agreement?

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Yes. Would he give us something along those lines?

HON. MR. PORTER: They pay so much a man; $3,300 per man, plus 6 cents per mile for each mile where he uses his car.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Do they pay anything toward the equipment at all?

HON. MR. PORTER: The 6 cents per mile is paid for the use of the car, and that, over a period, is supposed to cover the cost of the car.

MR. GRUMMETT: I think the arrangement whereby some municipalities are policed by the provincial police is a good arrangement. I am all in agreement with it. I think it tends to good policing in the province, but the great difficulty is that when the provincial police are appointed to take over a municipality, they apparently require more officers than the municipality did, that is, the municipality may struggle along with a very inadequate force, but when the provincial police take it over, they estimate the number of officers required at approximately 1 per 1,000 of population in the community they are policing. The result is the municipalities feel they are unduly burdened by having to pay the cost of the provincial police policing the municipality. In the long-run, I would like to see the day when all the municipalities were policed by the provincial police, because I know they do a much more efficient job than the present arrangement of hiring municipal police to carry on, because in general there are continual disputes between one councillor and another, in regard to the hiring and firing of municipal police, which does not occur when the provincial police take over the policing job.

HON. MR. PORTER: We have some problems arising from it. It is not quite as easy as the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) paints it, but it has worked out very well.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General if there has been any progress toward instituting a 5-day week for the provincial police?

HON. MR. PORTER: No.

MR. OLIVER: No progress in that direction at all? I think the hon. Attorney-General will agree that some of the dissatisfaction stems from the fact that they have not the 5-day week.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know that there is much dissatisfaction on that account. They are given an extra week's holidays during the year; they have other privileges, and, generally speaking, very good superannuation arrangements. There are a great many advantages from being a member of the Ontario Provincial Police. It may be in some of the larger city forces they work shorter hours, but the sort of work in the cities is different. Most of the provincial police are spread out through the country, and are in areas where their work might not be as extensive as in the highly-congested areas. They are not handling great crowds of people all the time. They are patrolling highways, to a very large extent. That is the duty of most of the provincial police officers in the country. And if we were to change the number of hours of work now, it would mean a very substantial increase in the force, and it is difficult to maintain a police force these days, with all the competing offers there are for jobs of all kinds.

MR. OLIVER: Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) tell me how many resignations there have been from the force this year?

HON. MR. PORTER: Over 100. It is 118.

Votes 34 to 36 inclusive, agreed to.

ESTIMATES OF DEPARTMENT OF INSURANCE

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, a question. The newspapers today prominently reported a charge made by the Provincial Leader of the CCF to the effect that the increase in Blue Cross rates is the responsibility of the Ontario Government, and that the Ontario Government, through its Department of Insurance, ordered the increase to be made. I think that this might be the right time for the government to make a statement as to whether that charge is correct or not.

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General): Of course, 2 or 3 years ago we introduced legislation to provide authority for the Department of Insurance to supervise the sort of fund which is set up by the Blue Cross, and other hospital insurance funds of that kind. The function of the Department of Insurance is to protect the public who are dealing with insurance companies and other organizations which deal in trust funds, and activities of that kind, where a company or an association take a person's money and make certain definite legal commitments to pay back something at some future date, and, of course, in order to protect people and give them some assurance that the commitment will be carried out, provision has to be made for adequate reserves, and adequate premiums, and adequate income of that company or association, to make their commitment worth anything at all, in order thus to protect the people who put their money in, who pay the premiums, and to make sure that they will get back what is coming to them when the day arrives that they have to go into hospital, or when they suffer an accident, or whatever the case may be.

The Department of Insurance requires a certain standard of financial reserves, and they also require that sufficient premium will be paid to make sure that the commitment will be carried out.

That is a simple proposition, and the Blue Cross, and any other similar type of scheme is now subject to the jurisdiction of the Superintendent of Insurance. I do not know whether he found they needed to raise the premiums or not, but it was decided, apparently, that they did have to raise them in order to meet the commitments they were making. If they want to protect the people who put in the money, then they have to have enough money to pay the claims. That is the very simple position, that I am sure the Department of Insurance, whether they were the ones who made the suggestion in the first place or not really does not matter, the point is that in order to make the fund sound, and to protect the people who pay money into it, the premiums had to be raised.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I think we have to take a serious view.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, what in the world would the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) expect? After all, you have 1,000,000 people in the Blue Cross. These people are entitled to protection. They are entitled to know when they pay a premium, that it is sufficient to meet the obligations called for in the policy. A great deal of nonsense is said about this business. As a matter of fact, the amount of increase in Blue Cross rates is nothing compared with the increases in the provinces which have adopted state insurance. As far as the Department of Insurance is concerned, they were absolutely right in doing it. What would the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) expect?

HON. MR. PORTER: And, as a matter of fact, they say that when we amended the Act to make provision for that, it was passed with the unanimous approval of this House, including that of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg).

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, and it was requested by some of the hon. members opposite.

HON. MR. PORTER: And the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was "all for it." It was passed in silence.

MR. SALSBERG: The "hon. member for St. Andrew" is never in favour of increasing the burden on the masses of people by any form of legislation you may ever introduce.

HON. MR. PORTER: Just nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: And if you thought you managed to wiggle in a piece of legislation—

HON. MR. FROST: There was no "managing" at all. It was a straight matter of honesty. Let us get on with business.

MR. SALSBERG: I am sorry, I am extremely sorry, but—

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) can go ahead and speak on the budget tomorrow all he likes.

MR. SALSBERG: I think the matter belongs here if I may suggest.

HON. MR. FROST: Go ahead, then, we may as well put up with the hon. member and be done with it.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) does not realize how bored we are with it.

HON. MR. FROST: This business of listening to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) gets tiresome. If he would confine himself to reasonable limits, but to vapour all over the place on pure nonsense.

MR. SALSBERG: I resent and reject any such suggestion. The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) should not forget—and I say to him with all the respect I have for him as an individual—that he has a small Opposition here. If the Opposition were larger, undoubtedly there would be greater division of the task the Opposition has to do. Unfortunately, we are a small number.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): The people looked after that.

MR. SALSBERG: We have a small number in Cpposition at this time, and some hon. members—

HON. MR. PORTER: The people do not want many people like the hon. member.

MR. SALSBERG: And there is no reason for any impatience because the Attorney-General's Department is being kept on the floor for 2 hours.

HON. MR. PORTER: This is the Department of Insurance, now.

MR. SALSBERG: I say it is scandalous on the part of any hon. member of the government—

HON. MR. PORTER: This is a different department. Wake up.

MR. SALSBERG: It is scandalous to suggest that I, or any hon. member, is wasting time. Whoever heard a complaint when the Attorney-General's Department is kept on the floor for 2 hours or more? What do you want to do, "railroad" the Estimates through? If you do, say so. I apologize for nothing I have done tonight, and I refuse any suggestion that it was "vapouring." The questions I raise are vital and important, and so have been the questions raised by every hon. member on this side. We are doing our duty in raising them, and we would be remiss in our duty if we did not.

HON. MR. PORTER: What is the question?

MR. SALSBERG: What I am on the floor now about—

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what we would like to know.

MR. SALSBERG: —The question of the Blue Cross, and any attempt to say that this does not belong here is an evasion of the issue.

HON. MR. PORTER: What is the question? Has the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) a question?

MR. SALSBERG: Don't lose your temper.

HON. MR. PORTER: I am not losing my temper, I am asking the hon. member if he has a question?

MR. SALSBERG: Do not be impatient; be quiet, and you will get it.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member is just wasting the taxpayers' money standing there.

MR. SALSBERG: The time we are taking, is the most valuable contribution we can make.

THE CHAIRMAN: Will the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) confine himself to the subject, or please sit down? He is indulging in personalities, and not discussing the Estimates.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, it is up to the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). Whenever his Estimates are up, he behaves in that way. No other hon. Minister does that.

HON. MR. PORTER: What is the question?

MR. SALSBERG: The point I want to make is this, that this is not a trivial matter.

HON. MR. PORTER: Well, what is the question?

MR. SALSBERG: I do not have to make it a question to please the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter).

HON. MR. PORTER: Then it is a speech.

MR. SALSBERG: It is whatever I prefer to make it. I am dealing with the Blue Cross, and I suggest it is not a trivial matter.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, might I refer—

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I respectfully ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) to please let me finish this statement.

HON. MR. FROST: All right, go ahead.

MR. SALSBERG: I have respect for the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost). May I ask him, please do not make matters worse. When his Attorney-General is handling Estimates, he gets "rattled," and he "rattles" everybody else. I am suggesting this is a serious question, because Blue Cross is used by tens of thousands, if not hundreds of thousands of people. Now, such a service, when it increases the rate by 26 per cent. is adding a terrific burden to an enormously large number of people, and it is therefore a very important question; not trivial and not secondary.

The government, in reply to my question, tried to justify the action of the Department of Insurance in asking the Blue Cross to order the increase. They are, therefore, supporting the action of the Department of Insurance, and I suggest—

MR. D. M. KERR (Dovercourt): No.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) said they were perfectly justified in doing that.

MR. KERR: The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) said that he did not know whether they did or not.

MR. SALSBERG: But the hon. Prime Minister, who is head of the government, said they were absolutely, positively, right in doing that.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) makes so many mis-statements, I cannot keep track of them all.

MR. SALSBERG: He said they were positively right in doing so, and I say increasing the rates is not the only way to cope with this problem.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, let us clear this up. It has been published in the papers. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) can read it if he wants to; in fact, no doubt he has. He only reads and states what appears to him to be desirable.

MR. SALSBERG: We all do that.

HON. MR. FROST: Here is a statement in the Telegram. I think I saw something in the Star, and also the Globe and Mail, but Mr. MacDonald quoted the letter from the Provincial Superintendent of Insurance—that would be Mr. Whitehead, I assume—to the Director of Blue Cross, dated last November 23rd, which concluded with these words:

“I feel that the proposed rates for hospital plans are most necessary,” D. W. Ogilvie, Toronto Manager of Blue Cross, replied today that Blue Cross lost $400,000 in January and February this year, and would lose more money in March. “Mr. MacDonald should know better,” said Mr. Ogilvie, “we didn’t raise our rates because anybody told us, we raised them because we had to.”

Mr. Ogilvie maintained that the rate increase could be attributed to the increase in hospital rates, and also to the greater number of patients being admitted to hospitals under the Blue Cross scheme. “As to Mr. MacDonald’s charge that the government had ordered the increase,” Mr. Ogilvie said, “they didn’t tell us to, they agreed with our figures that an increase was necessary.” William Grey, of Chatham, President of the Blue Cross, said the hospital cost had doubled since the Blue Cross system of rates was established 10 years ago.

Now, sir, a 26 per cent. increase is a very moderate increase in view of the hospital rates elsewhere in Canada, outside of Ontario altogether. May I point out, Mr. Chairman, that the Blue Cross is operated by the hospitals of Ontario—I believe that is right—and is a great co-operative scheme to provide service at cost. If their cost cannot be met out of premiums, they request the Superintendent of Insurance to increase them. He looked it over and agreed. There is the situation. That is all there is to it.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, the point I wanted to make was that when we approach a problem of this character, that is going to affect so many people, it is not the easiest way out that is the best. The simplest way out was to do what was done, obviously, increase the rates, and since Blue Cross is operated by the hospitals, and since the hospitals are finding themselves with very large deficits every year, it is not unreasonable to say that the increases in Blue Cross rates are meant to help the hospitals cover their deficits, which, I say, the majority of workers who have Blue Cross, through their factory schemes, should not necessarily be called upon to cover.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, that point is quite out of order for this Estimate. This is a matter of insurance, and payment for insurance. If the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) thinks we should subsidize Blue Cross, or any of the insurance companies, he can raise that on another occasion. It has nothing to do with this Estimate.

The point is, the Superintendent of Insurance has no jurisdiction and no right to suggest that the people of Ontario should subsidize anything. His job is to see that things are actuarially solvent and that is what he has done.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not suggesting that we subsidize any insurance company; I am suggesting it may be the wisest and the best way for us to subsidize our hospitals.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member can discuss that on the budget.

MR. SALSBERG: I discussed it this afternoon on a bill, but we should help with the cost of hospitals and, perhaps, make unnecessary the raising of rates of the Blue Cross. I suggest it is the only way out, and may I say for those hon. members in this House who may be resentful at the time taken, let us not lose our tempers.

HON. MR. PORTER: We heard it all this afternoon.

HON. MR. FROST: I want to be fair to the hon. member, but I point out, he is completely out of order. This has nothing to do with this Estimate at all.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, it has.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member can speak tomorrow. He is speaking on the Budget Address, and I suggest he deal with this in his Budget Address tomorrow.

MR. SALSBERG: Our Department of Insurance did that, and when we come to the Estimates of a department or a branch of government that has done certain things, it is up to the hon. members to utilize that occasion to make their points and raise their questions.

I want to conclude by merely saying what I wanted to say before, that the organized workers were up in arms when the issue arose, and they have asked for an investigation of Blue Cross. Let us not forget that. Newspaper editorials were written about it, and the matter is not over yet. It is evident by the prominence every newspaper gave to the words of the new leader of the CCF Party—he did not speak for me and I am not speaking for him—but I suggest it is a big public issue and let us not be impatient with each other when matters of such magnitude are raised during the Estimates.

That is what we are supposed to do. Whether the government will see eye to eye with me is another point, but I think I am not out of order. Certainly I am not taking the time of the House unnecessarily, and no member should feel we have wasted any time, even if he may disagree with everything I have said throughout the evening, because it is only 2 hours and 15 minutes since we began consideration of the Estimates of one of the most important departments of government.

Vote 77 agreed to.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

HON. W. J. DUNLOP (Minister of Education): A few of the highlights concerning education may possibly be in order before we commence the detailed examination of the Estimates, and, of course, the big factor in our educational situation today is the increase in school population as the hon. member for York West (Mr. Brandon) remarked this afternoon.

The enrolment in our elementary and secondary schools in the province is a little over 915,000. There are thousands more—probably 15,000 or 16,000—in the universities. The increase in school population over last year is 58,023. Next year probably the increase over this year will be in the neighbourhood of 60,000, which means that approximately 1,500 new classrooms will be needed for next year's work.

As the hon. member for Wentworth (Mr. Child) remarked this afternoon, the costs of the construction of classrooms are coming down somewhat, but, even so, some funds in the neighbourhood of $30 million will be needed to provide those 1,500 classrooms, perhaps not quite that much, but fairly close to that figure.

Of course, as the hon. members of the House have heard before, we are now paying grants for the construction of classrooms only, and I am glad to be able to tell the hon. members of the House, Mr. Chairman, that most school boards in the province are now apparently prepared to admit that that policy is a necessary one.

At the outset there were some of them who were trying to evade the innovation, but now for the most part they accept it as a necessity under present conditions.

Another problem, following naturally on the increase of school population, is the supply of teachers. I am glad to be able to say our emergency plan is producing, so far, as many teachers as have been needed this year. About 1,100 teachers are in the schools of Ontario today whom we would not have had if it had not been for this emergency plan. I fancy I do not need to detail the operation of it, but I can suggest to the hon. members that it is a rather delicately-balanced mechanism, and I am hoping that no hon. member will ask, when the testing time comes in June, for any concessions for individuals which may, if granted, throw the scheme out of operation.

We are expecting to obtain, as we have discovered just recently, a fair number of teachers from the British Isles. There are a number who would like to come, we have found, and we are considering plans at the moment for making it reasonably easy for teachers to come from the Old Country.

There was a time when we required in Ontario that a teacher coming from Britain, or anywhere else for that matter, might teach on a letter of permission for a year and then write professional examinations.

That seemed not quite what should be done. It seemed to me we were stressing a little too much our own professional courses. Now, arrangements are such that we accept teachers from any part of the British Commonwealth and Empire—and only from the British Commonwealth and Empire—who can present documents showing they have taken professional and academic courses of the same length of time as we require in Ontario, and we let them teach on a letter of permission for a year. If they have done good work, they may go ahead under the regular plans we have for our own teachers, and ultimately obtain permanent Ontario certificates.

There is a particularly fine staff in the Department of Education, and I should like to remind the hon. member of this House, Mr. Chairman, that we have additional burdens these days laid on our inspectors, particularly our inspectors of elementary schools. Those who are dealing with suburban districts have many problems, and those who are working in remote areas have problems of a different kind, equally serious. We are working our elementary school inspectors rather hard. They are responding to the needs of the situation and I should like to pay a special tribute to those inspectors.

As the hon. members of the House know, it has long been the procedure for a city or town which desired to do so, to appoint its own inspectors of elementary schools under our own regulations, of course, and approved by the Minister. We have extended that now, and any city or town which would like to appoint its own secondary school inspector, an inspector of high schools, may do so under our regulations, but even when that is done, the department still stands ready to assist in any way it can.

Through the entire situation in education runs our policy by which we are trying, wherever and whenever we can, to insist that the stress and emphasis must be on the basic essentials in education. We are trying a new plan to place this stress, especially—and of special interest—on the use of our own language—English. For this reason and for this purpose, we are bringing over from the Old Land this summer, Professor Gurrey, who is coming to speak at our various summer courses, and to point out what is done in the Old Country in the matter of methods of teaching English, and stressing generally correct usage of our own language.

Mr. Chairman, this outline requires perhaps only one additional item and that is, that we are getting a wonderful response throughout the province in the carrying out of the legislation passed last session to provide for the training of retarded children.

There has rarely been such a gratifying response to anything, rarely have there been so many letters of appreciation of what the government is doing, as have come in this matter of training and educating, if we can, the retarded children who are not admitted to the regular schools.

Now, Mr. Chairman, I think perhaps that is sufficient at this hour of the night. If I may then proceed with the details of the Estimates, I shall do so.

Votes 37 and 38 agreed to.

On Vote 39.

MR. SALSBERG: On Vote 39. The Ryerson Institute of Technology, is it the intention of the government to build a new school for that college—a new structure?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Yes, Mr. Chairman, as soon as we can arrange to do so. The enrolment is increasing so fast and the services are extending so rapidly that a new building will be required just as soon as it can be arranged.

MR. SALSBERG: Do you intend to use the present site, or move it elsewhere?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: There are arguments on both sides of that, Mr. Chairman. There are those who think the present site is an ideal one because it is in the centre of a factory or industrial district. There are others who would prefer to take it outside. There are arguments on both sides. However, the present feeling seems to be to have it outside of the city, but close enough so there will not be too much transportation necessary.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I wonder whether the hon. Minister would explain Vote 39, item 20.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: We work with the Department of Labour in the matter of this agreement. We have, for instance, schedule K1 instruction for the armed forces; the army, navy and air force. In that case we get 100 per cent. reimbursement from the Dominion Government. We have schedule K2 under which we do all we can in regard to training for defence industries. In that case we get 75 per cent. reimbursement from the Dominion Government. Schedule M is for rehabilitation. 50 per cent. of the expense involved in that case comes back.

Then we have schedule A. This is the apprenticeship training scheme in which my hon. friend the Minister of Labour (hon. Mr. Daley) and I co-operate. We share the expenses of training apprentices sent to us by the trade unions, contractors and others.

Schedule K deals with supervisory and foremanship instruction. In that case we get 50 per cent. reimbursement from the Federal Government.

Vote 39 carried.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): In connection with Vote 40, can the hon. Minister tell us about the enrolment at these various teachers' colleges? Is enrolment higher than last year or not?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: It is not quite as high, Mr. Chairman, as it was last year, and there is a reason for that.

This year we have in the teachers' colleges two types of courses. One course is for applicants who have 8 papers of grade 13 and the other is a 2-year course for applicants who have completed Grade 12. The number of those in the one-year course is 1,306, and the difference between that and 1,732 is the number in the two-year course; 84 are in the Ontario College of Education taking the "Public Central Option" as it is called.

If the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wishes me to explain why the number is down 200 last year, I will do so. The reason is the emergency plan. We are taking into a summer course those who have completed Grade 12. We give them 6-weeks' intensive training. We then allow them to teach for a year. We bring them back the second summer for 6-weeks' intensive training again, then we allow them to teach for another year. Then we require them to attend a teachers' college for 1 year.

By means of that we have obtained in the neighbourhood of 1,100 new teachers. Not all of those in these summer courses are people with only grade 12 qualifications. Some of them have B.A. degrees, or Grade 13. I am glad to tell you, Mr. Chairman, that the great majority of these new teachers are really doing well in their schools. The percentage of failures is very low. As so many of them are taking advantage of that emergency plan the number of teachers in the teachers' colleges has been reduced somewhat.

I may say too that last May, when I was up north at the Head of the Lakes, I heard in various places that there were not enough teachers from that area being trained and getting into the schools, and so, although the summer course here was full, I agreed to put on a similar course at Port Arthur. I told members of school boards and councils there if they would undertake to do enough publicity work to get 25 prospective teachers into a course at the Lake-head, it would be organized. And they got us about 56 and I am glad to say that all but 4 were successful.

Vote No. 47 carried.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): On Vote 48, what decision was finally reached about the construction of the Toronto Teachers' College?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: The Toronto Teachers' College has been commenced on a site on Carlaw Avenue in Toronto, an excellent site in an excellent part of the city. I am informed that construction began yesterday.

MR. SALSBERG: I am extremely sorry to hear that because it shows that the government has ignored the appeals and the requests made to it by almost every educational institution, by the Teachers' Association and by the students themselves, not to proceed with the plan to construct the new building away from the centre of the city.

The teachers have gone to the extent of canvassing hon. members of this House. They have written and besought Toronto members to intervene and prevent the government from proceeding with its original plan. Their argument was, in my view, very logical. I myself discussed this matter with the hon. minister (Mr. Dunlop) early last summer. In fact, I suggested a certain area on Bloor and St. George Streets where I thought it would be logical to build a college because it would be close to existing libraries and other educational facilities, beside being close to students' residences. It is not easy to see how, in the extreme northeast of the city, where there are zoning regulations in force, how students will be able to find accommodations.

The main consideration behind the arguments against the government's decision was that the college was being moved too far from the centre of other educational facilities in the city. Students would be deprived of the chance to use the library facilities of the university, the public libraries, and other institutions located within the central area. There are—or there were—possibilities of obtaining land and I am sorry the government finally decided to begin building where it has. If the department is going to proceed to build the Ryerson Institute also outside the city they are, in my view, making another serious mistake. Most of the students live in the centre of the town where they can rent rooms. They will have to travel out and back and they will be divorced from the facilities which the campus provides. The decision is illogical.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: This question was gone into most fully. This one Teachers' College is not going to be enough for Toronto for very long. We are getting one in the eastern part of the city. We hope to put another in the western part. As far as using the university library is concerned, the university does not allow other people to use its library.

Many suggestions were made for a site. I was informed that some people wanted the Teachers' College located in the centre of the city so that the students could hear the best preachers on Sunday. I said to them: "Do you suppose the students are going to go to church from the college or from their boarding houses?" They had not thought of that. Various other ideas, good enough in their way, were put forward. As to Bloor and St. George, the site the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) suggested, I suppose we could have put it there for a couple of million dollars, but that seemed an unnecessary expenditure when it is so easy to go from Carlaw Avenue to the centre of the city at any time.

MR. SALSBERG: An hour-and-a-half's trip.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: 20 minutes.

MR. SALSBERG: These students have no automobiles.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Street car. We examined the suggestion that there should be a residence, and I found that of the 539 students, 370 live at home and 37 commute, so only 136 were boarding anywhere. I am prepared, Mr.

Chairman, to forecast that the years will show that we have made the best possible choice of a site.

MR. CHARTRAND: With regard to Vote 41, item 15. I presume that in the past there were so few students, that their numbers did not warrant the creation of any special institution for them in Ontario, but as the population increases, would the Minister tell us if there is going to be any institute within the Province of Ontario?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: We have, as hon. members probably know, a school for the deaf at Belleville with about 400 attending, and a school for the blind at Brantford with about 200 attending, and to these schools, particularly to the school for the blind, pupils are sent by the Governments of Alberta and Saskatchewan, and these provinces pay the fees. We send our French-speaking pupils, deaf or blind, to these institutions in Montreal. We have not very many of them. I think there are 21.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): In last year's Estimates there was an item for "Guidance — $37,000" included under "Special Services." I do not see it there this year. Would the hon. Minister explain?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Chairman, we have reorganized some of our work, very much for the better. We have put together in one group, "Guidance," "Attendance"—(that used to be called "Truancy")—"Statistics" and "Special Education." So "Guidance" has not been taken away at all, but it will be found where these other items are, in one branch. Even greater stress has been placed on "Guidance." We took Mr. Beattie, who was in charge of "Guidance," and put him in charge of the 4 divisions I have mentioned.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): I am glad to hear that, because it is a real worth-while service.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Would the hon. Minister tell us something about the correspondence courses? Is the number of students taking the correspondence courses increasing or decreasing?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: These correspondence courses are provided, as probably most the hon. members know, in the first place, for children in remote areas in the Province, who are too far from a school to attend. That part of it is decreasing, and I think perhaps that is a good sign. They are getting to school. I had a case the other day where a new school was opened, and 7 children who previously had been taking correspondence courses were able to attend this school, being taken by bus. That part of it is decreasing, I am glad to say.

The other part of it—the correspondence courses, shall I say, the high school courses and vocational courses are increasing somewhat. We have 843 classes for New Canadians; however, they are not correspondence courses.

MR. SALSBERG: On item 39, Vote 41, "Summer Camps." Does that mean the province operates summer camps for children?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Perhaps this is the place to explain about the summer camps. We have two of them, Bark Lake and Couchiching, into which we take young people, boys for 3 weeks, girls for 3 weeks, and then repeat that. These are young people who are sent to us after having been chosen by the principals and staffs of secondary schools of the province. They are all young people who are going to spend one more year in school, and we have them there to train them to go out and act as counsellors in the non-profit camps. They join the staffs of camps conducted by the churches, the YMCA, the YWCA, and so forth, and when they go back to their schools, they are well versed in "camp technology"—if there is such a word—and really it is very important and very successful.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree it is very important to provide instructors for these camps, but this may be a good time to remind the government—and I hope I will not have to apologize for reminding it—that in July of 1944—and I am now quoting from an editorial in the Toronto Daily Star, which says:

In July, 1944, on a tour of Northern Ontario, Mr. Drew said his government was planning to construct summer camps for children as part of a post war programme. It is our intention, he told the press, to build camps in suitable places where the children of Ontario will have the opportunity to live in the fresh air of the northern woods, and build up their bodies in healthful surroundings.

Ten years later, I was shocked to read in the Toronto Telegram, underneath a picture of the hon. member for St. Patrick, who is photographed in a most unusual position, holding something to his mouth—I do not know whether he is blowing up a balloon, or drinking from a balloon, but his cheeks were puffed out, and his eyes were closed as he holds this thing to his mouth, and it says underneath:

A. Kelso Roberts, M.M.P. for Toronto St. Patrick, blows up a balloon for one of the 120 "kids" attending the Progressive Conservative picnic—

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): I did not have any government assistance for that.

MR. SALSBERG: It goes on:

For many of the young guests, it was their only outing of the summer.

What a distance between promising and facts! Ten years ago, the head of the Progressive Conservative Government promised camps in the north: 10 years later, the Progressive Conservative member gives the kiddies the one and only chance at a summer camp, to be out in the open spaces, to get ice cream and blow up balloons.

Be that as it may, it is never too late to mend, and never too late to keep a promise, and I would like to appeal to the government to live up to the promise Mr. Drew made, when he promised summer camps so that every child can breathe in the wonderful air of Northern Ontario, and build up its body.

Let us not remain guilty before the children of this Province.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS: Mr. Chairman, I would like to make it quite clear that I hope the hon. member for St. Andrew was not purporting to quote my words.

MR. SALSBERG: No, I was quoting from the Telegram.

MR. ROBERTS: In fairness I should say my experience last year and the year before has been that where there were children who were in need of summer camps, it was possible to find them. Ten years ago, and for a period during the war, and perhaps after the war, it was not possible, as there was some shortage of camps in those days.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Chairman, it was found there was a better way to do exactly what hon. Mr. Drew promised, and we have been assisting—and I would like the hon. members to note these figures—199 non-profit camps in Ontario. These 199 camps in Ontario were attended last year by approximately 32,000 boys and girls. So, if one may so so, we found a better way, and it is working out nicely.

Votes 41 and 42 agreed to.

On Vote 43.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Would the hon. Minister tell us the nature of the expenditures for the Public Libraries Branch, salaries $18,700? What is the nature of that expense?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Vote 43, "Public Libraries Branch": There is a fairly large staff there under Mr. Angus Mowat. I wish hon. members of the House would step in and see this place at 206 Huron Street on the ground floor. It is one of the finest sights imaginable for a person interested in such matters. The books are all boxed, and go out to places all over the province.

Votes 43 to 45 agreed to.

On Vote 46, item 4.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): I would like to draw the attention of the hon. Minister to a statement in the Oshawa Times Gazette, of a meeting held recently by the Board of Education there. It says:

A booklet called The Canadian Trades Alphabet met with strong disapproval from some members of the Board of Education last night and was described by one as "Premeditated and wilful chiselling of our educational system."

Board members were told by T. R. McEwen, Public Schools Inspector, that he had received a copy of the booklet with the suggestion that it should be distributed to Oshawa school children.

The Canadian Trades Alphabet—most of the letters in it refer to the quality of a manufactured product—had already been approved in Toronto, stated Mr. McEwen.

Then, it goes on:

And this is an example of the kind of thing members will read:

"G is for General Motors
And GM means 'Good Measure'
We're always planning far ahead
To add to your driving pleasure."

Would the hon. Minister care to comment on that?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: I did not see it this year, but I did last year. It is not authorized by the department; it is entirely a private enterprise, and if School Boards agree to a request to distribute it, we cannot stop it. I am not sure whether it is published in Toronto or not.

MR. D. McM. KERR (Dovercourt): It is not. There was a request for it, but the board refused. It is an American firm which prints it, as a means of advertising, and the board's policy is definitely against any advertising.

MR. SALSBERG: I received a number of complaints several months ago. I have not been able to follow them through, and I am, therefore, conveying a question to the hon. Minister at this time, so he may have the opportunity of answering.

The complaints I received were that quite a number of textbooks used in our schools were American books, rearranged, and are labelled as Canadian editions of those books. I did not have a chance to follow it through. I did not see the books, but I have had a few calls about them.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether to his knowledge, or the knowledge of the department, it is a fact that there are American textbooks merely done up so they can be circulated as Canadian editions, and if so, is the department taking steps to do away with them, and to provide textbooks written by Canadian authors, and produced for Canadian children?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: There are a few of them. It was in the nature of an emergency. Books were needed. The American books looked as if they might be useful with certain changes, and if printed in Canada. They are disappearing and there will be none very shortly.

Votes 46 to 48 inclusive agreed to.
On Vote 49.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Will the hon. Minister tell us something about this "Provincial and Dominion-Provincial Bursaries," in the amount of $320,000? Would the hon. Minister tell us how many recipients there are, and what amounts were contributed by the Federal and Provincial Governments, and how much went to each person?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Chairman, these are most useful bursaries. They assist young people who wish to attend university, the College of Art, a teachers' college, and various other institutions, and they often make just the difference between attending and not attending for a good many young people whose means are supplemented by summer work and that sort of thing.

The Federal Government provides $100,000; this government provides the other $220,000.

Many of these bursaries are granted according to the needs, and whether the recipient lives in the same town as that in which the educational institution he wishes to attend is situated. Sometimes it is $150; sometimes it is $250. Last year, there were 1,536 recipients.

Vote 49 agreed to.

On Vote 50.

MR. P. MANLEY (Stormont): Item 2, "Cost of Education of Non-Resident Pupils," would the hon. Minister explain that?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Perhaps I could do that best by mentioning one or two examples. For many years the department has been paying fees of secondary school pupils in such cases as, let us say, Shuniah Township, in the neighbourhood of Port Arthur, and other unorganized districts where the children are sent into a school in a city or town nearby, but there is no high school in the district and no immediate prospect of having one. That is the case around Kenora, North Bay and a number of those places; Sudbury is an example of it. A hunter friend of mine came to me last autumn, and said that he had been hunting near some lake up in the remote part of Muskoka—if there is a remote part of Muskoka—and a certain guide had been particularly good to my hunter friend, and that guide had a problem; he had a son about 12 years old whom he wanted to send to school, but he had to send him 4 miles. He did not mind that, but the School Board told him that he had to pay fees or he could not send his boy there. The School Board said further, "We will take him in for two weeks, but then you will have to provide fees or take him away." The guide was not able to pay, or felt he should not have to pay, so I made enquiries, and I found that this guide is living in a part of the province where there is no school section at all, and the Department of Education pays the fees for that boy. There are many such cases. It has been increasing in recent years. We will have to find some way to get some of the people in the suburbs of those northern cities, prosperous people, to pay a part, at least, of the cost of secondary school pupils. We have made a little arrangement. We are trying to break the news to them gradually.

MR. MANLEY: Could the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) say how many of those pupils there are in Ontario?

MR. DUNLOP: I am sorry, I did not hear that.

MR. MANLEY: I was wondering if the hon. Minister could give us the number of such pupils, because the item is over $1 million.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Well, there is about $1 million worth of youngsters, I guess.

MR. SALSBERG: That is one baby.

MR. MANLEY: I did not know the hon. Minister was putting a price on them like that.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) a question? On item No. 1, I find the amount is $60 million for "General Legislative Grants." I think we have to remember that a few sessions ago, the basis for awarding the grants was changed, and we were supplied with quite a long chart, which is quite complicated. I wonder if the hon. Minister would agree that that chart should be incorporated into the Educational Report that we are given each year? I looked it over, and I found no record about it.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: I think there is no objection at all to doing that, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CHARTRAND: This would be an easy way to find out.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Yes, we will put it in.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Vote 50, so that no one will ever rise and say that we, in Opposition, had the opportunity and did not utilize it, or that I sat here when it went through, without a murmur, I want to say a word or two on the question of grants.

This is one of the main items in the Estimates, and I want to draw the attention of the government, as I have done in the past, and as other people are trying to do, that the promise of the government to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of education is not being lived up to. In an area like Toronto, the grant is now about 12 per cent. of the cost of education. If the promise of government had been lived up to, if the Toronto area were to receive 50 per cent. of the cost of education, the tax rate in Toronto would drop by many, many mills, and it would constitute one of the greatest assistances to the citizens and the home owners of Toronto. That the feeling to which I give expression now is quite universal was made apparent only a couple of days ago when the Ontario School Trustees Council decided to ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) to increase provincial education grants.

I am quoting from the Globe and Mail of the 22nd of March where the report read as follows:

Meeting Saturday, at the Royal York Hotel, the council appointed a subcommittee to present data to the Prime Minister. A brief prepared by H. A. Dickinson, St. Marys, said that increased educational demands are effected in an unfavourable proportion in municipal taxes on real estate. Sources of municipal taxation are limited, and the continuance of present trends will result in real hardship to municipal taxpayers, which could create embarrassment in the financial standing of municipalities, the brief said.

This resolution, I think, stresses the widespread feeling of the citizens of this province, and the feeling is that the government is fully capable of living up to the promise, and paying 50 per cent. of the cost of education. The government does not do it, and therefore not only reneges on a promise, but also—the burden of educational costs upon that level of government which is least capable of meeting it.

I feel also, Mr. Chairman, at this point, objection should be taken to the continuation of the policy, as expressed by the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) against the so-called “frills” in our school construction. The hon. Minister mentioned earlier this evening, in his introductory remarks—and I think the records should be kept straight—that many municipalities, despite the financial difficulties they are in, are proceeding with their construction programmes that do provide those facilities that are generally recognized as basic and essential, to which the hon. Minister calls “frills.”

In Toronto, for instance, the Lawrence Park Collegiate required $1 million for additional construction work, and this province contributed to that programme the munificent amount of $24,000. Now, you did not cut out the “frills,” Mr. Minister, and I am glad that the Board of Education of Toronto did not cut out those recreational facilities that are so essential for the well-being of our children. I do not consider them “frills.” No Board of Education will consider them “frills.” We need more swimming tanks, more assembly rooms, more recreational facilities in every school. We will then have less corner gangs; we will have less truancy, and less delinquency, and fewer tragic experiences.

At this point, I think I would not be out of place if I were to mention that in my riding, a few months ago, a tragic event took place. A young lad was shot by policemen who found him, and a few of his friends, on private property. It was assumed that they broke in, although the boys who remained alive denied that they did so. I am not defending their presence in the basement of that house or that building, but it is important that the other boys said they were walking around the streets, that the window was open, and they entered it. Now, let us not laugh.

MR. D. M. KERR (Dovercourt): Did they break the window?

MR. SALSBERG: No, the window was open, the boys said.

MR. KERR: Well, he was in.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not saying that they should have gone in. I am not defending the boys. But please let us be reasonable about a matter of this sort. I do want to say, though, that I am convinced—and it is one person's opinion—that if we had more facilities for recreation, and for community activities in the neighbourhood from which that boy came, he and his friends would, perhaps, not have been wandering the streets that Sunday night. And he was a boy who went to the Sunday School around the corner. The head of Knox Church came to the funeral, and mentioned that he was one of their best pupils.

MR. KERR: On Sunday night?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, but after Sunday School services were over. Yes, I want facilities for the young people on Sunday evening—certainly I do, and there is nothing wrong. I want the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Kerr), who made the interjection, to realize that there are many families cramped and crowded together because of the housing shortage, to such a point that the homes they live in provide very little opportunity for recreation or for family life of the sort we all desire.

And let us not too easily dismiss this problem. I say therefore that recreational facilities, gymnasiums and swimming pools are no longer frills, they are essential to our school system, and I feel that this has to be said at this time, when we are dealing with the Estimates of the government.

One could continue much longer on this point, but I think that is enough and I am sure that the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) will not be able to say next year, "You had a chance when the Estimates were up and you never said a word." Let it be recorded that I said everything that the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter), as a member for Toronto, should also have said. He has an area in his riding that requires swimming pools and recreational centres just as much as other areas of other ridings in the cities.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Chairman, if the hon. members will be so kind as to look at some of these Estimates in detail, they will find "physical fitness and recreation, $360,000," they will find appropriations for music, for physical and health education and for summer camps, and if there is anything more we could possibly do under ordinary circumstances to provide for recreation, I do not know just what it could be.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) called them "frills."

HON. MR. DUNLOP: And regarding that promise, Mr. Chairman, back in 1943, at that time the government did undertake, as I understand it, to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of education, and did so. The cost of education was not so very much in those days, and the promise was carried out. The grants for education in the year 1944 totalled $8,700,000. They have gone steadily up from that time, until now, as hon. members will notice in the Estimates, the total for grants is $60,200,000.

Mr. Chairman, circumstances are so different in different municipalities and different localities, whether it is a city with a large number of factories, with a huge industrial assessment and a big population, and it does not seem reasonable that the government should pay as much of the cost of education in that place as it does away up north where money is sometimes scarce. There are places in Ontario where this government pays 92 per cent. of the cost of education, places where it pays 75 per cent., 40 per cent., and so on, according to assessment, according to the wealth of the people. In all places it is calculated according to the population. So I should like to assert—and I think the hon. members of the House will agree—that we are doing a fair thing by the municipalities and by the School Boards.

Vote 50 agreed to.

MR. OLIVER: On the Vote for physical fitness and recreation, is there a corresponding amount given by the Government in Ottawa in this regard?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: In reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, permit me to say that we are reimbursed to the extent of $75,000 by Ottawa.

Vote 51 agreed to.

MR. SALSBERG: On miscellaneous grants—and this is my last rise on the Estimates—it is the only way I can get a banging on the desks, announcing this is the last time, and I say this without prejudice—Mr. Chairman, I will rise to make a plea which I have made to the government on a previous occasion, and I feel called upon to repeat it and to express the hope they will give more favourable attention to this plea than they have done in the past.

It is this: that the government set up a branch for cultural activities in the province.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is the Communist line.

MR. SALSBERG: Culture has become a Communist project. The hon. Attorney-General should be careful of what he labels "Communist." He seems to have been reading "Joe McCarthy" a great deal.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member cannot affect anyone with that line.

MR. SALSBERG: Now the Hydro vice chairman is opposed, the hon. Attorney-General is opposed, and there is only the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Education left to whom to address myself.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Do not let us rush the hon. member on his "culture."

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister is not interested in culture and does not know what it means. He is busy all the time re-winding little motors in the back room of the Hydro.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member wants one in his head.

MR. SALSBERG: Now he is even applauding himself. He likes himself, and is very happy he is alive.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member should get on the right frequency.

MR. SALSBERG: How can he know about frequency? The hon. Minister holds a dropper, and puts drops on the rewound motors.

My appeal is there be set up a branch for cultural activity in the province within the Department of Education, that the government set aside a sum of at least $250,000 a year for that special branch, that the government appoint a director for that branch, and that the purpose of this branch and the task of the director appointed by this government—not by me—will be to help in the development of the arts in all its branches in this province.

Let me say, Mr. Chairman, this is not an outlandish proposition. Like some of my other proposals, you will in time adopt it. I am continuing to hammer at it, and you will gradually begin to realize it. It takes time I know, but I hope it will not take many, many years.

I say that a province as rich as ours should play a far greater role in helping those heroic people who are devoting their lives and their talents to the development of our native culture. It is not to our credit, Mr. Chairman, when one of the outstanding ballets in the country, our own National Ballet, should find it impossible to practice in one place, but be compelled to move around from one location to another in order to develop the talent of those people who are members of the ballet. That is the experience of the National Ballet Co., of which we are so proud.

Last summer, this group was actually trouping around from one public building to another because they could find no hall in the City of Toronto which they could call home to practice in. When they made a frantic appeal for funds—I know when I speak about ballet, I am speaking about a form of art which is not to the liking of every hon. member, but will they please keep quiet about it, and not make it known to the whole world? It is nothing to be proud of, I assure them.

Miss Franca was obliged to appear before audiences at recent performances and appeal to all present to please contribute so that they might continue their tour and bring their arts to the people of this province.

I say, Mr. Chairman, it is not to the credit of this province that it allows a situation of this sort, and it is not to our credit that the Toronto Symphony Orchestra had to, a few weeks ago, go around with "cup in hand" and appeal for contributions, in order to continue.

MR. R. MACAULAY (Riverdale): It is done throughout the world.

MR. SALSBERG: And it is not to our credit when young artists, composers and writers, find it impossible to continue their work because of a shortage of funds, because of a lack of stipends, prizes and scholarships which would enable them to devote themselves to uninterrupted work in their chosen field.

It is not to our credit, nor to the credit of the Dominion Government, when they allow a distiller to save the National Theatre Festival from going under. It was a distiller who saved the situation.

Now Mr. Chairman, I could develop this point much further, but I have spoken on it before, and I am merely bringing the idea again to the attention of the government. You see, Mr. Chairman, we have no excuse for not setting up a branch of this sort. To those who may think I have political motives, let me remind them that all I suggest is that this government do it, appoint a director to decide the stipends and scholarships and prizes, buy works of art, help establish a centre where the Ballet Company can continue its work, where our amateur groups can practice and put on performances, where our composers and ceramic artists can carry on their work. Certainly if I am willing to trust this government, it can trust itself.

You might argue the Federal Government should do more, and I will agree with you. It is true that some of the recommendations of the Massey Commission remain a dead letter, and the government has failed to implement them and to provide the funds recommended. But we can do much more within our province and within our jurisdiction. To the best of my knowledge the Quebec Government is spending more on the native arts than we are in Ontario.

MR. W. H. COLLINGS (Beaches): They have an income tax.

MR. SALSBERG: We can do it without income tax. We have surpluses. We have millions of dollars available at our disposal, and I suggest we take but a fraction of the surplus, a "measly" $250,000, and set it aside for this type of work.

The national Leader of the Conservative Party, when he was Prime Minister, was a person with whom I found it very difficult to get along, but as we all know, Mr. Drew has certain interests in the arts. When I made such a proposal during his presence in the House, he didn't reject it. It would have gone against his reputation to have rejected such proposals, so I found myself in a unique position when the then Prime Minister did not reject them in an outright fashion, but instead, he rose and said, "There are some sound proposals which the hon. member made, and I will consider them."

I appeal to the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Minister of Education to give some leadership in this regard, to chart a new field and set an example to other provinces. I want to assure the hon. Prime Minister that if this were done, it would be to his credit.

The hon. member for Lambton West (Mr. Cathcart) is not very impressed by the proposals I am making, but he will like it in time. A taste for these things must be developed and he will cultivate a taste and eventually like it.

I conclude with an appeal to the hon. Prime Minister to give it serious thought, and I assure him he will find a very large segment of our population—and may I say a very important segment—will appreciate it, and will give him all the support possible. He will do something that will remain to his credit when many other deeds of his will have been forgotten.

The hon. member for Perth (Mr. Edwards) spoke today about the Shakespearean festival. It was a great event and I am glad he spoke of it. Let me tell the hon. members that many things which have happened in the Province of Ontario in 1953, will have been forgotten when the Shakespearean festival will be remembered, because it was a very important cultural innovation, and this province should be proud of it. If the hon. Prime Minister will accept my proposal, he will also be doing something which will be to his lasting credit and to that of his government.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: If hon. members will observe and study these Estimates, I hope they will reach the conclusion that we are doing very much more for culture in this province than has been suggested. Notice the grants we are making to the six principal universities in Ontario—how much of their time and of their energy they are devoting to the arts and to culture is beyond computation. How can we do more for culture in this province than we are doing? This is not a centralized effort. We are not getting it from any one particular source. We are letting the universities do it, the College of Art, and many organizations of that character. These places are fields for culture, and fields for art of the best kind.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Minister agree to call a conference in the near future of all recognized and established professional associations and discuss this problem with them—meet all the Ontario Societies of the arts, of music, of the dance, and of the drama, and talk over this problem with them, and seek to arrive at an understanding which will help to implement the proposals they will make to him?

Vote No. 53 agreed to.

Vote No. 54 agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: That ends the Department of Education Estimates. While the House is in a state of exhaustion, I would like to take the miscellaneous Estimates at the very end of the book. That, I may say, is not a sort of "catch all"; it is purely bookkeeping entries. There is $100,000 for miscellaneous revenues on ordinary account, and $150,000 on capital account.

I have explained this item year after year. No one has been able to understand it, including myself. It is the place where the hon. Minister of Education, for instance, when he referred to "payments from Ottawa"—passed them through that account.

Next year that item will not appear in the Estimates. A different provision is being made. It always seems to me that item is entirely out of place. This is the last year in which it will appear.

Vote 184 agreed to.

Vote 185 agreed to.

MR. SALSBERG: How much money is in it?

HON. MR. FROST: $250,000, not a cent of which will be spent. It never seems to me to have any relation to the accounts.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the committee begs to report progress and moves for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before moving the adjournment of the House, I would move that tomorrow the House shall meet at 2 o'clock for the purpose of adjourning at 5 o'clock, due to an arrangement which affects the press.

Therefore, Mr. Speaker, I move that when this House adjourns the present sitting thereof, it shall stand adjourned until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and that rule 2 of the Assembly in that regard be waived.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: The debate on the budget will continue tomorrow afternoon, with the possibility that we shall take the first part of the Health Estimates, or do some work on the Order paper. We shall listen to the speeches first.

I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11.36 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 24, 1954

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Today we have as our guests in the galleries, the students of the Picton Collegiate Institute, brought here with the assistance of the members of the Picton Rotary Club, and His Worship, the Mayor of that community.

Also, the students from the Dovercourt Hobby School, and the Downsview Public School, both of Toronto.

Later on, we are to have as our guests, 22 exchange teachers and 4 members of the executive of the League of British Commonwealth and Empire teachers. This group will be entertained by Mrs. Davies, assisted by other ladies, in our apartment. I am not now extending an invitation to hon. members to join that group, because I am afraid we would not have a quorum if I did.

We are happy to welcome students to our Assembly day after day, and we hope you have enjoyed what you have learned so far, and that you will continue in knowledge and understanding as we continue with our session this afternoon.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. H. E. BECKETT: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Beckett, from the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, presents the following as the Second Report of that committee:

Your Standing Committee on Municipal Law begs leave to present the following as its Second Report:

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 51. The Telephone Act, 1954.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. CLARE MAPLEDORAM: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Second Report of the Standing Committee on Mines and moves its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Mapledoram, from the Standing Committee on Mining, presents the Committee's Second Report, as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bills without amendment:

Bill No. 95. An Act to amend The Public Utilities Act.

Bill No. 96. An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act.

Bill No. 97. An Act to amend The Gas Pipe Lines Act, 1951.

Bill No. 98. An Act Respecting Persons Who Bore or Drill Wells for Water.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. W. E. BRANDON: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the Third and final Report of the Standing Committee on Education and moves its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Brandon, from the Standing Committee on Education, presents the Committee's Third and final Report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

Bill No. 87, An Act to amend The Teachers' Superannuation Act.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.
Introduction of bills.

THE CEMETERIES ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Cemeteries Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I would like to say at the outset, this bill will be referred to the Committee on Health, and it is drawn according to the recommendations given us by the Select Committee of the Whole House.

I would like to offer the congratulations of the government, and particularly the Department of Health, to the chairman of this committee, the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan), and, in fact, to each member of this committee, for the way they went about gathering evidence, and the use of parliamentary procedure at all their meetings. They certainly studied this from every point of view, and brought in some very, very sound recommendations. The amendment has to do with four things.

(1) For the establishment of a Cemetery Advisory Board.

(2) For the designation of inspectors.

(3) For the licencing of persons who sell cemetery lots, and

(4) For the supervision and investment of perpetual care funds and for the passing of accounts in respect to such funds.

THE THEATRES ACT

MR. HARRY NIXON moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Theatres Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Would the hon. member please make a few observations?

MR. NIXON: Mr. Speaker, this is a very simple bill, consisting of two sections.

The first section provides that no class "C" or drive-in theatre may be licenced in a township without the approval of the council of the township.

The second section repeals clause "B" of section 19 of the Act, which now provides that "no municipality may refuse to licence a theatre when a licence therefor was issued under the Act." That section will be repealed by this bill, if it carries.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I would like to table answer to question No. 54.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. H. F. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine): Mr. Speaker, I am not going to speak on termites, bad bacon, or pigs with curly tails, I am going to speak and vote for the Estimates as set out, plus any amendments which are favourable.

As I did last year, I am going to offer some timely suggestions:

First of all, the budget brought down is a credit to any government—$360 million with a surplus of $58 million is indeed a great achievement. But, may I ask, is this budget appreciated by the public at large? Have 100 people written congratulations? Have 50 people, have 10 people? How many have had 5 letters or phone calls out of 5 million people? I venture to say not one.

It was Julius Cæsar who said: "Brutus, why do you hate me? What have I done for you?" That is exactly the way the municipalities appreciate it. And you know what happened to Cæsar! Next week the Mayors and Reeves Association will be having a meeting and demanding that more grants be given them to relieve the poor taxpayer. All year you will be having delegations demanding more and more. It is the method which is not right. We operate by the subsidation or grant method. But just wait until the "sour revenue" starts to fall and we have to cut down on the grants. That is when the trouble will start.

The only way that any government can overcome the difficulty is to gradually take one field of endeavour in its entirety. For example, education, and leave welfare to the municipalities, but I believe that they will readily agree so that credit then can be placed where credit is due. This would have to be accomplished by degrees—you cannot snatch candy from a baby.

In passing a budget of this size, $360 million, one approaches it like an already filled-up Boston Bull pup, walking forward for its dish of Pard. The mere thought of so much money almost overwhelms one. I remember, when I was just made an alderman and we used to pass the budget amounting to $80 million, we had to go over it item by item. We were also invited to sit in with the Board of Control and help them with the Estimates. I remember when I was at the drugstore at Bloor and Yonge, I used to go back to the store at night and spread the newspaper out on the dispensary in the back of the shop. I would look over the news: "City Council Gives $2 Million to the Toronto University." Then, I would look out of the peek-hole into the front of the shop and there would be a woman much too fat looking at the chocolate bars. Then she would say: "I take that one," so, I'd ring up a sale of 5c. on the cash register and then go back and read the paper: "City Council Gives $1 Million to the Sick Children's Hospital." Goodness, did I do that? By this time, another customer comes in and I ring up another cash sale: One Coca Cola and a stick of gum, 10c. The world certainly is topsy-turvy when it comes to finances. However, that is the way it is.

I must say a back bencher has not much opportunity to say what goes in the budget and what stays out. For example: The Greater Toronto Business Men's Association was formed, which is made up of the presidents of 13 business men's associations. The purpose of which is to give guidance to their representatives on the Metropolitan Council, and in general see that Bill 80 works out a success. Where there is dissension in various communities, it will try to iron them out before they get to the rambunctious stage as many of the deputations do before our committees here.

Mr. Alfred Cowling (High Park) and I were delegated to call on hon. Mr. Dunbar and ask him for $5,000 to help defray expenses of the organization. We were also delegated to ask the Metropolitan Council for $5,000. With this sum, we would set up an office and really go to work. Mr. Arthur Lascelles of the Metropolitan Council told us by letter that the council did not have the power to make such a grant but he hoped legislation would be brought forward as they have many other requests. The hon. Mr. Dunbar said he would see us, but he was not in favour of making such a grant as then every business men's organization would be after him for a donation. With that attitude, I ask you, where can you get?

In looking into our future as far as finances are concerned, it is a little hard to prognosticate. In the United States the consumption of cigarettes fell 2 per cent. and will likely drop again this year. On the other hand, the consumption of beer has increased due to people staying at home and looking at television. I believe the Liquor Control Board is doing as good a job as it is humanly possible. It is impossible to please everybody. The new liquor stores opening up are clean and dignified. So are the new brewers' warehouses with their large parking lots and I see no need of selling beer and wines in grocery stores as advocated by one Liberal member, Mr. Wren. The policy might be acceptable to a few, but not to the public at large. I met one of the executives, the other day, of a large candy and cake chain. I said to him: "I see you have amalgamated with another firm." He said: "Yes, business is not what it used to be. Years ago a husband would buy his wife a box of candy Saturday night, but now the style is to be thin so he takes home a case of beer instead and they watch the television." In some respects this is not a good thing. We have a population here of 5 million people and we have population in jail of 5,000, according to the Select Committee Report on Penal Reform. Whereas, in Spain they have a population of 29 million with only 28 thousand in the jails.

I have an idea that excessive drinking in Ontario has something to do with it. When you sit and look at the television and they flash on the screen that cold bubbling beer, it is no wonder the consumption goes up. But, the point is this: Our children see these advertisements and mothers and fathers sit drinking the beer. France, for example, is nearly down and out due to the drinking in the small towns and villages which should be the backbone of the country. The point I am trying to make is that we are up against the tough proposition of how to keep it in its proper place. I am certain that no one here would deprive a man or woman of a glass of beer, but it is the excessive drinking which fills our jails and ultimately our old folks' homes. Man is supposed to be temperate in all things. I think the education must come in the homes. I was brought up in a very Christian atmosphere. We had family prayer every Sunday, but now, with the noise of the radio and television and the phone, it has been done away with.

I must say in my closing remarks that a $58 million surplus is a lot of money. I believe if I made that amount of money I would immediately take off for Mexico, the way those income tax fellows hound you. No bailiff would be tougher. With my small income, I had the income tax inspectors in the other day. Two fellows about 6 feet 3 inches. They approached my desk, one foot at a time, holding up a card. With one accord, they said, "We are special income tax inspectors." By this time, I had slumped almost under the desk, only my head showing. So, with an income of $50 million, one would have to have nerves of steel. Yes, income tax is a killer. Not only to the rich, but to the poor. I have a salesman. He lives in a taxpayer's house in North York. You go in the back door because he has not the money, as yet, to cut the front door in. He has 6 boys. Well, last year he had a good year, made $10,000, so, I said to him: "Russ, why don't you pay off that 10 per cent. second mortgage and pull your foot out of the mud?" So, that was what he did. But, this year has been poor and he has to pay last year's income tax. Well, the poor fellow has lost his car to meet payments and they have garnished his drawing account. Every time the phone rings, he winces in his seat. No second mortgage holder could be as tough as that.

Well, we are talking about the wrong budget, but I only point out these things to show this huge budget of $360 million only reflects the prosperity of our people as a whole.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which would fairly shake you off your seat, but I cannot get a seconder.

MR. SALSBERG: (St. Andrew): I might second it.

MR. FISHLEIGH: This is a good motion, but I would just as soon the hon. member for St. Andrew did not second it. It is too good.

Here in Ontario we have been paying a bonus to our citizens for years, but getting no thanks. Ontario is the wealthiest province of all, yet Alberta, which is steeped in oil, is planning to pay a bonus to its citizens. We have been practicing Social Credit for years—we call it Municipal Grants. The plan I have to offer is a matter of bookkeeping. It will not change the budget of Ontario. If we give away $134 million per year, why not give it direct to the citizens—if we have 4 million people entitled to vote in Ontario, the bonus for each individual would be $33 each year.

Now, how would I give the money away? Simply this way: if a School Board, Hospital Board or an institution were entitled to dollars, the money would be made payable to the School Board, but the cheques would be sent to the citizens who would endorse them over to the School Board, etc. In this way our citizens would become acquainted with the good deeds this government is doing.

AN HON. MEMBER: Did you think you would get a seconder for that?

MR. SALSBERG: I withdraw.

MR. FISHLEIGH: I am very pleased.

Hon. members may say this is too much work. The Dominion Government sends out cheques each month for baby bonus and old-age pension. Surely we could send out these cheques once a year.

Mr. Speaker: Hang on to your hat! The amendment to the motion is as follows—if I had a seconder!

That this government, during the coming year, give study to the possibilities of paying a bonus to each citizen in Ontario who is qualified to vote. This bonus to be equal to the amount given to the municipalities, schools and institutions, etc. The said sum to be made payable to the municipalities, schools, etc. The owner and holder of the cheque to endorse it over to the school, institution or benefiting municipality.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks on the budget. I want to speak on a subject which arose yesterday morning in a meeting of the Lands and Forests Committee. I want to say something for the good people of Hearst, one of our northern towns. I lived in that country 40 years ago. There was a very good presentation of their case made before our committee yesterday, and I think it deserves some consideration. They wish to be allowed to export pulpwood up to the amount of 30,000 cords, which is a small item in a community where, according to available reports, they have 3 million cords. Of course, there is bound to be some opposition from the big pulp companies. When they want to buy pulp, they buy it wherever they choose, with the idea of conserving their own resources. But I think the people who want to sell pulpwood should be given the right to sell it.

I do not believe in the idea that we should send all our pulpwood to the United States. We would never have built up our own huge mills and given employment to so many people if we had adopted that policy. But I think there should be some happy medium. When people buy a tract of timber for saw-mill purposes and are forced to cut down to a 3-inch top, they have to dispose of the smaller wood which could be used as pulpwood. The pulp companies complain they cannot get a market for their product. They should be given a chance. The large companies want to buy their pulpwood where they can get it the cheapest, and are forcing the smaller companies to sell at a ridiculously low price. The smaller companies should be permitted to sell in a market of their own choosing and where they can get the best possible price.

I wish now to turn to the subject of horse racing, bookmakers and sweepstakes. My idea about bookmakers is perhaps a little different from that of other hon. members. In my opinion, they should be out in the open. I suppose in the City of Toronto today, there are between 3,000 and 4,000 bookmakers, all of them under cover. What we want to see in this country, is the transaction of these affairs, whenever possible, made in the open. The hotels, and other places are all under government supervision. Why should not the bookmakers also be?

Why should a man not get a licence for a "book," the same as for any other business? Bookmaking will be carried on no matter how hard you try to stop it. I do not think it can be stopped. Many people like to bet on the horses once in a while. I think there should be a different method from that which is followed today. Running after the little fellow who takes a $2 bet, and letting the "big shots" take $5,000 bets in hotel rooms, is no good.

I think the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon) made an investigation of the sweepstakes in Ireland. I may have the wrong impression of this matter, but how many people in Toronto, and in Ontario, buy sweepstake tickets? Why should we not have sweepstakes in the Province of Ontario? I understand of all that money collected, only a very small percentage—about 10 per cent.—actually goes to hospitals. I believe we could run a sweepstake on a race at the Woodbine in Toronto and help our hospitals, by giving them a substantial portion of the money received.

Many people seem to be afraid to speak about these things, but I am not. I am not afraid to speak about anything which I think is right.

I have one or two other items about which I want to speak. I do not think we should have to pay for conversion of the hydro lines in Eastern Ontario. Fortunately, down in Eastern Ontario, we have 60-cycle, and do not have to do any changing of our equipment at all, and I do not think the Hydro should ask us to pay for it. The people in Western Ontario enjoyed Hydro for years before we did, but now we are expected to help them pay for conversion.

I do not think we should have to pay anything at all. They tell me it is only a small percentage, but I do not see any reason why we should pay any percentage whatsoever.

We expect to have a boom in our iron-ore business in Renfrew. The Algoma Steel Company has taken up their option there and the future looks very bright for that industry. We will need good roads. We expect the traffic will be tremendous down there, and I hope the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) will see to it that our roads are in good condition for this great boom in the iron-ore business.

I want to say a word in defence of the "highways irregularities." I do believe you can blame only one man in this Government for the roads scandal, and it is not the hon. Minister at all. It is the Deputy Minister of Highways who is responsible for anything which has happened. It is not the "little fellow" at all, it is the Deputy Minister who looks after the actual work, under the hon. Minister. The hon. Minister does not know anything about the clerical end of the work. I want to back up the hon. Minister. I say there should be no reflection on him, because half the people in the country do not understand the situation.

It is not the "little fellow," it is not the hon. Minister. The man who is responsible for carrying on the business is the Deputy Minister. Do not even blame the contractors. Who would not take all they can get?

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, speaking on this budget debate today, I have a few remarks I first want to make about my constituency, and on matters which are important to those people.

I would like to read a news item to the hon. member of York East (Mr. Beckett) which appeared in the Globe and Mail this morning, dated March 23rd, Tokyo.

Kenora Thistles drubbed Waseda University, 17-1, tonight in the opener of a 10-game series in Japan by the Canadian team. Kenora is Western Canada intermediate champion of 1953.

I have approached the hon. Minister of Travel and Publicity (Mr. Cecile) on 2 or 3 occasions, to see if he might help the citizens of the Kenora district who have financed this trip, to see if he might be of some financial assistance to us in carrying on the good name of Ontario and the good name of Canada.

I repeat what I said in the House the other day, if his Worship the Mayor of Toronto would give us a small portion of that $5,000 he is willing to give the Maple Leafs, we would be glad to charter an aircraft, and send the boys to Moscow, to do something about that other situation.

I would like to speak about one matter regarding highways, but not the main subject of my remarks. That is, the matter of highways snowploughing in the northern districts. There was a great deal of confusion about this, and I am very glad the hon. member for Renfrew South (Mr. Dempsey) made some pertinent remarks as he concluded, because they bear out something which I might have to say on the situation.

Despite the continued imposition of the Provincial Lands Tax, which in some parts of the unorganized territory amounts to more than any tax which the same people would pay in municipalities, the Department of Highways initiated a policy—or at least issued a declaration—some months ago to the effect that they were going to terminate the snowploughing of roads other than King's Highways.

After some considerable difficulty I finally received a letter from the Deputy Minister of Highways, dated December 31st, 1953. On page 2, the letter outlined finally what the department's policy might be in this regard. For the benefit of the many people in the district who had enquired about this important subject over many weeks, people in industry, Statute Labour Boards and those in isolated parts of the district, etc., I was able to pass on what I thought was an intelligent interpretation of the department's policy in this regard. On January 8th, 1954, I sent out to all the people interested a mimeographed copy of the letter I had received from the Deputy Minister of Highways.

The letter was no sooner in the mail, than the following notice appeared in the newspapers as a paid advertisement. It said that the local Conservative Association had received the following wire that morning:

Minister of Highways informs me private road ploughing will be carried out immediately, as in the past.

This advertisement appeared on January 9th, 1954, and indicated that the hon. Minister of Highways had intimated that the letter of the Deputy Minister of December 31st, 1953, was of no effect. It has created, therefore, a very strange situation, because, as I said, it took some months to get an opinion on the subject from the department, and then when the opinion was secured, the local Conservative Association apparently—and I do not say "officially," but apparently—under authority of the hon. Minister advises the public at large that the statement of the Deputy Minister is not correct. It does make one wonder who might be running the department.

One other subject about which I wish to speak for a few minutes, is something I have raised in this House each year, and that is the work of the Standing Committees of this House. I was pleased that, in the past two sessions, the hon. Prime Minister has gradually agreed to more and more work being passed on to the Standing Committees, but we still have the difficulty of several committees meeting at the same time. I do not think any hon. member of the Opposition, and certainly many hon. members of the government, can intelligently follow the work of these committees when they are meeting at the same time each day the House sits.

I do not know why, if necessary, these sessions cannot be extended so that the work of these committees can be properly attended to.

I agreed, in principle, with the remarks of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) when he said the other day that each committee chairman, when reporting to the House on a subject as to approval or disapproval by committees, should indicate what the basis of that report might be; in other words, to report to this House all the opinions in a general way which were expressed for or against a particular piece of legislation. Because it is impossible to attend all committees, and therefore the hon. members of the House who cannot be there must perfunctorily adopt a motion to approve the work of the committee.

I am particularly disappointed, too, Mr. Speaker, that one important Standing Committee of this House does not see fit to meet, that is the Labour Committee of this House. I think it is fundamentally one of the most important committees of the House, and certainly labour people in the province make up an important segment of our population, and I cannot understand why the hon. members of this House cannot have the benefit of the experience and the suggestions and advice which might come from people in the labour ranks and people in industry, who might want to have informal discussions on labour matters.

I do not subscribe, as does the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Kerr), to the opinion that members of the labour unions are like the cuckoo birds, and the leaders of labour groups are "parasites." They certainly are not, because they make up, in the main, some of the most responsible people and some of the most honourable people who live in this country.

On the question of labour I have some remarks I want to make, and while I am not given to speaking from notes or reading speeches, I am going to follow my remarks on this subject fairly closely because I do not want to be misunderstood in what I might say.

I sincerely believe that there should be a clear line of division between labour and management. The efficiency of the one balanced against the efficiency of the other can only result in good for all of us. Industry has certain security guarantees—so should labour.

The voluntary revocable check-off seems to be an essential part of union security, and it is indeed regrettable that the check-off should have become the issue in the northern mining strikes and perhaps that issue may not have developed had the unions divorced themselves of politics.

As a man of lifelong association with labour, and as one who is proud of the accomplishments of our labour unions, I cannot help but repeat what I have said many times in the past, that the trade union movement courts serious delays in its progress when it becomes directly associated with a particular political Party.

I think the fear behind negotiations in the mining strikes was a fear of a guarantee of funds to a socialistic political Party rather than an apprehension of a measure of security to a valid trade union. One has only to look at Britain to assess the fearful consequences, both to the worker and to industry, of direct political ties of the trade union movement. There are many sound labour union leaders in Britain today who realize that their destiny lies in the representation of their workers, rather than in the plunging of their members into a political field—in other words they realize that a compulsory check-off of political dues is becoming less and less acceptable.

I do not suggest that union members should not participate in politics but I do suggest that a member of a trade union should be free to make his own choice of political association and that dues collected by check-off (compulsory or voluntary) should not be used for political purposes.

It is no coincidence that the leaders of the mining strike were CCF in stripe. There is no doubt that some leaders looked more to self-perpetuation than to the interests of the mine workers. There is no doubt that the newly-elected leader of the CCF Party in Ontario will indirectly use a portion of dues of many workers to tell only the CCF message, together with the $10 the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope) gave.

I believe the voluntary revocable check-off to be a deserved right of trade unions to bring a measure of security and increased efficiency to their organizations and I will support that principle. I do say, however, that the individual members of those unions should take care that there is then no compulsory check-off of a portion of dues collected by voluntary check-off for political purposes of one Party. If each card-carrying member wishes to pay to support of the coffers of any political Party I will say "you are a good citizen—you support a Party of your choice."

As a matter of fact, the very fundamental weakness of political action of trade unions is the association of that action with one Party. And while it is soft pedalled now, the real object of CCF leaders is nationalization and when the state becomes the boss the worker is the first to lose hard-won freedoms.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Could I put a question, please?

MR. WREN: So I would say in all earnestness to our labour organizations—go forward in your good work and we will support you, but in the interests of your own welfare and safety I entreat you to retain the right always to accept or reject a political person or a political Party.

There are people in the north who are well aware of the plight of the gold industry and of the workers in that industry. There is a large section of our population dependent upon that industry, a section composed of many walks of life whose incomes are no greater than the miners, but who, like the miners, are eager to advance their lot. But it might well be better to concede a point now, and wise men often retreat to re-form, rather than place one's life and one's destiny in the hands of an unknown and an untried political group.

So I say to labour, "Go after the check-off; you need it; you can use it wisely, but be careful you retain the right to support by ballot and by material things the CCF, the Liberals, or the Tories, as your own common sense dictates. If the CCF has a programme which appeals to you, they do not need a compulsory check-off of your dues to succeed." The CCF is aware, however, that they cannot get the funds they need without a slice of union dues, because so far they have not produced a policy which the individual worker is willing to buy.

There is one inescapable fact which the CCF group does not tell labour about. That is the truth that the great and fearless leaders who built the trade union movement did not associate their members with any one political Party. The direction of their support is indicated by the results of national elections and by the changes which took place from time to time.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Would the hon. member (Mr. Wren) permit a question?

MR. WREN: I have quite a lengthy address, Mr. Speaker.

Now, Mr. Speaker, over the week-end—

HON. MR. PORTER: Everybody else answers questions.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): I guess we do not count.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Perhaps he cannot answer the question.

MR. WREN: I am not averse to answering questions, but I wanted to finish my address, to save the time of the House. When I conclude, I will be glad to answer any question—or try to.

Over the week-end, the hon. Minister of Highways took exception to and issued a challenge, according to the press, to me to make statement in the Legislature which the press reported I had made outside this House.

I am glad to accede to the request, and I submit herewith, a clear statement of my opinions on this highways trouble.

First of all, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister of Highways has yet to make a statement on this problem since he was quoted by the press as declaring the problem to be a "one division" investigation involving only a few thousand dollars. Since subsequent events have indicated that such is not the case, it is the responsibility of the hon. Minister of Highways to report fully to this House.

Likewise, it is the responsibility of the Provincial Auditor, as I understand his obligations, to report on these matters to this House particularly as they affect practices and policies of any department. In the absence of the reports of those two responsible officers (the Minister and the Provincial Auditor) and in view of the keen public interest in this matter, it is necessary to proceed as members of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition with investigations of our own along avenues which are not already closed. My own conscience will not permit me to contain questions which this House and the public should hear answered and I refer particularly to questions concerning policy rather than information at this time concerning irregularities. It is not my intention to condone or to protect any person who may have committed an offence while in the employ of this department; they must accept full responsibility for failure to resign their posts if the policies which were followed were not agreeable to them. On the other hand, the government and particularly the hon. Minister of Highways must accept responsibility for policy which may have made any alleged irregularities possible, policy which developed a wide area in which irregularities could take place.

It is now no secret that the aggregate total of tenders bids accepted, subtracted from the aggregate total of final costs on contracts represents a very impressive sum of money and these wide variations are not confined to particular divisions. They may be a few thousand or many millions of dollars. There is the clear indication that there has been, in many instances, a very definite absence of proper pre-engineering of jobs and that estimated quantities have borne strange relation to actual quantities submitted for payment. The practice of any Minister of the Crown in accepting the lowest bid of any responsible bidder is sound. But I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the lowest bids accepted, in many cases, bore no relation to reality, and that examination by any responsible professional engineer would have produced in many cases, and in many jobs, the immediate statement that a job could not be completed for the amount bid, and evidence before the proposed Select Committee will show how true that statement is.

The point here is that the division engineer and the field engineers do not award contracts. The award of a contract or the selection of the lowest responsible bidder for award of contract is the final responsibility of the Minister of Highways, and before that responsibility is discharged he should assure himself that the Estimates of his own department are within reasonable engineering bounds. I submit, Mr. Speaker, that the Minister was either misinformed by his staff or without advice of competent staff proceeded with awards of contracts at impossible figures. It was there that the area was created to make possible certain improper practices. Contractors reached a point where their funds were exhausted and in order to complete the project had to seek adjustments to compensate them toward completion of the work. It was then that professional engineering staffs had to make adjustments or reclassify contracts as to quantities of one kind of material as against quantities of a higher priced material and we do not know whether these reclassifications were carried out under instructions of the Minister of Highways or his authorized representative, or were carried out by negotiation between engineers and the contractors affected.

It does not seem possible that this activity could have taken place in so many contracts without the hon. Minister being aware that it was being done. If the hon. Minister was not aware that reclassification of quantities of material was taking place, then I submit that he was not paying proper attention to the administration of his department.

Meanwhile, the questioning of engineers and other staff commenced both by the Provincial Auditor's Department and by the Department of Highways. Engineers came away from these sessions in extended confusion for practices which had seemingly been accepted now became, to some officials, unacceptable and the impression seemed to develop that their thinking should be channelled along the line that the only wrong committed was that certain miscalculations had been made and that a few had taken advantage of an opportunity for personal gain. These men met in the Westminster Hotel and in other places to hear incomprehensible explanations and could only conclude that they should think that which they did not believe and could only conclude that an attempt at "brainwashing" was being made.

I have personally interviewed engineers both within and without the department. I have talked to contractors who have, and who have not, worked for the department and I cannot find a conclusion from any of them but that the circumstances which have developed were inevitable due to the policies of the department issued from Queen's Park.

I now repeat that the policies are the responsibility of the Minister and it is the Minister and the Minister alone who must explain to this House why he permitted a practice to develop or continue which was unsound from an engineering standpoint and which left so much opportunity for breach of trust and possible manipulation.

But let us forget the words "scandal," "fraud," "swindle," and so on, and dwell for a moment on this important aspect of the problem. Without having to in any way affect the course of trials against accused and without in any way affecting the course of possible civil trials the hon. Minister of Highways could have provided this House with a clear outline of the policies of the department in these matters. Then the members of this House and the people of Ontario would have been better equipped to fairly assess the situation, for if the policy was sound and sensible and without possibility of creating areas of serious wrongdoing, and that there was within that policy every known precaution to deter alteration of contract basis, then the people would have supported your present method of determination of the problem. Alternately, the thinking is widespread that someone might be coasting attention only upon those who allegedly committed offenses instead of turning the light upon the persons and conditions which made those alleged misdemeanours possible.

Now we are in the position of correcting a very unhealthy situation and of ensuring that it shall not happen again. Perhaps members of the Opposition should have been much more aggressive in the last 5 years in examining activities of this department. Nevertheless, it is the duty of the Opposition to now reveal the problem fully in all its apparent phases and guarantee to the public that, not only will the present situation be cleaned up satisfactorily, but that proper safeguards will be established to guarantee that it will not happen again.

I suggested in Windsor last night that I would urge the Liberal Party to press for the formation of an Ontario Highways Commission, headed by a professional engineer of at least 20 years' good standing in his profession and paid a salary equal to his abilities and responsibilities. The Vice-Chairman should be the Minister of Highways of the government of the day and the third member one appointed from the Opposition of the day, at a salary equal to that of the Minister. An advisory committee, composed of leaders in highways association, highway users, municipal groups, labour and industry would be appointed to recommend, review and advise the commission, the Cabinet and the Ministers of the Legislature. With this kind of commission, present troubles could not have developed. If appointed now, it will prevent recurrence of these difficulties and further establish policies and practices as free as humanly possible of political machinations in highway matters.

At the present moment, it is the direct responsibility of the hon. Minister of Highways to fully report to this House on the policies and practices of his department under his stewardship. I full well realize that the hon. Minister suffered unfortunate injuries which kept him from his desk for a long period and his concurrence with some policies may have therefore been tacit only. Nevertheless, he is responsible to make full and complete report so that the Select Committee to be appointed and all the hon. members of this House will be fully aware of the policy in effect over the whole period of difficulty so that this Committee and the House will be able to properly analyze irregular activities in the light of policies in effect.

My responsibility in this matter is not to the hon. Minister but to the Select Committee and the Legislature, because I submit the Legislature is supreme.

Therefore, I will produce evidence, supported by reliable witnesses, before the committee after the hon. Minister has clearly stated the policy under which his officials have conducted their responsibilities, and after the Provincial Auditor has reported his findings on the policies in effect, before this House, or before the Select Committee.

The Minister, I submit, and the Minister alone—not the hon. Prime Minister, nor anyone else—must make this report, and, Mr. Speaker, if for any reason he is not willing or is unable to do so, then he should step down until the Select Committee has reported on this matter to this House.

MR. JOHN ROOT (Wellington North): Mr. Speaker: At the outset of my remarks I want to say that it is a pleasure to sit in this Legislature under your fair and impartial direction. I want to express my regret that the hon. Minister of Agriculture is unable to be in his seat. I trust that he may soon be back directing the affairs of his department. I welcome two new members. Their victory at the polls was a personal tribute and a vote of confidence in the government.

A few days ago we listened to a wonderful Budget Address. After listening to that address, the 11th in a series of such addresses, it is not hard to understand why the people of Ontario vote confidence in this government at every opportunity.

The hon. Prime Minister as Provincial Treasurer has established a record that has never been equalled in Ontario, 11 budgets, everyone balanced, with a surplus. The per capita debt has dropped from $126.71 to $123.91. This is the 6th year in which there have been minor tax reductions. Ontario has about the lowest provincial tax structure of any of the provinces. We have no sales tax. Our gasoline tax is 2c. to 4c. per gallon less than that in 5 of the provinces. At the same time the budget is highlighted with special grants for hospitals, cancer research, Canadian Institute for the Blind, education, teachers and civil service superannuation. This budget will make Ontario a better place in which to live.

Mr. Speaker, I want to refer to some of the problems that confront the rural people in general, and some problems that affect the people of Wellington North and Dufferin in particular.

The constituency that I represent comprises two-thirds of Wellington County and two-thirds of Dufferin County. It is, I think, the finest rural riding in the Province of Ontario. It is a rural riding that is feeling the impact of the great industrial expansion that is taking place in this province.

The Department of Highways, by the generous grants and subsidies it provides, has made rural Ontario a much more attractive place in which to live. Most municipalities are now able to keep roads open for motor traffic 12 months of the year. This makes for a more speedy transportation of the produce of the farm: milk, livestock, fruits and vegetables, poultry and eggs. This improved transportation makes it possible to provide a better product for the consumer. Open roads have made it possible to operate school buses and give the rural children the advantage of a secondary education—something that was difficult to provide before the very generous provincial grants provided by this government made it possible for municipalities to keep their roads open 12 months of the year.

In the year ending March 31st, 1943, the total road subsidy to the municipalities was $3,589,480.73. Similar figures for the year ending March 31st, 1953 was $29,699,222.48. For the current fiscal year it is estimated that the assistance will be in excess of $31 million.

In the fiscal year 1942-1943, the expenditure on King's Highways and secondary roads was $15,027,706.54. For the same purpose the expenditure in 1952-1953 was $84,691,385.39.

The people of my constituency would want me to say to the hon. Minister of Highways: "We appreciate what you and your department have done to improve the King's Highway system in Wellington North and Dufferin. We appreciate the very generous assistance you have given to our local councils for the maintenance and construction of the roads in our counties, townships, towns and villages."

Mr. Speaker, about 1937 the government of that day added some 2,000 miles to the King's Highway system in Ontario. For some unexplained reason they brought a number of highways to the border of Wellington North and there they ended. I could mention No. 25 coming north from Burlington to Acton; No. 19 from Stratford to Tralee; No. 89 from Cookstown to Primrose; No. 87 from the Lake Huron area to Harriston; No. 23 from the London area to Palmerston with a branch down to Teviotdale. It must be a great source of irritation to tourists and others using these highways to come to the end of pavement and realize that, if they are going to jump the gap which is Wellington North, they must travel on the gravelled country roads. Heavy provincial traffic using the county road system places a burden of taxation on the people of Wellington North and Dufferin, that does not seem quite fair. We realize that this situation was not created by this government, but we hope that this government will find a way to correct this situation at an early date.

Agriculture is the basic industry in the constituency that I have the honour to represent. When Agriculture is faced with difficulties, it affects every line of business in the community. Farm people today are faced with a steady increase in the cost of production, and at the same time a steady decline in the value of the products they have to sell.

Mr. Speaker, to give you some idea of the increase in the cost of operating a farm, I will quote from "Agricultural Statistics for Ontario, year 1952." Using 1935-39 as a base, calling it "100," we find some very interesting facts. We find the following increases had taken place by 1952:

The cost of taxes and interests had increased	152.4 per cent.
The cost of gasoline, oil and grease had increased	170.9 per cent.
The cost of fertilizer had increased.....	183.0 per cent.
The cost of farm machinery had increased	193.2 per cent.
The cost of hardware had increased.....	199.5 per cent.
The cost of farm family living had increased.....	208.2 per cent.
The cost of equipment and materials had increased	216.3 per cent.
The cost of feed had increased	230.2 per cent.
The cost of commodities and services had increased	231.8 per cent.
The cost of seed had increased.....	242.0 per cent.
The cost of building materials had increased	275.6 per cent.
The cost of farm wages had increased	436.7 per cent.
The cost of binder twine had increased	456.6 per cent.

These are the latest figures available and there is nothing to indicate that there is any over-all change in the trend for increased cost of operating farms.

What about the other side of the picture? In 1951, farm prices hit a peak and the downward trend started to develop. To give you some idea of what is taking place I will quote from the same statistical report.

	1951	1952
The value of milch cows	$296.00 per head	$227.89
The value of other cattle.....	165.50 per head	134.40
The value of sheep and lambs.....	34.46 per head	28.68
The value of swine (allages).....	39.87 per head	27.28
The value of poultry.....	1.50 a piece	.88
The value of wool.....	.80c. lb.	.35c. lb.
Total value of milk production.....	164,852.00	161,751.00
Total value of principal field crops ...	383,137,000.00	338,572,000.00

A drop of approximately $45 million.

These are the latest figures available, but we all know that farm prices are still following the downward trend that started in 1951.

I think every member in this House realizes that a condition of this kind cannot continue indefinitely without having a serious effect on our whole economy. I hope that the leaders of industry, business, and labour realize that they have a responsibility to the farm people as well as to their own particular groups. If our economy is to remain sound, the prices of all commodities must be kept within a reasonable balance.

I feel that the problem that is confronting agriculture has been created by a loss of export market to take care of our surplus production. No doubt many factors have brought about this loss of export market. Perhaps our high cost of production and our high standard of living have priced us out of some markets. No doubt the trade policies and the financial policies of our Federal Government has been a contributing factor in the loss of other markets.

It would be a fair question to ask "What has the Government of Ontario done to assist Agriculture to keep down the cost of production and to provide markets?"

Mr. Speaker, the rural electrification programme that has been carried out by this government has already given to 85 per cent of the people living in rural Ontario the cheapest source of power available. I mentioned that the cost of farm machinery had gone up 193.2 per cent.; the cost of gasoline, oil and grease 170.9 per cent.; the cost of farm wages 436.7 per cent. In the same period, because of policies pursued by the government and hydro, the cost of electrical power over rural Ontario is practically the same as it was 10 years ago.

I have mentioned the increased assistance for our municipal roads and the improved highway system that makes our markets more readily accessible. I could mention research at the OAC and OVC, two of the finest institutions of their kind in the world.

Now I want to point out what this government has done to develop markets. The overall policies of power development, highway development, the policies of the Department of Mines, of Lands and Forests, Education, Health, Welfare, Planning and Development as well as the policies of the Department of Agriculture have made Ontario the most attractive place in Canada, a land of opportunity, in which to establish a home or an industry.

Half of the New Canadians have established their homes in Ontario. The population of Ontario has increased approximately 1 million since this government took office. A million people create a great market for every line of business.

When we check the per capita consumption of food, we realize that our increase in population alone takes care of great quantities of food. I will use a chart that gives the per capita consumption in 1951 of many farm products:

PRODUCT	PER CAPITA CONSUMPTION IN POUNDS		1 MILLION PEOPLE CONSUME
	1935-39	1951	Lbs.
Pork	39.8	67.8	67,800,000
Beef	54.7	44.1	44,100,000
Veal	10.5	7.7	7,700,000
Mutton and lamb	5.6	2.6	2,600,000
Canned meat	1.4	4.9	4,900,000
Hens and chickens	15.6	19.7	19,700,000
Other poultry	2.8	3.5	3,500,000
Eggs	30.7	34.6	34,600,000
Cheddar Cheese	3.5	4.1	4,100,000
Other cheese	0.2	0.7	700,000
Evaporated milk	6.1	18.1	18,100,000
Condensed whole milk	0.6	0.7	700,000
Fluid whole milk	408.05	420.6	420,600,000
Butter	31.0	22.6	22,600,000
Lard	3.9	8.1	8,100,000
Flour	184.8	153.3	158,300,000
Potatoes	192.3	200.3	200,300,000
Dry beans	3.7	5.2	5,200,000
Dry peas	5.7	2.2	2,200,000
Tomatoes (fresh)	15.4	18.3	18,300,000
Tomato products	10.0	15.5	15,500,000
Fresh fruit	50.5	63.5	63,500,000
Canned fruit	6.3	11.3	11,300,000
Canned vegetables	10.8	18.5	18,500,000
Cabbage and greens	16.2	19.3	19,300,000
Carrots	15.4	13.6	13,600,000

A great market created largely by the policies of this government.

Another great market has been developed by the Department of Travel and Publicity. It is estimated that 1,534,114 tourist cars entered Ontario in 1953 to stay for approximately 6 days. These cars carried an average of $3\frac{1}{2}$ persons who would consume 96,649,245 meals. Another 4 million cars entered Ontario with approximately $2\frac{1}{2}$ people for one to two days. They might consume 40 million meals. These two groups alone purchase 136,649,245 meals.

In 1952, figures show that in one year an additional 5,229,132 people entered Ontario by rail, boat, bus, air, taxi and other means. Every day this group consumed another 15,667,396 meals.

A million new people and the tourist industry provide markets for a tremendous volume of farm produce. They create another market by giving a living to thousands of people who supply goods and services to new people and to tourists.

Mr. Speaker, where would agriculture in Ontario be today if this government by its policies had not made possible a great industrial expansion giving a living to a million new people, and by developing an expanding tourist industry?

The farm people have no objection when labour, business, and industry receive a fair share of the national income, but they do object when there is a steady decline in the price of farm produce and at the same time the cost of services, equipment and labour is advancing. I hope the leaders of industry, business and labour will develop policies that are fair to the basic industry—agriculture.

Mr. Speaker, one of the greatest problems that confronts rural municipipalities, perhaps all municipalities, is the problem of financing the services they provide for people. Some 25 to 30 years ago rural people, to a large extent, lived out their life and did their business in their own community; taxes were levied on the real estate they owned and this system was reasonably fair.

Today conditions have changed. During the last war a policy of decentralizing population started to develop. People lived in the suburbs or the rural communities and drove to the large centres to work. To make this possible, the municipalities started keeping roads open 12 months in the year, 24 hours a day. This was an additional service paid by municipal tax and provincial subsidy. These additional services have speeded up the decentralization of people and, in many cases, our rural schools are overcrowded. New schools have to be built and paid for by municipal tax and provincial grants.

This situation has created a great problem for our local officials and a burden of taxation on farms and small businesses. That, in my opinion, is not fair.

The small business man pays municipal tax on his dwelling-house and his business establishment. The farmer pays municipal tax on his dwelling-house, his barns and his land. The man who drives out of the municipality, to earn a living, pays municipal tax on his dwelling-house alone. The tax he pays on his ability to earn goes to Ottawa in the form of income tax, so that he is unable to pay his fair share to the municipality for the services it provides. I am not suggesting that he is not paying enough taxes. I am saying our present system of allocating the tax dollar is not fair.

I mentioned that 25 to 30 years ago, rural people did their business in their own community. Today, with open roads and motor transportation, that has changed. A large percentage of the cash business is done in the great corporation stores—Eaton's, Simpsons, A & P, Loblaws, Dominion Stores, and many others—leaving the credit business and what is left to the local merchant, the man who pays the municipal tax.

The corporations pay the bulk of their tax in corporation tax to Ottawa.

Mr. Speaker, to give you a picture of what is taking place in Canada with regard to allocation of the tax dollar, I am going to refer to Hansard. The hon. member from Wellington South gave some very enlightening facts in the address he delivered in this House at the last session. If you turn to volume 31, page E-4, you will find at the bottom of the page a chart. This chart shows that the division of the tax dollar in Canada is following a definite trend.

Year	Federal	Provincial	Municipal
1939	51.17 %	18.82 %	30.01 %
1952	78.022%	10.312%	11.672%

I suggest to the hon. members that Ottawa is not playing fair with the municipalities, or the province. We cannot go on indefinitely with a policy of decentralizing our people and centralizing the tax dollar in the Federal Treasury.

With the policy that Ottawa is pursuing, our municipalities would be in an impossible position if it were not for the great increase in assistance they are receiving from the Ontario Government, and remember, that this assistance comes out of their reduced share of the tax dollar. The policy of decentralizing people, and at the same time centralizing the tax dollar, is placing the greatest burden on the rural municipalities. They must provide roads, schools and services for people. They have no corporation stores or head offices to tax. They have no industry to tax. If they secure industry, the neighbouring city will try to annex the industry. If the rural people try to protest, they are told you cannot stand in the way of progress.

Mr. Speaker, this cannot go on indefinitely. If we are going to decentralize our population, we must at the same time decentralize our tax dollar.

This government—the Government of Ontario—has, and is pursuing, that policy. In 1943 the grants for municipal roads was $3,589,480.73. The estimate for this year is in excess of $31 million. The total grant for schools in 1944 was $8,700,000. The grant in 1953 was $57,700,000. In 1943 the Department of Welfare spent $12,525,178.76. This year the estimate is $20,461,019.49.

In 1943 the province was paying to our hospitals, our sanatoria and the Ontario hospitals $10,015,847.86. In 1953 Ontario paid for the same institutions $33,016,922.38. The Department of Municipal Affairs has advised me that the provincial subsidies to municipalities, Boards of Education, local boards and public hospitals for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1944, was $19,697,486. The same subsidies this year will be $138,999,000, an increase of $122,404,610. In 1955 there will be an additional increase of, approximately, $7 million provided in the unconditional grants. Let us not forget that this increase in assistance to our municipalities was provided at the same time that Ontario's share of the tax dollar was cut almost in half.

Mr. Speaker, the time has come, I think it is overdue, when the Federal Government will have to recognize that we cannot continue decentralizing people and at the same time centralize the tax dollar in the Federal Treasury. Ottawa might follow the example of this province by giving to the municipalities an unconditional per capita grant that would help pay for the schools, roads and services. If not a grant, then some form of re-allocation of taxes.

Mr. Speaker, before I conclude my remarks, I want to repeat what I have said before. We have inherited a goodly heritage in this Province of Ontario. Much of what we enjoy today is the result of the vision, the courage and the hard labour of those who have gone before. The people of Ontario are becoming history-conscious. Organizations such as the Women's Institute, the Federation of Agriculture, the Junior Farmers, historical societies and others, would like to see a museum or pioneer village established to preserve the story of the development of rural Ontario.

We have those in our midst who would try to tell the rising generation that our system of free enterprise has failed the people. I suggest that a pioneer village would be a yardstick by which to measure our progress. A pioneer village would be a memorial for all to see, a place where we could realize that people with faith in God, with vision, courage and initiative can lay the foundations for great developments.

I suggest, Mr. Speaker, than an institution of this kind would have an effect on the basic thinking of our people that could not be valued in dollars and cents.

MR. R. M. MYERS (Waterloo South): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

THE PUBLIC PARKS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 111, "An Act to amend The Public Parks Act."

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 112, "An Act to amend The Municipal Act."

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: Are these bills going to committee?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: They are all going to committee.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 113, "An Act to amend The Assessment Act."

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

THE REGISTRY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 114, "An Act to amend The Registry Act."

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: This bill will be referred to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE LAND TITLES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 115, "An Act to amend The Land Titles Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: This bill will also go to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE MAGISTRATES ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 116, "An Act to amend The Magistrates Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: This will also go to the Committee on Legal Bills.

THE JUDICATURE ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 117, "An Act to amend The Judicature Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: This will also go to the Legal Bills Committee.

THE SECURITY TRANSFER TAX ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves second reading of Bill No. 118, "An Act to amend The Security Transfer Tax Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE SUCCESSION DUTY ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves second reading of Bill No. 119, "An Act to amend The Succession Duty Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL SUBSIDIES ADJUSTMENT ACT, 1953

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill No. 120, "An Act to amend The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: Is that going to committee?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes.

THE MILK INDUSTRY

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 69, "An Act respecting the Milk Industry."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CHARITABLE INSTITUTIONS ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 107, "An Act to amend The Charitable Institutions Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES ACT, 1952

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 108, "An Act to amend The Mothers' Allowances Act, 1952."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE FARM PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 109, "An Act to amend The Farm Products Marketing Act."

MR. OLIVER: On this bill I think the hon. Minister should give a more detailed explanation than he did the other day. It involves quite a change in the application of the Act.

HON. MR. FROST: We will hold that bill over.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply.

Mr. Dent in the chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

HON. MACKINNON PHILLIPS (Minister of Health): Mr. Chairman, before we start the regular votes in the Estimates, I would like to say a few words regarding our Department of Health.

First, I would like to speak in regard to the expansion of beds in our hospitals, particularly our general hospitals and our sanatoria. Since the inauguration in 1947 of the present hospital construction programme which makes available to hospitals a provincial grant of $1,000 for each new, active treatment; of $2,000 for each new chronic or convalescent bed; $8,500 for each new psychiatric or detention bed, as well as $2,500 for each new tuberculosis bed, and $1,000 for each nurse's bed in a residence, and approval has been given by the province to contribute towards 18,693 new beds made up as follows:

Active treatment beds	11,735
Convalescent beds	241
Chronic beds	2,652
Psychiatric beds	311
(as given by the hon. Prime Minister in his budget)
Plus—approved detention beds	7

In our sanatoria, we have 896 beds and in nurses' residences 2,851 beds.

Now these programmes consisting of 18,963 beds up to February 28th, 1954, represent a commitment by the province to assist hospitals and sanatoria by provincial capital grants in the amount of almost $33 million, the exact amount being $32,920,432, of which $26,692,000 already has been paid.

If we were to look at the maintenance grants in this province for general hospitals only, we would find this—and as a matter of fact one of the hon. members of the Opposition stated last night that we should pay the full indigent's costs—we are paying more than that. We are paying it on the basis of public-ward beds for every day of the year, regardless of occupancy, as well as supplementary grants on indigent patient days.

To give this House some idea of the increase in the amount of this grant previous to 1946, when this new pattern was adopted, the largest grant given in any year was $1,600,000 to all the hospitals. In 1946, the first year after this new type of pattern for grants to hospitals was adopted, we increased that by 4 times, giving the hospitals $6,400,000.

Last year we paid to the hospitals in maintenance grants over $9 million, and that is not giving any credit to the $6,800,000 which was given a year ago toward rehabilitation of obsolete services which is in the capital field and which I did not include in the $33 million already mentioned.

If we were to go to our Ontario hospitals, we would find this picture: as of December 31st, 1953, we had a total of 21,170 people who were under our care. When I say, "21,000" I do not mean they were all within the hospital; there were over 18,000 in the hospitals; there were some under observation in their homes; there were some in our boarding homes which we have in various parts of the province; there were some in our rehabilitation homes, making a grand total of over 21,000.

In order to give this House some idea of the cost of operating our 17 Ontario Hospitals for the mentally ill, which includes the two schools, one at Orillia and the other at Smiths Falls, in 1943, the government was spending $6.5 million. This has increased by leaps and bounds over the 10-year period, until this coming fiscal year you will notice I am asking you for over $20 million, or approximately $20 million for the care of these unfortunate people who have to be cared for within our institutions. That does not count in any way the capital costs which our Department of Public Works, under the hon. Minister (Mr. Griesinger), is going forward with a progressive programme continually.

To give you an idea of what the government is doing in that regard—in fact we are carrying on a programme of which we are very proud in the way of an extensive mental hospital building programme—at the new Port Arthur Hospital, 460 beds will be available within a month or two, with contracts let for another 400, and the ultimate capacity we expect will be 1,100 or 1,200 beds. I expect the tenders will be going out from the hon. Minister of Public Works within the next 2 or 3 months for a new 1,100 or 1,200 bed hospital at North Bay. The selection of a site is now under consideration.

At Brockville, 5 units of 100 beds each will be completed this year, plus one unit of 100 beds, already in use.

At the Hospital School at Smiths Falls, the first two groups of buildings to accommodate 1,800 beds are now occupied by 1,100 patients. Accommodation for a further 400 beds is under construction now—ultimate capacity 2,400.

I may also say, regarding our mental health construction programme, that plans are being prepared for a 500-bed group of buildings at Kingston and further extensions are to be made at Hamilton and London. I think hon. members will agree with me that this is a formidable extension programme in the field of mental health.

I will turn now, Mr. Chairman, to the subject of tuberculosis. We are very proud of our record in reducing the mortality rate from tuberculosis in this province. The death rate is, in fact, lower than that in any other province in the Dominion, in spite of the fact that Ontario has the second largest group of Indians of any province of the Dominion, British Columbia being first and Quebec, I believe, third.

The Indians have a mortality rate 9 to 11 times greater than that of white people. In the year 1900 or thereabouts, we had a mortality rate in Canada of some 102 per 100,000. This has dropped steadily and in 1952 it was 8.4 per 100,000. In 1953, last year, though records are still not complete, we think it will turn out to be in the neighbourhood of 6.5.

Unfortunately I cannot make the statement that I made last year. Our Director of Tuberculosis Study felt last year that the incident rate also was falling, as well as the mortality rate. We cannot say that this is absolutely true. We know that the problem of tuberculosis in this province, as well as in every other province of the Dominion, is still a great one, and we must keep up our preventive programme. There are one or two factors which play a great part in it. The first is our increase in population. Our population increased, due to births and the influx of immigrants, by 851,000 in the 10-year period. We have found, in respect of those coming from other countries, that the change of food, climate and so on makes them more susceptible to tuberculosis, probably 2 or 3 times as susceptible as we are. This is especially so in the first 2 or 3 years after their arrival. Later on their susceptibility seems to drop, though we have had only 5 or 6 years in which to judge of this.

I am going to end my remarks by turning to that dread condition known as cancer. The Ontario Treatment and Research Foundation is doing a magnificent job. So are the Ontario Cancer Institute and the Ontario Cancer Society. Each of them has a job to do, the Society in welfare work and the collection of funds, the Institute in the construction of our new radio therapy institute on the Wellesley site, and the Foundation in operating and administering the programme over the whole of Ontario.

Last year I think I stated we had the one Cobalt bomb at London. Just last week they began the installation of a Cobalt bomb at the General Hospital, Hamilton. So far as the information is concerned which I have obtained from the Ontario Foundation, they believe the next bombs will be assigned to Windsor, Kingston and Ottawa.

I think we can be very proud of the work they are doing, which is backed by this government in a big way, as will become apparent if hon. members will consider that 90 per cent. of the money—certainly 85 per cent.—of a total amount of $9 million or $10 million in all will be provided by our Provincial Government.

Vote 52 agreed to.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Mr. Chairman, I refer to Vote 54, item 32. Last year and the year before, I expressed interest in that very terrible disease, heart disease, and I was impressed by the co-operation shown by the hon. Minister of Health in replying to me on both those occasions. I wonder if he will be good enough to tell us what progress is being made in research into this great killing disease?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The sum of $200,000 will be provided this year for research into this. The figure of $12,000 which appears in the Estimates is for the payment of the maintenance of office staff and others. In fact, it is completely for the administrative staff.

MR. GRUMMETT: What are the particulars of the Provincial-Federal Agreement in item 11 of Vote 54?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: May I say that the Federal Government and the province have an arrangement with regard to hospitalization only in the first year, under which each of us pays 50 per cent. of the cost. After the first year these people become a municipal responsibility.

MR. GRUMMETT: How many patients were involved in this hospitalization?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I have not the number of patients here, but I have the total cost of indigents for the year 1951-52. In those two years the cost was $50,000, of which half will be paid by each of the senior governments. As a matter of fact, the number of indigent hospitalizations in Ontario during the year 1952—adults and children—was 692. We had relatively few in our mental hospitals. As I explained in the case of tuberculosis, the incidence of mental illness does not begin to rise until after the first year.

MR. MANLEY (Stormont): With regard to Vote 54. I notice an item there of $47,900 in salaries and another item of $6,300 for services, and I would like to ask what are the services which we are giving to civil servants?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The reason for that amount is that we are hiring new staffs, particularly new medical practitioners, who have taken their course and have the degree of D.Ph.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): What services do they give to the members of the civil service, which requires a staff of that size?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The Department of Health looks after all the civil servants within this building, and the East Block, and, as a matter of fact, with Ontario growing we have offices in the old Sick Children's Hospital, several offices on Richmond Street and in other places in Toronto. The number of civil servants is also growing, just as our population expands. This extra money is for the setting up of new medical offices to look after these civil servants and others outside the Parliament Buildings.

MR. NIXON: What does the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) mean by "look after"?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We examine all civil servants when they commence their employment. We look after all civil servants when they become ill during the day, and treat emergency cases whether medical or surgical. If the hon. member will go up on to the third floor, he will see we have an office there. We expect we will have further offices, and that is what this money is provided for.

MR. NIXON: does that apply to the outside staff, to the civil servants in municipal hospitals, reformatories and so on? Have you any medical officers located at these institutions to give service to members of the staff?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We have no officers set aside for that purpose but our staff of doctors does look after the civil servants in those places during the time they are working, and examines them when they take up employment.

MR. NIXON: Does that cover the families as well?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: No. That is while the staff is at work.

MR. NIXON: It looks like a lot of money.

MR. MANLEY: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that the amount paid for salaries is out of proportion, compared with the value of the services rendered.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Does the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) mean that we are paying too much in salaries?

MR. MANLEY: According to the figures here we are only getting $6,300 worth of service, against $47,900 spent for salaries.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: May I say this to the hon. member, that one of these offices is comparable to a doctor's office. We have to pay salaries for the doctors and the nurses and the administrative staff of those offices. That is what the item "salaries" represents. The maintenance does not amount to very much, because we do not supply them with a great deal of material—just bandages or whatever they need for emergency work.

In a doctor's office the main items are for rent and the payment of office staff. And a doctor does not buy drugs, he sends the patients to a drug store.

MR. NIXON: That is not correct. He supplies certain drugs. That is, any doctor to whom I ever went did.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Well, the doctor is very foolish if he does, because he gives them away—most of them. I did.

MR. NIXON: That has not been my experience.

MR. G. T. GORDON (Brantford): Mr. Chairman, on item 37, I notice the province gave $3,500 toward the chlorination of water supplies. I would like to say just a few words about that.

I believe the hon. Minister is very pleased with the results being obtained from the experiment. But we are concerned about some opposition to the chlorination of water supplies, and especially when the opposition comes from a very important source, such as the morning paper here, the Globe and Mail.

As you know, just a few weeks ago, they published articles opposing fluorination and combined them into a pamphlet called "Fluorination, Boon or Blunder?" I think I should say a few words about that, to keep the record straight in Brantford.

The pamphlet reports Dr. Charles Dillon as a Scottish Research Dentist located at South Shields, England. They represent him as a distinguished bio-chemist, with an established reputation as a student of the effects of fluorine upon the teeth.

What are the facts? In the first place, Dr. I. D. Leitch, Medical Officer of Health for the County Borough of South Shields, in a letter dated the 11th of February, 1954, writes:

I may be sadly ignorant but I don't know of any Dr. Dillon practicing dentistry hereabouts.

J. R. Forrest, Dental Officer with the Ministry of Health writes in a letter dated March 22nd, 1954:

Dr. Dillon is not a bio-chemist, neither has he any qualifications in medicine or chemistry. He is a native of Jamaica and holds an American Dental qualification. He practices in Fort William in the north of Scotland.

Dr. Dillon's only connection with South Shields is a study which he appears to have made of, at most, 42 extracted teeth from that town.

On that basis, the morning paper accepts as gospel truth everything he has to say about that town. They accept as true, and publish, Dr. Dillon's statement that the water supply of South Shields has a fluorine content of 0.76 to 0.85 parts per million added to water from underground deposits of fluorides.

The Globe and Mail should know that there is not one dentist, or doctor in 10,000, who is capable of analyzing a water for its fluorine content. In 1950, Dr. Weaver, the only man entitled to be called "the English Research Dentist of South Shields", reported that the water supply had a fluorine content of 1.4 parts per million. Dr. Weaver's papers, surveying the dental health of more than 4,000 children, have been published in the British Dental Journal and are recognized as most valuable contributions to fluorine research.

The Globe and Mail quotes Dr. Dillon about the effects of fluorine on teeth as follows:

The pulp chamber becomes progressively blocked by calcific matter gross enough to be demonstrated in radiographs. There is no reason why the process should stop here. This progressive degeneration of vital tissue may affect the development of the alveoli, the development of the root and dental periosteum, and in course of time, bring about the degeneration of the attachment apparatus and its blood supply resulting in early progressive periodontal disease and wholesale loss of teeth.

Professor Angus M. Thomson of the University of Aberdeen was asked to comment upon this statement. In a letter dated February the 10th, 1954, Dr. Thomson writes—

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Would the hon. member give me the date of that, please?

MR. GORDON: It is dated February the 10th, 1954. He was asked for his opinion of this statement, and he describes the statement by Dr. Dillon as "poppy-cock." He said:

This quotation is absolute rubbish. Radiographs of teeth in fluoride and controlled areas have been made by the thousand, and probably hundreds of extracted teeth have been examined in section. No changes such as he describes have been noted and I am perfectly sure that they do not exist.

A world authority on periodontal diseases (that is diseases situated or occurring around a tooth was asked his opinion of this same statement, and he described Dillon's theories as "poppy-cock." In regard to the professional reputation of Dr. Dillon, Professor Thomson, in the same letter, comments:

Dr. Dillon published some very bad in vitro (test tube) experiments in the Dental Practitioner about the beginning of 1953 or end of 1952 and drew completely unjustified conclusions about the health of living persons and their teeth. As a consequence, Parfitt, Longwell, Forrest and I concocted a reply which was published in the same journal, probably about April, 1953.

The Globe and Mail quotes from a paper by Dr. Dillon published in the Dental Practitioner that he has observed "a marked degeneration of pulp tissues." The morning paper does not say that Dr. Dillon reported on only 29 teeth from South Shields and compared them with 4 teeth from low fluoride areas.

Even a layman can recognize that this is not scientific reporting, and can understand how and why Dr. Dillon has no professional recognition from his confreres in dentistry or chemistry.

The morning paper reports Dr. Dillon as follows:

Experiments prove the condition in South Shields does not occur in neighbouring areas having unfluoridated water. Tests made on pulp deposits of South Shield's teeth showed a high fluorine content average of 530 p.p.m. in 5 teeth.

What is the truth about this statement? Here is the reply from the British Minister of Health:

So far as the 530 p.p.m. of fluoride in the pulp deposits is concerned, this may be so. Pulp stones are similar in many respects to dentine, and the fluoride content of dentine, in areas where there is no fluoride at all in the water, has been found to be between 160-200 p.p.m. It increases in direct proportion to the amount of fluoride in the water, but even Aurora, McClure and Likins, found that the dentine at 360 p.p.m. very much less than Dillon's figure. I think it must be realized that Dillon's chemical estimations are considered by experts in chemistry to be completely unsound and his arguments unscientific.

From the presence of calcareous deposits or pulp stones in the South Shields' teeth, Dr. Dillon claimed to show that the ingestion of fluoride leads to degenerative changes of the dental pulp, periodontal membrane and other tissues. Apparently he is not aware that pulp stones are a common occurrence in any area, irrespective of the fluoride content of the water. In his book Oral and Dental Diseases, Professor Stones states,

The incidence of pulp calcifications has been studied by Hill (1934) who has found that they occur in 66 per cent. of all teeth between the ages of 10 and 20 years, and the figure rises to 90 per cent. when the age group is between 50 and 70 years.

J. J. Hill's work on the pathology of the dental pulp is published in the Journal of the American Medical Association, 21.820.

The morning paper quotes Dr. Dillon as follows:

Dillon, in quoting his experiments in South Shields, England, believes that mottling and its progressive implications bear no exact relation to the total fluorine content of the water, but are related only to the "tissue destroying or poisonous fraction of fluorine in the water"

And adds its own interpretation as follows:

This theory means that every sample of drinking water containing fluorine (natural or added) may have a different poisonous fraction, regardless of the amount of fluorine contained in it.

What scientific values have these two statements?

Dr. Longwell, the distinguished chemist and Principal Research Officer in the Department of the Government Chemist, states:

Dillon gives a method of determining the "toxic fraction" of the total fluoride content of water. Whatever "toxic fraction" may mean, the method of determining it is valueless.

J. R. Forrest of the Ministry of Health adds these comments:

It is unlikely that Dillon's estimation of the fluoride content of enamel and dentine or of pulp stones is any more reliable. In an article published in November, 1952, he reported that one tooth from an area with 0.10 p.p.m.F in the water had a fluoride content of 1,000 p.p.m., whilst another from the same area had 112 p.p.m. With 0.18 p.p.m. the fluoride content was said to be 500 p.p.m. These widely varying findings are in marked contrast to the consistent results obtained by more reliable research workers, some of whose figures were given in the table on page 49 of the report issued by the United Kingdom Scientific Mission which visited Canada and the United States.

The Globe and Mail quotes Dr. Dillon as declaring that experiments prove the condition described in South Shields does not occur in areas having unfluoridated water supplies, and that the steep rise in tooth loss between the ages of 31 and 40 in South Shields is due to periodontal disease caused by fluorine. The British Minister of Health replies that these theories are not borne out by the fact. Dental Officer, F. R. Forrest, who has made an independent survey of South Shields with fluorine in the water, and North Shields with no fluorine in the water, has found that even up to 35 years of age, only 9 per cent. of the women of South Shields were wearing dentures compared to 35 per cent. in North Shields.

Mr. Chairman, I think we should rely on the statement issued by our Canadian Dental Association, and I would close by quoting the words of Abraham Lincoln, when he put the matter in a somewhat different form. He said, in a letter to the editor of the Illinois Gazette on August 11th, 1846:

That it is an established maxim of morals that he who makes an assertion without knowing whether it is true or false, is guilty of falsehood, and the accidental truth of the assertion does not justify nor excuse him.

In my few remarks, Mr. Chairman, I have given what has been obtained in Britain in connection with that article, and it shows it is completely valueless, and to what extent some will go in opposition to this experiment.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon)—and I want to congratulate him upon his enthusiasm regarding chlorination of water as a partial preventative for decay in teeth, especially of our younger people—I would like this House to appreciate the position of the Department of Health.

We have two files, one containing the "pros," and the other containing the "cons." If I were to go through them even rapidly, it would take me several hours.

May I say, Mr. Chairman, that we are not against fluorination. We do know that it is one factor we feel in the future will probably be used—probably. But we must not forget the other factors, such as oral hygiene and excessive carbohydrate intake, and so forth.

We have evidence from outstanding people, professional, scientific and lay people, who come out in favour of it, and we have just as many against.

I will grant you that the Ontario Dental Association, and the Canadian Association—and I believe the American, but I am not sure—have endorsed it, but I have been waiting for a letter from the American Medical Association which I have not received. I was also awaiting letters from the World Health Organization, and the Canadian Medical Association, and from the latter, I received a letter dated December 1st, 1953, which reads:

To my knowledge, the World Medical Association has not endorsed any research project concerning fluorination, complete or incomplete, and certainly nothing to this effect appears in our statement.

They go on and say:

It seems to be regarded that a number of people are writing to the Canadian Medical Association reporting on this subject certain conclusions or recommendations which may or may not be true, somewhat dependent, it would seem, on the point of view held by the individual or body which is quoting it.

I have an excerpt from a letter from the World Health Organization, dated November 13th, 1953, which I will read. They have promised me as soon as further work was done, I would hear of it. The letter reads as follows:

The World Health Organization has not expressed any official views on water fluoridization schemes.

I think that answers the hon. member's question.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister of Health would explain item 14, on Vote 54, "Federal Health Grants—Operating Fund, $500,000." It seems a very large amount for an operating fund.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: It is simply a revolving account which we have with the Federal Government. We make application and get the money back which we have paid.

MR. GRUMMETT: What is the object of the fund?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Under the federal health scheme, we have a project whereby, first of all, we receive the project and either approve or disapprove. If we approve, we send it on to Ottawa where they may approve or disapprove. If it is approved, it comes back to us. We pay out the money, then we make application to Ottawa to pay us back that money. This $500,000 is the amount we pay for paying it out, and applying again. It is simply a revolving account.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, item 33, "Research Council of Ontario—waste research"—I do not find any reference to that in last year's estimates. I wonder if the hon. Minister would comment on it.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Under the Department of Planning and Development, we have the Research Council of Ontario, which has carried out a research project on leaves. They want to carry out a further research project for us on waste such as sewage, garbage, and perhaps industrial wastes, as well as more study on leaves and grass cuttings, etc.

This is simply to aid them with the Estimates of the hon. Minister of Planning and Development and is a special project which we have asked them to take care of for us.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): While we are still on Vote 54, item 28, "Alcoholism Research Foundation, $149,500", when the hon. Minister presented the Third Annual Report of this Foundation a few days ago, he made a very interesting statement to the House which I, of course, thought was based on the research of 3 years' experience of this particular Foundation.

Among other statements, he said there was some 2½ ounces of fusel oil which is a deadly poison in every Imperial Quart bottle of liquor.

HON. MR. FROST: Was not my explanation satisfactory?

MR. NIXON: I want to get it from the hon. Minister. The hon. Prime Minister does not know anything about this.

I touched upon this a few days ago when the hon. Minister was out of the House, when I read a statement from an authority in Windsor which said that the hon. Minister's statement was "erroneous", "misleading", and he applied several other terms to it. I am sorry I have not it before me now, but he said the hon. Minister was exactly 1,000 per cent. out in his statement.

At that time, the hon. Prime Minister suggested the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) had just secured new bifocals and as soon as he got used to the new ones, he would make a subsequent statement to the House, correcting the impression he left on that occasion.

If the hon. Minister has become accustomed to his new bifocals, it seems to me this would be an appropriate time to clear up that situation.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: May I ask the hon. member if he has ever made statements which were considered "erroneous", etc. and all those other large words he used?

MR. NIXON: Never. If the hon. Minister has any knowledge of any such statements I have made, I would welcome hearing of them.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I hope the hon. member sitting to the right belongs to the Presbyterian Church or some other good Christian organization and tells the truth.

In the first place, the Alcoholic Research Foundation has nothing to do with the distillation process of alcohol. They have to do with the people we send there who cannot handle it, who are called "chronic alcoholics."

I have asked the University of Toronto to give me a statement on this, which I have not as yet received, and I have asked the Professor of Pharmacology, Professor Rogers, for this statement, but as I say, I have not as yet received it. I will admit my statement was high. I was speaking of the imperial gallon rather than the quart, and whether the bifocals had anything to do with it or not, we will leave as erroneous also.

MR. SALSBERG: On Vote 54, there are two items I would like to deal with. The first is item 18, providing $25,000 for the Victorian Order of Nurses. I want to take this opportunity to pay tribute to this excellent organization for the fine service it is rendering and the important contribution it is making to thousands of homes, particularly working-class homes, on their daily rounds. I think it is one of the few organizations which should, whenever we have an opportunity, be singled out for recognition, and I would personally suggest that the amount be increased.

If I could, I would make a motion to increase it, but I am only able to move to reduce and not to increase. That can only come from the Treasury benches.

I respectfully suggest to the hon. Minister and to the government to give serious thought to the suggestion of increasing the amount to the Victorian Order of Nurses so they may continue to render the outstanding service they are now giving. I think it is generally recognized they are short of money, and I am sure they could extend their work. They already have a fine record, but they could improve their work if we were to give them more money. Unless the hon. Minister is prepared right now to increase this amount, I will continue. This is not a question, it is a suggestion.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I am prepared to announce a $1,250 increase which the hon. member will see in Vote 54, No. 31, "St. Elizabeth Visiting Nurses Association." That is a group of 18 or 20 nurses who are paid on the same basis as the Victorian Order of Nurses, and are doing identically the same work. We will give consideration to the hon. member's suggestion.

MR. SALSBERG: They should both be given more. I now want to say a few words on item 28, "Alcoholism Research Foundation," from a rather different point of view than that touched on by the member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

I consider, Mr. Chairman, the problem of alcoholism as one immediately under the jurisdiction, and responsibility of the Department of Health. Whether it has a certain percentage of harmful oils—some of the hon. members are now referring to it as "diesel oil"—or not, I think it is universally recognized and generally agreed that alcohol taken in large doses has a serious ill effect on the health, both physical and mental, of those who consume it.

Mr. Chairman, I want to make it abundantly clear that I am not a prohibitionist, I am not even a teetotaler, and I am not advocating restrictions. I am, however, aware that more should be done than is now being done to avert a more serious and more harmful effect on the health and mental condition of the people. Mr. Chairman, I do not think we are doing enough.

The rise in consumption of alcoholic beverages is truly alarming. I am not blaming the government alone for that. I blame it on a number of other factors, the government being only one. I have had an opportunity of looking at some of the latest figures of this development, and I was shocked as I am sure most hon. members would be, if they were to get these facts. For instance, the amount spent for liquor in Ontario in 1944 was $146,506,512, but in 1953, that had jumped to $320,371,138—more than doubled in a 9-year period. It is true we are not as badly off as some other countries where the consumption of alcoholic drinks is higher than is the case with us, but it is high, and what is worse, it is getting higher all the time. I suggest it constitutes a serious social problem. It is an economic problem, as some people insist, but it is primarily a social problem, and I recognize also that we cannot do away with it by decree, nor by legislation alone. But by doing away with the basic causes which drive people to excessive drinking—and those causes are many—I do suggest though that we should do all we can to reach the minds of people to teach and advise them of the harmfulness of it and the need for reducing consumption.

I think this item we are dealing with, the "Alcoholism Research Foundation," has not the scope nor the finances nor the staff to do that. They are doing a good job. The staff which the hon. Minister has gathered together, I understand is of a very high calibre. They are good people, with a well-established reputation and they are making advances.

That is all to the good and is appreciated, but I would suggest we extend their scope and tasks, and at the risk of making some hon. members smile, and laugh, I want to repeat a suggestion I made in the Committee on Government Commissions when the functions of the Liquor Board were before us.

I was very serious then and I am very serious now. It was my opinion then, as it is now, that we should seriously consider having an educational campaign on this question that would reach to the entire population. I suggested then we should utilize every bottle of liquor we sell to carry some message to the people. I see nothing to laugh at in that. The Liquor Board could put a label on these bottles and advise people that excessive consumption is harmful—labels saying "Do not drink if you can get away without touching it, but if you must, do not consume too much."

I think this is a very sound proposition and I find that in some countries where sales of liquor are controlled by governments, the selling agencies are doing something of this sort. Sweden is one example.

I would go even further than this, and advocate that we have proper signs in every liquor outlet, every liquor store and beer warehouse advising people to "go slow", and to realize that excessive consumption is bad for them. I think that if we persist along these lines we shall reach more people than have ever been reached before, with the advice of the harmfulness of this practice of which nearly all of us are guilty to a greater or a lesser degree.

In conclusion I should like to suggest that we also extend this campaign to our schools, from the lowest grade to the highest classes in the universities. I think it would be very good if we could centralize this type of educational campaign within the Department of Health, because this is primarily a matter affecting physical and mental health. I would like to see the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) get this extra task, and I should like to see the money required for it made available on a grand scale, and for a long period of time.

If we were to take a percentage of the profits we are now making from liquor, and devote it to this preventative work of the Department of Health, we would be making a departure which in my view would be exceedingly worth while.

Vote 54 agreed to.

Votes 55 and 56 agreed to.

MR. GRUMMETT: On Vote 57, I wonder if the hon. Minister could tell us about the benefits which have accrued since 1951?

HON. MR. FROST: I wonder if the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) would leave that question over. It is 5 o'clock and I do not want to keep the House sitting. We can go back to this.

We are down to item 57. I move that the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the committee begs to report progress and moves for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, tomorrow we assemble at 3 o'clock. There are several committees and it would not be feasible to meet at 2 o'clock. We shall meet at 3 o'clock, and there will be a night session. We shall proceed with the debate on the budget and with the Estimates.

I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 5.03 o'clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1954.

3 O'CLOCK, P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very glad today to welcome the students from the Vaughan Road Collegiate School, the St. Michael's Choir School of Toronto, the Rolph Road Public School, Toronto, and the students from the Public School of Welland, Ontario.

Not only are we happy to welcome the students from Toronto day by day, but it is an extreme pleasure to have, as our guests, those from outside our city. We trust the students from Welland have enjoyed their trip to the Museum, and the instructions and lectures they have received while in the Parliament Building.

Bill No. 114, An Act to amend The Registry Act.

Bill No. 115, An Act to amend The Land Titles Act.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

DISABLED PERSONS ALLOWANCE ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Disabled Persons Allowance Act, 1952."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the only amendment to this Act is in respect to persons who are completely disabled, and who are in receipt of Workmen's Compensation benefits, or war pension benefits.

We have found in some cases that workmen or veterans, who might be in receipt of a small pension or allowance, cannot benefit under this Act, and by this amendment, provision is made to supplement any pension they are receiving up to $40 a month.

The other amendment is to make it possible, when the Federal Government brings down its proposed Disabled Persons legislation, for us to enter into an agreement with the Federal Government, without having to call a special session of the Legislature for that purpose.

THE COMMUNITY CENTRES ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Community Centres Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this amendment was designed to bring the compensation of the Community Centres Board in line with boards appointed under The Municipal Act and the Public Parks Act.

LOAN AND TRUST CORPORATIONS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Loan and Trust Corporations Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the amendments contained in this bill are made necessary by reason of the revision of the Statutes of Canada, and by the enactment last week by the Parliament of Canada of a new National Housing Act. These amendments are to bring the Loan and Trust Corporations Act into line with that legislation.

THE FIRE MARSHALS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Fire Marshals Act."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the new section contained in this bill will put into statutory form, the standards for couplings for 1½ inch, and 2½ inch fire hose, required by regulation since 1950. It is generally designed to implement the hose thread standardization programme.

A great deal has been done toward the standardization of hose threads for the purpose of fire equipment throughout the province, and a very large amount of money has been spent by this government to bring this about.

This bill, in substance, is designed to make sure that they cannot turn the clock back, and revert to some other standard of hose couplings, once the new standard has been introduced.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Legislative Assembly Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the first point in this bill is to substitute the "Chief Election Officer." for the "Clerk of the Crown in Chancery," to fit in with the amendments which will be brought forward in respect to the Election Act, which I hope to have ready for introduction tomorrow.

The second provision is to deal with a situation as it affects the hon. members of this House.

Under the present legislation, as the hon. members are aware, certain advances may be made to hon. members, to Mr. Speaker, and to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, against their indemnities. These advances are charged against the accrued indemnity, and the accrued expense allowance.

As the hon. members are aware, ⅓ of the total indemnity is earmarked as an expense allowance, and is not subject to income tax.

Hon. members who have been drawing the allowance up to $90 a month, against their indemnity, have found, in some cases, they have had some difficulty with the Income Tax Department, which regards that as income, and does not recognize the fact that part of that, at any rate, should be regarded as expense allowance.

This will provide that the whole of drawings of this kind, up to $90, will be drawings as against the expense allowance only, so there will be no difficulty or complication in that respect.

CERTAIN LANDS RE PORT ARTHUR ONTARIO HOSPITAL.

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act respecting certain lands in the City of Port Arthur, occupied by the Ontario Hospital, Port Arthur."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the Ontario Hospital in Port Arthur, of course, is on property which is owned by the Provincial Government. Certain arrangements have been made with reference to sewers and other facilities of that kind, and certain statutory clarifications have been considered necessary, and this is to deal with the situation, which I understand is not controversial. This is confirmation, really, of the agreement which has been arrived at.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: And requested by the City of Port Arthur.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes. I understand it was requested by the City of Port Arthur.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): You mean an agreement between Port Arthur and the government?

HON. MR. PORTER: Perhaps the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Griesinger) could go into the details of that situation better than I.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: The title to the property was never properly cleared, and has been pending, apparently, since 1939.

It was necessary to clarify the whole situation, and to introduce this bill. Otherwise, it would have required a Private Bill, and it was too late to get the Private Bill into this Legislature.

There is nothing controversial about it.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Public Service Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this amendment will bring the Registrars of Deeds, and their staffs, into the civil service on the same basis with respect to past services, as the other branches of the service.

THE LIQUOR LICENCE ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Liquor Licence Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, section 4 of the Election Act, 1951, deals with the Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, and this amendment transfers the powers and duties to the Chief Election Officer. Wherever the expression, "Clerk of the Crown in Chancery" appears in the statute, "Chief Election Officer" is being substituted.

THE PHARMACY ACT, 1953

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Pharmacy Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker. I know the hon. members of this House will have in mind the question as to why this was not proclaimed last year. May I say to the hon. members, Mr. Speaker, that we had word from the Federal Government saying they were going to make some major changes in the Food and Drug Act, which comes under their jurisdiction, and we held back proclamation of this Act until we received the new Food and Drug Act, which was either just before Christmas or immediately after—I am not sure which.

Then, owing to that fact, there were two minor changes which we had to make in these amendments, one of which is designed to give legal recognition to the professional activities of veterinary surgeons. The other provides that the Dean of the Faculty of Pharmacy at the University of Toronto is a member, ex-officio, of the council.

I might just say one more word, Mr. Speaker. The College of Pharmacy has recently become a faculty of the University of Toronto.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

TRAVELLING SHOWS ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Travelling Shows Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, I have been Treasurer of Ontario for some years, but up until last year I have never heard of the Act. We have made some changes in it, and the Comptroller of Revenue tells me they are sufficient for the purposes of regulation. These are some minor changes to bring the Act up-to-date.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Before the Orders of the day I would like to ask a question of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). On two occasions, in the House this year, he has given hon. members a list of contractors, 9 of them, I think, whose books and records have been seized for purposes of investigation. I ask the hon. Attorney-General if it is a fact that we are now going beyond contractors in the seizing of books, records and papers? Is it true that a lawyer in the City of Toronto has had his office closed and his books and records seized in the past few days?

HON. MR. PORTER: I am informed in this connection that one of these contractors, whom I mentioned, had lodged some of the books in a certain legal office. That is why the seizure was made there.

MR. OLIVER: It was because of this lawyer's relation with the contractor?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost) if he can inform the House concerning the motion asking for the tabling of the agreement, and correspondence relating thereto made available? Is the delay occasioned by any failure to consent on the part of the federal authorities?

HON. MR. FROST: I meant to mention this matter before in this House.

There is no difficulty about tabling the agreement. The difficulty arises because there are several thousand pieces of correspondence. This question is a very broad one. If it had referred, for instance, to letters dealing with specific matters it would be far easier. But I understand the motion is so broad it involves all the correspondence with the Federal Government, which comprises ordinary correspondence concerning a thousand and one routine matters. As I say, there are several thousand letters, in addition to the agreement and the other matters referred to.

I was going to suggest, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) should make his motion an order for return, and the papers could be laid before the Select Committee.

An attempt to make copies of these letters would involve a great deal of time and several thousand dollars of expenditure. There is no objection to letting matters come before the House and the committee. It is all a question of detail in doing it.

MR. OLIVER: May I say, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Prime Minister will appreciate the difficulty there is in differentiating between certain types of letters and others. I think, if he will give me the assurance that this information will be laid before the committee at the commencement of its sittings, I shall be satisfied.

HON. MR. FROST: I shall be very glad indeed to do so. This is a matter of detail, involving the difficulty of bringing all the letters down. In fact to make an order for return takes them out of circulation—they are being used, and so on. To make copies is, obviously, a matter of considerable time and expense. What the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) wants to do is to read the letters and we are very glad to help him to do that.

MR. OLIVER: I think—and the hon. Prime Minister will probably agree—I should press for the agreement itself to be tabled.

HON. MR. FROST: Of course. I think the agreement might be tabled right away if it is desired.

MR. OLIVER: That may not be necessary.

HON. MR. FROST: If I might revert to a motion and refer to this as a notice of a motion in relation to the bill, which the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) has introduced in connection with the Legislative Assembly Act.

Mr. Speaker, I propose to introduce a motion, of which I give notice, that a Select Committee of this House be appointed to consider the question of the allowance for expenses payable to hon. members of Select Committees sitting in the intervals between sessions of the Legislature under the provision of section 63 of The Legislative Assembly Act—the committee to sit at once and report to this House. If there is a recommendation, it can be incorporated in that bill. I propose the committee should be composed of 5 members, 3 from the government and 2 from the Opposition.

If the hon. Leader of the Opposition agrees, and if he will give me the names of two hon. members of the Opposition, I will be obliged. I might solicit the appointment of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) but without in any way limiting the hon. Leader of the Opposition in recommendations he may wish to make.

I might point out that the present allowance for expenses simply does not meet the out-of-pocket expenditure of the committee members. There are some important committees being appointed and I think we should recognize the fact that members sometimes have to meet the most extraordinary expenditure.

I was myself down in Ottawa last Friday night. I arrived there late at night and I left quite early the next morning. The only dissipation that I had was to invite the hon. Minister for Municipal Affairs (hon. Mr. Dunbar) to breakfast, and my bill up to that time was $17.35. I can assure hon. members that it was only a modest meal.

As for hon. members, who have to take the other two meals, luncheon and dinner, I do not know how they squeeze it into the allowance of $20 a day under present conditions. We might as well face that, and I am going to ask the Select Committee, if the House agrees to the motion, to give this situation due consideration.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

THE BUDGET

MR. R. M. MYERS (Waterloo South): Mr. Speaker, I propose to say a word or two about the Ontario Department of Welfare. Perhaps the greatest satisfaction I experience from being a member of the Legislature is in bringing to the attention of the department from time to time the case of some deserving man or woman eligible for one or other of the Ontario pensions. Many of the persons in need of assistance are what might be called borderline cases, and when doubt existed as to whether or not an applicant qualifies, the benefit of the doubt was given to the applicant.

It would seem that the influence of the Department of Welfare on the people of Ontario must be an ever increasing one. While the population of Ontario has increased tremendously in recent years, the increase in the numbers of men and women over 60 years of age has increased twice as rapidly as the increase in the general population.

Pension plans are very desirable features of our industrial life, but they add to some of our problems. For instance: usually an employer prefers to engage a comparatively young man so he may participate in the pension plans adopted very generally by industry in Ontario, and if a man seeking employment is over 40 or 45 years of age he may experience difficulty in finding work. Then again the men who, while able and willing to work, are retired and forced into idleness at 65 or thereabouts, present another problem.

There are in Ontario 46 Homes for the Aged operating under The Charitable Institutions Act with 3,600 beds, and it is interesting to note that of these:

- 14 are operated by the Roman Catholic Church;
- 14 by local charitable organizations;
- 7 by the Canadian National Institute for the Blind;
- 4 by the Salvation Army;
- 6 by other religious organizations;
- 1 by a fraternal order.

I think all of us were impressed when the Elderly Persons Housing Act was introduced in 1952, and the amendment to the Charitable Institutions Act providing for grants of $1,000 a bed for new construction was introduced in 1953, and it might be of interest to the House to know something of the result of the legislation to date.

So far only two municipalities, Owen Sound and York Township, have completed low housing rental units. These are rented for approximately $30 per month for single persons and $35 for couples, comprising in all 168 suites. Other units are in course of construction in Brantford, Windsor and Hamilton which when completed will provide 128 additional units.

Since the grant of $1,000 a bed authorized in 1951 for new construction, 3 new homes and an extension to another home with a total of 97 beds have been completed; 3 new homes with a total of 226 beds are under construction, and plans are being drawn for 3 new homes and 3 extensions which will have a total of 370 beds.

It is to be hoped that charitable organizations and churches will be encouraged by the available grants to extend the means of caring for our old people.

While it is all very well to provide accommodation in homes for people unable to care for themselves, we must bear in mind that the problem is not solely one of institutional care—there is a need in all of us to fill a useful place in life, and that brings me to the address made by the Minister over a network of radio stations about a month ago when he said:

At this time four departments of government, namely, Health, Welfare, Education and Labour, are engaged in rehabilitation work. These programmes involve numerous factors: medical treatment, vocational training and guidance, and placement, to mention a few. It is our intention to work for an immediate revision of our rehabilitation services.

I interviewed the Deputy Minister and some of the senior officials of the department as to the proposal mentioned in the Minister's address, to revise and expand the rehabilitation services rendered by the department, and obtained details of cases where disabled men and women had been trained and were able to again lead a useful life. I am sure you will be interested in learning something of the results accomplished.

First, let me say there are several associations doing a wonderful work in connection with the training and placing of persons suffering from a physical disability. Two of these, whose names frequently appear in files, were allowed to inspect our Amity Rehabilitation Centre at Hamilton and the centre maintained by the Society for Crippled Civilians at Toronto.

Now then for two or three typical cases from the department files.

There is the case of the young man, age 24, who has been paralyzed since the age of 2. The case came to the attention of the department in 1951. The young man had little education but a great deal of courage. It was decided that watchmaking would be an appropriate trade. This trade is taught at Ryerson Institute. To prepare him for admission to Ryerson he first matriculated. He is at present at Ryerson and doing very well.

Another case concerns a man, age 47, who lost a leg in 1948 and had not worked since. He was given a course in shoemaking at the Amity Centre and he is now employed at the centre as a supervisor.

There is the case of a young woman crippled because of polio. She was given a business training course. She is now the head girl in a factory office and works from her wheel chair.

Another teen-age and crippled girl was interested in sewing. She was given a course in tailoring and power sewing machine operating at the Amity Centre. She now has employment with a well-known firm of Hamilton tailors and earns $40 a week.

The files of the department contain many similar cases. The costs of education and training are shared, usually by the municipality and one or more departments of the government. It was satisfying to note from the files that industry has been co-operative in finding work for trained disabled persons.

The files disclose that finding employment for these disabled persons is a long, tedious process before suitable work is found—in one case there were 8 failures before permanent placement.

It is a great satisfaction to me, and I am sure to all of us, to know that the business of the training and placement of disabled persons is to be intensified, and I am pleased to know that the region comprising the counties of Waterloo, Wellington, Halton and Peel has been chosen as the one where the first studies are to be made. No doubt this forward step will result in other action which will give further service to the handicapped people of Ontario.

MR. STANLEY J. HUNT (Renfrew North): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

THE LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I wonder if that bill could be left over for a couple of days. This has been our busy week. Every night has been taken up with some function or other, and during the day we have attended committee meetings. I, for one, have not had an opportunity to look over the bill and I would appreciate it very much if the hon. Prime Minister would leave the bill over until next Monday, for instance.

HON. MR. FROST: If the hon. member insists, I will agree, but I would suggest to the hon. member that the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) proceed with second reading and give the explanation of the proposed legislation, which may assist the hon. member in connection with his appraisal of the situation. In committee I will be very glad to give the hon. member, or indeed any other hon. members, the fullest latitude to discuss it.

The principal matter relates to conciliations and, I think, it would perhaps assist the hon. members of the House if the hon. Minister of Labour gave a detailed explanation of the problem, and then on that section in committee I can assure the hon. member the fullest latitude will be given if he desires to speak at that time on labour relations generally, and we will not raise any objections.

MR. GRUMMETT: That would be satisfactory to me.

MR. SPEAKER: I want to clear one question. I will allow the hon. member to make a statement now.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is satisfactory to me. Mr. Speaker, provided when the bill goes into committee of the Whole House, I am permitted to go beyond any specific section.

HON. MR. FROST: That is quite all right.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the question whether it would not be more agreeable—

MR. SPEAKER: Let us have something before the House. We have nothing right now. May I ask that the motion be made, and we have discussion later. We are getting rather involved.

HON. MR. DALEY moves second reading of Bill No. 110, "An Act to amend The Labour Relations Act."

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the government a question along the same line raised by the hon. member (Mr. Grummett), but to add this: that the government agree that nothing take place except the explanation by the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) and then an hon. member move adjournment of the debate, so that the debate itself on second reading which is the debate on the principle of the bill, should take place at a time when the hon. members will have had an opportunity of becoming thoroughly acquainted with so vital a matter.

I think that would be acceptable, otherwise it is not, because I think the hon. members are not prepared to discuss this bill: we did not get it until 3 o'clock yesterday.

HON. MR. FROST: I would point out to the hon. member there is a great deal of work on the Order paper.

MR. SALSBERG: I know, but we got it too late.

HON. MR. FROST: I can assure the hon. member the bill will pass, but I will extend to him the same privilege which was extended to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett).

MR. SALSBERG: That is very wrong.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, in moving second reading of Bill No. 110, An Act to amend The Labour Relations Act of 1950, there are a number of things which I wish to bring to the attention of the House, and I wish to discuss some things in connection with labour relations which are not included in the Act.

When I introduced the original Act in 1950, I said at that time there would be things in it which might require changes, but that I felt it would take time and experience in its operation to determine just what those changes should be. Well, 4 years later, I am back with the bill before the Legislature to make the alternatives which I consider necessary to make improvements in our administrative practices.

First, I should like to say we are proud of the results which 4 years of operation under the Act have brought. I think it has worked exceeding well, and the amendments which I propose do not disturb the basic framework or principles upon which this legislation is founded.

I would like to read at this point a summary of exactly what has gone on. Since collective bargaining legislation was first introduced in Ontario in 1943, there has been a noteworthy improvement in the relations between employers and employees. Although trade union membership in Canada has doubled since 1931, so that one might have expected a rise in militancy on the part of trade unions, the percentage of persons who have gone on strike, lawfully as well as unlawfully, in the last decade has not risen to any great extent. Out of the working force of 3,782,000 non-agricultural wage and salary earners in Canada in 1952, only 120,818, or 3.2 per cent., were on strike during that year. The 10-year average was 4 per cent. That decade includes the year 1943, the eve of the introduction of labour relations legislation in Canada, when the percentage was 7.5; 1946 when the Federal Government's policy was challenged by trade unions and the percentage was 4.7; 1950 when the strike of railway employees occurred, raising the yearly percentage to 5.7.

The percentage of unlawful strikes constituted only a small fraction of these figures. Union recognition, formerly a major cause of industrial strife, is now dealt with effectively under the legislation, and strikes because of the refusal of an employer to recognize the trade union representing a majority of his employees, now rarely occur and are of very short duration.

By and large, the Labour Relations Act of 1950 has worked well, and the experience of the Department of Labour, as well as the briefs submitted to the government and to the department by interested groups of citizens, do not indicate the need for any major amendment except in one respect, and that is the conciliation provision of the Act.

Now, experience has indicated the need for some minor amendments. I will not deal with them at this time, but they will be included in the bill.

It is recommended that no provision be included in this Act requiring compulsory arbitration. A great many people have made representations to the government that we should have compulsory arbitration, in what are known as "vital industries"—public utilities—arising through the negotiations for collective agreements.

Compulsory arbitration of such disputes is opposed by trade unions, and by most employers. The adoption of a principle of compulsory arbitration, if carried to its logical conclusion, would inevitably lead to wage fixing, price fixing, and profit fixing, by a government agency.

The experience of the last decade in Ontario indicates that disputes in industries of this nature can be dealt with fairly effectively under existing legislation, and, up to the present time, the public has not been seriously inconvenienced. During the discussions preceding the preparation of the 1950 legislation, a scheme was drawn up providing for compulsory arbitration of disputes in public utilities and hospitals, and empowering the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to declare that any industry involved in a dispute which might effect the health or welfare of a community, be subject to the compulsory provisions of the legislation.

After considering the scheme, the government determined that it should not be included in the bill which was ultimately presented to the Legislature.

I want to pay tribute to those who have had a part in the organization of our hospitals. I would say if any group of people needed the bargaining power in union organizations, it was the employees in the hospitals.

Some years ago, this government granted them the right to organize. I am very happy to say that many times, when discussing this problem with the people whose duty it was to organize these workers, there has been no question of strike, and I think it would be an unnecessary piece of legislation to have compulsory arbitration, even in the hospitals, which in my opinion, are one of the most vital projects.

It is recommended that no change be made in the legislation which would empower the Labour Relations Board to terminate bargaining rights ("de-certify") of trade unions which engage in unlawful strikes. It is a function of the Department of Labour to settle strikes, whether lawful or unlawful, and any legislative provision which destroys bargaining rights of a trade union, representing the majority of the employees of an employer, makes the task more difficult.

I do not think my conciliation officers should be dealing with these parties in an endeavour to settle the strikes and it is considered that nothing in this Act in the nature of decertifying a union be enacted because, in the opinion of some, it has gone on an unlawful strike.

I would like to give a brief summary of statistics. I have them here. I will not read them, but they will be included in Hansard. They will show the actual strike results of the workers in Ontario. As I say, I will not read the whole thing, but I will simply call the attention of the hon. members to one or two items.

In 1952, which people thought was a very bad year, when there were several very important difficulties in industry, which were eventually cleared up—in the Ontario jurisdiction, the estimated total of wage and salary workers in non-agricultural industries in Ontario was 3.0 per cent., while in the whole of Canada, it was 3.4. So you will see our record has been very good. In the period from 1941 to 1946, it was 3.5 for Ontario, and 4.2 for all of Canada.

In 1947, to 1952, it was 2.4 per cent. in Ontario, and 3.0 per cent. for the whole of Canada.

Between 1941 and 1952—covering that period of time—it was 2.9 in Ontario and 3.6 for the whole of Canada.

So hon. members will see in the actual administration of this legislation, Mr. Speaker, it is true that the record does not disclose that the Act has not worked reasonably well, in spite of various pieces of labour legislation in other provinces, which differ from ours, but that the over-all picture of ours can be considered to be pretty good.

I will now file this statement in full, and it will appear in Hansard, as I have said.

1941-1952	2.9	3.6

¹Total wage and salary workers in Ontario, as estimated by the Labour Force Survey section of the Dominion Bureau of Statistics, less an estimated number of workers in steam railways, communications and banking, under federal jurisdiction.

²Strike figures from annual reports on strikes and lockouts, published by the federal Department of Labour. These figures do not include workers involved in strikes in industries under federal jurisdiction.

³Official figures adjusted to include an estimated 2,128 workers involved in the packinghouse strike in Ontario.

⁴Compiled from preliminary figures in the Department of Labour monthly report on strikes and lockouts.

*NOTE: Because of the type of classification used in the Dominion Bureau of Statistics published data on employment, it is impossible to obtain exact figures on the number of workers in Ontario who are employed by industries under federal jurisdiction. Reasonably valid estimates can be made for employment in the main federal industries—railways, telephones, radio broadcasting, and banking, but it so far has proved impossible to account for workers in lake shipping, civil aviation, and federal civil servants. Although it is likely that the number involved is a relatively small proportion of the total number of wage and salary workers in Ontario this gap in the available data means that the incidence of strikes in Ontario, as indicated by the percentage figures in this table, tends to be an underestimate.

At the outset, I should like to pay tribute to the good sense and judgment which has been displayed by the great majority of business people and labour leaders in this province. Against the mighty growth of industry in Ontario in the past several years, these men and women have worked hard to promote industrial peace which is the only atmosphere in which industry can thrive and our people be prosperous. In their bargaining they have been keen and alert and have made substantial gains for their members. At the same time, our business has increased. If ever a province has grown both in its economy and prosperity and the attractiveness of our economic climate, I should like to point to the index which we have in the Department of Labour. Every new factory and every new shop or office building more than two stories high, and every addition or extension to them must be erected according to plans approved by our engineers. For the last four fiscal years, the value of new plants or buildings is as follows:

1949-50	$ 65,116,450
1950-51	116,826,900
1951-52	104,088,400
1952-53	158,339,800

Up to the end of February, 1954, the value of new plants for which plans were approved was $120,078,600.

So you can see we are not falling behind. Industry still has great faith in this province.

For the 4 complete years and the incomplete figures for the current fiscal year, the total value of plans approved was $564,450,150. This was for every type and kind of industry and business.

Union activity has continued unabated during these past 5 years, and nowhere has the trade union movement made more gains in membership, and I believe, in economic conditions, than in Ontario.

If ever a government has had a vote of confidence as to its approach to industrial relations and economic development, I think it is the present Government of Ontario.

We have not thrown road-blocks in the way of the trade union movement as it moved along in its organization drives. There have been no sudden and unsettling shifts in our policies on labour relations. Both labour and management have realized that it has been our desire to see as much bargaining as possible carried on between the parties themselves without the intervention of the Department of Labour.

We have felt that we have created an atmosphere in which good industrial relations can flourish. We have been impartial in our application of the legislation we administer. At times, we have been accused of being "soft" or "weak," but our critics have mistaken an attitude of confidence on our part that sound judgment would prevail in any situation, even if a dispute were bitter.

All of us have responsibilities and we must assume and discharge them. There is no place where this is so necessary than in connection with collective bargaining. Too often, people are prone to make irresponsible attacks on government to cover up their own indecision, their bad guesses, their lack of qualities of leadership, their lack of courage to face the facts of situations, and to tell these facts to the people they represent.

I believe in people and I have always felt that you must rely on the good sense of the people. I have done that all through my political career, and I have never felt let down in my confidence in the people. I come from a large industrial riding and three times in the 10 years I have been Minister of Labour, I have gone back and laid before its people the record of service of the government and, particularly, what I have tried to do in the Department of Labour. Each time the government has been returned, with a growing representation, to voice the approval of every section of the province. So that only goes to prove, Mr. Speaker, that the people recognize sound administration, and will fight shy of any group or Party that does not treat all sections of our people on the same basis.

And so they prefer to support a government that is drawn from every element of our community seeking to keep this province strong and prosperous.

In the field of industrial relations, we have had some stirring times and difficult problems. But we have never retreated from the idea that government intervention should come only after the parties have done their utmost to resolve their own problems. We are always on the alert for trouble, and will always do our best when we are called on to help.

Before I get into the actual discussion of the things contained in the Act, I would like to mention a few of the things we have included.

With regard to municipal employees, representations have been made continuously to me that these should be included under the benefits and the provisions of this Act. It is well known that when the Act was first established it was felt that as municipal employees worked for municipal councils properly elected, these men should not be included in the Act, but that if the municipal authorities so wished they could pass a by-law which would have the effect of including them.

I myself have always felt that the municipal employees, like all other workers, should have the right to the benefits and the protection of organization, and come under the protection of the Labour Relations Act. So, hon. members will recall, we changed the Act so as to include all municipal employees. If the municipal council, the elected people of the municipality, decided it did not want the Act to have this effect, it could pass a by-law accordingly.

I can say, Mr. Speaker, that the results have been very good. A great many municipalities have their employees' organization and there have been very few, indeed, which have seen fit to pass a by-law excluding their people. I say definitely, with these rulings in mind, that for a municipal government to pass a by-law excluding its men is undesirable. In the first place, the men are entitled to its protection, and, in the second place, the citizens of the municipality are entitled also to the protection that this Act provides for the continuance of their services. Without this Act, civic employees can strike overnight. Under this Act, there are certain procedures, conciliation and various other steps, which provide protection for the citizens as well as for the organized workers. So I make the statement very frankly, I do not believe municipal authorities should pass municipal by-laws preventing the men from enjoying the benefits and protection of this Act. However, we do not take that right away from them. They are elected, and they have to appear before the people at the end of their term.

We received many recommendations that there should be strike votes before a union would be permitted to go on strike. I have refused to write anything of the kind into this Act. I do not think a person would have to be very naive to know that it was not the unions which asked for this. I am one of those who believe that an organization, such as a trade union, has responsibilities. I do not believe any interference with the internal policy of a union is desirable. Unions, after all, have their own constitutions and they should be permitted to conduct their own affairs. I see in this suggestion, if we adopted it, interminable delay which would settle nothing, the necessity of appointing scrutineers, places of voting and a means of deciding who should be eligible to vote on the question of a strike.

No, Mr. Acting Speaker, as has been suggested, I would have to establish who were eligible to vote. Consider what would be entailed. How would I collect the voters? Those hon. members who were present at the meeting of the Standing Committee on Lands and Forests this morning will know how the workers in that particular industry are scattered over miles and miles of bush. How could I ever conduct a vote among such people? It would be impracticable. And I believe it is wrong that legislation should interfere with the conduct of a union. In my opinion, this is the type of thing which should be left to the parties who are concerned in the bargaining. Why should we interfere with the orderly process of the parties determining for themselves what they should include in a collective agreement? That is the privilege of a trade union.

To my way of thinking, this legislation was never intended to do the collective bargaining for either party. This legislation is intended to clear away the preliminary disputes which could arise as to the right of a trade union to represent the employees in a given unit, as to the recognition by the employer of the trade union chosen by his employees as its bargaining agent, so that the parties may get down to bargaining for an agreement.

I have discussed the question of a strike vote before a strike would be legal. I feel if there is any doubt or hesitation on the part of anyone whether a strike is or is not supported by the employees, this can only be resolved by the men themselves taking a greater interest in the operation of the union to which they belong. Large unions, such as the Railway Brotherhoods, have conducted strike ballots in the past and no one has ever questioned the results. If, through indifference or through any other reason an employee finds himself on strike without expressing his views on the subject, he has no one to blame but himself, because he has not taken any part in the meetings of the union at which strike action is approved.

My experience leads me to believe that the locals of national and international unions are meticulous in carrying out the provisions of their constitutions before carrying out strike action.

In connection with this matter, it is interesting to note that a similar, though less drastic proposal, was formally rejected in the British Parliament last month by Prime Minister Churchill. Sir Waldron Smithers had suggested strikes be made illegal except where the workers themselves voted by secret ballot in favour of the walkout. Sir Winson replied: "The government has no intention of departing from the established tradition in this country, under which the trade union movement is left to manage its own affairs to the fullest extent possible without government interference."

We have had a great deal of discussion concerning the check-off which is considered to be a form of union security. There are no provisions in this Act for compulsory check-offs. I believe the check-off, or any form of union security, should be acquired through collective bargaining. It can and has been achieved, first, by establishing confidence in the minds of the workers and, second, by establishing a feeling of security in the minds of the employers. Organized labour has received great impetus in its efforts in this province. The Act gives the workmen the right to belong to the union of their choice without fear of discrimination. It gives them the right of free bargaining, and it requires the employers to deal with the workers' representatives. It states the pattern of conciliation and arbitration, and nowhere else has organized labour made the progress that it has made right here in Ontario. The unions' security, in my opinion, is in the realm of collective bargaining, and I will not, as Minister of Labour, recommend legislation in that field. If we followed that course, we would soon legislate collective bargaining out of the picture, and everything would be done by legislation. I might point out there are 12 states in the USA which have legislation for check-off purposes. They require, as would be required here if we passed such legislation, certain things such as the signing of the cards and so on. But in none of these states is it compulsory. The Taft-Hartley Act makes it illegal, although the authorization card is signed. That is exactly what this suggested Act would require. None of those states have legislation requiring collective check-offs, and, if the collective agreement expires, the check-off expires, too. So if the card is signed over there and the agreement terminates, the check-off is gone with the agreement.

The clinching point about all this American legislation is that it does not make the check-off compulsory by legislation, but regulates it where it has been won by collective bargaining. This leads me to believe our position is sound.

As I see it, the best place to leave this question is right in the hands of the parties. Let me turn to the bill itself. One of the first changes we propose to make has to do with the recognition of bargaining through a council of trade unions. The best example I can give is in connection with the great Niagara power project. Wages and working conditions on this immense construction, which involves an expenditure of over $300 million, have been fixed by collective bargaining between the Ontario Hydro-Electric Commission Board and a group of 17 or 18 international trade unions represented by a trade or trades union council. The whole operation has proceeded without a hitch and a collective agreement has been signed. This shows clearly what can be done in the way of collective bargaining.

We are therefore inserting in the legislation provisions whereby bargaining by such councils will be acknowledged and protection under the legislation given to their agreements. You must understand that bargaining through councils is by voluntary arrangement between the parties, and councils are not given the right to apply for certification under the legislation.

The next important change which is being made is to change the conciliation process to reduce delays. I may say that the question of delay has caused us considerable concern in the department and we have endeavoured to carry out the procedures under the Act.

I am making two suggestions to the Legislature for changes:

- (1) To reduce the times in which steps are to be taken under the Act:
- (2) To empower the Minister of Labour to refuse to appoint a Board of Conciliation where he considers it would serve no useful purpose.

As to the first item, we have cut 24 days off the times provided in the legislation. Five days have been cut from 20 days allowed under section 11 of the Act for the commencement of bargaining. Fifteen days have been cut from the 50 days during which bargaining must continue before an application for conciliation services can be made under the Act. Four days have been cut from the times allowed for the selection of the members and chairmen of boards of conciliation.

I should like to point out to the House that The Labour Relations Act requires that the parties shall "bargain in good faith and make every reasonable effort to make a collective agreement" (section 11). Before the Labour Relations Board will grant a request for conciliation services, it endeavours to satisfy itself that real bargaining has gone on. As many of you are aware, it is unusual if several meetings do not take place between the company and union representatives before an agreement is reached. Remember the parties are bargaining "on their own," and no conciliation officer is in the picture at this point.

When the conciliation officer comes on the scene, he has 14 days, or such further time as the parties may agree upon, or as the Minister may allow, to arrange a settlement of the dispute. This period cannot be reduced because our experience shows that all parties are anxious to spend the time in concentrated negotiation. If the time limit expires and the parties are anxious to continue their meetings with the officer, it is obvious that the time will have to be extended to complete the work.

I may say that I am proud of the job which the conciliation service has done. We have 11 officers in this type of work, and for the fiscal year 1952-53, for which our annual report has just been filed, these men handled over 1,000 conciliation matters. 600 were settled by them. Over 100 were still going on at the end of the fiscal year. Some 295 boards of conciliation were established.

The first step in the procedure, therefore, is to get the board constituted, the second is to get it to sit, and the third is to get the report in from the board if a settlement is not effected.

I can say the system has worked very well, even in the face of these difficulties, which we have had and, beyond the reductions in time, I suggest no change.

It rests with the parties to make it work and produce settlements, and we will co-operate to the fullest extent.

The last thing involved in the conciliation procedure is the granting of power to the Minister to refuse to appoint a Board of Conciliation. This is not new. It was in previous legislation, but in 1950 we dropped it. We think it should be restored because each year some situations arise where to appoint a Board of Conciliation would be just a waste of time and money, and accomplishes nothing but delay. Of course, it would be necessary in the case where the Minister has refused a Board of Conciliation that the unions and management be notified within 7 days after the members refused a board that they are in a legal position to take whatever action they may deem advisable.

Section 6 (2) of the Act is also amended to provide definitely that persons who are employed in a group with skilled craftsmen may also be represented on a craft unit basis by the union through which the skilled workmen bargain.

MR. SALSBERG: Is that new?

HON. MR. DALEY: Yes. There are groups of skilled people who may be possibly in one corner of an industry, for example, operating engineers, or who may be coal passers and probably not particularly skilled, but it is deemed advisable that those people should be included with the people with whom they work in their bargaining unit.

Some of these sections I have here simply deal with the question of the Trade Councils. A great many of the sections are necessary because of the change we are making in that regard, and I will not take up the time of the House at this point with them. These matters can be gone into very thoroughly during the committee stage.

The principal things are those which have been mentioned. I would say in conclusion, Mr. Speaker, that after a period of 11 years, we are revising this Act. A portion of that time was when the Labour Court was in existence. Then came the pressure of the Unions to change that Labour Court into a Labour Relations Board, where they would have a greater opportunity to express themselves. The court appeared at that time to be too judicial, and the government agreed with them and established the Labour Relations Board.

We have had 11 years' experience now, with amendments brought in from time to time, and I say, Mr. Speaker, in this great industrial province, with the ever-increasing activity of our people, the ever-increasing tempo of the organization of the workers, that our Act has worked extremely well. Had we gone in for these drastic changes which are mentioned, which we have not done, and upset the basic principles, we have gone along on an even keel with it, improving it wherever it was deemed advisable to do so, and after these 11 years I suggested a revision of the Act which has taken us practically all winter, working with the people who have great knowledge in administering this sort of legislation. I would say probably my associates are as skilled as any body we could find, certainly in this country.

I deem these changes we have suggested here improve our Act, and do not in any way interrupt or interfere with the basic principles, namely that people be allowed to organize, that they be allowed to elect their bargaining representatives, that they be allowed to belong to a union without fear of discrimination, and that employers must, in the event of certification or organization of the workers, deal with them, that negotiations shall be proceeded with in an orderly manner and that we, as a Labour Department, provide the atmosphere for good relationship, a place to meet when things get to the point where negotiations have broken down.

I think, Mr. Speaker, if the House adopt these amendments I have suggested, it will bring about an improvement. It certainly will not be everything everybody would like to see written in; labour would like a great many more things in this. On the other hand, industry would like curtailment of labour's powers, but I say that is a healthy sign. If we were absolutely in agreement with either one of them, I would say there was something wrong with it.

The results which I indicated in the table of the strike position over the period of years, indicates to me that the Act is a good one and I appeal for the support of the hon. members.

MR. SALSBERG: On a point of order, Mr. Speaker, is it possible for an hon. member at this stage to speak on the technical side of the motion before the House, that is whether the bill should be read a second time, without touching upon the principle in the legislation contained in that bill?

I am very serious because I would like to speak on the technical aspect of the motion and not on the principle of the legislation contained therein, but I want to argue against the reading of the Act a second time now.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know what the hon. member means.

MR. SPEAKER: We have only one motion before the House, which is that the bill be read a second time. I think there is no question as to the legality of the motion in the ordinary procedure, that the principle of the motion is now under consideration.

I think there can be no other question except as to whether the bill will be read a second time. That is just an opinion, which I present. This is an entirely new question which never has been raised and my immediate opinion is: we have a motion and we can discuss it.

Whether there is a technicality as to whether we should have another motion is something which has never been raised before.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to discuss the technical aspects of the motion; that is, I want to argue that we should not read this bill a second time, without touching on the legislation.

HON. MR. FROST: Without what?

MR. SALSBERG: Without dealing with the legislation contained in the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh, no.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon, there is nothing unreasonable about it at all.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is perfectly in order and there is no question as to the technicalities involved. We have an ordinary motion which was made, that we now have second reading of the bill, and I do not think we are going to begin arguing the matter of the technical procedure of second reading. If we did, we would be here for many years to come, because if I allowed this to go through every time we had second readings, and ruled it may be discussed technically, we would never get through. I think we must accept the principle that we have a motion for second reading and discuss that motion.

MR. SALSBERG: I did not intend to speak on the legislation and I am aware that the hon. Prime Minister indicated I would have an opportunity to speak on the principle of it in committee stage, but after listening to the introduction by the hon. Minister I have decided to speak on the technical aspects of the motion before us, which I think is quite in order.

In other words, I intend to speak as to whether the motion should carry, whether the bill before us should be read a second time.

MR. SPEAKER: The member has a perfect right if he wants to speak on second reading, but that is not a technical matter at all.

MR. SALSBERG: I could move that it not be read a second time, could I?

MR. SPEAKER: If you have some hon. member second it.

MR. SALSBERG: Maybe someone will. I have a motion already written that it not be read a second time. Now, if someone is willing to second the motion—

Well, then, those who might second it, might want some time to consider. I will discuss it later.

MR. SPEAKER: I want to make it quite clear that if an attempt is going to be made to have one speech dealing with the technical aspects of the motion, and a second speech on the same subject dealing with the principle of the bill, the hon. member will be ruled out of order immediately. We know there is only one speech allowed on second reading. I hope that is not what the hon. member had in mind.

MR. SALSBERG: Frankly, the "hon. member" did have that in mind, but now that you disallow it, I will of course abide by your ruling, and I want to speak on the bill in second reading now.

Mr. Speaker, I consider this action of the government as being in utter contempt of the trade union movement of this province. I have yet to see a more contemptuous approach to so large and so important a section of our population as is revealed by the action of the government in insisting that this bill, which is perhaps the most important labour legislation introduced by the government in the last 4 years, should be rushed through today and receive second reading.

It is all right for the hon. Minister of Labour to get up and read a prepared sermon on the great accomplishments of his department, and hope that this will mollify people and will be accepted as gospel insofar as this government's labour policies and accomplishments are concerned.

I say that in insisting on the course which this government is pursuing, it is not only cynical and contemptuous of the unions in refusing, first, that this legislation go to committee, so that the trade unions would have a chance to express an opinion on this legislation and make presentations, but the government goes a step further and insists that it be discussed even though the Opposition is not prepared to discuss it, and even though the government fully knows that the trade unions of this province did not have a chance to properly acquaint themselves with the bill which is now before the House.

What happened, Mr. Speaker, was this: the bill was introduced last Thursday, a week ago today. It did not come before this House in printed form before Tuesday afternoon, and late Tuesday afternoon at that. We found it when we came into the Chamber. We had a night session on Tuesday; we were all occupied as the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has said since then, and I was not able to make copies available to some union leaders who were in touch with me about it until yesterday afternoon, when they were mailed. They may have received copies of this bill today, but they have not had a chance to discuss it, digest it, or express their opinion even privately to hon. members or privately to the hon. Prime Minister, or privately to the hon. Minister of Labour.

Therefore, they are, on the one hand, denied the most elementary right granted every other group of the population when legislation affecting them is before the House, but they are now also denied the opportunity of making personal presentations either to government members or to private members.

HON. MR. DALEY: Fifty of them made presentations this morning to the government.

MR. SALSBERG: This amounts to an insult to the trade unions of this province, and they do not deserve that.

Mr. Speaker, in the House of Commons—

HON. MR. DALEY: Does the hon. member think this wins favour with the trade union movement for him? No trade union movement would have the hon. member, Mr. Speaker.

HON. MR. PORTER: They are all against the hon. member. I do not know what he is getting all stirred up about.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Diefenbaker came out with an attack on the Liberal Government, on the way it treats the House of Commons, and Parliament generally. I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that Mr. Diefenbaker—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. member for St. Andrew, in no place in his lifetime has he received more indulgence and consideration than in this House.

MR. SALSBERG: What indulgence?

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member asks to be placed on committees, and he is given that opportunity. He is given the opportunity to speak, and then he talks about "over-riding the rights of Parliament and the people."

May I point out that in no Legislature—and I include all the Parliaments of Canada and elsewhere—has there been more care taken to give the representatives of the people full opportunity to exercise the right to look into matters, than has been afforded here. I refer the hon. member to the extent of the committees' work in this Legislature.

Mr. Speaker, the hon. member knows that what he is saying is entirely incorrect.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I will never say anything that is incorrect, and I feel the hon. Prime Minister should accept my assurance, that I will never do that. I never do.

HON. MR. FROST: All right, Mr. Speaker; I accept what the hon. member says, but his actions do not lend colour to what he has asserted.

I think the hon. member should recognize this matter was mentioned in the Speech from the Throne. This morning, the hon. Minister of Labour mentioned it to one of the important delegations here. There is no secret about it. The matter has been discussed and re-discussed. The delegation seemed to be familiar with it—

MR. SALSBERG: They are? Mr. Speaker, the interruption by the hon. Prime Minister is not unwelcome. I do not mind listening to him. I think he does not mind listening to me, unless when it hurts him. I will say that when it hurts him, it hurts me more. I do not like to say these things, but I say them because I think I must.

All I said was that Mr. Diefenbaker, in the House of Commons, experienced nothing compared to the procedure followed in this House, when he complained against the manner in which Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe handled certain matters.

A piece of legislation of this sort should be taken before the Labour Committee, and the trade union movement should not be contemptuously told, "We are not interested in your opinions." The hon. members in the Opposition have not had the opportunity of looking at the bill. That is something of which I have never experienced since I have been here. I do not think the government should have taken any such stand in regard to the bill.

If the bill had dealt with cows or horses—

HON. MR. DALEY: The hon. member said that yesterday.

MR. SALSBERG:—or any other animal, the bill would have been sent to the proper committee, and notification been given to every association who had to do with the subject matter of the bill.

There was a bill introduced recently in regard to the dairy industry. Certain branches of the industry came and asked that the bill be held back, because they had only just received a copy of it. Of course, the government quite properly, and very agreeably, consented to hold back the bill. But, on this occasion, the government refuses to hold this bill back for second reading, even though the Opposition has said it has had no chance to study it. The reason is obvious. I do not think the labour movement deserves this contemptuous approach. The government could have waited for a few days. It knew it was going to introduce this legislation. It could have been presented earlier than a week ago. It is not proper, since this bill was only presented to us in this Chamber on Tuesday, at three o'clock, in printed form. Certainly, the least the hon. members on this side of the House are entitled to is sufficient time to study this bill and the trade union movement should have an opportunity of studying a matter which affects it so greatly.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is creating a man of straw. The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) raised the point that consideration of this bill should be left over. I pointed out to the hon. member the passage of time, and the fact we would like to proceed, and said that the very able explanation given by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) would assist all hon. members of the House to understand the legislation. I should think the hon. member for St. Andrew, having heard that explanation, with his capacity to understand, by now should be thoroughly conversant with the principles of the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, may I say to the hon. Prime Minister it was not an explanation of a bill; it was a hallelujah to the hon. Minister himself, and his department.

HON. MR. FROST: It is quite impossible not to give some rather eulogistic references to very able and good legislation. I said to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) and later to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that the explanation given by the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) would probably clarify the situation, and then the hon. members would have full opportunity to discuss the whole matter again in committee.

I say, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. member for Cochrane South, the hon. member for St. Andrew, and to all other hon. members of the House, if they can show me a convincing and good reason for adding anything to the bill, the government is broad-minded enough to accept such additions when the time comes. I think that gives the hon. members the greatest possible latitude.

I cannot imagine the hon. member for St. Andrew being able to do that, but the hon. member for Cochrane South is a very able gentleman and he may have something to add to this bill when it is in committee. We will be only too glad to give it the fullest consideration.

Motion agreed to: second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in committee; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, yesterday afternoon or evening, a discussion arose, originating with the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon) and referred to by the hon. Minister of Health, in relation to the fluoridation of water.

I have noticed several articles in the press referring to the advisability of this water treatment. I know there were articles written in some papers, in support of fluoridation, and some against.

I realize the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon) has pronounced views on this. He produced some references as to the effect on the teeth of people, which, I think, carries a good deal of weight. With the known shortage of dentists in Ontario, as was referred to in the budget, if we could do anything to save the teeth of people, we want to do it.

I have discussed this matter with the hon. Minister of Health. There is a serious question whether fluorine, if put into water, will not have some effect on the health of the people in other ways.

As the result of what has been said, we have decided to refer this matter to the University of Toronto, to the Department of Dentistry, and the Faculty of Medicine, and ask them to make a complete and thorough investigation, and report to the hon. Minister of Health in due course.

Of course, these things usually cost some money. We are prepared to pay the expenses of the university for obtaining, for us, a report on the whole subject, which, perhaps, will assist in clarifying the issue.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH (Continued)

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, perhaps the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) would like to repeat this question in regard to Vote 57.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Minister if he will wait for a moment as the hon. member for Brantford (Mr. Gordon) would like to say a few words.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Certainly.

MR. G. T. GORDON (Brantford): Mr. Chairman, when I spoke of the fluoridation experiment in Brantford, I was speaking of the actual results of the tests, while those opposed to it speak of something which might happen here, or might happen there.

We have had 8 years of this experiment in Brantford. The government is represented on our Fluorine Committee. We also have a representative from the Canadian Dental Association, and Dr. Brown, from the Federal Department of Health, is on the committee. This matter has been thoroughly investigated, and each year has shown an increase in the dental health of our children. We are speaking of results which have been obtained, not of what might be. In addition to that, we have not found in any way at all, according to our Medical Officer of Health, that it has been injurious to any of our people.

The opposition to fluoridation seems to speak of something in Africa, or some other place, and what might be happening here and there. We are speaking of what has actually happened, and the results which have been obtained.

I believe the money which has been paid by our city, and the government, will be fully repaid by the improvement insofar as the health of our children is concerned. Also, I am sure it will extend to the rest of Canada when people see the results we have obtained.

The Medical Officer of Health in Hamilton attended one of our meetings. At the conclusion, he said, "I am amazed when I see what you have accomplished. Why can we not get it started in Hamilton?"

It is only the pretenders who oppose it, those who do not know what will happen in the future.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I know that the government has been contributing to the experiment in Brantford, ever since its inception during the time the late hon. Mr. Kelley was Minister of Health, the predecessor of the present hon. Minister. I am aware there is provincial representation on the board.

The experiment is one which is of very great interest. The purpose of having the University of Toronto look into this matter is because the provincial members on the board feel there are matters of great interest in connection with this. As the hon. Minister of Health said yesterday, there has not been a determination on the part of Dr. Berry and others, in respect to this important work. Perhaps it is time to have the experiment viewed by some experts, who are outside of it altogether, who are independent, and can look at this problem, probably in a more objective way.

MR. OLIVER: Have there been examinations and reports made by the Dental Association and the Medical Association?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I do not know.

MR. OLIVER: Are they on file now?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Yes. We have a file on it about 40 inches thick.

HON. MR. FROST: As big as the Trans-Canada file.

HON. MR. MACKINNON PHILLIPS (Minister of Health): As a matter of fact, it is a little larger.

The trouble is that there is a great mass of this evidence and its implications are not yet very clear. There are three factors involved. The first is oral hygiene, the second is the excess of carbohydrate intake; the third is the proportion of sodium chloride being added to the water. I was very glad to hear the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) say he might have the University of Toronto look into this and give us an unbiased report. I have approached them and asked: "Does this do good?" The answer was: "Yes. It increases the thickness of the enamel of the tooth, which means it is an aid in preventing decay." If I go further and ask them: "Does it do any harm to the system in any way?" the answer is: "We do not know. We doubt if we shall know before 1956 or 1957." I think we should wait until the university has made a survey and reported to us.

MR. GRUMMETT: I wish to ask a question about Vote 57, item 4. That concerns the payment of the $5 examination fee covering examinations of expectant mothers. The total amount set out in the Estimates is $295,000. This would provide for 59,000 examinations. I wish to ask the hon. Minister whether he thinks this amount of money is being spent to the advantage of the people of the province, or whether it is being spent to the advantage of the members of the medical profession who receive the fees. How does this come into the general over-all picture? Is it to the benefit of the people of Ontario?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, the question asked by the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) has a great deal of merit. We have already given it careful consideration. This money was provided, in the first place, for two reasons—first, in order that expectant mothers might go to their doctors earlier in pregnancy, and, second, that it might help in the prevention of V.D.

We in the Department of Health feel that this should be carried on for another year or so, probably longer. We feel the provision has done a great deal of good. How long we must carry it on is problematic, but we think it would be a great error to stop at the present time. Nevertheless, we have certainly given much consideration to the question asked.

HON. MR. FROST: I would be interested to learn the reaction to this of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). He mentioned the desirability of this provision. Has he any particular opinion on it?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) does not think that this money should go to the lawyers?

MR. GRUMMETT: Oh no, nor to the doctors. I am doubtful whether this means so much to the people. I am doubtful whether it means anything in the way of prevention of disease. The hon. Minister has suggested that it might reveal the presence of venereal disease sooner. I doubt whether that is a fact. Those who have venereal disease and know it would go to their own doctor for examination or for treatment without taking advantage of this provision. I cannot see that the results produced justify the expenditure of the money we are spending from year to year on these examinations.

MR. NIXON: Does this $300,000 come off the patients' bill from the doctor?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We have no control over doctors' bills, but it certainly did not come off my bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): One may question whether the single visit is satisfactory. The conclusion reached from that should be, I suggest, that the service needs extending so as to provide more than a single visit. I certainly do not think we should leave the matter suspended in mid-air with a suggestion, as far as I can gather, that the whole experiment may be done away with. In other provinces, much more is done for expectant mothers by the provincial health department than is done in Ontario, though I am not going to discuss this in detail at the moment. There may be a question as to whether one visit is enough. That does not prove the service should be done away with, but that it ought to be extended in the future.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I would say this, in response to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg). I can assure him that it will not be held in mid-air. We shall give consideration either to continuing this service or to spending the money in a better way.

MR. SALSBERG: Not without notice?

HON. MR. FROST: Oh no.
Votes 57 and 58 agreed to.

MR. D. H. MORROW (Carleton): Under Vote 59, item 5, I note that $115,000 is being provided to train nursing assistants. I think this is definitely a step in the right direction, providing that the graduates do not go beyond their training and infringe on the duties that should be performed by registered nurses.

What I want to ask the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) is this: does the sum of $115,000 cover more than one training course? I understand that in the City of Ottawa there is such a course being set up for certified nursing assistants, and I was wondering whether there are similar courses to be set up in other parts of the province?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: When I became Minister of Health in August, 1950, we had about 38 per cent. shortage in the nursing field. Today, in spite of the increase in the population amounting to about 1 million, we have reduced that shortage by 10 per cent. until the shortage is now a little over 20 per cent. Last fall, we had at least 25 or 30 per cent. more qualified applicants wishing to enter our 60 training schools in Ontario and our general hospitals and other hospitals—more than the training facilities could take care of.

That applies to registered nurses. In all of these courses, after they graduate, they receive a bursary of $1,025 per year in addition to money for books, and for transportation if they have to come from some distance away. In the last few years we have graduated about 50 students under the bursary scheme. There are, in addition, a few who are on their own. These have been absorbed. On the whole, we are just about keeping abreast of our population increase so far as public health nurses are concerned. We are very proud of what has been done. With regard to our nursing associations, the first class graduated in 1947. Since 1946 we have graduated 1,143 nursing assistants and we have 119 at present in training. Formerly, we had schools at Toronto, Fort William and Kingston. We are moving the Kingston school, at the request of the Kingston people, to Ottawa. We have a new school at Hamilton, and we are contemplating a new school at Sudbury. So we shall have altogether, this fall, 5 schools operating for these nursing assistants instead of 3, a 40 per cent. increase, and these girls are doing a marvellous job.

MR. GRUMMETT: Can the hon. minister (Mr. Phillips) tell us whether many of these assistants go on to become registered nurses? Do many of them go on and take the ordinary nurse's course?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We are hoping in future to have 2 admission standards, although applicants will take the same course. Our present admission standards call for 2 years in high school. Now, after a girl has done 5 years, she may go on. But, as to the past, the answer is "No." They have not had the admission requirements to go on and train to be registered nurses.

MR. MORROW: I am pleased to hear there are more centres being established for these certified nursing assistants' courses, and that the department is giving help to more registered nurses to qualify for employment in public health work. It is generally recognized we have a great shortage of registered nurses in this province, and it is very difficult to attract more entrants to the profession. I have often felt that, perhaps, we should have some sort of incentive to attract our senior matriculation girls graduating from our high schools in order that they might have encouragement to take up nursing as a career.

To go through our Teachers' Colleges, and even at the University of Ottawa, those in need may apply for loans to help them through their year. I was thinking, perhaps, some sort of incentive could be given to our high school senior matriculant girls in order to outfit them and prepare them for a nursing career, because it is that first year which is difficult for them to get by financially, and they have to receive considerable aid from their parents. I was wondering if the department had ever given any serious consideration to providing some incentive to attract more of our girls to the nursing profession as a career.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, in the first instance, 3 years ago we brought in capital grants for $1,000 for each nurse's bed, and shortly after that the Federal Government—we thought they would match our $1,000—"came across" with $500 a bed. This has been of great help to provide proper nurses' residences for our nurses-in-training. Secondly, regarding paying these nurses, we had a surplus of 25 to 30 per cent. last fall. If we started paying a subsidy direct to the nurse, what about those going through for school teachers or any other course? There is a shortage in practically every profession.

If any increase were to be made in this direction in the future, it should be toward the training school itself, in order to provide better facilities. That was in the mind of the hon. Prime Minister and his government when we brought forward the first grants in Canada for nurses' residences, which was $1,000 a bed.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, do I understand the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) to say there was a surplus of nurses of 25 to 30 per cent. last fall?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: No, no; in the number of qualified applicants who wished to go into training as of September 1st, 1953.

MR. OLIVER: There was a surplus?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We had a 25 to 30 per cent. surplus—of those going in.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: You mean increase or surplus?

HON. MR. FROST: More than could be accommodated.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: A surplus, more than could be taken care of by our 64 training schools. I think 64 is exactly the right number.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, this raises a very important point, because if we had a surplus of that many who wanted to go in for training and could not find accommodation, and at the same time our hospitals are starved for nurses, then it is obvious we have to expand the training facilities. There are hospitals in the City of Toronto that are compelled to keep entire floors closed because of a shortage of nurses. If we have reached the stage where there are more applicants than training facilities, then for goodness sake let us provide the funds for the immediate and rapid expansion of those training facilities, so that the hospitals will have the nurses they need.

Votes 59 and 60 agreed to.

On Vote 61.

MR. F. R. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) like to describe the situation in the province in relation to Vote 61?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: What was the hon. Leader of the Opposition's question, please?

MR. OLIVER: Are we getting any control of that disease, or what is the picture?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Today the picture is certainly very much better than it was a few years ago. In 1944 we had 135 cases per 100,000. That was during one of the war years. Last year we had 15. With respect to gonorrhoea, 10 years ago, in 1944, we had 200 cases. In 1945 we had 205 cases. It then dropped and we had only 50 cases last year. That means a drop in the total number of venereal disease cases in the province from 335 in 1944 to 64 last year, and that is on a per 100,000 basis.

Vote 61 agreed to.

On Vote 62.

MR. F. R. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, on item No. 5 of Vote 62, what are the provisions of The Sanatoria for Consumptives Act in relation to payment? Is the patient required or expected to pay for treatment in these instances?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: As a matter of fact, for the last 2 years, 1952 and 1953, we paid for around 89 to 90 per cent. of all the patients in the hospital. Around 3 per cent. or 4 per cent. paid for themselves, and the rest were paid out of donations made from foundations which were built up, and the interest used. A few of those came from the Workmen's Compensation Board, and also the Department of Veterans Affairs.

Votes 62 to 66 inclusive, agreed to.

On Vote 67.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Chairman, with regard to item 9 of Vote 67, I think perhaps this is the appropriate time to mention the position with respect to the department with which the hon. Minister is dealing, in regulating and supervising health insurance contracts.

I think this then indicates a very definite increase in grants for hospital purposes, for beds and facilities of that sort, but I think I am correct in saying that there still is a very considerable shortage of hospital beds and services in some centres in the province at any given moment.

In relation to these health insurance contracts, and I am referring to them generally—the Blue Cross is the best known one—they do, in their selling, say that they supply hospital services for every type of disease, illness or injury. While I subscribe to such a service, and my family and my office staff are similarly covered, none of us—and I touch wood—have had to draw on it to any considerable extent, but it has been drawn to my attention that there have been serious cases where a wife or some member of a family covered by this sort of insurance badly needs hospitalization, but because of the shortage of accommodation, had been unable to get it.

It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, that in situations of that sort, these contracts should provide for some equivalent, whether it be in a convalescent hospital or even in the homes themselves, where some equivalent to the service could be supplied in such a manner, that where one cannot get actual hospitalization at the time of the injury or the illness, the insurance contract should provide for some equivalent or some consideration for the cost that is involved. I should like to suggest to the hon. Minister that consideration be given to requiring the insurance contracts along these lines, where they are supervised, to make some provision of that sort.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Chairman, if I may just say a word in that connection, I would like to make it clear that a great majority of the contracts issued by private insurers, other than the Blue Cross, do include a provision whereby people can be taken care of at home as well as in the hospital. I should not like the hon. members to gain the impression that all contracts carry that clause; but the great majority of them do say you can stay either at home or in the hospital.

While I am on the subject, as has been said many times before—and the situation has not changed a great deal over the past year or two—one of the main reasons that at the present time, we are not in a position to institute a hospital plan, is because there just is not the accommodation in the hospitals to take care of the people, and if we were covered by a plan throughout the province, taking care of everybody, we would simply be offering a service we could not possibly supply, because hospitals have not been extended to take care of the additional need if that were the case.

I just wanted to bring out those points.

MR. SALSBERG: May I ask a question with respect to item 5, Vote 67, "Psychiatric Service in Local Communities or in Public Hospitals," for which there is $25,000 provided. Last year the amount was smaller, and it was broken down. I am not concerned about the fact it is not broken down this year, but it seems the amount is rather small. If the hon. Minister is prepared to give some explanation, it would be appreciated. Does this mean payment for psychiatric service given by local psychiatrists, or does it mean travelling psychiatrists in the department? Because the amount is small for out-of-town services.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: What we are actually doing is simply carrying the old load until these new psychiatric units in general hospitals are set up. Then we shall have to survey the overall programme and deal with it from there. But this is really the old programme, and it has nothing to do with the new psychiatric units in general hospitals.

Vote 67 agreed to.

On Vote 68.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister would give me an explanation of item 4, Vote 68, "Workmen's Compensation Board; Awards and Costs for Mental Health Grants"? I just wondered how the Workmen's Compensation Board ties in with mental health. Does that cover injuries received by men which have resulted in a mental breakdown of some kind?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: No, it does not, Mr. Chairman. Most of our public hospitals carry workmen's compensation for their staff, and this item provides for accidents among our own staff.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, with respect to Vote 68, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) a question? And may I preface it by saying I appreciate the statement he made in the House yesterday in which he indicated the increase in the number of beds in our mental hospitals in the province, although I confess that I should like to see, as I will, those remarks in print, so as to have a better idea of the numbers, but the question I am concerned with is this: We were told by the Ontario Health Survey Committee that we required 11,416 beds, in addition to what we had at that time, to relieve overcrowding; and, according to the same survey, after we shall have added 11,416 beds, we shall require 574 additional beds annually.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Is the hon. member talking about mental health beds only?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, I think that was the recommendation of the "Ontario Health Survey Report." Obviously, this is a very "tall" order, but that was considered to be the minimum required. Could the hon. Minister tell us whether the number of beds added since that report was presented meets these minimum requirements, and whether our annual additions are in accordance with the minimum annual objectives they set? It is the general impression, and I confess that I am sharing it, that despite the increases in bed accommodation—and there are increases, a number of hospitals are being constructed, some are being finished and others will be finished—that despite these increases we are falling behind rather than catching up with the minimum requirements set out.

I appreciate the fact, Mr. Chairman, that the hon. Minister may not have the comparative figures. If not, he could bring them in when he has them. I am not pressing for them if he has not got them at hand. But if he has the figures, I think it would help us to see the picture in its entirety rather than have a vague idea of the whole situation. When the hon. Minister mentions 1,000 beds, or 1,500, or 500, it does not mean much unless we compare it with what was presented to the province as the minimum requirements 4 years ago.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I will submit that later.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister has not those comparative figures now? All right, thank you.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, item 11, on Vote 68, "Printing and Stationery, $70,000." I presume the greater part of that expenditure must have been for printing, not stationery. I find also with respect to printing there is the general expense item, then there is an item of $40,000 Main Office, and Mental Health $20,000. Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) tell us for what purpose those sums of money are being expended, on printing and stationery?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The hon. member must remember we have 17 mental hospitals, with about 18,000 patients within them. We have to buy stationery for all those hospitals, which includes charts for the nurses, and such items, which amount to a terrific figure. Most of that $70,000 is for the 17 mental hospitals.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I know this is a very small item, item 8 of Vote 68, but I am puzzled as to what it covers. It says, "Clothing for Bailiffs Removing Patients."

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We have two bailiffs, one male and one female, and we provide them with a suit and a dress, and other clothing, at least once a year, as they do a great deal of travelling, mostly on the train, and they wear out their clothes. That practice has been carried on for years.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Vote 68, could the hon. Minister tell us, before we get down to the separate hospitals, how he is coping with the problem of trained psychiatrists to handle the patients in the hospitals? We are aware that a few years ago we were hopelessly short of psychiatrists in our hospitals, and I think we are entitled to know what improvement has taken place, and if possible, to have the figures of the psychiatrists now employed as compared with those of 4 years ago.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We are making great progress in this field. We are getting a better class of psychiatrists, that is, with respect to the young men going into this field, because of the fact that we give substantial bursaries, which amount for single men to around $200 per month plus books, tuition, and $250 for married men.

MR. SALSBERG: How many bursaries have we given?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: There are 20 in all, and 12 of them are bursaries.

MR. SALSBERG: How many psychiatrists have we now, Mr. Chairman, in our mental hospitals?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I am not certain of the exact number, but about 20 in each year, and it takes 3 years, so we have 60 in training; we graduate 20 each year.

MR. SALSBERG: How many in service, actually employed in the hospitals?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I would say 75 to 80 certified psychiatrists, fully trained.

On Vote 68.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: On 68, item 10, "Removal Expenses of Officials." What does that cover? Discharges, or dismissals, or what does it mean?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: This is an item which is rather uncontrollable. It refers to removals of members of our staff from time to time, for instance, from London to Hamilton, or to another hospital. It is in the interest of our over-all service, just the same as they move the provincial police, bank managers, ministers—or politicians.

MR. GRUMMETT: You pay the cost of moving their furniture, or part of it?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: We pay all their moving costs. If we ask one to move from London to Hamilton, we pay his expenses.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, can the hon. Minister tell the House what amount of money has been collected by the province from the patients in our mental institutions, during this last year?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The total cost of our mental hospitals will amount to approximately $20 million. Last year, we collected $3,052,000 or approximately one-seventh.

MR. OLIVER: How much of that was collected from patients or inmates, and what amount from the municipalities? Has the hon. Minister the breakdown of that?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: There was nothing from the municipalities, except approximately $70,000 which has been collected for the Epileptic Division at Woodstock. After the legislation we are putting through this year, that will be out of business.

MR. OLIVER: Is the hon. Minister saying there is no billing on the municipalities for mental cases?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: That is correct, from now on, none. Previous to this year, it was for the Epileptic Division only.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, can the hon. Minister tell us what, if any, plans have been prepared for the establishment of a hospital for mentally-ill children, as differentiated from the hospitals for retarded children?

I might say, Mr. Chairman, this necessity was pointed up very strongly by the tragic event which took place recently in Orillia, where an Indian boy, after a skirmish with a guard, died. The evidence seems to indicate this boy was not an ordinary mentally-retarded child, but was mentally disturbed, and there is a difference. He is only one of hundreds of children, who are mentally disturbed, and who need special treatment and attention.

At the present time, such children are committed to the hospitals for mentally-retarded children, and are not really helped to recover, as is the case with patients in mental hospitals. They are forced of necessity to fit into the mode of these institutions. At times, these institutions have not the trained personnel which is required for the particular mentally-sick young children, and we had this shocking revelation as a result.

I am not underestimating the difficulties of the task of the staff in Orillia, or in any hospital of that nature. Their task is a very difficult one, as is the position of the doctors in charge, and their entire staff. But having said that I must also say it is shocking to find that what preceded this fatal scuffle, I am quoting from the Telegram of February 10th, which I think should be brought to the attention of the House:

Thirty-five-year-old guard relates that Albert Morrison entered the dining room of his cottage at the hospital, the morning he died. The youth had his coat and trousers over his night attire. Moreover, Morrison was being punished for running away the previous Saturday night. Morrison's punishment was to wear his night-gown for four days.

Then it goes on:

I told him he would have to go upstairs and take off his clothes, but he said he wanted his breakfast first. I took him by the elbow. I did not apply any force upon him. Albert suddenly made a grab for my groin, and I grabbed both his elbows.

That is a very, very serious thing. The punishment handed out for running away is positively grotesque. Imagine punishing him by compelling him to wear his night attire for 4 days. This boy was not mentally retarded, but mentally disturbed. But he was clear enough not to want to come out to the dining room for breakfast in his night-shirt, so he put on his coat and trousers, and a scuffle developed, and as a result, he died.

What does that indicate? That the hospital is not prepared to treat that type of patient.

I want to emphasize the necessity of establishing a mental hospital for mentally-disturbed children, where they would be given the type of treatment, which would enable them to come out and take their places in society, rather than meeting such a tragedy as was the case in Orillia.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the monologue, or the question—I am not sure which one it was—may I say, the punishment of having to wear a nightgown was very light.

The orders are that there shall be no punishment in any mental hospital or any mentally-defective hospital in Ontario. We do not consider this as punishment. Any loving father or mother might carry out this same sort of punishment, if you want to call it that, perhaps a great deal worse.

The hon. members will remember we are warning our staff every day, that is the attendants; the nurses, do not need to be warned on account of their training—that they must not in any way hand out any form of punishment, as they are dealing with mentally-ill and mentally-defective people.

Regarding the mentally-ill children. We are providing sufficient beds for them. There are not many mentally-ill children, but we have a great number who are mentally defective. We are providing for them in the new building on Queen Street, about which I spoke yesterday.

The determination of the "mentally-retarded" depends entirely on the I.Q., which is an educational matter as well as of health, and I want to compliment the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) for bringing forward last year, legislation to provide $200,000 to start a pilot project, to look after these mentally-retarded children, between the auxiliary in our public schools, for the I.Q.'s between 50 and 70, and those who should be in the institutions, with an I.Q. of less than 50.

I can assure the hon. members that no mental patient, as long as I am Minister, will receive any punishment.

MR. SALSBERG: You do not think that is punishment? I am obliged to say that any loving father who took a mentally-disturbed boy, and punished him in this way, would himself be qualified as a patient for mental treatment.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: All right. If that is the worst punishment anybody gets—

MR. SALSBERG: He just died, that is all.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: That is not what killed him.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed: Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply reports that it has come to certain resolutions, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: May I call your attention, Mr. Speaker, to the fact that it is 6 o'clock.

MR. OLIVER: What are we proceeding with this evening?

HON. MR. FROST: The Budget Debate, and Estimates.

MR. OLIVER: Which Estimates do you intend taking up tonight?

HON. MR. FROST: Department of Highways.

MR. SPEAKER: It being 6 of the clock, I do now leave the Chair.

The House took recess.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, MARCH 25, 1954.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

The House resumed.

ESTIMATES—DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, as I rise to take part in this debate this evening, I should like to say that before coming to the House I was reminded by a friend of mine of the anniversary of my maiden speech in the House. The only difference is that I am starting out tonight at 8 o'clock instead of 5 minutes after midnight. I remember that occasion very well. I sat in the back row beside the hon. member for Dovercourt (Mr. Kerr).

Tonight I am going to give hon. members an account of the Department of Highways over the period of years during which I have had the honour of administering it.

However, before I do so, I would like to draw the attention of hon. members of this House to the comparatively short time which has elapsed since this country prepared Estimates and provided money for the building of highways. In fact, I was very much interested recently to get information about the first road built under contract in this province. The wording itself, I am sure, would take us back to those early days and provide a period of reflection on the great progress Ontario has had over the past 150 years.

Here is a photostatic copy of, as far as I can learn, the first contract, made in the Town of York, Province of Upper Canada with the Council:

for to make a certain piece of road from the Town of York to the Humber River Witnesseth that I Joseph Burton Doath agree to take Roderick McDonal George Storing and Jacob Clock in joint partnership with me in doing and finishing said Road and we do bind each of us separately to do an equal part of the work and to bare an equal share of all the expince to finish said Road so that it will bare inspection and we do agree to commence working on said road on the 21 of this instant and to continue until said road is completed and then we are to have 32 $ pr mile only that part that is cut over that we are to have 9 $ pr mile and the crops waying 12/- pr Rod and we to divide said money equally among us fore—to all which we do agree and bind ourselves in the panel sum of five hundred dollars currant money of this province for the true preformance hereof as witnefs our hand and seal this eighteenth day of March one thousand and eight hundred and five.

When we think of how young this province is, and the progress that has been made during that period, we realize that in the life of a man, great things can happen, but that is a comparatively short time in the life of a province such as ours.

At the beginning of 1953, Ontario's road mileage totalled 81,281 linear miles, more than 3 times the length of this earth's equator. That huge total subdivides as follows: King's Highways in the provincial system, 7,871 miles of which 1,112 miles are paved with concrete; 3,913 miles with bituminous asphalt; 835 miles with bituminous surfacing; and 2,010 miles surfaced with gravel and crushed stone preparatory to paving. The provincial system of secondary roads extends for 2,709 miles. Total mileage of the King's Highway system is 10,580 miles. Remainder of the 81,281 miles is made up of municipal roads in county and township road systems, unorganized township roads; and 3 systems of urban municipalities.

Adhering to policy laid down when I took office, which was that all new work done should be calculated to benefit Ontario's people generally as well as those in particular localities, the Ontario Department of Highways accomplished a major amount of construction work in 1953.

During the past year, preliminary figures show, we constructed 604 miles of pavement in the course of modernizing existing main highways. This reconstruction has been going on since 1946, the first full year following the Second World War when all highway work in Ontario, including maintenance, was kept to an absolute minimum. The work done in 1953, included laying 292 miles of bituminous hot mix pavement, ordinarily 22 feet wide and 3 inches thick. In addition, 140 miles of bituminous hot mix was applied in the course of resurfacing pavement. Finally, 172 miles of bituminous road mix pavement, generally known as "mulch pavement" was applied.

On entirely new jobs, the Department laid 52 miles of bituminous hot mix pavement on new highway mileage.

Great results are not obtained without great effort and, in this age, huge expenditure of money. Early figures indicate that close to $137,500,000 was expended on provincial highways and the municipal roads systems of Ontario in 1953. Of that total, about $28,046,353 went to municipal road authorities as subsidies for the $54,590,300 of work undertaken in 1953 by those elected bodies.

There was, also, 137 miles of grading work on existing King's Highways, required in modernizing and improving older sections; and 165 miles of new highways were graded. This work, of course, was largely in connection with Ontario's 1,404 miles of the Trans-Canada Highway which is now well advanced, or on major traffic congestion relief projects near larger urban communities.

Now we turn from statistics involving miles and dollars and cents to discuss the services rendered. As I try to emphasize constantly, the purpose of the Department of Highways is to render service to the people of Ontario. In serving them, we serve our country as a whole.

One of the most striking services rendered by the Ontario Department of Highways is in keeping open all of the 10,000 miles forming the provincial system throughout each winter for free and unhampered movement of traffic. This great winter maintenance job means that weather bars no workers from their jobs; no farmers from markets situated on King's Highways or secondary roads; and no transport of materials on the highways.

Backing up our winter maintenance service is a Road Information and Weather Reporting Service which keeps motorists advised about weather conditions in winter for 24 hours each day, 7 days a week. Much of the information about conditions comes directly from operators of huge snow plows and sanding vehicles equipped with two-way radio telephones.

Year-round maintenance of our highways, which includes keeping them open in winter, keeps commerce moving in all seasons. This creates a vast new reservoir of wealth, real wealth, for our province and for Canada as a whole.

In the way of creating wealth, the Ontario Department of Highways is very much interested in our growing tourist business and does all that it properly can to encourage it. No one can deny that the tourist industry is one of our leaders. During 1953, some 5,786,386 cars entered Ontario for various periods.

Of that total 1,503,191 came to Ontario to stay 48 hours or more. Since statistics show that each motor vehicle entering Ontario brings $3\frac{1}{2}$ people, on the average, our visitors in 1953 amounted to 20,252,351!

For the benefit of our people, the Department of Highways maintains 70 roadside parks, ranging in size from 1 to 390 acres. In most of them, Ontario citizens may camp for periods up to 2 weeks; visitors from the United States and other provinces may camp up to 3 weeks in those where camping is permitted.

In addition to this system of People's Parks, entirely free, and with many located where there are good fishing and bathing facilities, the Department of Highways maintains 2,200 picnic tables at pleasant and often beautiful sites along our highways.

While these amenities are subject to abuse, I am very happy to say that the roadside parks and picnic tables are truly and widely appreciated. Numberless voluntary letters of appreciation have been received and I can tell you that such kind messages are warmly welcomed.

Ontario's highways system also may boast of its direction and warning signs, zone painting, and other safety features. Night driving is made such safer because of the wide use of reflection markings on signs and railings.

From 1946 through 1953, motor vehicle registration in Ontario increased 96.0 per cent. from 711,000 to 1,400,000.

I am, therefore, appealing to you gentlemen for direct and responsible assistance in our campaign to make driving on our highways and streets safer for all who use them. With proper exercise of plain common sense along with a decent regard for the rights of others, our terrible annual total of traffic death, injuries and property loss could be cut in half immediately. Will you help this cause? Give it thought and see what you can do towards solving this ghastly problem.

During the 1953 calendar year there was a registration of 1,404,084 motor vehicles, an increase of 8.9 per cent. over the previous year. Drivers' licences totalled 1,653,086, an increase of 6.4 per cent. We now have about 1 motor vehicle for each $3\frac{1}{2}$ members of our population. All the people of Ontario could at one time be carried in our motor vehicles with ample room left over. I might add that there was an increase of about 12.5 per cent. in the number of tourist vehicles entering Ontario last year.

It is sad, indeed shocking, to speak of the death toll arising from traffic accidents. In 1952, there were 1,010 such deaths. For 1953, the early figures indicate 1,082 such deaths. That most of these deaths were readily preventable is a truism which needs no repetition.

For 1952, the injury toll was 23,634 and for 1953 it was 24,353 according to our early figures. I scarcely need add that many of these injuries were of a serious type.

The property damage toll is placed at about $25 million for each of the years I have mentioned.

We carry on an educational campaign in the interests of highway traffic safety. This must be a permanent, a continuing campaign. It is waged through the press, through the schools, by radio, and through many local and municipal bodies. We aim at instilling the principles of safety into the minds of pedestrians, especially children, as well as motorists.

We aim at an adequate examination of all applicants for drivers' licences, but I should like to stress this point. The driver taking a test is on his good behaviour. He is anxious to prove his ability to operate a motor car. The test will determine whether he is familiar with the rules of the road and whether he can and I stress the word can, operate a motor vehicle with safety. But no test can determine whether he will operate a motor car in a safe and proper manner.

Each year, we take about 20,000 drivers off the roads for one reason or another and for varying periods. Our researchers indicate that about 90 per cent. of all traffic accidents result from the human factor.

Why a driver should be a gentleman in the living room and a cad on the highway is something beyond my comprehension—but the fact remains in all too many instances. Safe driving implies ordinary, decent, every-day good citizenship. It implies the exercise of care, courtesy and common sense. However, as there are nearly 1½ million licenced motor vehicles on the road and 1,600,000 drivers, we simply cannot have enough police to watch them all.

I trust the legislation now before the House will, if and when enacted, be helpful to our enforcement officers.

I have recommended increased penalties as to hit-run drivers. I think we shall have to devise some means of dealing more effectively with the road hogs who monopolize our passing lanes mile after mile. Possibly we may be able to devise ways and means of getting this type of road hog off the road temporarily or permanently. However, the real cure lies in the universal acceptance of the rules of good citizenship on the highways as elsewhere.

I remember several years ago, Mr. Speaker, making a speech in this House in which I pleaded with hon. members of this Legislature to render every possible help they could to this very worthy cause, and I was very interested the other day to listen to the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko), the hon. member for Hamilton-Wentworth (Mr. Connell) and the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) who devoted the major part of their time to this very important subject. And when I look around this Legislature and think of all those years that have passed, I have every confidence that each member of this honourable body is anxious to play his part in curtailing this needless slaughter on the highways and in saving lives. Because I happen to know something of the statutory requirements of membership, I reflect that the 90 odd members of this House, in being nominated for candidature, must have 100 citizens to sign nomination papers. I say to hon. members: "If you can go home to your constituencies and can enlist 100 or more people in your communities to come out and back the job we are endeavouring to do, there will, I am sure, be a decided reduction in the loss of life through traffic accidents."

Hon. members found on their desks, the day the hon. member from Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) was making his speech, a manual entitled "Speak of Safety," in which they will find, I am sure, many suggestions for addresses in their communities.

In Eastern Ontario, the Department of Highways operates Old Fort Henry, one of the most romantic of all this continent's fortresses. In summer it is manned by university students uniformed as guardsmen of the period when the Kingston fortress was first occupied. Since it was re-opened in 1948, more than 500,000 people have paid the small fee required to finance service of guides in touring the old fortifications and its important museum.

Members of this House are, of course, much interested in levels of government that come closest to those living in rural areas—the counties and townships.

The road systems of the counties and townships of Ontario have long been a special concern of the municipal roads branch of the Ontario Department of Highways. This branch and its work have been greatly expanded since I took office as Minister of Highways, but it still serves municipal governmental bodies in an advisory capacity because, as we see it, that is in the best interests of democratic government and the principle of local responsibility.

In 1943, about 600 municipal units were entitled to provincial subsidies for road improvement. In 1953, there were 1,387 municipal units entitled to subsidies, made up as follows: 37 counties; 572 townships; 28 Indian reserves; 2 provincial parks; 16 improvement districts; 29 cities; 8 separated towns; 143 towns; 157 villages; 155 statute labour boards; and 240 unorganized townships.

In 1946, legislation authorized funds for improvement of unserviceable roads where municipal bodies were unable to finance needed construction. Where improvement of such roads would likely prove of material benefit to the public in general as well as local users, their designation as development roads was permitted. As a result, development-roads aid through the Municipal Roads Branch has been the means of providing many previously isolated communities with good access routes to the main provincial network. Some 1,400 miles of such roads have been built at a cost of over $11 million.

In 1947, for the benefit of municipalities which could not justify purchase of costlier machinery, the Department of Highways set up equipment pools. These equipment pools are becoming more and more appreciated. Rate charge for rental of pool equipment is the prevailing equipment rental rate for the division in which a municipality is located, discounted 30 per cent.

Ontario's Municipal Roads Equipment Pools have 99 power graders, 16 pull graders, 55 tractors, 18 compressors, 17 trucks, which together represent an investment of $8,195,064.

In 1953, counties purchased 98 items and townships bought 189 items of road machinery at a total cost of $1,446,433.

It may interest you to know that in the years since I assumed office as Minister of Highways, municipal roads authorities in Ontario have expended a total sum of $387,806,401.19. They have received provincial subsidies on that expenditure for improvement and construction of road and street systems amounting to $182,302,016.16.

In the 10-year period 1943-53, the Department of Highways expended $6,465,232.53 for road improvement in unorganized townships and statute labour areas of Ontario, chiefly in Northern Ontario.

I should point out that the municipalities are under heavy expense in relation to snow removal—an acknowledged necessity in relation to the universal use of motor transport. Winter maintenance naturally now demands care and close calculation in building grades and structures and in making provision for adequate right-of-way. To some extent and in the light of their resources a good many municipal governments are adding from time to time sections of permanent pavement. The time is no doubt far in the future, but I hope we may eventually see some type of permanent road surface on every main municipal road in Ontario.

Before leaving the subject of our municipal relations I should mention recent amendments to the Highway Improvement Act which have the effect of allowing the municipalities some leeway in making expenditures outside their own boundaries in relation to bridge construction. I might mention a specific case involving the Town of Wallaceburg. Here the town, the county and the province were able to come to agreement in building a large swing bridge costing about $1 million. Again, in the same district a bridge was required on the line between Dover and Raleigh Townships, actually to relieve a trying traffic situation in the City of Chatham. Here, Chatham pays the share which otherwise would have been a municipal charge. The 80 per cent. provincial subsidy applies in both instances.

While on the subject of bridges, I should mention that in 1953 we completed 43 bridges on provincial highways at a cost of $4,331,000. In the past 10 years we have built 443 bridges at a total cost of about $40 million. Here, I wish to say a special word about the man behind our bridge programme.

Mr. Arthur Sedgwick, our Chief Bridge Engineer, has been an employee of this province for 45 years. I hope he will be with us for some time yet to come. What I have to say about him may be regarded as a token of my feelings toward a great number of employees. Mr. Sedgwick has approved the design and supervised the construction of thousands of bridges for the department and for the municipalities. Not one of these bridges has failed through faulty design. I do not think any civil servant has compiled a more honourable and efficient record. Mr. Sedgwick's period of service embraces not only the whole period of the department's existence, but goes back to the days when roads and bridges were entirely a municipal responsibility for all practical purposes. His career is a credit to himself and a symbol of the careers of many of his colleagues.

We talk proudly, and properly so, of our great endowment of natural resources. But without adequate transportation, they will avail us nothing. Without transportation, our resources cannot be developed. Our waterways, our roads, our highways and, finally, our air transport push back our frontiers. They open new avenues of wealth, of production and of employment. They help establish new farms, new forest industries and new homes. These, in turn, lead to the establishment of new industries and new commercial enterprises. And transportation remains a vital factor in the whole equation of development.

As I said, the Northern Development road building activities were transferred to the Department of Highways. I do not need to tell you that road building in the north poses many special problems. There are vast stretches of rugged, rocky country, often with hills 700 or 800 feet in height, interspersed with deep valleys. There is a relatively sparse population. An impressive part of our budget must be spent in relation to the north. Our people there demand and deserve reasonable consideration. On the economic side, our resources of land and forest and mine, and of lake and stream cannot be developed without adequate transportation.

There are scores or perhaps hundreds of centres of population within our borders no longer served by rail at all, or else served in rudimentary fashion. Whole industries, whole commercial enterprises, whole communities are now served by rubber-tired vehicles.

Today, in this province our frontiers are being pushed back by highways development. The Manitowadge area, a new mining field of vast importance, it would seem, will reach its potential only with the advent of road transportation. In our planning we have to consider new developments related to our resources. We have to consider the enormous motor traffic in areas such as those surrounding Toronto and Hamilton. Here we have heavy traffic in congested areas. Up north we have relatively light traffic with great distances involved. We try to plan with efficiency. We endeavour to look ahead. If we are to make the most of what we have in the way of human and natural resources, we must anticipate our problems rather than having them overwhelm us at a later date.

In the period 1933 to 1944, the total expenditures of the Department of Highways were about $246,947,575. For the next 10 years they amounted to approximately $769 million.

It is, of course, not the amount spent but rather the value received which counts. Of this, I shall speak briefly later on. Here, let me outline something of what we accomplished last year, 1953. We placed bituminous, hot mix pavement on 230 miles of King's Highways. This, for purposes of comparison, exceeds the distance from Toronto to Montreal. Resurfacing with the same type of material was accomplished on 175 miles of King's Highways. This exceeds the distance from Toronto to Kingston.

Grading, preparatory to paving, was completed on 302 miles. This is almost exactly the distance from Toronto to the Quebec border. These items, I might add, account for 989 miles, equal to the distance from Toronto to Nipigon with another 120 miles added. A little thought will help you to realize what work of this magnitude means in terms of men, machines and money.

In Ontario today we have about 10,580 miles of King's Highways along with secondary roads maintained by the department. We have 289 miles of controlled access highways. Of this, 235 miles consists of the dual-lane type and 54 miles of the standard type. Some 29 miles of service roads were built for local use alongside various sections of controlled access highways.

The controlled access highway is a type which is here to stay. The most competent engineering authorities on the continent declare that highways designed to carry through traffic at high speeds cannot also serve the purpose of giving access to adjacent land. We cannot afford in this or any other province to construct through highways at a cost of $400,000 a mile and the immediately defeat their main objective by allowing unlimited access. The railways from their very inception recognized this principle. We all know how zealously they protect their rights-of-way from any but the most necessary encroachments of any kind whatsoever.

Here in Ontario we have a very great traffic movement over the Windsor-Quebec border route. The highway between Oshawa and Toronto is rated, for example, as the heaviest travelled in Canada. Our No. 2 Highway from Toronto to Windsor, 542 miles in length, has been resurfaced with respect to 450 miles. In many parts it has been reconstructed. The developments of the St. Lawrence waterway and power scheme will mean, very shortly, I expect, a major programme of re-routing and complete reconstruction. First we must know what is determined as to Ottawa, as to Washington, as to Hydro and as to the New York State Power Authority.

Then and then only can we plan here with certainty. Then and then only can we bargain as to division of costs. Just now, I can say only this. The easterly section of No. 2 Highway will in the foreseeable future be an adequate link in the dual-lane route from Windsor to the Quebec border. It will be something of which Ontario will be proud. It will help to provide a new stimulus to all Eastern Ontario.

We have already completed 24 miles of grading easterly from Windsor, this on the new dual-lane route. An important link in this new route is the 38-mile London-Woodstock by-pass, on which we have graded 31.3 miles. In part, we have completed the Toronto by-pass or interceptor road swinging well to the north of the city. The portion of this dual-lane highway connecting Yonge Street with the Barrie Highway is already in use. Work here is being pushed forward, and the by-pass will presently connect with dual Highway No. 401 near the Rouge River east of Toronto.

It appears that most of the traffic approaching Toronto is destined to enter the city. However, much heavy traffic will use the interceptor road without adding to the congestion in the city streets. More than this, the interceptor road will tend to route traffic fairly directly toward that particular part of the city which it is destined ultimately to reach.

During 1953, grading contracts were let to carry Highway No. 401 eventually around Belleville, Trenton and Kingston. You will thus see that from the west we are bringing the new dual-lane route to connect with the Queen Elizabeth Way near Hamilton. This dual-lane route will then carry around Toronto join Highway No. 401 at the Rouge River. Traffic will then move over the existing dual-lane route to Newcastle. The dual-lane route will then be extended for the time being to Port Hope, and for the future will be continued to the east.

Highway No. 400 from Toronto to Barrie has been completed and is in full use, including the $4\frac{1}{2}$ -mile Barrie by-pass.

To those of us fortunate enough to live in Eastern Ontario I should say a word about Highway No. 17, a most important artery especially for those of us making our homes in the Ottawa Valley. This highway runs from the Quebec border, through the Ottawa Valley, through Ottawa, Arnprior, Pembroke, North Bay and Sudbury. Thence it goes to the Soo and up to Montreal River. I have already said that paving will be completed this summer on the North Shore section. Otherwise the highway is paved, but most important revisions are being made east of Ottawa.

Ontario's share of the Trans-Canada Highway involves a distance of about 1,404 miles—say, about 3 days' driving, just for purposes of comparison. As of the end of December last grading had been completed on 349 miles, along with 203 miles of paving. Fortunately, many miles of existing highways are being incorporated into this project. However, much of this mileage has required or will require revision to meet Trans-Canada standards. We are making good progress on the new short-cut from the Gravenhurst - Bracebridge area to Sudbury. Heavy grading has been carried out on 61 miles north of Britt and work is proceeding on the remaining 16 miles. Completion of this project will give a direct Toronto - Sudbury - Sault Ste. Marie route, and, of course, should open up a new and impressive area for our thriving tourist trade.

I might mention scores of other projects. A short time ago I mentioned, and I think correctly, that one could drive through any of the 37 counties of Western, Central or Eastern Ontario without ever being more than 10 miles away from a highways construction job of some magnitude.

One of our major and persisting problems is in relation to Canada's No. 1 traffic bottleneck, a nuisance at the best of times, a nightmare at the height of the summer season. I refer to the Burlington bottleneck, familiar I am sure to most of us.

Hamilton is a great industrial city, an industrial empire in the making. Its harbour is a good one, an inland lake, one might call it, entered only by a very narrow ship channel. This channel is spanned by two structures. One is a railway bridge of the swing type. The other is, or was, a bridge of the bascule type. Here, the Queen Elizabeth Way narrows down to a standard pavement, finds its way across a narrow spit of land about 4 miles along, a few hundred yards wide in many places, and then resumes its regular dual-lane form en route to the Niagara Frontier.

Matters were not helped here when an incoming steamer destroyed one-half of the bascule bridge. This section was replaced by a fixed deck bridge so that shipping is now confined to but one narrow channel instead of two.

Navigational rights are something which we must respect as a province. They are within the federal jurisdiction. In this day and age we cannot any longer contemplate the use of moveable bridges, as witness the fixed structures at Ivy Lea or connecting the Island of Orleans with the north shore of the St. Lawrence. Hamilton Harbour is going to be a busy place when the St. Lawrence waterway is built. We must look ahead. We must build a structure here on the Burlington cut-off high enough to allow ships to pass under it. I will be something like 120 feet above water level where it crosses the ship channel. This means a huge structure of steel and concrete; it likewise means approaches of very great length.

Certain measures we have taken, but first, let me say this. The cut-off is very narrow, and along the lake side is a railway line occupying what might be called the most logical route. Therefore, we have to follow, substantially, the existing route of the highway.

We have acquired the land necessary for the revisions involved and to put the necessary structure in place. We have made the necessary engineering studies. We have negotiated with Ottawa to ascertain their views as to what is required in the light of their interests as to navigation. Indeed, if there were no question related to a ship channel, there would be no great problem and not too much cost.

Provision for navigation involves the federal authority. Provision for navigation means the expenditure of very many millions of additional dollars. We cannot clean up this situation without the concurrence of Ottawa in our plans.

More than this, it is, I think, quite obvious that there is a very real financial obligation on the part of the Federal Treasury. Just as soon as we can arrive at some agreement with the Government of Canada we are prepared to get on with this job. I am ready, and I think the hon. the Prime Minister, is ready, to sit down with our engineers and our financial experts around the conference table, and to decide as we have on other matters, as to just what are our respective duties in this matter. There is no insuperable problem here, and so far as I am concerned, the sooner mutual agreement can be reached, the better for all of us. This government is ready, willing, and indeed, anxious to bring its resources to bear on this problem which already is too long outstanding.

February 15th, 1954.

DEAR MR. WINTERS:

As promised during recent discussions regarding the Burlington Bridge, under separate cover is being forwarded to your Deputy, Mr. H. A. Young, a print showing the proposals of the department for a project to construct a high level bridge and approaches across the Burlington Canal.

Urging that joint participation in this project be undertaken by the Province of Ontario and the Federal Government, it is pointed out that traffic counts indicate an average daily traffic in the summer months of more than 21,000 vehicles, of which 12,000 are American visitors. It can be assumed that with the completion of the New York State Thruway which terminates at the City of Buffalo on the Niagara border, traffic may be expected to double in the next few years. Since the tourist industry is one in which both the Federal Government and the province share, it is in the interest of both governments to participate in essential highway improvements involving international traffic. It is felt by this department that through traffic is the traffic that has to be accommodated by the new structure and for this reason it is suggested that the two governments share equally in the cost of the project.

Yours very truly,

GEORGE H. DOUCETT
Minister of Highways.

Machinery pools established by the department and attached to various divisions enable municipalities to use heavy machinery which otherwise would not be available to them. They are required to pay operating charges only.

The research branch of the department is a necessary and valuable organization though its activities are not as well known as they should be. Last year more than 7,000 soil samples were subjected to examination. There was a 90 per cent. increase in the work of testing materials of various types. As an example there were 2,640 tests of concrete cylinders to ensure the strength of various concrete structures. Our technicians test bituminous materials, paints, salt, aggregates—in fact almost every component used in our projects. Much new testing equipment has been evolved resulting in new, less costly and faster procedures.

I should say a word as to the heavy maintenance programme in relation to our King's Highways. At the end of 1953, the Maintenance Engineer's Branch employed about 4,000 workers, nearly all with experience, perhaps a majority of them with some specialized skills. Necessarily, in this mechanical age our divisions maintain well-equipped garages and machine shops. Our equipment list is a long one and includes 600 snowplows, 11 of them being huge snowblowers, 1,031 trucks, 300 power graders, 431 tractors, 30 weed sprayers, 173 asphalt distributors, 20 low bed trailers, 50 rollers, 46 weigh-scale installations, 120 hydraulic sand spreaders and innumerable items of miscellaneous equipment.

We maintain 70 free camping parks for the use of tourists and for our own citizens. In area they range from 1 to 390 acres. Many are splendidly equipped. In addition there are 200 small roadside parks freely used by picnic parties. Many command views of exceptional beauty. Along the main highways are 1,070 small turnoff points equipped with 1,612 bench-attached picnic tables. In the parks formerly mentioned we maintain 2,323 bench-attached tables for camp and picnic meals.

We maintain about 140,000 highway identification and direction signs. About 80 per cent. of them embody the reflector principle. It has been said, I think truly, that any stranger, sticking to King's Highways, can find his way to any point in Ontario without asking a question as to direction.

Zone painting was applied in 1953 to 6,250 miles of highway. Paint was used to the extent of 61,000 gallons of which 54,000 gallons was of the reflector type.

Numerous traffic interchange points have been supplied with lighting, while 118 traffic signals are maintained by the department.

Trees, shrubs and seedlings to the number of 326,465 were planted in 1953, all but 56,000 coming from departmental nurseries.

At the close of 1953, 25 grade separations were under way involving an expenditure of about $5 million. Needless to say, negotiations are proceeding with a view to getting grade separation put on a more realistic basis. Both the Federal Government and the railways must be consenting and participating parties to clean up a long-standing and monumental hazard.

Our winter problems continue to have the unremitting attention of our maintenance division. Our organization here very seldom fails to keep open our more than 10,000 miles of King's Highways and secondary roads. As a project it is both huge and costly. But it is necessary; our increasing dependence on motor transportation demands that our highways be kept open and in as good condition as possible as to driving surface.

As of July 1st, 1947, we launched the Unsatisfied Judgment Fund, a piece of legislation which has proved its worth and which is being adopted in certain other jurisdictions. Since the legislation became operative a total of $4,621,553.02 has been paid out to 2,891 victims of traffic accidents who otherwise would have been without redress. In 237 cases the beneficiaries were victims of hit-run drivers. Last year's amendments provided certain leeway for the Minister to make out-of-court settlements in actions defended by a party failing subsequently to enter an appearance. In the interim settlements have been effected in 150 instances.

In the United States the State of New Jersey has enacted legislation similar to ours which becomes effective in 1955. Other states are introducing similar legislation. My attention was recently directed to a pamphlet prepared and distributed by a public-spirited American citizen. In this pamphlet he accords warm praise to our unsatisfied judgment legislation.

Turning to the current year, 1954, and always subject to whatever financial limitations may be imposed by the House, I anticipate a normal programme of construction, reconstruction and renovation. I have already made some mention of the new dual-lane route extending easterly from Windsor. The present season will see further substantial progress on this important addition to our system. Likewise, I have made mention of important revisions on No. 17 Highway east from Ottawa.

We hope to achieve substantial progress on our share of the Trans-Canada Highway. The short cut to Sudbury will be brought much nearer completion. As I have intimated, the most vigorous efforts will be made to place us in a position where we can eliminate the Burlington bottle-neck.

I have suggested that claims of municipal governments on the Provincial Treasury will follow the prudent customs of former years. These municipal governments, let me say, are one of the surest bulwarks of democracy. I have the utmost respect for the men and the women who constitute their membership. They render sterling and unselfish public service of the highest order, and their chief reward is the consciousness of an important task well performed.

I turn now, Mr. Speaker, to certain charges related to the Department of Highways which in recent months have been the subject of discussion both within and without this House. For more than one reason it is not my privilege to deal with these charges at this time and in this place.

At some length I have already spoken of what has been accomplished by the department during the tenure of office of this Administration. We have spent more than $¾ billion in the last 10 years. We have spent this great sum of money for a number of sound and basic reasons. As I think I have made clear, neither this nor any other country can have a smoothly functioning economy without adequate transportation. Transportation—adequate, modern transportation—is one of the most important elements in building up our strength and productive capacity in peace. And as Europeans well know, it is a vital element of attack and of defence in time of war. I do not need to labour the point.

Our commerce and our industry both demand adequate highways. As the ownership of an automobile has become a commonplace with almost every family, our people demand highway facilities reasonably commensurate with the growth of rubber-tired transportation. Again, I do not need to labour the point.

The demands made upon the department during the last few years have been of a magnitude never before experienced in the history of Ontario. We have endeavoured to meet them; in the main we have been able to meet them. These demands have thrown a monumental load of work on our staff, a staff which, quite frankly, we should have liked to have increased materially had more technical help been available.

Now in government administration as in private enterprise, emergencies—extraordinary demands—extraordinary pressures of work—these create extraordinary conditions. In the present instance, and in brief, here is what happened.

Our officials—the responsible officials of the Department of Highways—discovered certain irregularities in one of the divisional offices. These they proceeded to investigate with vigour, with thoroughness and with all the resources at their command.

The Provincial Auditor is an official of this Legislature. His services were enlisted to further our own investigations; perhaps I should put it another way—to launch and press forward his own investigation in the light of his wide statutory powers and the resources of his office.

Still later we engaged the services of J. D. Woods, Gordon & Company Limited, Management & Consultants, with blanket authority to review the matters at issue and generally to survey and report on departmental policies and practices.

The hon. the Prime Minister has moved for the appointment of a Select Committee of this House, and as the hon. members are aware, this committee will receive sufficient scope to enable it to determine the matters at issue.

As the hon. members of this House are aware, it has been deemed necessary to place a number of the members of the departmental staff on their defence. My esteemed colleague, the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) has retained a distinguished and able counsel, Mr. C. L. Dubin, to present the case for the Crown.

From this brief presentation of the course we have followed, I think any fair-minded member of this House will agree that we have put into operation sufficient machinery to accomplish the following ends:

(1) To discover what offences may have been committed and to force offenders to give an accounting for any misdeeds which have been committed;

(2) To get at the causes related to misdoing and to devise safeguards for the future;

(3) To assist, if required, in a revision of departmental procedure in the interests of efficiency and economy.

In a broad and general way I suggest that this represents what should be, and I should add—will be accomplished.

Here, let me interject this note. There is no thought of condoning wrongdoing. However, I point out this. In the enormous enterprises conducted by governments and by corporations things sometimes go wrong. This situation usually is by no means general. It is usually shown, when the facts come to light, that only a few individuals or components of a system are at fault. In the matters presently under review, please do not misunderstand me. Any serious dereliction of duty is, has been, and will continue to be regarded by me and by my colleagues as a serious matter. I do not need to stress the point.

But let me repeat this. Honesty is characteristic in the make-up of all but a small fraction of the men and women of this country. Were it not so the wheels of trade and commerce and industry and of government would shortly grind to a standstill. These statements apply to the people of this province, to the employees of this government, and to the employees of the Department of Highways.

Right here I suggest this. The immensity of the job accomplished by our executives, by our engineers, by those who build our highways and the intricate structures embodied in them, is not going to be obscured by the derelictions of a few if within my power to prevent. I return now to what I said before. I do not propose to deal with charges which have been so freely made here and elsewhere.

As an outgrowth of certain circumstances on which I shall not elaborate, judicial decisions are pending.

I now quote from Beauchesne's Parliamentary Rules and Forms, page 104, paragraph 246, Third Edition, 1943:

... it has been sanctioned by usage both in England and in Canada, that a member, while speaking must not: (c) refer to any matter on which a judicial decision is pending.

And again I quote from the same authority, page 180, paragraph 490:

On the 30th March, 1933, when the Committee of Supply was considering the Estimates of the Department of Justice, a member endeavoured to discuss the findings of a Royal Commission appointed to investigate charges against a County Court Judge. The Chairman ruled that the report not having been brought down, the matter was still sub-judice and the discussion could not take place. On an appeal to the House, the Chairman's ruling was confirmed without a dissenting voice.

I have quoted the outstanding Canadian authority in such matters. But I shall go further.

A number of people have been placed on their defence. They are still before the courts. I do not need to add that they are deemed innocent until they are proven guilty before a court of competent jurisdiction. I shall say nothing within the shelter of the walls of this House which may prejudice the possibility of fair trials. I shall not be a party to any discussion here or elsewhere which might in the slightest degree prejudice the cases of the accused.

I say this. The irregularities which have arisen will be much less important items than the accomplishments related to furnishing this great province with one of the finest highway networks in all North America. I say without hesitation that when the various investigations and proceedings which I have outlined have been concluded, a vast majority of our thousands of department employees will have emerged with honour from a trying, a distressing episode. They will buckle down to their respective tasks with a new pride in their efforts and with a new consciousness of a great service which they are rendering in their respective fields.

I think I have made it clear that neither I nor my colleagues will be parties to violating the established principles related to the British system of administering justice. In this decision I think I have the support of this honourable House.

I do say this. Far into the future such great public works as the Barrie Highway, to mention just one of them, will stand as enduring monuments marking one of the greatest eras of development in the history of Ontario.

In conclusion let me say there must be no concealment. Where it is found, wrongdoing will be exposed and dealt with in a full, fair and impartial manner.

The final judgment will be delivered by the people of Ontario in the best traditions of British democracy.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply: Mr. Dent in the Chair.

Vote 69 agreed to.

On Vote No. 70.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, last year, there was an item of $3 million for renovating and surfacing private roads. There is no item for that this year. Would the hon. Minister care to comment on that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, Mr. Chairman. That is included in the item above, of $34,585,000.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I want to ask the hon. Minister if the declaration he has just made in regard to matters being sub judice is a declaration of the government's policy in respect to the whole highway matter?

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): No, it is not, Mr. Chairman. As I said, it was a statement from which I was reading, from Beauchesne, who is an authority on Parliamentary procedure.

Like the hon. Leader of the Opposition, I am not a lawyer, and I merely quoted that for the information of the House.

MR. OLIVER: On this point, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister very definitely was speaking for the government, and was making a speech in regard to the Department of Highways. Certain aspects of that department are presently under investigation, and he quite definitely left the impression with the House that matters which were before the courts, concerning people, whose cases have not yet been heard, should not be discussed in this Legislature.

If they cannot be discussed in the Legislature, then it follows, as night follows day, they cannot and should not be discussed before the Select Committee of the House.

Before we go any further, I think we should have the government's decision in respect to this matter. Was the hon. Minister of Highways speaking for the government in this respect?

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): What the hon. Minister of Highways (Hon. Mr. Doucett) said in relation to the authorities he quoted is, I think, correct. On the other hand I stated quite clearly, the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was here, and I think he can hear quite well, my previous remarks were that Parliament is supreme. My feeling is that Parliament is supreme with the only reservation, as I said in this House before, that of common sense and fair play. Even if Parliament is supreme, and this is a People's Court, it should do nothing, in the name of fair play and common sense, that would hurt anybody or prejudice their position. I think this: that the committee provides plenty of opportunity to discuss matters and provides the place where the people's representatives could be given the facts of the case as they are revealed by the reports of our committees, by the reports of the investigating officers or by proceedings in the courts.

On the other hand, I will repeat that I think the Select Committee is just as supreme as this Legislature, because it is a direct emanation of this Legislature.

MR. OLIVER: I am not finished on this point yet. The hon. Minister of Highways quoted from two eminent authorities to support his contention that he should not discuss in this House matters that are at present before the courts and which affect people who are presently before the courts of this province. If that is the view of the hon. Minister of Highways, then the committee itself can do nothing at all. The hon. Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost) may smile if he likes. But here we have the leading Minister of the government, apart from the hon. Prime Minister himself, saying to the House that he is not going to discuss these cases. They are, in his judgment, sub judice, and he quotes, in support, two eminent authorities to back up that view.

HON. MR. FROST: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) stand here now and say he wants to discuss the cases of men who are before the courts and accused of crimes?

MR. OLIVER: That is not the point I raised.

HON. MR. FROST: If you want to discuss this, say what you want to, and I will tell you. What is the use of dealing with technicalities?

MR. OLIVER: I am not dealing with technicalities at all. The hon. Prime Minister knows that quite well. He knows that the hon. Minister of Highways, who is a leading Minister of the Crown, said these matters should not be discussed.

HON. MR. FROST: Do you think they should be?

MR. OLIVER: I want to know the official opinion of the government.

HON. MR. FROST: I stated that, in my opinion, Parliament is supreme and that these matters could be discussed here. But I repeat: the only other consideration is the question of fair play, justice and common sense. Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition think it is common sense if he had the right—assume it is given to him now—to discuss the case of somebody who is before the courts? Would he discuss it, or would he say that in the interests of fair play the trial of that man should not be prejudiced? I sincerely believe that course is the correct course. We should not do anything here which would prejudice the fair trial of people who are accused or who will be accused in this matter.

I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that the purpose of setting up a Select Committee, which this House will discuss in a few days, is to provide the proper place and means to give to the people of this province the fullest information when it is, in the opinion of the committee, the right time to disclose that information. All these matters are before the courts, and there will be other matters before the courts. There they will be dealt with, I am sure, according to the best British and Canadian traditions. The other thing—a matter which the hon. Minister of Highways mentioned here—is the organization of the department to meet the stress and strain of these days. If there are weaknesses in the department that are disclosed, we shall bring them right out into the open, we shall show the people where they are. We shall show the hon. Leader of the Opposition where they are.

MR. OLIVER: And we shall help the hon. Prime Minister to do that.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition has not done much up to now. Some of the hon. members opposite let the Estimates of the Department of Highways go through in 12 minutes. They were not doing much to help by that.

MR. OLIVER: They are not going through in 12 minutes tonight.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, that is all right. We can sit here until 5 o'clock if the hon. members like.

I will finish my statement by saying this: it will be our object to provide for the people of Ontario the very best possible system in the Department of Highways. Not only to provide for the spending of monies that are here voted; but even if we are called upon to meet an emergency in this country. Today I met two deputations, one of them a deputation of unemployed from the Niagara Peninsula, and the other from the very important American Federation of Labour Unions to discuss the matter of unemployment. I would say, Mr. Chairman, that if Old Man Ontario has to roll up his sleeves and spend $250 million, we shall have the organization which can do that properly and efficiently.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): One of the important aspects of this whole question which the hon. Minister of Highways and the hon. Prime Minister avoid—

HON. MR. FROST: I have not avoided any issue yet.

MR. WREN: I would like the hon. Minister of Highways to answer this question and not the hon. Prime Minister. Why will the hon. Minister not discuss matters which do not affect the trial of the accused? Can he explain the high-level policy of the department? Let us not keep discussing people who are accused before the courts. Can there be no discussion of high-level policy?

HON. MR. FROST: Go ahead and discuss it. Bring up anything you want to.

SEVERAL HON. MEMBERS: What is your question?

MR. WREN: Will the hon. Minister explain to this House the precise steps that are taken from the moment an advertisement or tender is placed in a newspaper until the final payment is made?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: As I tried to intimate, there is nothing in the Highways Department that is not an open book. To go into all details of how contracts are made: the first procedure, I think—and, of course, after all this is a long standing practice in the Department of Highways—is that the survey gang from head office go out and make certain surveys. Then they send their plan to a certain place. That, I think, is the practice in the department, though I cannot follow every move. Then that is sent to the division engineer, and he, with his men, make certain alterations, if they find the terrain requires it. They make a certain check and I think that is then returned to the head office.

Then the division engineer sends in an Estimate; in other words, so many yards of rock, so many yards of dirt, so many yards of concrete, so many thousand feet of the creosoted timber etc. necessary for bridging and so on. The different unit prices of all these things are rechecked at head office and from this information the contract form is drawn up. The unit prices are estimated, and advertisements are inserted in sufficient time for those concerned to be given due notice.

The form of tender prescribes that the contractor must go on to the ground to check the information as given, and certify that he has done so. And when the tender is awarded there are certain further checks for accuracy. The contractor must file with the department before he starts to work, either 50 per cent. in collateral of a 100 per cent. performance bond.

I cannot go into all the details, and I do not think hon. members would want me to do so. But the form of contract is drawn up in great detail. I am happy to inform hon. members that we had a corporation lawyer some time ago who looked over our form and commented that it was the finest he had ever seen. When this form is completed, and the successful applicant is awarded the contract, a copy is forwarded to the division engineer, who is responsible for seeing that the work is carried out. He periodically makes out his certificates, giving an Estimate of the work done.

That is sent to the office and checked for accuracy of figures. It is passed by our own accounts department, and the contractor is paid 85 per cent. of the recommended progress Estimate.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, I have a question on that score now. Will the hon. Minister of Highways recommend or approve the granting of a contract for an amount less than his engineers tell him it can be done for?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, that is quite a question.

MR. WREN: It certainly is.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We certainly will grant contracts for less money than our engineers estimate. I have tried to explain to this House, Mr. Chairman, that an engineer sends in an Estimate. We are most interested in quantities. He certainly sends an Estimate, which is not shown to anyone, but I must say engineers are not contractors. They cannot tell exactly what it costs to take out rock or dirt. They send in approximate Estimates, and on many occasions contracts are let for less money.

Why not? We are doing a job for the Province of Ontario. A contractor must go out on the job. He signs a final declaration, and it says: "I am prepared to do this job." He puts up a cheque for 15 per cent. when he puts his tender in. Then he puts up a 100 per cent. performance bond which he must get from a reputable bond house in this country, or 50 per cent. in cash, so he must be assured he can complete the job, or he would not bid the price.

MR. WREN: How close would the hon. Minister of Highways suggest a competent engineer, or a contractor, for that matter, should be able to estimate a job? Should he be within 10 per cent., 20 per cent., 50 per cent., or what?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: How stupid can one get?

MR. WREN: That is just the trouble, Mr. Chairman, the contractors have been determining how much these jobs are worth.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: The hon. member is the one who could not answer any questions yesterday.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Can the hon. member tell me how close he came in estimating the waterworks, sewers, etc., in Sioux Lookout, compared to the finished article? Why did he come back time after time to the Municipal Board asking for $50,000, $70,000, and more, if his Estimate was correct? Why did he stop acting as clerk-treasurer of Sioux Lookout last year? Did he "run out" on them, or did they fire him? I have papers in my office which show a $24,600 deficit.

MR. WREN: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs does not know what he is talking about.

MR. DUNBAR: I am speaking. The hon. member should sit down.

MR. WREN: First of all, we are discussing highways.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: In a little town like Sioux Lookout there is a deficit of $24,600, and the clerk-treasurer walks out. We have all heard of leaving ships when they are going down. If that wasn't "leaving the ship," I do not know what it was.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs is deliberately misinforming you, as I will be pleased to discuss on any platform, and on any occasion.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Discuss it now.

MR. WREN: We are talking about highways now, and we should stick to highways. If we want to discuss municipal affairs, that is fine.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We are talking about contracts.

MR. WREN: The same sewer and waterworks contracts, about which the hon. Minister is talking, in each particular section of the work, the engineering Estimates were never more than 12 per cent. out. An eminent firm of consulting engineers in the City of Toronto did this work, and the hon. Minister can check with them.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member was clerk-treasurer at the time. He came to the Municipal Board and said, there was dirt to be removed. Later, he said it was not ordinary ground but it was rock 6 inches below the ground, but in his Estimates he stated it was dirt to be removed in order to get the Municipal Board to consent.

HON. MR. FOOTE: He should know dirt.

MR. WREN: That is a positive and deliberate mis-statement. Any statements made to the Municipal Board about that work were made by professional engineers.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is why Sioux Lookout is in the "mess" it is today.

MR. WREN: Getting back to highways, I want the hon. Minister of Highways to answer my question. How close does he think an engineer should be?

What is the maximum leeway a professional engineer should have in estimating a job?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I have one case which I will give through you to this House to show that there are often some very close Estimates. These were taken off the figures recently of jobs which were let in 1952 and finalized this year.

There were 45 contracts which cost between $7 and $8 million, and the estimate was within 10 per cent., which beats the hon. member in the sewer job by 2 per cent.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, I am glad to hear the hon. Minister of Highways make that statement. Then, why were so many jobs in final cost 100, 200 and 300 per cent. over the original tender?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, there is another explanation I would like to make to this House. I have had distributed to the desks of each hon. member a copy of the work that is under way which contains some 340 contracts. Those are the contracts which carried over from 1953, and a few let in 1954, which gives you an idea of what is going on.

The one thing I want to mention to this House, so that there will be no misunderstanding, is that some of these jobs which were let in the north country in the Thunder Bay District were changed in complexion and character. Some of them were called: I might say, for a minor re-surfacing or very light renovation; and when the contract was signed for the Trans-Canada Highway with the Federal Government, those jobs were converted, with the approval, of course, of all concerned, into Trans-Canada specifications, which changed the character and complexion entirely.

Naturally, there would be very huge overruns which were estimated at the time. There is nothing to hide in that. It was understood by all of us.

MR. OLIVER: Would that account for the variation in these two contracts

I have in mind? One contract was awarded for $443,000, and finalized at $1,282,000. Another one was awarded for $600,000.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: What contract was that?

MR. OLIVER: I really cannot tell you.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I am not sure unless I know the contracts, but I would say, off-hand, that would likely be one of them.

MR. OLIVER: The one is 6 miles west of Marathon.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes, that is Trans-Canada.

MR. OLIVER: What is the explanation of that, please?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is in a very rugged part of the Province of Ontario, as most of you know. There are huge rock hills and the alignment and grades and standards were changed. In other words, our standards are quite a bit different than the Trans-Canada standards.

HON. MR. FROST: It became Trans-Canada afterwards.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): May I make a few remarks, due to the fact that the discussion over the past few weeks has concerned itself chiefly with the district which I represent, and all sorts of slurs and other things have been thrown around?

Tonight, I picked up the Telegram and read:

McCarthy Methods Used by Doucett Highways Minister

George H. Doucett was accused today of using McCarthy tactics in treatment of employees during investigation of his department. The charge was made by Albert Wren, Liberal.

I am getting sick and tired of this constant "ballyhoo" and "guess work" in connection with the highways investigation. Of course, it is belaboured because it is the first time the Opposition has had a chance to criticize the Frost administration. Is that not so?

The hon. Minister Highways, in the marvellous speech he made tonight, told us the Provincial Auditor and other investigating firms will report to the Minister and to the Cabinet when the report is complete. Then, the hon. Minister and Cabinet will report to this House, and the people. Anything the hon. Minister might say now would be merely guesswork, the same as the statements of the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) and others who would pre-judge the cases of those charged with irregularities, men whom I know. That is not justice.

I am not much interested in the method of letting contracts at the moment. If our methods can be improved, this can easily be corrected. That is a departmental matter and one for decision by the Cabinet. What I am chiefly interested in, and what we are all interested in, is that the people of Ontario get value for the money spent, that they get roads at a fair price, and that the roads are built according to specifications. That would be a credit to the people of this province.

That to my mind is the crux of this question. That is what I want to know, before I speak of new ways of letting contracts by a Highways Commission to handle highways in the future.

I note with interest in the remarks of the hon. member for Kenora that he opens the way for positions for more people in all these things he suggests. In his remarks outside the House, the amounts involved in irregularities varied from $100,000 to $17½ million in a period of 3 weeks.

You can imagine what a contest—

MR. WREN: Where?

MR. WARDROPE: In the press. You can imagine what a contest would occur and what astronomical figures would be tossed about if the hon. member for Kenora and Walter Thompson were contesting the Liberal leadership.

The only thing which would stop them, would be lack of education to count any higher.

The hon. member for Kenora's suggestion of a Highways Commission, of an engineer with 20 years' experience at its head, with the Minister of the government as vice-chairman and a member of the Opposition, if you please, with the same salary as the Minister, that to my mind is just too ridiculous.

We have many fine engineers, as the hon. Minister of Highways has told us, tonight, in the department with over 20 years' experience now. Where could you get better ones with as much experience?

Mr. Chairman, our Minister of Highways has never had a finger pointed at his honesty, and his ability to get roads built has been acclaimed throughout this province. So the only new suggestion the hon. member for Kenora makes is for the putting on the Highways Commission a member of the Opposition, at the same salary as the Minister. You see, Mr. Chairman, that is a clever suggestion on the part of the hon. member for Kenora, and there is no doubt he would accept the position himself at the same salary as the hon. Minister. That is what you would label "implied consent."

Mr. Chairman, I was surprised and shocked to learn that anyone would use the word "brainwashing" in this country in connection with our investigation. It smacks of deplorable tactics used in foreign countries, and I believe it is unfair for anyone to use this phrase, and make this accusation when, to my knowledge, it is not true. I will just say this, Mr. Chairman. If the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) produces 1 witness before this committee who admits he was subjected to "brainwashing," I will bring 3 witnesses who will state during their investigation they were treated courteously, and allowed to answer questions put to them as desired, without compulsion or coercion of any kind. For every 1 he brings to us to say he was "brainwashed," I will bring 3 to testify to the contrary.

Let me repeat, Mr. Chairman, the highways investigation was started by this government. No one else had to tell them to start it. As soon as they discovered irregularities, they took swift, decisive action. Since the commencement of the investigation, 5 employees have been arrested, 20 or more have been suspended, a firm of nationally-known accountants have been examining all accounts and books of contracting firms which had any road contracts with this government, and, in addition, a well-known firm of engineers is checking all road work done for the government. These firms have full power to examine everything, and question everyone. All this has been done to see whether or not the people of Ontario have had an honest job done for their money.

I do not see where anything more could be done.

Certainly a Select Committee of this House cannot do better, or as well. Give these examining firms an opportunity to bring in their report, and let that be done with as little delay as possible, because in every part of the province this investigation and these lurid statements in the press are creating a great hardship on our people. No road contractor in our district has been paid any money since the investigation started last October, and these contractors owe a lot of money to businesses in our cities. We would like to see the whole matter settled, so that we can get back to normalcy, Mr. Chairman.

Tremendously exaggerated statements made regarding the whole investigation are hurting our end of the province. In my opinion, we now have more roads and the best roads we have ever had in our area in its history, and I firmly believe we have received value for every dollar spent.

I would suggest we cut out all this political circumlocution which is hindering the investigation, get the results and the findings of the investigating firms as soon as possible, and if irregularities or dishonesty are discovered, punish the offenders, but let us get on with our highway work.

Our people are not responsible for highway irregularities, neither should they be made to suffer for them. We need roads built and maintained in our area, so let us cut out putting all our efforts into holding up this work for the political aggrandizement of certain Parties, and get on with the road work we need so badly. All these irresponsible charges and innuendoes are holding up highway construction and progress in my district. We have given the job of investigation to experts. Let them bring in their reports, and let us get on with the business of this great province. I know the people of this province have full confidence that the Frost Government will handle this investigation fairly, impartially and honestly.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, it may be that the hon. member (Mr. Wardrope) has somewhat more confidence in the administration than I have, but I want to ask the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) about this other contract which was awarded for $615,000, and finalized at $1,300,000. Does he say that the same explanation applies to this one? It is the Little Pic contract.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: As far as I know, yes. There would be changes from the original in grades and standards in that job.

MR. OLIVER: How does that come about, because it is mostly rock; 90 per cent. of it is rock? Grading would not make any difference to that.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: After all, if you make a 5 per cent. grade and lower it to 3 per cent. you would take out much more rock, would you not? If you widened your road to a 22-foot surface instead of a 20-foot one, and put a 12-foot shoulder or a 10-foot shoulder instead of an 8, you would take out more rock.

MR. OLIVER: And that accounts for the variation?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, I think that will account for some of it.

MR. OLIVER: "Some of it?" What would account for the rest of it? I want to be fair to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett), but I want to find out some of these things.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, this may be one of the contracts which is under audit and investigation. I am not sure, but if not, there might be some swamps, or sink holes, or muskeg, such as we run into in the north. That would be an answer to it all, and I might say to this House, Mr. Chairman, that in the case of every one of those contracts, when the committee meets, the facts will be before the committee, because as I said, there is no closed book in the Department of Highways. The information is for you to see.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, just a word or two. I am not trying to make the highway issue a political football, nor am I going to use "circumlocution" of any kind, I can assure you. In fact, I am one member of the House whose Party does not expect to replace the Party in power at the next election on this issue, or any other.

AN HON. MEMBER: Never?

MR. SALSBERG: I said—"next election." So I can be very objective. Furthermore, I am one of the members in the House who, from my place, stated I consider the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) an honest man, and I still hold that opinion. I want to say, however, a few words, because there is the danger of going to extremes either way, and of forgetting that, regardless of loyalties that hon. members have towards their Party and government, or for those of the Opposition group, there are certain obligations which we, as members of the House, on all sides have in a matter of this sort.

On general principle, I agree with the position taken by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) on this question, and as agreed to by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), that, insofar as this matter, or any matter, is concerned, the House is supreme, and can, if it so desires discuss any aspect of this case, or any other case.

Having said that, I am prepared to say that there could be certain instances when it would not be in the best interests of the investigation, to discuss every detail. That is true. An investigation by one committee or another might be harmed by bringing out certain facts here.

However, I have felt all along that a mistake was made by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in not speaking earlier. I said so to all and sundry who wanted to listen to me that, for his own sake, I thought he should have spoken, and spoken earlier, and presented to the House such information as he thought proper. He has not done so, and I am obliged to say that tonight I think he did not go quite far enough.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I can give you another hour if you like. Would you like another hour?

MR. SALSBERG: No, I will ask a few questions, because if we accept the hon. Minister's (Mr. Doucett) concluding remarks, then we would hardly even consider the Estimates, except in a very perfunctory fashion, because we could not ask in the Estimates those questions which are pertinent, and without asking them, we just could not properly vote on many items. I think that would be wrong. We must remember that regardless of how, when, or where, or by whom this thing started and developed; the fact is, and we must face the fact that this province is concerned with—the recent development in this department. Whether you approve of one headline or another, this is a public issue. In fact, I as one member of the House—and I said so here, and I say so outside—am trying to raise other issues which, in my opinion, are far more important than this. I have said so in this House and at all my public meetings outside, since the beginning of the session. My point is that, while this is a serious business and we must get to the bottom of it, there are far more important questions, such as unemployment, loss of trade, the foreign situation, housing, and so on, and we must not allow this to over-shadow everything else. I think that is a sound position to take.

However, it is a major issue, and this is the first time this Legislature is discussing it, and that being the case, I am obliged to say to the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) that he stopped, in my opinion, too soon.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) a question?

MR. SALSBERG: Of course.

MR. COWLING: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) remarked in his talk just now that he was making public statements about general affairs. I noticed in the paper this morning that the LPP are meeting here in the city, and that meeting is not open to the public or to the press. Would the hon. member like to comment on that?

MR. SALSBERG: What has that got to do with this? It has nothing to do with it, and I will discuss it with the hon. member (Mr. Cowling) privately. However, this is the first evening we are discussing this matter, and without going into detail, the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) can, and I think should, make clear a few things; for instance, the questions raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) on a number of concrete cases, touch on the heart of the problem, and this can be dealt with even under the circumstances. That is the story being circulated, and that is a question people want answered. Is it true that it has been a practice—that is a point—for certain contracting firms to deliberately tender low, knowing that they can later be recompensed?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I want to say that that is absolutely untrue, as far as I know, and as far as any person knows who has anything to do with me. It is ridiculous.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Chairman, in an isolated instance there could be an explanation. I do not know these cases. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) mentioned one case where the hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) said the road was widened, and when we get down to brass tacks we may find it is exactly so. The big question though, to which everyone wants an answer, is the one I have raised, namely, whether it is a practice, and if that practice has reached such proportions, as has been said, that legitimate, large-scale contracting firms did not even want to tender because they knew they could not meet the low tendering that certain firms resorted to because the latter were able to collect additional amounts later? The hon. Minister (Mr. Doucett) has already given a reply. If he wants to elaborate on it, now may be the time to do so. Personally if I were he, I would elaborate on it, and speak of the trends of experience over a long period of time.

Then there is another thing. We know that the chief engineer has been suspended. Now I am not standing here as a judge to determine whether or not he should have been suspended, or what his position should be at the moment, but I suggest we should be told if there has been any change there? Is the man still out of the country? Is he coming back? Do you want him to come back? Is he now co-operating? And so on. In other words, a whole list of these questions which are being written about and talked about, and about which people are asking. I think a great deal of enlightenment could be given the House by the hon. Minister of Highways. And this is just by way of an introduction.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 70—if you want to get back to items again, it may be a terrific come-down for the gallery to discuss this—but you are voting from Highway Reserve Account $23 million.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is right.

MR. NIXON: And on the next page there is a statutory vote of $35 million.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): That is already there.

MR. NIXON: $58 million. How much does that leave?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I think I might explain that to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

The situation is there will be left in the Highway Reserve Fund, from the amount voted a year ago, about $17,500,000. There was $17,500,000 voted in the Supplementary Estimates a few days ago. That makes the $35 million. That was, as it were, in the bank at the beginning of the year. There will be added to that, from the Votes here, another $23 million, which will make $58 million in the Highway Reserve Account.

May I point out, Mr. Chairman, that the money being voted here totals $121,525,000, which is the amount of the Vote asked for in these Estimates. There is already $35 million in the Highway account.

Vote No. 70 agreed to.

On Vote No. 71.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister tell me what salaries are paid to the division engineers and if he thinks they are adequate? What is the normal salary for a division engineer?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I regret, Mr. Chairman, I have not the list of salaries with me tonight, but we will be happy to give the hon. member the figures. They are on a sliding scale. It is a matter of the time the engineer has worked with the department, and they are also zoned, according to divisions.

MR. WREN: What is the highest salary?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I would say, roughly—but I think it will be very close—that the top salary for a division engineer would be about $7,500.

MR. OLIVER: Who are the acting division engineers at Huntsville and Fort William at the present time?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, Mr. Cache, who was Assistant in the Ottawa Division, and then went to Cochrane for a short time, has now been transferred to Fort William. Mr. Walker is at Huntsville.

MR. OLIVER: They are both in the capacity of acting engineers, at the moment?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, Mr. Cache is a division engineer.

MR. OLIVER: Is that in Fort William?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: He was division engineer at Cochrane, and was moved to Fort William.

MR. OLIVER: Was his appointment confirmed at Fort William?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: Is that the practice, when a division engineer is suspended?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Cache has not been suspended. He was a division engineer before being transferred to Fort William. He took over the division at Fort William.

MR. OLIVER: Is he acting or has he been permanently appointed?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: His appointment has been confirmed. It was necessary to have a man to carry on at Fort William at once, and he was transferred there.

MR. OLIVER: But at Huntsville, the present incumbent is acting?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Oh yes, definitely.

Votes 71 and 72 agreed to.

On Vote 73.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 73, item 1: last year, the salaries for that department were $290,000 and this year they have increased to $695,000. Would the hon. Minister care to comment on that?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I might explain that change. As the hon. Prime Minister explained the other day, when speaking about the change in the Department of Highways, when we changed our Act, we formerly had our casual staff, which we took from other departments for the rush seasons, and they were really charged into the Highways Department. We now find casuals, when taken from one section to another, are charged to that section, and in that amount is included the change-over. The cost of living taken into the salaries has increased the amount considerably.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): On item 5, "Registration of Plates." Just in a lighter vein, I think I should bring to the attention of the hon. Minister that at our meeting of the Committee on Travel and Publicity the other day, there was some discussion, and congratulations were tendered to the hon. Minister for his fine licence plates. The thought was expressed there that there might be some sort of a slogan for the Province of Ontario, to be placed on the bottom of the licence plates. In many of the States in the Union, for instance, Wisconsin, "The Country's Dairy Land," and the State of Maine, "Vacation Land," and Florida, "The Sunshine State," and so forth, appear on their licence plates, and I was wondering if possibly some consideration might be given to putting a nice slogan at the bottom, such as "Canada's Vacation Land"—

MR. O. F. VILLENEUVE (Glen-garry): "A Tourist Paradise."

MR. COWLING: There is no other province, to my knowledge, which does that, and as Ontario always leads the way, I wonder if the hon. Minister would take under advisement, such a matter, or would he care to comment upon it?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, in reply to the hon. member (Mr. Cowling); sometime ago, we made an announcement that we have standardized our plates with a majority of the States of the United States, and in order to keep the figures on the plate, there would not be room for anything else, unless we took off the Crown, and far be it from me to ever recommend that we remove the Crown from the plates of the Province of Ontario.

MR. OLIVER: This may not be very important, Mr. Chairman, but what do you pay for the licence plates manufactured at Guelph?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I am not just positive, Mr. Chairman, but I will take a guess—between 13c. and 16c.

MR. SALSBERG: And what do you get for them?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We get a slight profit.

MR. SALSBERG: You are profiteering.

Vote 73 agreed to.

On Vote 74.

MR. OLIVER: On Vote 74, Mr. Chairman, will the hon. Minister tell the House how much money the government is holding back in respect to the 9 contractors whose books have been seized? I think that is a fair question. I would like the hon. Minister to tell the House just how much money is being held back.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I am very sorry I have not those figures here, and it would be difficult to give that information, without going into some detail. Until a job is finalized, under the contract, we hold 15 per cent., and I think on one or two of those jobs, we have paid very nearly all of that.

MR. OLIVER: That would still run into the millions.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Oh no.

MR. OLIVER: How much?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: My Finance Comptroller said he would not even guess without consulting the books, but if it is your desire, we can give the figure to the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

MR. OLIVER: It certainly is my desire.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister tell us the policy they have in the division office with regard to snowplowing on roads other than the King's Highways? Can we have a clear outline of that policy?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, this is the policy: Writing in a letter addressed to Mr. Albert Wren, M.L.A., Sioux Lookout, Ontario, Mr. M. M. McEwen, the division engineer at Kenora, has forwarded this information regarding snowplowing during the coming winter.

The instructions given to our division engineer are there will be no snowplowing for private purposes. For plowing done for other governmental departments, including the federal departments, the cost has been set at a flat rate of $200 per mile, or portion thereof. For organized and unorganized townships, improvement districts, and so forth, plowing will be done this winter at the net cost to this department.

The municipalities have been advised that due to the tremendous number of requests which have been made for snowplowing, the department will not be able in succeeding winters to carry out this plowing.

The subsidy by the department will, of course, continue to be paid to any municipality, improvement district, or statute labour board which will do its own plowing.

MR. OLIVER: What is the date of that letter?

MR. WREN: Yes, would the hon. Minister tell us on what date that letter was written?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: November 2nd, 1953. We have had many requests. Many of the municipalities and unorganized districts thought the rate we were asking was a little high. We do not want to interfere with private enterprise, and we have said to the municipalities, we would be very happy if they would make arrangements for the winter of 1954 now, and we will subsidize them by whatever subsidy is given to each municipality on other work. Most of them have agreed that was a very agreeable arrangement.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, on December 31st—I recall the letter the hon. Minister has just read, or a copy of it—but on December 31st I received a subsequent letter from the Deputy Minister of Highways which did not quite follow that line of thinking. I would ask the hon. Minister this question: As I said in my address to the House the other day, on January 9th, 1954, the defeated Conservative candidate in the last provincial election inserted in the paper, a notice—after these letters by the hon. Minister and the Deputy Minister—saying:

The Minister of Highways informs me that private road plowing will be carried out immediately, as in the past.

This letter of January 9th refutes what the hon. Minister said to me in a letter, and what the Deputy had said. In other words, he is using the hon. Minister's name to impute that the hon. Minister has reversed his decision, and that snowplowing will be carried on in the future, as it has been in the past. Which is correct? That is what I want to know, and what the statute labour board and others want to know.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I read the letter which is similar to the one I sent out; in fact, it is almost identically word for word.

Any person who writes a letter to me asking for my policy, if I have time, I reply immediately, and if not, I do so at the first opportunity. I do not know what was in the paper, but no doubt the gentleman wrote me a letter, and I answered. He wanted information for his community, and we are always anxious to tell the communities what we are prepared to do, and, as I have stated, we were prepared to plow any of the roads for the municipalities, or the Federal Government, and so forth, and they would be subsidized for whatever their bill was.

MR. WREN: Perhaps I have not made my question clear. I thoroughly understand the policy you sent to me in November, and I understood the Deputy's letter on December 31st, and I conveyed that information to people in my constituency, who were interested, but on January 9th, some weeks after those letters were written, this man said:

The Minister of Highways informs me that private road plowing will be carried out immediately, as in the past.

Which is correct?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: The hon. Minister of Highways did not make that promise.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: We are not plowing private roads.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No. We are not plowing private parties' roads. We are doing it for municipalities.

MR. WREN: Then this statement is not correct?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I do not know anything about that statement.

MR. WREN: The hon. Minister did not make it?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I very likely wrote a letter to the gentleman. I write to any gentleman who requires information from the department. We are anxious to give to the public any information we have regarding what we are doing for the public. We extend all co-operation possible. But he could just as well have enquired of the municipality. They have a municipal engineer there who could have given the information required.

MR. WREN: This is not a municipal problem. The municipalities are not complaining about snow plow arrangements. This refers to the ploughing of roads other than municipal roads. The hon. Minister and Mr. Millar, the Deputy, made a statement and then this man refutes it in the newspapers.

HON. MR. FROST: Who is the man who refutes it?

MR. WREN: The president of the Conservative Association in the Kenora District.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I must again say I am not responsible for advertisements which appear in the papers. If I was, I would certainly be responsible for a lot of things I might be ashamed of. Nevertheless, for what was stated in the letter, I cannot be responsible.

MR. WREN: Then this is all "bosh." That is all I want to know.

MR. OLIVER: I just want to ask the hon. Minister with regard to Vote 74, whether he would outline to the House the programme for this year in a broad way. Or in as minute detail as he likes.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Well, Mr. Chairman, I thought I had imposed considerable work on the Department of Highways in asking them to prepare the book which was placed on the desk of each hon. member, and I think that goes into great detail. There is a spread sheet which sets out the disposal of many thousands of dollars as well as 300 or more contracts.

Some of the other works I mentioned in my speech. I can tell the House about some of the things we anticipate doing, but I must preface my remarks by saying this: there are great possibilities, but a great deal depends on the engineering we can get done. In the last few years the engineering preparation required has been much more extensive, and I do not think I need tell hon. members, Mr. Chairman, how difficult it is to get the services of technical men. If hon. members ever read the New York Times they will see there is a full page of advertisements every weekend for engineers. We have tried to supplement our staff with additional trained men, but they are most difficult to find. As the hon. Prime Minister said tonight, if conditions warrant it, and if we can have the staff to do it, we shall certainly go forward with many of the roads that we have planned.

One of these, as I stated tonight, is the continuation of the highway to Windsor. No doubt we shall in the coming year do very considerable work on the development from Cornwall west. There are numerous other jobs in prospect. We might even consider the renewing and surfacing of roads in the hon. member for Grey's own county. If we are short of engineering staff we might be able to resurface some roads which need a minimum of engineering. But it is unnecessary for me to say that, with all construction work, there is a very extensive engineering programme involved.

MR. OLIVER: May I inquire about the routing of the road along the St. Lawrence River? Is it reasonably well established as to where it will be?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Reasonably so. I think the Hydro have their location selected, but it depends somewhat on where the railway track runs.

MR. OLIVER: What mileage is involved?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It might run to 40 miles.

MR. P. MANLEY (Stormont): With regard to Vote 75, and the amount set out for development roads. I see there is quite a reduction. Is it the intention of the department to cut down on this item each year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I would not say there is any intention to cut down on the development roads. This year we hope to carry on a programme about the same in extent as last year. The reason for cutting this sum this year is that last year we did not spend the amount we put in the Estimates.

MR. WREN: With regard to item 75, No. 2—roads in unincorporated townships in Northern Ontario. I see this amounts to $200,000. Can the hon. Minister give me a break-down? Where will that money be spent?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, as I stated in my address this afternoon, we have between 100 and 200 unincorporated townships, and 155 statutory labour boards. It would not be possible for me to give the hon. member (Mr. Wren) a detailed break-down. It would be a long process. But I may say it is done according to the subsidy, or according to the work provided. In many of these cases we pay money in lieu of work done.

MR. MANLEY: Then all this is for statutory labour boards?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No. Not all of it. There are the unincorporated townships.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): I wonder if the hon. Minister would tell us what yardstick he uses when granting subsidies? I know of some municipalities which have appealed to the department and been turned down.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It is a very difficult thing to give any hon. member an exact explanation. I can tell him how we did it last year. We had a little less in the budget than we have this year, but last year, in speaking to the Municipal Association when they had some 1,800 representatives in the city, I recommended to them they should act along certain lines and I would recommend to this Legislature the amount of some $28 million to meet their requirements, or the amount which they received in the previous year. But, as I remember them, the figures of their Estimates were in excess of double that amount, running between $80 million and $90 million. It was such a huge sum of money that we could not begin to provide for its expenditure. We had to figure a yardstick by which to judge these requirements, and the Estimate which we used was that we brought the majority back to the 1952 level. I said if there should be any cases of emergency, we would be happy to consider it. And we did consider very many such cases and in every case, I am very happy to say, extra money was granted. And I may say to the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) who raised this question, that his own community came forward and got something like $150,000 or more because they were doing some work of an emergency nature. That is what we did in pretty nearly every case and we ended up satisfactorily, spending, I think, all the money they wanted to spend, but very little more than the amount we had provided in the Estimates.

MR. THOMAS: While we are on Vote 75, I would like to mention a service road which was built in the City of Oshawa in 1952 and 1953. This particular road is about $1\frac{7}{8}$ miles long and it passes through approximately 1 mile of city property. The work was begun in October or November of 1952, and completed some time in 1953 and the local council there did not know who had given the Department of Highways authority to build it. Various questions were asked in the council. But no one seemed to have the answer. It was raised in the City Council, in February or March of last year and it was discussed for some time. The affair was tabled, and then brought up again in June, and a committee of two members of the Council, Alderman Down and Alderman Dyer, were appointed to investigate and find out how this road and bridge were built. They made some inquiries and eventually ended up in the Department of Highways, where they met the Deputy Minister. They asked him who had given permission, and he told them that the local council had consented to the building of this road, but he could not remember the names of the individual council members. There the matter rested for some time.

At the election in December the question was raised again and was an issue in the local municipal election, and when the election was over 3 new faces appeared on the council. Whether that was the result of the road investigation or not, I do not know, but at the first meeting in January a committee was again appointed to investigate the building of this service road and the bridge.

Three members of council were appointed and they asked me if I would assist in an advisory capacity. I said I would be very happy to do so.

The committee could not be called political, for there were 2 Conservatives, 1 Liberal, and myself. We made some investigations locally and none of the local councillors seemed to know anything about it. No confirmation by motion or resolution appeared in the minute book; no record was there at all and we eventually ended up in the Department of Highways in consultation with the hon. Minister and the Deputy Minister.

To me it seemed quite obvious that the hon. Minister was not too well acquainted with the situation; in fact he mentioned that it was mainly departmental, and the Deputy Minister had taken charge of that particular project. During the course of the discussion, Mr. Millar, I think, only remembered 2 names of the delegation, but agreed that it was a verbal arrangement between these 3 or 4 men in the delegation, and no written agreement had been moved or approved by the local council. It meant a minority of 3 men on that council had committed a 12-man council to something they did not know anything at all about.

The building of the road and bridge, I must admit, was an economy for the Province of Ontario. They were quite within their right in doing that, because it meant a bridge and a road costing about $94,000 was a much better alternative to building a bridge across the dual-lane highway and the two railways, which might have cost $400,000 or $500,000.

The important point about it was this, Mr. Chairman, that when the committee was appointed, at the first meeting in January on Monday evening, the following day the Deputy Minister made a statement in the Oshawa Times Gazette that the City Council had requested the building of this road and had completely approved of the arrangement. That, I suggest, was a mis-statement, because no such agreement had been approved of by the City Council of Oshawa.

However, this is the point I want to make: the Department of Highways had gone in there on private municipal property. They had not expropriated the 1 mile of road, and had spent $94-95,000, and when we questioned the Deputy Minister and asked him if it was customary for the Department of Highways to go in and spend that amount of money on a verbal consent of a minority of councillors, he had this to say: "Yes, it is quite common practice. We sometimes do that and spend millions of dollars."

Mr. Chairman, perhaps that might be the reason for some of the things which are happening on the highways today. I would like the hon. Minister to comment on the situation down there.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I think I gave the hon. member an explanation, as well as I could, at the time he was in to see me, but I have had a little light thrown on the matter since. I happened to be in the capital city last Saturday and met, accidentally, in the hotel one of the members who was with the deputation which waited on the Deputy Minister. At the time it was explained to the hon. member that this was a road which we had anticipated in lieu of—or to prevent—the building of a very costly overhead over double tracks, which would cost several times the amount of the road.

As I understand it, it was a verbal explanation and arrangement and as he states, they requested to see the Deputy Minister. They did not come to see me on this particular matter, as I understand it, but when they were there they said, "Why not go ahead and build this road?" They were quite anxious to have it done. It was not going to cost them anything. As I understand it—and it is only my understanding—they volunteered the part of the right-of-way which they had expropriated, or were going to expropriate, I do not know which.

However, the road was built at no cost to the city. Since that time they have annexed this area and, any person to whom I have spoken feels it is going to be of considerable service to the town.

I saw in an Oshawa paper the other day that this was a "tempest in a teapot." But what was wrong? According to him, he criticized the members of the former council for not coming forward and telling the facts to the present council.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): That is right. If I might ask one question, I will finish. The hon. Minister of Highways said he was speaking to someone in Ottawa last week-end.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is right.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): I imagine it would be our local Conservative member, Mr. Starr.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I want to put the hon. member straight on that now. I assure you it was not Mr. Starr, your local federal member.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): It was not?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, it was another gentleman, and you can take another guess. I happened to meet him in the hotel and, in fact, I do not mind saying I had lunch with him, and he paid for it. We discussed this amongst many other things.

HON. MR. FROST: The road is no longer lost? Is that it?

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): No, the road is no longer lost. I think it was good business on the part of the government. It was saving them money. But it was the procedure which was adopted that I argue with.

Vote 75 agreed to.

On Vote 76.

MR. MANLEY (Stormont): On Vote 76, "Payments out of The Unsatisfied Judgment Fund," as I recall the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) made some very definite charges in the House that the people in the legal profession were getting more out of this fund than the people involved in accidents. I would like the hon. Minister to explain to us how that fund is holding out, and if those irregularities, which the hon. member alleged, have been corrected.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I might say during my acquaintanceship with the hon. member for Kingston, I have found he is pretty capable of taking care of himself on all occasions, and any statements he made, the hon. member for Stormont can discuss with him.

However, I mentioned in my address tonight that we had made one amendment which permitted us to make certain settlements. 150 of those, I think, have been settled and at considerable saving. I could not tell you how much.

As far as the fund is concerned, I am very happy to report to the House, Mr. Chairman, that it is in a very good condition. Last year we borrowed some $600,000 from the hon. Provincial Treasurer. He loaned it on a promissory note and we have been paying that off.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): What interest did he charge?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: A very nominal fee.

MR. SALSBERG: How much?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I could not tell you how much. I would have to check on that. I might say that has been liquidated and unless something unforeseen occurs this year, while we have an item in here of $200,000, we will be able to carry on without using that amount, but it is there in case of an emergency.

MR. MANLEY: May I ask another question: if it is possible, would you consider dropping the 50 cents for the drivers' licences in another year?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: If we accumulate a certain amount of money,

But I do not want to go back for another loan this year. I want to keep my credit good, and probably we will go along for 2 years and will have an idea of just what we can do. I assure the hon. member if we accumulate a sum of money which will permit it, we will certainly give it back to the public by reducing that fee.

MR. SALSBERG: Before we dispose of the final Vote here, I would like to remind the hon. Minister that one of the very few questions I asked tonight was not answered, and I would like to ask him whether he would answer it now.

The question was, in case he forgot, whether the chief engineer is still out of the city, or out of the country; whether he is still suspended, whether he has been summoned to return and co-operate, and what his attitude is?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I might say, first of all, the chief engineer is suspended. I do not know where he is, but I hope he will return, and soon.

MR. SALSBERG: Am I to conclude that the government is desirous of getting him back?

HON. MR. FROST: Very much so.

MR. SALSBERG: But he has not shown up and his whereabouts are not known?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is true.

MR. SALSBERG: Is that true?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is correct.

MR. GRUMMETT: In connection with the hon. Minister's statement that you might take steps to bring him back, what can you do unless you charge him with an extraditable offence?

HON. MR. FROST: That is correct, you are quite right.

Vote 76 agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the Committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed: Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply begs to report it has come to certain resolutions, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

DEPARTMENT OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 55, "An Act to amend the Department of Municipal Affairs Act."

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment to move to Bill No. 55. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) enquired regarding the final words in 10a(1) of section 1, where it says, "as it deems advisable," and asked me to delete that. I am putting in instead:

"Relative to provincial grants and municipal tax levies." That is the information I would ask for.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): On this bill, and on this section, Mr. Chairman, I should like to move an amendment, and I shall explain it before doing so. I assure you I shall be very brief.

I have a feeling, Mr. Chairman, that this bill is not very reasonable. What you are trying to do in it is to oblige municipalities to state in the tax bill, how much they receive from the province—is that right? I do not think it should be done, because it could be considered a political move to get political "kudos" for the government which happens to be in power. I am very good humoured now, and I am not suspecting this government of having such intentions or thoughts, but it could be construed as having such a meaning, and I was going to suggest that, in order that we be very fair and above-board, if we intend to proceed with this bill—which I would rather not—then let us amend it so that in the tax bill, while mentioning the amount received from the province, we also require them to state what percentage of the provincial grant comes from the Federal Government. I believe hon. members know what I mean. But in case the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) does not quite "get it," I will explain it a little further.

What I have in mind is this, that on the basis of the tax agreement with Ottawa, this province received at this time about one-third of the total income—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I see the point the hon. member is making.

MR. SALSBERG: It is a very interesting point.

HON. MR. FROST: It may be put this way: we are renting to Ottawa, very profitable tax fields for $140 million, nearly every cent of which goes to the municipalities.

MR. SALSBERG: And the municipalities also had certain tax fields which were taken away by the province, and in lieu certain grants were given. The city could say, if it wanted to—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: What was taken away?

MR. SALSBERG: The corporation income tax.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, and they were given a one mill subsidy in lieu of that.

MR. SALSBERG: I said they took away certain fields, and in turn, gave them a grant.

HON. MR. FROST: Who took them away?

MR. SALSBERG: The provincial government of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: What day?

HON. MR. PORTER: Perhaps the provincial government of the night.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, night like this.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: It was good legislation.

MR. SALSBERG: The point I make is that they took away the right of the municipalities to certain taxes, and in lieu thereof, they are giving them a grant. This government is doing the same thing, and I think in all fairness, the taxpayers should be told on their tax bills, "This city is receiving from the province, $1 million, $500,000 of which is in a grant from the Federal Government to the province." Then you would be eminently just and fair. Anything else will cause people to suspect you are putting through this legislation in order to get some political kudos.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member always suspects us of that.

MR. OLIVER: You might gain some votes by it, but you would lose some the other way.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The people are complaining in the province—in fact, I have listened to radio broadcasts, where it was said that the poor municipalities were being left out in the cold. We are not ashamed of what we are doing for the municipalities. We want it on the tax bill, so that the taxpayers will know what this province is doing.

MR. SALSBERG: And why you are doing that. Tell them that almost one-half of it comes from a federal grant, therefore, your percentage of the money you give them is from the Provincial Treasury.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member that the money we receive from the Federal Government is for valuable consideration; what we give to the municipalities is for natural love and affection—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: And right on the top of the table.

MR. OLIVER: I would like to say one word to the hon. Minister. I am not a bit alarmed about this. But I think he should put a "X" at the bottom, and suggest to the taxpayers that they have paid the whole thing in the first place, and this just partial reimbursement.

HON. MR. PORTER: We do not need to tell them that; they know it.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: They are very intelligent people.

MR. OLIVER: I think they are. I do not think they will be moved much by this.

Section 1, as amended, agreed to.

Sections 2 and 3 agreed to.

Bill No. 55 reported.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is the best pieces of legislation we have ever passed through this House.

THE BEES ACT, 1954

The House in Committee on Bill No. 59, "The Bees Act, 1954."

Section 1 to 21 inclusive agreed to.

On section 22.

MR. SALSBERG: Just to break the monotony. I am sure it is not for the old bees, because this is a long bill.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I do not see the hon. member for Kenora. He has bees up in the north country.

MR. SALSBERG: Was the Society of Beekeepers consulted about this bill, and have they approved of it?

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Do you not want this to go to the Labour Committee?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, the answer is "yes"; they were all consulted, except some of the bees. They were not consulted.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like the hon. Minister of Labour to hear that. He knows what I mean.

Sections 22 to 29 inclusive agreed to.

Bill No. 59 reported.

LIVESTOCK PRODUCTS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 62,
"An Act to amend the Livestock and Livestock Products Act."

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 62 reported.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumes; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr.
Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report 13 bills without amendment, and one bill with amendment.

Report concurred in.

HON. MR. FROST moves the adjournment of the House.

He said: Tomorrow afternoon, we will consider the Estimates of the Department of Labour. I understand the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr.
Salsberg) will be out of town.

MR. SALSBERG: Not this year.

HON. MR. FROST: Following that, any committee work we can do. As the hon. members know, the House will meet at 2 o'clock.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11.10 of the

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, MARCH 26, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Today, we have as our guests, pupils from the Burlington Public Schools in Burlington. We are very happy to have you with us. I am sure, and we sincerely trust that our deliberations will be of interest to and an education for you.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. GEORGE PARRY: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Beckett, I beg leave to present the Third Report of the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Beckett, from the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, submits the following as its Third Report.

Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

Bill No. 111, "An Act to amend The Public Parks Act."

Motion agreed to.

MR. W. J. STEWART: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the Ninth Report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Stewart, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills, presents the following as its Ninth Report.

Your committee begs to present the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 10, "An Act respecting the City of London."

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE ROYAL CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC OF TORONTO ACT

HON. W. J. DUNLOP (Minister of Education) moves first reading of bill intituled, "The Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto Act, 1954."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, for a good many years, there has been in the University of Toronto, a Faculty of Music, instruction in which has been given, for the most part, in The Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto.

That institution—The Royal Conservatory of Music—has been managed all these years by a Board of Directors, upon which board the university has had representation from its Board of Governors. After there has been for so many years such close connection between the two, so that the Conservatory has practically been a part of the university, it is now proposed that the union be consummated, and The Royal Conservatory of Music become definitely and—shall I say—absolutely a part in every way of the University of Toronto, operated, as are other faculties, by the Board of Governors of the University.

The Board of Directors are most anxious this shall be done, and the Board of Governors is also perfectly willing that it be done.

THE ELECTION ACT, 1951

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General) moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Election Act, 1951."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill follows in large part, the recommendations of the Committee on the Election Act, which presented its report earlier in the session.

There are one or two changes. One is the recommendation as to a deposit of $200 has not been incorporated in this bill.

Secondly, the provision with respect to Returning Officers has been somewhat amended. Rather than having a permanent appointment, it is provided by this bill that a Returning Officer may be appointed at any time prior to an election, and shall hold the office until he completes his duties with respect to the next following general election. His duties are then terminated, and it is open to have another appointment made, if it is considered advisable.

But it did preserve the principle of one of the main reasons, I think, for the recommendation of the committee, and that is that a Returning Officer may be appointed prior to an election, and thus will be enabled to do a great deal of preliminary work, instead of having it left for the very last moment.

In some cases, it might not be convenient to appoint a Returning Officer at an earlier date, while in others it may be more convenient to appoint one later. There is a certain amount of flexibility in that respect.

Thirdly, there is a section repealing the present section as to the use of automobiles. That recommendation has not been accepted. I think those are the three main diversions from the report of the committee.

THE VOTERS LIST ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend The Voters List Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill, Mr. Speaker, is complementary to the Election Act, and follows in substance the recommendations of the committee. I do not think there are any changes. However, I will check that before the time the bill comes forward later.

THE CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Controverted Elections Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, this bill simply is supplementary to the other two bills, in one point only; it strikes out the words "Clerk of the Court in Chancery" as used in the present Act, and replaces those words with the words, "Chief Election Officer."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, on a question of privilege; are congratulations due to the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope)? I see he has at last "made it" to the other side.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I say just a word on behalf of the appeal presently being made to our people, not only in Ontario, but across Canada, on behalf of the Canadian Cancer Society.

In Ontario, we have the Ontario Division, with Mr. Heinzman as chairman. He is a young man with great ability. Assisting him is a great band of men and women who are very interested and active in fighting this great scourge of Canada.

Their appeal is for $500,000, to help carry out the work of the Canadian Cancer Society, the Ontario Institute, and assist in the formation of cancer institutes from Windsor, around the shores of the lakes to the Lakehead.

It is our very great wish and desire that the Cancer Society, with its great membership, should be active allies and supporters of that project.

As was mentioned in the budget, we are, shall I say, investing a great sum of money in the fight against that disease.

The Cancer Society has been active for many years, and has had very close association with thousands of people in this province. They are doing magnificent work, and with the completion of the Cancer Institute in Toronto, will be able to devote more and more of their energies to the furtherance of research. Part of their activities will be devoted to the stimulation of public interest in that very great feature of cancer prevention. Indeed, we hope, ultimately research will lead to a complete cancer cure.

The work some of these people are doing is indeed very wonderful. I would like particularly to mention their work in connection with the "Little Red Door", a project which is adjacent to some of the great hospitals, where people who are afflicted may go for counsel and advice.

Some of the people associated with the Cancer Society are those who have suffered and recovered from that dread disease, and they give their experiences to other people who are afflicted, which gives the people confidence that their ailment is not necessarily fatal, and, if treated in time, is curable. I cannot speak too highly of the work of this society. The chairman of the Ontario Division is a member of the Ontario Research Foundation, Mr. Heinzman. There are others who are very closely connected with the work. There is in effect a partnership between the government, the medical practitioners, the research scientists and the hospital staff. The Cancer Foundation and the Cancer Society draw together all the known resources in the fight against this disease. I want today, Mr. Speaker, to commend their appeal to the people of the province.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

ESTIMATES, PROVINCIAL AUDITOR

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, may I ask that the House consent to taking up at this time the Estimates for the Office of the Provincial Auditor. Last night, I said we would call, first of all, the Estimates for the Department of Labour. The departure I am making may appear comparatively slight, although, in effect, it is very great.

In ordinary course, the Department of the Provincial Auditor has been dealt with and passed over more or less as a matter of routine. I do not recall in my time any questions being asked relating to it.

However, Mr. Chairman, in view of the present situation, I would like to make some references to remarks which were made in the House last night in regard to the Auditor's Department, and this afternoon might be the time to spend a few minutes to say something about that section.

I think perhaps, in the past, I have been rather remiss in not saying something more fully to the hon. members of the House in connection with the Provincial Auditor's Department. Some 3 or 4 years ago, there was a revision of the Statute which governs that department, and which made the Auditor as he always has been—but which clarified the situation—the servant of this House and of the people, not of the government.

The Provincial Auditor, his Deputy and his staff have, over the years, been self-effacing individuals, whose work has never been spectacular, but, nevertheless, has been of the utmost value to our province.

This morning, I mentioned this matter to my good friend, the Comptroller of Finance, Doctor Walters. I am indebted to Dr. Walters for showing me a letter written some 16 years ago by the then Provincial Auditor, who had served his province for some 40 years, the late Gordon Brown.

At that time, Mr. Brown was dying of cancer, and passed away shortly afterwards.

Doctor Walters gave me this letter, and on it is the handwriting of my predecessor, hon. Mitchell Hepburn, which makes this an interesting document, from a historical point of view. This letter was written on the 14th of February, 1938, addressed to the hon. M. F. Hepburn, Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer, Parliament Buildings, and it reads:

DEAR MR. HEPBURN:

I have been discussing with Mr. Walters the question of my resigning my position because of the condition of my health, and being greatly concerned as to the future of the department with which I have been connected for over forty years, I take the liberty of writing you with regard to my successor.

I wish to bring to your attention my assistant Mr. H. A. Cotnam, who is a Chartered Accountant and a Bachelor of Commerce, and who has qualifications beyond these academic ornaments; he is zealous for the Service and above all he is loyal to his position and to those in authority over him. The staff respects him and serves him cheerfully; and I respect him and am grateful to him for the way he has supported me. He is in every way eminently fitted for the position of Provincial Auditor, and as one of the severing acts of my forty years of service I write this letter recommending him for appointment to the position which I shall shortly vacate.

I have discussed this matter with your Comptroller of Finances, Mr. C. S. Walters, who will support and add to my recommendation.

Assuring you of my true personal regard and my very best wishes.

Yours very sincerely,

(signed) G. A. BROWN, Provincial Auditor.

Mr. Chairman, I will table this letter, and if any hon. member would like to see it, they will have an opportunity so to do, after which I will ask the Clerk of the House to hand the letter back to Doctor Walters, from whose files it came.

In reading you this appraisal of our Provincial Auditor, Mr. Harvey Cotnam, I am reading you the verdict of one who died shortly after, a man with 40 years of service to our province. It is indeed a voice from the past, and it is more eloquent than anything I can say about the capabilities of Mr. Cotnam. It has been borne out by the experience of the 16 years which have elapsed, during 11 of which I have been Treasurer of Ontario.

During that period he has not been the servant of the government. He has been by Statute the servant of this Legislature. In his independent position he represents this Legislature and the people. Indeed he stands over the government. In this period of 11 years, the longest and in many ways the most trying and challenging period in which any Treasurer has been served, may I acknowledge the correctness of the late Mr. Brown's appraisal, and of the hon. Mr. Hepburn's acceptance of it.

May I add my own experience. I have found an unswerving loyalty to truth, a faithfulness to duty transcending any other association, and a justice and impartiality which is a tribute not only to the man, but to the people of this province whom he serves.

Mr. Cotnam has been a sound adviser to my predecessor. I am sure that all whom he served as Provincial Auditor will agree with me that Mr. Cotnam has been a great servant of this province. He has been a sound adviser to me, one who never hesitates to disagree with my judgment, when he finds it necessary.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) may say to me "What judgment has he disagreed with?" I would reply that I try to keep my judgment so sound, that it is difficult for me to remember an instance. I would certainly give any which occur to me to the hon. Leader of the Opposition when I have time to think it over. But I would assure hon. members that Mr. Cotnam has never hesitated to give me his advice, and to tell me what he thought of the fiscal position of the province, about what we are doing and the way in which we are doing it. He will do that for those who will come after me, because he is still a young man, and he will be a great adviser to those who succeed to this position and to the portfolio which I hold as Treasurer of this province.

Mr. Cotnam is a man of great ability, which is recognized in government circles in other governments in Canada, and by those associated with business and industry outside of government. When he has been offered other appointments—and this, I can assure hon. members, has been the case—he has always said in his modest way that he prefers to be a good Provincial Auditor. May I say this afternoon that no auditor of any province or of any government in Canada can surpass him. I think I can say, quite truthfully and quite quite properly, that he is the best Provincial Auditor.

May I associate with him, his very able Deputy and Assistant Provincial Auditor, Mr. George Spence, and also all of those to whom I should like to refer personally, but time will not permit, who are associated in this great work which is being carried on continuously, I could almost say, in the interests of the government, and people of this province.

I am very happy indeed to make this acknowledgment of the work of Mr. Cotnam and Mr. Spence, and their very fine staff, and to state that I should repeat that every year. So often it is the case that we take as an accepted fact the good work of people, and we let it pass by, because other matters are more spectacular and more pressing.

I can assure you, Mr. Speaker, that no work in Canada is more important than the work of the auditors, whose duty it is, as in the case of Mr. Cotnam, to see that the interests of the people always prevail.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): It is refreshing at times to be able to agree with the hon.

Prime Minister in remarks he makes in the House, and certainly on this occasion I can say that my colleagues and I agree with what he has said. We have in the present Provincial Auditor a man of very high calibre, in whom we have confidence, and in whom, I think, the people of Ontario have confidence also. He is an outstanding man and we are fortunate to have him as Provincial Auditor.

Having said that, I want to say this to the Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost), that I think there is a great deficiency in the audit department, a deficiency arising from the fact that we are spending in Ontario some $600 million a year, and we are asking the Provincial Auditor to audit all these accounts and keep a tight rein on expenditures, while allowing the audit office the sum of only $250,000. I suggest in all seriousness to the hon. Prime Minister this afternoon that it is humanly impossible for the Provincial Auditor to do the job that he is trying to do, and that he is fully qualified to do, on this meagre allowance, and I think at this session of the Legislature, we should very greatly enlarge this amount. If we did, we have a man at the head of the department whom we know would spend that money wisely, and get it back many times over for the people of the Province of Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: May I say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) that I have reviewed this matter, and have asked Mr. Cotnam, in effect, to "write his own ticket." I know something of the work he has done himself over the past month, working on Saturdays and Sundays as well as other days. And here and now I offer to him, on behalf of the government and of this Legislature, every facility and every resource. As a matter of fact I have asked him not to work so hard himself. I have asked him to retain assistants if necessary. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition will realize that extension of staff is always fraught with a certain amount of difficulty, but it is within Mr. Cotnam's power to go outside the government to secure staff to assist him. If he finds he requires such assistance, he is enabled to take this course, and I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition that if this Estimate—which is Mr. Cotnam's own—is inadequate in any way, we shall certainly extend the financial resources he requires, and report that to the House next year. I agree with the hon. Leader of the Opposition that in our auditing services we should not be niggardly. With a budget of $350 million, enormous work is involved. We want to give the Provincial Auditor the resources he needs: we want him to keep his health. He is entitled to his leisure, and his home life the same as the rest of us, and I do not want his ever faithfulness to duty to prevent his doing the things he ought to do for the good of his own health. This applies also to his very faithful staff. I may say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that I am in entire agreement with what he says, and if there should be requirements over and above the Estimate which has been submitted, I will certainly do as I have said, and report to the House afterwards.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I think it is very fitting indeed that the hon. Prime Minister and the Leader of the Opposition should have referred this afternoon to the work of the Provincial Auditor. I can recollect when I first came into the House, I was here for 2 or 3 years before I realized that there was such a man as a Provincial Auditor. His Estimates went through without any question, and no attention whatsoever was paid to this very important position. I am pleased, therefore, that the hon. Prime Minister took this opportunity this afternoon to refer to an office which is of such great importance in the administration of the affairs of this province.

MR. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I need hardly say that I, with, I am sure, every other hon. member, agree with everything which has been said. I am, of course, no authority on this, and I have had no personal experience with the auditor, except that he is a very pleasant person to encounter, and that it is good to see him when we are in session. Everyone speaks well of him, and what more could be asked than that?

What I want to say on this item is this: it seems to me that it is not enough for us to tell the Provincial Auditor that we will make the necessary money available to him to enlarge his staff. I think we should, perhaps, make arrangements for the Provincial Auditor to have power to examine and to audit the books of branches of provincial activities, which are now outside his jurisdiction. I refer to this now because this is as appropriate a place as any other at which to do so. Last year I spoke on Hydro. I am aware that there is a private auditing firm at work there—and undoubtedly a very highly reputable firm—auditing the books. But I feel that even in the case of Hydro the Provincial Auditor should have the over-all responsibility for the auditing. I recognize that the auditing of so gigantic a commission as Hydro, with the enormous amount of money expended at this time, would require a big staff, and perhaps the Provincial Auditor would have to engage some private auditing firm to do part or most of the work for him.

I am suggesting that the responsibility for the auditing of Hydro and all other commissions should be that of the Provincial Auditor so that an hon. member of this Legislature could discuss with him matters affecting the operation of the commissions set up by the government on behalf of the people of Ontario. As matters stand, this is not possible. We can discuss with the Auditor any item we care to, affecting the government directly, but we cannot discuss with him matters affecting Hydro. I think that also applies to the Ontario Northland Railway, and even to the Liquor Board. I have felt for a long while that although the assumption of this additional responsibility would probably make it necessary for the Provincial Auditor to engage the services of private firm, final responsibility must be in the hands of the Provincial Auditor.

I think that is a necessary step. I think it would result in better administration and also make possible the avoidance of many happenings, since every hon. member of this Legislature would have the opportunity of discussing matters with which he was concerned, and the Auditor could supply him with information with regard to said government agency or Commission.

I am not insisting that we have a full-dress discussion of this today, but I do think it is a constructive idea, and I would urge the hon. Prime Minister, who is also our Treasurer, to make a statement now, or at least to take it into serious consideration.

HON. MR. FROST: I will be very glad to discuss this matter with the Provincial Auditor. As a matter of fact, I have already discussed the matter with him at various times, as well as with such bodies as the Ontario Northland Railway, the Liquor Control Board, and The Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission. The Auditors are there continually. They conduct a running audit, and are housed right on the premises, and their reports are made partly to the organization's office, but they go as well to the Provincial Auditor. I think it will be agreed that there may be some difference of opinion as to whether the whole organization should be centred entirely upon the Provincial Auditor, or whether the present system of having these continuously—conducted audits, and reports to the Provincial Auditor, should be continued.

I will be very glad to discuss the point again with the Provincial Auditor. I think it has been felt by this government, and by the Auditor himself, and by governments in the past, that perhaps the present arrangement has advantages. However, the point is well taken, and I shall certainly give it consideration.

Vote 123 agreed to.

ESTIMATES. DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

HON. C. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Before I proceed with the remarks I have to make in connection with the budget, I would draw the attention of hon. members to a resolution by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that there be laid before this House a return showing all correspondence between the Department of Labour and the Dominion Glass Company. I want to say, Mr. Chairman, that I think the step taken by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) was entirely unnecessary, and could have been avoided if the hon. member had asked me for this correspondence. He need not have gone through this official propaganda to get it this way. I have brought the correspondence with me, and I will lay it on the table.

MR. SALSBERG: May I reply to that?

HON. MR. DALEY: Not just now. I would like to get on with my remarks.

In introducing these Estimates, Mr. Chairman, there are two factors which I would like to bring to the attention of the House. The first is we must not forget that today industry is fighting in an ever increasing competitive market, both at home and abroad, for its very existence. These are trying times. We hear a great deal about the increasing unemployment situation, and I say that industry has a great responsibility, particularly in times like these, when markets are slowing down. Consumer demand is, to say the least, hesitant. If hon. members read the advertisements in the newspapers they will see that merchants all over the country are cutting their prices extensively, vying with each other for the consumer dollars, to the point of practically extinguishing the normal profit. Hon. members can see this on every side. So I say that industry has a greater responsibility than ever to give employment to every man it possibly can. I believe that industry is conscientiously trying to do this.

Now I know that our textile industry is at a low ebb at the present time, because, it is claimed, of unfair outside competition, and other reasons upon which I shall not try to elaborate here. Our farm implements business is quietening for various reasons, one of which is the inability of our own, and other countries' farmers to purchase at present prices, and also, in the case of farmers from other countries, inability to secure the necessary dollars. Many small industries—implements industries particularly—are going through rather a quiet time because of competition from such countries as Germany and Japan. I see tenders submitted by big industries for contracts on a competitive basis, and the local firms are unable to compete on a strictly price basis, but in spite of this, I do not see any indication of serious trouble.

I say right now we are having what might be considered a serious "levelling-off."

In all my dealings with management and labour, I have endeavoured to "squeeze" every penny possible for the worker. I believe he is entitled to a fair share of the fruits of his labour. I have been accused of "browbeating industry," forcing them to give more money, shorter hours, more holidays, and better medical and pension plans than they felt they could afford.

Quite a bit of discussion in this House has centred around the mining situation, which gave us a great deal of concern for such a long period of time. It would appear, from the discussions here, there was nothing in the picture but "union security." Of course, "union security" was a prominent feature in the negotiations, but money was in there too. These people cannot eat union security. What they wanted was more money, and I say, frankly and honestly, that my effort in that whole scheme was to try to get more money than had been offered by the mining companies to the workers. When we succeeded in doing that, by no stretch of the imagination can it be considered that what we were able to get satisfied them to the fullest extent, but it did satisfy them to the point where they are prepared to make an agreement.

Be that as it may—I say this with the exception of course, of isolated cases—our standard of living is good. Our wages are higher than in most places, with some exceptions in the United States, where a tremendous population creates a home market which enables them to produce vast quantities cheaper than we can have where our market is limited. I am being very frank and I think honest, when I say I think we should consolidate our gains.

If an army advances and finds it is running into ever-increasing resistance, does it continue? I say no; it consolidates so that its new position will not become untenable. Resistance is not by employers but consumers.

So it is on the home front. Resistance is growing, after the gains we have made and the things we have accomplished over the last 10 years. I do not mean we should stagnate as there is still need for adjustments here and there, but the general picture to me indicates the policy should be, for the time being, to consolidate, and mark time, till the dawn comes so we can see more clearly where we are going.

How can we help ourselves? Industry employs every person possible. Increase their quest for export business, seek new fields. Canadians, to the greatest extent possible, should buy Canadian-made goods and Canadian farm products, and buy what they think they can afford, and can actually afford. Buy normally. Buy the best you can, but buy.

Now why do I say these things? I am not psychic and therefore cannot make definite predictions, but I do have, in the position I hold as Minister of Labour an opportunity which is not available to many other people, to size up the situation.

I continually examine with labour and management, the problems of production, wages, conditions of employment, pension plans, medical aid, etc., everything that has to do with labour relations, and I say by co-operation and mutual understanding, great progress has been made which has resulted in a fine standard of living, which I am sure we are all anxious to preserve.

Now, Mr. Speaker, what exactly is the position of industry, and what are the possibilities for the future?

We have had a great influx of people from other countries into our province.

The hon. Prime Minister has said a new city of 15,000 has been created each month in this province. This creates in itself the necessity of an accelerated housing scheme.

What are the prospects for housing in the coming year? I have it from the Department of Planning and Development that it is estimated for 1954 that 106,244 homes or housing accommodation will be constructed this year, which, with all the appliances, facilities and conveniences, will open a huge market for our industries to produce.

Think of the lumber, cement, steel for refrigerators, stoves and appliances, which will be required to furnish these homes.

According to the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) $30 million will be spent in creating new educational facilities, new classrooms, etc. Hospitals, both new and extensions, will run into millions of dollars and create a great deal of employment. I know of one city where they are planning now a $3 million hospital. It is already on the drawing board.

Plans for industry—which I discussed yesterday—I will not go into in detail today, other than to submit to Hansard a list of what has been done and what has been submitted to the Department of Labour for inspection of industrial and office buildings—and I reiterate are continuing to come in at a very high level—which indicates no lack of faith on the part of industry in the future of this province. (See table, page 854). In our Estimates you will see on the revenue side $119,420 for this work which is new and requires the people who use those services to pay for them, with the demand we have placed on the examination of plans as of last year.

The pipe line contemplated from Alberta is estimated to cost $300 million and with all the necessary extensions to carry the gas to the consumer will certainly require the expenditure of many millions more.

The proposed gas line from Niagara to Toronto for the Consumers Gas with all the extensions, etc., conversion from artificial to natural gas will also mean much employment and millions of dollars.

The St. Lawrence Seaway and Power Development is one that should not be delayed. We have the resources and engineering ability to do this job and we should no longer be waiting for another country to make up its mind. This would result in the expenditure of millions of dollars and create thousands of jobs. This, of course, is my personal opinion.

The automotive industry looks to the future with optimism. Mr. Rhys Sale has expressed his opinion in the press with which I am sure you are all familiar, and I have had discussions with other important people in the industry and certainly this industry is looking to the future with confidence. While some phases of the hydro development at Niagara Falls are drawing to a close, yet there is still much to be done and with the large remedial programme soon to be started will mean the expenditure of large sums of money and create much employment for some years to come.

The huge highway development plans and public works programme were never as great as they are today and, as the Prime Minister has said, this province is financially able to accentuate this if deemed advisable.

On the other hand, we do have a measure of unemployment but without actual statistics it appears to me there are as many jobs available, and as many people working now, as there were this time last year, but we do have a great many more people here, so naturally there seems to be more people out of work because of seasonal employment, due to changing of jobs, and many other reasons.

Soon the great transportation systems on the Great Lakes, including the opening of the canals, will add greatly to the possibilities of employment.

FEBRUARY REPORT OF EXAMINER OF PLANS

In February, there were 107 plans approved for additions, alterations or new factories, shops and office buildings having a total estimated cost of $10,132,100.

The following projects will each cost $100,000 or more,—

Crosley Radio & TV., Weston	$ 400,000
Canadian Name Plate Co. Ltd., Midland	171,000
Canadian Sirocco Co. Ltd., Windsor	150,000
The Canadian Bank of Commerce, Hamilton	1,750,000
Industrial Leaseholds of Toronto, Etobicoke	117,000
Imperial Oil Ltd., Sarnia	600,000
Murray Printing Company, North York	1,360,500
Bell Telephone Company, Oshawa	130,000

The following is a comparison of plan approval statistics for the last and the current fiscal year:

Period	NO. OF PLANS		VALUE OF PROJECTS
	1952-53	1953-54	1952-53	1953-54
April to January	1,299	1,359	$123,922,300	$109,946,500
February	131	107	11,495,500	10,132,100
Totals	1,430	1,466	$135,417,800	$120,078,600

The revenue corresponding to the value of the buildings approved during the fiscal year is as follows:

April to January	$109,075
February	10,345
Fees from Approved Drawings	$119,420

Increased tempo on the farms and in the canning companies, etc., will provide many jobs for men and women, and there are hundreds of new industries in the course of organization which soon will require personnel to manage.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, I see a good year ahead of us in fact, many of them, and reasonable prosperity can be ours if we are willing to work side by side in mutual understanding and good will. Let us look into the future with confidence.

I pay tribute to my staff for a difficult contentious job well done. This year the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) complimented me on the fact that the Department of Labour Estimates were so close to the actual moneys voted in this House. I pass the credit for this on to my deputy, the accountant and the heads of all the various departments.

These Estimates have gone up progressively in keeping with our increasing industrial expansion which require more services, annual wage increases and special wage increases, all of which we are happy to grant in recognition of good service.

In dealing with the Estimates of the Labour Department there are a few more observations which I should like to make which I think will be helpful to the hon. members in considering and approving them.

All of us can see before our eyes the evidence that industrial Ontario has been growing at an amazing pace in the past few years. As this development has taken place, it has been necessary for the Department of Labour to increase its staff to take care of the additional load of inspection work which has to be done.

The work of the department is divided into 6 main types. The first involves health, safety and working conditions in industrial plants, including inspection of elevators. Second—there are operating conditions of power plants, the rating of such plants, and the examination of engineers who will attend such plants. Third—the administration of social legislation such as hours of work, vacations with pay, industrial standards and minimum wages. Fourth—conciliation, anti-discrimination, equal pay, all of which are handled by the conciliation service. Fifth—apprenticeship training which involves the promotion and encouragement of young people to learn the trades which are so necessary to the future advancement and well-being of this province. Sixth—the work of the Ontario Labour Relations Board which regulates the right of trade unions to bargain on behalf of their members.

Just as the province has grown in the past 11 years, so also has the Department of Labour grown. Where we had 145 employees in 1943 to handle the work, now we have 266. Most of the additions have been to the outside or inspection staff.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Minister care to give those figures again, please?

HON. MR. DALEY: We had 145 employees in 1943, and we have 266 at the present time. Most of the additions have been to the outside or inspection staff.

As to the administrative group of employees who are located in the Parliament Buildings; we have endeavoured through improvements in methods and realignment of the flow of work, to keep our expansion within reasonable and necessary limits.

At the last session of the Legislature, The Elevators and Lifts Act, 1953, was passed, and in the intervening months we have been busy assembling and training a staff to inspect elevators and lifts. We now have 5 inspectors in this field and expect to add more. This branch is now ready to commence full operations as a matter of fact they are doing full operations, and that I feel will be a satisfactory job in the question of inspecting elevators in this province. This is a new departure in Ontario and we have taken our time in getting this branch under way.

Last year we had our busiest year in the factory and boiler inspections, and we increased the staff of this branch by 7 inspectors.

As you remember, we amended the Factory, Shop and Office Building Act, to permit us to charge fees for our examinations, which netted us $119,500 as I mentioned earlier.

In the field of vacations-with-pay legislation: we find now that the amount in the form of stamps has risen to an all high of $11 million. The book and stamp system which we started in Ontario in 1944, has been generally accepted in 7 or 8 of the other provinces.

We have also worked out with the other provinces, a reciprocal arrangement whereby the stamps of Ontario and the other provinces are in the same book, and either Ontario or the other provinces will cash the stamps on their due date, and bill the other province for its share of the stamps. In this way, the workers promptly receive the credit when it becomes due, even though the stamps are held jointly by the two provinces.

I would like to point out that we have enlarged our facilities in Windsor, London and Hamilton, where we zone our inspectors, and they work from those various points. It saves a great deal of travelling, and I think it has worked out greatly to the benefit of industry and the workers in this province.

In the field of apprenticeship, I would like to say there is a great opportunity in Ontario for young men willing to devote themselves to learning one of the skilled trades, and I would draw to the attention of the many young men in the province, that while they may like a position which is a little more remunerative, into which to go immediately upon leaving school, if they would concentrate on learning a trade, they would find it very easy to carry it through life, and no doubt have the effect of fitting them for gainful and satisfactory employment throughout the years.

Mr. Chairman, I now submit the Estimates of the Department of Labour for the approval of the House.

On Vote 78.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, what I have to say about the Workmen's Compensation Board's activities, I imagine, comes properly in the consideration of the present item.

But, before doing so, I want to thank the hon. Minister for sending over the correspondence between his department and the Dominion Glass Company, and I want to tell—since he raised it formally on the floor—that I did not desire it in this way, but I did it only because of another experience a few days earlier.

What happened, Mr. Chairman, was that I wanted to get a copy of a letter sent by one of the branches of the Labour Department to a certain group of women who had complained about not receiving equal pay. I was told I could not see the copy of the letter sent by the department—let me be a little more correct; I did not ask to look at it; I wanted a copy. I was told I could not get one. I very good humouredly said, "Well, I will get it by making it an order for return." The official said, "Yes, I suppose you had better do that."

so having done that in one case, I automatically did it in the other. Otherwise, I would have proceeded directly to the department, and I am glad the hon. Minister feels I can do so.

In connection with the Workmen's Compensation Board, I would like to make a few remarks, but I want to preface them by stating that the Workmen's Compensation Board is, of course, an institution of which we are all very proud.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman. I do not want to interrupt the hon. member, but I understand he is going to speak on the budget, and I would suggest that is the place where these remarks should be made. There is nothing in the Estimates in regard to the Workmen's Compensation Board.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know about that. It is true the hon. Minister should be given leeway, and the hon. Minister of Labour certainly gave us a survey of the economics of the province, and so on, which I think was perfectly legitimate.

I think it has always been customary for the hon. members of the House to discuss Workmen's Compensation under the Estimates, because it affords the only opportunity we have, outside of the general debate. I think it should be discussed at this time, because it enables the hon. Minister to reply, and we are not as formal as, of necessity, we have to be, in the debate on the budget.

If my memory serves me right, we have done that for a great many years, under this item.

As I said, Mr. Chairman, we are very proud of the Workmen's Compensation Board, and we recognize the fact that it is superior to many other compensation boards and agencies elsewhere in this country, and in the United States. To that extent, we are satisfied. But there is need for great improvement, and on every occasion these needs should be stressed.

There is a continuing demand by the workers of this province for the compensation to be increased to 100 per cent.

of the earnings. While there are arguments against this proposal, none is convincing, in the face of the fact that because of the 75 per cent. compensation, the family of a working man is now compelled to suffer, to be denied the essentials of life during the period of incapacity of the breadwinner, as the result of an industrial accident. That fact towers above and overshadows any argument which may be advanced against this universal demand by the workers.

Another comment I want to make on Workmen's Compensation is regarding the need for increasing the compensation to workers who were injured permanently many years ago. I recognize, Mr. Chairman, this is not a new idea or a new demand, but it will have to be pressed and continued year after year until it will be remedied. I noticed the deputation of the trade union movement which visited the government recently, stressed this important matter.

We have quite a number of working-class families who are suffering privations, because the breadwinner was incapacitated in an industrial accident during the period when wage rates and compensation were low, some when we paid only 55 per cent., and some when we were paying 66 per cent. of the earnings. Under those circumstances, it is generally acknowledged the Compensation Board should be assisted to increase the compensation, to bring it in line with present-day compensation. While there might be arguments as to whether industry today should be taxed for accidents which occurred before its time—in fact, many firms may no longer exist—that argument can be overcome by agreeing that the necessary funds should be provided out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund of the province, whatever that may amount to, in the years which lie ahead.

Concluding these two remarks in regard to the Workmen's Compensation issue, I want to touch upon one more problem, which is a very serious one, which is also not new, and by no means better because it is not new. In fact, it is more aggravated than it was. I refer to the Industrial Accident-Prevention work.

Mr. Chairman, there are issues raised by Labour and by hon. members of the Opposition, that the government rejects questions, or belittles them, because they consider they emanate from sectional groups, or from an Opposition group which is perhaps interested in making political capital out of a deficiency in the service.

This problem, however, has already been dealt with by a Royal Commission, which came to very definite conclusions, and has made very specific recommendations to the government, which recommendations, in the main, coincide with what the workers of this province have been asking for, for a long time. It is, therefore, in my opinion, most unreasonable for the government to continue to resist the demands of the workers and the recommendations of the Royal Commission.

The workers have advanced the argument that their lives, their limbs and their health are involved in the accident-prevention work carried on. The funds for this work come from the Workmen's Compensation Board, and the amounts expended are not small. I imagine by now it is around $500,000 a year, and yet the people most vitally affected—the working men in the factories—have no places in the whole accident-prevention setup. Management is, in the main, operating the accident-prevention associations. The payments though come from the Workmen's Compensation Board.

Workmen, therefore, in my opinion, have very reasonably asked, for a long time, that they become an integral part—indeed, the major element—in the carrying on of accident prevention, and I have yet to hear a logical or convincing argument why that should not be so.

I am glad to say that the Royal Commission which studied all phases of Workmen's Compensation in the province—the Commissioner was the hon. Mr. Justice Roach—came to the general conclusion to which trade unions had come years before. In his report,

Justice Roach states—and I am quoting from the official report of the Royal Commission:

In my respectful opinion the present provisions of the Act dealing with accident prevention are not adequate and need revision.

Since accident prevention is of common interest to both employers and workmen it would seem logical that they should both actively participate in any organized system the purpose of which is to lessen industrial accidents. As between the two groups, it seems to me that the workmen are much more vitally interested than the employers. If a workman is maimed in an industry, the employer has to pay the compensation but no monetary allowance can ever adequately compensate a workman who has to go through the balance of his life minus an eye, or a hand or some other member.

My first criticism of the present system is that it does not provide any means which will ensure the active participation of labour in the work of accident prevention.

My second criticism is that the relationship between the board and the associations is much too remote, and so on.

That is very clear, and everyone in the labour movement expected the implementation of these recommendations by the government.

Mr. Chairman, I know I may be repeating some things I said a year ago on this subject, but I cannot help that. We have to repeat them, so long as the government repeats its refusal to implement this just and fair recommendation.

HON. MR. DALEY: We have not rejected it; we are studying it.

MR. SALSBERG: The government refused to implement it.

HON. MR. DALEY: We have been working on it.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, the department has been working on it since 1950, with what result? When I speak about this problem, Mr. Chairman, I am speaking about human lives, about limbs of the working men, about their hands and their legs and other things. It is not a small matter.

I am sure the hon. members will recall the recent and very tragic experience in the Massey-Harris plant in Toronto, where a workman was involved in a fatal accident a few months ago. He was killed while moving a vehicle loaded with lumber.

On investigation it became clear that the workers in that department were well aware and had been for a long time of the danger existing in that particular operation, and they had gone to the management on many occasions complaining about it. Furthermore it was found that there had been a number of lesser accidents there before. I think that in one case a limb was lost in the same operation. Yet nothing was done until a man was killed at work.

I suggest that fatal accident and the loss of a limb by another workman, might have been avoided if the workers of Massey-Harris and their union had been given an active responsible and authoritative role in accident-prevention work. I cannot say the accidents would have been avoided, but they might have been. The branch of accident prevention which looks after that plant was not unaware of the serious risk in that operation. I have reason to know they were pretty well alarmed, and that they notified their firm that a fatal accident might occur on that job. The result was a fatal accident, and there may be many more like it.

Finally, I may say with regard to this case, that the firm was found guilty at the inquest. The jury found the company guilty. It was found negligent in the matter of a man's death. I say that we do not have to wait any longer. I think we have no moral right to continue as we are doing now, if it means the loss of a single hand or a single limb of one workman, let alone a life, as was the case in the Massey-Harris organization.

I cannot explain the blind spot which occurs in the government's eye when facing this question. How often must a Royal Commission demand a relatively simple and logical change of this sort before the change is made?

The hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) says he is studying the question. He says he is considering it, and that he has not rejected it. Well, he has rejected it, if he has not implemented it. He cannot have it both ways.

I say that the hon. Minister is not alone responsible for this situation. I suggest it is a matter of policy, and I want to appeal to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) to place this matter on the order of business of the Cabinet. It affects the lives of people. It affects the happiness and the well being of families. It does not call for the expenditure of money by this government. It calls for the implementation of a Royal Commission's recommendation, and it calls for the implementation of a recommendation for which the workers have for years been pleading. I appeal to the government to take immediate steps for the establishment of an accident-prevention system which will give the workers and their organizations direct responsibility and an authoritative role.

HON. MR. DALEY: I would like to make a few remarks on that subject. I assure the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) I am going to be brief, because my purpose here is to get the Estimates of the Department of Labour approved. But I do not want the hon. member, whom I believe—I am not mincing matters—to be sincere on this point—to think that I am not equally concerned with this matter. And I should not like the impression to be given that we have no accident-prevention system. We have thousands of voluntary workers in accident prevention right at this moment. I was at a dinner meeting the other day in the Royal York Hotel, where there were approximately 650 people in one class only, for a 2-day conference on accident prevention. It has always been recognized there are such people as employers and that they are responsible for the health and welfare of their workers. It is their responsibility and they are paying for it. In addition it is a fact they do pay for the measure of accident prevention we have at the present time. They pay millions of dollars, which are not in their assessment. Interested factory owners are anxious to limit, to the fullest extent humanly possible, the number of accidents which take place. Nobody wants accidents. Mr. Justice Roach's report just stated that he thought accident prevention should be under the control of the Workmen's Compensation Board. We have a measure of it now.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not all he said.

HON. MR. DALEY: We have set up in this province today thousands of voluntary accident-prevention workers, men who will take time off to go and study at a conference. And I believe, after all, this work is to a great extent educational. It is not difficult to dramatize an individual accident. I feel just as sorry for those unfortunate people who get hurt in industry as does the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) but the point is that only about 10 per cent. of accidents in industry are preventable, by taking steps to put guards on machinery and that sort of action. A larger proportion of accidents are caused because men are careless. They forget things. I recall one case where a man was working on one of those big cranes. He got down, and told the crane man that he was finished with his work. Then he remembered that he had left a screw driver up where he had been working. The crane man did not know. He started the crane, and the man was killed. What could have prevented an accident of that kind?

MR. SALSBERG: Massey-Harris could have.

HON. MR. DALEY: The Massey-Harris incident was very unfortunate. I am not going into all the details, but I have all the reports on it from our inspectors. We have a great system of accident prevention in this province.

paid for through assessment by employers, and millions of extra dollars are spent in their own plants to prevent accidents. And I am still not satisfied either that there is, or that there is not, a better way to do it. The hon. member may ask: How am I going about finding out? I have had meetings with organized labour, I have had meetings with representatives of industry, and with people engaged in accident-prevention work. I have had them all meet together, and I am going to continue to have them meet together, until we can devise a better way of preventing accidents if it is possible to find one. But I cannot put my finger on a way which is better than the way in which we are doing it now, and I say here definitely that I am as interested as any hon. member—perhaps more so because I am closer to the problem—in the prevention of accidents this province. But I am not going to throw aside these things which we already have, and the people who are voluntarily doing accident-prevention work. I am not going to say: "All this goes out of the window. But where do we start from here?"

Members of unions, labour associations and similar organizations have each year put in their brief. I have had many discussions with them. There is not one of them can tell me exactly what they want me to do or how these plans will function, and I say again I am not going to discard something which I know is good. And I say it is good, because the accident reports for this province are better than those of any other province in Canada. That is a fact, and it can be proven. I have not the details here now, but I know it to be true. There are places where they have in operation the type of accident-prevention system asked for by the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) and where they do not have anything like the industry that we have in Ontario, yet our results, as shown by the figures, are much better than those of any other province in the Dominion, with regard to accident prevention. I am not going to discontinue something which over the years has been the responsibility of the employer. I am not going to relieve him of his responsibility. I am not protecting the employer. I am making him do what he is required to do, and I am not going to change that. Do not think because I say this, it is because there is some desire to protect employers. There is none. I am saying to the employer: "You have the responsibility. You do it." If there is a better way of doing it, and we can find it, we shall be interested in a change.

MR. SALSBERG: There is no need for hon. members to bang their desks to indicate approval or disapproval—in this case it is approval; I have not finished with this question. I am not going to accuse the government of being indifferent to industrial accidents. I am simply saying that they are proceeding at a snail's pace in a matter which requires at least a normal human gait. But they decline to move faster. I am prepared to say to this House that in the accident which resulted in the death of an employee of Massey-Harris, the company knew those wagons were dangerous and should have been renewed. But they were desirous of getting every last ounce out of them. Eventually they replaced them, but in the meantime, the men were allowed to load them up.

When I say this, I do not suggest that employers want their workers to be injured. Of course not. Only ghouls want such things to happen. But I do suggest that the government's policy up to now is obviously not the best one. It would be very sad if a change was not made because our record is better than that of some other provinces. I suggest the fact that we have the highest percentage of trade union organizations, may have something to do with our safety record, though some good work is, of course, carried on by the Accident Prevention Association. I am not saying their work is all negative, but if the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Daley) were to ask me what is best to do, I should advise him to follow the recommendation of the Royal Commission.

HON. MR. DALEY: It told us nothing.

MR. SALSBERG: In fact, for about two days nothing else but this one particular problem was discussed before the commission. Everyone had a chance to appear and put forward their arguments, which were heard with great patience. Hon. Mr. Justice Roach came to a very judicial conclusion and said we should change the system. Certainly, I suggest, the government should accept his opinion and I also suggest that they should accept the opinion of the organized workers.

Before I sit down, Mr. Chairman, may I read what was said on this subject in a brief by the Ontario Federation of Labour (CCL) to the hon. Prime Minister and other hon. Ministers of the government:

We also urge the government to amend the Workmen's Compensation Act to permit the establishment by organized labour of an Industrial Accident Prevention Association for the purpose of conducting an educational programme on safety and accident prevention and of encouraging the formation of joint labour-management accident prevention committees. Such a step would materially assist in reducing present high accident rates.

The present Accident Prevention Association have done some work on safety and accident prevention. However last year workers who have little or no say in accident prevention programmes reported some 219,000 work injuries to the Workmen's Compensation Board. Certainly this situation should be rectified by an appropriate amendment to the Act opening the way to a trade union organized Accident Prevention Association.

That, Mr. Chairman, is the way to do it. All that is necessary now is to decide that the time has come when it should be done, and then to put it into practice.

MR. H. F. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine): I do not think this has very much to do with the Estimates, Mr. Chairman, but a good deal of latitude has been allowed this afternoon to some hon. members. We were talking today about cancer and cancer prevention. I had my car washed today, and during that operation the manager told me that his men wanted to give a day's free labour to the Cancer Fund. I said: "What about the bosses?" And he replied: "Yes, we are prepared to do our part." They wanted me to get the Mayor and members of Parliament over to the car wash to join in and work for the day. We would like this voluntary act to be contagious, and be adopted by businesses in all Ontario so that workers everywhere might give one day's free labour to the Cancer Fund. The earnings of a shoe repairer would be as important as the day's earnings of the man who sells Cadillacs, and operates a large garage. I think it would be a very fine thing if all workers, owners and bosses could be persuaded to join in this good deed for one day. The total raised would amount to a great deal of money for the Cancer Fund.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): I wonder if the hon. Minister could tell us whether some consideration might not be given to people receiving Workmen's Compensations at rates of 50 per cent. and 66 $\frac{2}{3}$ per cent. fixed at a time when wage rates were low? I hope the hon. Minister of Labour (Hon. Mr. Daley) is prepared to say something on this question. A few days ago we voted a Supplementary Estimate to provide \$1 million for the Teachers' Superannuation Fund, and \$1 million for the Civil Service Pension Fund. We supported that. I think hon. members will remember that last year, and the year before, we voted additional sums of \$1 million each year for these purposes, making \$3 million in all.

I have a case in my own riding of a man who lost his hand in 1920 and who is getting a pension of $20 a month.

Mr. Chairman, if we can make these grants to the Teachers' Superannuation Fund and to the Civil Servants Pension Fund, and if we can spend $50 million on the highways last year, and finish up with the record surplus now indicated, surely we can do something for these people? Even if we have to take money out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, let us do something for them. I appeal to the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Daley) to give consideration to the plight of these people who really need our attention.

HON. MR. DALEY: There is really very little left for me to say on matters of this kind. I have considerable sympathy for these people. I know that in the early days, wages were low, and the percentage fixed was correspondingly low. But the amount paid is based on the assessment of the industry for a particular year. It is impossible to go back to industry and say: "You owe us so much money because the cost of living has gone up, and the amount that is being paid to these people is now insufficient to enable them to survive."

Each and every industry is rated a percentage as per $100 worth, and certain types of industry pay that, and they are to all intents and purposes free. We did, some 3 years ago, increase the widows' amounts and we charged it in there, simply because we just took a chance.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Why not take another one?

HON. MR. DALEY: I put it in and it amounted to somewhere between $3 million and $4 million, but I cannot do that again. If the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg)—not the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas)—is so concerned about the Roach Report, it definitely says we have no right to charge it there.

MR. SALSBERG: It says you can take it from the Consolidated Revenue Fund.

HON. MR. DALEY: We can. The administration of the Consolidated Revenue Fund is government policy, if further relief is to be granted in this issue. I have no power to say it will be.

Vote 77 agreed to.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): On Vote 78, I may say it was pleasing to the hon. members of the Legislature to hear the hon. Minister pay eloquent tribute to his staff, and I think we would all agree with that because in the Department of Labour there are some very fine men and women.

He mentioned they were so good they actually came close to the Estimates voted last year.

I want to refer to item 5, "Conciliation Boards, Commissioners, etc." There is an item there for $60,000. Last year the same item appeared, "$60,000."

Looking through the Public Accounts this morning for the year ending 1953, I find, conciliation boards, commissioners, etc., had expended $99,125.76.

I think he will agree that the Estimate of $60,000 is a little out there, or perhaps he has an explanation for it.

HON. MR. DALEY: Of course, the hon. member understands that conciliation costs, to a great extent are only imaginary. You and I cannot tell whether there is going to be 1 conciliation case or 1,000.

Last year we spent far more than the hon. member said. We spent $100,000-odd, but we were able, by economy and good management, to increase the amount in conciliation and save it somewhere else. That is what we did, and, in the final analysis, we come very close to our Estimate. I would not try to convince the hon. members that we had every item within the right amount, but conciliation is a very difficult thing to judge.

It was getting to be very costly, and that is one reason which I might as well tell you now that I want this permissive power under the Labour Relations Act, to refuse to grant conciliation, because of the tremendous cost, for one thing.

I would not let the cost bother me if any of this accomplished what we wanted, but sometimes it is best used as a means of getting into a legal-strike position. I am the sort of man who, when I am convinced that is what they want, puts them in that position quicker, and cut out some of the conciliation, not indiscriminately, but after weighing the evidence submitted, and if I realize there is no possible chance of clearing it up with a Conciliation Board, I will advise them they are on their own, and I hope that will prevent difficulties. I do know that today it is the experience that a great many people rely on it to put themselves in a different position. In addition to that, I think it would save us some money.

Votes 78 and 79 agreed to.

On Vote 80.

MR. SALSBERG: On Vote 80: Some very important work is being done in the Apprenticeship Branch, and it is too bad we have not the time to hear a full report. I think it would be very valuable and instructive, because I think it is one branch which is doing a great deal of good work.

I want to raise one point and ask one question of the hon. Minister. Experiencing, as we do now, rising unemployment, we fear the young worker will be the first to be laid off. On the basis of seniority, the young lads are the first ones to go. I wonder whether we could not make arrangements with the Ottawa Government to have them pay Unemployment Insurance to the hundreds of young men and women who have had no training for a trade, who may have gone in for general labour of one type or another, and who now find themselves laid off and compelled to draw Unemployment Insurance—maybe inadequate insurance but, nevertheless, drawing it.

I wonder why we could not arrange for these young people to be given some training for some trade during the period of unemployment instead of having them waste their time? They could be taken over by the Apprenticeship Branch and given some training so they could qualify for better jobs; otherwise, they may exhaust their Unemployment Insurance and learn nothing and they will be no better equipped to face the future than at the time they were fired.

HON. MR. DALEY: Of course, there is no use attempting to train people on a temporary basis. They must make up their minds it is going to be their source of livelihood. It would depend upon our ability, to have facilities and teachers to train these people. Our costs have gone up and I have been advised apprenticeship training amounts to a very large sum of money this year, and I cannot give any hope of accomplishing what the hon. member suggests. It would be very nice if we could pay everybody who gets out of work, young or old.

MR. SALSBERG: The department would not have to do the paying, the Unemployment Insurance Commission is paying Unemployment Insurance to those young men and women who are unemployed at the moment, but what I suggest is that we take it up officially.

HON. MR. DALEY: I am afraid we could not do that in our apprenticeship training.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it would be very constructive.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): With respect to the Apprenticeship Branch, I agree with the hon. member for St. Andrew that with increasing unemployment those services may be greatly taken advantage of, and I was therefore rather surprised to see in the Apprenticeship Training Branch, item 6, that there is a reduction of $39,000 from last year. Last year, the Estimate was for $340,000, and this year it is for $301,000. Why should there be any cut when there is a possibility of a larger number of people taking advantage of the service?

HON. MR. DALEY: We spent about $280,000 last year, and we increased it by about $50,000.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Chairman, it definitely states in item 6, Apprenticeship Training Special Classes, $340,000, and in this Estimate for exactly the same item, $301,000. There is a difference of $39,000 there.

MR. KERR: They only spent $280,000 last year.

HON. MR. DALEY: Apprenticeship training is like some other things. You cannot actually tell what your expenses will be. That necessarily was not all spent and if we need more, we will ask for it.

MR. THOMAS: I might mention in passing I think that it is unfortunate. Here we are passing Estimates for the coming year, and if we only had some idea of what was in the public accounts for the previous year, we would have a better knowledge of the whole thing.

Notes 80 and 81 agreed to.

On Vote 82.

MR. SALSBERG: Here again my complaint is the inadequacy of the service. The Inspection Branch has a tremendous role to play, and upon the ability of this staff depends the well-being of a great many people, hundreds of thousands of people. I find this is an understaffed and hopelessly inadequate staff for the task assigned to it.

HON. MR. DALEY: How does the hon. member find all this out? What would he know about it?

MR. SALSBERG: It is true that up until 1943 the hon. Minister of Labour knew all about it.

HON. MR. DALEY: By 1943, I did not know anything about it, but I have had 11 years' experience since then.

MR. SALSBERG: I have also been here 11 years and I know more about it. I knew more about it in 1943, than the hon. Minister did.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what the hon. member says.

MR. SALSBERG: I have been trying to keep this on a proper level and if you are going to upset it, I am willing, but I advise you, you are the one who started it.

I knew about it because I grew up in factories, as a young worker, and as an older worker, and I have been interested in trade unions for many years and, therefore, I know. I hope that is satisfactory.

But without that knowledge, I would have no difficulty in knowing that with a staff of 49, as you report, you cannot expect them to do the job required. The last report on page 15 says:

During the fiscal year 1951-52, the inspection staff was greatly increased. March 31st, 1953, there was a total of 49 inspectors, as follows . . .

then are listed "chief inspectors and so on."

These 49 inspectors included chief inspectors and every one else, and they are asked to inspect all new industrial and office construction and have a multitude of other responsibilities. For instance, in addition to the inspection of industrial construction, these 49 look after grain elevators, tunnel construction, hydro works, jails — which have been added — Niagara Parks Commission has been added, the enforcement of the child labour laws, control of overtime, and so on and on and on.

That is a task which cannot possibly be done by 49 people in this vast province which is scattered from the Minnesota border to the borders of New York, Quebec and the North Pole. How could they possibly do a thorough job? How could they follow through? They could not.

The hon. Minister spoke of the great industrial expansion in new construction work. We are very glad it has taken place but it has put an extra burden on his staff. They inspect the plans, they inspect the construction and during the process of construction.

HON. MR. DALEY: The engineers do that.

MR. SALSBERG: But it is part of the hon. Minister's staff. This is the task of 49 people, all in all. I am not criticizing the department for spending too much money, but rather for not spending more in this very essential work.

That is not only my complaint, but it is the complaint which is coming from the unions continuously. The hon. Minister shakes his head. He knows that is true, and every brief presented to him contains this criticism.

I certainly want to plead with the government—and you will notice I am very mild this afternoon. I am pleading—for you to do something about it, to transform the factory inspection branch into an up-to-date, sufficiently staffed, well-trained, well-paid force which will do the job of protecting the public and the welfare of the masses of people who depend, in a very large measure, upon their good work.

HON. MR. DALEY: Of course, we are doing that continuously, Mr. Speaker. We have on two occasions since I have been occupying this office re-organized and re-zoned. We found that some inspectors have too much work, while others not enough, we have cut the zones and made definite areas for them to take care of.

MR. SALSBERG: We have 31 zones, have we not?

HON. MR. DALEY: Yes, 31 zones.

MR. SALSBERG: For 49 people.

HON. MR. DALEY: When the hon. member says we ought to get a competent staff, I do not agree. I think we have about as competent people and as well trained people as there are. If a new employee comes in—

MR. SALSBERG: I did not criticize them.

HON. MR. DALEY: We bring new employees in and school them with the older inspectors. I am very proud of my staff. I do not accept the implication that we are not competent in any department, but if the hon. member thinks there should be more inspectors—well, we are checking that all the time.

I have no hesitation in saying I would like to employ a great many more people right now, while more people need employment, but I cannot bring myself to put people on in order to spend more money. When I have someone come in, I want him to be qualified, and to know his job, to be prepared to do a good job and I try to pay him commensurate with his duties. I certainly do not admit our staff is not competent, nor do I admit at this point, that we are understaffed.

MR. SALSBERG: Let me just correct the hon. Minister. I did not criticize the staff. I did not charge them with incompetence, but I did say he should increase his staff. I did suggest he should do so, and I hope he does so soon, with competent and an adequate number of inspectors. That does not cast any reflection on the staff.

HON. MR. DALEY: I will accept that.

MR. SALSBERG: And I disagree with his last edict that he does not need more staff. I cannot see how 49 people in 31 divisions from the grain elevators at the Head of the Lakes to the tunnel, which we will be building down in the Eastern Townships, is sufficient. It is beyond my ken.

Votes 82, 83 and 84 agreed to.

On Vote 85.

MR. SALSBERG: What Vote, Mr. Minister, would enable us to speak on equal pay for equal work? Would that come under "Minimum Wage"?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is carried now.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not carried.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: It is carried.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it comes under the Labour Relations Act.

HON. MR. DALEY: "Fair Employment."

Votes 85 and 86 agreed to.

On Vote 87.

MR. SALSBERG: I have to put aside all other "stuff" because it is too much for one afternoon. It would require more than one afternoon to do justice to this.

I want to say a word about two items on the Fair Employment Practices Branch. On the matter of equal pay for equal work, I submit to you, Mr. Chairman, that the law as it now stands cannot be enforced even if the department would want to enforce it, and I think the department is enforcing it in the same manner the law was introduced and enacted here, with tongue in cheek.

In my humble opinion, the present equal pay for equal work legislation is unenforceable; it is so worded that you cannot possibly establish a breach of the law, except in the most extreme cases.

HON. MR. DALEY: Except for the fact that our employers are fair people. They know the Act requires this to be done, and it is being done without a great deal of difficulty. For the hon. member to rise in his place and say it is unenforceable—we do not have to police everything. If we get a complaint, we check it, and when it is drawn to the attention of the employer, it is remedied. We are a fair-minded class of people in this province.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): Have there been any prosecutions, may I ask?

HON. MR. DALEY: We have not actually prosecuted, but we have remedied a goodly number of cases which came to our attention, and certainly they will come to our attention if they exist. Our employers think it is fair, and they have accepted it. We do not look for a great deal of trouble with it.

MR. J. A. FULLERTON (Algoma-Manitoulin): Have you finished?

MR. SALSBERG: I am not finished yet.

MR. D. McM. KERR (Dovercourt): You never will be.

MR. SALSBERG: The fact is that some Conservatives in this province feel the same way about it. I have before me a news item from the Toronto Daily Star, under the by-line of a very well-qualified and well-informed newspaperman, Mr. A. O. Tate. He has written the story from London, Ontario, dated May 7th, in which he said:

The Ontario Government was called upon yesterday by the Western Ontario Women's Progressive Conservative Association to amend the Equal Pay for Equal Work legislation, to prevent evasion. More than 100 women unanimously supported a resolution for the solution at the association's annual meeting, and they said this legislation was being evaded continually, and it is held that discrimination against women still exists.

I suggest those 100 women knew what they were talking about.

I am sorry I have not the Act in front of me, but I think I can remember the wording—unless the hon. Minister wants to help me out. I think it says, "The same work in the same establishment." There is the danger. All a firm has to do is to get rid of the men doing the work, then put women on the job, and there is no comparison to be made, therefore, the rate can be fixed lower, although the women are doing the same sort of work.

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Do you know of any one case where that has happened—just one? It is like the fictitious "Mrs. Smith." Was she complaining to you?

MR. SALSBERG: Now, Mr. Chairman, the hon. Attorney-General has become infatuated with the non-existing lady. I would ask him to be more prosaic and more earthy.

HON. MR. PORTER: I would like the hon. member to be more specific.

MR. SALSBERG: The lady is the one who cheated one of your constituents out of $2,000.

HON. MR. PORTER: We want a specific case.

MR. SALSBERG: I never mind your diversions, but it is not now $2,000 which "Mrs. Smith" took. My latest information is that it now amounts to $2,500. However, the information is being gathered for the hon. Attorney-General.

Let me go back—

MR. COWLING (High Park): Have you enquired recently?

MR. SALSBERG: I have not a case here to prove it, but it is universally recognized as being the case throughout this province, and every trade union knows it. All the complaints since the enactment of the law have been concerning evasion.

I have just read to the House an item concerning the Women's Progressive Conservative Association of this province.

Let me tell you in other provinces where similar legislation is enacted, they use the term, "same work" to "work of a comparable character." Where you use the wording, "work of a comparable character," you can enforce the Act. In British Columbia and Saskatchewan, they have a law worded far better than it is here. Here, by using the words "the same work in the same establishment" it becomes possible to evade the law by simply discharging the men from a given rank of operations, and handing them over to the women.

I say the law worded in this way is nothing but camouflage; it is flim-flamming the female workers of this province; it is fooling them; it is cheating them; it is leading them to believe the law is protecting them, when the law does not protect them.

I have a current case in connection with which I have been trying to secure information from the department, to which I referred earlier when I said I had to put my question as an order for return, because I was refused a copy of the letter. This is a case in Toronto where all the men in a department were transferred, and women were put in at lower pay, and there was no means of comparison. Whoever wrote that law was a pretty smart "cookie"—to use a colloquial expression. I think it is a shameful matter, and we should do something about it. I maintain it is an inoperative law or enactment "equal pay for equal work"; it is actually unenforceable.

Vote 87 agreed to.

On Vote 88.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Chairman, I would like to commend the hon. Minister. This has to do with the office of the athletic commissioner, and I note that an item for $7,500 is given by way of a grant toward the British Empire Games to be held in Canada this summer. As the hon. members know, the British Empire Games are taking place in Vancouver next summer, and great preparations have been made. They have built a stadium, and are looking forward to receiving guests from all over the British Empire, and I am very pleased to note the fine financial contribution our province has made toward the ultimate success of this great project.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On that vote. Mr. Chairman, there is an item, I see, of $10,000 for the promotion of amateur sports.

HON. MR. DALEY: That is from the revenue account and the athletic commissioner's office. It is the proceeds, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows, of taxation on wrestling and things of that kind.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, but the commission is now under the Department of Labour, and what assistance is provided to amateur sport is provided by the hon. Minister's department. This is the point I want to make: I think we are missing a great opportunity in this province to expand and extend amateur sport, and to say that we will allow $10,000 for that great object is insufficient. I think there is a great opportunity in Ontario to serve the young people of the province, and to get them interested in amateur sport. In fact we are doing very little about it.

HON. MR. DALEY: It is only recently we began to do anything like this, but we now provide that where there is a team of juveniles or youngsters, they may be furnished with baseball bats and gloves, hockey sticks and pucks, and many similar items of sporting equipment. In general I would say we have assisted thousands of young people, and encouraged them to form teams, particularly in the smaller towns, where they have constituted junior leagues in baseball and hockey. The hon. Leader of the Opposition will find that we have been able to meet the requests of thousands of young people who are now playing games in this way, but I would agree with him that there is probably a big field here, though I am not prepared to go into that now.

MR. OLIVER: What the hon. Minister has told the committee is that this amount of money has been expended to help, in the main, in a rather minor way, existing organizations. What I say we lack in this province is an over-all promotional organization to foster the creation and practice of amateur sport. I think the time has come in Ontario when we should do that under government auspices. We should set out on a programme of interesting young people generally in amateur sport, and supporting their organizations with government funds to some extent. We are certainly lacking in a programme of that character.

Votes 88 and 89 agreed to.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): There is one question, Mr. Chairman, in connection with Vote 90 which interests me very much. Last year an amendment was made to the Factory Act giving authority to allow young persons to work after 11 o'clock. I wonder if the Minister—

HON. MR. DALEY: Young persons? No. We gave authority in certain instances for the employment of women—but 18 years or over they must be.

MR. THOMAS: How is that legislation working out?

HON. MR. DALEY: Very well. That is what the letters which I sent over to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) dealt with—the application of an industry, to put women on a shift in order to prevent the development of a bottleneck. The union agreed. I have never given my permission, if there is a union in the plant, without getting the union's approval. We have been very strict with regard to young boys.

Vote 90 agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; the Acting Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Acting Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report progress and asks leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

The following bills were read a third time, and were passed as intitled in the motions:

Bill No. 7, An Act respecting The Home of the Friendless and Infants Home.

Bill No. 9, An Act respecting The Township of Toronto.

Bill No. 12, An Act respecting Royal Botanical Gardens.

Bill No. 13, An Act respecting the City of Niagara Falls.

Bill No. 16, An Act respecting the City of St. Catharines.

Bill No. 20, An Act respecting St. Michael's College.

Bill No. 30, An Act respecting the Town of Fort Erie.

Bill No. 33, The Department of Education Act, 1954.

Bill No. 53, An Act to amend The Mining Act.

Bill No. 55, An Act to amend The Department of Municipal Affairs Act.

Bill No. 59, The Bees Act, 1954.

Bill No. 60, An Act to amend The Agricultural Societies Act.

Bill No. 61, The Plant Diseases Act, 1954.

Bill No. 62, An Act to amend The Live Stock and Live Stock Products Act.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, before moving the adjournment of the House, I would say that on Monday there will be the Report of the Committee on Indian Affairs and any other Order appearing on the Order paper might be taken. We will start with the Estimates on Lands and Forests, and there will be a night session.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Before the hon. Minister moves the adjournment of the House, there is a notice of motion standing in my name for the return of some letters and documents. I asked the hon. Prime Minister before he left if he had any objection to this motion being carried, and he indicated he had no objection. As I would like to see these before the end of the session—and as it takes some time to get such matters under way—I wonder if the hon. Minister would permit me to put the motion at this time.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That can stand over until Monday.

MR. NIXON: All right, as long as I get the documents.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves the adjournment of the House.

THE ACTING SPEAKER: I have been asked to state that the meeting of the Committee on Representations in error was announced for 1 o'clock. Instead it should be 1.30 p.m., on Monday.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 4.35 p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

MONDAY, MARCH 29, 1954.

3.00 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very happy today to welcome the students from the Regents Park Public School, Scarborough, the Allenby Public School, Toronto, and the James S. Bell Public School, Long Branch.

Despite the inclement weather, we are very, very happy to welcome you here, and hope your visit will be of profit and an education.

Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

MR. W. M. NICKLE: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the Tenth Report of the Committee on Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills, presents the following as its Tenth Report:

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 24, "An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec."

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. W. H. COLLINGS: Mr. Speaker, I beg to present the Report of the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. 78, "An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly."

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Collings, from the Select Committee appointed to consider Bill No. 78, "An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly," presents the committee's report as follows:

Your committee begs leave to report that it has arrived at a unanimous finding and submits herewith a schedule of 98 electoral districts, recommending that the same be adopted, and set out in the schedule of the bill.

Your committee also recommends certain amendments to the text of the bill.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, will there be an opportunity to discuss this when the bill comes before the Legislature?

HON. L. M. FROST: Yes.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

FAIR ACCOMMODATION PRACTICES

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to Promote Fair Accommodation Practices in Ontario."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Prime Minister please enlarge on that?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in introducing this legislation to provide for fair accommodation practices in Ontario, we are following a line of policy which has been greatly developed in the last 10 years but which had its beginnings in the basic fact which made our country possible. Canada's greatest contribution to the world has been the example of two great races working together and founding this country in partnership. Since those early days our land has become the home of peoples of various racial and religious origins and our pride has been that all are free men in a free country.

During the last 10 years in Ontario, we have developed this fundamental policy in many practical ways. We have declared by Statute our opposition to racial and religious discrimination. These experiences of policy are found in the following measures:

1. The Racial Discrimination Act of 1944—prohibits publishing or displaying any notice or other representation indicating discrimination or intent to discriminate because of race or creed.

2. The Conveyancing and Law of Property Act of 1950—renders void covenants restricting sale, ownership, occupation or use of land because of the race, creed, colour, nationality, ancestry or place of origin of any person.

3. The Labour Relations Act of 1950—invalidates a union-management contract which discriminates against any person because of race or creed.

4. The Fair Employment Practices Act of 1951—prohibits discrimination in hiring, in all conditions of employment, and in union membership.

There is still a place in our life not covered by statutory enactments and declarations. This relates to the accommodation, services and facilities available in any place to which the public is customarily admitted. Appeals have been made to the government by leaders in church and civil affairs, the Association for Civil Liberties, and many others to remedy this situation, which can be distorted, particularly outside of our country, into overshadowing the great principles our people have long accepted and have almost generally put into operation. It is now proposed to remedy this. The Racial Discrimination Act of 1944 will be repealed and the provisions of that Act embodied in a new Act to be known as "The Fair Accommodation Practices Act, 1954," in which will be included enactments providing against discrimination on grounds of race, colour and creed in places where the public is customarily admitted. The machinery for enforcement is similar to that in The Fair Employment Practices Act, 1951.

In placing this before the House, I do so at a time when the world is gravely concerned with the strides being made by science which can be directed to the suffering and destruction of human beings. This is a world which is constantly growing smaller and what used to be "far distant lands" are now close to us. There is a challenge to all mankind to promote world-wide respect for human rights and fundamental freedoms. Systematic and deliberate denials of basic human rights lie at the root of most of the world's troubles. In Ontario, where we have accepted the Universal Declaration of Human Rights, we can do our part not only in advancing in the policies upon which our country was founded and which have become part of us but in furthering the International Declaration which we have adopted by the full recognition that the inherent dignity and the equal and inalienable rights to all members of the human family are the foundations of freedom, justice and peace in the world.

Shortly we shall emancipate about 35,000 of our Indian citizens, giving to them for the first time full civil rights and liberties, while preserving fully their treaty rights. We shall give them the vote. Thus in Ontario, we shall no longer have "bond and free" but all of our citizens without regard to race, colour and creed, will be able to enjoy the full status and privilege of citizenship as becomes free men in a great province such as ours.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

THE MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs) moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Municipal Affairs Act."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

He said: This bill authorizes the Municipal Board, in an annexation or amalgamation order, to make provision for the payment of grants by the annexed or amalgamated municipality, to compensate for loss of assessment resulting from the annexation or amalgamation.

The present provision whereby an annexation or amalgamation order, if objected to, does not come into force until confirmed by special Act of the Legislature, is removed, and provisions are substituted under which an objection may be filed with the Clerk of the Executive Council. Upon the filing of such objection, the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council is authorized either to confirm the decision of the Municipal Board, or to order a re-hearing of the application by such members of the board as the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may designate.

The expression "by such members of the board" means, for example, that the chairman might have to be present, or that the attendance of a certain number of members might be specified. Or, of course, the Cabinet has the power to bring in an outsider, or two, to deliberate on an order of the board.

But when this is passed a second time, that is final, unless the matter can be carried to higher courts on a point of law.

After this bill becomes law there can be no more annexing or amalgamation matters before the Private Bills Committee.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Report of the Select Committee set up to study the matter of the civil liberties and rights of the Indian population.

In presenting this report, I feel I should make a few remarks to explain to the House the reasoning behind our actions and decisions.

In the first place, it may be stated that the purpose of this Committee was the emancipation of the Indians in this province. It has long been the feeling of many of us here, and indeed throughout the whole province, that there should be no second-class citizens in the Province of Ontario.

Many Indians, however, felt they were rated as second-class citizens. I know that the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the member for Simcoe Centre (Mr. G. G. Johnston) on whose motion this committee was appointed, have never felt that way about Indians. The member for Victoria (Mr. Frost) has lived amongst Indians from his boyhood in Oro Township. The senior member of the committee, the member for Simcoe Centre, has lived at Minesing—an Indian name itself, and amongst Indians—for the major part of his life—a life which is not exceeded by many members of this House.

At the outset, I must pay tribute to the members of the committee. Their record of attendance could hardly be excelled. Indians could not find a truer group of friends than the 11 members who made up this committee.

The member for Brant (Mr. H. C. Nixon) has made numerous speeches in this House on behalf of the Indian population of his riding. I would personally like to thank him for his contribution to the committee's work. And also the member for Cochrane South (Mr. W. J. Grunnett) whose legal mind helped us through some technical questions.

The committee was well chosen since it was representative of those ridings across Ontario which have an Indian population. We had the members from Kenora and Rainy River, who brought us knowledge of the ways of northern, nomadic Indians; the members for Addington, Hastings East, and Lambton, who have known Indians who are almost integrated with our way of living because of their intermingling with white people. In between the two regions were the members for Algoma-Manitoulin and Bruce. I want to say at this point, Mr. Speaker, that we received the very highest degree of co-operation from the federal authorities under whose jurisdiction Indian affairs are placed. And I want on behalf of the committee to thank not only the Minister, the hon. Mr. Harris, but also the officials of the Indian Affairs Branch under his jurisdiction for the co-operation we received from them during our meetings and deliberations.

Also, at this time, I should like to thank on behalf of the Committee, Mr. Alf Cole, the secretary of the committee, who did a splendid job. A great deal of the work embodied in this report was the compilation of our very able secretary, Mr. Alf Cole of the Press Gallery.

The committee visited a majority of the bands and agencies of this province. The report which I am now tabling is not a lengthy one, but one which I sincerely urge every member of this House to read and familiarize himself with. We collected a great deal of information, but sought to summarize our conclusions in as brief a form as possible, to make it readable to any who are interested in the welfare of the Indians of Ontario and, in fact, the welfare of the province as a whole.

At this point I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that there are only 9 recommendations. We realize, as a committee, that we have missed one point: that is in respect of Disabled Persons' Allowance. As soon as agreement is reached between the Federal Authorities and the Provincial Government, this committee would suggest, and recommend, that the Province of Ontario make Disabled Persons' Allowance available to disabled Indians.

We do not think that this will be a cure-all for all the problems which beset the two civilizations living here together. It is rather a suggestion of what this government might do to assist the senior government in its work toward the eventual intergration of Indians.

One of the problems that we—as a committee — repeatedly encountered, was that of people asking “what has the Provincial Government to do with Indians? I thought they were a federal concern.”

So they are. The British North America Act clearly outlines the responsibility for Indians and Indian Reserves. They are solely under the jurisdiction of the Federal Government. While there are some provincial treaties with Indians, the majority are with the Federal Government and Indians over the years have always considered themselves as wards of the Federal Government.

But Indians who live in Ontario are citizens of this province. They are wards of the Federal Government to some extent, but they are still citizens of this province. Where does the responsibility begin and end? Who should care for an Indian who has been off his reserve for 6 months, 1 year, 2 years, 20 years? When is an Indian an Indian? These were questions which this committee sought to answer. In some cases, we have not been able to find an answer and we would advise a continuing study of some of these problems. To that end, we are suggesting that a full-blooded Indian be appointed as an executive officer to work either under the Minister of Education or the Minister of Public Welfare, to be a liaison officer between the various departments of the Provincial Government, the Federal Government, and the Indians.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, that during a recent visit to British Columbia, where we sat in with the officials who have to deal with Indian affairs in that province—a committee set up by the Province of British Columbia under the Department of Labour—we were very much impressed with the work that is being carried out by a full-blooded Indian who has been appointed to a position such as we are suggesting in this report.

We feel a very important function could be performed by such a person in bringing to the attention of the Indians some suggestions as to what the Provincial Government could do for them, and reporting, to the various departments of the Provincial Government concerned, the problems of the Indians; also by working with these departments to create a very close relationship. Moreover, we think he could make a worth-while contribution to progress in this field by consulting, and working closely with, the federal officials concerned with Indian affairs.

The Provincial Government has already entered the field of Indian affairs to a large extent. I would estimate that close to $600,000 per year is being spent by various Provincial Departments on Indians. This is being done, and has been done for many years on a strictly voluntary basis. Indians are citizens of this province, and this government and past governments have long recognized this. But how can the provincial services now available to Indians be reconciled with the British North America Act? Surely it is time that we had a Dominion-Provincial conference on this whole question. Obviously the trend is to turn over more and more responsibility to the various Provincial Governments.

If the province is going to take over a responsibility which was, according to our constitution, given to the Federal Government, then some adjustments should be made. The Federal Government, with its unlimited tax-fields is surely in a better position to finance a programme of integration of Indians. However, in many respects, we are in a better position to provide the services which will lead to that integration.

We found few, if any, Indians who did not want to become a part of the integrated whole of this province. Some of the older generation would like to live in the past, but as a whole, there seems to be a general desire for integration. Then surely on matters such as education, welfare, highways, and health, the government closest at hand could most economically and efficiently administer the services. We recommend that agreements be reached dealing with Children's Aid Societies and Homes for the Aged. These are two provincial welfare programmes to which the Federal Government does not contribute, but these are services which should be extended to Indians.

Indians can leave the reserve, and as long as they do not choose to become enfranchised, they always have the right to return to the reserve. But when they are off the reserve, they are just as likely to become well-to-do or poverty-stricken as any other member of society. If they drop into poverty, they become a charge on the municipality. They might choose to return to their own reserve, but generally speaking, the public assistance which a municipality offers far exceeds that which they might receive from band funds or any federal source.

All this leads to the basic problem of the Indian. They do not admit they are a problem. We are the problem, because we came to this country and ruined their economy. They know we are not going to leave and return the country to them, and they realize they must learn to live with us, not as second-class citizens, but as our equals. Many have now learned to live with us. Many are leaders in our society. No Indian to my knowledge can say that he has been discriminated against in the broad field of ordinary society because he was an Indian.

We need only to look around us, in this province, to see many prominent citizens who are of Indian blood, who have not only made a success, but are leaders in their field.

What, then is the problem? Rt. Rev. Rennison, Bishop of Moosonee, summed it up when he said the whole reserve system was outdated. There is nothing we can do about reserves. These were set aside generations ago. On some reserves we visited, we found only the old and the young, the women and a few of the middle-aged men. Where were the rest? They were out working in industry in nearby towns or cities, or they had gone across the border to the steel industries in the United States, or to other profitable employment. Apparently the reserves attract them when they are old. Possibly through an improved educational programme this tendency will lessen.

The Indian bogey man is a word called "enfranchisement." With that word they associate so much that is non-existent. Enfranchisement means an Indian gives up his Indian rights. What are his Indian rights? They are simply to have a home on the reserve, to collect treaty money of $4 or $5 per year, and to have his health and education bills paid for him.

The next move must then be to have the province assume the problem of extending health care and education to the Indians. Through their constant association with the rest of the citizens of the province—not isolated in Indian schools or Indian hospitals, but in the white schools and hospitals—they will come to prefer the white man's way of life and gradually the reserves will come to be nothing but refuges for the aged and the indigent.

If the province is to extend these services, it is only logical that the Federal Government should pay for them.

An unfortunate predominance of the publicity of the studies of this committee has been given to the question of alcohol. We have all heard expressions such as, "what an Indian he is when he has a drink under his belt, etc." The committee studied carefully the whole problem of granting Indians the right to consume alcohol. In the first place, the restriction on Indians consuming alcohol was placed on the Statutes at the request of the Indians themselves, because the white man, in the early days, used liquor as barter and thus exploited the Indians. Therefore, the Indians requested restrictions to protect them from the white man. From some 90 per cent. of the Indian bands we visited, we received the same request: "Give us the right to take liquor into our own homes." "Why should we have been allowed to drink while we were in uniform and refused the privilege as soon as we were discharged?" As one Indian said, "Why let us get shot overseas, and not even let us get half-shot at home?"

We could find no medical evidence that Indians were any less capable of using alcohol than any other race.

No objection has been put forward by any temperance or prohibition organization against giving Indians the right to drink.

In British Columbia, where some time ago the Indians were granted the right to drink in public places, there have been some problems, but on the whole, very few unsatisfactory incidents such as discrimination and over-indulgence have taken place.

I might point out to the hon. members of the House an excerpt from the report of the British Columbia Committee which has been set up to study Indian Affairs in that province. This deals with the consumption of alcoholic beverages by Indians and reads as follows:

The behaviour of the native Indians in beer-parlours, since this partial lifting of the ban on the sale of liquor to natives, has been assessed by most sections of the general public in a variety of opinions. There have been some cases where individual natives have abused this new privilege, but, generally speaking, the majority of the Indians have used their new freedom from prohibition with discretion . . .

The general consensus of public opinion appears to be that a satisfactory adjustment in drinking habits is being made by the Indians of this province.

This government has consistently attempted to eliminate discrimination wherever found. Prohibition of Indians drinking in public places cannot be classified as anything else but discrimination. It is not up to this committee to say whether Indians should be allowed to drink on the reserves, or not. That is a federal matter. Suffice it to say that the vast majority of the Indians whom we interviewed wanted that privilege, and it is difficult to see why, in this day and age, a home on the reserve should be considered different from any other home in the province.

Members of the committee will deal with other points raised in the report, such as the great waste of some of the best agricultural land in the province, through lack of interest of Indians in agriculture.

I shall deal only with one more point—the right of Indians to vote in provincial elections.

We did not find that all Indians wanted to vote in provincial elections. They were afraid. The vast majority have had tales handed down from father to son about the treachery of the white man. When we suggested that they might be given the right to vote, they were suspicious of the white man and told us to put in writing that the right to vote would not in any way affect their treaty rights. They have had too many sad experiences of white men offering them something and taking much more back in return.

Anyone who does not have the right to vote in a general election of a province or the Dominion, cannot be considered as a full citizen. It is true that in some reserves, there would be no knowledge as to what Party stood for what form of government, but on most reserves we found a reasonably keen knowledge of the value of the vote. In British Columbia, Indians were given the right to vote a few years ago. As a matter of interest, an Indian has been elected to the B.C. Legislature. I was most impressed with him when I met him a couple of weeks ago. A representative or representatives of the Indian race, regardless of Party affiliation, would be an asset to this House.

Indians are not going to learn the value of the vote from textbooks. While it may mean nothing to many bands at first, it will be an indication to them that they are our equals, and this will not only develop their interest in public affairs, but will make Indians more aware of the privileges and responsibilities of full citizenship.

The right to vote would be another step toward integration. It would appear that education will play a greater part in bringing about full integration than any other force. Through education, the Indians will gradually appreciate the fact that in spite of desires which they have inherited to retain their own way of life, to survive and progress they must, of necessity, assume full citizenship.

The non-Indian must learn to appreciate the Indian—to accept him as his equal—to understand his problems, so that there will be full equality regardless of race, colour or creed.

It is a paradox that so many non-Indians consider the noble savage of history to be to a large extent superior to themselves and yet hold back from the noble savage's descendants their due rights. During our fact finding tours, we visited many Indian homes which members of the Legislature would be proud to own, where families were living as anyone else would, and taking the same attitude toward the backward Indians as we do.

What we must do is to extend every possible educational benefit to the Indians. We must open our schools to them. We must particularly encourage them to attend our vocational schools and teachers' colleges. Through our discrimination of the past, the Indian has developed an inferiority complex; he thinks we look down on him; let us make them understand that this is not the case. Let us remind them of the greats of their race from Joseph Brant, Pauline Johnson, Tecumseh, to Elliot Moses, Magistrate Martin, Canon Sanderson, and many others. Let us by our every action assure them that only they themselves stand between being wards of the Federal Government and citizens, in the fullest sense of the word.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has very fully presented to the House the report of the Select Committee appointed by the Legislature, at its last session, to make a full inquiry into all matters concerning the status of the Indians in this province, and to bring in its report.

I would like to say, first, what a pleasure it has been for me to have had this opportunity to serve the Province of Ontario in this particular capacity as a member of this committee, a member under the very able chairmanship of the hon. Minister of Welfare. I want to thank him for the kind personal reference he saw fit to make to me in my humble capacity as hon. member for Brant, and as a member of this committee. I want to reciprocate by saying, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Minister certainly discharged his important duties as chairman of that committee in a manner which was able, fair, satisfactory, and certainly acceptable to every member of the committee, to the public at large, and to the bands of Indians we had the privilege of visiting.

I think in this instance it was a wise departure from the usual practice in placing an hon. Minister of the Crown as chairman of the committee. It certainly added a great deal of dignity and prestige to that committee in our many contacts with the public, and with the bands when visiting them on reservations.

It is of particular satisfaction to me that my name as hon. member for Brant has been associated with this unanimous report, which is now before you, Mr. Speaker, for discussion. This is really the first sincere effort, to my knowledge, which has been made by the Legislature of this province to acquire first-hand knowledge of the problems connected with our 36,000 Indian citizens of this province, and to seek a remedy for some of their difficulties under which they have been carrying on for many, many years in the history of this province.

The last few years have seen great advances, as the hon. Prime Minister stated in his explanation of the bill which he presented to the House this afternoon, Mr. Speaker. We all can remember well when it seemed to be the attitude that there had been created in this world certain people to be superior, and certain people who seemed to be delegated to an inferior position. My own very deep conviction is that this was never any part of the Divine intent, that it was always intended that all men were created equal in the sight of God. We must all rejoice, I think, at the progress which has been made in civilization, even in our time and age, in the elimination of many of these discriminations which existed against these people in the past.

Some reference has been made in this session by the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts) to the Declaration of Human Rights as passed by the United Nations, and I would like to refer you to one or two of those 30 articles:

ARTICLE 1:

All human beings are born free and equal in dignity and rights. They are endowed with reason and conscience and should act towards one another in a spirit of brotherhood.

ARTICLE 21:

Every one has the right to take part in the government of his country, directly or through freely chosen representatives; every one has the right of equal access to public services in his country. The will of the people shall be the basis of the authority of government. This will shall be expressed in periodic and genuine elections which shall be by universal and equal suffrage.

ARTICLE 25:

Every one has the right to a standard of living adequate for the health and well-being of himself and of his family, including, food, clothing, housing and medical care and necessary social services, and the right to security in the event of unemployment, sickness, disability, widowhood, old age, or other lack of livelihood in circumstances beyond his control.

So one might go through nearly every one of the 30 articles, and we must admit, judging by this standard or any other standard of equity, our Indian population in the past has not had a fair deal in this country.

I recommend a careful study by every hon. member of this Legislature of this report, which is now before you. It is brief and very readable. While we, as a Legislature or government in this province, have not the jurisdiction to deal with all the problems concerning our Indian population, if we deal with those by carrying them out and putting them into effect, I believe we will have gone a long way towards doing our part, at least, in seeing that the Declaration of Human Rights is put into effect in this province, insofar as it concerns our Indian people.

To show you to what extent this discrimination has been carried on in other provinces and elsewhere across Canada, I noticed a press report as of March 3rd, from Winnipeg, Man., our sister province, to the effect that at this late date in that province they have passed a bill which repealed a prohibition that prevented Indians from going into pool rooms, so that now, in the Province of Manitoba, an Indian may go into a pool room. We never got that far in Ontario in discriminating against Indians, but I think something is certainly long overdue.

I only intend to deal with one or two matters in this report. I have had the opportunity on previous occasions, Mr. Speaker, of addressing you in connection with the great Six Nations Band on the reservation in my riding, and for that reason I will not take up too much of the time of the House this afternoon.

I might refer you to the recommendation in regard to agriculture. Now the situation which the committee found on various reservations was, frankly, not too encouraging or satisfactory with respect to the agricultural development of some extremely valuable lands in this province. These lands, of course, are entirely outside of the jurisdiction of provincial authorities who have in all other cases absolute jurisdiction over property and civil rights. In my riding, for instance, there are over 50,000 acres of extremely valuable agricultural land which constitutes the reservation, and which is not being used nearly as satisfactorily as we would like to see it used. Some would almost go so far as to tell you that it is difficult indeed to make a good farmer of an Indian. However, I do not subscribe to that. I know many Indians who are splendid farmers. I have had the benefit of their assistance on my own farm since I have had anything to do with its operation, and living so close to the reserve, my father and my grandfather before me in my day made extensive use of the services of Indians, without exception they were found to be entirely satisfactory.

However, a situation exists there which is beyond the power of this Legislature to deal with, that the equity of the individuals on their land is not clearly understood, nor is it in good condition, and many Indians who are living upon Indian lands do not know to what extent of equity they have in that property, whether it is entire, partial, or non-existing. An effort is now being made to clear up these uncertainties, which makes it difficult for any individual to put a great deal of time, money and effort into the improvement of his property.

As they have no power to grant mortgages on their land, such legislation as the Junior Farmers Establishment Act of this province could not possibly apply, and we have no power to assist the junior farmers, the young men who would make the best farmers, by such legislation as that. So our opportunities to assist in this connection are very limited, and no matter which way you turn, you seem to be thwarted.

Just to give you an example of that, last year, our very able agricultural representative in the county visited the Indian reserve and delivered a very fine speech on conservation. As we have a Grand River Conservation Authority, which is very active, this speech would appear to be very timely and appropriate. He went on to tell them that if they would build farm ponds, for instance, there was a provision they could be reimbursed to the extent of 50 per cent. up to $100.

One of the Indians, who incidentally was a graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College—and we have very many well-educated Indians on our reserves—thought he would like to take advantage of this. He engaged a contractor to come in with his large equipment and he scooped out a farm pond on a dry run through his property, where, in flood times, enough water would accumulate to carry his large stock of animals grazing there, during the dry times. Otherwise, his herds had to cross a travelled highway and go down a very steep bank to the Grand River.

When he got his pond built, he applied to be reimbursed to the extent of $100, and was told that of course he was not eligible as no assessment had been made against the Indians on the reservation for the purpose of conservation under the Grand River Authority. When you explain that to the Indian, he just says: "Well, that is just another instance where the poor Indian is left 'holding the bag'."

I have tried my best to see that this case should be dealt with, and if I do not succeed before another session I may go to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas) and ask him to put this item in his Estimates. I am sure the hon. Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) would back me up to the extent of $100, which is, I think, very much deserved, particularly as it was following the advice of a representative of the Department of Agriculture that the expenditure was proceeded with.

We are recommending that at the different levels of government everything be done to assist agriculture on the reserves. While that recommendation does sound a little inadequate to meet a very real difficulty and situation, I do not see how much further we can go, having such limited authority as the Provincial Legislature. But, certainly, if something is not done in the very near future, much of this land will be grown up into thorn trees and weeds. We see very valuable land in Ontario which is not in Indian reserves growing up into almost impenetrable forests of thorn trees, and it is difficult for anyone to clear it up and make a financial success by attempting to farm it. Before this valuable land gets into that condition, I sincerely hope that something is done.

I may say, Mr. Speaker, as I travelled over this 50,000 acres of the reserve, I was also almost tempted to assert my rights as an Indian chieftain of the Mohawk tribe, and ask for an allotment of land there, on which to live and farm. The land I have is rolling and hilly, and burdened with railways, highways, pipelines and hydro towers. It would be nice, indeed, to spend the rest of my life in peaceful conditions, with no land tax, no school tax, no income tax, and no hydro towers to take the joy out of life any more.

I can well remember when the agricultural production of this reserve was much greater than it is now. They have fine agricultural land, naturally rich, and it is not too late to make good use of the land. I do suggest to those who have authority that something might be done in the way of long-term leases, even to non-Indians, to get this land back into production, and give some revenue to the band, and have the land in better shape when the Indians are in a position to make full use of it.

That does not only apply to the Brant reserve. When we visited one of the reserves in the Bruce Peninsula, the chief said that, just a few years ago, it took over 3 months in the fall of the year to thresh the grain production, whereas today it could be done in a very few hours, and, certainly, would not require more than 3 days.

So there is much to be done in connection with the development of agriculture on the reserves.

Reference has been made to the recommendation with regard to the right to vote at provincial elections. I was glad to hear the hon. Prime Minister state, even before the report was presented, that this right will be extended to the Indians of Ontario. In the two eastern provinces, Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, I do not think the right of the Indians to vote has ever been questioned; they have always voted, as a matter of course. British Columbia and Manitoba have recently extended the right to vote in provincial elections, and, when this is done in Ontario, there will be 5 provinces in which they will have the right. I do not think anyone would suggest that Ontario should be more than half-way down the list of provinces when it comes to progress.

I sincerely hope when 5 provinces have taken this step forward, the Federal Government might be willing to consider it is time for it to do likewise, and make the matter nation-wide. I most sincerely endorse the recommendation in the report which extends the right to vote at provincial elections to Indians on the same basis as the non-Indians enjoy in this province of Ontario.

Just one other matter, in connection with the report, upon which I will touch . . . having introduced it to this Legislature at the last session . . . and that is in respect to intoxicants. Several sections of the Indian Act—5 in number, from 93 to 98—deal with the matter of intoxicants amongst Indians, and the most rigid prohibitions are set out in these sections. Severe penalties apply to anyone who serves intoxicants of any nature to an Indian in a public place, or to anyone who takes intoxicants onto an Indian reserve.

However, in the last amendment to the Indian Act, in 1951, there was a provision that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council could pass an Order-in-Council, asking the Dominion Government to make applicable to the province the provisions that Indians might drink in public places, which would be beverage rooms, and cocktail bars, in this province. That is the first time the door has been opened, in connection with the application of the Indian Act, for the provinces to take any action.

We are recommending that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council pass the appropriate Order-in-Council requesting the Governor-in-Council to proclaim Section 95. It was in this connection that I presented to this Legislature, last year, a resolution passed unanimously by the Council of the Six Nations Reserve in Brant, that the members of the Six Nations band of Indians be allowed the privilege of patronizing beverage rooms in the Province of Ontario, as provided for by Section 95 of the Indian Act.

I followed that up with a resolution on the Order paper, asking the Legislature to express the opinion that the discrimination against the Indians, which has existed so long, should be removed by appropriate action of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

As the hon. Minister of Welfare—our chairman (Mr. Goodfellow)—has said, I received no criticism whatever from the temperance forces in my own riding—and they are very strong—nor from any other source in connection with this. I am satisfied the people of this province feel that our Indian citizens should be governed by the same laws as apply to the non-Indians of the province in this, as well as in other matters. I certainly am of the strong conviction that when the Parliament of Canada sees fit, in its wisdom, to repeal this prohibition, and leaves the Indian population subject to the same laws which are enjoyed by the rest of the population, it can be put on a provincial basis. Ontario should see to it that these prohibitions are removed, and the Indian citizens of this province be subject to the same laws and regulations as the non-Indians.

I would like, for a moment, to direct your attention to the very proud history of the Six Nations of Brant, Mr. Speaker. They are not in the same category as some of the other Indian bands in the province, as they are not our first citizens. These people were civilized and well developed, according to the lights of the times, living on very valuable land in New York State and Ohio. At the time of the War of Independence in the United States, they sided with the English, against the Colonies, under the leadership of Captain Joseph Brant—Thayendanega, his Indian name—who fought with very great distinction in that war on behalf of the Crown.

Joseph Brant was born in 1742, and died in 1807, at just about my own age, Mr. Speaker. Sad to relate, nearly all of the great chieftains of the Iroquois Six Nations have passed on, and I am not feeling very well myself.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston):
You are looking very well.

MR. NIXON: But Captain Joseph Brant was a very remarkable man. At the age of 13, he was an active warrior in the war against the French, and discharged his duties with great credit to himself, and rapidly rose to be a leader amongst his people.

When, in 1775, the difficulties developed as between the Colonies and the Mother Country, he was quite at a loss to understand how quickly his allies and his enemies changed sides. He went to England to get first-hand knowledge of these matters. It is said that when he was presented to King George III, the King suggested he should kneel before him, and kiss his hand in homage. Brant said: "I cannot think of that; I am just as much a king as you are, but your Queen is a very lovely lady, and I would not mind kissing her hand."

He apparently made quite an impression on the Court of St. James, and came back apparently convinced of the rights of the Mother Country, and led his 3,000 warriors for the Crown, and against the American colonies.

Had the forces of the Crown been as brilliantly led, and fought as successfully as the Indians under Brant, I can assure you the outcome of that war would have been quite different. But it went the other way. In the course of time, Brant and his Indians, through the Treaty of 1782, lost their land, and were backed up into the Niagara Frontier. It was from that section they carried on raids of terrific severity. I am firmly convinced, Mr. Speaker—and I think history will bear me out—that the reason this valuable part of Southern Ontario remained to Canada and to the Crown, was largely because of the tremendous effort put forward by Captain Joseph Brant and his 3,000 Indians.

Having lost their land in the United States, they were given a grant of land of the 6 miles on each side of the Grand River, from its source to its mouth. This was a very valuable tract of land indeed, as you can well imagine, extending to Haldimand and Brant, up through Waterloo, Wellington and Dufferin. But, unfortunately, Joseph Brant very rapidly disposed of very large areas of this land at a great sacrifice. It was not long until he and his Indians were backed into the Township of Tuscarora in the County of Brant, which was named after him, in recognition of the great debt this country owed to that famous warrior.

As a matter of fact, when my own grandfather came to Brant in 1839, he purchased the farm on which I live now, for some £214, from one Thomas Street, of Niagara, who had received the concession of a very large bloc of land in that district from Brant, for a very small consideration, indeed. Naturally, I am very greatly interested in Indian affairs, and the land upon which I have lived throughout my life, and upon which my father and my grandfather lived before me, was Indian land just a few years before my grandfather secured it.

We have developed from the Indians of Brant many illustrious individuals, in addition to Captain Joseph Brant. Many hundreds of our fine young men from the reserve have served with great distinction in 5 different wars of the Empire, and have been promoted in rank to even as high as brigadier, and many honours have been awarded for very illustrious services.

Even in the last affair in Korea—and I quote from our local paper—one petty officer, George Jamieson, one of the fine names of that riding, has been awarded the Distinguished Service Medal for outstanding courage and bravery on board the destroyer Iroquois, which was quite an appropriate name for the boat on which he was serving.

To give you another example, one of our ministers, after completing some 8 years of service on the reserve, left last year to serve in northern Saskatchewan. This is what the local press had to say about him:

After nearly 8 years' service on the United Church Grand River Mission, Reverend E. T. Montour will return with his family to the West at the end of June. Born in Tuscarora Township, Reverend Mr. Montour attended the Hagersville High School, later going to McGill University in Montreal. He graduated there in Arts and Theology and won a scholarship for proficiency in Oriental languages. Then he preached in the Province of Quebec, preaching in French.

I mention these wonderful records to show the capacity of our Indians. When they have the opportunity, they can certainly hold their own, perhaps even better than others of the population, as exemplified by Rev. Mr. Montour, as demonstrating his capacity, winning a scholarship in Oriental languages.

I certainly would not want a contest with him on that score myself, I can assure hon. members.

Then we have Pauline Johnson, a poetess who was the daughter of Chief Johnson, whose beautiful home in Chief's Wood is still on the north bank of the Grand River at Middleport. She was a writer of prose and poetry which constitutes a great store of Indian knowledge, and one which has been greatly enjoyed by people of Canada and elsewhere. Certainly she was one of the greatest poets of her day. One could go on to give many other instances.

Recently Dr. G. C. Montour was written up in Collier's magazine. He is a Dominion geologist, a native of the Six Nations Reserve, and one of the outstanding geologists in the country. He did some remarkable work in developing the uranium deposits of northern Saskatchewan. And so one might continue, Mr. Speaker.

The committee had the pleasure of visiting the reserve at the time of a 3-day agricultural fair, and I am very certain that all members were most favourably impressed with the splendid type of citizens who received them in the great council hall and placed their arguments before the committee in so able a manner. Afterwards we went to a banquet prepared for us by the ladies of the St. Peter's Anglican Church, and never have I attended a banquet which was better prepared or more graciously served. Later we went to the fair, and there we saw thousands of Indians in holiday mood, well dressed and happy, and in no single instance did they give any indication they were not thoroughly responsible citizens, such as one would find in a happy holiday gathering at any other fair throughout the length and breadth of the province.

Their only disappointment was that they did not have the hon. Prime Minister (Hon. Mr. Frost) there to confer honorary chieftainship upon him, but I hope there will be an opportunity for that at the next fair.

It is simply absurd that we should go on any longer treating these fine people as a people apart from the rest of us, or as second-rate citizens, and certainly I am sure this Legislature will be of the unanimous opinion, as is the committee itself, that our Indians should be emancipated, and receive the fullest citizenship of this province, with all rights, privileges and opportunities the rest of us enjoy.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I am sure, Mr. Speaker, you will realize there is very little left for the rest of us to say after listening to the hon. Minister and to the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). I was pleased indeed, Mr. Speaker, to be a member of this committee, and to serve under the very able chairmanship of the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow). I do not think the government could have chosen a better chairman for a committee of this kind. The Minister who looks after the Department responsible for the welfare of the people of Ontario was chosen to be chairman of this committee, set up to look into the welfare of Indians, and I know, with his usual kindly interest, he gave the committee his very best services. I was pleased to be able to serve with him.

The only thing I regretted was that owing to my membership on 3 other committees, I missed a few of the meetings. In particular I missed the trip to the Brant Reservation, and I may say that some day I am going to look over the Brant Reservation myself, if the opportunity arises. I would have liked very much to have gone with the committee when they were visiting that area.

As I said, Mr. Speaker, there seems very little to say that has not been gone into by the chairman of the committee, and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) but I should like to refer to one or two subjects which have been touched on by both the hon. members.

One is the Indian's right to vote. Why should we, who are, after all, secondary citizens in Canada, and in Ontario particularly, withhold from the Indians their right to vote? By doing so we have deprived these people, who are the first citizens of Ontario, of an elementary right of citizenship. As citizens of Ontario we have held that right back from them over the years, crowding them into reservations as if they were subnormal citizens of the province. I agree wholeheartedly with the recommendation of the committee that the Indians be given the right to vote. If some hon. member of the House wish to refer to the report, on page 13 they will see a reference made to the section of our Election Act which deprives the Indian of his right to vote:

A person who is an unenfranchised Indian of whole or part Indian blood and who resides among Indians or on an Indian reserve shall not be entitled to have his name entered on the list of voters or to vote unless he served or is serving as a member of the Canadian Armed Forces within the meaning of the National Defence Act, Canada, or of the armed forces of any part of the British Commonwealth or any ally thereof.

What peculiar distinction was given to a man once he entered the army to serve as a member of the armed forces? How did that change an Indian so as to make him different from an ordinary Indian on the reserve? Why should he be given the right to vote merely because he served in the armed forces? This provision is a sort of belated recognition of the Indian's inherent right. It was for this reason that we gave to the Indian the right to vote after he had served in armed forces. I think that right should be extended to all Indians, not only to Indians who served in the armed forces during the first and second world wars and the Korean war (perhaps there are some Indians who served in the South African war)—in that case they would have the right to vote which is denied to the ordinary Indian. But give to all Indians the right to vote in the same way as other citizens of the province.

British Columbia and Manitoba enacted legislation in 1949 and 1952, respectively, giving to the Indians the right to vote. Why should we in Ontario lag behind in extending to our own first citizens this major right of citizenship? Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, as pointed out by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), never did deprive the Indian of his right to vote. In those two provinces they always enjoyed this right as an ordinary citizen.

The next point to which I want to refer deals with the sale or consumption of liquor by the Indian. If hon. members of the House would turn to page 22 of the report they will see there the legislation which prohibits the Indian from consuming liquor. It is section 95 of the Indian Act and it reads as follows:

(1) No offence is committed against subparagraph (ii) of paragraph (a) of section 94 if intoxicants are sold to an Indian for consumption in a public place in accordance with a law of the province where the sale takes place authorizing the sale of intoxicants to a person for consumption in a public place.

(2) This section shall not come into force in any province until a proclamation bringing it into force in the province is issued by the Governor-in-Council at the request of the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council of the province.

This means that though the section in the Indian Act states that no offence is committed by an Indian going into a beverage room to consume liquor in accordance with the laws of the province in which he is living, in order to acquire that right the Governor-in-Council of the Dominion must approve a recommendation sent to him by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council of a province.

The only thing that can be done in Ontario is for our Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to ask the Governor-in-Council of the Dominion to put this regulation of section 95 into effect, upon which the Indian will be permitted to enter our beverage rooms.

That is as far as we may go. We have not the right to permit Indians to buy packaged goods or to take them onto the reservations. We can only, according to the present provisions of section 95 of the Act, permit Indians to go into beverage rooms. We cannot give them the right to buy packaged goods and take them to the reserves.

Some day perhaps, after the Dominion authorities have seen how the Indian treats his rights in respect to this privilege of going into beverage rooms, the Federal Government will withdraw that restriction, too. I hope it will because, as long as restrictions of this kind remain, we cannot avoid a big difficulty, and one mentioned by the Indians themselves, that is: bootlegging on the reserves.

Indians told us, when we were visiting different reservations, that they knew that members of their bands were paying as high as $14, $15 or $18 per bottle for very poor brands of liquor. Having once purchased these rather poor brands of liquor, these Indians were rather dubious about carrying bottles on their persons for any length of time, and one or two of them immediately consumed the bottle, in order to avoid having it on their person, with the result they became intoxicated. In other words, the very restriction which prevents Indians from having packaged goods resulted in a greater degree of intoxication. The Indian thought he had better get rid of the liquor he had on his person because he thought he might perhaps run into police officers, and get into trouble. I believe that if the Indians were given the right to take parceled goods onto the reserves they would treat that privilege in the same way as the white man.

I think it was the hon. Minister himself who referred to a number of the McGregor tribe who was quite sarcastic about the restriction of the privileges given to Indians in connection with drink. He said: "We were permitted to go overseas, to join the Canadian Army, and perhaps get shot overseas. As soon as we come back, however, the government forbids us the privilege of getting 'half-shot'."

On all our visits, the Indians stressed the differences we in Ontario and Canada attempt to maintain between them and the white men. As has been pointed out by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), Indians have reached very high positions. Many of them are very able men, as able as any of the white people in the province.

I refer to such men as Brigadier-General Martin and Canon Sanderson of Northern Ontario, an Anglican Church missionary who has served his community on behalf of the Church and presently holds the appointment of Canon. Canon Sanderson went with us as our interpreter, and many of us grew to appreciate to the full this very able old gentleman. All Indians can acquire this same status if they are given the opportunity of education, and treated as equals. I think, Mr. Speaker, the committee is agreed that we should continue no longer to impose an unfair status on the Indians. The Indian is the equal of the white man, when given educational privileges, and his service in two world wars proves it. When Indians went into action they proved themselves to be equally able and efficient soldiers as the white soldiers of the Dominion of Canada.

Mr. Chairman, I agree whole heartedly with the recommendation contained in the report giving the Indians the right to enter beverage rooms and consume beverages there. I am sure there are several other members of the committee who want to say a few words, so I will not refer to any more of the recommendations. I hope hon. members of the House will read this short report. That is one of the advantages this report has. It is short. Hon. members read a short report, whereas they tend to put a longer report aside. I hope it will be given the fullest consideration and that the government will implement the recommendations contained in it.

MR. BRYAN CATHCART (Lambton West): Mr. Speaker. As a member of what I consider to be this very important committee, may I first of all say that I am in full agreement with all that has been brought out by our chairman, the hon. Mr. Goodfellow, the member for Brant, and the member for Cochrane South. I do want to take a moment to express my keen appreciation to our chairman for his leadership throughout the past year of our study of Indian affairs in this province and to sincerely thank him for the impartiality which he showed to all members of the committee. It can be understood that we were not all in complete agreement at all times. However, the Minister of Public Welfare showed his real qualities as a diplomat by bringing us together to produce a fully unanimous report. In other words, he was not the old schoolmaster type, who endeavoured to whip us into line, but rather the considerate type, and the fact that more than 80 per cent. were in attendance at all meetings points up the interest of the members and surely is a personal tribute to him. Each one of us had a full opportunity to express our views.

I would like, Mr. Speaker, to direct my remarks first to a field which the chairman mentioned earlier, that of education of Indians and non-Indians to live together and the mutual benefits which are available if this can be achieved. Our report is not bulky, it was kept short so that everyone could read it easily. It is well worth-while reading.

I was privileged to have the committee visit 3 reserves in my county. They are Sarnia, Walpole Island and Kettle Point. The Sarnia reserve is in an unusual position since it lies entirely within the city limits of Sarnia. The reserve has accumulated some wealth through the development of what is recognized as the great Chemical Valley of Canada today. Most of the chemical valley was originally part of the reserve and the large companies now situated there have bought land from the Sarnia band and purchased rights-of-way for pipelines, etc., all of which has brought wealth and in turn many benefits. Over the years it has been my privilege to become personally acquainted with most of the families and to feel as much at home at their get-together as I would any place in the riding.

When the announcement was made that the committee was going to meet the Sarnia band, the Junior Chamber of Commerce of Sarnia came to me and asked if it would be all right if they sat in on the committee meeting. Without hesitation I assured them we would not only be glad to have them, but would appreciate having their views. Some 15 or 20 of the group attended and 2 or 3 of them spoke. A question was asked by one of our Indian women: "Could Indian children use the city parks?" Well, of course, we all know and take it for granted that the parks are open to all citizens and visitors, but you see the Indians were not sure. They did not want to push in where they might not be wanted, with the result that our Indian boys and girls were not playing baseball, football and hockey, simply because they did not know what facilities were available to them.

The fact that our "jaycees" attending our meeting, and their very enlightening talks, I am sure removed much of the strain and possible misunderstanding between our two peoples of the city. The Sarnia jaycees did not stop at telling them they were welcome in the parks, the city arena and to join in the sports. They went much further and organized boys' work with the Indian lads.

Before this meeting, I am sure the jaycees did not know too much about conditions on the reserve, and more particularly the condition of thinking on the reserve, but when they found out, they went to work. Within a week they were getting the young Indian boys out to join in the parks sports with the non-Indian boys.

I have here a couple of pictures taken during football season. They show Indian boys playing football with the white boys. I have also a note from a member of the jaycees and in his own words I quote:

Here are photos proving your Indian Committee did some good. These are originals from the Windsor Star showing equipment and coaches donated as a direct result of the visit to our city of the Provincial Indian Affairs Committee.

If the committee accomplished nothing else, it brought Indians and non-Indians of my district together and I think that is a very important factor in our educational programme.

I hope this will not be considered off the subject or as they say, away from the principle of the bill, Mr. Speaker, but there has been some discussion in the press as to whether my home football players team—the Sarnia Imperials—should import football players from the United States. I don't profess to be an expert, but from the report of some of the men who worked with these Indian boys last fall, I suggest they scout the reserves for talent. The Indians are natural athletes, and with a little coaching, they will produce many great names in sport. In fact, I might go further and suggest the same method for our Toronto football teams and the Maple Leaf hockey team. Sport is important. It is an easy way of getting people together. Many of our Indians tend to be backward in expressing themselves, and this applies especially to the younger people, who need encouragement to bring out their qualifications, but if they find they can compete equally in sports, it will give them confidence that they can compete equally in other fields of life and will encourage them to take their proper place and thus make even a greater contribution in the affairs of this province.

An agreement was recently reached whereby the Indian children could attend the public schools in our district. The Indian Affairs Department pays a per pupil per diem grant and has said it will share in building costs to the extent needed for the reserve children. As evidence of this I have here a clipping from the Canadian Observer and with your permission I would like to quote a portion of it:

PUBLIC SCHOOLS ADMIT INDIANS

Sarnia Board of Education Monday night passed a motion to accept in principle a proposal of the Department of Citizenship and Immigration to admit Indian children from Sarnia reserve into public schools operating under the jurisdiction of the board.

The article goes on to say:

The Sarnia Board of Education was also informed that the Federal Government would not wish to exercise any control over the operation of the school.

No distinction will be made in the provision of educational facilities to the Indian children.

At present, there are 12 such joint school systems operating in Canada. Purpose of the assimilation is primarily to integrate Indian and non-Indian children.

I hope that this mixing during school will mean that when they grow up, they will be able to take their place as any other citizens. There are many Indians who feel as I do, that their children should mix and acquire the white man's competitive spirit.

On the question of giving Indians the right to vote in provincial elections, I do want to stress that it is not a compulsory vote. We had several Indians tell us they would not vote even if the right were given to them. I feel it must be made very clear to the Indians that if they want to vote, they can, and also for whatever Party they choose. We must assure them that by casting a provincial vote, they do not in any way jeopardize any of their Indian rights.

An educational programme will eventually remove a feeling that now exists, that there is possibly some difference between the two races. At this point I would like to refer to the almost unanimous feeling of Indians in my riding that they want to have the right to buy liquor or beer and take it home to the reserve, where they can enjoy a social drink in their own home, like any other citizen. One should remember that giving the Indian the right to drink in public places means that if he should be indiscreet and have one too many, he has a long road to wend home. If he was able to drink at home, I think he would not tend to drink as much. Certainly many Indian women came to our committee meetings and said that they did not want their husbands allowed to enter beverage rooms, but on the other hand they would be happy to have them allowed to bring the packaged goods home. The Indians of the last century asked that the right to drink be taken away from them, now they are asking that it be given back to them. As far as I am concerned I think it is plain discrimination not to allow them to indulge in their own homes in the same way as any immigrant or citizen is allowed to do today. In all of our travels and from almost every quarter, where deputations and those closely concerned in this matter appeared before us, the plea was made for the privilege of purchasing and taking packaged goods to the home.

As far as disability pensions are concerned, I hope the province will act quickly when the federal legislation is brought down and extend these pensions to the Indians on or off the reserves. This pension is one that I have been greatly interested in and have spoken on many times in this House as well as publicly. It was my hope the Federal Government would join with the province to make it available across Canada when it was introduced in the province. However, they did not see fit to do so and the Province of Ontario, realizing the great need of this one group, who had been overlooked, brought in this legislation and not only has it been of real help to the disabled person, but indirectly to the municipalities as a whole. As an example I have a clipping from the London Free Press of Friday, March 26th, which has this to say:

ELDERLY PERSON ONLY ONE ON RELIEF ROLL AT DELHI

An elderly woman is the only person on relief in Delhi at the present, according to W. J. Worrall, deputy clerk and assessor. It is expected that the municipality will not pay out more than $500 for relief this year.

In 1953, about $2,000 was paid out for relief in Delhi. Approximately $3,000 was paid in 1952; $3,500 in 1951 and $2,300 in 1950.

The establishment of a disability pension by the Provincial and Federal Governments has assisted in removing several persons from the relief list, said Mr. Worrall. It pays a maximum of $40 per month to a person.

On other welfare questions, such as Homes for the Aged and Children's Aid Society work, I feel these should be made entirely available to the Indians, but not at the expense of our municipalities—rather the Federal Government should compensate for this care. At present these facilities are not to any extent available to Indians. I think they should be and that a conference should be sought with the federal welfare officials to work out a cost sharing agreement. Already much provincial legislation and benefits under certain acts are available to Indians, the province is doing more than its share and it is really only where a programme is operated through the municipal governments, that Indians do not participate. The Federal Government should take the place of the municipality in these programmes.

I must point out, Mr. Speaker, that this Provincial Government has not shirked its responsibility towards all of the people who reside within its boundaries, rather at every opportunity they have stepped in to see that regardless of race, colour or creed, equal opportunities are made available and given.

The appointment of this Select Committee to examine into conditions, etc., of our Indian population—the fact that under the leadership of our chairman the committee can boast of an average attendance of over 80 per cent. visiting Indian reserves, talking with their council and in many cases visiting the homes and talking with the residents right on their own doorsteps, is a concrete example of the interest and concern of this government and this Legislature towards the Indian population. Realizing full well that the province is limited under federal legislation and the B.N.A. Act to do things for these people, a very thorough inspection and examination has been made with the hope that no avenue to place all of our people on an equal basis has been overlooked.

As I said before it is not hard to understand that the Government of the Province of Ontario is going far beyond its line of duty in payment of old-age pensions, the payment of disability pension when the Federal Government introduces such legislation, and the recommendations made by this committee, all point up the fact that the government is anxious to leave no stone unturned towards this end of equality for all.

May I just add that in spite of all these efforts, in spite of any legislation we may pass, we will have done little unless such legislation has the moral support of each one of us. Let us remember that while government laws are necessary, they do not achieve their purpose unless backed by the moral conviction of our people and especially so in matters that concern the hearts of men. As it has been so well said, government can pass laws, but they have not yet the power to pass a miracle.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to say that one of the highest compliments I have ever received was paid when the committee was visiting an Indian reserve in my riding. An Indian friend of mine said that although I was not an Indian, I had sort of been inoculated. He said they considered me to be one of them. A great honour and one that I value very highly. From personal experience I know that once you have proved yourself and been accepted as a friend, you can be assured of his loyalty.

As the representative of that great riding, of Lambton West, a riding of great development and sound growth, a riding with a great future, and with almost 2,000 of the kind of people I have been talking about within its confines, I have every reason to be proud, as I have always considered our Indians to be the same as any other citizen and the sooner we all rate them as complete equals in every respect, the better it will be for all of our people and for the Province of Ontario as a whole.

MR. W. G. NODEN (Rainy River): Mr. Speaker, at this time I will be brief. It was my pleasure to serve on this committee under the able chairmanship of the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow). I found it most interesting and educational in furthering my knowledge of the first citizens of Canada.

Being a member from the north-western part of Ontario, and having some knowledge of the Indians and their way of living, as well as some knowledge of their thinking, I was very much surprised to find that the Indians in Southern Ontario were so far ahead in their education, and in their mode of living, and there was no comparison with the Indians of Northern Ontario.

We found that in Southern Ontario certain Indians have lost their mother tongue: in the north, there are Indians who are unable to converse in English. There are many other observations which enlightened the members of this committee.

The hon. Minister and chairman has summarized the recommendations in a very thorough manner. I would like to mention a statement which was made at one of the meetings when Magistrate Martin, formerly of the Six Nations reserve, was asked the question: "Could it possibly be the provincial vote, as recommended, would be the first step in advanced education?" He replied, "Yes—very definitely." This government is to be commended for the direct interest it is taking in the present and future welfare of our first citizens. As one chief stated to me on the Couchiching reserve, it is the first time any group of government members has come to their reserve to interest themselves in the Indians' welfare. At the same time, they put on a "pow-wow" for the benefit of the members of this committee.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Speaker, I would like to make a few remarks on the recommendations brought down by the chairman of this committee, particularly since I represent a riding which contains the largest Indian population in the province. As the report will show, in the Kenora and Sioux Lookout agencies, we have some 6,751 Indians. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) may have more than we who are over the age of 21, but we have over 2,900, as the report will show, who are just over the age of 21, and who will, for the first time in history, if this report is adopted, be entitled to a provincial vote.

As the hon. member for Rainy River (Mr. Noden) has indicated, we have, in the north, a somewhat different type of classification of Indians. I was particularly proud, since it was I who recommended to the chairman that we attempt to secure the assistance of Rev. Canon Sanderson, at the reception he received, and how he impressed all the members of the committee with his ability and gentlemanly appearance. It was, of course, a sort of personal pride for myself and my family at home, insofar as it was the Rev. Canon Sanderson who was the clergyman who officiated at the christening of our children.

I was very pleased he was able to travel with the committee, because, in recent years, his health has not been too good.

The Indians in the Sioux Lookout and Kenora agencies are spread over a vast geographical area. In fact, these 2 areas containing some 6,700 Indian people, are greater in size, by far, than the whole of the southern part of Ontario.

The work of these 2 agencies is ably attended to by 2 men, who were of great assistance to the committee. One, Mr. Gifford Swartman, the Superintendent at Sioux Lookout, and the other, Mr. Norman Patterson, the Superintendent at Kenora.

I would like to mention some of the work Mr. Swartman has done in regard to the Indian children. I think the hon. Prime Minister will recall that a couple of years ago, the Blackhawk Indians hockey team came to his office here in the Parliament buildings. The children at the Indian school are very proud to show the picture they had taken with the hon. Prime Minister of Ontario, and with the Governor-General in Ottawa when they appeared in the arena there.

But one point I want to make about this hockey team is that 2 years before these boys appeared in Southern Ontario, and played in the Maple Leaf Gardens here, and the arena in Ottawa, and demonstrated their ability as hockey players, they never had a pair of skates on their feet. Mr. Swartman and Mr. Schade and a small group, got together and bought skates for them, and made the necessary arrangements. Within 18 months, the team had captured the championship of Northwestern Ontario, in their class of hockey, and went from there to Southern Ontario, and demonstrated its excellence there as well.

This goes to prove that Indian people are vested with the same ability as the whites, and if given the opportunity by this Legislature, if it adopts this report, they will turn out to be as fine or finer citizens.

In the north, it was apparent to the committee that the great responsibility in the past in the education of the Indian population has fallen largely on the churches. The Roman Catholic and the Protestant churches (Anglican and the Presbyterian) in that part of Ontario, have carried, in years gone by, the load of education. The Rt. Rev. Bishop Renison, spoke to the committee in the Parliament buildings here, and pointed out how serious the problem had become to secure the proper teachers for the north country, at a salary range which the churches could afford to pay.

One field in which this province could do much for our Indian people, as the hon. member for Cochrane South

(Mr. Grummett) has said, is in the field of education.

Referring again to Rev. Canon Sanderson: he has raised a family who have all distinguished themselves in Canada in one way or another. He has daughters serving as registered nurses; he has sons in the Dominion Civil Service, and others who have succeeded in the business world, and have demonstrated their ability in every particular.

The other question, which was of great interest to everyone—in fact, still is—was the matter of extending the liquor privileges to Indians.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that the granting of this privilege to these citizens is going to create some particular problems in the northern part of Ontario but they are not problems which are unsurmountable. I would suggest to the government and those responsible for the enforcement of liquor regulations, that the inspectors of the Liquor Licence Board be particularly patient and tolerant in the first few months after this privilege is granted. I have no doubt whatever, as the privilege becomes widespread, and is increasingly used by the Indian population in our country, that they will behave equally as well, and in fact, a great deal better, than some of our white people. There is going to be a period, however, when there will be some difficulties, because it is going to create a situation where people will be enjoying a privilege long denied. It may be, at first, that some of these people will abuse it, but that also occurs with members of our own race.

There is one very obnoxious term which is used, not by the Liquor Control Board, but by the people who handle the reports from the board. That is the term "Indian list" when referring to people on the interdicted list. I feel this is rather an insult to our Indian people, and I trust that it will not be used in any form.

Another matter in this report, which is very apparent to those of us who live in the north, and which we highly commend, is the suggestion that a full-blooded Indian be appointed a liaison officer in matters affecting Indian affairs in the province. I think that is one of the finest recommendations in the report. I have been one of those who, over several years, have advocated a greater part for these people to play in the administration of the conduct of their own affairs. I think, sometimes, the Federal Government would go a great deal farther than it has in training young men and women for positions of higher responsibility in Indian affairs, and I think Ontario is taking a wise step, and one in the right direction, if it adopts the suggestion by the committee that a person of Indian blood be appointed to act as liaison officer between this government and the people concerned.

I wholeheartedly support this report, Mr. Speaker. I am pleased and proud that the Indians, of whom so many served as our brothers of the armed forces, will now become brother citizens to the fullest extent possible under the laws of this province.

MR. WILLIAM MURDOCH (Essex South): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the discussion.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Before the motion is acted upon, may I be permitted to ask one question of the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) who presented the report? May I ask whether the recommendations contained in the report have been placed before responsible Indian bodies before they were brought to this House, and if they were generally approved by these organized Indian groups and bodies?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Speaker, we discussed all the matters contained in the recommendations with the bands on their own reserves across the Province of Ontario, and for the most part, these recommendations are the results of conferences we held with the Indians themselves.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that, as some members may desire to speak to the report after they have had an opportunity to read it, the discussion be adjourned to a later date, and that an Order be placed on the Order paper for its further consideration.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Before calling the Orders of the day, may I make this announcement? The Standing Committee on Government Commissions called for tomorrow at 1 o'clock has been cancelled.

BILLS OF SALE AND CHATTEL MORTGAGES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 35, "An Act to amend the Bills of Sale and Chattel Mortgages Act."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I do not know if it is only my experience, but I do not find the bill in my book. If other hon. members have it, I have no objection to proceeding, but if no one has it, perhaps we should not proceed. Has every hon. member a copy or not?

SOME HON. MEMBERS: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: All right, thank you.

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill No. 35 reported.

DESERTED WIVES' AND CHILDREN'S MAINTENANCE ACT

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, we will hold the Telephone Act over.

CONVEYANCING AND LAW OF PROPERTY ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 57, "An Act to amend the Conveyancing and Law of Property Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.
Bill No. 57 reported.

THE PARENTS' MAINTENANCE ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 58, "An Act to amend the Parents' Maintenance Act, 1954."

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 5.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I raised a serious question when this bill was up for second reading, on the principle. I was hoping the government would agree with me, would share my apprehension about the effect of the Act, and would bring about amendments.

I have not written out an amendment; I might have done so if I thought there was any chance of getting sufficient support for it. I must, however, repeat my fear that the amendment to the Act, especially at this time, entails the danger that it will be used indiscriminately against younger members of a family who may be pressed into giving support of a degree that they are incapable of giving, and, as a result, bring great hardship upon them and the other members of a family.

Mr. Chairman, my experience with the bill, even before amendment, was that it was very harmful during the days of the depression. The amendment before this one was brought in by the Liberal administration of the day. I appealed against the introduction of that amendment, and, contrary to assurances given me and other spokesmen before a committee of the Legislature at that time, the Act was used very harmfully, resulting in the separation of families during that unhappy period in our history. I am afraid that this present amendment will result in a repetition of it.

Sections 5 to 10 inclusive, agreed to.

Forms 1 and 2 agreed to.

Bill No. 58 reported.

SECONDARY SCHOOLS AND BOARDS OF EDUCATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 63, "The Secondary Schools and Boards of Education Act, 1954."

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, this bill is a very long one, and it has been gone over in committee. We adopted a shorter method of dealing with such matters in the past, rather than calling each section. If there are sections in the bill that hon. members would like to speak to, may we not do it by simply calling the page? Perhaps we might make the motion that the bill be reported, without calling the sections individually. We have done that before on a very lengthy bill of this sort.

MR. SALSBERG: Bad practice.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not want to hurry the bill, nor do I want to deprive any hon. member of the opportunity of talking to any section, but this bill has been through committee in detail. Is there anything to be gained by calling out some 80 sections? I think the bill might be reported.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, before we report the bill, might I ask the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) what is meant by the reference in this bill, from time to time, to "teachers' residence"? Are there many teachers' residences throughout the province?

HON. W. J. DUNLOP (Minister of Education): Not very many, Mr. Chairman, just a few, in the rather more remote places. They are not in large cities or towns, or even villages, but a way out in the country some places.

Sections 1 to 80 inclusive, agreed to.

Bill No. 63 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, we will hold over Bill No. 65, "The Corporations Act, 1953."

CORPORATIONS INFORMATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 66, "An Act to amend the Corporations Information Act, 1953."

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive, agreed to.

Bill No. 66 reported.

UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 67, "An Act to amend the Unemployment Relief Act."

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Could the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) tell us how much money was paid out last year under this provision; how much money was involved?

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Welfare): I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I cannot give the hon. Leader of the Opposition an exact figure. It is not a large amount; simply a few thousand dollars. From now on, what we propose to do is to pay it out of our Unemployment Relief Item, rather than have a separate item in our Estimates. That is the only point involved.

MR. OLIVER: There is no change in principle, of course?

MR. GOODFELLOW: No change in principle whatever.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive, agreed to. Bill No. 67 reported.

THE MILK INDUSTRY

House in Committee on Bill No. 68. "An Act respecting the Milk Industry."

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, I am not too sure that we should simply report this one. Were there any amendments in committee to this bill?

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Welfare): No, there were supposed to have been.

MR. OLIVER: I understand there were to be amendments, or there were amendments.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There was just one amendment, which had to do with "market" or "markets." the words "or markets" were to be added to it. I do not know whether that was done or not.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, I think there were two minor amendments. They were just changing the singular to the plural. I think that was all.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Yes, in the Agricultural Committee.

HON. MR. FROST: It is reprinted in the bill.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew) Mr. Chairman, I am not a farmer but I drink milk, and so I hope does everybody. I imagine I should be more informed on the bill than I confess to be. However, it does seem to me the bill is terribly confusing. It sets up a structure which reminds one of Rube Goldberg's famous cartoons of wheels within wheels, and dangerously balanced structures on top of needles. You do not know what authority will belong to which board. Even the names of these boards are so similar that it is really extremely confusing.

I do not know how other hon. members feel about it. If they do not speak up, then maybe I am to conclude they do not find it difficult to follow. I do, and I think the public will.

Fundamentally, however, nothing seems to be touched except a reshuffling, a re-arrangement of the authorities. From the correspondence that came to me, as it did I am sure to a lot of other hon. members, there has been a request to hold up the bill for clarification and study.

I am not acting on behalf of any particular group or interest in the dairy industry; certainly not for the milk distributing interests. I do however raise the doubts that are expressed, in correspondence, and in the editorial pages of some newspapers, if only for the sake of generating some discussion at this time, or for obtaining some statement by way of reply to these editorial comments. I think it is the least that should be done at this time.

I know, Mr. Chairman, that the bill was before the Agricultural Committee, and I am willing, generally speaking, to be guided by the considerations of that committee. But if no discussion takes place, not only will we not be any wiser than we were at second reading, but the public at large will not be any wiser. I think there should be some explanation, as I said a moment ago, if only by way of a reply to the requests and to the opinions expressed in the editorials of a number of daily papers.

For myself, before I sit down, I want to say that I regret very much that the Milk Control Board is left with the same powers and authority that it had until now; authority over the working conditions of the working men in the distributing end of the industry. As I have said on another occasion during this session, I think they should not be vested with that power. I think they should not have the right to over-ride the wishes of the working men, and even to over-ride existing collective bargaining legislation. I spoke against it before, Mr. Chairman, and I was glad to see that the unions immediately affected expressed the same sentiments to the government a few days after I had spoken, when they appeared in a deputation to the government. I was hoping the government would, in this revised Act, clip some of the power of the Milk Control Board, especially insofar as it relates to the conditions of work of the dairy employee.

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

On section 3.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I am sorry the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) is not in his place. I would have liked to present to him the information I have received on the "phantom Mrs. Smith." The people concerned collaborated in preparing all the material they had, and if the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) had been in the House now, I would have forwarded it to him. In his absence, I will have to deny myself this pleasure, and will give it to him when next I have the privilege of seeing him in the House.

However, I want to add, for the information of the House, that my original figure was wrong. The alleged, or the "phantom Mrs. Smith," was not allowed to defraud people to the tune of $2,000, but $2,500, and one of the parties affected told me that he telephoned the lawyer who handled the transaction, and the lawyer told him not to be silly, it is done every day of the year. However, seeing the hon. Attorney-General is not here, I will retain all the materials, and hand them to him as soon as I see him.

Bill No. 76 reported.

THE HIGHWAY IMPROVEMENT ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 81, "An Act to amend the Highway Improvement Act."

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Did the counties not have that power before?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: I may say, Mr. Chairman, they did not have that power.

SCHOOLS ADMINISTRATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 84, "The Schools Administration Act, 1954."

HON. W. J. DUNLOP (Minister of Education): May I move that this bill be reported? It is a long one and it has been considered in very great detail.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I was not a member of the committee. Could we at least be told what amendments were made?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: There was one place in the bill, Mr. Chairman, where the words "in accordance with all Statutes made on that behalf" had been left out, and there was an amendment that they should be put in again.

Motion agreed to: Bill No. 84 reported.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 85, "An Act to amend the Public Schools Act."

Sections 1 to 19 inclusive, agreed to. Bill No. 85 reported.

THE SEPARATE SCHOOLS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 86, "An Act to amend the Separate Schools Act."

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the same question again. Would the hon. Minister explain the amendments?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: The amendments were: section 12, subsection 1, insert "subject to the provisions of any Statute in that behalf," and section 12, subsection, clause (a), "insert after the word 'establishment' in the first line the word 'organization'." Section 12, subsection 1, delete clause "W" and reletter Clauses to "J". Section 12, subsection 2, insert "subject to the provisions of any statute on that behalf."

MR. SALSBERG: The amendments do not seem to fit the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN: This is Bill 86.

MR. SALSBERG: There are only 10 clauses there. There cannot be an amendment to section 12 in it.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: I was dealing with the wrong bill. There are 5 of them, but the meaning is the same.

HON. MR. FROST: R and S are underlined. I think that is the one.

MR. SALSBERG: R and S underlined. That, of course, makes it abundantly clear.

Sections 1 to 10 inclusive, agreed to. Bill No. 86 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: Resolutions numbers 13, 14 and 15.

Mr. Chairman, I beg to inform the House that the honourable Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the proposed resolutions, that is to say, resolutions 13, 14 and 15, recommends them for the consideration of the House.

CLERK OF THE HOUSE:

RESOLUTION 13:

That the Minister, out of such moneys as are appropriated by the Legislature therefor, may make contributions towards the cost of treatment of poliomyelitis.

RESOLUTION 14:

That,

- (a) for the purposes of The Succession Duty Act, the property mentioned in subclause I to XIII inclusive of clause (p) of section 1 of that Act shall be deemed to pass on the death of the deceased and accordingly shall be deemed to be property passing on the death of the deceased or which passes on his death in addition to any other property passing on the death of the deceased or which passes on his death; and
- (b) subsection 1 of section 49 of the Succession Duty Act shall not apply where the amount of the premiums mentioned in clause (g) of subsection 2 of section 6 of The Succession Duty Act, 1943, is equal to or greater than the amount of the money received by the treasurer mentioned in such clause (g).

as provided by Bill No. 119, "An Act to amend the Succession Duty Act."

RESOLUTION 15:

That the Minister of Municipal Affairs shall in each year adjust the payments to municipalities under The Municipal Unconditional Grants Act, 1953.

as provided by Bill No. 120, "An Act to amend the Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953."

MR. SALSBERG: I am not clear whether that third resolution means that the hon. Minister for Municipal Affairs (Hon. Mr. Dunbar) will have the power to adjust unconditional grants to the municipalities every year, or whether this will be the result of government policy and legislation.

Resolutions 13, 14 and 15 agreed to.

THE TEACHERS' SUPERANNUATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 87.
"An Act to amend the Teachers' Superannuation Act."

MR. OLIVER: On this question of teachers' superannuation, I imagine all hon. members of the House have been besieged, and rightly so, if people think they have a grievance, by the older members of the teaching profession who claim, with some justification, it would appear, that they are not being properly dealt with in the matter of superannuation. I would like to hear the hon. Minister (Hon. Mr. Dunlop) on this point, and I would like him to indicate to the House whether we are going as far as we could reasonably be expected to go in meeting the objections of these older teachers to this superannuation fund as presently set out.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Mr. Chairman, there are, at the present time, approximately 3,150 retired teachers in the province. They have retired, some of them, under an arrangement whereby their pensions were calculated on the average salary of the last 15 years of their teaching. They are asking that that term of computation be reduced to 10 years no matter what it may have been at the time their pensions were computed. There was a time when the term of computation was 32 years. A change was made in the time of the depression to allow teachers a greater average than they would otherwise have had. However, all that is in the past, and we are trying in this bill to provide for the future so that grievances of this kind cannot again, we hope, be repeated.

We have gone into this fully. The matter has been discussed in the Committee on Education, but the fact remains that if we were to attempt to readjust in any way the pensions of those teachers who are now retired and are drawing pensions, we should have to face applications from every pensioner in the Province of Ontario who has any connection with the government in any way whatever. We would have requests from people who have retired under The Public Service Act, those who have retired from the Ontario Northland Railway, those who are pensioners under The Workmen's Compensation Board, and so on. It is simply too large a problem for any government in this country to undertake. It would lead to pressure to readjust pensions for thousands and thousands of people, not only teachers, but all other employees who are now on pensions.

Sometimes, of course, it is claimed that those who retired some years ago built up this fund. But there is another side to that. Anyone who has retired and draws a pension receives in the course of 6½ years at the most, all he has paid in contributions, and what the government has paid, in addition. So with every sympathy for the people who are living on inadequate pensions, and every sympathy for widows of those who passed on years ago, I must tell hon.

members that the problem is too great to undertake. All we can do is try to provide against a repetition of this situation in the future.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will recognize the great problem that this represents. These payments and pensions were computed many years ago in different conditions from those which exist today. As the hon. Minister has stated, the principle affects a wide variety of cases. It could be said that practically every pension scheme started before the inflationary years is affected. This was the basic reason why the province was so interested in universal old-age pensions at the age of 70. We recognized that this does not meet the situation entirely. However, it goes a very considerable way towards meeting it. Of course, there is the period from 65 until the universal pension operates.

An old school teacher came to see me some time back, and his pension was based upon conditions many years ago. He receives something over $1,100 as pension, which is not a very large sum. At the time, he pointed out the inadequacy of the pension. Shortly afterwards an arrangement was made with the Federal Government, and he and his wife received $960 more. It brought their income up to around $2,100. That, in itself, was a very substantial assistance. I admit that it does not correct the situation which arises in the case of someone who paid in years ago, but, nevertheless, I think the old-age pension scheme was of substantial assistance in the case of this teacher. The pension, unfortunately, was one of the old type which "died" with him. Under the old-age pension arrangement, of course, half of what they receive, or $40 a month, would go to the widow.

I would say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that we have done everything possible to remedy this situation, but it is a very difficult one, as I think he will realize.

MR. OLIVER: Supposing I was a teacher getting $5,000 a year? What would be my pension if I was retiring today and had taught for 35 years or more?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: If you had had that average of $5,000 for 10 years, $3,500 after April 1st, 1954.

HON. MR. FROST: That is under the new arrangement. We have taken off the "ceiling" in the civil service. With regard to the teachers, I think the same thing has happened. It is an entirely different situation as compared with a few years ago.

MR. GRUMMETT: When was this bill before the Committee on Education?

HON. MR. DUNLOP: Last week, Mr. Chairman. It was Wednesday of last week.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Education (hon. Mr. Dunlop) whether his department has calculated the amount that will be required to take care of this particular group of teachers, leaving out of consideration for the moment the political effect, or the stimulating effect such assistance would have on other pensioners who retired years ago. Limiting ourselves, now, to the question of the teachers, how much would it cost this government to provide them with a livable pension, a pension they could live on?

HON. MR. FROST: I might point out to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that, actuarially, I think the teachers' superannuation fund is set up in arrears to the extent of about $50 million. As a matter of fact, if a decision were taken to do as the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) suggested, we would have to make up the total arrears, which, of course, would cost a tremendous sum of money. That is on the face of the actuarial figures. The computation shows, I think, if the pension plan goes the way it is at the present time without any attention at all, it will increase until 1970. Afterwards, it will start to decrease. That is the purpose of our adding $1 million a year, as we have been doing recently. By doing that we keep postponing that date when the decline starts. Of course, if we can consistently put in that $1 million, we shall overtake that problem. But there is no surplus in the account being drawn on. There is a very substantial capital deficit which would have to be made up.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not quite the answer to the question. It is a very good explanation, but it is not the answer.

HON. MR. DUNLOP: The answer to the question is: in the neighbourhood of $650,000 a year.

MR. SALSBERG: I think it would be a good investment.

Sections 1 to 8 inclusive, agreed to.

Bill No. 87 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: I ask you to note, Mr. Chairman, that it is past 6 o'clock.

It being now 6 of the clock, the committee took recess.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

THE CHAIRMAN: Page 55, Department of Lands and Forests.

Vote 91, Main Office—$1,726,400.

HON. MR. W. S. GEMMELL (Minister of Lands and Forests): Mr. Chairman, with your permission, it has become the custom of the House for the Minister in charge of the department to make some remarks about the department before presenting his Estimates.

First of all, I would like to take the opportunity, which I have not done this year so far, of expressing my sincere thanks to my colleagues who carried on the work of this department during my absence, particularly to the hon. Prime Minister who was so generous in seeing the work was carried on; to my colleague, the hon. Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh) who is absent today; to the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Griesinger); and to the hon. Minister of Agriculture (Mr. Thomas) who so ably and kindly performed the work during that time.

I would like to take the opportunity also, Mr. Chairman, to make reference to the deaths of three colleagues, since I last spoke. I would like to express my regrets and sympathy to the family in their bereavement in the loss of a very dear friend and associate, the hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey). He and his family have been long and closely associated with me in the political field. I want to take this opportunity to say how much I will miss him in the days ahead, and to express my regrets to his family in their bereavement. I would also like to mention the hon. member for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum) who passed away so suddenly some weeks later, and our good friend the former hon. member for Simcoe East (Mr. McPhee) who died previous to the opening of the session, and of whom we have so many pleasant memories, and also the late hon. member for Russell (Mr. Nault).

The Prime Minister, in his capacity of Treasurer of Ontario, referred in his recent Budget Speech to his 10th anniversary as Treasurer. "These 10 years," he declared, "have been years of more concentrated growth and progress than the province has seen in any other corresponding period of history."

In keeping with this thought, I should like to take the opportunity at this time to review briefly the place which the natural renewable resources of the province occupy in the economy of the nation, and the part they have played and will continue to play in our growth and development.

In order to properly assess the value of these resources, insofar as they refer to our forests, reference must be made to the industries which produce, process and manufacture the raw material. The following figures from a report by the Federal Forestry Branch, released during 1953, are informative. They cover the year 1950:

GROSS VALUE OF PRODUCTS FOR CANADA
Woods operations	$ 625,734,603
Pulp and paper	954,137,651
Sawmills	496,948,398
Wood using industries	488,911,095
Paper using industries	297,006,474
Total	$2,862,738,221

These figures clearly indicate something of the actual and potential values of our forest and the part they play in the general prosperity of the province. From the primary product there has developed an ever-expanding industrial growth using wood as the basic material and providing a wide variety of useful and practical commodities.

PULP AND PAPER INDUSTRY

The Department of Lands and Forests is mainly concerned with the pulp and paper, and the sawmill industries, because these industries are primary producers and are, through contractual agreements, under the close scrutiny of my department.

The gross value of production of the pulp and paper industry for 1951, as given by the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association, totalled $1.2 billion. This production covers the operations of 130 pulp and paper mills extending across Canada from coast to coast. It is estimated that these mills employ some 60,000 permanent workers, and provide seasonal employment for approximately 225,000. The industry's wage bill runs to $270 million annually.

Indicative of the growth of the industry is the fact that production of pulpwood in Canada has grown, since the turn of the century, from about ¼ million tons to over 9.2 million tons in 1951. The major part of this increase has taken place during the period of progress and development mentioned by the Prime Minister, so that it is evident Ontario's share of the increase is important. Actual figures provided by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show that, in 1939, Ontario production of pulpwood was 1,159,000 tons, in 1951 it had increased to 2,475,000 tons, or considerably more than double.

The 1952-53 cut of pulpwood, for which we budgeted last year, was 2,442,670 cords. This year we are budgeting on a cut of 2,810,200 cords.

The following extract from The Canada Year Book, 1952-53 is particularly interesting:

The pulp and paper industry is one of the largest contributors to the public purse in Canada. Taxes and payments of all kinds to governments run to $135 million annually, but the extent to which the industry contributes to the national welfare cannot be assessed solely on this basis.

The significance of the industry in the economy may be judged also from the fact that it accounts for about one-third of all the power used by industry and in mining; that it accounted for almost 1 out of every 8 revenue freight cars loaded in Canada in 1951; that the value of the output exceeds the mineral production of Canada including gold and all metallics, coal, gas and petroleum; that its exports are close to twice the value of wheat and all other exports of grain; and that it expends annually $72 million for chemicals and mill supplies, $44 million for fuel and $100 million for other purchases. Indeed, the gross value of the production of the industry exceeds 5 per cent. of the gross national product of Canada.

SAWMILLING INDUSTRY

From the figures which I have already quoted, it will be noted that the gross value of products for the Canadian sawmilling industry was given as $496,948,398. It will be apparent, therefore, that this industry also makes a very substantial contribution to our total economy.

Production figures for the industry in Ontario during 1952-53 were 10,128,000 cu. ft. representing 316,162,000 board feet. For 1953-54, the figures are 8,490,332 cu. ft. or 310,576,000 board feet.

OUTLOOK FOR THE FUTURE

The outlook for the pulp and paper industry is particularly bright. There is an increasing demand throughout the world for pulp and paper products of all kinds. Wood pulp, which a few years ago was used principally for paper, is now an important element in the manufacture of rayon, cellophane, plastics, building and packaging materials and many other products. Fortunately for Canada, the United States pulp and paper consumption far exceeds that country's production of pulpwood. It is apparent, therefore, that because of the present international situation, a major portion of the needs of the free world for pulp and paper will require to be supplied by Canada for some years to come. This of course presents a pleasing prospect for the industry in Ontario. Here we have abundant supplies of raw material in accessible areas and new fields of operation waiting to be developed.

During the past 10 years there has been an unprecedented demand for lumber. At the moment, however, the Ontario lumber industry is somewhat unsettled, due indirectly to a sharp curtailment of the export market. This condition occasioned some distress in the Province of British Columbia, which found itself with large inventories and a greatly curtailed export market. The result was that a substantial quantity of lumber from that province reached the Ontario market at sharply competitive prices, in some cases at prices below Ontario's cost of production. I am happy to report, however, that the quantities of western lumber on our local markets have fallen off sharply within the last few weeks. Inventory stocks of British Columbia lumber appear to be about exhausted, and mills are beginning to operate again. In the meantime Ontario's lumber industry should benefit from lessened competition. With the sustained demand for general and house construction, there is little doubt but that the industry will continue to maintain the upward trend of the last decade. May I mention in this connection that, while that may sound contradictory to the presentation of the White Paper, it is significant to note that the reference in the latter is entirely in connection with the white and red pine section of the sawmill industry.

The department's White Paper refers to the current production of red and white pine at 150 million board feet per annum being sustained for not more than 17 years. We are, of course, taking every possible step to correct the trend.

Recent financial reports issued by the pulp and paper companies indicate that, though the demand for their products has levelled off, production is still being maintained at an exceptionally high level.

There is some evidence, however, that the kraft industry in Ontario is meeting increasingly stiff competition from southern pine of the United States in the American market. Southern pine is the chief competitive product of our jack-pine pulpwood, a specie of which we have a substantial surplus over current requirements. We do not foresee that southern pine can materially affect the demand for Ontario spruce.

FISH AND WILDLIFE VALUES

Ontario's resources of fish and wildlife also have a high economic value. The commercial fishing industry gives employment to about 4,000 men, and has over $8,300,000 invested in the business. Latest figures, those for 1952-53, show a production of 38,044,049 lbs., or 19,022 tons, representing a market value of $7,500,000.

I could, of course, emphasize the part our fisheries play in the great tourist industry which occupies a high place in our national income, but I prefer to note that they have a recreational value which cannot be measured in terms of dollars and cents, but which is of tremendous importance to the health and well-being of our people.

I am glad to be able to state that our fish and wildlife resources are being maintained at a high level; indeed recent developments in the reproduction of certain new species of fish promise more, and even better, fishing in the future.

WATER VALUES

With about one-fifth of the total area of the province under water, Ontario has been blessed with a renewable resource of tremendous magnitude, and of a value which it is difficult to compute. The universal uses of water, beginning with the fact that next to air, water is the most important requirement of man, and extending through the fields of industry, agriculture, power developments, transportation, recreation and sanitation, indicate its importance to human life and progress.

Recent power developments, water diversions and the conflicting interests of diverse users make it necessary for the department to make an appraisal of the whole situation with respect to the conservation and control of our water resources. The problems involved are extremely complex and will necessitate a very careful and exacting study with a view to a proper assessment of present uses, developments, and jurisdictional powers. As indicated in the department's White Paper, a preliminary survey to determine in broad outline the extent of the problems involved is being carried on within the department.

DEPARTMENTAL TRENDS AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

I should also like to take this opportunity to provide the House with a brief summary of departmental activities during the past year, and indicate some future trends.

TIMBER MANAGEMENT

One of the most important accomplishments of the Division of Timber Management was the completion of the original forest resources inventory and the publication of final reports for the accessible areas of the province.

During the year the forest resources inventory was expanded to cover an additional area of nearly 100,000 square miles to include all lands in the province north to 52 degrees north latitude.

The Doyle Rule was discarded and replaced by the Ontario Log Rule as the official rule for the measurement of sawlogs in feet, board measure, cut on Crown lands within the province.

The Crown Timber Act, 1952, was proclaimed early in the year. It provides for the management of the forest resources on a sustained yield basis. Steps were taken to implement the requirements of the Act.

During the year, the organization of management units was completed.

Timber cut from Crown lands during the previous year and reported in the fiscal year 1953-54 was 461 million cubic feet, the highest ever recorded as coming from Crown lands in Ontario. This was about 100 million cubic feet greater than the 1946-1950 annual average.

Future trends will follow the lines indicated in the sustained yield policy of the Department, and the recommendations contained in the White Paper.

FOREST PROTECTION

The 1953 fire season demonstrated clearly the advantages of complete flexibility of aircraft, equipment and trained personnel on a province-wide basis. This embodied the organization of men and equipment for rapid transportation to any part of the province where the urgency of the situation demanded their services.

For the first time in the history of the province, 2 helicopters were in use during the 1953 fire season. Operating alone, and in co-operation with the department's regular air service, the helicopters proved their adaptability to reach and extinguish fires immediately upon discovery in a manner heretofore impossible.

The more effective use of men and equipment was demonstrated by the fact that while the number of fires during 1953 was 1,517, an increase of 250 over the average for the past 5 years, the average acreage burned was 38 as compared with an average of 42 acres for the 5 years indicated.

Employees of the department and industry were given training courses in fire-fighting. This is considered an extremely important development.

A suppression crew (and equipment) is carried on air patrol during periods of extreme hazard and this has speeded up the work of fire suppression.

Water-bombing from the Beaver aircraft was used extensively to extinguish incipient fires and in retarding the spread of others.

Specially trained crews known as "shock forces" have been developed in several districts to take initial action on fires and carry out training programmes during non-hazardous periods.

Forest insect and disease surveys to determine control possibilities are being carefully studied in co-operation with the science service, Canada. The forest insect laboratory at Sault Ste. Marie, and the forest pathological laboratory at Maple, provide excellent facilities for this important phase of co-operative forest protection.

These are agreements entered into with the Department of Agriculture of the Dominion Government, whereby the province provides the building and maintenance, while the Agricultural Department of Canada provides the staff and equipment to carry on this work. One such laboratory is situated at Sault Ste. Marie for the study of insects in connection with forestry work; the other, situated at Maple, which is north of Toronto, studies diseases in this connection. It was completed only a year ago.

REFORESTATION

The first full year of operation under the Forestry Act, 1952, which authorized the charging for nursery stock for use on private lands, resulted in a reduction in the number of trees applied for, but still left the available supply of most species over-subscribed. Some 14 million trees were furnished for private lands during the year.

A total of 9 million trees were planted on Crown lands and management units operated by the department.

An additional 7,400 acres of new lands were taken over by the department for reforestation and management under section 2 of the Forestry Act.

The regeneration and reforestation of burned or cut-over lands is receiving the attention of the division and already extensive areas in Northern Ontario have been sown from the air.

LANDS

As most hon. members know, in the northern part of the province last year we encouraged a method whereby in each of the 18 districts of Northern Ontario we had committees set up with our district foresters in charge as chairmen. The committees were attended by representatives of industry, representatives of the anglers, the Fish and Game Association, and various other bodies interested, in addition to the local Member of Parliament, to review this work and make recommendations to the department on what improvements might be made, in this particular field, and in our work in general. This year the district committees had a meeting in Toronto in which they presented the recommendations as they came from the different districts, and these were finally assimilated by the regional foresters whose recommendations, in turn, are now in the hands of the department and will receive careful attention during the coming year.

We intend to carry on these meetings during the year in order that the information and encouragement we obtain from them should be made available to the department.

The growing use and development of public lands in Ontario has necessitated a revision of the regulations under the Public Lands Act to more adequately provide for the administration of Crown lands for recreational and agricultural purposes.

Considerable progress has been made in planning for the use and recreational development of public lands. Because of the varying characteristics of the land and water areas available for public use, it is proposed to set aside certain lands in each district for specific purposes. These include lands for commercial summer camp development; summer cottage development; general public uses; parks, etc.; wilderness areas where no developments will be permitted; and deferred zones where, for various reasons, including fire hazard, development will be delayed for the time being. Areas which are at present fairly well developed will continue to be used for all kinds of recreational purposes for which they are suited.

FISH AND WILDLIFE

Perhaps the most outstanding accomplishment in fish and wildlife development has occurred in connection with trapline management by which the fur production of the province has been increased many fold during the last few years. This is illustrated by the fact that the 1952-53 production of beaver pelts was over 125,000 skins which is a record high for many years. The management programme was actively carried forward during 1953 with the restocking of marten in three areas of the Patricia district and in other selected areas.

A deer production study was carried out in Tweed district as an extension in Southern Ontario of the work on deer production in the Kenora-Fort Frances area and the Sudbury district.

Work on the training of guides has been developed to the stage where it has been possible during the year to lay the basis for guide training programmes in certain districts throughout the province. It is hoped this training will add to the efficiency of the hundreds of guides who serve the public and make for better public relations.

The major development in fisheries during the year has been the initiation of a Great Lakes fisheries research and lamprey control programme, supported jointly by grants from the Federal and Provincial Governments. The work has been under the direction of a committee including personnel from the Federal Department of Fisheries and the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests. This programme has been supported extensively by continuation of the work carried on by the province during the last 8 years and initiation of new work by the staff of the department.

Those hon. members of the House who were members of a committee on this subject will realize the seriousness of the problem, and the amount of work that is going on in an attempt to avert the destruction of the lake trout fishing in the Great Lakes, particularly Lake Huron and Lake Superior. They will be familiar with the tremendous damage that these sea lampreys are doing to this industry. We are not only working in conjunction with the Federal Government, who are making substantial contributions, both in finance and in staff, but we are holding meetings with the bordering states of the United States in the hope that at some time a treaty might be entered into as a foundation for a more effective programme. At present at least one of these states has objected to a mutual treaty in this matter, and as a result no treaty has as yet been entered into between Canada and the United States with regard to the Great Lakes fisheries.

The use of aircraft for the distribution of hatchery raised fish in various lakes has been placed on a practical and efficient basis in Ontario; this practice facilitates the rapid distribution of fish thus relieving the hazards of slow distribution and transportation from the hatchery to the receiving waters. It is satisfactory and economic, as it takes but a few men to do in a short time what formerly required the services of many men, as well as trucks and other forms of transportation.

Those of us who represent northern ridings and places closely associated with the tourist and the lumbering industries during the years will realize the importance of this development in the distribution of stock for our lakes. I personally witnessed many of the methods used in the years gone by, and I am sure that those who have had the same experience will recognize how important is the advance of the method I have just mentioned in the proper and efficient distribution of singlings and fry to our lakes.

The development of two hybrid forms of fish is of particular interest, because it shows the broad lines of development which are taking place in order to maintain good fishing conditions. One of these hybrids, commonly called "splake" is a cross between the lake trout and the speckled trout. This fish is said to embrace the most desirable characteristics of both species, and may well occupy waters not presently used by either of the parent species. There has already been a substantial preliminary experimental stocking of splake in several lakes of the central region in Ontario.

The second hybrid is a cross between a maskinonge and a pike, and this specie should add greatly to the fun of fishing.

GENERAL

The names of the remaining divisions within the administrative setup of the department, namely: Research, Surveys, Air Service, Operation and Personnel, and Accounts, indicate the specialized work of these divisions and the important part they play in the overall management plans of the department.

Research. In the field of research, for example, study has recently been directed towards the solution of forest regeneration problems in the northern pulpwood forest. A special vehicle to assist in forest fire control was designed and developed in the laboratories of the research station at Maple. General fisheries research problems of importance to the department are being carried on at the new fisheries research laboratory at Maple. All of this work is pertinent to the successful carrying out of work by other divisions.

Surveys. During the year the Division of Surveys, among other things, made surveys of base and meridian lines in the northwestern portion of the province north of the Albany River to provide control for the mapping by aerial photography in connection with the forest resources inventory.

Operation and Personnel. The recent sportsman's show with its emphasis on conservation is typical of the co-operation the department is receiving from those most interested in the protection of the resources. This co-operation extends to all phases of woods operations, to tourist outfitters, conservation authorities and to many other organized conservation groups.

Departmental policies are based on sound conservation principles and the division of operation and personnel is carrying on a broad and effective programme of conservation education by means of every media through which it is possible to inform the public. Conservation education is extremely important because public support is an essential factor in the success of all administrative efforts.

BUDGET-FINANCIAL

This year for the first time, the Estimates before the House for the Department of Lands and Forests show the proposed allocation under the headings of the five main services for which the department is responsible. Allocations for the other services are shown in the statement supplied to members of the House, together with the percentage allocations of the totals included in those of the main services.

It will be noted that the allotment to timber management of $2,350,000 is less than the allotment for forest protection ($4,760,000). Management of our timber resources entails forest protection and reforestation, so that the amount set aside for timber management actually aggregates an expenditure of $8,600,000 in the next fiscal year.

The total amount asked for is $12,760,000 which is $150,000 above that voted last year. This increase will be devoted wholly to timber management in order to at least initiate the many long term recommendations set out in the White Paper. In this connection it will be recalled that in his recent Budget Address to the House the Prime Minister, speaking of the department's White Paper, stated that "additional funds will be allocated as this new programme takes more definite shape." I am happy to state that approval has been given to a programme necessitating an additional expenditure of $2 millions over a 5 year period, to implement the recommendations outlined in the department's presentation. That has been quite successful, and we are hopeful in the days ahead that these units will provide, together with other programmes, for sufficient wood to maintain in perpetuity, the industries I have mentioned, plus many others in that great area.

After 5 years' operations and beginning last year, it was announced another 12 units were established along a similar line in the province, in varying degrees of maturity; some contained less mature wood which would require immediate attention; others would require attention 10 years hence, and still others, 20 years hence.

This year, we are commencing with a vote of $150,000 to pay some attention to these management units, particularly the 12 I have mentioned, and as I mentioned in the House last year, in a period of 5 years, we are lining up a programme—beginning now—which will amount to an expenditure of $5 million in connection with such methods as we can discover, and to know how to carry out silviculture practices, regeneration practices, and everything you want to name, to add to the productive capacity of the areas which I have mentioned.

At the end of 5 years, it is proposed to review the results of these expenditures in the light of what has transpired over the years, to see if we are getting proper value for our money, and to see if we can go forward from then onward to ensure a proper stand of timber which will increase the prosperity of each citizen of this province.

Typical of the growth and development of the department and the value of the resources entrusted to its care is the fact that expenditures in 1944 were but $3,600,000. Today's Estimates of $12,760,000 represent an increase during the 10 year period of 354 per cent.

However, the ordinary revenue of the department in 1944 was $6,500,000. The estimated revenue for the next fiscal year is $16,719,000, an increase of 257 per cent.

CONCLUSION

Analyzing the situation as it affects values, revenue, and expenditures, and having in mind the information contained in the recently completed forest resources inventory, I am confident that Ontario's forest capital is capable of greater development, particularly in the production of pulpwood; by increased use of certain species for which heretofore there has been little or no demand; by extending operations to areas now considered inaccessible; by sound management practices and by the reduction of losses from fire, insects and disease.

To attain this desirable end, long term programmes embodying every advance in scientific and practical management, have been instituted. We are conscious of the fact that it will be necessary in many cases to build up what has been destroyed or depleted over many years of unwise use; to replace, where we have been unduly prodigal, and to co-operate more efficiently with nature in her plans to maintain and replenish the gifts she has bestowed upon us.

To these ends we are directing all our energies. We have enlisted the services of men of outstanding ability in their respective fields to counsel and advise us, and we will explore every possibility and potentiality which will ensure the economic stability of the trust for which we are responsible, in the best interests of all the people of the province.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 91, Main Office, $1,726,400.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Mr. Chairman, with your permission, I would like to make a few remarks about the conditions in Northwestern Ontario.

One subject has been brought to the attention of the hon. Minister over some months, which is relatively important, to the settlers in the north—I am not just sure what attention it has received here. I realize the hon. Minister has been away from his office unavoidably for some months, and perhaps he has not had an opportunity to study this and make a statement about it.

I refer to the tragedies which occurred in the north on two or three occasions last summer when youngsters wandered away from summer resorts. By the time the parents noticed their absences, they had become hopelessly lost. On two occasions, two of the children had been mangled by timber wolves, and, of course, died from the effects of the attacks and exposure.

At that time, through the press and other means, I and others in the district, suggested that, inasmuch as these searches for people who become lost—whether they be children or adults—were extremely expensive, a plan might be worked out whereby an organized search party could be kept available under the direction of the Regional Forester in a particular region. The reason behind that was, on two separate occasions where children lost their lives this past summer, it seems to me it was not from want of diligence in the search on the part of the volunteer searchers, but it was simply a matter that many amongst those who did volunteer were not experienced woodsmen. Although they put their time in willingly, paid their own personal expenses while on the search, the result was not very satisfactory.

Finally, in one particular case, it was only when they brought in experienced woodsmen that the body of a child was found. We think if a search had been organized with two or three highly-skilled woodsmen, who could be assembled on an emergency call, and be flown into an area, or transported by automobile or boat, immediately a person becomes lost, it might save a great deal of expense, and result in the saving of lives.

The hon. Minister has referred again to the lumber industry in the northern part of the province particularly, as he did in the White Paper some days ago. Mr. Chairman, we have been discussing this matter in the Committee on Lands and Forests, and Mr. Sharpe, of the Timber Management Division, gave us an excellent outline of the picture of that industry. It is causing a great deal of concern. I repeat what I said some weeks ago, there is going to have to be some adjustment in the price of dues on pine timber for lumber purposes, and this province is going to have to support the northwestern part of Ontario in its appeals to the Board of Railway Commissioners and others, for adjustments of freight rates for the movement of timber products.

Another thing, which remains a matter of extreme concern, is the proper development of spruce timber areas north of the Canadian National Railway, in the northwestern section of the province. Great sections still contain standing timber for want of proper development.

After I resume my seat, I would appreciate it if the hon. Minister would outline to me, and to the hon. members of the House, what steps he thinks are necessary now that these management units have been established, for interested parties who require concessions, or licences, or whatever it might be, to undertake the development of a particular section. It remains most disconcerting to all of us that large areas in that part of Ontario are still suffering the ravages of the spruce budworm, and there is still the situation of millions of cords of matured timber waiting to be cut.

Another matter, which somewhat ties in with the activities of the Department of Mines, as it is now functioning, is that of access roads. In the past, there has been considerable difficulty between the public and the lumber companies and the pulp and paper companies, over the use of roads in relatively inaccessible areas of the north. The position the lumber companies and the pulp and paper companies sometimes take is readily understandable. When they are held responsible for fires which might occur in their areas, and might be caused by careless tourists or other travellers, it still remains a necessary function that more accessibility should be prevalent throughout this part of the province. Through the activities of the department, and the committee in the department which has been considering this matter, I am hopeful that something can be worked out which will relieve the companies of a large share of responsibility in these matters, and provide more accessibility to many sections of Northwestern Ontario. It is not only important to us, from a recreation standpoint, or from an access standpoint, but it is just as important to the department itself if these roads become more widely used, and justification is found for further extension and further accessibility for the department's own fire-prevention and fire-fighting equipment.

Last summer, as the hon. Minister has outlined, the department began a study of the zoning of tourist areas, in charge of a forester in a particular area. Those of us who are members of this House, from the northern part of the province, sat on this committee and a great deal of valuable data was gathered, and presented by the foresters to the officials in Toronto.

The zoning of tourist areas presents a particular, and somewhat peculiar situation because of the fact that we do have the problem of providing protection to certain areas, where more experienced operators might be denied the right of coming in and establishing a better class of camps.

However, the situation as of the present time in Northwestern Ontario—particularly in my riding—is that ownership of tourist camps is falling more and more into the hands of American capitalists. I have no objection to the investment of American capital in this province, or any other in Canada, but I do feel that this important industry, which is so dependent on our natural resources, should not be controlled largely by people who are not citizens of our country.

I repeat again a recommendation I made when speaking in reply to the Speech from the Throne, that we take into consideration some form of financial assistance to Canadian citizens who are desirous of establishing in this industry, or expanding where expansion is known to be justified.

I am also concerned with the salaries which are being paid, particularly to some of the important officials of this department. I submit that the salaries which are paid to regional foresters and district foresters, particularly, are entirely inadequate in the light of the responsibilities these men have, and in the light of the importance of their duties, and responsibilities regarding the future of our province. The responsibilities they undertake, and the recommendations they make today, will have consequences not only for this year, but for many years ahead. I feel we would be in a much better position in future years if we could recruit the very best type of professional men in this field, and, at the same time, prevent as much as possible losing these men to industry at the present time. If you consider the salaries of men in industry, who have like responsibilities as those in the forest industry, I think you will find the forestry men are entitled to special consideration.

And again I say, as I have said every year, that the salaries of the law-enforcement officers of this division, together with our provincial police, for the type of duties they have to perform in the north, and the difficulties under which they work, are insufficient.

In the White Paper there were two suggestions, and I realize they were only suggestions. One was, the hon. Minister assured us, that the angling licence would not be considered at this time. I suggest again, Mr. Chairman, that the levy of a $1 licence for angling would not be tolerated by the people of Ontario, because this is the one thing which I feel we should retain in perpetuity for our children, the right and privilege to fish to their hearts' content.

Another matter which has caused a great deal of concern . . . and while there has again come an assurance from the department that nothing might be done immediately, but which is under consideration . . . is the abolition of certain fish hatcheries across the province. I think the department should be very cautious, indeed, in considering at all the abolishment of fish hatcheries. It took many years to get them established. While we respect and listen with great interest to the opinions and theories of some of the experts who work in the department and advise us about these things, even they admit that many of their theories on biology and other things are yet only theories and they have not had years of experience that might be useful in forming a permanent opinion on some of the subjects.

I know that the people in the north—and I may say the people right across the province—who are engaged in fishing as a sport, or as a commercial venture, would view with grave concern any attempt at this time to close off hatcheries, especially in the absence of positive biological information that they are not necessary or economical.

Again, in the studies of our wildlife generally, we hear sometimes glowing reports of the increasing number of moose and deer, and the increase or decrease in various kinds of fur-bearing animals. If you talk to any of the old-timers—after all you must respect their opinion, because they have lived through many of these years and have the basis of experience for many of the opinions they express—each time you discuss a subject like that with a man who is now 65 or 75 years of age or upwards, who has lived in that country all his life, he will remind you time and time again that we should not tamper too much with the natural processes of the forests. The reason he gives is that he can go back over some years and recall for you, times of plenty and times of scarcity, even before we had as many experts as we have involved in this work at the present time.

I do not for one moment suggest that the work of these men is not valuable. Indeed, I think it is, but I believe, too, that it is going to be, perhaps, another generation before the results of their studies will have any great import in this particular field.

There is one subject I had hoped we would get to in Lands and Forests Committee before this time, but I am sure the hon. Minister will be quite willing to see that the subject is fully discussed in the Standing Committee before the House adjourns. Of course, I am not entirely aware of when the House will prorogue, but this is one subject I think in Lands and Forests which should be fully discussed. I refer, Mr. Chairman, to the Mississagi operation.

I realize again that the hon. Minister who is now in charge of this department did not have the responsibility of setting up this operation, and, through no fault of his own, has been out of touch with the situation for some months recently. However, there has been a great number of questions asked about the Mississagi operation. No doubt, hon. members have noted the lengthy question I had put on the Order paper about it.

I think, Mr. Chairman, that the whole operation should be thoroughly reviewed before the Standing Committee on Lands and Forests. There should be a complete accounting, a complete report submitted to the House during the committee, or after the House prorogues, by direct communication with each member, containing the activities of this operation year by year during its existence.

In April, 1950, a question was asked in the House in Votes and Proceedings, No. 35, about this particular operation. The hon. Minister at that time stated that the company, which was organized to handle the produce of salvage operation, was not a Crown company.

I was informed today by an official of the department that the company was first organized, more or less on private capital lines, but financed somewhat by the government and organized as a stock or limited company. I think the basis of the organization of this company should be explained to us, particularly since there was provincial financing of the operation, along with a complete outline of its activities.

One of the things which has caused some question, and which is actually a matter of perhaps submitting a report about it, but still a matter of some concern, was that during the function of the Mississagi operation, the province or its agency, or perhaps both, saw fit to stop the operations and seize certain assets of some companies and operators in this scheme.

I am told, only actual timber was seized. In some cases, both timber and equipment were seized, and, in other cases, it was necessary to seize the entire scheme. I think there, too, there should be a report to the House and to the people who had money invested in these operations, so that we would have a complete account of the stewardship of the department or its agency, as the case may be, in the handling of the capital investments of these people.

In any woods operation, this House well knows, there is a considerable amount of money invested, before a log is ever taken out of the bush, in roads, dams, plant, surveys, equipment and so on. I do not know whether the hon. Minister can do it tonight. I do not suppose that he would want to and I certainly would not expect him to. But I would like to see this whole matter reviewed in committee by the financial officers and the technical officers of the department who had the responsibility of seeing the operation through from beginning to end.

The importance of this report is emphasized, I say again, Mr. Chairman, by the numerous requests we have had in our offices for information. I have looked back in Hansard, back to questions, and I have read everything which has been said in the House about it, and a good deal that has been said out of the House in the press from time to time, but there still seems to be a certain void of information there which could properly, and very effectively, be reported to us by officers of the Department in Standing Committee. I sincerely hope the hon. Minister will call a special meeting of the committee any morning this week for the purpose of having a review made of this entire subject.

Those are the main points of my remarks tonight. I would like, as I say, some review of this Mississagi operation, and some consideration to other matters I have raised here tonight concerning search parties, the lumber industry, the development of spruce areas, our access roads, salaries of certain staffs, fish hatcheries and so on, and with those remarks I will conclude.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Can we have the assurance of the hon. Minister that there will be a meeting? I imagine it could easily be arranged some morning this week during which the matter of the Mississagi salvage can be gone into in detail.

HON. W. S. GEMMELL: I can give assurance to the Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) and to the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) that I am quite prepared to have the matter of the Mississagi salvage operation discussed in the Committee on Lands and Forests.

I might say in that connection that we are having a meeting of the Fish and Game Committee on Wednesday morning, so that this will close us off for that morning. Secondly, I agreed at the last meeting to provide the committee with all the information from the departmental officials in connection with the Hearst situation and the export of raw wood in particular. As a matter of fact, on the morning when they presented their brief, an opportunity was not given, on account of time, for the Deputy Minister, or the accountant, or the Timber Management Division, to express their views on what had transpired in connection with the Hearst area. I thought, in order that the committee might make a recommendation to the House that they should be heard. This also applies to the Mississagi salvage operations.

I might say that a complete accounting will be given when the whole operation of the Mississagi salvage is complete. My information at the moment is—

MR. OLIVER: When do you anticipate that?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I believe there is 9 million feet of lumber to be disposed of. The Great Northern Woods project is now a closed book. When all the wood is disposed of, a final accounting will be published of this whole matter.

The present Estimates are going to show a net cost to the government in this salvage operation of about $840,000, or $860,000, possibly. In the course of that operation, which should salvage over 300 million board feet of pine lumber, 112,000 cords of pulpwood, we opened up 139 miles of all-weather roads and 400 miles of bush roads; in other words, we opened up 1,000 square miles of timber land in this country and made accessible over 650,000 acres, for management, and for the tourist industry. So that in the long run, I think we can honestly assume that there was no loss to the province. In fact, the benefits which will accrue from the development that took place will adequately take care of any costs to the Consolidated Revenue Fund by the province.

I assure the hon. member it will be discussed in committee with an up-to-date record of all the lumber produced, the manner in which it was handled and the type of contract we had. I believe the hon. member for Kenora brought up the question of seizing certain operations. In no case did we seize an operation. The J. D. Campbell Lumber Company was financially in difficulties, and we took over and held for escrow all the stock of the company, and carried on the operation.

Nothing was seized in this connection, but I am not certain that the operation will end up as a successful project financially.

Then there was another contract that was entered into by a man named Lahti, who became financially embarrassed, and the government had to assume responsibility. This gentleman had two types of contracts: one for cutting the logs and putting them into the water, and one of cutting the logs, sawing them up and disposing of them; in fact I recall there was a third type of contract. Well, we did not seize it: we took all the logs that were then in the hands of this operator, and proceeded to process them, and put them through the North Bay yard, because we had substantial sums invested in the project. We advance funds to all these projects.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Did you take over all his equipment too?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: By agreement. He signed an agreement to allow us to use, not all, but some of his equipment to carry on the processing of his lumber and get it into the North Bay yard. But he signed an agreement. It was entirely in co-operation with him.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, this salvaging operation was something entirely new in our province. I do not think such a project had ever been attempted before. Hon. members will recollect the circumstances. In the spring of 1948, there was a devastating fire in the Mississauga forest reserve, involving the possible loss of millions of board feet of the finest timber in Ontario. At that time the government decided, and with the full acquiescence of the Legislature, to go into that area in a salvaging operation.

We invested from the Consolidated Revenue Fund, a sum of approximately $1½ million of actual cash. It was not done on a loan basis; it was taken from the Consolidated Revenue Fund and invested in this salvaging project. Out of that salvaging operation has come 300 million board feet—perhaps a little more—which would, under the old system, have been entirely lost to the province. Of the $1½ million we put up in cash, we hope for a return of approximately half. In the meantime, we have the benefit of roads and other development which has been carried out in the area.

May I remind hon. members that this had to be done, if it was going to be done at all, as an emergency. The fire burned over valuable timber. There were no preparations for salvage; there were no plans; there was no organization. It was felt, however, that it would be almost criminal to lose the immense amount of timber which would have been destroyed in that fire, unless it had been salvaged.

That plan, Mr. Chairman, has worked out a good deal better than we had any cause to anticipate or hope for at that time. Having been thrown into an operation of such magnitude, and of such a kind, without any roads, and without any preparation, I certainly anticipated that the $1½ million we had put into it would probably be written off in the operation. I am delighted to know that such is not the case. It appears we should get back about half of the original amount which was placed in the operation, and, in addition, we have the forest roads and other assets which are probably worth the balance, and represent a good start in connection with matters relating to forest management for the area.

This great operation was something which was entirely new, an experiment carried out by the government to salvage the great timber losses that otherwise would have resulted from that fire.

MR. WREN: May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) one more question? I understood him to say it was going to committee; however, this Campbell, I think he said, and Lahti—was it?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Lahti.

MR. WREN: These men, whose equipment and assets were taken over, as the hon. Minister says: do they get a statement every so often containing information as to what has been done?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Lahti does.

MR. WREN: When could they expect to get settled up and get their money out of it? Or will they?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Lahti was a financial failure.

MR. WREN: He was a failure?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Yes.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on the Vote for Main Office, on a matter of policy, I would like to present a point of view, and enquire whether the government would not consider adopting an entirely different policy than it is now pursuing. In raising the question of policy, I want to point out that the things which are objectionable, in my opinion, are not those things which are the responsibility of or the fruit of the deeds of this government alone but which ante-date this government by a great many years.

I think hon. members will all agree with the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) who, in his introductory remarks, emphasized the great importance of the forest industry to the economy of the province. We all agree with that, and precisely because it is so fundamental to the economy of the province, it has been a subject which has agitated the province from time to time, throughout the years since the beginning of organized forest cutting. I think the report of the Royal Commission, tracing the history of forest activity, points this out. There were a lot of misdeeds, some wilful, some unintentional, which militated against the best interests of the people.

In 1941 Mr. Drew, who was then the Leader of the Conservative group, at that time the official Opposition, made statements which left a very deep impression upon the minds of the people of this province. For instance, he pointed out that in one year, in 1937, the Liberal Government, in a period of 6 months, granted to 8 companies areas which contained a combined total of over 15 million acres of forest land, without public tender or competition of any kind.

That is an astonishing fact, and since the statement was never challenged, I assume it to be a correct statement of fact; in other words, that it was possible, under another government, to give concessions of this magnitude, and establish veritable empires in the north, without tender, and without any competition.

That was a serious situation, and in order to cope with it, Mr. Drew, on behalf of the Conservative Party, advanced a policy which was, in my opinion, the soundest policy on the handling of our forestry resources ever offered in the history of organized government in the province. What was it? His plan was that we establish in Ontario an impartial commission, such as Hydro, to handle our forest wealth, to administer it on behalf of the people, to guarantee that the maximum price would be obtained, guarantee a perpetual harvest of our forest crops, and guarantee employment opportunities for all time to come.

Mr. Chairman, I think that was an excellent proposition, and, indeed, it became one of the 22 points of the Conservative programme in 1943, and resulted in a great many people voting for the Conservative Party.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, may I answer the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg)?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) knows where I am heading.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not want to interrupt the hon. member but he has asked that same question every year for the last 10 years, and it has always been answered. I have answered it each year during the last 10 years.

Of course, the hon. member's question boils down to this; why is there not a commission? May I answer the hon. member, as I have answered every year now for a number of years?

After all, 85 per cent. of Ontario's land is still in the Crown, and, of course, could conceivably be the subject matter of commission operation, if such was put into effect. However, I do not think that would be at all satisfactory. I think Mr. Drew came to that conclusion himself. That idea was advanced in the days when he was in Opposition, and I find that Opposition members say some rather funny things at times.

MR. SALSBERG: Did the hon. Prime Minister, when he was in Opposition?

HON. MR. FROST: I never did myself, but I have heard some pretty funny ones.

MR. SALSBERG: Then Mr. Drew did.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not think it is feasible, nor is it "democratic"—which is a word that the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) uses a great deal—to hand over the management of 85 per cent. of our land area, involving the interests of hundreds of thousands of our citizens, to the control of a commission.

Mr. Chairman, I think that is the answer. On coming into office, and looking at this problem, you at once see that if you take the management of the people's affairs from their hands, and put it into those of a commission, regardless of how efficient that commission may be, you are placing the lives of the people under a system against which they have no appeal.

MR. SALSBERG: What about Hydro?

HON. MR. FROST: I think the answer is plain. We have endeavoured to meet this problem, through an Advisory Committee, through consultants to the department, through sales by tender, and through Committees of the House. In this way we give the fullest opportunity for hon. members to examine into the workings of the department—and by means of a White Paper, which was submitted to the House, and to which hon. members have been giving great consideration—we are attempting to find the answer to the problem, rather than to place it in the hands of a commission which is presumed to be all-perfect, but could not do a job of that sort efficiently.

Mr. Chairman, I have given that answer to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) on a number of occasions.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, you see I still have hope of convincing the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) that it is worthwhile adhering to policies one advocates in the Opposition, when one gets into power. One of the great difficulties we encounter is that political Parties forget their policies, and the advocacy of them in which they engaged when they are in Opposition, once they get into power. If the hon. Prime Minister would practice what he preached when he was in Opposition, we might have better government, and better administration. I still hope he will see the correctness of the stand he took in former days, when he was over on this side, and supported Mr. Drew. And if I wanted to "rub it in," I could quote from a speech the hon. Prime Minister made at the Head of the Lakes on this question.

HON. MR. FROST: Not on commissions, surely?

MR. SALSBERG: The local press there carried a very full report.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Not at the Head of the Lakes.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, at the Head of the Lakes.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Go ahead and quote it.

MR. SALSBERG: In which the present Prime Minister advocated the very thing Mr. Drew advocated.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not think I ever said such a thing in my life.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, I will get it for the hon. Prime Minister. I think that 2 years ago he had forgotten that he ever adopted a bill to establish a forestry commission, and he questions my statement. I had to go and get the Statutes and show it to him. I do not blame the hon. Prime Minister for forgetting these things. According to Freud, we forget the things we do not want to remember. We usually remember what we want to remember.

That was not only in the 22 points. This promise—one of the very few to be implemented—was acted upon in the letter and the spirit of that pledge—point 7 of the 22 points—as soon as the Conservatives came to power. In 1944 the bill was introduced and it looked as if we were really starting a new page in the administration of this great natural resource. The Liberals, who now seem to agree with the hon. Prime Minister that it would be wrong and "undemocratic" to appoint a commission, at that time voted with the government. They could not oppose such a democratic procedure, and the CCF agreed, and my colleague from Bellwoods and I were very happy because everybody was supporting the government in its efforts to implement the pledge made to the people. The pledge was eminently promising, but obviously, Mr. Chairman, it was too good to be true. I am not sure that Prime Minister Drew realized it was a mistake. I rather suspect the pressure brought to bear upon him was so great that he and the government found it irresistible.

HON. MR. FROST: There has never been any pressure on me about the matter. I do not agree with it. I do not think it is workable or feasible, and therefore I will not do it.

MR. SALSBERG: I said the pressure was on Prime Minister Drew. He was the Prime Minister at the time. He undoubtedly felt the pressure, with the result that instead of implementing the Act he appointed a Royal Commission to start the whole thing over again.

HON. MR. FROST: The commission reported against it.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not ready to accept every recommendation made by the Royal Commission and I am not asking for the complete implementation of what they recommended. Some of the recommendations were very good.

I maintain, Mr. Chairman, that the history of the management of our forests is a history of commission after commission. In 1927 speeches were made by the late Mr. Finlayson, then the Minister of Lands and Forests in a Conservative Government, speeches which, when compared with the present utterances by hon. members of the government sound so similar that it is almost amazing. He said we had to discuss our forestry resources and he, in 1927, introduced legislation which resulted in a commission being appointed.

Then came a Liberal Government and hon. members heard what Mr. Drew said about them, and what they did in 1927. Then the Conservative Party came to power and we had another commission. And now we have a White Paper. And where do we go from here? I am a very moderate person. I am not going to say what the former Leader of the Liberal Party said about the Ontario forest industry and its management. He said "The people of Ontario had been sold out to the robber barons." I have never said that. But I do say that all previous governments have pursued a wrong course. I argue over a fundamental policy, not a picayune thing which one government after another has done. What we need is a change of management which will make impossible such things as the sale of 15 million acres, without tenders, without competition, and mostly to United States concerns.

There was a man who has unfortunately passed to the "Great Beyond," who said 3 years ago at a meeting in London, Ontario, that the policy of waste applied to our northern forest resources was dictated by "monopolistic robber barons of Wall Street, St. James Street and Bay Street." That was not said by me, it was said by a man who was a multimillionaire in his own right, a man who knew the timber situation. He said "the pulp and paper industry, with unwarrantable provincial support, were squandering the forests, and that the 65,000 square miles of merchantable timber in Northern Ontario were now completely under the domination of these men." This is what was said by a man in the forestry business. At this time, I cannot refrain from bringing to the attention of the House these basic issues. In doing so, I am not taking exception to this government alone, for I think this applies to all former governments in the province. I suggest to the hon. Prime Minister that mismanagement of the forests of Ontario will continue, unless, and until the government lives up to the promise made to the people, and carries out its pledge of a Forestry Commission like Hydro to provide really good administration of forest resources. Unless and until the government does that, we will go on from one commission to another, from one investigation to another, and more and more waste and mismanagement will result.

Vote 91 carried.

On Vote 92, item 2, Ground Surveys, $175,000.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: Does that represent the total cost of ground surveys, or are these surveys performed by officials of the department? Would their salaries be included in this sum?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: That represents the work we give to other surveyors throughout the province, largely in connection with summer resort places, and that sort of thing.

Vote 93 carried.

On Vote 94, Basic Organization, District Offices, $8,715,000.

MR. CLIVER: On Vote 94, I want to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) a question relating to something which was mentioned in the White Paper he presented to the House a few days ago. It is suggested in that White Paper that at least 6 of our fish hatcheries are not giving a good account of themselves, and may well be abolished. What I want to know is this: Is there a movement on the part of the Department of Lands and Forests away from fish hatcheries as a means of propagating fish, or were these particular hatcheries not considered to be giving sufficient value? Was their output not enough? What is the thinking of the department in relation to fish hatcheries in general?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: That subject was dealt with in an appendix to the White Paper, and represented the views of people in our department, and of biologists working with us. First of all, in relation to the recommendation that these hatcheries be closed, I believe every one was a hatchery commenced by the Federal Government somewhere around the 1860's and turned over to us about 1900. They have been operated ever since entirely in connection with the commercial fisheries in the Great Lakes. Of course, as a result of the sea lamprey and the decline in the value of the Great Lakes fisheries, the worth of these hatcheries, so far as the biologists are concerned, has diminished. Their opinion was that they were no longer giving us a good return, or at least as good a return for our dollar as they should. I think it was explained in the Lands and Forests Committee, by the chief of the division, that some of the hatcheries were practically out of operation last year because it was not possible to get the spawn—so marked was the scarcity of fish in the Great Lakes—to maintain the hatchery in successful operation.

We have made no decision whatever regarding the closing of these hatcheries, however. It is an expression of opinion on the part of the biologists that, to carry out certain programmes they have in mind requires a certain amount of money, and corresponding economies might be achieved by closing these hatcheries, and a further sum raised by the imposition of a $1 fishing licence. We are not convinced those recommendations are entirely acceptable. We are feeling our way. We think a hatchery provides the same facilities as a nursery with regard to forestry, inasmuch as they furnish new fish for waters in which they can reproduce themselves. The work of the hatchery extends beyond the field with which the biologist is concerned, and we are not convinced at the moment that the closing of these hatcheries is going to serve a useful purpose. The specific hatcheries mentioned in the White Paper are hatcheries which are providing fingerlings for the commercial fishing on the Great Lakes.

MR. OLIVER: Was the production from these hatcheries, in general, down last year, as compared with the year before?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I believe the game fish production was down, but the commercial production has risen. We have been carrying out a programme of renovating at least one of the older hatcheries each year. This year, I believe, the major programme is being carried on in connection particularly with the Sault Ste. Marie hatchery. There are certain factors which make the supply of fish scarce there this year.

MR. SALSBERG: On this subject of fish hatcheries: I would like to appeal to the hon. Minister to do something to improve the fishing conditions in the lower Muskoka area where the mass of the people go for their vacations. Those who can fly in with airplanes and fish in virgin waters find no trouble in getting bites, but the ordinary working man who takes his family out on vacation to the lower Muskoka district finds that the rivers and lakes have been fished out, and he has a hard time getting a bite. I feel we do not do enough to replenish the waters which are being fished out year by year.

I am not raising this from the point of view of the hotel and camp operators, though they should be considered. I am thinking primarily of the man and his family who drive up in their "jalopies"—or maybe in better cars—for a week's or fortnight's vacation and find there are no fish for them to catch. When I was up the Haliburton area with a number of other working folk I found the fishing none too good. And, of course, the hotel keepers there, and the camp operators, were sure the hon. Prime Minister, who represented them, would look into it.

I am appealing for all the people in that category who really need assistance.

While the hon. Minister is about to rise, may I ask whether a stop has been put to the landing of United States craft in the northwest area of the province, around Lake-of-the-Woods, where airplanes would come in, in large numbers, and their occupants would not even buy a licence, nor spend any money in the vicinity, as they had all their food and tackle with them, and they would land, and fish around for a day, and then get back into their amphibian planes, and go back from whence they came. Has action been taken to stop the procedure?

Above all, Mr. Chairman, I am concerned with my first question about replenishing our lakes and rivers in the lower part of the Muskoka area.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: The hon. member probably went fishing on the wrong day or the wrong time of the day. His statement about the scarcity of fish indicates the importance of increasing the production of the fish hatcheries, because we find, particularly in that connection, that they catch the fish as fast as we put them in.

There are problems in connection with it, which are being studied, and we are not too sure as yet just where we are going. We are more or less consolidating our position, and trying to find out definitely whether we are spending our money in the proper manner, and carrying the plans out adequately, and one method of doing that is to increase the number of biologists on our staff, particularly the field staff, which has now grown to 34, operating in different districts of the province. Their first duty is to examine the various lakes and regions, and in an endeavour to meet the problems with which they are faced, they are making recommendations to the department as to the proper methods of replenishing the stock, or whether we should take the coarse fish out, and various different methods.

As the information becomes more available, we are making an assessment of this picture, and I am sure the situation will continue to improve, as indications are it has in the past year or two, because the reports this past year have been exceedingly encouraging in regard to the work being carried out by our Fish and Wildlife Division, and particularly that of the biologists whom we have added to the staff.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): On Vote 94, item 3: there is one portion of this statement reading as follows:

"Miscellaneous, Including Legal Expenses, $110,000."

Just above that, three or four lines, we find an item "Rent, $5,000." The rent is outlined in detail at $5,000, but here we have "Miscellaneous, Including Legal Expenses, $110,000." Would it not be possible to give us more information on this item, and break it down, separating "Legal Expenses" from what might be called "Miscellaneous Items"?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: My accountant tells me our total legal bills would probably amount to in the neighbourhood of $30,000.

We have on our staff, Mr. Yoerger, the head of the division, on a salary basis. Then we obtain legal services in the fields where infractions take place.

In connection with timber licences, and the review of certain matters of that kind, we bring in outstanding legal counsel to assist us, men who are experienced in this type of work, and who are given a special fee in connection with that work.

MR. GRUMMETT: Does not the hon. Minister think it would be advisable to set out an item of that magnitude as a separate item, instead of lumping it in as "Miscellaneous"?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I can have that for you in committee, if you like.

MR. GRUMMETT: That will be satisfactory.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I was wondering if the hon. Minister will tell us how we can ascertain from these Estimates how many buildings the department has built this year, or how many fish hatcheries, or just what is being done in a construction way? We cannot tell from these Estimates.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: All our construction work is done by the Department of Public Works, or in conjunction with it, and the Vote is in its Estimates.

I think last year the expenditure was in the neighbourhood of $1½ million. This year, it will be about $700,000 or $800,000.

We have two methods of doing that. One is where we request Public Works to construct the building, and the project then is entirely the responsibility of the Department of Public Works. The other are projects which they supervise and for which they supply the funds, but the work is done by our men in their spare time. I believe they are called "l.a.f. projects."

MR. OLIVER: Has the hon. Minister listed the projects which are being proceeded with this year?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: That will be in the Public Works Estimates. The specific projects will all be listed. I can get a list for the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

Vote 94 agreed to.

Vote 95, Salaries and so forth, Maintenance and Operating, $800,000, agreed to.

On Vote 96, Public Information on Fire Prevention, Fish and Wildlife, Reforestation and Timber Management, Salaries and so forth, Maintenance and Operating, $108,000.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT: On Vote 96, Mr. Chairman, I presume that is to cover departmental documents such as silva and other documents of that nature?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: That is correct.

Vote 96 agreed to.

Vote 97, Ar Service Branch, Salaries, Permanent and Temporary, $420,000; Travelling Expenses, $16,000; Maintenance and Operating, $340,000.

MR. OLIVER: Somewhere I wanted to ask the hon. Minister this question: In the White Paper, on page 15, he refers to the saw-milling industry, and he says, in the last three lines of the second paragraph:

Measures will be taken in the next few years to provide for the continued existence of the saw-milling industry within the province.

May I ask the hon. Minister if he will outline to the House the nature of those measures which are to be taken?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: The people who examined this, include our departmental officials, and others whom we asked for advice, in connection with the preparation of the White Paper, and their advice was that at the present rate of operations, the red and white pine saw-milling industry could very possibly come to an end in 17 or 20 years. We are attempting to slow up these operations as much as possible. The hon. Leader of the Opposition can well realize the difficulties in connection with it. There are two main ones. The first is this: you may be operating in an area where the timber is mature or over-mature, so it does not seem wise to stop the operations, because it is on the down grade. That is particularly true in the North Bay district, where the large stand of pine in the Sturgeon watershed, for instance, was at that stage.

Then we are limiting the diameter sizes of the trees which can be cut. White pine is limited now to 18 inches, and red pine to 16 inches. The diameter sizes limit the amount of the trees which can be cut, in order to allow them to attain their greatest timber size.

Certain mills, as pointed out in the White Paper, will be covered first of all by importation of logs from Quebec, which still has a substantial number of acres available, and certain areas accessible, but on which cutting rights have not been given. Some of the mills on the Ottawa River are receiving a portion of their supply in that way.

Then, as will appear obvious, we are going to ask our saw-mills to switch their cutting to other species, as well as the white and red pine. As a matter of fact, a large share of the production over and above the 150 million feet which I mentioned, is jackpine and spruce. We intend to encourage that. We have issued directives, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition is well aware, whereby we do not allow the operating companies to use, for pulping purposes, a log over 9 inches, and in some cases, 8 inches, and we ask them to distribute them to the sawmilling industry.

The difficulty there is they say, "What is the cost going to be, and who is going to cut it?" That creates some difficulties.

But the hon. members can also realize there is difficulty in handling that, because there may not be a sufficient number of logs to warrant economic production. I had a case where the operators have come to the office in connection with their problem, concerning the supply of various kinds of material, which involved piling, ties, and lumber, and all the various products outside the pulp and paper field, and we have sent them into areas where the companies have offered to co-operate, and supply them with the logs they say they cannot economically take out, because there is not sufficient to warrant production.

So our directives now read there must be 25 logs to an acre, and 5,000 in a logging chance, or the company does not have to follow the directive.

That was done on the recommendation of our foresters, among whom is one of the best the department ever had, a man by the name of Matthews, who realized that difficulty, and thought it would be impossible to enforce the directives beyond that point.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister would, while on the saw-logging industry, say what he thinks about the present dues on timber for saw-logs?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: The question of dues, Mr. Chairman, is a perplexing one. If you are going to accept the theory that the Department of Lands and Forests must derive revenues from dues, to carry on the proper administration of this department, then you are going to have to accept the present dues rate, plus a certain percentage contributed to the Consolidated Revenue Fund, which, I think, is justifiable.

When you think that the Federal Treasury collects $9 out of every $10 in the taxes which are paid by this industry, you will see the position. I think I can take an example. I believe one of our companies operating and paying Crown dues to us, paid more to the Federal Treasury in income taxes alone in 1951, than it took to run the whole Department of Lands and Forests, including Fish and Wildlife. If there is going to be some relief given to these operators, any reduction of dues we may grant will only be of a psychological nature, and the relief is going to come from all the various fields of costs in connection with these operations.

I know that most of the operators are concerned about the cost of wood operations in this province. They continuously complain to me about the cost of the raw material to their mills, and that it is becoming increasingly difficult for them to meet competition. This is particularly true at the moment and is worrisome to the craft industry, which became very firmly established in this province in the 1940's.

We were not a large producer of craft wood, particularly for export, in this province until the opening of Marathon, Terrace Bay, and Red Rock, and I might remind the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that, due to the policy of the Progressive Conservative Government, we became a large exporter of this product. With that, of course, came the use of jackpine and poplar and many of the wood species. Jackpine, for instance, really only began to be used when these concession areas went into operation with their mills.

I am thinking of 2 at the moment, specifically, whereby in their negotiations sometimes they would get the jackpine at 40c. a cord—that was their “upset price” or the minimum the government would accept—and place with that bid, a 10c. bonus which made their Crown dues 50c. per cord to the province.

Taking into consideration inflationary trends, the wholesale index price, and the value of the dollar in the period up to the time we increased the jackpine dues, by, I believe, 1950, in order for us to get the same amount of money in real dollars, in comparison with the 40c., we would have to have a Crown dues cord price of 90c. to match that dollar value and perform the same service.

You must remember our costs are going up at the same time. Consider the way costs have gone up in operations alone. In one specific instance, we used to be able to put a game warden in the field for $2,500 a year. Today, that cost, including facilities for enforcing the game laws, getting around the country and everything else, more than $6,000; in other words, the cost to the department including the increase in the number of officials has gone up considerably, and it was necessary to increase Crown dues.

Over and above that fact, if we want to get the same real dollar value as we were getting when the concession agreements were let, we would have to increase the dues from 40c. to 90c. You must remember as well that our jackpine dues in the province today are $2, but when you take into consideration the federal taxes of 49 per cent., and that Crown dues are deductible as an expense against an operation, in fact the Crown dues cost to the company are only $1 a cord as opposed to $2 a cord.

So I say once again, if the industry is in difficulties, if their wood costs and their whole operational costs are there, and we eliminate Crown dues entirely, it will have very little effect on the health of the industry as far as Crown dues are concerned.

MR. WREN: Will the hon. Minister tell me if any representations have been made to his office concerning freight rates for the movement of timber products?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Not particularly, except over the whole picture. No representations have been made except as has been pointed out, very definitely, that wood costs across the board are very high, and freight rates contribute very substantially to these costs, together with all the other costs which enter into the matter.

I might say, in connection with this, because of the concern which is being shown, that a committee has been set up—as a matter of fact, I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) referred to it as a “brain trust”—however, I do not think he said that in a disparaging manner.

MR. NIXON: I would not do that.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: He would not do that. He is too fine a gentleman for that.

Together with the men in our department who are familiar with timber management, the Deputy Minister, and the accountant, a committee has been set up to go into the entire economics of these operations, where concern is being shown, to see whether we as a department of government might enter into this picture if relief is necessary, either by actions within our own department or by actions in other fields of endeavour, to reduce the costs and make our industry competitive, so that we will not suffer the loss of this industry.

MR. WREN: One more question; in the present policy of curtailment of export of which I have spoken before—and with which I agree—what is taking its place in the absence of new mills being built? If you are going to cut off the export to the United States, for example, what other activity will take its place in areas such as Hearst and other places, to keep them out of trouble?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: If you will take the figures of export, going back to 1925 or 1930, you will see the over-all picture. As you know, and as is government policy, we are reducing the export of pulpwood in this country by 10 per cent. annually until there will be a complete elimination by 1957, if the policy is carried out.

In the second place, as the White Paper says, if, after a proper assessment of all our timber resources has been made, we find certain areas where the local domestic industries now established, or which will be established, will not absorb over-mature stands within the next 25 years, then it would be in order to grant export permits. Furthermore, I think I should remind the House that this policy applies especially to spruce, balsam and jackpine, which were the three covered by the original Order-in-Council, the most important of which is the spruce. There is no question that white spruce, but more particularly, black spruce, is what keeps Ontario competitively strong and supreme in the newsprint field, and in the pulp and paper field. I cannot for the life of me see why we should adopt a policy whereby we should allow any exporter in this country, foreign or Canadian, to export that valuable species, until we are absolutely sure it is not going to be required by the industries now in existence or those to come.

Spruce is a wood above all others which, when it has reached maturity, can maintain its soundness in some cases for as many as 100 years. There is no reason, from the information we have available, to change our export policy in that regard, unless some other factor comes into this picture, and if they are going to get export rights—and there are certain places where there are mixed stands—I would not be adverse to advising a policy whereby we would allow, if all the circumstances considered indicated that export was the right thing to do because of over-maturity, and if they will take all species, poplar, jackpine and spruce, I think there would be some reason to do that. But to allow them to take “the cream of the crop” is, to my mind, unreasonable and would only be a temporary measure in connection with the Hearst problem.

For instance, our big problem there is, while there is a temporary situation, some of the municipal improvements made in that area were made 3 and 4 years ago, after this policy was announced.

In the beginning, I started to point out to the hon. member for Kenora that if he reviewed the export of wood from this province for the last quarter century, he would find that the export of wood from private lands decreases, or the export ban is lifted from Crown lands and vice-versa. As a matter of fact, the figures vary very little, and the annual totals do not seem to change greatly year by year. The total export of wood from private and Crown lands combined seems to amount to an almost constant figure.

MR. NIXON: Has the hon. Minister the figures before him for the last 3 years?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I think I have. The contractual rights for spruce and balsam were 250,000 cords under the quota system, and we only exported 200,000 cords in 1953. I believe there will be a slight drop this coming year of about 10,000 or 20,000 cords. As a matter of fact, you may recall last year I told this House that of the original group of exporters, who had contractual rights, many were dropped until there are only 6 or 8 left. Their figures vary very little and they will come to an ultimate end in 1957.

MR. NIXON: Those are from Crown lands only.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Yes. In 1953, from Crown lands the total figure is 329,303 and from other lands 255,325. That is the total including all species, not only spruce, balsam and jackpine.

MR. WREN: Do I take it from what the hon. Minister has said—and I am asking this not so much about the Hearst area because we are getting into the same kind of situation—from the hon. Minister's remarks can we take it that anyone who started in the export business, shall we say, and any community which was more or less dependent upon that after this policy was commenced, cannot expect much relief?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I do not think so.

MR. WREN: I am not criticizing your policy in reducing exports. What I am looking for is this—what is going to take up the shock until we can get into mill production, or some other use of the wood?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I would think those views come to the hon. member again as the result of conversations in connection with Hearst. As I pointed out in committee, when this arose, I do not feel the government could very well assume the responsibility of organizations or people who made investments in equipment and so forth, and all that is required to carry on an export business, who entered the export business 3 years after the policy had been announced. That is true of some of the operators who were at the meeting the other morning.

I am not standing here and saying we are not going to review the picture at Hearst completely. We did attempt—and while I was absent my department attempted—to temporarily solve that problem, until a complete review of the whole situation could be made. They were offered a market for an amount of wood in excess of what they requested, by local domestic mills—not by one, but by 3 or 4—and they were not “stuck” with the wood, or anything like that. But the minute we relax restrictions to one in connection with spruce, we must relax them to everybody.

Within the last few days a very important operator in this province has indicated a willingness to review the situation at Hearst, in regard to the amount of wood which would be available, to see if they could use it. This particular company has other rights in this province. There is the possibility of another domestic mill coming out of this, but I am not too hopeful that will happen, because the pulp market and the newsprint field at the present are consolidating their positions in the North American continent. We are only guided by economic conditions affecting both our own province and Canada. British interests, of course, are also in this country, and when the convertibility of the dollar and the pound comes into play, as we hope it shall, I think it will afford some relief to that picture, and I am hopeful that we will have, within the next decade at least, in this province, sufficient mills to process all our domestic wood without any community suffering.

I am sure that, with some temporary arrangements, the Hearst situation will clear. Our information is—and it is of a confidential nature—that while they indicated some of the retail businesses were suffering tremendous losses, I have had men come to see me from that area, who are in business and who are not suffering. One, especially, stated that his sales were up over last year. As I say, the Hearst situation will be reviewed thoroughly, but we are not going to do it at the expense of breaking our export policy in connection with spruce and balsam wood within this country.

Vote 97 agreed to.

On Vote 98, item 1: Association of Ontario Land Surveyors—$200.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The hon. member for St. Andrew voiced a question a while ago, but there was no answer from the hon. Minister. It had to do with the tourists coming into our province by aeroplane, and landing on our northern lakes, and I want to know from the hon. Minister how extensive that practice is and if the department is in complete control of the situation and, if the regulations and the laws we have on the Statute Books are sufficient to handle the matter at the present time?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: First of all, of course, it is illegal for any aircraft to enter Canada except through customs. That is the first control, and it is exercised, of course, by the Dominion Government. Secondly, it is illegal at times to travel in this country without a permit, so that we do know where they are. Of course, if he has a fishing licence, and a guide licence, and all other requirements, we have no control over where he is going to fly, or where he is going to land. We have to depend on our enforcement officers to see that the law is carried out, the same as does anybody else. I must say, we do not encourage the practice in any way, shape or form. As a matter of fact, we discourage it, and that is about the limit of our control, through the Travel permit system.

MR. OLIVER: Have you been able to get any convictions at all?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I have not the record here. I will have to check and see.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, in connection with this matter, if my memory serves me right, I think we enacted some legislation a few years ago to cope with this special problem. It was discussed in the House. That is how I came to know about it. I am wondering whether the legislation was sufficient.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: It is possible that we may be able to control that through the recreational plan of wilderness areas and semi-wilderness areas, and deferred zones. As far as aircraft are concerned, the regulations would have to apply to local and resident aircraft travel, as well as to visiting aircraft.

MR. A. WREN (Kenora): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) has given any consideration to a subject about which I made a remark earlier. I may be out of order. I cannot find the specific item on which to speak, but has any consideration been given by the department to the matter of properly-organized search parties?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: The matter to which the hon. member (Mr. Wren) referred, in connection with lost people and, in particular, children, is certainly regrettable and heartbreaking to those concerned. I should think, through the provincial police and through our departmental facilities we should be able to put into an area search crews, which would be most competent to find lost persons. I should think that would be about the maximum we, as a department or government, could do in this connection.

MR. WREN: The point, Mr. Minister, was that not only do you have highly skilled woodsmen in the department, but your department is constantly in touch with prospectors and woodsmen of other kinds, whom they know also to be skilled, and if they had them registered and organized into a particular group, so they could be brought to an area very quickly, when a person is lost, it would save a lot of money and save lives too, because, despite the willingness of volunteers, they will "mess up" a search sometimes.

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I do not know of any search where our services have been denied to anybody, or where the aid of our officials throughout the province has not been supplied to its maximum capacity. However, in most cases where a situation such as the hon. member has described takes place, the direction first comes from the local senior officer in charge of the provincial police, under whose direction the search is carried out, and under whom our men carry out their programme.

MR. OLIVER: Might I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) one more question? Could he tell the House what success has attended the department's efforts to regenerate our forests by seeding from the air?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Frankly, Mr. Chairman, that is of comparatively recent vintage, and, as I said in my opening remarks tonight, a great deal of effort and time is going into examining that picture from a research angle. The Deputy Minister tells me now that the results of experiments show a success ratio of 25 per cent., but the projects have not been underway long enough to properly assess what results will come from air seeding.

However, I am sure you appreciate that in the regeneration and silvicultural methods and research so extensively carried on today, not only by ourselves but in conjunction with industry, and in conjunction with the Ontario Research Council, in conjunction with the Canadian Pulp and Paper Association and other agencies, we are doing our best to insure that the money we are spending on these projects is going to produce results. When those efforts have been proven successful, then a much larger programme can be carried out which will bring the people of Ontario a much greater return for their dollars.

Vote 98 concurred in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote No. 99, Wolf Bounty.

Item No. 1, Payments of Wolf Bounty, $60,000.

MR. H. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine): Mr. Chairman, on Votes No. 99 and 100. I see the province is spending $60,000 to catch wolves, and $10,000 to catch bears, and is killing lamprey eels and bugs on spruce trees.

MR. SALSBERG: Nothing for ants?

MR. FISHLEIGH: And I suggest, the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) is handsome and good natured and a man of affluence, I wonder if he would co-operate with Fishleigh and come out to Woodbine riding and help me kill termites?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Very definitely.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, I would be interested in a statement from the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) as to the extent the wolf increase is being checked by his bounty system. $60,000 should pay for quite a number of wolves. Are we getting any of those pelts from Minnesota, Manitoba or Quebec?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: We hope not.

MR. NIXON: To what extent do you find the predatory wolf is kept in check?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: Our bounty is $25 a pelt and is an inducement to the trapper and anyone interested.

MR. NIXON: Does the number of pelts each year run about the same?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I believe so. As a matter of fact, in dollars and cents, I can give the hon. member (Mr. Nixon) the figures for the last 5 years. In 1949, the amount was almost $58,000; in 1950, it was $57,000; in 1951, it dropped off to $46,500; in 1952, it dropped again to $41,000. And in 1953, it was back to $46,500.

So I would estimate actually we do not expect it to go much over $50,000, in any one year. That may be due, for instance, to the reduction in the value of fur. It is more profitable to go into the hunting of wolves, than it is to go after beaver and other furs, in which there has been a tremendous drop in values.

Item No. 1 agreed to.

Vote No. 99 concurred in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 100, Bear Bounty. Item 1, Payments of Bear Bounty, $10,000.

Vote No. 100 concurred in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote No. 101, Timber Management Branch. Item No. 1, Salvaging Fire-Damaged Timber, Payments to Contractors, and Other Incidental Expenses, $300,000.

On item 1:

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, before we leave the department I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Gemmell) whether he does not think his department would be best suited to assume responsibility for the administration of the provincial parks which are about to be established, in view of the long experience they have had administering some of our provincial parks?

HON. MR. GEMMELL: I am glad the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) thinks we have done a good job with the parks of Ontario. I am sure the hon. Prime Minister will continue to place responsibility for them in such a way that we will continue to do this fine job for the people of Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into a Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

The House in Committee.

HON. MR. FROST: If there is any item that any hon. member wishes to be held over, I will agree to do so.

WORKMEN'S COMPENSATION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 90, "An Act to amend The Workmen's Compensation Act."

Sections 1 to 6 inclusive carried.

Bill No. 90 reported.

FINANCIAL ADMINISTRATION
ACT, 1954

House in Committee on Bill No. 91, "An Act to provide for the Financial Administration of the Government of Ontario and for the Organization of the Treasury Department."

Sections 1 and 2 carried.

MR. SALSBERG: There is a very serious question I want to put to the Prime Minister: whether this re-organization will enable him to predict more accurately what surplus there will be in the coming year? I think that up to now he has been very wide of the mark. That may have been due to the poor organization in the department. Does he think this will enable him to do better?

HON. MR. FROST: I will say to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that I have always been on the right side.

Sections 3 to 14 inclusive agreed to.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Could the hon. Prime Minister explain the necessity, or the meaning, of section 15?

HON. MR. FROST: This is only for purposes of administration. Every effort was made to keep the work of these various offices separate, but if, for purpose of convenience, it should happen that some duty is better performed by one officer, that may be done. This ensures that we do not put ourselves in an administrative straight-jacket.

MR. OLIVER: I should not have thought you would need law for that.

HON. MR. FROST: On the other hand, if you do not have this enabling section, it might lead to difficulties.

Sections 15 and 16 carried.

MR. OLIVER: Does section 17 mean that an official in one department might be situated in some other office?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, that is right.

MR. OLIVER: Stationed there?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes. I think that is done in Ottawa as well. Supposing one department is a revenue-collecting department, and it is convenient that the collections be made there. It might be desirable that the Treasury should have an official or officials there to supervise.

MR. OLIVER: That is not being done to any great extent?

HON. MR. FROST: As a matter of fact, it is being done now informally. This gives legislative sanction to the practice.

Sections 17 to 37 inclusive agreed to.

MR. OLIVER: On section 38, would the hon. Prime Minister say why he needs that provision? It is a new section.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, and it is a new section. I think it is obvious. The loaning powers of the government are under the authority of this Act. That is the purpose of it.

Sections 38 to 65 inclusive agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that in part VI, miscellaneous sections 66, 67 and 68 be deleted, and substituted therefor, the following:

Section 66: sections 1 and 8, subsection 3 of section 13, and section 17, 20, 23, 28, and 30 of the Audit Act, the Consolidated Revenue Fund Act, and the Public Revenue Act are repealed.

67: Provincial Loans Act, the Provincial Loans Amendment Act 1951, and the Provincial Loans Amendment Act 1952, are repealed.

68: Subsection (1) of this Act, subsections 37 to 42, and sections 44 to 58, and section 67, comes into force the day it receives Royal assent.

Subsection (2); section 37 to 42, sections 44 to 58, and section 67 come into force on a day to be named by the Lieutenant-Governor, by his proclamation.

69: This Act may be cited as the Financial Administration Act, 1954.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, since this will be the last opportunity to speak on the bill, I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister whether any of these clauses, or anything in the Act, infringes in any way on the rights and jurisdiction of the Provincial Auditor?

HON. MR. FROST: No. Not at all.

MR. SALSBERG: His rights remain as they were?

HON. MR. FROST: Absolutely.
Bill No. 91 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: Tomorrow this bill would normally be on the Order paper for third reading. I do not expect to be here at the commencement of the sittings of the House tomorrow. I would, therefore, ask now that this bill be not read a third time tomorrow in order that one or two of the sections may be reviewed. I do not think there will be any change, but some of the officials are in New York at the present time, and I think it would be advisable to hold this over pending their return. So I would ask that the bill be not read a third time tomorrow.

THE TELEPHONES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 51, "The Telephones Act, 1954."

HON. MR. FROST: This bill has been through the Committee on Municipal Law. It has been thoroughly gone over. I think it might be reported. There are 119 sections. If there are any of the sections which hon. members wish to question, we could go directly on to such section.

MR. OLIVER: It says in the Act, that apparently the Court of Appeal shall hear and determine a stated case, and remit it to the authority with the opinion of the court thereon. The question that arises in one's mind is this: why should not other parties be notified of the court's decision, as well as the authority? It would seem to me upon looking through this there is a good reason why the other party should also know what the decision of the Court of Appeal might be.

HON. MR. FROST: I suppose the meaning of it is that any party who was interested, would have recourse to the court in an ordinary case, but in this case, the authority itself might ask for a direction as to its powers for purposes of clarification. This section envisages an application where, possibly, nobody else might need to be notified. It might concern an application on the authority's own part for some clarification of a question.

MR. OLIVER: It is not clear that is the case, from reading it over.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: It ties in with No. 107.

MR. OLIVER: How?

HON. G. H. CHALLIES: It says, "of its own motion." Mr. Chairman, in the provision in the Municipal Board Act, section 96, it says:

The Court of Appeal shall hear and determine any stated case, and remit to the authority—

MR. OLIVER: Yes, but 109 says, "The authority may of its own motion or on the application of any party to the proceedings." It is not the authority asking for a stated case; it may be brought by any party to the proceedings. My question was, why should not the other party to the proceedings be notified, as well as the authority?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: In the Ontario Municipal Board Act, it says, "it may." It is permissive. In this case, the authority takes over the authority of the board. It says, "The authority may on its own motion." It is a question of law, I think.

HON. L. M. FROST: I suppose the point raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition is in regard to subsection 1, which says:

The authority may on its own motion or upon application by any party to the proceeding.

Subsection 2 says:

The Court of Appeal shall hear and determine the stated case and remit it to the authority.

I suppose the words might be added, "to the authority or such other parties to the proceedings." Or shall we leave it the way it is?

MR. OLIVER: Why should it be left the way it is?

HON. MR. FROST: The law officers advise me the usual procedure is that the Court of Appeal would determine the stated case, and remit it to the authority, and it is the authority's business then to give it to the parties concerned. The Court of Appeal would give it to the authority itself. As I understand it, the authority has before it, certain applications submitted to it by various parties, and the authority may submit a case to the Court of Appeal for a finding, and when the Court of Appeal makes its finding, it remits it to the authority, which in turn makes it available to the parties. I think that makes it clear. I agree with the hon. Leader of the Opposition that upon reading the section, it might appear to be somewhat ambiguous.

MR. OLIVER: In section 111, the last clause, No. 6, it says:

The authority, or any member thereof, is not liable for costs in connection with any appeal or application for leave to appeal under this section.

My thought was that if the applicant appealing the authority's action—if the action is upheld, surely the applicant should not have to bear the costs of the appeal. I would like to hear the hon. Minister on that point. If the appeal is upheld, why should the authority be released?

HON. MR. FROST: It is the same provision as in the Municipal Board Act, if that carries any weight with the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

MR. OLIVER: It does not. What is the reason?

HON. MR. FROST: I suppose the authority is a judicial or semi-judicial body, and, therefore, is not subject to payment at all. I suppose it would be similar to assessing the costs against a county court judge, for instance.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I have here several sections upon which I would like a little explanation, and I will deal with them one after the other.

On section 3; it deals with the power of a municipality to establish a telephone system, and to expropriate any other system within the municipality. Just how far does the power of the municipality go? Suppose it is a very extensive system, which has lines running through the municipality and is giving service within the municipality; would you permit the municipality to take over that portion of another company's lines, being operated within the municipality?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The municipality might be large enough. Where it has a preponderance of lines and subscribers in the municipality, it might be a company or an independent line, where they might amalgamate.

One of the main purposes of the whole bill is to consolidate different systems in a municipality or any group of municipalities. I assume that gives the municipalities the authority to take over any other company in the same municipality, if it will improve the system.

MR. C. E. JAMES (Lambton East): As a public utility?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes, as a public utility.

MR. GRUMMETT: On section 9; I recall the other day, when this bill was up for second reading, the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) asked a question as to what Statutes these sections refer to. In order to clarify the meaning of the section, I think that after the Roman numeral figure "VI," in the second line, might be added, "of this Act," which would clarify the Act. So it would then read:

Section 17, 18, 19, 28, 29, 30, 31, 37, 55, 56, 57, 58, 59 and 61, and parts V and VI of this Act.

HON. MR. FROST: We will accept that, Mr. Chairman. That is subsection 9?

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, Mr. Prime Minister, subsection 9.

The next is section 10, which deals with a petition which is submitted for the establishment of a municipal telephone system, signed by not less than 10 assessed land owners. The section reads:

A petition signed by not less than 10 assessed land owners may be presented to the council of a local municipality, praying for the establishment of a telephone system.

The difficulty is in these municipalities, 10 is a very small number of land owners who may want to have the telephone system established. Why not add to that section, a subsection, providing that a percentage of the land owners in the area to be served should sign the petition, and not only 10 members?

Mr. Chairman, the reason I am raising this point is that our municipality has gone through this process.

In 1951, we set up a municipal telephone system, and all these points posed difficulties for us. For instance, we thought we had covered the areas pretty well, and secured 98 petitioners. We have now about 700 or 750 telephone users, of whom at least one-half are land owners. These land owners are not on the petition. I think we should set out in section 10, that a definite percentage of the land owners in the area to be served should sign the petition.

HON. MR. FROST: What percentage would the hon. member for Cochrane South suggest?

MR. GRUMMETT: I think not less than 60 per cent.

HON. MR. FROST: That is pretty high.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: That is pretty high. It is only initiating a petition. It is the same as the present Telephone Act.

MR. GRUMMETT: I am quite aware of that, Mr. Minister. That is why I am raising the point, because you are following the old Act in this bill, to a great extent.

MR. JANES: It works pretty well, the way it is.

MR. GRUMMETT: It has to a certain extent, except you have very few petitioners.

As the hon. members know, the petitioners are the property owners, who are responsible if anything happens in the municipality. If you set up a municipal telephone system with 10 assessed land owners, in the municipality, 300 assessed land owners are receiving service, and it is not fair to the 10 assessed land owners who signed the original petition, to be held responsible in future years, should the revenue from the telephone system not be sufficient to carry it.

In other words, if something happens, and a number of those who are now telephone users, cancel their subscriptions, would the cost for all of that indebtedness be placed on those 10 subscribers? I think a greater number of land owners should be compelled to sign the petition.

MR. JANES: In any telephone system, every subscriber puts a mortgage on his farm for the system, by buying debentures.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is not what I am getting at.

MR. JANES: The municipality is not held responsible.

MR. GRUMMETT: No. We need all the land owners in the area to be subscribers, so a heavy burden does not fall on the municipality.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: This is only initiating a petition. Then the municipality passes a by-law, and in the by-law, the subscribers become responsible. It is not just the 10; it is all the subscribers.

MR. JANES: Any subscriber is responsible.

MR. GRUMMETT: Certainly, but the subscriber must sign the petition.

MR. JANES: Of course, one must sign a debenture.

MR. GRUMMETT: Oh, no.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Mr. Chairman, this is an initiating petition which has the signatures of 10 assessed land owners, which is presented to the council and the council, on that petition, says, "We will pass the by-law establishing a municipal telephone system." In the by-law, those who subscribe become financially responsible. It is not only the original 10; there may be 50 more. The 10 do not carry all the burden.

MR. GRUMMETT: When do the others become responsible?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: When they subscribe, and sign up.

MR. GRUMMETT: Before the passing of the by-law?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No.

MR. GRUMMETT: Read section 13, which clearly indicates it is those who sign before the passing of the by-law, who are held responsible.

HON. MR. FROST: May I suggest that the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) and the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) convene together when the House adjourns to see if they can find a solution to this problem.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is on sections 10, 12 and 13. I will now go on to some of the others.

HON. MR. FROST: Do not find any more tough ones, now.

MR. JANES: What about section 14?

HON. MR. FROST: Would the hon. member like to have this referred back to the committee? We will do that, if the hon. member desires.

MR. GRUMMETT: I was not a member of the committee which dealt with this, and I was not present, and I do not know what discussion took place in committee.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: If the hon. member has any further suggestions, we can get together and straighten them out.

MR. GRUMMETT: I may be able to take up some of the smaller ones here tonight.

HON. MR. FROST: I will leave it to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) to take it up with the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies) to see if this can be ironed out.

MR. SALSBERG: If they are going to get together, Mr. Chairman, I would like to refer to section 88. I am sorry, I am a member of the committee, but it did not strike me at the time.

It is bad enough if we are going to lock up a farmer who "lets go" on a telephone on a day when the rain interferes with haying when, and you might say he has been using insulting, offensive, or blasphemous language, but when you step into telephones which you do not charter, I am afraid it is outside the jurisdiction of the province, because it has a federal and not a provincial charter. Can you also arrest someone when he is using the Bell Telephone and speaking to Montreal?

HON. MR. FROST: We try to, if circumstances warrant.

MR. SALSBERG: I suggest this be referred to the special committee for consideration, because I do not think it is right.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: It has been that way for years.

HON. MR. FROST: We will hold this over for the committee's consideration.

THE MENTAL HEALTH ACT

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: House in Committee on Bill No. 92, "The Mental Health Act."

Sections 1 to 7 inclusive agreed to.

On section 8.

MR. OLIVER: On section 8, I would like to ask the hon. Minister a question. The Mental Health officer mentioned in section 8, is given very wide powers, and authority to, if he deems it advisable, order a patient be let out of an institution, even over the opposition of the superintendent of that institution.

Surely, we are not going that far in the appointment of these men, and giving them such wide authority as that?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Mr. Chairman, regarding No. 3: it says the "Minister may appoint a director of Mental Health." We have a Director of Mental Health, Doctor Richardson. Certain of the hon. members have already asked me about that.

In reply to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, may I say, section 8 only has to do with the psychiatric units within a general hospital, and not a mental institution. These are short-stay patients.

MR. OLIVER: Where is that defined?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I beg your pardon?

MR. OLIVER: I am trying to find out from the hon. Minister where he finds in this bill that the Mental Health officer deals only with short-stay patients, and does not refer to the mental hospital. I was under the impression that it did refer to the mental hospital.

HON. MR. FROST: No. Section 1, subsection 3, reads:

"Hospital" means a hospital approved under the Public Hospitals Act.

MR. OLIVER: That is right. Sections 8 and 9 agreed to. On section 10.

MR. SALSBERG: I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition has raised an important point, because it gives this director power which supersedes that of the psychiatrist, who may be in charge of the mental health unit of a general hospital.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I beg your pardon?

MR. SALSBERG: It gives your Director authority over the psychiatrist who may be in charge of the unit in a general hospital. The Act does not even provide this Director should have the qualifications which we normally would assume would be the minimum requirements for that office.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Certainly the Director will have to be a fully qualified psychiatrist.

MR. OLIVER: We are not talking about the Director.

HON. MR. FROST: It is a Mental Health Officer.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: A Mental Health Officer is a psychiatrist.

MR. SALSBERG: Not necessarily, at all, unless it is defined.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Certainly.

MR. OLIVER: Where does it say that?

HON. MR. FROST: Section 1 (b):

"Director" means director of mental health of the Department.

A Mental Health Officer is a particular type of person, an officer of the Department, appointed under this Act.

MR. OLIVER: Who may or may not be a psychiatrist?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: Certainly he is a psychiatrist.

MR. SALSBERG: Let us amend it right now by adding to the definition section.

HON. MR. FROST: Legally, there is no such thing as a psychiatrist.

MR. SALSBERG: Yes. This Act does provide for certain tasks which are to be performed by a psychiatrist. Therefore, we should amend the first section where we speak of the Mental Health Officer to read:

Mental Health Officer shall be a graduate psychiatrist and appointed under this Act.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member is only making it difficult. As a matter of fact, it goes on to say:

For the purpose of carrying out the provisions of this Act, and the regulations, the Minister may appoint an officer of the Department to be known as "Director of Mental Health."

Gracious me, he is not going to appoint a boiler maker to that job. He is going to get a psychiatrist. The Director of Mental Health has certain powers. As a matter of fact, the hon. member knows full well there is not a legal definition of a psychiatrist. It would be quite impossible and impractical to do that.

MR. SALSBERG: I disagree with the hon. Prime Minister's definition.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member disagrees with everything.

MR. SALSBERG: There should be a definite understanding if we have an Act—and we have more than one Act which has been before the House—stating very clearly what a “psychiatrist” is. A “psychiatrist” is a graduate of a recognized school of psychiatry, schools where we send students, and for which this government is paying a certain amount of money. We dealt with that last week.

I think it is correct, there is a very clear definition, and I think it should be there, or there is a danger that while they will not appoint a boiler maker, they may appoint a doctor who is totally unfit for this specialized work.

HON. MR. FROST: You have to take certain chances in this world.

MR. SALSBERG: In our administration such things cannot happen, but we are all human.

MR. OLIVER: I am quite serious in respect to No. 8. I would ask the hon. Prime Minister to consider this. Why should he appoint a Mental Health Officer who may, or may not be a psychiatrist, according to my layman's reading?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: He could be a Mental Health Officer. If he were a psychiatrist, he could also be a Mental Health Officer.

MR. OLIVER: Let us take the hon. Minister's (Mr. Phillips') definition then, that he is a psychiatrist. Where are we getting when we appoint this chap to go around to these institutions, to deal with the superintendents of the institutions, who would, I think, be the equal, at least in training and qualifications, to this man who is going around as a psychiatrist? Yet No. 8 quite specifically points out that if this chap says that, in his judgment, the man should be out, then he has the right and authority to override the superintendent's reluctance to letting the man out. I should think the superintendent's word in this matter would be of just as much importance, as the word of this Mental Health Officer, and I cannot see the necessity of it at all.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition must remember this refers to public general hospitals. They are really not custodial institutions.

MR. OLIVER: I know that.

HON. MR. FROST: Somebody has to have the say, and the officers appointed by the department have broad powers. If the person is so mentally ill that the Mental Health Officer would not release him, there are mental hospitals, for this sort of patient. I think it should be remembered these are not custodial institutions, and you have to have general powers, which would not apply in the ordinary course.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, it is even worse than it appeared at first. The Medical Officer of Health is defined as a “Medical Officer of Health appointed under the Public Health Act or any person having the powers thereof.” That certainly leaves it very, very open, and very wide. When we deal with mental health commitments, and the removal of patients, we cannot be too careful or too cautious in the formulation.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, it must be remembered it is a new problem. We are bringing public general hospitals into this field, and I think this power is a good one at the present time.

MR. OLIVER: If it is new, that is all the more reason it should be right at its inception.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The hon. Leader of the Opposition must understand this is a psychiatric unit within a general hospital.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) has made that quite clear.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: The superintendents of general hospitals are usually lay people and it says here:

He shall discuss the fitness of the patient with the superintendent at the hospital or an attending medical practitioner, and if satisfied that the patient ought to be discharged shall so order in writing—

Surely that is proper.

MR. OLIVER: The hon. Minister thinks it is all right.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: I certainly do.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not think it is good.

Sections 8 to 14 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 92 reported.

MENTAL HOSPITALS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 93, "An Act to amend the Mental Hospitals Act."

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 93 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, we will hold out Orders No. 48, 49, 50 and 51.

PERSONS WHO DRILL OR BORE WELLS FOR WATER

House in Committee on Bill No. 98, "An Act respecting Persons who Drill or Bore Wells for Water."

MR. SALSBERG: See how clear the definition is, "who drill for water," but when it comes to psychiatric people—see?

Sections 1 to 12 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 98 reported.

PETTY TRESPASS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 99, "An Act to amend the Petty Trespass Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.
Bill No. 99 reported.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 100, "An Act to amend the Public Health Act."

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) what amount of money is set apart for this purpose?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: You mean in our Estimates?

MR. OLIVER: Yes.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: It is just under $1 million.

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 100 reported.

SCHOOL TRUSTEES COUNCIL ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 101, "An Act to amend the School Trustees Council Act, 1953."

PROTECTION FOR PERSONS WORKING IN TRENCHES

House in Committee on Bill No. 102, "An Act to Provide Protection for Persons Working in Trenches."

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive agreed to.
On section 5.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, would that apply to the laying of the—

MR. OLIVER: Subway?

MR. SALSBERG: —gas pipe lines, oil pipe lines, and so on?

HON. C. DALEY (Minister of Labour): Certainly, if they were deep enough and wide enough.

MR. SALSBERG: How deep must it be in order to come under the Act?

HON. MR. DALEY: Four feet.
Sections 5 to 27 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 102 reported.

ELEVATORS AND LIFTS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 103, "An Act to amend the Elevators and Lifts Act, 1953."

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive agreed to.
On section 4.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I did not know that dumb-waiters were used in industry very much, but I understand there are still some old houses which have dumb-waiters of one sort or another. Would that apply to them? Do they need appellants?

HON. MR. DALEY: No, dumb-waiters are quite extensively used in industry, and some of them are quite sizeable and require attention.

MR. SALSBERG: Restaurants?

HON. MR. DALEY: Yes.
Sections 4 to 8 inclusive agreed to.
Bill No. 103 reported.

CONSERVATION AUTHORITIES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 104, "An Act to amend the Conservation Authorities Act."

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I would like that held over.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition wants it held over? All right. Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House reports 9 bills without amendment, and 1 bill with amendment, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I move, seconded by Mr. Doucett, that when this House adjourns the present sittings thereof, it do stand adjourned until 2 of the clock tomorrow afternoon, and that the provisions of Rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended insofar as they may apply to this motion.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, there will be no night session tomorrow night, but there will be night sessions on Wednesday and Thursday, and the House will meet at 2 o'clock on each afternoon. Tomorrow, there will be third readings and then the Estimates of the Department of Mines, the Department of Municipal Affairs, and the Department of Planning and Development.

MR. OLIVER: No debate on the budget tomorrow?

HON. MR. FROST: No. Mr. Speaker, I move the House do now adjourn.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11.25 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, MARCH 30, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very happy today to welcome students from the Owen Sound Collegiate Institute, the Memorial Public School in Hamilton, and the Ajax Public School.

We are particularly happy to welcome those of you from out of the city to this meeting of the Assembly, and hope you have gained a great deal from the various tours which you have taken this morning, and likewise that you will gain something from our deliberations in the House this afternoon.

I would also like to welcome two guests who are seated in the Speaker's Gallery whom the hockey fans will be glad to know about. One is my very good friend, the sports announcer for the Detroit Red Wings—not that I am supporting them at all—and also the gentleman who takes care of those players who may receive injuries as a result of colliding with our Maple Leafs, Doctor Sheets.

MR. H. BECKETT: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Fourth and final Report of the Standing Committee on Municipal Law, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Beckett from the Standing Committee on Municipal Law begs leave to present the following as its Fourth and final Report.

Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

Bill No. 113, An Act to amend The Assessment Act.

Your committee begs to report the following bills with certain amendments:

Bill No. 112, An Act to amend The Municipal Act.

Bill No. 120, An Act to amend The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. BECKETT: In the absence of Mr. Nickle, I beg leave to present the Eleventh Report of the Standing Committee of Private Bills, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Beckett in the absence of Mr. Nickle, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the committee's Eleventh Report as follows:

Your Standing Committee on Private Bills begs leave to present the following as its Eleventh Report:

Your committee would recommend that the following bill be not reported:

Bill No. 28, An Act respecting the Township of Sandwich West.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

House in Committee. Mr. Dent in the Chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF MINES

Vote 103, Main Office, $367,500.

HON. MR. KELLY (Minister of Mines): Mr. Chairman, before this Committee of the Whole House begins its consideration of the figures which are to be presented, I ask your indulgence while I outline, as briefly as possible, the activities of the department during the past year, our proposed programme for the fiscal year 1954-55, and the general picture of Ontario's great and growing mining industry.

It is a pleasure to be able to tell the House that this year the revenue derived from Ontario's mining industry through the medium of modest service fees, taxes, rentals, royalties, licences, etc., has enriched the Treasury by $5,072,000 against $1,070,000 ordinary expenditures for the operation of the department. Thus, the net surplus on the year's activities is $4,002,000 on the basis of 10 months' actual operations and 2 months' forecast.

I believe that every member of this House has received a copy of the preliminary report of the Mines Department covering the operations for the calendar year 1953. I commend the report to your attention—the information it contains is worth much more than a casual glance.

I would direct your attention to a simple graph on page 11 of the report. It shows more forcefully than any words of mine could, the progress which has been made in a brief half-century by those who have invested their toil, skill, and dollars in Ontario's underground wealth.

In the year 1900, the total production of the mines was $10 million. In 1941 the mines of Ontario produced a total of $270 million in new wealth. From then until 1946, war and post-war problems resulted in a setback, the most serious which the industry has yet experienced. By 1946 production had dropped to $190 million, a loss of some $80 million annually. Then, however, came a truly astounding recovery. The graph's production line swings through an almost complete circle and speeds upward almost vertically, through $250 million in 1947, $300 million in 1948, $380 million in 1950, $450 million in 1951, about the same in 1952, right up to the all-time high of $460,476,113 established by the mines of Ontario in 1953.

An extremely important development of 1953, which can be expected to show tangible dividends this year, followed the discovery of wide-spread deposits of radioactive mineral in the vicinity of Blind River, midway between Sudbury and Sault Ste. Marie. A claim-staking rush of major proportions developed, and exploratory diamond-drilling is continuing over a large area.

Already two very large deposits have been outlined and if, as a result of the exploratory work which is still going on, a continuance of the uranium-bearing fault can be proven, we may look with confidence to the development of a new, immensely valuable mining range—a source of that magic material which today stands as the world's No. 1 strategic mineral. One important company has announced its plans to begin underground mining operations this year.

Mr. Chairman, no honourable member of this House can fail to have been impressed with the importance which a newly discovered mining area in North-western Ontario has assumed in the economic thinking of this province. The name "Manitouwadge" has assumed magic proportions in the mine-man's lexicon and it has even been said that the copper, zinc and silver showings so far indicated in that area, southeast of Lake Nipigon, would make the discovery the most important single development since copper and nickel were brought to light at Sudbury.

I have dealt with only some of the developments of the last year. There are many others, some perhaps of almost equal importance which I might just mention in passing. There is the Werner Lake area north of Kenora where significant indications of copper, nickel and precious metals have come to light. There is the discovery of radioactive mineral in the Bancroft area. There is a new graphite discovery near Verona in Eastern Ontario. There are the columbium and uranium deposits in the Lake Nipissing area, awaiting only the solution of the difficult metallurgical problems related to separating these minerals from the component ores, before new and important development proceeds. Then there is the reported discovery of radioactive minerals in the Centre Lake area north of Peterborough.

Apart from the actual production figures themselves, could there be any better index of the healthy state of the industry than the fact that, in the 12 months ending December 31st last, an all-time record was set with the staking and recording of more than 29,000 claims throughout the province?

The pace of this activity is continuing unabated and this year up until March 17th a total of 11,965 claims had been recorded in the various recording offices throughout the province.

A few minutes ago I named some of the areas in which staking rushes of major importance occurred last year. So far this year the greatest activity has been in the Manitowadge area, which I referred to a moment ago. Up until the 17th of this month, the office for that division reported a total of 7,350 claims. Then there has been unusual activity in the Centre Lake area, north of Peterborough. Our Toronto office, which covers Eastern Ontario, reports that up until the 17th, some 1,872 claims had been recorded, for the most part in the Bancroft-Centre Lake area. This total far surpasses anything which had ever previously been known in that part of Eastern Ontario. The search in that area is, of course, primarily for radioactive minerals.

With respect to mining roads, since the inception of the programme in 1951, we have completed 31 of these roads, or have work on them under way. This represents a total of 242.5 miles of road—all good road although it is not, and is not intended to be, up to Class 1 highway specifications. I would refer the hon. members to the table on page 28 of the Preliminary Report and to the accompanying map for a more detailed picture of the physical accomplishment to date.

Mr. Chairman, I have spoken on several occasions, both in this House and elsewhere, on the subject of these roads and what they can mean to our North Country. It is a subject which lies close to my heart so I hope you will bear with me if I strive, within the space of a very few minutes, to sum up the part which mining access roads can be made to play in our whole economy.

Naturally, my primary interest is in the development of our mining resources and under the terms of the fiat implied in the cash Vote for these roads, the one unvarying stipulation is that the road to be built must serve to open up promising new territory for mineral development, or make possible increased output from an already-established producing mine.

Having met this qualification, any other benefits which might accrue from the construction of the road may be considered as a bonus—a bonus which in the aggregate is often fully as important as the primary consideration. In this way these roads have served as avenues through which large areas of our forest can be harvested profitably. Many of them serve as a ready means to reach and combat outbreaks of fire. Some, in areas which are suitable for agriculture, provide means of communication along which settlements may be expected to spring up. Many of them serve as an added lure to holiday visitors—a means of entry to some of the finest hunting and fishing areas on the continent. Through the medium of some of these roads—notably the Sinclair Road from Gogama, the Matachewan-Kenogami Road and the Warren Lake Road, all opened for traffic last year—this government has earned the gratitude and the respect of people who, without them, were either completely isolated from the rest of the world or were obliged to travel a long, round-about route to reach any outside destination. I wish all the members of this House had been able to stand with me in the little town of Gogama last year as the new road, linking that town with the outside world, was opened and the first cars ever seen there swept under the barrier. Mr. Chairman, it is hard to conceive just how much the ending of long years of isolation means to people in that country.

There is a vast empire in Northern Ontario still waiting to be developed. I believe that, within the limits of our capabilities, we have taken important steps toward this development through the roads we have already built. But these are just first steps and the programme must be continued this year and for a good many years to come before its full potentialities are realized. Thus on a long-term basis, we have a plan to utilize existing bush roads, privately owned lumbering roads and public roads of all kinds, to tie them in with new road links so that, not only individual communities, but whole large areas may be joined by a continuous network of roads spanning the North and making ours one great cohesive province.

If the hon. members will refer to the map inside the back cover of the Preliminary Report, I will endeavour to explain in part my idea as to how this grand design can be brought about reasonably and without any vast expenditure of public monies.

I realize that what the officials of my department and I have in mind involves a great deal of work and the expenditure of considerable sums of the people's money. I realize that it cannot all be done at once, that it must be considered as a continuing programme.

Now let us revert to the estimated ordinary expenditures of the department for the next fiscal year.

Under the "Main Office" Vote we are asking for $367,500, which is a reduction of $11,500 from our expenditures for the present year. This is the result of incorporation of $300 of the cost-of-living bonus salaries, and the appropriated amounts provided for under all other Votes are a part of any increases noted.

The main office is the administrative centre of the department, and it is responsible for policy, accounting procedure, budgetary control, taxation and the collection of revenue, the publication of geological reports and maps, and other informative works, the operation of the public relations and information programme, maintenance of the mining court, operation of the departmental library and general supervision of the department.

The functions of all other branches of the department are self-evident and I may say, Mr. Chairman, that, apart from additional monies provided for salary increases of $33,000, the total of appropriations for the department exceeds the estimated expenditures for the current year by only $30,000. Most of this amount is being devoted to increased activities in the geological, laboratories, and mining-lands branches, all of which are affected by the greatly increased interest in prospecting activity.

In my address on the Estimates last year, I touched at some length on the activities of each branch individually. The general outline remains unchanged from year to year, and by way of saving the time of this House, I will not enter into any sort of repetitive statement just now. In any case, Mr. Chairman, the story is told pretty completely in our Preliminary Report which I hope will receive the attention of the hon. members.

There are others here which I could mention, but I wish to get on the Estimates, and in concluding these remarks, I would like to pay tribute to the members of the staff of the Department of Mines who have worked diligently this year to produce possibly the all-time high in mining in the history of this province, without whose efforts we could not have done nearly as good a job as has been done.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 103, Main Office, $367,500.

On Vote 103.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I want to make a few general observations which can only be made under the item dealing with the main office, and that is on the question of policy in mining.

We are all very happy to hear of the new developments in the rare and very valuable metals in the province. However, the hon. Minister did not assure this House, nor the province, that the policy of his department and of the government is expressive of a very definite policy to assure the maximum value of the mining resources for the people of the province.

What I have in mind, Mr. Chairman, is that a government policy, if it is to be supported, should look upon the mining of the wealth that is underground as a heritage of the people, and that the exploitation of that wealth should result in the maximum of employment opportunities in the province, and the expansion of industry and commerce. If no such policy exists, and if the activities of the department are not directed toward such an end, then we are indeed failing in the elementary duties toward the people of the province, and toward the generations which are to follow us.

There is nothing to be boastful about digging up the iron ore and other valuable ores, if the ores are to be shipped out of the country, and will result in a loss of employment opportunities, and in a retarding of the economic development of the province.

What I say, is of course, not entirely new. This problem has been dealt with by a great number of people and many organizations, public spokesmen, newspapers and other periodicals, but I am sorry to say that all these expressions of deep concern about the absence of what could be described as an orientation toward the development of the resources to the great benefit to the people of the province, has failed to change the attitude of the government. I think it was expressed in regard to iron ore very ably by an official of the department, whose words have been quoted in this House previously. However, I think his words are so important, that I will take the liberty of repeating them. They are the words of Mr. Lyle, of the Research Branch of the government. He said:

A ton of iron ore, mined in Canada, and sold to a foreign steel company, brings Canada a revenue of about $10. When the same ton of ore is smelted in Canada and turned into a wide range of steel products—as a great deal is—it makes about half a ton of such common household products as nails, screws, coathangers, etc.

So used, this ton of Canadian ore becomes Canadian manufactured products with a retail value ranging from $80 to $90. It takes no wide stretch of the imagination to calculate the benefits to Canadians from the translation to our raw materials into end-use products.

In the simple illustration just mentioned, the gain is at least $70 per ton of ore—a sum that finds its way into a great many pockets and benefits Canadian workmen, wholesalers, retailers and consumers.

The words of Mr. Lyle, I think, should be translated into policy. They have not been. The result is that the action of the department and the government, far from improving the situation regarding the depletion of natural resources, continues merrily—I would say recklessly—along a very foolish path, of inviting, encouraging, and stimulating the entry of American corporations into the vast mineral areas, knowing full well that they are to export the raw materials to their own country for manufacture and fabrication.

At the Head of the Lakes last year there was a great “hullabaloo” about the fact that the Inland Steel Company was going to invest $50 million in further expanding the Steep Rock field. It is true that an investment of such a large amount will provide a “quick dollar” to some people, but it is a very foolish policy to pursue, and is certainly nothing to be merry about.

The $50 million will go. The big investors will make their share; a number of workmen and others, who will be employed will earn some money, but it is a penny-wise-and-pound foolish policy to pursue. What we need primarily is a steel mill at the Head of the Lakes. That would be a great accomplishment. The processing of the iron ore from the Steep Rock area at the Head of the Lakes would transform the north-western part of the province, and would create many new job opportunities, would enlarge those communities and create new markets for all kinds of Canadian products. That would be an accomplishment of which this government could justly be proud.

MR. J. S. DEMPSEY (Renfrew South): Is the hon. member making a speech on the budget?

MR. SALSBERG: Instead they are very glad when they can announce that Inland Steel or Steep Rock Mining, that is, a corporation headed by Cyrus Eaton, are stepping in and shipping the ore out of the country.

Another example of how incorrect the government's policy is, was provided last year when a bill was introduced and carried in this House—I think it was Bill 67—which made possible the granting of privileges to large corporations to have exclusive rights over an area of 100,000 acres, or so. I think I am correct. It was quite clearly labeled as a very harmful thing by the Prospectors' Association, through their spokesman.

An hon. member close to me says I am not correct. I will read an extract from the Telegram dated March 14th, 1953, in which Mr. Cyril T. Young, vice-president of the Prospectors' Association, said his group was opposed to the concessions:

"This bill," he said, "is awfully dangerous. It opens the possibility that Wall St. will blanket the north."

Because only the largest corporations, and most of them from the United States, could undertake the prospecting of these vast areas at the expense of the small-scale independent prospectors. I referred to the clipping, because of the remarks of an hon. member of this House. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition said about that bill last year that it "smells" and I think he was right. The bill did smell. Yet that is the policy of the government being applied toward our ore and the mineral resources generally.

It is not only this government which is doing that. The Ottawa Government is not much better—the Liberal Government. Yet, there is this difference; that the Conservative Opposition in Ottawa is saying things similar to what I am saying in this House today.

MR. D. McM. KERR: No. no.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, yes. It is an astonishing and amazing situation when the Conservatives are in Opposition in Ottawa; they give—I do not think it would be parliamentary to mention what is commonly referred to, as to what they are giving the government—but they have given them an awful "lambasting" for the policy of handing over our natural resources to American interests. But when the same Conservatives are in power in Ontario, as unfortunately they are, they do exactly the same thing as the Liberals in Ottawa are doing.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Does the hon. member say it is "unfortunate"?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, very much, from my point of view.

It is interesting when the Conservative Party in the House of Commons attempts to argue with Mr. Howe, as I am attempting to argue here, that he becomes very indignant. Of course, the hon. members know that the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe can become very indignant and resentful of any criticism of his actions.

However, the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe said:

Canada is immensely fortunate in that it is rich in these commodities the world needs and which the world is able to pay for, no matter what market conditions prevail in the have-not countries of the world. If we were only making goods that countries might like when prosperous, but be able to do without when things are tough, we would have in this country just about the most unstable economy that could be contemplated. I hope there will not be any more talk of export of raw materials and concentrating on finished goods. The idea is fantastic. It is a ridiculous proposal.

And the Tories, in Opposition, shouted "No."

Here is a case where I share the views of the Conservative Opposition in Ottawa, and I say to this government, why do you not practice what you preach? It would be an excellent thing if you were to practice in this instance, what your national spokesmen are advocating in the House of Commons.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS: Do you advocate protection?

MR. SALSBERG: You are saying the same thing that was said by the Rt. Hon. Mr. Howe, that you are proud that the Inland Company has come in, and will spend $50 million in that rich iron ore area, and you are boastful also of the fact that you continue to ask the American interests to come in and invest their money, as if this country was in its colonial stage, and was dollar hungry, and could not undertake any major capital development. That is not so. You should have a policy, I suggest, which would definitely stimulate the development processing industries for all of our iron ore, as well as other minerals.

MR. ROBERTS: High protection. Is that what the hon. member is advocating?

MR. SALSBERG: No, I am not advocating high protection. I am advocating a policy which was discussed in this House about 30 years ago, in relation to nickel ore. I am only applying it to a wider field.

What happened at that time? An outside group of financiers obtained control of the richest nickel deposit in the world. They dug up the nickel ore, and shipped it to refineries and smelters outside of the country.

In the First World War, it was found the nickel ore from Ontario was finding its way to Germany, and was used in the manufacture of bullets which were fired at Canadian and Allied forces on the Western Front.

This House—I think it was in 1917—enacted an amendment to the Mining Act—a very important amendment—which provided—I will read the amendment, a very excellent historic document, which should be repeated whenever the occasion arises. The amendment reads:

(1) All lands, claims, or mining rights leased, patented, or otherwise disposed of under this Act on or after the 12th day of April, 1917, shall be subject to the condition that all ores or minerals raised or removed therefrom shall be treated and refined within Canada, so as to yield refined metal or other products suitable for direct use in the arts without further treatment, in default whereof the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may declare the lease, patent or other form of title of such lands, claims or mining rights to be null and void, and the Order-in-Council so declaring shall be registered in the office of the local master of titles or registry office as the case may be, whereupon such lands, claims or mining rights shall revert to and become vested in His Majesty, His Heirs and Successors, freed and discharged of any interest or claim of any other person.

That is a very clear section I would say, and leaves no doubt in the minds of anybody as to what the Legislature of Ontario had in mind in 1917.

Then section 2 provides:

(2) The Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council is hereby authorized to exempt any lands, claims or mining rights from the operation of this section for such period of time as to him may seem proper.

And the last section, No. 3, reads:

(3) This section shall not apply to iron ore, nor to the lands, claims or mining rights from which iron ore is mined or taken.

That is the section, as amended, in 1917.

The purpose, of course, as was clearly expressed, was to process the nickel ore which was dug up in this province, here in Canada. It made it clear that it should be in a state which would require no further refining or treatment, but ready for the arts—meaning, ready for use.

The fact that the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council was given authority to suspend the operation of the Act was, I am sure, deliberately done so as not to close any operations during the period when the smelter or refinery would be in course of construction. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, the government should bring in a bill to amend the Mining Act, to eliminate subsection 3 of section 102. In other words, the exclusion of iron ore in the Act should be done away with. If that were done, then the government would really approach a policy which would, in time, result in the establishment of steel mills, iron foundries and other types of industry, to treat our iron ores.

I will be told that iron ore is not in the same category as nickel ore. That is true. I am not suggesting we do not export iron ore. I am suggesting, however, that section 2 of the Act gives you sufficient power, not to apply it immediately, but you would have a whip in your hands to use, so as to direct the development of the mining industry in a very definite direction. At present you have not got it, and I think the time has come for the government to face up to its responsibility.

I know the hon. Minister of Mines has tried and so has every member of his staff and his department. The opening of roads is a laudable thing and all the hon. members are quite satisfied with it. The discovery of new precious minerals is something we are all very happy about, but it is not a policy, and does not take the place of a policy. A sound policy, based upon the long-range needs and interest of the province, would demand that you stimulate, encourage, insist on and do everything in your power for the utilization of these ores, all of them, for the development of industry, the fabricating industry, the processing industry right here in Ontario. This would provide new towns, new industrial areas, and opportunities for everybody from the labourer to the engineer, to the architect, to the chemist and to other scientists whose services are required in an expanding industry of this sort.

In conclusion, I want to say that I do not pretend to be the only one who desires that. I am sure there are other hon. members in this House who would subscribe to that. What I say, however, is that the government does not pursue a policy which will ever bring this about. In the meantime until it does there is no cause for merriment, enjoyment or boastfulness when all we can say is we have discovered new ores, new riches. All that happens today is that this riches is being dug up, put on boats and trains and shipped out of this land.

Item No. 2 agreed to.

On Vote 103, item 3, Maintenance—$116,900.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): On item 3, about the third item from the bottom, "Forfeiture of Mining Claims," I was wondering how you could spend money in forfeiting mining claims.

HON. MR. KELLY: The explanation of that is the cost of obtaining abstracts from the Land Titles Office. The costs involved in forfeiting the claims are due to the abstracts from the Land Titles Office, as well as the cost of advertising the claims.

MR. GRUMMETT: Filing documents, and so forth?

HON. MR. KELLY: That is right.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 104, Geological Branch—$250,200.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I want to ask the hon. Minister a question in respect to mining and roads. I noticed in a press release from his department last fall, in connection with the Matachewan-Kenogami road, that this press release sets out the statement and goes on to say there were 22 roads in the Northern Ontario mining areas opened up. Most of these projects were handled on a co-operative basis with one or more established mining companies participating with the department.

I would like to ask the hon. Minister just to what extent do mining companies participate in the building of these roads, if the participation is equal in all roads, or does the department assess the participation of the mining company in the cost of these mining roads?

HON. MR. KELLY: We have a formula, whereby the mining companies participate, which is in line with that accorded any municipality in Southern Ontario. Where we build a road in conjunction with a mining company, we participate 50 per cent. Where we have no specific mining company to deal with, such as going through the Warren Lake area, the department, on the premise that it is building up potential mining areas based on the advice of our geologists, builds the road in its entirety and bears the entire cost.

Votes 103 and 104 agreed to.

On Vote 105, Mines Inspection Branch—$131,400.

MR. GRUMMETT: Item 1: How many inspectors are in the employ of the department?

HON. MR. KELLY: The total is 15, including the chief inspector.

MR. GRUMMETT: 15 mining inspectors?

HON. MR. KELLY: That is right.

MR. GRUMMETT: On the same item, the last portion, "Guarding Abandoned Mine Workings," what expenditure do you have in that connection in mines?

HON. MR. KELLY: This is a provision where we cannot recover the cost due to mines which were possibly shut down many, many years ago and the company is non-existent. Yet we must guard the pits which are there and fence them in from time to time. It is a small amount.

MR. GRUMMETT: How much was spent last year on that item?

HON. MR. KELLY: The amount is very close to $500.

Votes 105 and 106 agreed to.

On Vote 107, Natural Gas Commissioner's Branch—$34,000.

MR. SALSBERG: In view of the fact there is a Gas Commission to be appointed, I wonder why the Estimates are at the low figure shown here? It is either an indication that the Natural Gas, or whatever they call it, the Fuel Commission will not be within the Mining Department, or that the Natural Gas Commissioner's Branch will be maintained regardless of the new Fuel Commission to be set up. At any rate, I think an explanation is necessary.

HON. MR. KELLY: In connection with the Estimates for the Natural Gas Commissioner's office, I might say at the present time steps are being taken to form the Ontario Fuel Board, which will take in the duties of the Natural Gas Commissioner, the Fuel Controller, the Natural Gas Referee, in which event the Estimates now being voted will not be used for this specific purpose. However, I rather imagine warrants will be issued to provide funds for the Ontario Fuel Board.

MR. SALSBERG: May I continue with this question? Does that mean it is not the intention to have the Fuel Board constituted within the Department of Mines?

MR. KERR (Davenport): That was answered.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not think it was. I am asking the hon. Minister and I hope he will answer.

HON. MR. KELLY: That is a matter of policy. It has not yet been decided where the board will sit. In the interim, it is necessary for the work to go on until these things are all correlated and joined up to form this board. Therefore, at the present time, we can do nothing other than include this figure of $34,000, for the work irrespective of whether it rests in our Estimates.

In the event that the board is formed shortly, and it becomes unnecessary to spend these amounts, then, of course, we will have a surplus in here. But by the same token, we would have to provide for warrants for the Ontario Fuel Board whose costs are not provided for in these Estimates.

MR. GRUMMETT: I want to go back to Vote 106, item 1—"Cable Testing Laboratory, Toronto." Some 8 or 9 years ago, the hon. members of the House were given an opportunity to go to the laboratory and watch the testing of cable. That to me was a very interesting experience, and I was wondering if there had been any hon. member of the House who has recently taken advantage of watching the cable testing done over in the laboratory.

It is something which everyone should see, because it is very interesting to watch these great machines tearing the cables apart. To me it was extremely interesting and I am sure all the hon. members would like to see it, if they were made aware of just when cable testing was taking place.

HON. MR. KELLY: I am advised that the testing is going on continuously and the hon. members are not only free, but welcome to go over to the East Block and see this process at any time they desire.

MR. GRUMMETT: Some years ago, a message was given in the House that members could go over on a certain day. I think at least 30 or 35 members took advantage of that offer and watched the testing taking place. Perhaps the hon. Minister could arrange to give the hon. members that privilege again.

MR. OLIVER: What is the picture in respect to the production of natural gas in Southwestern Ontario? Is it on the increase, or have you any figures?

HON. MR. KELLY: As you may know, I have been on the Gas Committee and the figures effecting Southwestern Ontario—and when I say "Southwestern Ontario," I am speaking of natural gas—consumption of gas are as follows: the storage figures are 160 billion cubic feet capacity. They have a potential production for 20 years estimated at 8 billion cubic feet per year. The relation of that figure to the over-all figure of the pipeline would be in the nature of 1/20th of the total required. In other words, Ontario's own production represents approximately 1/20th of Ontario's total consumption.

Vote 107 agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 108, Sulphur Fumes Arbitrator—$10,000.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to ask the hon. Minister whether there is a decline in the claims on account of these fumes in the Sudbury area, and if that is the result of the improvement in the situation generally up there?

HON. MR. KELLY: I would say that the condition in Sudbury which originated about 35 years ago, from what we call the "open pit roasting process," caused a diffusion of the sulphur in the ore over a wide area that practically ate up all the foliage. But since the installation of the high smoke stacks, it is known now that even forestry is creeping back close into Sudbury in the last 20 years.

It is quite evident in sections not more than 5 miles out of the Town of Sudbury that this is the case.

MR. SALSBERG: Excepting, Mr. Chairman, that as late as 3 or 4 years ago, when we discussed this item, the hon. member for Sudbury brought to this House the complaints of many farmers in the district. I do not believe it is completely done away with, but all I was asking was whether the experience indicates a declining incidence of the effect of the sulphur or not?

HON. MR. KELLY: I think I can answer that. In the Preliminary Report for 1953, there were no arbitrations asked for in that year, either in the Sudbury district or at Port Colborne where the International Nickel Refinery is located.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Were any claims paid?

HON. MR. KELLY: Yes, some claims were paid.

MR. NIXON: What was the amount of damages?

HON. MR. KELLY: We do not have the details of that here, but it has all been settled satisfactorily between the mine and the claimant.

Vote 108 agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: On Vote 109, Mining Lands Branch—$173,100.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): In order that I may make this enquiry, I would say it is rather refreshing to have on our desks at a time like this a report made up to the 31st of December, 1953, less than 3 months from this actual date, giving figures for the whole year. I would like to know if this is a new departure which is going to be adopted not only in the Department of Mines, but throughout all the government departments?

HON. MR. KELLY: This is a Preliminary Report based on the facts for 1953, and we made them as tight as we could get them to give the hon. members up-to-date information. I would like to answer two questions which were put to me earlier today. One was dealing with the export of ores from Canada, Ontario in particular. I would advise that we import iron ore from the United States both at Hamilton and Sault Ste. Marie. It is necessary in the processing of steel to have different gradations and different types of ore to make certain types of steel. We not only export, but we import ore, so it is a two-way operation insofar as Ontario is concerned with iron ore.

The second question I would like to deal with is the reference to the leasing areas. There are 646,000 acres of them. I would like to read into the record a letter I have received from the president of the Prospectors' and Developers' Association in connection with that organization's feelings about the government's programme. This is a letter addressed to myself, dated March 29th, and I quote:

On behalf of the executive, may I express to you sincere appreciation of the Prospectors' and Developers' Association for the splendid contribution made by you and your department which helped so much towards making this year's convention such an outstanding success.

Dr. W. D. Harding, in carrying the heavy load of work entailed in dealing so splendidly with the very large prospectors' classes in Toronto and throughout Ontario, steadily increases the already heavy debt of gratitude owed to him by all the prospecting and mining fraternity of this province. As you are no doubt aware, our association has attempted to express some of its appreciation to Dr. Harding for his efforts by offering him, on unanimous vote, an Honorary Life Membership in the Prospectors' and Developers' Association.

Mr. Rickaby, ably supported by Mr. Forbes Macfarlane, helped us to make successful a difficult, yet important, Tuesday evening business meeting. The technical programmes benefited from the contributions by W. J. Pearson, E. M. Abraham and H. D. Carlson.

This is a letter received this year from the Prospectors' and Developers' Association. No question was ever raised by them this year as to the leasing which they spoke of last year.

MR. ROBERT HERBERT (Temiskaming): I would like to ask the hon. Minister if any consideration has been given to the issuing of mining tags at the time the prospectors go out to stake their claims?

As it is today, the prospector stakes his claim, comes back to the recording office, is issued tags and must return a great distance to the claim to put the tags on. I know another province is issuing tags at the time of staking and I would like to know the hon. Minister's views on that?

HON. MR. KELLY: I would say representations have been made to the committee, and the department has it under study.

Vote 109 agreed to.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I noticed in a press release to the Department of Mines last fall that attention was drawn to the James Bay lowland. The press release said during the last few months a number of companies have manifested interest in the oil and gas possibilities of the area. I would like to hear the hon. Minister's views on that, please.

HON. MR. KELLY: I may say that we have determined that the development of the James Bay basin should be carried out on very honest and upright principles. We have been careful to ensure that—to use my own words—no party shall “boom the basin for the sake of mining the public.” The parties interested are, among others, the Lundberg Exploration Company, who inform me they have spent up to $45,000 on aerial surveys in the area. These people also tell me that, on the melting of the snow in early June, they propose to carry out a seismic survey. Other Calgary interests have taken up some 300,000 acres in 100 square miles lots.

So far as the basin is concerned, I have been very interested in getting capital to come and explore it. According to the best information I can get, we do not know that there is oil in the basin. At the same time, we have no knowledge that it is not there. If it is there, this is a good thing for Ontario, because if we are sufficiently fortunate to discover gas and oil in the James Bay basin it would mean not only a great boom to Northern Ontario, but investment capital—risk capital—flowing into Ontario from overseas would certainly hit the jackpot.

Item agreed to.

Vote 110. Main Office, Construction of Mining Roads, $1 million.

MR. OLIVER: I should like to ask the hon. Minister with regard to this Vote, what was the actual expenditure last year of this $1 million for mining roads?

HON. MR. KELLY: Our total expenditure, as close as I can estimate up to March 31, was $875,000.

MR. GRUMMETT: I just want to say a word or two to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Kelly) on what he has been doing in connection with mining access roads. I think it was a good move on the part of the government to set aside certain funds for use by the hon. Minister of Mines in order that he might provide for better access to the mines. The hon. Minister of Mines knows the situation in Northern Ontario and, to put it bluntly, I believe he is a little more sympathetic than the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) to the construction of such roads.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: The hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) should not say that, after all the money that has been spent in his own riding.

MR. GRUMMETT: The hon. Minister of Highways did a good job on the main highways, but I am also interested in access roads to mines, and I wish to commend the hon. Minister of Mines for what he has done. I sincerely hope that, in the coming year, he will be given even greater scope and a greater amount of funds in order to carry on with this good work.

MR. R. HERBERT (Temiskaming): I too would like to congratulate the hon. Minister on the remarkable job he has done in building mining access roads. I wish to ask him, however, if any steps have been taken to have closer liaison between his department and the Department of Highways. In our area we have several mining roads which are now coming back into use after a number of years during which they carried very little traffic. Both the Department of Mines and the Department of Highways feel this is the responsibility of the other department, and my feeling is that a closer liaison should be reached between the two.

HON. MR. KELLY: There is very close agreement between us, not only with the Department of Highways, but also with the Department of Lands and Forests. We recognize that Cobalt is coming back, with 30 mines in production, and, between the 3 departments, we shall see that Cobalt mining roads are served.

MR. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): I understand, Mr. Chairman, that a report will be presented on mining access roads shortly. I imagine at that time, hon. members will be given an opportunity to express their views on the allocation of this sum of $1 million for such roads. I think that report will be highly enlightening, and will give the House some indication of what hon. members may expect to see in this connection.

MR. SALSBERG: I should like to ask whether in the construction of these mining roads, the hon. Minister is contracting the work out to private road contracting companies, whether the work is being done for the Department of Mines by the Department of Highways or if the Department of Mines has its own facilities for the construction of these roads? I think a picture of how this matter is handled would be welcome.

HON. MR. KELLY: Let us take, for example, the situation in the Manitowadge area, which will, no doubt, develop this year to a point where it will require access roads leading off the main roads entering the region. If a mining company is prepared to contribute 50 per cent. of the cost of a road leading to its own mine, the department, after a survey of the estimated cost, will go along with this dollar for dollar. If, on the other hand, we are determined to build a road to open up an area, such as we are presently doing in the case of the road leading north from the Westing road to join with the road leading south and east to Timmins, this is a project of the department which is put up for tender and public bids. Is that the answer to the question?

MR. SALSBERG: Not quite. Unfortunately, I did not make myself clear enough. I am asking, Mr. Chairman, what policy the Mining Department pursues in building these roads generally. I will repeat: Does it engage outside contractors on the basis of tenders, or does it make use of the Department of Highways to build these roads, or, finally, does the department possess the machinery and staff to do the building itself?

HON. MR. KELLY: I think I have covered two of those points. As to the third point, of the 22 roads which I have listed in my report, the great majority were built for us by the Department of Highways and under that department's supervision.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister's own department did not build any roads?

HON. MR. KELLY: We have never built them ourselves.

MR. SALSBERG: So that if you decide to build, it is done either by the Department of Highways or the work is put out for tender. Is it true that in no circumstances does the hon. Minister's department finance a mining company's road project? In other words, if a mining company is desirous of opening a road to a mine, the department undertakes to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of that road, would that 50 per cent. be paid to the mining company so that they might build a road to their own mine?

HON. MR. KELLY: I have explained that. A mining company will ask us to contribute 50 per cent. of the cost of building a road. It will ask a construction company to build the road. Upon presentation of the bill, we contribute dollar for dollar. As to the cost to us, it is limited in the first instance by the total amount allowed the mining company. In the second instance, it is checked to ensure that the expenditure shown has in fact been paid.

MR. SALSBERG: In such instances does the checking of the construction work, to ascertain whether we are getting full value for the dollars we spend, become the responsibility of the Department of Mines or does it fall on the Department of Highways? The latter department would be better equipped, I imagine, to determine such a question.

HON. MR. KELLY: In some instances this is done by our own department, but in the majority of cases we have had to rely on the Department of Highways.

Vote 110 agreed to.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF MUNICIPAL AFFAIRS

Vote 111, Main Office—$2,489,000.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, I suggest through you that I might pass my notes to the representative of Hansard, as I have done in past years. Hon. members may direct any questions to me which they may like to ask during the passage of the Estimates. I would point out that this is a service department, giving service to the municipalities and, as I said, I will hand my notes to Hansard if this is satisfactory, as has been done in the past. Hon. members can read them and we can get on with the Estimates.

MR. OLIVER: I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) should agree to make a preliminary statement before the Estimates. It is hardly the proper thing to pass this to Hansard. That does not do very much good. I do not know whether the speech will or not.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: If hon. members prefer it the other way, I am quite willing to oblige them.

The Assessment Branch of the Department of Municipal Affairs was created in 1947, and each year since that time there has been a rapid increase in the volume of their work and duties. Their duties, though always closely related to assessment, have become more varied with the passing of the years.

NEED FOR FORMATION OF BRANCH

The branch was created not only because of the constant demands of municipalities for assistance with their assessment problems, but also due to the proven necessity of assisting municipalities in the installation of proper assessment systems, which in turn would produce an equalized assessment. A correct basis of assessment is necessary for many reasons, among them being:

(1) As municipal taxes are based on assessment, it is necessary to have a proper equalized assessment on properties of all types so that no taxpayer or particular class of property owners will pay more than their just share of taxes.

(2) Many charges levied on the various municipalities, which form part of a county unit, or a territorial district unit, are based on assessment, so an equalized assessment in the various municipalities in the unit must be achieved to apportion such costs properly.

(3) Since the apportionment of costs for the erection and maintenance of not only high schools, but also elementary schools in many high school districts, township school areas, union school sections, etc., are based on assessment, it is necessary to obtain an overall equalized assessment. This is particularly important where such school districts or areas overlap into two or more counties or territorial districts.

(4) As many government grants are based on assessment, an equalized basis of assessment is necessary so that every municipality will receive its just share of such grants. While the new system of unconditional grants is not based on assessment but population, it is necessary that municipal assessors be properly instructed in their duties, as they are responsible for taking such a population count.

The branch has assisted in the above endeavours in the past years and has spent considerable time and effort in a great number of municipalities in advising and assisting elected representatives and appointed officials when proper assessment systems were installed for the first time, or where their present systems were being revamped. Unfortunately, this work had to be greatly curtailed in 1953 due to the necessity of completing the re-assessment of the Greater Toronto Area. However, when possible, this work was carried on and it is expected that in future years it will be greatly extended.

FUTURE EXPANSION

Early in 1954, it is expected that the staff of the Assessment Branch will be augmented by at least 7 new assessors. This will enable the branch to carry out some of the projects which have been promised. It will also enable the Assessment Branch to arrange a future programme embracing more extensively the establishment of a proper equalized assessment in all the municipalities of Ontario.

MANUAL OF ASSESSMENT VALUES

As of December 31st, 1953, at least 500 municipalities had adopted the manual for assessment purposes. During the year 6 cities completed their re-assessments on the manual basis, namely: Ottawa, Sudbury, Peterborough, North Bay, St. Thomas and Woodstock, with very successful results, in addition to a number of towns, villages and townships.

The branch has tried out changes and additions to the manual in the Toronto area, and these changes will be incorporated in future revisions of the manual. Some very good suggestions which will benefit the manual have been again received, but it is noted that criticism is still being received from persons who apparently have neither read nor studied the manual. In the manual there are at least 5 different classifications (and 2 more will be added shortly) of properties. These, along with the rental capitalization feature, affect the so-called old-age and obsolescence depreciation factors. If used properly, any depreciation necessary for age or obsolescence is taken care of in the manual.

GREATER TORONTO ASSESSMENT BRANCH

Legislation was enacted in 1953 to provide that the assessment, made by the board in 1953, should be used for taxation purposes in 1954. As at the end of December, 1953, 10 of the 12 suburban municipalities had returned their assessment rolls on the new basis, while the last 2 returned their rolls in January of this year. The total assessment rolls in the individual municipalities showed an increase of anywhere from 100 per cent. to 384 per cent., while some individual assessments were raised as much as 1,000 per cent. The difference in the increase was created by 2 factors:

(a) the percentage of actual value the local assessor was assessing for previously, and

(b) the amount of growth in the municipality.

The percentage of appeals against the assessment was amazingly small. Less than 2 per cent. of the assessments were appealed (including the rolls returned in January), while the total adjustment at Courts of Revision was less than 1½ per cent. of the new assessment, of which the majority was suggested by the board. In 8 municipalities there were 70 appeals from the Court of Revision to the county judge. In the hearings before 3 county judges there were adjustments made of $33,000, of which the board recommended 80 per cent. Only 5 appeals as of December 31st, 1953, have been carried from the county judge to the Ontario Municipal Board, all of which were appealed by the Greater Toronto Assessment Board.

The amount of work and detail has been enormous, due to several factors, among them being:

(a) the large and rapid growth in the municipalities,

(b) the lack of records and assessment personnel in the municipalities to keep up with the growth.

(c) the desire of some local municipal councils to have a low assessment. (1) to secure larger government grants, or (2) to pay a smaller share of the York County costs, or the costs of the new Metropolitan Area.

It is expected that the work of the board will be concluded by the middle of 1954. This will release the members of the Assessment Branch to their ordinary duties.

HOMES FOR THE AGED ACT

In 1953, legislation was enacted to provide that where a district assessor had not been appointed, the Department of Municipal Affairs would make an equalization of assessment for the purpose of apportioning the costs for the erection and maintenance of a home for the aged among the municipalities comprising a territorial district. As noted before, no district assessors have been appointed, and late in 1953 requests were received from 6 territorial districts requesting the Assessment Branch to carry out this project. It is hoped that in 1954 it will be possible to meet some of the requests. In the scattered municipalities this entails considerable traveling. However, if the work is extended to include the school sections in unorganized townships, the project should be of assistance in determining the apportionment of costs and educational grants in the different high school districts and township school areas which overlap into both the organized and the unorganized municipalities.

ASSESSMENT OF ONTARIO GOVERNMENT AND ONTARIO HYDRO PROPERTY

The work of placing valuations on properties owned and operated by the Government of Ontario or its agencies or by the Ontario Hydro Electric Power Commission, which came within the scope of the 1952 legislation, was again carried out in 1953 by the Assessment Branch. A larger number of new properties were either purchased or erected by the government or the Ontario Hydro since 1952. These properties had to be inspected and a valuation placed on them for grant purposes. In addition, in the municipalities which had changed their basis of valuation since 1952, all Ontario Government and Ontario Hydro property had to be revalued so that the valuations could be brought into line with the new re-assessment. This was, of course, in addition to checking the assessments of the properties where no changes had been made in the values.

COUNTY ASSESSMENT SYSTEM

At the end of 1953, 27 counties out of 38 county units had appointed county assessors as the preliminary step toward establishing a proper basis of equalized assessment. It is anticipated that at least 2 more counties will adopt the county assessment system in 1954.

As yet no district assessors have been appointed for any of the 11 territorial districts in Northern Ontario, though legislation was enacted in 1950 to permit such appointments. No appointments were made due to the lack of sufficient requests from the municipalities in the various districts.

It would appear that if the branch carries out the requests for assistance made under the Homes for the Aged Act, the municipalities may decide that the equalized assessment when established by the Assessment Branch is sufficient for their purposes. However, unless the equalized assessment made by the branch is comprehensive enough, it will not alleviate the necessity for a local equalized assessment.

In 1953, a grant of $1,500 was paid to each of the 27 counties operating under the county assessment system to assist them in defraying the costs of establishing and maintaining a proper basis of equalized assessment.

MUNICIPAL AUDITING AND ACCOUNTING

The duties of the Municipal Auditing and Accounting Branch of the department of Municipal Affairs may be summarized briefly under the following headings:

1. Licencing of municipal auditors.
2. Review of municipal audit reports.
3. Instructions and recommendations to auditors.
4. Instructions and recommendations to municipal clerks and treasurers.
5. Preparation of special reports or financial analyses of certain municipalities.
6. Special investigations.
7. Revision of accounting forms and financial statements for greater uniformity.

LICENCING OF MUNICIPAL AUDITORS

A municipal auditor's licence may be granted on payment of annual fee to chartered accountants or certified public accountants.

All other persons must pass an examination set by the department. This examination is divided into 3 parts: Municipal law, municipal accounting, and auditing.

The examination questions are similar to those given to accounting students at the intermediate level.

Licences are renewed each year as long as the licensee is in good standing and has performed his duties in a satisfactory manner.

Licencing powers are exercised and fees prescribed by the Minister of Municipal Affairs as regulations have not been made by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to govern the exercise of these powers.

Licences may be cancelled or suspended by the Minister if the auditor has carried out his duties in a negligent manner.

Licence fee, $2 per year. Examination fee, $3 per year.

REVIEW OF AUDIT REPORTS

Audit reports are reviewed carefully for the purpose of detecting errors of omission or commission which may arise from an incorrect interpretation of the Statutes or from failure to follow instructions in the preparation of the financial statements.

INSTRUCTIONS AND RECOMMENDATIONS TO AUDITORS

After reviewing the audit reports, correspondence is carried on with the auditor to obtain explanations of certain items in the statements, to advise him of errors and how to correct them, and to make recommendations for improvements in subsequent reports and statements.

Memoranda are sent to all auditors once or twice each year which contain instructions for the preparation of financial statements and information on changes necessitated by new legislation.

INSTRUCTIONS TO MUNICIPAL CLERKS AND TREASURERS

When the audit report indicates that the accounting system in a municipality is at fault, advice is sent to the clerk or treasurer on the manner in which the fault may be corrected.

If necessary, a representative of the department will visit the municipality to give the officials accounting instructions and to assist them in setting up the proper books of account.

SPECIAL REPORTS

A considerable part of this branch's time is spent on the preparation of special reports or financial analyses dealing with the affairs of a particular municipality.

Such reports may be prepared for the use of the Ontario Municipal Board or for the use of the department's Administration Branch, or for the use of another department of the government, or at the request of the municipality concerned.

SPECIAL INVESTIGATIONS

Special investigations may also be made into the affairs of certain municipalities which necessitate visits to those municipalities and an examination of their accounts.

Such investigations may be made to assist the local auditor, at his request, to determine whether a defalcation exists and its extent, or to determine whether an auditor has been negligent in his duties.

UNIFORM ACCOUNTING

For the past few years, the department has taken an active interest along with other Canadian provinces and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics in promoting uniformity in municipal accounting and in municipal financial statements. The advantages of uniformity are that it facilitates comparisons of revenue and expenditures, not only in Ontario municipalities but in all municipalities throughout Canada.

Much of this work has been completed and only minor revisions will be necessary after 1954. The completion of this foundation will now enable this branch to undertake the preparation of an accounting manual of instructions and procedures for small municipalities which will fit in with the uniform style of financial statements.

PROVINCIAL GRANTS

In 1943, the 1-mill subsidy = $3,063,907.

In 1948, the 1-mill subsidy = $3,442,269.

In 1949, the department introduced grants under: The Police Act, The Fire Departments Act, The Children's Protection Act, and The Homes for the Aged Act, in place of the 1-mill subsidy.

At the same time a guarantee was given that no municipality would receive less under the new form of grants than it received under the 1-mill subsidy.

Under the new system of grants, the following moneys were distributed among Ontario municipalities:

1949	$4,118,452
1950	4,761,647
1951	5,490,067
1952	6,453,201
1953	7,257,928

The following is a statement showing a breakdown of the 1953 grants:

Police Department	$2,726,535
Fire Departments	2,218,219
Children's Protection	1,096,211
Homes for the Aged	932,438
1-mill Guarantee	284,522
Total	$7,257,928

This is an increase over the 1-mill subsidy paid in 1948 of $3,442,269.64.

During the 1953 session, the Legislature repealed the grants payable under The Police Act, The Fire Departments Act and the 1-mill subsidy and in lieu thereof provided for per capita grants under the authority of The Municipal Unconditional Grants Act, 1953.

These grants vary according to the size and class of municipality, as follows:

TOWNS AND VILLAGES:	Per Capita Grant of
Population up to 2,000	$1.60
Over 2,000 but not exceeding 5,000	1.60
Over 5,000 but not exceeding 7,000	1.75
Over 7,000 but not exceeding 10,000	2.00
Over 10,000	2.25
TOWNSHIPS:
Population up to 2,000	1.50
Over 2,000 but not exceeding 5,000	1.60
Over 5,000 but not exceeding 10,000	1.75
Over 10,000 but not exceeding 15,000	1.85
Over 15,000 but not exceeding 20,000	2.00
Over 20,000	2.25
CITIES:
Population under 75,000	2.50
Over 75,000 but not exceeding 200,000	2.75
Over 200,000 but not exceeding 400,000	3.00
Over 400,000 but not exceeding 750,000	3.50
Over 750,000	4.00

There has been a lot of criticism over these rates.

May I quote figures to show that townships received greater benefits under the per capita grants notwithstanding the fact that most townships only receive a per capita grant of $1.50 while larger urban municipalities have grants running up to $3 or $4.

It is estimated that the 1954 per capita grants will increase over the 1953 police, fire and 1-mill guarantee grants as follows:

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT

	1953 Police, Fire 1-Mill Guarantee	1954 Estimated Per Capita Grant	Increase Amount	%
Cities	$3,142,875	$ 6,254,847	$3,111,972	99
Towns	857,275	1,305,588	448,313	52
Villages	234,370	362,109	127,739	55
Townships	994,758	3,744,942	2,750,184	276
Total	$5,229,278	$11,667,486	$6,438,208	123

The amount of per capita grants estimated to be paid to townships in 1954 is 9.29 per cent. of the tax levy of the townships.

The percentage of the urban grants to the tax levy is: cities, 6.56 per cent.; towns, 6.9 per cent.; villages, 6.87 per cent.

COMPARATIVE STATEMENT

	1952 Municipal Taxation Revenue	Percentage 1954 Grants are to Tax Levy
Cities	$ 95,304,000	6.56
Towns	18,901,000	6.91
Villages	5,268,000	6.87
Townships	40,295,000	9.29
	$159,768,000	7.30

Again, if you take the percentage of the total grants paid in 1953, and the percentage of the estimated grants to be paid in 1954, you will find that the percentage for the urban municipalities has dropped very rapidly, while the percentage of the total grants paid to townships has more than doubled, i.e.:

	Percentage of Total Grants
	1953	1954
Cities	60.10	53.61
Towns	16.39	11.19
Villages	4.49	3.29
Townships	19.03	32.10
	100.00	100.00

In addition to the increased assistance to municipalities which I have just given you, I would remind the rural municipalities they will still be receiving grants toward homes for the aged, and children's protection that were inaugurated in 1949.

Further statistics to demonstrate that rural municipalities benefit more under the per capita grants:

MUNICIPAL ADMINISTRATION BRANCH

COMPOSITION

The Municipal Administration Branch is composed of the chief supervisor, 2 supervisors and 6 assistants to the supervisors, plus the necessary clerical and stenographic staff.

For the purposes of the branch the province is divided into 2 parts: those municipalities that are situate in the counties are the responsibility of the supervisor for Southern Ontario and those municipalities in the districts are assigned to the supervisor for Northern Ontario.

The supervisors are under the direction and guidance of the chief supervisor and are aided in their activities by the assistant supervisors.

SUPERVISION

The primary activity of the branch is the supervision of those municipalities under part III of The Department of Municipal Affairs Act. Municipalities under this control are municipalities which defaulted on their debts and were placed under the supervision of the department by the Ontario Municipal Board, and improvement districts which automatically come under supervision until they have matured sufficiently to warrant their independent administration.

The supervision of a municipality is very close and requires departmental approval to every action of council. Particular attention is paid to the financial activities and legal authorities for all activities of council. The main objective in the case of supervised municipalities is the successful refunding of the municipal debt and a build-up of sufficient reserves so that the municipality will be in a good enough cash position to permit it to operate without excessive bank borrowings.

IMPROVEMENT DISTRICTS

While the improvement districts do not have a defaulted debt to refund, great care is taken by department supervisors to ensure that the financial structure of the municipality when erected to an independent municipality will ensure that the municipality is in a good cash position with a reasonable capital indebtedness.

DESIGNATED MINING MUNICIPALITIES

Municipalities designated as "mining municipalities" by the regulations under the Assessment Act are required by the regulations to submit all activities relating to finance to the department for approval. While the control exercised is neither as broad or detailed as supervised municipalities, the size and nature of some of the municipalities concerned pose some very complex and extensive problems. The budgets of the 32 designated municipalities and their boards and commissions must be studied in detail and the formulae as set out in the regulations applied so as to effect an equitable distribution of the mining revenues. All licencing and debenture by-laws of these municipalities must receive the same careful scrutiny.

GENERAL ASSISTANCE

There are over 12,000 letters received annually by the department, the majority of which are enquiries and requests for advice and guidance by municipalities throughout the province. While the bulk of these enquiries can be satisfied by return mail, it must be remembered that quite a few enquiries are from officials of long standing in some of the larger municipalities and the queries posed often involve considerable research and reference work before a proper reply can be made.

DEPARTMENTAL APPROVAL

There are a number of statutory requirements of departmental approval to various specific municipal activities which are as follows:

Road closing: All municipal by-laws purporting to close roads which were reserved in the original survey of a municipality and which lead to water, must be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council before they can become effective. Applications for approval are received by the department and before a recommendation is made the entire file is checked in detail, particularly with respect to description and vires. Other concerned departments of the government are notified and their comments and approval solicited. In all too many cases, the municipality has proceeded with a bad description and results in a delay of upwards of 6 months or more.

Considerable effort has been made in the way of publicity and education on this matter in an effort to get the municipalities to consult department officials before commencing the procedure. It has been our experience that where the department has been consulted prior to the drafting of a road closing by-law, little or no difficulty has been encountered.

Pensions: The approval of the department is required to all by-laws authorizing pensions for municipal officials under section 386 (48) of The Municipal Act. Contracts for municipal pensions with the insurers are of necessity quite detailed and lengthy and must be thoroughly checked in every detail before approval of the Minister is recommended. There have been 200 pension plans approved by the department to date and amending by-laws are submitted regularly as employment conditions change.

Tile drainage: Municipal applications to the Treasury Department for tile drainage loans are submitted to this department for recommendation for or against the loan. In each of these cases, a financial analysis is prepared and studied before such recommendation can be made.

ASSISTANCE TO MUNICIPALITIES

The department is required to answer enquiries on every phase of municipal government and advise and guide elected and appointed municipal officials throughout the province.

While the bulk of departmental activities is handled by correspondence (over 12,000 pieces in 1953, which does not include audit reports from 965 municipalities, deeds for approval, tax registration certificates, etc.) the Deputy Minister, the chief supervisor and their assistants must also receive delegations from municipal associations and organizations, representatives from foreign countries desiring to be initiated in our methods of local government, representatives from councils, boards and commissions, Members of Parliament and Mr. John Citizen, etc.

It is not unusual for all senior officials of the department to be so tied down in this respect that it is impossible to attend to the mail for days at a time, and I may add that a great number of the visitors to the department fail to observe the necessity of making an appointment beforehand. While we immensely enjoy making personal contacts, knowledge of impending visits would greatly assist us in keeping the machinery of the department going at all times.

At the request of the municipalities themselves, the supervisors must be ready at all times to give advice and guidance in the preparation of a great number and variety of by-laws. Debenture by-laws alone include the preparation of schedules, advice on interest rates, assistance in marketing debentures, preparation of municipal statistics to assist in the selling of the debentures, helping in having debentures printed, proofreading debentures and a heavy volume of correspondence in connection therewith.

Road closing by-laws entail a great deal of preparation and correspondence.

Municipal problems and complaints have to be studied and investigated, and other departments consulted.

Legislation has to be debated upon and referred to the heads of other departments concerned and recommendations made.

Regulations have to be passed and filed, etc.

In other words, the senior officials of the department are ever ready and willing, when requested by the municipalities, to give of their experience and knowledge that the municipalities and the ratepayers may obtain an ever increasing improvement in the administration of their local affairs and a foundation of mutual understanding and confidence created between the municipalities and the department.

MUNICIPAL TAXATION

Municipal tax levy in Ontario in 1952 amounted to $57.87 per person.

Per capita levy in 1939 was $32.79.

Adjusting this per capita figure to present day purchasing power of a dollar it would be $60.50, which would mean that the taxes in Ontario have only gone up $2.63 per capita in a period of 13 years.

This small increase in municipal taxes is mostly due to the enormous increase in subsidies paid to municipalities, their boards and commissions by the Province of Ontario.

THE ONTARIO MUNICIPAL BOARD
POWERS AND DUTIES

The jurisdiction of the board is contained in the large number of public general Acts and in numerous private Acts. Among the important public Acts are:

- The Ontario Municipal Board Act
- The Municipal Act
- The Assessment Act
- The Local Improvement Act
- The Department of Municipal Affairs Act
- The Planning Act
- The Municipal Drainage Act
- The Public Works Act
- The Highway Improvement Act,
- etc.

No attempt will be made to enumerate all these powers, but it is felt that there is widespread misunderstanding of the position of the board in carrying out its various duties.

In the first place it must be remembered that in no case does the board initiate any proceeding or issue orders on its own motion.

Its function is to exercise two main kinds of jurisdiction which may be described as: (a) the judicial (b) the administrative.

"A" JUDICIAL DUTIES AND POWERS

In this group most of the important powers exercised by the board are to hear and decide disputes between:

1. Municipality vs. Municipality: Under this heading should be placed annexations and amalgamations, settlement of boundary disputes and all other functions involving the territorial jurisdiction of municipalities.

Falling under this heading we must also consider inter-municipal disputes in distributing the cost of conservation projects, school area expenditures and similar matters involving two or more municipalities or portions thereof.

Under this heading should also be placed probable incorporation of new municipalities and arbitrations between municipalities following some change in their status.

2. Province vs. Municipality: An example of this type of adjudication is the jurisdiction of the board with respect to the construction of limited access highways, closing of intersecting roads, appeals from valuation of provincial property for the purposes of payments in lieu of taxes.

3. Municipality vs. Individual: Under this heading come all assessment appeals, arbitrations as to compensation for lands taken, approval of special area by-laws and special rates, approval of local improvement by-laws under section 8, approval of restricted area by-laws under section 390 of The Municipal Act, references and appeals with respect to official plans, proposed subdivisions, and appeals from committees of adjustment under The Planning Act.

4. Individual vs. Individual: There are comparatively few of these, the most numerous being public vehicle and public commercial vehicle applications where most disputes involve conflicting private claims for certificates of public convenience and necessity.

"B" ADMINISTRATIVE DUTIES

By far the most important duty under this division is the approval of proposed municipal borrowings and all the powers given to the board with respect to municipal financing. Including special powers with respect to defaulting municipalities under part III of The Department of Municipal Affairs Act.

GENERAL COMMENT

In some cases it is difficult to distinguish between judicial and administrative duties and under some Acts the board appears to be required to exercise both functions.

Generally speaking, however, there is a clear distinction between the judicial part of the board's work and its administrative duties, and this must be kept in mind when considering the methods and procedure adopted by the board.

Where the power being exercised is essentially judicial, the board, except in rare cases, proceeds by way of public hearing and decides upon the basis of evidence and arguments submitted in open hearing and not upon written submissions presented ex parte either by individuals or government departments.

All the rules relating to the reception of evidence and examination and cross-examination of witnesses, etc. which have evolved over many centuries in the hearing of contested claims in the courts in a fair and judicial manner are substantially followed, and the board is expected to judge each case on the merits and not on the basis of any actual or assumed government policy.

On the other hand, in carrying out its administrative functions, it is inevitable that the board should attempt to pursue what it considers to be a sound and conservative policy with relation to municipal financing, and it has considered that it should be at liberty to act upon information acquired either from its own knowledge and experience or from various departments of the government which would assist in protecting the interests of the present and future taxpayer of the municipality concerned.

As the province has a very important stake in the financial strength of the municipalities which it has created, the board must also bear this in mind and try to prevent possible financial difficulties which would react upon the province. Nevertheless, the ultimate responsibility for deciding whether municipalities should or should not be permitted to borrow further monies must be on the board, and the board has on many occasions granted or refused an application although it has good reason to believe that some department of the government might have favoured a different decision.

THE MUNICIPAL CORPORATIONS
QUIETING ORDERS ACT

Remarks: At the 1949 session of the Legislature, The Municipal Corporations Quieting Orders Act was passed, reposing authority in the Ontario Municipal Board to issue orders which would quiet all doubts about the locality and regularity of any municipality's status and boundaries.

To carry out the provisions of this Act, it was necessary for a department representative to visit the municipalities affected to:

1. Explain to them the aim of the department to establish beyond a doubt the incorporation date, and set out the boundaries and area of such municipality.
2. To present and explain the application forms, the by-law form and history sheet which had been prepared for their use to present to the Ontario Municipal Board when requesting a hearing to decide the above issues.

Before visiting these municipalities, the departmental librarian had to search all the records of the Department of Municipal Affairs and have the officials of the office of the Provincial Secretary, the Provincial Treasurer and the Department of Lands and Forests search their records to assemble together all the data that would assist in determining how, when and to what extent the municipality was erected.

Commencing in 1951, the departmental librarian visited:

- 16 townships in the District of Temiskaming
- 4 townships in the District of Kenora
- 12 townships in the District of Rainy River

- 9 townships in the District of Nipissing
- 16 townships in the District of Sudbury
- 18 townships in the District of Parry Sound
- 18 townships in the District of Muskoka
- 6 townships in the District of Thunder Bay
- 14 townships in the District of Algoma
- 11 townships in the District of Manitoulin

124

Of the 124 municipalities the librarian visited:

88 townships have passed the necessary by-laws and made application to the Ontario Municipal Board.

74 townships have had public hearings held by the Municipal Board.

16 townships for which the Municipal Board has issued orders under the Act quieting all doubts as to their status.

53 townships are awaiting the board's decision.

Most decisions are awaiting descriptions of boundaries that will be satisfactory to the surveyor-general.

The delay is in the interest of having the job properly done when the board does issue their order.

All municipalities that need a Quietting Order that the department has record of in Northern Ontario have been visited and are included in the list.

REGISTRAR-GENERAL'S BRANCH

The growth on population and prosperity of Ontario is reflected in the growth and activities of the Registrar-General's Branch.

In 1953, registrations were as follows: births, 132,449; marriages, 45,797; deaths, 46,067; a total of 224,313.

In addition, during 1953, the branch issued official certificates for births, marriages and deaths to the number of 295,000.

Some idea of the growth is shown by the fact that there were 67 per cent. more births registered in 1953 than in 1945.

There were 34 per cent. more marriages registered in 1953 than in 1945 and there were only 16 per cent. more deaths in 1953 than in 1945, and the demand for official certificate increased 190 per cent. in 1953 over 1948.

To meet the increase in the activities of this branch in November, 1953, the Registrar-General's branch was moved in its entirety from the Whitney Building to new quarters at 70 Lombard Street.

Before this, only once since 1869 had this branch been located away from the seat of government, and that was in the 1920's when it was situated on Spadina Avenue awaiting completion of the Whitney Building. Its present quarters were formerly occupied by part of the Workmen's Compensation Board. The building was constructed in 1934 for government occupancy. To give the Registrar-General's Branch suitable working conditions, very extensive renovations were carried out, dictated by the actual needs of the branch. The resulting improvements have given the Office of the Registrar-General the finest quarters of any Vital Statistics Office in Canada.

It is hard to realize the phenomenal growth in the demand for the services of this office over the past years. In 1939, a staff of 39 handled its entire operation. Today a staff of 165 broken into 15 specialized units is required to handle the well over 300,000 applications received yearly, as well as a tremendous amount of interdepartmental work for other governmental branches, such as the Department of Public Welfare, Children's Aid, etc.

To handle the increased demand, this office has constantly improved its procedure by introducing new methods. The laminated birth certificate, the introduction of International Business Machine punch card equipment for indexing, the latest Sortergraf equipment for keeping track of finished and unfinished files, microfilm for security of records, photostat equipment for the issuance of certified copies and continuous experiments with microcard and microfile which are necessitated by the ever-increasing amount of space required to store records are but a few of the steps taken in this direction.

Some conception of the storage problem is shown by the fact that all births for the 60 year period from 1869 to 1929 are contained in 1,279 volumes, whereas 1,155 volumes are required to record births in the 5 year period from 1949 to 1953 inclusive.

As soon as the new quarters were opened on the morning of November 12th, after a move which involved transferring over 13,500 volumes of registrations weighing over 80 tons, 700 lineal feet of loose files, 217 filing cabinets and all other mechanical equipment without disrupting service to the public, the Department of Public Works started construction of an addition which should supply expansion requirements of this office for the next 8 to 10 years, and provide lunch-room and rest-room facilities for the staff.

Because the officials of the Registrar-General's Branch were allowed to co-operate fully with the Department of Public Works in presenting their suggestions for laying out the office space in the manner best suited to their needs, a smooth-working, efficient organization has resulted which will enable the public to receive the service they expect and to which they are entitled.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, before we proceed I should like, through you, to make a suggestion in all seriousness. This is a big day in Toronto. It is the day which marks the opening of the subway. I see the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) has just returned from the official opening ceremonies. Perhaps, for the record, we should hear from him for a minute or two about this important event, so that in the future it will be on record that on this day, in the City of Toronto, the first subway in Canada was officially opened. I suggest that the hon. Prime Minister be given the floor for a minute or two to tell us what happened.

HON. MR. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I think it would be beyond my capacity to tell you what happened, because, as I was saying to the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley), I went up there at 10.30 o'clock this morning and I have been in such a whirl ever since that I hardly know whether I am here or not. It is a marvellous thing to get on a subway at Eglinton Avenue, and go down to Front Street in 12 minutes. To describe what has taken place would be beyond my capacities at this time. Mr. Chairman, but I think I should express on behalf of all hon. members of this House our admiration for the people of Toronto. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) is a former member of the city council. There are a number here. We have a former mayor, a controller, and members of the council of the City of Toronto, who have been through the various phases of the great transportation and subway problem over many years.

This, so they tell me, is the sixth subway to be constructed in America. It is the first in Canada. It is, I think, a great Toronto and Canadian achievement to have accomplished this for a great and growing community, which is the heart and centre, a reflection of Ontario's life.

This subway, Mr. Chairman, is a modern approach to a major traffic problem. It is a modern approach to the revamping of the central part of this great city, a preliminary to the proper and good use of very valuable areas which have, to some extent, fallen below modern standards in the light of the growth of the city. As I say, Mr. Chairman, the thing which has impressed everybody is the vision, the courage and the foresight of the people of this city and their leaders over many years. I remember well—as do many hon. members of the House—the submissions to the electorate of the question of tubes many years ago. I well remember the submission about 40 years ago when the subway, at that time, could have been built for about $5 million. But, Mr. Chairman, that does not mean anything at this time. Those people 40 years ago were faced with a totally different problem, and they were facing it with a totally different outlook. When the time came, and the question arose, the people of Toronto rose to the situation and did a great job.

As I said at noon, however, inadequately, this city, and its environments, in York, was the birthplace of responsible government. Here was born the germ of government which made it possible to have a free and independent nation in a commonwealth of nations under one Sovereign. That system was born here. Today the people in Toronto, and in York, are faced with a great municipal and governmental problem. The experiment in which they are engaged in Metropolitan Toronto, is one which is attracting the attention of America. I know there have been various views expressed in this House on the problem. Nevertheless, what is very inspiring to us was the fact that the people, regardless of their views, are doing their best to meet the situation through the legislative instruments which are at hand. This history and experience of the past are encouraging things. These people in York and Toronto have born in them the genius for the development of government, and for the development of their community. I am quite sure, as a citizen of this province and a great admirer of the City of Toronto, I may say this great community and fine city is on the brink of much greater things and even more important developments in the future.

Vote 111, Main Office, $2,489,000.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I am speaking on the first Vote as a matter of policy. I feel that the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) came out last summer with a statement which constituted a serious threat to the poorest section of home owners in the City of Toronto, and a statement which alarmed the citizens of the City of Toronto. Bad as that statement was, it was worse when one recalls it was in direct contradiction to assurances given by the hon. Minister to this House some months earlier. In fact, it constituted, to my mind, a breach of faith with the Legislature. I have a reference here, Mr. Chairman, to the hon. Minister's pronouncement that he was not approving the partial exemption policy in Toronto. It was, in fact, more than a pronouncement. It was in terms of a dictum. He, the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) would not permit a continuation of the partial exemption policy unless a new vote of the people was taken.

Now, Mr. Chairman, as is well known, the City of Toronto applies a partial exemption policy with universal approval for a great many years and did it quite legally in accordance with legislation enacted in this House some years before. Last year, when we were discussing Bill No. 80 in this House, I expressed great fear that the bill might do away with the partial exemption policy. In fact, to make sure that such a thing would not happen, I moved an amendment to Bill 80 when it was before the House in Committee. That amendment of mine said that the partial exemption on dwelling houses from tax rates, except for school purposes, which now applies in the City of Toronto, should apply in each area of the municipal metropolitan areas.

In arguing against this amendment, the hon. Minister for Municipal Affairs is reported in Hansard, 1953, page G-5, of volume 24 as saying:

For the past 3 years, the City of Toronto has been getting my permission—in fact, I just granted it again 3 days ago—in order that they may continue exemptions in the City of Toronto. Any municipality, by a vote of the people, may make that application. The hon. member was speaking a few days ago and said we were taking away the right of the people to vote. This bill says the people may vote for this, and yet the hon. member wants to bring forward an amendment which will force this onto the people without a vote.

There was one thing I do want to make clear. The exemptions will not apply to the county rate, and that might as well be understood now. The county rate has to be on the total assessment roll of the rolls of the different municipalities. In regard to the local municipality: Toronto may continue, or any municipality may continue, with the consent of the Minister of Municipal Affairs, to carry out their exemptions, but that does not apply to the county.

Not being very sure of this promise, I pursued the question further, and on page H-1 of the same volume, the hon. Prime Minister rose and said:

—but that is the right of the City of Toronto, and it is not the desire or intention of this government to interfere with that right in either of these municipalities.

Even if a change were made, it will be at the instance of the City Council of the City of Toronto and not by this government nor by the Area Council.

Further, on page H-2, the hon. Prime Minister says:

I would like to say to the hon. member that his amendment is quite irrelevant in view of what I have said, and while I am in agreement with what he, in general, says in his proposed amendment, I say, Mr. Speaker, it is not necessary and it is irrelevant and I am sorry that it is not acceptable.

HON. MR. FROST: The right has not been interfered with.

MR. SALSBERG: Now, Mr. Chairman, after these assurances in the House, the hon. Minister for Municipal Affairs came out on July 9th with a statement which was reported in all the newspapers and on the radio. I am quoting from the Star of July 9th. The heading is "Put 'Partial Exemption' to Vote—Dunbar." The story then reads as follows:

Partial exemptions under which nearly 90 per cent. of homes in Toronto are taxed, will not be recognized by the province for municipal taxation next year, Hon. George Dunbar, Minister of Municipal Affairs, stated today.

He said the question of continuing the exemptions by the city would have to be put to a vote of the people.

That, Mr. Chairman, was in complete contradiction of everything he had said in the House earlier, and it raises two very important questions. The first is the right to interfere with the continuation of so important a measure as partial exemption, and the second concerns the question of trust in a statement made by an hon. Minister of the Crown to hon. members of the House. Here is a Minister who, only a few months before, gave every necessary assurance that he had no intention to interfere. And in July, he comes out with this dictum that he will not allow it any more. His action aroused such an outcry—and, fortunately for the people, he made the announcement in the middle of the federal election—that it threatened some of the Conservative federal members with an unfavourable reaction. The hon. Prime Minister, much wiser of course, and sensing the danger of the threat to the Conservative candidates of Toronto, came out and said that nothing would be done and that everything would go on as before.

HON. MR. FROST: When did I say that?

MR. SALSBERG: I am not quoting the hon. Prime Minister word for word. But it is generally recognized in the City of Toronto that it was the intervention of the hon. Prime Minister that saved the situation and nullified the dictatorial position taken by the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs.

I raise this subject not because I like criticizing the hon. Minister, but because it is important for the future. We must realize that an assurance given in this House by a Cabinet Minister is a serious thing. We have a right to expect hon. Ministers to live up to such assurances. If an assurance given in March is going to be broken in July, it becomes impossible for any municipality to proceed with long-term planning. Or, for that matter, it applies to each individual member of this House.

I rise to protest the actions of the hon. Minister, first, his action in interfering with the continuation of the partial exemption policy in Toronto, and secondly, with his frustration—

HON. G. H. DUNBAR: When did I have anything to do with that?

MR. SALSBERG: —at everything he led the people at large to believe in, as a result of his statement in the House. I think this must not be the practice in the future. A statement given by an hon. Minister, or an assurance, should be reliable.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Now, let us get a few facts about this. The people of Toronto voted on this partial exemption question. The Municipal Act states that any municipality may vote for partial exemption. Toronto and New Toronto were the only municipalities in the Province of Ontario to take advantage of that.

When they came to re-assess in 1949, they came to me and said it was too late to have a vote of the people to raise the exemption when the assessment was raised 10 per cent. They asked if I would give permission, and they would say it was on the "say-so" of the Minister of Municipal Affairs, and they would have a vote next year by the people of Toronto. That was in 1949. Why should I have that power? It should not be there at all, but in order to help Toronto out, so they would not be "stuck" with that 10 per cent. when the assessments were raised, and they wanted to raise the exemption 10 per cent. on the understanding it would also be put to a vote of the people, I consented.

When the hon. member for St. Andrew says I was going to stop exemption, that is ridiculous. I have no power to stop exemption. The only power I have is to stop the 10 per cent. by refusing to sign.

The people of Toronto voted on it originally, but they did not vote on the extra 10 per cent. which they promised to do.

Each year they came to me, and I kept asking them, "Why not take a vote of the people? Why shoulder me with that responsibility? Are you afraid of the people, and you think you are sure by coming to me and getting my permission?"

I want to assure the hon. member for St. Andrew that as long as I am Minister of Municipal Affairs, that will never be changed, because there is no person on the city council clever enough to make a "goat" out of me, and say that I am cutting off the 10 per cent., and then getting up in council the next day and saying, "We were all in favour of the whole thing, but Dunbar cut it off." But Dunbar did not cut it off.

MR. SALSBERG: That is what you assured us in July.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You know that was for one year. They let me down flat, I should never have allowed my name to be there at all.

MR. SALSBERG: Let us have the facts. How did they let you down?

MR. W. H. COLLINGS (Beaches): They promised to have a vote of the people.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, they promised there would be a vote by the people.

MR. SALSBERG: You are not being let down. You are letting them down.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You just want to make a big "fuss."

MR. SALSBERG: While the hon. Minister is in a hole and trying to climb out—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am in no hole at all.

MR. SALSBERG: The fact is that it was only a few weeks after, that the city solicitor told the board that the Provincial Department of Municipal Affairs has agreed to permit a continuation of partial exemption without a vote of the people.

I realize, the way you handled the situation, aroused the indignation of the entire community, and there was an outcry against it, and you finally agreed to let it continue.

If the hon. Minister thought a new vote was necessary, he could have found a way of conveying that through normal channels to the administration, but that was not done.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Does the hon. member think it was not done through proper channels?

MR. SALSBERG: No.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Then I say that the hon. member is not speaking the truth.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know; I am not in the civic administration now.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member is not speaking the truth. There is an alderman of the City of Toronto sitting in this Chamber, who can prove it.

MR. SALSBERG: If we are to have the facts, let us have the letters you wrote in June and July.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I would not trust the hon. member with any letter.

MR. SALSBERG: I not asking the hon. Minister to trust me.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The member for St. Andrew might burn them.

MR. SALSBERG: All I am asking is this: in March, the hon. Minister got up and assured this House, in answer to my question—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh, it was a question by the hon. member?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes, and there was nothing done.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): There has been nothing done with partial exemption. Let us get on with the business of the House.

MR. SALSBERG: It is very big business for a great number of poor people, who own small homes.

Hon. MR. FROST: We have always looked after the "little people."

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Why not put it to a vote of the people?

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister a question? When the present

hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs was acting as Minister of Highways in the House, there was a statement made affecting the riding I have the honour to represent, concerning the building of a new bridge at the Humber, and doing away with the 5 corners at Queen, King and Roncesvalles Avenue.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I was Acting Minister of Highways, and I made that offer. I offered to have the bridge erected, and the hon. Prime Minister acquiesced. We offered to pay for the bridge, but they have not made a start on the bridge yet.

MR. SALSBERG: It is the same as the 10 per cent. The hon. Minister promised a bridge, and there is none.

MR. STEWART: I understand the hon. Minister, in good faith, made the offer to Toronto, and Toronto showed no willingness to take advantage of it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: None whatever.

MR. STEWART: So the next play is up to the City of Toronto?

HON. MR. FROST: The offer still holds good.

MR. STEWART: Thank you, Mr. Prime Minister.

Agreed to.

Vote 113, Registrar-General's Branch, $572,500.

On Vote 113:

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to have this matter become a subject for levity and light treatment. I am very serious about this, even though I was not the father of the idea in the first place, but I am ready to accept a good idea, regardless of from what part of the House it comes, and I am prepared to support it and champion it, when no one else does.

At this point, I want to emphasize the soundness of the suggestion that the $1 registration fee for new-born children should be abolished. I do not think it is financially necessary. It is a burdensome and troublesome nuisance which is being put upon the people. It becomes very obnoxious in the early summer every year, when hundreds, if not thousands, of youngsters who are out for the first time seeking employment or to join some athletic organization and are in need of a birth certificate, begin tramping down to Queen's Park, you could see them in this building every morning, and they were directed to the location of the registrar.

These youngsters, most of whom are from working-class homes come here, and have to carry $1 with them to get the certificate.

I ask the hon. Minister to take it under advisement, if nothing else. Please do not reject it; the hon. Minister may find it a popular issue, and have to change his mind, so I would suggest the hon. Minister not burn all his bridges, or lock all the doors behind him.

I appeal to the government to do away with this practice, and have a birth certificate made out when a birth is registered, and sent to the family, who will take care of it, and give it to the youngsters whenever they require it.

It is a very small and paltry amount of money, for the province to attempt to realize in such a manner. Let us be grown up. We have a subway, and we have fleets of aircraft owned by this government. The hon. Minister of Highways has helicopters—

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No, he has not.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister of Lands and Forests has a fleet of them.

Please discontinue this method of extracting dollars from little boys or girls, or from the aged people, who require these certificates to prove their ages, when they apply for the old-age pension.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I would like to know when the hon. member, besides reading clippings or repeating statements by other persons, and saying what somebody else has said, will get away from that, and when will he have anything original, of his own, something that he thought up himself.

The hon. member will remember that in the committee, the member for Hamilton mentioned it, and the hon. member for St. Andrew immediately jumps on the band wagon. He never mentioned that the member for Hamilton brought it up for the first time.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon. If you were listening to me, you would have heard that I mentioned the fact that I was not the father of this idea.

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. Minister has the floor.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister should not be so nervous.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I am so nervous I can scarcely stand, it is looking at you that makes me nervous.

The hon. member for Hamilton mentioned this matter to the committee, and the member for St. Andrew immediately said, "That might be a great thing for Spadina Avenue; I may get a few votes out of it. He will never get another "bite" at it. I will take it all."

Now, the hon. member makes a speech in regard to something initiated by the hon. member for Hamilton.

MR. SALSBERG: Is it a good suggestion or not?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Why does the hon. member not use his head, and do something for himself?

MR. SALSBERG: Answer the question. You are dodging it.

MR. JOHN YAREMKO (Bellwoods): Mr. Chairman, may I express my own opinion, that I think the $1 fee is a very reasonable one.

On the other hand, I was shocked when applying to the Soviet Embassy for a birth certificate on behalf of one who has made an application for old-age pension, to find that the fee was almost 400 per cent. greater. It was, in fact, $4 and I had to add 15c. for exchange.

MR. SALSBERG: That should not be. I apologize in both places.

MR. YAREMKO: I may say it also takes 7 months to get one.

Vote 112 carried.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh no, we are not through yet.

THE CHAIRMAN: Yes, we are.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh no, we are not.

THE CHAIRMAN: We are on Vote 113.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very sorry; we are on 112. Mr. Chairman, it is statutory, but I want to speak on it. I am not speaking against the amount, but I am speaking about the issue with which it deals. It is my only chance to raise a vital question.

THE CHAIRMAN: It is statutory.

MR. SALSBERG: I know it is, but I want to speak on it.

THE CHAIRMAN: The vote has been carried.

MR. SALSBERG: It has not carried at all. We are dealing with the biggest "schemozzle" this department has ever perpetrated in its history, and then I am told I cannot speak on it. That is referring to the Metropolitan assessment scheme which was put through. There is no larger "schemozzle" I ever heard of in this House than that. Here we spend over $1 million over the last 3 years, as shown in the Estimates I have before me. The hon. Minister undertakes the Greater Toronto assessment under Bill 80—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I do not want to spoil the speech by the hon. member at all.

MR. SALSBERG: It is not a speech; it is a complaint.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member seems to be getting "all wound up."

May I point out that the assessment of the 12 neighbouring municipalities took place by virtue of a bill passed here in 1951—3 years ago. There was an assessment in Toronto some years before and it has been in effect in the city for some time.

The work of the Department of Municipal Affairs was to reconcile that situation, and to provide for assessments under the new Act, which would be satisfactory.

May I say to the hon. member that I think the assessors appointed under the Act of 1951, did a very remarkable job.

It is quite true the method of arriving at this assessment varied somewhat. That was unavoidable. If exactly the same system had been used, there still would have been variations, because of the time in which they were done. One system was used in 1948, and the other was commenced in 1951, and, of course, you would have some differences.

It is very interesting to note that these differences, upon the completion of the assessment in Greater Toronto, had really vanished into thin air. I think the council, and the assessment commissioner have felt, when looking at the results, that the differences, despite the fact this was done at two different times, were in the main, so small, that they are going ahead with the assessment. They are doing what would have had to be done anyway, that is, without incurring great expense, to re-assess the whole area, including Toronto, in common, and to do it as nearly at one time as possible.

The hon. member for St. Andrew can "beat the air" about it, and do all sorts of things. As a matter of fact, in company with the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs, I listened with great interest to people who were concerned with this problem. At that time, we did not have the reports from all the municipalities, but when they were obtained, and comparisons made, they were so close as to be almost equal, and there was nothing to be gained by saying or doing anything further. It was obvious that whatever system was used, there were bound to be some differences.

I think the hon. member for St. Andrew should congratulate the Greater Toronto Assessment Board, and the Department of Municipal Affairs for conducting an equalization—because that is what it was—which I think stands out above anything of this type ever done in this province before. It really is a very remarkable job, and while there are bound to be some differences in certain things, as a matter of fact, the differences are so minute, that the Council of Greater Toronto decided to go ahead, with the situation as it was.

As I pointed out last fall, there was some heat on the part of people who misunderstood the situation, but when the figures were placed on the table, and the Assessment Commissioner went into them, there was little about them to which objection could be taken.

I urge the hon. member for St. Andrew to alter the remarks he was about to make, and, instead, to congratulate the Assessment Board, and the Department of Municipal Affairs, as I think they are well deserving of it.

MR. SALSBERG: I have no doubt the government would agree if I was to congratulate the hon. Minister for the work done by the Greater Toronto Assessment Board, and nothing would please me more than to be able to feel justified in so doing.

It is not just making an issue, but I think it is necessary that the essential features be brought to the attention of the House, if only for the purpose of avoiding such things in the future.

The prime task was to bring about an equalization of assessment—

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, and we have done it.

MR. SALSBERG: That was obviously not brought about.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh no, the hon. member is wrong there.

MR. SALSBERG: The Metropolitan Council, on the demand of the outlying municipalities, had to agree to re-assess an enormous portion of the suburban area, and to—

HON. MR. FROST: It was inevitable, and would be inevitable, no matter what system is used.

MR. SALSBERG: The Metropolitan Council had to agree to the re-assessment, which would take 3 years, and undertook to repay the taxpayers for those amounts they had overpaid.

HON. MR. FROST: I would like to point out to the hon. member that there was only a difference of about 1 per cent. That is all.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know what the percentage is.

HON. MR. FROST: I am giving it to the hon. member.

MR. SALSBERG: For instance, one of the major complaints was that the Metropolitan Assessment Board did not use the same yardstick as was used in Toronto, and yet the purpose was to bring the assessment into line with what had already been accomplished in Toronto.

HON. MR. FROST: There was a very obvious reason for that, and I think when I tell the hon. member he will be able to see what the reason was.

There could have been positive uniformity in assessment, if, in 1951, the Toronto Assessment Department under Mr. Gray, who is a very able gentleman, was asked to do the work. However, I would like to point out what a great thunderstorm there would have been in this Chamber, if it had been proposed in 1951, that the Assessment Department of Toronto would step out into these 12 municipalities and do the job. That would have been utterly impossible. It would have been received with great disfavour by the outside municipalities and, I must admit I would have been in entire agreement with their objections.

I would also like to point out to the hon. member that it was not until the fall of 1952—indeed it was not until January, 1953—that the government made up its mind about Bill No. 80. “The Cumming Report” had to come in, we had to give it consideration, and had to consider the objections which were raised.

At that time, Bill No. 80 was formulated, draughted, and submitted to this House. If we had asked the Toronto Assessment Department to do the work, there would have been the suspicion created that the whole matter was being pre-judged, that total amalgamation was contemplated, and that the suburbs were being drawn into something to which some of them seriously objected.

Even if the Toronto Assessment Department had done the work, there still would have been a variation, because in Toronto the work was done on the basis of values of 1948—I think it was—or thereabouts, and this assessment would be done on the basis of 1951 and 1952.

The hon. member can see there must be a reconciliation there. The difference was only about 1 per cent., which, I think, is a very remarkable achievement indeed. I say to the hon. member there has not been any injustice done, and if that had been performed by the Toronto Assessment Department, with the same methods and the same personnel, there still would have had to be the reconciliation which is bound to take place over the next few years.

Vote 113 agreed to.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunbar) would care to comment on the work of the Provincial-Municipal Committee which was set up some few years ago?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: May I say that committee was set up by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), not by me.

HON. MR. FROST: I shall be very glad to answer that question, Mr. Chairman. I think the Municipal-Provincial Committee is doing a very fine job. I know the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) will agree that it has an enormous task, one which cannot be completed in a few months, or even a few years.

Last November, I had the very great privilege of going to Winnipeg at the invitation of the Prime Minister of Manitoba, and addressing their Municipal Association. At that time I looked up the work of our Municipal-Provincial Committee here, and found that they had formed a similar committee in Manitoba, the report of which I think the hon. member should read. I suggested there that our idea was to make the Municipal-Provincial Committee a permanent and a continuing committee, and I can assure the hon. member that is something which is needed in federal-provincial relations. We should have a committee consisting of the experts in government on a civil-service level, continuously in consultation with those of the federal and other governments.

I suggested in Winnipeg at that time, that be done, and I can assure the hon. member (Mr. Thomas) that I am hopeful it will be done, because I think that is one of the very obvious solutions of our troubles. The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) very properly mentioned in his reply to the Speech from the Throne, the fact that there had to be continuous collaboration and understanding between the Federal and Provincial Governments in a problem that is constantly changing, and which will constantly change.

For instance, health insurance and hospitalization are things which would bear a great deal of investigation by Federal and Provincial Governments sitting together. If we are to get a solution to such problems some day, that is the way it has to be done, and I should say, Mr. Chairman, there is a place in such an organization as that for our Municipal-Provincial Committee to conduct a continuous and running survey of the problems of the day.

That committee, at the present time, has been given the assignment of looking at the powers and functions of the Municipal Board. That, in itself, is an enormous problem. It must be remembered this committee is composed of businessmen, who come from all over Ontario; they cannot spend all their time on the committee's work. They come in perhaps for two or three days a month, and spend time in connection with these problems. The hon. member will readily see the enormity of the task they have. I think they are fine people, and are doing a good job, and furthermore, I think from the standpoint of administration, they are going to fit into a far bigger picture, because I am quite sure a Federal-Provincial Committee, which will be a continuing organization, and a fact-finding body, is inevitable.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) spoke of the need and desirability of setting up a permanent Municipal-Provincial Committee. May I ask, is it his intention to make this present committee more permanent than it is at the moment?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. OLIVER: The present committee?

HON. MR. FROST: I recognize, from a government standpoint, there is no difficulty, for the reason that the civil servants who are on that committee are persons we hope to have with us for many years. So that there is no difficulty there. As the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) knows, difficulties arise on the municipal side of the picture. And, by the way, whom did we appoint as president of the Municipal Association?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Whoever is recommended by them.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, we took their recommendation. If that is altered in the course of the year, the hon. member (Mr. Thomas) will readily see that you lose the effect of the study which has been bestowed upon the subject matters under consideration by the member retiring. We have, therefore, urged the Municipal Association not to change their representatives. We have, I think, achieved this, that we have a member and an alternate, and we endeavour to keep the alternate advised, so that if the member retires, the alternative may take his place, and a new alternate be appointed.

The hon. member will realize the difficulties involved there.

One of the very useful members of the commission comes from the constituency represented by the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle), Mr. Grant Crawford, a very able gentleman, who is the secretary of the Ontario Municipal Association, in more or less a permanent capacity.

That difficulty is not so easily solved as some of the others, but we tried to do that by asking them not to change their members.

MR. OLIVER: In connection with that committee, Mr. Chairman, may I say it has all the ear-marks of being a committee which reports to the government. My understanding of this committee's functions was that it was periodically to report and, at some time to bring in a complete and final report, so the Legislature would be able to ascertain their recommendations and to digest them.

Under the new set-up, as visualized by the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), does he foresee interim reports which will be made public by this committee?

HON. MR. FROST: There have been so far.

MR. OLIVER: I think there was a little bit of a "squib" a year or so ago, but lately there has been little or nothing. I am serious when I ask the hon. Prime Minister, in the new set-up he visualizes for this committee, is it his thought that it would act in an advisory capacity to the administration, or is it going to be, as it was first set up to be, a fact-finding committee which would report its findings and recommendations to the people and to the Legislature? Which category does it fall into?

HON. MR. FROST: It is a fact-finding committee, reporting to the people. I will obtain for the hon. member (Mr. Thomas) the reports which have already been made. They are part of a series. I think that committee has a great task to do over the coming years.

The hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) referred to "a little squib" of a report which was made. May I point out that report—I assume it is the one to which he refers—was the foundation for the unconditional-grants' legislation which was brought in here last year, and which was very far-reaching legislation. In this year's budget there is no less than $12 million for the municipalities arising out of what the hon. Leader of the Opposition calls a "squib." If that is a "squib" I hope they do not produce any atomic bombs. That is all.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Chairman, the reason behind my question was that I was looking through the Public Accounts for the year ending 1953, and the cost of that committee, according to the Accounts, was $23,685. I think we should have a greater breakdown for that. It just says, "Provincial-Municipal Committee, salaries $10,736"; there are no names mentioned at all. I think the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) will agree we should have a breakdown.

HON. MR. FROST: I will give the hon. member (Mr. Thomas) the particulars of that.

MR. THOMAS: Thank you.
Statutory Vote concurred in.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report progress. And, Mr. Chairman, I want to fulfill my promise, which I always try to do, and I am going to send this breakdown over to the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas).

MR. OLIVER: While we are on that subject, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister, are there salaried members of this committee?

HON. MR. FROST: I suppose there is a secretary and staff.

MR. OLIVER: But $10,000 for "salaries?"

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) can look that over, and I shall be glad to give him further particulars if he wants them.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: They have had a great many meetings, you know.

MR. OLIVER: I want to know if they are being paid salaries or expenses?

MR. W. E. BRANDON (York West): Mr. Chairman, may I clarify this? I am a member of that committee, and the members are paid no salaries whatsoever; they are paid expenses, and nothing more.

MR. OLIVER: I was just going by what appears in the Public Accounts.

MR. BRANDON: The salaries referred to in the public accounts are for employees in the Department of Statistics, and other departments of government, engaged in the preparation of work preparatory to the reports of this committee, and charged to this particular committee's work.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We should have a breakdown of some of the committees the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) is on.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. H. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply reports that it has come to certain resolutions, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

Report concurred in.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

MR. SPEAKER: Before the motion is put, may I be permitted to announce the Private Bills Committee will sit tomorrow morning, Wednesday, at 9.30 instead of 10 o'clock.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

THE ROSS MEMORIAL HOSPITAL

House in Committee on Bill No. 17, "An Act respecting The Ross Memorial Hospital."

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill No. 17 reported.

THE HAMILTON FOUNDATION

House in Committee on Bill No. 19, "An Act to incorporate The Hamilton Foundation."

Sections 1 to 14 inclusive, agreed to.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, a question before the bill is reported. Without tossing any aspersions on the gentlemen who are sponsoring the legislation, and the people behind it, I would like to ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) whether he is satisfied that the establishment of such foundations is not meant to evade in any way income or other taxes? I was not on the committee when the bill was discussed, and I repeat I am not casting any aspersions on anyone, but I confess I do not know, and I would like to know, whether succession duties, or any other taxes, will not be evaded as a result of this; in other words, if the hon. Prime Minister is satisfied that everything is in order?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I might ask the hon. member (Mr. Nickle) who is chairman of the Private Bills Committee, and who drew this bill, to give us an outline of the bill itself.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): What was the question?

MR. SALSBERG: The question was whether in the opinion of the government—and I directed it to the hon. Prime Minister who is also the Treasurer—it is satisfied the establishment of such foundations is not for the purpose of evading any taxation responsibilities, for the succession duties or any other form of taxation. And may I repeat, Sir, again—

MR. NICKLE: Mr. Chairman, in answer to the first part of the hon. member's (Mr. Salsberg) question, my answer is "no."

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member (Mr. Nickle) is not satisfied that it is so?

MR. NICKLE: I am saying there is no intention to evade any succession duties in any manner.

MR. SALSBERG: The second part was not a question; I wanted to be very, very sure it would be clearly understood that I am not questioning the motives of the people behind it, I do not know them, I just wanted an assurance because, as a humble member of this House, I am not certain that it is, in the long run, going to help the Succession Duties Branch or other branches which collect money, which we want to spend for all sorts of welfare purposes.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, the purpose of this bill, as I understand it—and if I am incorrect, the chairman of the Private Bills Committee or other hon. members here can correct me—the purpose of such a foundation is to receive gifts from various persons and organizations, and then the trust itself provides for the continuation of the trust and trustees. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), I think, will see one of the problems in connection with charitable donations.

MR. SALSBERG: Or gifts.

HON. MR. FROST: Or gifts. For instance, if a gift is made to a hospital, the donor may feel that the character of that institution may change. The hon. member will recognize there have been cases of that sort. In some of the hospitals for tuberculosis, for example, they have, in effect, become public institutions by reason of the change in the attitude of the public towards that dread disease, and, therefore, some of the great foundations which were formed in the past, perhaps in the eyes of the giving public today, lack the validity they had at that time.

The purpose of such a foundation or trust, I believe, is that if "John Jones" makes a donation or a gift to an institution, he may provide that the income is to go to "X" charity, until such time as the foundation thinks it is desirable to alter it to some other similar type of charity. This, I think, is machinery which is required in the modern world to meet such situations.

I have no doubt the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) knows that in the United Kingdom there are all sorts of gifts which have been made to things which were very valid in their day, but which have ceased to bear any relationship to the affairs of today. It must be remembered if a person gives a sum of money to a certain charity, it is in order that a certain type of charity be carried on; but if the public or the government takes over, as has been the case regularly, then they want their money and income from it to be used for something additional to what the government itself, 50 years from now, might do.

That is the purpose of this bill, and I would point out to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) that a gift to any charity which is recognized under The Succession Duties Act is not taxable, and therefore, if this foundation satisfies the Succession Duties Departments, federal and provincial, that it is a true charity, no tax is payable.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, may I ask if the hon. member for Grenville-Dundas (Mr. Challies), and the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) have reached a verdict, and if so, what their verdict is?

HON. G. H. CHALLIES: Mr. Chairman, may I inform the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) that I think the amendments which were agreed to will be placed in the bills for third reading, if that is agreeable.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): That is quite satisfactory, Mr. Chairman.

HON. MR. FROST: Was there a motion the bill be reported, or should that be corrected in committee, and then it can be re-printed for third reading?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Here are the amendments. Everything was agreed to except these items, in Committee of the House, as I understand it, and we were to clarify the items brought up by the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), and the Leader of the CCF (Mr. Grummett). If it is passed now, it will be on the Order paper for third reading, and these amendments will be included.

MR. F. R. OLIVER: The amendments should be put in now, I should think.

HON. MR. CHALLIES moves:

1 (1) That subsection 2 of section 40 of the bill be amended by striking out the article "the" in the second line, and inserting in lieu thereof the article "a."

(2) That subsection 3 of the section 40 be amended by striking out the article "the" in the third line, and inserting in lieu thereof the article "a."

2 That section 54 of the bill be amended by inserting a comma after the word "subscriber" in the second line, and by inserting a comma after the word "subscriber" in the third line.

Bill No. 107 reported.

THE MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES ACT, 1952

House in Committee on Bill No. 108, "An Act to amend The Mothers' Allowances Act, 1952."

Sections 1, 2 and 3 agreed to.

Bill No. 108 reported.

MR. SALSBERG: Before this is reported, may I ask the hon. Minister if he has many instances where mothers have collected for children during the summer months and then found the children did not return to school, because it is obvious this bill is meant to give authority to the hon. Minister to discontinue payments if he is not convinced the children will return to school.

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): No, this bill is designed so that we can continue payments through the summer months after we have ascertained in the month of June that the mother proposes to send the child back to school in September. The present practice is to cut them off in the summer months, and reinstate them in September.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree with it fully, except it starts off in a negative tone, "no allowance."

HON. MR. FROST: It is what is meant that counts.

THE PUBLIC PARKS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 111, "An Act to amend The Public Parks Act."

MR. SALSBERG: I wish to take exception to subsection 3 of section 1, and I will move an amendment that subsection 3 of section 1 of Bill No. 111, be deleted and I will briefly explain why I moved the deletion of that subsection.

Subsection 3 of section 1, of Bill No. 111, gives authority to the Board of Parks Management to pass by-laws for prescribing fees to be payable for entrance into any park. I think, as do many of the other hon. members of this House who gave expression to this feeling in committee, that it is not the right principle to establish. It is one thing to give authority to park boards or municipal bodies to establish fees for exhibitions and other displays within a park, but it is entirely another thing to establish the principle of charging a fee for entrance to a public park.

While it is permissive legislation, I think we should not enact such permissive legislation, because it may be a temptation to the community on account of some financial difficulties it will encounter, to immediately establish an entrance fee to a park.

Obviously, it will affect a section of the people that can ill afford to pay admissions to parks, and it will affect the younger members of a family. I can visualize a working class family where children will be deprived of going to a park in a neighbourhood if an entrance fee is established. Let no one think lightly of this or laugh at it. It is serious.

I said a moment ago, it is a departure from what is almost a universal practice, to my knowledge, that public parks are open to all people. What we may charge within the park for admission to exhibitions etc., is entirely a different matter, but let us not depart from a very sound democratic principle. Therefore, I move this amendment.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): I think there is quite a misunderstanding regarding this. The municipalities have asked that they might have the authority to set up a board known as a Parks Board to look after various recreational centres within the city, for instance, skating rinks. This Parks Board would be in control of it. There may be baths as in my city, for example, where we have swimming competitions. We have charged fees to people from Montreal, and all over the country to have swimming competitions. Outsiders come there, and rent the swimming pool for the night.

Where they have a community centre, skating centre, or something of that nature, surely, we should not say the people should not be charged.

All we ask is that this be changed, put under the Parks Act, and that there may be not less than 3 or more than 7, as the by-law provides, members of the board, but where the board is to be composed of 5 or more persons, at least 2 shall be members of the council.

That is all. The change does not ask for a charge at all.

MR. SALSBERG: That is not in accordance with the provisions of the Act. Let me read the first section to the hon. Minister—

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): The Municipal Council has power. They are elected.

MR. SALSBERG: There is a separate clause that provides the authority of which the hon. Minister has spoken, and I have no objection to that clause.

HON. MR. FROST: We plead municipal autonomy.

MR. SALSBERG: You do not believe in that, in every respect, do you?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: Section 2 reads as follows:

The Board of Park Management with the approval of the council of the municipality may pass by-laws for prescribing fees to be payable for entrance to any park.

I am not questioning that, although on each occasion, if I were a member of a municipal council, I would object to it, but I am not objecting to this authority to charge entrance fees to swimming pools or other facilities within the park, but the following subsection is very explicit to give them the right to charge a fee for entering the park itself. That I object to.

Amendment negatived.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the committee rise and report certain bills with amendments and certain bills without amendments.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumes, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report 15 bills without amendment and 2 bills with amendments.

Report concurred in.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, perhaps there would be an opportunity here to deal with Resolution No. 16, concerned with the matter of expenses to members sitting on committees. I will call Order No. 16.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Resolution, by Mr. Frost:

That a Select Committee of this House be appointed to consider the question of the allowance for expenses payable to members of Select Committees sitting in the interval between sessions of the Legislature, under the provisions of section 63 of the Legislative Assembly Act.

The said committee to report to the House at this session of the Legislature, to consist of 5 members.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I would like to add to that, "the committee to be composed of Messrs. Welsh (Chairman), Grummett, Manley, Janes and Weaver."

In moving this resolution, I do so for reasons which are very obvious and apparent.

Under the Legislative Assembly Act, the members are allowed expenses of $20 per day, and mileage.

With the large number of committees of the House we have had, and are going to have, it is apparent there should be some change in the allowance for expenses. It is quite impossible for a member to stay in this city on the present allowance of $20 per day. To those who do not think particularly of this matter, it may seem that a person should be able to live on $20 a day, but just attempt to get room and board in this city, and see the cost involved.

I think it is apparent there has to be a change, otherwise, it will be difficult to secure members of a committee to sit.

For example, my good friend the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr.

Grummett) has served on many committees. He is a practicing solicitor, and his time is simply donated when he is sitting on a committee. The allowances he receives are not sufficient to pay his expenses in Toronto, and, as I say, he is simply donating his time. This is not in the form of an indemnity, but is an allowance, and I do not think we should ask the hon. members of the House to do the things they have to do, and to accept these positions at, not only a complete sacrifice of their own time, but having to bear their out-of-pocket expenses as well.

Resolution agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that when this House adjourn the present sittings thereof, it stands adjourned until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon, and that Rule 2 of the Assembly in that regard be suspended, so far as it may apply to this motion.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: There will be a night session tomorrow. We will consider anything on the Order paper, and the Estimates as they appear in the booklet.

MR. SALSBERG: Alphabetically?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes. I would ask the hon. members who desire to take part in the Budget Debate to be prepared. There are a number of Orders remaining, for example, in connection with the report by the Committee on Reform Institutions, and the report by the committee investigating the status of the Indians, upon which the debates have to be completed, and tomorrow, we will be glad to go ahead with any of those items.

HON. MR. FROST moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 6.02 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1954.

2.00 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Today we have as our guests, students from the Courcellette School, Scarborough, James S. Bell Public School of Long Branch, and the John Wanless Public School, Toronto.

We are happy and privileged, indeed, to have the students with us on these occasions, and I sincerely hope that you have enjoyed your tour this morning and learned more about our building, and all it means. Also, that you will learn more this afternoon about the way in which our province is run.

MR. W. J. STEWART: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Nickle, I beg leave to present the Report of the Standing Committee on Private Bills and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Nickle, from the Standing Committee on Private Bills presents the Twelfth and final Report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill No. 31—An act respecting the Town of Oakville.

All of which is respectfully submitted.
Motion agreed to.

MR. JOHN YAREMKO: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Report of the Standing Committee on Printing and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Yaremko, from the Standing Committee on Printing presents the committee's Report as follows:

Your committee recommends that the supplies allowance per member for the current session of the Assembly be fixed at the sum of $50 and that, to meet the convenience of the members, a cheque for that amount be issued to each member of the Assembly in order that he may make the desired purchases in his own constituency.

And that an allowance be authorized and a cheque issued to each of the full-time daily newspaper representatives covering the present session of the Legislative Assembly, as nominated by the Press Gallery and approved by Mr. Speaker.

Your committee recommends that copies of the Canadian Parliamentary Guide, The Canadian Almanac and the Canada Year Book be purchased for distribution to the members of the Assembly and also that each member be given a year's subscription to the Labour Gazette.

Your committee recommends that the amount of printing to be done by the various governmental departments on their own presses be kept at a minimum.

Your committee recommends that the following sessional papers be printed for departmental use and distribution:

Motion agreed to.

MR. A. H. COWLING: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of Mr. Myers, I beg leave to present the Report of the Standing Committee on Conservation, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Myers, from the Standing Committee on Conservation, presents the committee's Report as follows:

The Standing Committee on Conservation has met several times during the past few weeks pursuant to your direction. The committee has heard certain representations from a number of organizations and individuals who are particularly interested in conservation.

The committee has made certain representations to the several departments of government concerned and ask that they be given consideration.

Motion agreed to.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Minutes of the Standing Committee on Game and Fish, together with the representations made thereto, and move that they be printed as an appendix to the journals of the Legislature.

Motion agreed to.

MR. C. MAPLEDORAM: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the Report of the Standing Committee on Mining.

Mr. Speaker, as Chairman of the Mining Committee, I feel that I should give the House some idea of the amount of work which has been done by this committee this year. It was one of the largest committees set up by the House and involved about 35 hon. members of the House. We felt at the start of the meetings, that there was too much work to be done by one Standing Committee, so we had it divided into special committees.

A special committee was set up on natural gas, and another one on mining roads. The special committee on natural gas was under the chairmanship of the hon. member for Lambton East (Mr. Janes), and the special committee on mining roads was set up by the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Wardrope).

We have had several meetings and have tabled several reports, this being our final Report. The Report today is tabled in the House and concerns mining roads which we found to be a very interesting subject, in the north particularly.

There are certain things in the Report which we believe should be read out so the hon. members of the House will know what it is all about. As you read our Report, you will realize it does not embody only the mining department, as there is a great deal of work done on mining roads, which involves other departments.

We found, in discussing mining roads with delegations from the north, that there are a great many roads available to traffic in the north owned by great timber companies who might be interested in turning them over to the province if they could get some relief in regard to fire protection.

We also find now, while money is being spent to build mining roads by the Department of Mines, most of the work has been done by the Department of Highways, and very ably done as far as we could find out.

We also find that there will be a real problem with regards to mining roads as far as maintenance work is concerned. Therefore, I will take the liberty of reading some of the suggestions we have set out in our Report:

1. The existing regulations in respect of liability for fire on timber limits are such that the licence holder is held entirely responsible irrespective of the actual cause. It has been found that this clause has made the licence holders extremely hesitant to turn over for public use, bush roads built at their own expense. We would, therefore, recommend that provision be made in respect to the holders of licences to limits which are bisected by such roads, so that if the roads are taken over as mining access roads, they may be relieved of the onus of responsibility for fires which cannot be attributed to the fault of their own personnel.

2. It is recommended that the Department of Highways take over the responsibility for maintenance of roads built by the Department of Mines on a basis to be worked out to the mutual satisfaction of the two departments. The reason for this recommendation is that the Highways Department is equipped with material and personnel to carry on this work and is therefore in a position to do it more efficiently and more economically than could be done by any other agency.

3. Your sub-committee suggests, in view of the fact that many of the mining roads already built, or now under consideration, bisect timbered areas, making them accessible for harvesting, that the Department of Lands and Forests might justly be expected to share in the cost of such roads. In some cases, notably the areas of Hearst, Paska and Nakina, the lumber industries concerned would profit by the construction of roads which would tend to reduce railroad freight rates and bring the wood from these areas into the class of merchantable timber. It is now a fact that the product of these areas is to a large degree excluded from the market because of the excessive freight rates. Furthermore, it is self-evident that the construction of mining roads presents a means of access to timbered areas to facilitate the fighting of outbreaks of fire.

The sub-committee makes the following recommendations concerning specific road construction projects:

A. We recommend to the government that a road be constructed from the junction of the Warren Lake and Kukatush roads to Foleyet, a distance of 18 miles, thereby opening up a Greenstone Belt as well as giving an outlet to a community which has never had access to the outside world. This, we feel should be, primarily, a mines department project.

B. We recommend a road from Foleyet on the Canadian Northern Railway to Sultan on the Canadian Pacific Railway, a distance of 48 miles. This will serve as a through link from Foleyet, Sultan, Thessalon, to Sault Ste. Marie. We consider this a suitable project for the Department of Mines.

C. We recommend a road from Hearst to Hawk Junction, a distance of 70 miles, to complete thereby the opening up of Oba, Franz, Goudreau, Hawk Junction and Wawa to the outside world, as well as bisecting the mining belt. Because of the fact that this road would be extensively used as a public thoroughfare and would assist materially in the development of larger areas, in addition to its purpose as a mining road, we feel that its construction could properly fall under the purview of the Department of Highways.

D. The construction of a road from Hornepayne to the Hearst-Michipicoten road, a distance of 35 miles. Hornepayne has a population of 2,500 people who have never had access to the outside world. For much the same reason, as in the case above, we feel that this could be considered a responsibility of the Department of Highways.

At this point I believe we should make some special mention of the fact that we had a very good delegation of representatives from the area of Hornepayne. They presented a very fine report to the mining roads committee. We found in discussing roads with them that they are staking in the mining areas to within 10 miles of Hornepayne.

Hornepayne has been established for 40 years and has a population of 2,500. It has community halls, community rinks, a Chamber of Commerce, and all the things everyone else has, but not a road. It has 200 cars with a distance of 10 miles to drive.

While it is not in the report, we find there is a private road coming from Highway 11, owned outright by a timber company, which comes within 10 miles of Hornepayne. Because it goes through private property and the timber limits are owned outright, and not under the Crown, Hornepayne has no way of getting access to this piece of road. It is very heart-rending as far as these people are concerned to know that within 10 miles they would have an outlet to Highway No. 11, yet they have been isolated for 40 years. I think the Department of Highways should give this very serious consideration.

The report goes on:

E. We recommend a connecting road from the Pronto-Preston East Dome uranium find area to Blind River, an approximate distance of 30 miles. We consider this road a Mines Department responsibility.

F. We recommend a road connecting Highway 17 with the Manitowadge Lake mining area, utilizing private timber roads to effect a loop to Highway 11. The Manitowadge area promises to develop into one of the great mining fields of Canada. This road would, therefore, normally be considered a Mines Department responsibility, but because of the fact that it will be required to carry heavy equipment it is suggested that a road built closer to Highways Department specifications might be required. The appropriation of the Mines Department for this year is insufficient to build such a road. We, therefore, recommend that it should be done as a Department of Highways project.

G. We recommend a road connecting Nakina to Highway 11 at Geraldton where there are existing gold mines and where there is, presently, exploration being carried on in an iron pyrites formation. The total distance is 32 miles of which 12 miles northwest from Geraldton has been completed to the Hutcheson Lake Gold Mines, and of another 12 miles, running southeast from Nakina, the right-of-way has been cut by the citizens of Nakina at their own expense. This leaves a gap of 8 miles. Completion of this road we consider would be a proper project for the Highways Department.

H. We recommend a connection with the road from Savant Lake via Wycliffe and Valora, hooking up with Highway 17, a distance of 38 miles. Because of the general nature of service to which this road would be amenable, we suggest that it should be undertaken by the Department of Highways.

Mr. Speaker, we are not in favour of building roads starting nowhere and going nowhere. I think the Mining Committee has given that very serious consideration. All the projects we have suggested are tying-in links with main highways, or will be eventually. We understand this could not possibly be done in one year. We realize the tremendous amount of work it would take to do it, and we also know the appropriation the Department of Mines has for this year. Therefore, we are going to table this report, with one more project, and hope that the government will give it serious consideration, and it will be turned over to the Department of Mines for it to use its own judgment and take whatever steps the Department of Highways thinks will be necessary this year, with regard to roads.

I. We recommend the completion of Highway 101 to the Quebec border, a distance of 7.2 miles. This will open up excellent mining country and connect with the Rouyn mining district. This we recommend as a project of the Department of Highways.

Mr. Speaker, we, as a committee, have given a great deal of serious consideration to this problem. We have looked at hundreds of maps and have met delegations from all parts of the north. We are convinced this is a serious matter as far as these people are concerned, particularly in those parts of the province where we still have isolated districts. They see this as a means to an end, to get to the outside world.

I may say that everybody who came to see the Mining Roads Committee this year has been high in praise of the government, and the hon. Minister of Mines for the work he is doing along these lines.

We also want to pass along the same tribute to the hon. Minister of Highways, because he is the one who is contracting the roads. We also know he has the equipment to maintain the roads and the engineers to build them. Some of these will be major projects, but there are a number of small roads which could be completed in the near future, which would make a great many people in the Province of Ontario very happy.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Speaker, the report of the subcommittee on Mining Roads just given the House by the Chairman of the Mining Committee, the hon. member for Fort William (Mr. Mapledoram), is the most important report presented to this House this session as far as the northern members are concerned.

You will note it mentions the Department of Lands and Forests and its responsibility. It will benefit from these access roads as they will assist it in their fire fighting and will make available large areas of timber that can be economically logged, thereby adding to the revenue of that department. Many of these roads proposed have been partially built by timber companies who have already spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in putting roads through their timber concessions. If this government is going to declare these roads public highways, the licencees must be relieved of responsibility of fires set by the travelling public and only be held responsible for fires set by their own personnel.

These access roads are economically essential as some timber operators are being forced to close due to transportation costs—I refer to the Hearst area and the Paska area where freight rates are such that timber operations cannot continue. Access roads would correct this situation and allow these operations to be carried on. In addition, timber dues amount to great sums. We would like to see some of this money put back into access roads in the north to develop further resources that will again enrich the people of Ontario.

It is impossible to give an exact estimate of what these mining access roads will mean to the future of this province. When we think that the Sudbury area pays $14 million into the Federal Treasury and over $3 million into the Provincial Treasury every year, one can visualize what possibilities new areas developed mean.

The new find at Manitouwadge Lake is an example. I have been given permission by the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly) to read a letter from the vice-president of that new mine, which was sent to him the other day, to show hon. members the necessity for speed in the building of these roads. Mr. Hamilton says:

Geco Mines is, presently, the most advanced of any of the Manitouwadge area properties in its drilling. Exploration, to date, gives indication of over 10 million tons of commercial grade ore and may warrant production of up to 5,000 tons of ore per day.

We think Geco Mines will be only the first of several mines to develop sufficient ore to warrant production in the Manitowadge area and this area may grow in importance to something between the size of Geraldton and Rouyn-Noranda.

We would like the area to be developed on a co-operative basis, and we will approach the government, through its proper officials, for the necessary facilities for freight, power, townsite, etc.

In the mining industry, we figure that, once a decision is made to go into production, every delayed day amounts to a loss equal to the value of the production decided upon. On this basis, a day's delay in opening up the Manitowadge area may well cost us 750 to 1,000 well-paid man days, and unnecessary delay in getting road access to the area may postpone production a year.

This area is going to bring tremendous new wealth to Ontario. But we must have no delay in building a road to it, otherwise the development will suffer. Here is an important drawback, it costs a prospector $130 every time he flies into Manitowadge Lake mining field. How much new mining territory can be opened up when expenses for the prospector are that costly? If we had access roads, there is no doubt in my mind vast new mineral deposits will be found.

Now, Mr. Speaker, when we speak of roads in the north, we are not entirely selfish, because wealth discovered in the north helps Southern Ontario, as much of the end result of our mineral and timber wealth finds its way into the pockets of the citizens of Southern Ontario.

Remember, Cobalt built Toronto.

This government has brought Ontario sweeping, forward-looking legislation in the past. Remember the bold steps taken by former governments. I have reference to the T. & N.O. Railway—now the Ontario Northland—and the Ferguson Highway. We have ample proof of the wisdom of these bold steps in the development of areas such as North Bay, Cobalt, Haileybury, New Liskeard, Kirkland Lake, Timmins, Cochrane, Iroquois Falls, and Moosonee, great areas of mineral, timber and farming lands.

This is no time to bury our heads in the sand. This government has always taken bold steps which have brought great benefits to the people of Ontario. We have a better Prime Minister than any who have gone before him; a man more foresighted and fair. Let's build these access roads in the north and open up more of these great areas which hold such possibilities for the future prosperity of this province.

Orders of the day.

HON. MR. GEMMELL (Minister of Lands and Forests: Before the Orders of the day, I want to give the House a report in connection with a Canadian Press report of March 27th, regarding certain conditions existing in the Niagara River. This matter came up in the Fish and Game Committee of the Legislature this morning, and I promised the hon. member for Welland (Mr. Morningstar) and other hon. members serving that area, that I would have a report for them on this question. The Canadian Press report says in effect, that a large mass of dead fish was blown on to the Canadian shore of the Niagara River. The Canadian Press report reads as follows:

Another large mass of dead fish was blown on to the Canadian shore of the Niagara river in the Fort Erie area by a strong wind. Conservation officials have complained that industrial wastes, dumped into the water on the American side of the river, are responsible for the death of fish.

This report has appeared in various Canadian papers under different headings, indicating that industrial wastes have created this condition. So we dispatched a biologist and an engineer to investigate the matter. Their interim report is as follows. It was made by Mr. Millest of our department as of March 30th:

R. H. Millest, Engineer.

Report by: R. H. Millest.

Reports of large numbers of dead fish appearing throughout the Niagara River have been received by the department on various occasions since the summer of 1953. The most recent reports were received during the past two-week period from March 15th to March 29th.

A field survey of general conditions and of the extent of the fish mortality was begun on March 30th. The following information was obtained through inspections along the river, as well as through discussions with other representatives of the Department along the river and with persons investigating the same occurrence on behalf of the Department of Conservation and the Water Pollution Control Board in the State of New York.

The occurrence was closely observed for about 18 days by Conservation Officer A. R. Muma, Chippawa. His report (verbal, March 30th) indicated that the fish were almost entirely of two species only: gizzard shad and alewives. He had observed only a few other dead fish during that time. Heavy concentrations of dead fish were observed as far west as Port Colborne along the Lake Erie shore, and while these may have been carried there by an east wind, it is more probable that they died in the lake and not along the Buffalo waterfront, as was suspected.

An interview on March 30th with Department of Conservation Game

Protector, Robert Kauffman, of New York State, indicated that investigations by his department had failed to establish other than a natural cause for such a fish mortality. Their investigation of possible lethal pollution had revealed no more than traces of substances commonly considered poisonous and which were not believed to be responsible for the widespread, continued fish mortality.

A similar report was received from Mr. Donald Stevens, Associate Chemical Engineer of the New York State Water Pollution Control Board.

Conclusions:

It appears reasonable, for the following reasons, to conclude that the recent fish mortality in the Niagara River was due to natural causes:

1. Only two species of fish were found dead in large numbers—alewives and gizzard shad. If fish has been killed by pollution from either domestic or industrial wastes, other species would likely have appeared in appreciably large numbers.

2. The recurring nature of heavy mortalities in these two species has been known for many years, particularly in Lake Ontario. Their tendency to periodically "school" in large numbers is known. Such an occurrence may contribute to local oxygen deficiency, and hence mortality among those particular fish. Commercial fishermen in Lake Erie have reported exceedingly high concentrations of these fish during the past year.

3. The presence of large numbers of dead fish as far west in Lake Erie as Port Colborne, while it does not rule out the possibility of the mortality being caused by pollution, suggests that pollution is only a remote possibility in this case.

5. It is usually the case that fish mortalities due to pollution are severe and of short duration. This most recent mortality on the Upper Niagara River has taken place over a two-week period during which time no continuing lethal pollution was found.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I say, before the Orders of the day that I plan, at 5 o'clock this afternoon, to adjourn the debate which may be in progress at that time, and revert, with your permission, to the Orders of the day so that we may speak relative to the unveiling of the plaque to the memory of hon. Robert Baldwin, which is in the rotunda, just outside the Chamber. There will be many members of the Baldwin family here at that time, and it would be better if any speaking with reference to the life and work of Robert Baldwin were done in the Legislature, so that it would be unnecessary to have any speaking in the west corridor.

Immediately prior to the unveiling the House could adjourn its sittings to resume again at 8 o'clock this evening. The unveiling will take place immediately after the adjournment.

MILK INDUSTRY BILL

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare) moves that the third reading of Bill No. 68, "An Act respecting the Milk Industry" be discharged and referred back to a Committee of the Whole House.

Motion agreed to.

The following bills were read a third time and passed, and intituled as set out in the motions:

Bill No. 17, An Act respecting the Ross Memorial Hospital.

Bill No. 18, An Act respecting the City of St. Thomas.

Bill No. 19, An Act to incorporate The Hamilton Foundation.

Bill No. 22, An Act respecting the City of Peterborough.

Bill No. 23, An Act respecting the City of Peterborough (No. 2).

Bill No. 25, An Act respecting the City of Ottawa.

Bill No. 51, The Telephone Act, 1954.

Bill No. 91, The Financial Administration Act, 1954.

Bill No. 104, An Act to amend The Conservation Authorities Act.

Bill No. 105, An Act to amend The Planning Act.

Bill No. 106, An Act to amend the Public Hospitals Act.

Bill No. 107, An Act to amend The Charitable Institutions Act.

Bill No. 108, An Act to amend The Mothers' Allowances Act, 1952.

Bill No. 111, An Act to amend The Public Parks Act.

Bill No. 116, An Act to amend The Magistrates Act.

Bill No. 117, An Act to amend The Judicature Act.

Bill No. 118, An Act to amend The Security Transfer Tax Act.

Bill No. 119, An Act to amend The Succession Duty Act.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

LABOUR RELATIONS BILL

House in Committee on Bill No. 110, "An Act to amend The Labour Relations Act."

Mr. Dent (Oxford) in the Chair.

MR. SALSBERG: I should like to ask the chairman to agree not to call this bill for the committee's consideration at this moment. The reason I make this request is because, only a few minutes ago, the various groups in the House received a four-page memorandum which goes into details of various aspects of the bill. I doubt whether any of us have had the chance to familiarize ourselves with its contents.

The memorandum comes from a responsible labour body, the Ontario Federation of Labour of the CCL, and I suggest, Mr. Chairman, in view of the fact that we have had no opportunity to consider it, we should give ourselves the time to become acquainted with its suggestions before we deal with the bill in the committee stage.

HON. MR. DALEY (Minister of Labour): I can only say this: that this bill and these amendments have been considered over a long period of time in consultation with many people, among them the very people who have sent this memorandum at this late date. I may say to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that the government is not prepared to delay this matter. We have compiled this, we have approved the contents, and we are prepared to go ahead with the bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I think, Mr. Chairman, that we should have time to read this memorandum. I would like to read the 5 pages before we consider the bill if this is possible.

HON. MR. DALEY: I think the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) received this as soon as I did, and I have already read it. Most of it agrees with what we have done, though it does criticize us for some things that are not included in the bill.

MR. GRUMMETT: Where did the hon. Minister receive his copy?

HON. MR. DALEY: Right here in the House.

MR. GRUMMETT: Well, we have been considering other things. I got this a few moments ago, and I think we should be given time to read it.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not think there is anything in the memorandum which opposes what is contained here. It acquiesces in what we do, and suggests other things. I am quite prepared to hold it over before it is reported and to let the hon member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) look over the brief. But he will find there is nothing in it which is opposed to what is put forward in this bill.

MR. SALSBERG: Why cannot the government agree to such a modest and reasonable request that the bill be left over until tomorrow morning for consideration?

HON. MR. FROST: We have a great deal of business before us. I set this for a time which, I thought, would allow for consideration of the bill in the light of day, instead of calling it at night. I had planned it for this date, and I think we should go ahead.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Prime Minister knows that the light of day never penetrates into this Chamber. We could consider it later this afternoon, or tomorrow.

HON. MR. FROST: This was made available, as a matter of fact, some weeks ago. The principles of this matter were laid down at an open hearing, at which the press was present. I am not so sure that I did not see the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) sitting at the back of the room. I may be mistaken, in that, but but I am satisfied that the hon. member for St. Andrew read this over most thoroughly. Surely between then and now, with his great propensity for reading newspaper clippings and other matters, he must know pretty well what is in this statement.

MR. SALSBERG: The mystery of my presence there can easily be explained. I have not read this document since it was placed on my desk. I therefore went there and asked the Deputy Minister of Labour whether he received it, and I suggested that he and the hon. Minister of Labour should agree not to call the bill this afternoon because of this latest information. That is the reason I was there. I was hoping the hon. Minister and the Deputy Minister would agree to leave this until tomorrow.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, can we proceed with this? I think we have given the hon. member for St. Andrew his answer.

MR. SALSBERG: If you insist on rushing this through, and denying us the opportunity to find out what an important labour body has to say about the bill, there are a few questions which have to be asked.

In section 1, subsection 2, councils of trade unions are being introduced into the legislation, and to recognize that such a council is a suitable body for collective bargaining. This may be a very worthwhile step to take. On the other hand, it raises a great number of questions.

The Act also provides certain penalties against unions and the denial of certain rights of unions, even for the prosecution of unions for violation of some parts of the Labour Relations Act. The question arises whether, with the establishment of these changes, any violation of a unit of the council would not put in jeopardy the council and all its affiliates. In other words, to take an example, supposing the United Automobile Workers union of this country, the Canadian District Council, had one of its locals involved in a strike, the legality of which the employer or the hon. Minister of Labour would question, would the council as a whole, that is, the Canadian Council of the U.A.W., lose its right to collective bargaining?

Mr. Chairman, this is not a secondary question. It is a rather important consideration, and could create havoc in the trade union movement.

As I said before, in principle it would seem to be a worthwhile addition to our collective-bargaining machinery, but I am afraid of the consequences, about which I have spoken.

I would like to hear the hon. Minister elaborate on that, and give us assurance that no such danger exists.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, on the one hand, the hon. member said it would be a worthwhile addition, while, on the other hand, he tries to build up a man of straw, in order to knock it down.

In the first place, the relationship between the employer and the trade council can only be established by mutual agreement. If there was any difficulty, it would involve only the particular union, not the whole group—which is a member of the council, and which is a party to the agreement.

We think it a worthwhile addition to our labour relations legislation. It permits a group of trade unions to form into a council. That was done on the big Hydro development at Niagara Falls, and it worked extremely satisfactory. They negotiated an agreement as one. We have it in the printing trade and with the Typographical Union.

It does not require, if there are 15 unions, that each would have to have a certain number of representatives. That would create a whole army in order to come to any agreement. It simplifies the matter of collective bargaining on a broad scale. It was very completely canvassed in our discussions, when this was being devised, and I think the brief, to which the hon. member referred, concurs in it.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I did not make it quite clear enough. Until now, a collective bargaining agency was rather clearly defined. Let us say a union of carpenters, or a union of automobile workers, was engaged in negotiations, which led to the signing of a contract. According to the provisions section of the Act, if the bargaining unit violated any part of the Act, it suffered certain consequences. Right? If, as a result of the present amendment, a joint council, or any similar body of a number of unions, was to sign a contract on behalf of a number of locals, and if one of the unions or locals violated any of the terms, or were to become involved with the department, because of the charge that they violated certain rules, would that not handicap the bargaining unit, which would be the council or the joint board?

I may say there seems to be no definition in the Act to make it abundantly clear that the penalty clause will not apply to the broader group, which will be acting on behalf of a number of local units.

HON. MR. DALEY: No. I can advise the hon. member it involves the particular union, and that union only.

MR. SALSBERG: Only that union?

HON. MR. DALEY: Only that union.

MR. SALSBERG: Let us take the example of Hydro, as was mentioned by the hon. Minister: If the carpenters' union was involved in a dispute, then the joint council, established by all the unions in the project, should not forfeit any of its rights, and should not be liable to penalties, as a result of the fact that it signed on behalf of all groups.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, I can assure the hon. member that is right.

Section 1 agreed to.

On section 2.

MR. SALSBERG: On section 2, the words as I read them, seem a little contradictory. Well, let me read the section as amended:

Upon an application for certification, the board will determine the unit or employees which are proper for collective bargaining, but which, in every case, must consist of one employee and the board may, before determining the unit, take a vote of any of the employees or employers—and so on.

How in the world are you going to determine who has the right to participate in a vote before you determine the unit? You say very clearly, "before determining the unit, the board may conduct a vote." Who will participate in the vote, if you have not determined the unit? It would seem to be rather confusing and confused.

HON. MR. DALEY: The purpose is to give the board the opportunity of establishing a "voting constituency," as it were, to enable the board to ascertain the wishes of the employees. There must be some method of doing it, and the board is desirous of being able to do that.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, if I read the intent correctly, I imagine it is meant to apply to certain craft groups who may desire their own representation. But I do want to say I think it is rather necessary, to have it clearly stated in the Act, so that if an application is made by a certain group, that wishes to have separate representation, be they carpenters or plumbers, then only the carpenters or plumbers or bricklayers be entitled to vote. Then you have some definition as to who is entitled to participate.

But if you leave it before determining the unit, to have a vote, it would be possible, if it was desired, to include in the vote a group of people who would not even come under the bargaining unit, and who later on might be dropped, but who would be added to the voting group.

It does not make sense to me, unless I get more enlightenment.

HON. MR. DALEY: The matter has been very carefully considered by our own people, and the board, and with the legal counsel who finally compile the intent into language. I am quite satisfied to say I think it covers exactly what the hon. member wants. We have the definition here and I do not think the hon. member has any reason to think that both parties would be unfairly dealt with in the language of the Act itself.

MR. SALSBERG: You see, Mr. Chairman, it is not the intent I question. I think it is clear. But I question the wording which may lead to a great deal of trouble. If anybody desires to cause trouble, they could do so, the way it is formulated now.

Section 2 agreed to.

On section 3.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I would like to ask the hon. Minister if he does not think the definition section of the original Act should be amended, so we would have a definition of "guard"—a definition of an employee who may be regarded as a guard only, and excluded from the bargaining unit.

Previously such an employee was not included in certification, but under this new section—that is, section 8, as covered by section 3 of this bill—a guard is not included in collective bargaining.

I think the original definition section of the Statute should be amended to give a clear interpretation of what is meant by “guard.”

HON. MR. DALEY: I think you will find that section 8 of the Act will cover that. But, in any event, Mr. Chairman, it has been found necessary to deal definitely, and with a degree of positiveness with the question of “guards.”

There is a type of person who may be a guard and carry weapons to protect the plant. There is another type who may just be stationed at the gate to interview or recognize people coming in. There may be some men who would be doing menial work around the plant all day, and just step out as guard for an hour at night, or for the incoming workmen in the morning.

The board has the power to define a “guard.” I am sure it would not say a fellow who worked around the plant all day, and just walked to the gate to check up, would be a “guard,” and should not be permitted in a bargaining unit.

What is being done is giving the board the right to determine who a “guard” is, and, as the personnel of the board is, as hon. members know, representative of both management and union organizations—such large bodies as the Federation of Labour and the C.I.O. with an equal number of representatives of management—I am sure these guards can and will be fairly and impartially dealt with.

I think the wording, as we have it here, does exactly what the board, in its experience of administering for years, wanted done. I am satisfied this is a necessary addition, and as the board operates with the personnel, as I have mentioned, I am sure the question will be adequately handled under the new regulations.

MR. GRUMMETT: But might it not lead to a great deal of argument before the board? Every time the matter comes before the board, there will be a discussion as to who is a “guard” and who is not.

HON. MR. DALEY: They always have to face these things. I have said to the board: “I cannot design legislation to prevent you from having arguments; you have certain things to do, and certain things with which to deal, and there is no legislation which can be written into the books, which will make everything so ‘cut and dried’ that the board would have nothing to do, within the spirit of fairness and within its powers.” That is what its members are there for. That is why they are representative of all classes, and I think you can leave it to them.

Sections 3 and 4 agreed to.

On section 5.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, section 5 deals with the bargaining committee, and it says, “what shall be the composition of the bargaining committee of the union,” but there is nothing in this section as to who will constitute the bargaining committee of the employer group.

What I am trying to point out is that the employer group could send a very junior official in to bargain, one who would go in simply as a man of straw, whereas the unions would send in their top-level officials. Is there no possibility of putting into this section some amendment whereby management will send only senior officials to bargain in good faith with the union?

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, as the hon. members are aware, I have dealt with a great many cases of bargaining, and I have found no indication of what the hon. member says. I have found that large institutions have representatives, their personnel manager, or members of the staff, who are selected to bargain. It may be the president of the organization is not there, and I do not think there is any way of demanding that he be. In fact, in many cases

I would prefer the top officials not to be there, because we have found, from experience, that if you have the top people there and get an answer, there is no place to which you can go. But if you get a "No" answer from the representatives who are there, and you deem that answer to be unreasonable or unjust, you have some place higher up to go by way of appeal.

I do not mind telling the hon. members that we do have to do that. We have said to them, "We think this is a reasonable settlement, but if you do not agree to this, we will go to the top."

I have done that both with employers and representatives of the unions. I have stepped over the heads of the bargaining group of unions, and consulted with the president of the whole organization, on many occasions.

This is really in the interest of the unions, because we have had experience in these matters. As a matter of fact, I recall one employer's representative insisting we have two employees from each of the different employer organizations. Some of them only had two, and it would have been necessary to close the plant so these people could come. We do not think that is necessary. We think the group of employees and employers should get together, and bargain in that way. For instance, you may have the Building Trades Council, which will only have three or four people representing the group. That would apply in the same manner to the unions.

We think we are taking quite an advanced step toward encouraging collective bargaining in a big way.

MR. GRUMMETT: Do you not think the intent to bargain is rather frustrated, when the junior officials come in from the employers' group, with definite instructions from the group, and who are not prepared to alter their decision one way or the other? It delays the whole procedure. You have perhaps to cancel that meeting, and arrange another, before you can get in contact with the higher-up officials of the employer group.

HON. MR. DALEY: I would not promise to make any intent to select the bargaining group for an employer, nor would I expect to do that for the unions. Even when dealing with the unions, I sometimes wish some other people were there, who I know, understand the situation better than those with whom we have to deal. But I do not think that this Legislature should attempt to say who will bargain for whom.

MR. SALSBERG: Why did the hon. Minister find it necessary to amend this section 12, altogether, at this time?

HON. MR. DALEY: Which section?

MR. SALSBERG: Section 5, which is really amending section 12.

HON. MR. DALEY: The whole thing follows through. In this Labour Relations Act, you cannot amend simply one section. We are making it possible for trades councils to function in a manner that be productive of agreements.

Sections 4 and 5 agreed to.

On section 6.

MR. SALSBERG: On section 6, Mr. Chairman: In a way, that is the heart of the bill, and I respectfully suggest that it is very inadequate and does not seem to meet even the minimum requirements.

For a long while, the great cry from organized labour was that the conciliation processes had become so "bogged down" with frustrating and almost provocative situations arising.

Originally, the Act provided a certain time limit for the whole process to go through. In this section we are cutting it down from 52 to 35 days, as we have in the previous section reduced it from 20 to 15. Yet in the face of the complaints as to the actual situation, I think the hon. Minister must realize this is a disappointing step to take. The press anticipated the announcement by the hon. Minister, and commented on it as if it were major labour legislation.

The Toronto Globe and Mail, in anticipation of far more changes than we are getting, gave him front-page royal treatment, as late as February 9th, in announcing the intention to bring about important changes in the Act.

Labour, in response to this advanced publicity, also said it would welcome improvement in the conciliation process.

I suggest what is now proposed will not be very helpful, because, instead of getting through the process in a given time as was established, it drags on for as long as 48 weeks, and longer.

Many unions will admit that the delay was due not alone to the department or to the employer, sometimes the unions also contributed to the extension of the time. I imagine there were instances where both employers and employees agreed to continue the conciliation, in the hope of arriving at a satisfactory settlement. Even considering these factors, the conciliation process often broke down, and created such a dangerous situation that only heroic, last-minute efforts and the showing of a maximum of self-restraint, prevented industrial disputes, which would have been of major proportions.

The situation became so serious that the Ontario Federation of Labour (C.C.L.) research branch, found it necessary to issue a special bulletin stating the recent experiences of the union. It found, instead of the maximum of 69 days, as was originally considered to be the extreme limit, cases were extended, as follows—I am not naming the firms listed, although I could if anybody wishes it. I am sure the hon. Minister has seen this document.

Here is the list of firms whose employees were involved in negotiations, which led to the establishment of conciliation boards, and the length of time required:

29 weeks; 28 weeks; 26 weeks; 25 weeks; 26 weeks.

In one case 48 weeks.

Then there were a great number of instances where the conciliation process dragged on for 26 weeks, 26 weeks, 16 weeks, 24 weeks, 23 weeks, 22 weeks, and so on.

Certainly, this is not facilitating the negotiating processes. There is something to what is said by the union leaders, that many employers fail to negotiate in good faith, and fail to make substantial offers to their workers, in anticipation of getting a better deal from a conciliation board. They merely go through the motions in the first stage, of meeting, and making their own offers—often very inconsequential offers—knowing they will be rejected. They can then apply for a conciliation board. Then the merry-go-round starts in earnest, extending, as you have already seen, for as long as 48 weeks, in some instances. There have been instances where it dragged on for more than a year. I do not know how the Labour Research Department missed that, but we do know that it existed.

In the face of this demoralizing and provoking break-down of conciliation, the amendments do not offer any serious or basic solution. It is certainly disappointing, in the face of all expectations and promises. As the brief begins—and that is all I had the opportunity of reading—of the Ontario Federation of the C.C.L. which was placed on our desks, they take no exception to the amendment, but emphasize its inadequacy.

I suggest something more than this is required, and I raise this point for consideration: Whether the negotiating process would not be stepped up if it were known that after a conciliation officer has tried to bring about a conciliation and has failed, the unions then are free to take whatever action they desire? If they desire to take action let them take it. If they do not, and both parties agree to go to the department asking for a conciliation board, then, of course, the board should be established.

After the efforts of a conciliation officer have failed a conciliation board may be appointed, but only if it is requested. If no request is made, they should be free to take whatever action they desire.

Many employers, knowing the union would be free, might, of course, speed up negotiations, and make offers which would result in an earlier settlement.

While I am on my feet, I am questioning—I am not too certain about it, and I want to say I am not very sure whether it is right or wrong—whether the hon. Minister should have the right to refuse a conciliation board, when asked. You see, that puts tremendous power in the hands of the hon. Minister. I cannot visualize a situation where the hon. Minister's refusal to set up a conciliation board could help the process of negotiations.

HON. MR. DALEY: It makes them free.

MR. SALSBERG: It could, that is true, but on the other hand, the hon. Minister could also use that power in a manner which would be very disadvantageous to the workman. Frankly, I am not prepared to place such wide powers in the hands of a Progressive Conservative Minister of Labour, and I do not apologize to the hon. members who support the government for saying that.

I am wondering whether we would not accomplish more if we made it clear that if the two parties to negotiations failed to arrive at an agreement, a conciliation officer should be designated to enter the situation, and carry on to the best of his ability, in an effort to bring the two parties together. If he failed, then the two parties would be free, unless they applied for a conciliation board, but they should not be obliged to request a board, as is now the case.

These are a few of the observations I wanted to make on this very vital part of the bill. Before I sit down, I want to make it abundantly clear, that I am very unhappy, very disappointed, very resentful of the fact that the government did not give the unions a chance to discuss these opinions which I am humbly trying to discuss now, before a Committee of the House. I am also very resentful of the fact that the government did not even want to give us time until tomorrow morning to acquaint ourselves with the written opinions by such an important body as the Ontario Federation of Labour of the C.C.L. about this very important matter.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Chairman, this is a definite, earnest, and sincere effort on the part of myself and the Department of Labour, to reduce to the greatest extent possible, conciliation, but to do what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) indicates he would like done would be actually to do away with the Act, have no Act, and let everybody do exactly what they wanted to do.

That is one way of looking at it. But if you want to have good labour relations, to establish a process of bringing the parties together, insisting they continue to negotiate, and negotiate in good faith, you must have an Act.

You hear so much from the opposition—I do not mean the official Opposition, but generally those who always seem to consider the employers in this province are simply terrible people, who spend their entire time trying to grind down the workers, but that is not so. Actually, the relationship between employer and employee in this province, generally, is good. They both have a great understanding of each other's problems.

Many times when I sit down in negotiations with people, I hear an employer say, "Well, we know what these boys are up against. They have to do something. They have to get something for their workers. How are we going to do it?" They give us their position, telling us that it is difficult to do what they are being asked, but I have never heard in all the negotiations I have taken part in, any attitude indicating that any employer is trying to beat his workmen down. I want to make it very emphatic that such a condition does not exist.

I do not say there is not the odd case where some individual employer has built up a resentment against organized labour. There is. If there were not, we would not require labour legislation at all. However, that is fast disappearing and today employers and employees are working in an atmosphere of understanding, the employer trying to maintain his business to meet the competitive markets, and to pay his men as much as he thinks possible; and organized labour endeavouring to improve conditions in matters of health, safety, and wages, and to maintain a high standard of living.

There is conflict there, but in my experience, it has not been an antagonistic conflict; it has been a desire on the part of both to get the best they could out of the deal. That is why they are able eventually to wind these things up. I can not order someone to do something, all I can do is assist the two parties, who apparently at that stage need assistance, to bring disagreements into agreement, and arrive at the best possible solution the industry thinks it can meet, and the union thinks it can afford to take.

I say, in agreement with the hon. member for St. Andrew, that there are many times when conciliation has been stretched out, but I would say in examining the whole situation, the reason is as much on the part of organized labour as it is on the part of the employer. I could get data and details to substantiate that statement, but I do not think it is necessary at this stage. I do say there are cases when, in my opinion, after discussing it with my conciliation officer, and reviewing the whole situation, if I could say to these parties, "Now I am not going to appoint a conciliation board. You people settle this, or the union will be free to use whatever economic strength it wants to exert." If I could do that, I think it would eliminate a great many conciliation boards.

I want to make it abundantly clear that I am not going to drastically refuse a board, but I think there are many instances, when either on the employers' side or on the union side, the employer feels, "If we had a board here, it would give us a little less than this," and the union feels, "If we had a board, we might get a little more," and I believe a great many of these cases would be settled quicker. I could illustrate by letters that high (indicating) that we have a very competent staff. I have had men write very congratulatory letters to me, when these men have been out on the job, about the work the conciliation officers have done.

I think they should actually be assisted to say, "Now let us complete this, because I do not think I can recommend a conciliation board to the Minister, and if I do, I doubt if he will appoint one."

That is the crux of this bill. In no way, do I consider it a minor amendment. I said, in the early stages, as soon as it was possible for me to know that I was definitely going to bring something in, that neither the employers nor employees had indicated to me in any brief, such as this one we received today, that there were any drastic or basic changes needed. There are amendments, and I presume that as we progress and administer, we will find for practical purposes, that there may be other amendments required some day. But after a very careful examination, with my own people whom I consider "tops" on this continent—because in this industrial province, we have had more experience—I think we have very competent people with whom to work, and their advice I accept to a great degree. I am satisfied the amendments which we have here are worthwhile, that they will improve the Act. that they will not destroy the basic principle of establishing a method to develop good labour relations and conciliation services, and I could argue for every one of these amendments. But, as I point out, a great many of them are required because of the change in one, to simply bring the Act into line.

Section 6 agreed to.

On section 7.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In section 7, subsection (b), the hon. Minister has in a general, but brief way, dealt with the provisions of this subsection, which are to the effect that the hon. Minister has the right to refuse to appoint a conciliation board if he deems it advisable.

I wonder if the hon. Minister would give us specific illustrations of just when he would refuse to appoint a board? Under what circumstances would he take that step? As I understand it, prior to 1950, he possessed this same power. In the 1950 Act, it was taken away, and now he is reversing the previous decision, and bringing back this right to refuse to appoint a conciliation board.

HON. MR. DALEY: At the time I had that authority, I do not think I ever refused to appoint one. But experience has shown me and my officers it is necessary. As they come in from these assignments, and they give me the story of what has happened, how close they were to a settlement, and sometimes it is just a very minor thing on one side or the other, which will cause them to ask for a board. I know the officers have had that experience, and I reiterate again they are men about whose work I have received bales of complimentary letters. Had they the knowledge that I, as Minister, might not appoint a board, but could say to them, "I will not recommend a board," I think in half an hour, if they re-canvassed the situation, they could settle this dispute.

When they come and tell me these things, I can see the need of this provision. Personally, it would make more work for me. I would have to look carefully into what has been done, and I might decide there should be no board. I think we would only have to refuse a few, and the attitude would change.

The hon. member for St. Andrew indicated the 10 or 12 boards which have taken what appears to be a great length of time. That is true. But he did not say anything about over 1,000 cases of conciliation last year, 600-odd of them settled by conciliation officers in "jig time." The others are the bad ones.

MR. SALSBERG: I wanted to leave something for the hon. Minister to say.

HON. MR. DALEY: The hon. member for St. Andrew is very kind. Those are the facts: out of over 1,000 cases, 10 or 12 are cited as having taken an extremely long time, and if I were able to go into the circumstances of each one, I think I could justify the statement that the delays were unavoidable, under the circumstances. Probably one side or the other requested a delay.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to ask the hon. Minister if it is proposed in section 7, to cut the time allowed from 7 to 5 days in which parties can make nomination for conciliation boards? I would like to ask the hon. Minister what his experience has been with the legislation presently on the Statute Books? Have there been many occasions in which the parties did not nominate within the 7 days, and if they did not, what is the practice followed to complete the picture?

HON. MR. DALEY: That is a fair question, and a difficult one too, because, to be frank with this House, I will say we can write any number of days in there. If they do not comply with them, the first thing we have to do is write to them to find out why they did not. We then advise them we have not received their nomination, and ask them if they would look after this, and so on. Often, we are advised that the man they want to represent them on this case is not available, but will be back in a week, or they give some similar reason.

What can we do? In order for the conciliation time to be cut, we require the co-operative effort and the desire of both parties to work with us to bring it about. Sometimes, a group will come into my office and endeavour to settle a dispute. One side—particularly organized labour—will say, "We want this settled, and we want it settled by tomorrow night—or else." I have said on many occasions, "Well then, you might as well leave right now, because I have no guarantee that by tomorrow night at 5 o'clock, I will have a settlement, and if I do not have it by 5 o'clock, you will stay here until we get it."

That is the only way we can do it. I cannot say "You can wind up." You might as well say we can wind up this argument in the next 5 minutes. It is a matter of co-operation and a desire to do the thing, and all I can say is that my department and my officials are earnest and sincere and do the best they can to help these matters progress.

MR. OLIVER: Does the hon. Minister possess, and if he does possess, has he ever exercised, the authority of making an appointment where they failed to nominate?

HON. MR. DALEY: If they do not nominate a chairman, I do.

MR. OLIVER: Has the hon. Minister ever done that?

HON. MR. DALEY: I have done it promptly, yes.

Section 7 agreed to.

On section 8.

MR. SALSBERG: What penalty is provided against an employer who refuses to abide by an arbitration decision?

HON. MR. DALEY: Arbitration decisions are binding on both parties.

MR. SALSBERG: Suppose an employer refuses?

HON. MR. DALEY: I suppose it would eventually result in prosecution. One party or the other would make application for leave to prosecute, and then it would be a matter for the courts.

MR. SALSBERG: Has the hon. Minister instituted any such prosecution?

HON. MR. DALEY: I do not think so. I do not recall any.

Section 8 agreed to.

Sections 9 to 17 inclusive agreed to.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish to ask a question on section No. 18. Section 59 of the Act is now, I think, being amended. This section now seems to leave the power open for an employer to provoke a strike. The section, as it reads in its amended form, says:

Where a trade union or a council of trade unions calls or authorizes a strike or employees engage in a strike which the employer or employers' organization concerned alleges is unlawful, the employer or employers' organization may apply to the board for a declaration that the strike is unlawful and the board may make such a declaration.

What I suggest, Mr. Chairman, is that unless the amendments are only for the purpose of providing for the council arrangement, I am afraid this section is leaving the door wide open for some provocative action on the part of an employer. Hon. members know that this can easily be done. It is not impossible to antagonize a group of workers. Their lives can be made rather difficult if an employer desires, and, because of that provocation, a cessation of work may result. It is then open to an employer to seek a declaration that the strike is unlawful. In other words, this is not sufficiently safeguarded. What I should like to know is this: Whether this is part of the old Act, with changes to accommodate the councils, or whether it is new.

HON. MR. DALEY: The present Act requires that before a strike can be considered legal the organization must have gone through the procedure as set down in the Labour Relations Act, and if it appears that they have not followed those regulations, they may be considered to be on strike illegally.

People come to me very often and say: "That is an illegal strike, is it not?" I may, in my own mind think that it is. I may be sure it is. But I am not the one who declares it to be so. If an employer thinks his men are on strike illegally, he makes application for a declaration by the Labour Relations Board, and this Act gives the board power not only to make that declaration but to refuse to make it if the evidence as submitted indicates such a course. There is nothing really new in this, but it clarifies the situation so that the board has its policy more clearly defined.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Would this be taking away authority from the hon. Minister and giving it to the Board of Conciliation?

HON. MR. DALEY: Oh no. They have had this authority. But people have been asking me as Minister if a strike was legal or not, and I have refused to pronounce on this question. I may have a group of people, who are on strike illegally, in my office, endeavouring to settle a dispute. People say: "Why are you dealing with these people? They are on strike illegally." But until an employer has made an application to the board and obtained a declaration from the board saying the strike is legal or illegal, I do not pay any attention to whether a strike is legal or not, because I have always felt that my obligation is, to the extent to which this is possible, to settle disputes and bring people back to doing business.

MR. SALSBERG: This question of illegal strikes is a subject which has not only escaped clear definition, but has been terribly misrepresented.

HON. MR. FROST: I can say on that matter that there were some legal strikes—the Hollinger strike, for instance—for the reason that the Conciliation Board proceedings were not carried through. In that case, I believe, under the Act as it was, the company had the right to go to the board and have the strike declare illegal. The company did not see fit to do this, so the hon. Minister of Labour quite properly and rightly treated the strike as a legal strike, and dealt with the people, and with the parties. His decision was, simply, that until an application had been made to the board to declare it illegal, he was going to consider that these were people who were entitled to be on strike. That is a proper decision. The hon. Minister of Labour does not make a decision arbitrarily that a strike is illegal. He waits. If there is an application to the board, and the board makes at least a quasi-judicial adjudication, he would govern himself accordingly.

The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has no need to worry on the grounds that the hon. Minister or the government passes upon these things alone. The case of Hollinger is exactly in point.

Sections 18 to 23 inclusive agreed to.

MR. SALSBERG: On section 24, subsection 2. I wonder if I am right in thinking that subsection 2 deals with the problem of decertification? I see it deals, rather, with proof of membership. It seems that wide discretionary powers are taken in determining the proof of membership. I wonder if the hon. Minister of Labour could enlighten us on this subject?

HON. MR. DALEY: The board, of course, has rules and forms of procedure, which have developed over a period of time, under which it requires certain proof of membership should be produced. The board requires cards, and evidence of membership. I think that is right. I do not think that this section changes the procedure already in force to any extent. This becomes a matter of procedure, as adopted by the board, for determining who is representing who. It is customary for the board to require that receipts, submitted as evidence in connection with union funds, shall be signed by the man, and countersigned. The board requires evidence of payment of dues. It has inspectors and examiners who check all these things to avoid difficulty arising later on. If they do a thorough job at the time of the organization's certification, and if nobody is taken in who should not properly enter, subsequent trouble is minimized.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister of Labour is undoubtedly aware that there has been a great deal of apprehension in the trade union movement over the increasing tendency to decertify unions. The Labour Board has come in for a great deal of criticism because of this trend, and much of this criticism has come from Conservative quarters. The question occupied the attention of delegates, and was a centre of discussion, at the A.F. of L. convention this year. Delegates charged that this epidemic of decertification, in most instances, was engineered by anti-union employers, who created conditions which would justify them in applying for decertification. I may say that there is a very definite move in this province and elsewhere—perhaps this applies more to other parts of Canada than it does to Ontario—for the establishment of company unions. These have received encouragement from certain government agencies outside Ontario, and have also received a great deal of support from certain employers. Despite all the hon. Minister has said here about the employers' attitude toward unions, the fact still remains that there are many who are unalterably opposed to any form of trade unionism. There is increasing concern over this in the ranks of the trade unions. I think the president of the A.F. of L. has given expression to this concern, and he is by no means a radical—I refer to Mr. McArthur.

In view of these criticisms and in view of this grave concern over the decertification process, I am wondering whether this amended clause, which deals with this point of decertification and proof of membership, should not be referred first to the trade unions for an opinion before we proceed further at this stage. After all, the government might change its mind. The government did change its mind two days ago on the Milk Industry Act. I appealed to the government at least to make a statement on this question and the record will show that I raised a number of points in connection with that legislation, if only for the sake of giving the government a chance to make replies to representations on that question. But the government members sat as silent as sphinxes. But today, they came back with a request that the bill be withdrawn before its introduction for a third reading. That, Mr. Chairman, indicates some advance, though it took the government a couple of days to withdraw the bill. It may do the same thing in this case. I am not giving up hope. This section is so important and people are so concerned about it, that, perhaps, the government will agree not to proceed further until it has learned the opinions of the unions of the province concerning it.

HON. MR. DALEY: In answer to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) I can only say that the "great epidemic" of decertification, which he speaks of, actually amounts to 7 cases in the last year, where unions were dissolved at the request of the employees themselves.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister knows how these dissatisfied employees are created. Anyone who has ever had any connection with trade unions knows that dissatisfaction can be created if it is so desired.

HON. MR. FROST: Has the hon. member for St. Andrew never heard of another union intervening and wanting to take over?

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, I have heard of that.

MR. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, there are many sections in this bill which are to be commended since they tend to speed up the process of agreement. I would like to ask the hon. Minister of Labour if it is not possible for him to appoint an additional officer in his organization whose duty it be to go round and find out what is causing delay in the settlement of a dispute wherever he sees conciliation breaking down.

I repeat, that, perhaps, if we had some official who could watch what was going on, he could serve a useful purpose by intervening, with some action on his part, whenever negotiations between an employer and representatives of employees got bogged down. Has the hon. Minister ever considered appointing such a man, whose duty it would be to act in, roughly, the same way as a traffic policeman, who stands at a corner and gets things going? The hon. Minister of Labour himself may be too busy to perform this function and I am wondering if he would appoint one of his officials to carry out this duty in the way I have suggested.

MR. SALSBERG: Do not suggest a speed-up.

HON. MR. DALEY: In theory the hon. member's suggestion might sound very good. But actually, from practical experience, it would be impossible, because this is a tremendous province. We have conciliation going on at the Head of the Lakes, and in the eastern and western sections, and we would have to have a referee at each game.

The thing to remember is when you are dealing with labour relations, and it gets into a conciliation, and sometimes past that, in endeavouring to negotiate settlements, and that sort of thing, you are in the "big league," and are playing with the top people.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): That is why you want an umpire.

HON. MR. DALEY: All the "kidding" and everything is gone. You are down to business, and you are dealing with skilled people in handling these matters.

In closing my remarks for the day on this question, I am going to say I am very happy with the results of the Labour Relations Act over the years which I have been Minister, and which now total 11. It has been amended a couple of times to meet the changing conditions, but, in general, as I have indicated the other day when speaking on this matter, the results in this province with its tremendous increase in industrial activities, and with the changing tempo of labour organizations, we have had very excellent results, and statistically our record is better than any other place.

This Act is the result of very careful consideration, which has extended over a period of 8 months. And we even had a record player to record our conversations between the various groups, so we could go back over them, and see what the arguments were, for and against.

There has not been an argument mentioned on any question, nor any briefs presented by labour or management, which we have not taken apart and thoroughly examined, and decided that if we did a certain thing, what would be the result, and if we did not, what the result would be. Everything has been very, very carefully examined, and I think at this time, while it does not give labour everything that it desires, it certainly does not give management all the things they would like to have included in it. I may say that the Bar Society has also made recommendations about certain things.

Actually, we have carefully, and without regard for either party, endeavoured to bring about a labour Act which does what it was intended to do, and that is to continue good labour relations.

Bill 110 reported.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report a certain bill without amendment.

Motion agreed.

The House resumed: Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report a certain bill without amendment.

Report concurred in.

THE BUDGET

—The Acting Speaker in the Chair.

HON. G. H. CHALLIES (Minister without portfolio):

REPORT TO LEGISLATURE—1954

HON. GEORGE H. CHALLIES

Introductory

It has been my privilege to present to the Legislature each year a review of the activities of The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario for the calendar year preceding the one in which the Legislature meets. This year I propose to continue this practice, and as well to review the highlights of the commission's achievements for the 10-year period from 1943 to 1953.

Ten Years of Unprecedented Progress and Prosperity

In August 1953, the Progressive Conservative Party completed 10 years of administration of the government of this province. During that decade the citizens of Ontario experienced growth and prosperity of a truly remarkable character. Ontario's population increased from slightly less than 4 million to almost 5 million people. The number of our manufacturing establishments increased by about 800 and the number of those employed was increased by 65,000. During the same time, the gross value of production in manufacturing establishments was more than doubled in dollar value. The value of our mineral production was almost doubled during the 10-year period. Retail sales were increased three times in dollar value and personal income doubled. The physical volume of agricultural production in the province, as measured by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics Index, rose from 89.4 in 1943 to 119.2 in 1952. The net value of forestry production, which stood at $37.1 million in 1943, reached $88.6 million in 1951, the last year for which statistics are available. The number of employees in Ontario's leading industries increased by nearly one-third between 1943 and 1953 and the wages and salaries paid to them in 1953 were more than two and one-third times those paid 10 years earlier.

In reviewing these indexes of production, employment, and prices, we must remember that 1943 was not a year of business stagnation but one which saw Ontario's industry at or very near the peak of its World War II production. The astounding growth and prosperity of the following decade is to be attributed mostly to enterprise of our industry and our workers, farmers, and business men; to the magnificent resources of farmlands, forests, minerals, hydro-electric power, and transport facilities which are our heritage; and to the very favourable economic conditions with which North America has been blessed. Nevertheless, the honesty, efficiency, and vision of the Progressive Conservative administrations under Prime Ministers Drew, Kennedy, and Frost have played vital roles in our economic development.

by Former Administration*

The government newly formed in 1943 had to devise good policies to counteract the bad policies of the former administration. For example, policies affecting the development of Ontario Hydro were particularly troublesome. Many of you will recall clearly how the repudiation of the so-called Quebec contracts had placed a strain on the relations between Ontario and Quebec. There is ample evidence in the official records of the commission to show that contract repudiation was a bar, for example, to joint development of the Ottawa River. You will also recall the strained relations which existed between the Liberal Administration of Ontario and the Federal Government.

Considering how unanimously the citizens of Ontario now urge the development of the International Section of the St. Lawrence River, and considering also the tremendous growth in demand for power during the past ten years, it is difficult to understand how a Liberal Prime Minister of Ontario could write to the Prime Minister of Canada: "This province is simply not interested in the production of any more power . . . I have on various occasions ventured the opinion that the St. Lawrence Waterways project could not be justified on economic grounds."

MR. SALSBERG: When was letter written?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: 1938. The political ineptitude and short-sighted fumbling of the Provincial Liberal Government made the period during which it was in control the darkest hour in the whole history of Ontario Hydro. Their lack of appreciation of Ontario's potential strength stands out in sharp contrast to the vision and energy with which Hydro affairs are handled today. The Provincial Government and The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario work closely with all power interests, private and public, in Quebec, Manitoba, and the United States. A signal achievement of 1953 was the placing in service of tie lines at Sarnia and Detroit between Ontario Hydro and the Detroit Edison Company. This was followed early this year by completion of arrangements for an interconnection in the vicinity of Cornwall between the Niagara Mohawk system and our Southern Ontario system. Co-operation and assistance have characterized relations between the governments of Canada and Ontario in the discussion of national and international problems, as evidenced in the St. Lawrence River Development Act of 1952 and the Act to Facilitate the Development of Power of the Niagara River passed in 1950. The Provincial Government, with an abiding faith in the future of the province and the Dominion, has anticipated tremendous industrial growth, the largest in the history of the Province of Ontario, and made provision for adequate supplies of electric power from new sources to meet the requirements of this growth.

Hydro Doubles its Size in 10 Years

In 1943 the Hydro enterprise, conducted by Ontario Hydro and its member municipalities, was already one of the world's largest electrical utilities. Yet, during the past 10 years, even this giant has grown almost out of recognition. For every kilowatt of dependable peak capacity available to the commission in December 1943 there were 2 kilowatts in December 1953. For every circuit mile of high-voltage transmission line in service at the end of 1943 there were 2 miles at the end of 1953. Matching every $1 invested in Ontario Hydro's plants at the close of 1943 there were more than $3½ at the close of 1953. For every farm customer served in 1943 the commission served 2 farm customers in 1953. In fact, by almost every measuring rod, Ontario Hydro in 1953 was twice the size of Ontario Hydro in 1943. In other words, the whole growth of the 30 years prior to 1943 was equalled during the phenomenal 10 years between 1943 and 1953. This rapid growth has posed many problems. Expensive engineering difficulties of great complexity have had to be surmounted. During a large part of the period, manpower and materials were in short supply, but thanks to the energy and vision of the Provincial Government and the management of Ontario Hydro the problems have been solved and the difficulties largely overcome.

Engineering Achievements

The major engineering achievements that have enabled us to cope with the enormous increases in demands suggested by the growth I have sketched may be summarized as:

1. The integration of the commission's systems into two extensive grids or power networks, one for Southern and Northeastern Ontario, the other for Thunder Bay and Northwestern Ontario.

2. The full development of every substantial water - power resource within feasible transmission distance of Ontario's populated area—with the important exception of the International Section of the St. Lawrence River.

3. The supplementing of hydro-electric generating capacity with large fuel-electric plants.

4. The standardization at 60 cycles of the 25-cycle system serving a large part of Southern Ontario.

5. The inter-connection for mutual security of the Southern Ontario system with neighbouring power networks in Canada and the United States.

6. Constant planning and research to increase the efficiency and economy of service and to make available to the commission's customers every advantage to be gained from the advance of science and technology in the atomic age.

Systems Amalgamated and Inter-connected

In 1943 there were 3 separate systems in the southern part of the province and 6 in the northern. In 1944 the 3 southern systems were integrated into the Southern Ontario system. At the same time, centralized control of the flow of power was established through the power supervisor's office in Toronto. Since then, the 6 power systems in the north have been progressively amalgamated until they have become 2, the northwestern and the northeastern divisions of the Northern Ontario properties. There is not, at the present time, any physical connection between these divisions, although early last year they were consolidated for financial and administrative purposes. An inter-connection between Otto Holden Generating Station and North Bay Transformer Station does, however, provide for the transmission of power between the northeastern division and the Southern Ontario system. Thus the most efficient and economical use is made of the water held in storage and of the power available within a great triangular area with its apex at Abitibi Canyon on the north, and its base stretching roughly from Windsor on the west to the junction of the Ottawa and the St. Lawrence Rivers on the east. Surpluses of power may be transferred at will as they are required. The long-range planning of the commission envisions the eventual extension of its power grid or network, to include the northwestern division. The idea that the mining districts of Kenora near our western border, the farms of Prescott and Glengarry "down east," our most northern generating station at Abitibi Canyon, and our most southerly, the J. Clark Keith at Windsor, could be bound together by one integrated network of systems, would have startled the early planners of Ontario Hydro, yet such a development is certainly possible.

Rivers Developed

In 1943 the commission was generating no power on the Aguasabon or Mississagi Rivers. The waters of the Ottawa flowed turbulently through the narrows at La Cave, down the rocky valley at Des Joachims, into the broader reaches of Chats Lake below Chenaux, and on to the mighty St. Lawrence, its tremendous power harnessed by the commission only at Chats Falls. In 1943, on the Niagara, the commission was diverting for power purposes all of the water permissible under existing international agreements.

Within the second half of this decade the upper Ottawa has been exploited to the full by the commission's aggressive programme of construction. The Otto Holden Generating Station at La Cave, and the stations at Des Joachims and Chenaux on the Ottawa, have a total dependable capacity of 710,000 kilowatts. The capacity of all the commission's stations on the Ottawa is now 854,000 kilowatts, as compared with 162,000 kilowatts in 1943.

In addition to the development on the Ottawa, the last 10 years have seen the construction of Stewartville Generating Station on the Madawaska, George W. Rayner Generating Station on the Mississagi, Aguasabon Generating Station on the river of the same name, and Pine Portage Generating Station on the Nipigon. The capacities of these four stations total 212,700 kilowatts. The commission is now adding 2 units of 60,600 kilowatts capacity at Pine Portage. On the English River, the planned development at Manitou Falls will have a capacity of 34,500 kilowatts by 1956.

The capacity of Ontario Hydro's developments on the Niagara River is now being greatly increased. Under the Niagara Diversion Treaty of 1950, power developments in Canada and the United States share the full flow of the river in excess of 100,000 cubic feet per second, in the daytime hours of the tourist season from April to October, and in excess of 50,000 cubic feet per second in the remainder of the year. These arrangements provide the commission through the larger part of the year with more water than was available under earlier agreements, while at the same time preserving the scenic beauty of the Falls. In order to make the most effective use of the available flow, the commission decided to build a huge new generating station, the Sir Adam Beck-Niagara No. 2, and, in conjunction with it, a pumped-storage reservoir to conserve the energy from the flow that becomes available only at night or at other times of low demand. The capacity of the commission's Niagara River and DeCew Falls stations in December 1957 will total 1,603,000 kilowatts, or 941,000 kilowatts more than in 1943.

Fuel-Electric Generation

The commission's total resources to meet the peak demand in December 1953 amounted to 3,565,100 kilowatts, or almost double the capacity in December 1943. In recent years, fuel-electric generation has come to be an important factor in the commission's power resources. In 1953 the Richard L. Hearn Generating Station and the J. Clark Keith Generating Station provided about one-sixth of the commission's dependable peak capacity.

Summary

The programme of generating station construction that I have sketched has been on an enormous scale. Since 1945, the addition of 15 new generating sources has been authorized and of these 13 are now in service. Work on the other 2, Sir Adam Beck-Niagara No. 2 and Manitou Falls, is proceeding rapidly with a view to both being in full operation in 1956.

Other Developments

Keeping pace with the great expansion of generating stations, there has also been a tremendous programme of construction of transmission and transformation facilities. For every circuit mile of 115- and 230-kv line in operation in 1943 the commission had nearly 2 circuit miles of similar line in 1953. In total, there were nearly 8,300 circuit miles of high-voltage transmission line in 1953. The physical maintenance of this extensive transmission network is a major undertaking. The commission has made use of modern devices for improving the efficiency and reducing the cost of this maintenance operation. Of particular importance has been the use of the helicopter patrol for the inspection of transmission lines. This has reduced both the difficulty in reaching and inspecting lines in normally inaccessible country and the cost of line inspection because of a reduction in the man-hours involved. The chemical treatment of transmission rights-of-way for the control of brush growth has been both more economical and more effective than manual operations. Over 8,000 acres were so treated in 1953.

Research and Planning

Research has been continuously undertaken with a view to evaluating and improving the performance of electrical equipment and the stability of structures. Improvements have been made in insulation, methods of grounding, and the preservative treatments given to wooden poles and structures of various kinds. The development of new techniques of construction is a matter of perennial interest and importance. Outstanding among the research achievements of the past 10 years have been the development of electronic and physical devices for the location of faults in transmission lines and the use of sonic waves for the testing of concrete structures. Recently, high-speed sequence recorders and a working model of an operations recorder have been developed. These will make for more effective analysis of the performance of equipment during system disturbances.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): May I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies), is that an original development of Hydro?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes, in our own Research Department. In fact, the equipment that was perfected in our own laboratory is sought after by others and we are glad to let them have the use of it.

Extensive use has been made of hydraulic scale models for the study of problems affecting the design and operation of hydro-electric developments. These models will assist in reducing construction costs and providing solutions to engineering problems of the St. Lawrence power project as they have already done for the Niagara. The great benefits of the commission's research programme accrue not only to this province, but through the activities of other interested public utilities, to other provinces and countries.

Planning of the commission's systems has been made the function of a separate division of the commission's engineering branch. This division seeks to anticipate the needs and problems of the expanding system, prepares Estimates, and controls construction costs. The major emphasis in planning at the present time is placed on providing capacity for rapidly growing loads and on incorporating into the Southern Ontario system new sources of 60-cycle power as the frequency standardization programme proceeds. Because the two are so closely related, advantage is being taken of the present situation to introduce basic changes in the system of supply to heavily industrialized areas. The main feature of these changes is the establishment of large switching stations outside the crowded industrial areas. Through these switching stations power pooled from several generating sources can be delivered by radial lines to terminal stations located near the loads.

Frequency Standardization

The frequency standardization programme, particularly in its industrial aspects, is about to enter a most interesting phase as the area of operations draws closer to the City of Toronto. The part of the programme already completed indicates that the whole programme will be a much greater task than was anticipated at the outset. Instead of the 697,000 domestic customers of the original Estimate, the programme now requires the standardization of 794,000, and on the average, each customer has, not 2.7, but nearly 4 frequency-sensitive items. The number of commercial customers has similarly increased from 72,000 to 94,000 and the number of power customers from 14,300 to 17,000.

The reasonable allowance for load growth made by the original estimate has proved equal to only half the actual growth. No allowance could have been made in the 1947 Estimates for the reduction in the purchasing power of the dollar, which in 1953 was equivalent to 72.7c. in 1947 currency. Furthermore, the unprecedented expansion in productive power and production that marked the years of intense wartime activity has been continued through the past 8 years at a rate that our most optimistic economists could not foresee. Expenditures on frequency standardization up to December 31st, 1953, amounted to some $160 million; of this amount approximately $24 million represents inventories of materials and equipment for future standardization work. From the beginning of the frequency standardization programme to December 31st, 1953, an amount of approximately $650,000 has also been spent on the standardization of rural distribution facilities.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) mind if I were to ask what in his opinion will be the final amount, approximately?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Mr. Chairman, I should be very glad to answer that, but I cannot guess the future, I do not intend to make any guess whatsoever.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) says he cannot guess what it would cost. Has there been no Estimate compiled as to what it will cost to complete this changeover?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I believe the Chairman made an Estimate, and at the same time he qualified it with respect to the difficulty of telling what would happen.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): But the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) ought to be as courageous as the Chairman.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Well, I am not quite. I think he said something over $400 million.

MR. SALSBERG: Did the hon. Minister say $400 million or $440 million?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: We have a stock expression when referring to figures. We do not call them Estimates any more, we are beginning to call them "guesstimates." So I would not want to make a guess.

MR. OLIVER: It certainly was a "guesstimate" in this case.

Administrative Changes

I will now turn to some of the most important administrative changes during 1943-53.

1. RURAL

In 1944 the farsighted policy of Ontario Hydro brought about the consolidation under one rate structure of the then existing 120 rural power districts of the province. The virtues of this policy are proved in the outcome. The total mileage of rural primary line in 1953 was more than twice what it was in 1943; the number of rural customers has risen about 2½ times while the total energy consumption in 1953 was nearly 6 times that of 1943.

2. MUNICIPAL WHOLESALE RATES LEVELLED

The generous co-operative spirit of Hydro's member municipalities has helped to level the cost of power to municipal electrical utilities. In 1942 the cost of power to municipalities ranged from $16 to $90 per horsepower. In order to reduce this wide spread, the Ontario Municipal Electric Association supported a resolution recommended by the commission authorizing a levy of up to 5c. per horsepower on all power delivered to municipalities, the levy to be used to reduce the cost of power in those municipalities then paying in excess of $39 per horsepower. Now, Mr. Speaker, this is significant. In 1943 there were 63 such municipalities. During 1944 the number was reduced to 30 and in 1948 to 3. In 1952 and again in 1953 not a single municipality required assistance from the fund. At no time in the whole 10-year period did this gesture of co-operation cost the municipalities in excess of 2c. per horsepower purchased.

A further step in the direction of leveling out variations in the wholesale cost of power was the inauguration in 1951 of a revised costing procedure designed to make possible a more equitable division of system costs. Prior to 1951, a municipality served under a cost contract was charged according to (1) the cost of the generation, transformation, transmission, and distribution facilities used in serving it and (2) its peak power requirements.

The costing procedure now in use employs pooled system and division costs and takes energy requirements (measured in kilowatt-hours) into account, along with peak load requirements (measured in kilowatts). Thus, along with operating economy and security, the consolidation of systems has brought an improved costing system and more equitable wholesale rates.

REGIONAL OFFICES

Some decentralization of the commission's administration and operations became imperative as the hydro enterprise expanded. In 1947, the commission established 9 regional offices in key centres. Their staffs are responsible for day-to-day business as it affects the commission's municipal, industrial, and rural customers. Their intimate knowledge of the local situation enables them to analyze problems and to provide guidance and service in the most expeditious way.

COMMISSION EMPLOYEES

The cordiality that has marked its relations with customers has also marked the commission's relationship with its own staff which now numbers nearly 20,000 employees, 12,000 of whom are classified as regular staff. Contributory schemes for pension, insurance, and hospital and sickness benefits have been developed in co-operation with the employees' representatives.

St. Lawrence Power

Further progress was made during 1953 toward our goal of deriving power from the St. Lawrence but before discussing it, I want to clarify a point about which there is some confusion in the public mind. For many years the development of navigational works to provide a seaway and the development of power on the International Section of the St. Lawrence have been closely associated in public discussions and international negotiations. Under legislation of recent years, however, the two phases of this project have been separated. The Government of Canada retains full responsibility for the seaway or navigation project. The Government of Ontario is primarily concerned with the power project on the International Section of the river.

A year ago I said that 1952 had been marked by a great step forward when the International Joint Commission gave approval to the project to develop the St. Lawrence for power. I said that Ontario, through its agency The Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario, was ready to act just as soon as the Federal Power Commission in the United States named the entity to work with Ontario Hydro.

On May 20th, 1953, the Canadian Government proclaimed the International Rapids Power Development Act. This Act, passed in December 1951, authorized Ontario to join the appropriate entity in the United States in the construction of the power project. Proclamation of the Act forestalled any claims by opponents of the power project that Ontario did not have full legal authority to go ahead with the power development. The Governments of Canada and the United States also announced the establishment of the St. Lawrence River Joint Board of Engineers to supervise construction of the proposed power development.

During the summer of 1953 the Federal Power Commission announced it would grant to the Power Authority of New York State a licence to develop power on the St. Lawrence in conjunction with Ontario Hydro. Early in November, however, a restraining lawsuit, opposing New York's participation in the project, was filed in the United States Court of Appeals. The suit was brought by the Pennsylvania Coal Producers Association, the Lake Ontario Land Development and Beach Protective Association, and the Public Power and Water Corporation of Trenton, New Jersey. The last-named had applied unsuccessfully for a licence to participate in the power development.

Also in November—and this is important—President Eisenhower designated the Power Authority of New York State to act as the United States' agent for the power development and the Secretary of State promised our Minister for External Affairs that every effort would be made to get an early decision from the courts.

Last January the Court of Appeals upheld the granting of a licence to New York's Power Authority. The defeated appellants announced their intention of taking advantage of all further delays allowed by law and of carrying their case to the Supreme Court of the United States. We must, therefore, anticipate a 4- or 5-month extension of the already tedious and costly delay which has prevented the start of construction.

Despite this delay, much preliminary engineering work has been done. An early end to the legal difficulties facing New York State would permit construction to be started this year. The recent naming of two engineering firms to direct construction of the New York half of the power project is encouraging.

The topographic surveys on which preliminary designs have been based were made many years ago. Since the spring of 1952, field parties have been bringing the earlier surveys up-to-date. Foundation investigations and surveys of materials suitable for concrete aggregate were begun during 1953. Essential information for hydraulic studies, for the construction of three large hydraulic models of sections of the river, and for the design of the dams and powerhouse is being assembled.

During the past year a competent staff has been collected to plan the rehabilitation of the municipalities to be affected by the flooding. By the time construction begins the commission will have compared its ideas with its New York counterpart and will be able to submit definite proposals as a starting point in evolving plans acceptable to the municipalities concerned. An over-all plan for the area is also being studied which includes the relocation of a section of No. 2 highway and the Canadian National Railway's main line. The Department of Highways is at the same time planning a neighbouring section of the divided arterial highway which will eventually link Montreal and Windsor.

Ontario Hydro Looks Ahead

The achievements of the past decade and the reasonable prospect of developing power on the St. Lawrence do not permit Ontario Hydro to relax. The future power requirements of this province must be met. The prospect of an economical large-scale supply of natural gas for industrial and residential use is most welcome. In planning its large fuel-electric generating stations the commission wisely made provision for simple modification permitting the use of natural gas as a fuel instead of coal.

The hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and the chairman of Ontario Hydro announced early last November the completion of arrangements with the Federal Government under which Ontario Hydro will co-operate with Atomic Energy of Canada Limited in a feasibility study on the development of an atomic reactor for the generation of power. Ontario Hydro sought the opportunity to undertake this work as a protection for its future power supply. The general direction of the work will be shared by Dr. R. L. Hearn, the commission's general manager and chief engineer, and Dr. W. B. Lewis, vice-president in charge of research and development, Atomic Energy of Canada Limited. Dr. Hearn, as a director of Atomic Energy of Canada Limited, has been in close touch with developments in the atomic energy field. You may be sure that Ontario will reap the benefits of atomic energy as soon as they can be made available.

Conclusion

In closing this review of the tremendous growth and development of Ontario Hydro between 1943 and 1953 as well as the principal events of the past year, it is a pleasure to record on behalf of this House and the citizens of Ontario our sincere appreciation of the splendid services performed by the skilful and conscientious staff of the commission under our general manager and chief engineer, Dr. Richard L. Hearn, and our two assistant general managers, Dr. Otto Holden and Mr. A. W. Manby. It is also a pleasure for me to pay a personal tribute to our chairman, Mr. Robert H. Saunders, and my fellow commissioner, Mr. W. Ross Strike, who continued during 1953 to devote their great energy and ability to the commission's business. The commission is deeply appreciative of the co-operation and advice it has received from the various departments of the Provincial Government, and in particular, from the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) and his office. May I add a personal word of congratulation to the hon. Prime Minister, who has now held the office of Provincial Treasurer of Ontario longer than any previous incumbent, and has very ably, successively and successfully, presented 11 annual budgets to this House.

MR. J. P. ROBARTS moves the adjournment of the discussion.

Motion agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I would like to request permission to revert to Orders of the day, so that we may speak in relation to the unveiling of the Baldwin plaque. I notice, however, that the clock is a little on the fast side, and that the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), whom I suggested be here at 5 o'clock, is absent from the House. That being the case, sir, perhaps I could call second readings. There are some items of a non-contentious nature with which we might utilize the remaining few minutes.

HOMES FOR THE AGED ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 121, "An Act to amend The Homes for the Aged Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

GRAND RIVER CONSERVATION ACT

HON. MR. WARRENDER moves second reading of Bill No. 122, "An Act to amend The Grand River Conservation Act, 1938."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CEMETERIES ACT

HON. MR. WARRENDER, in the absence of Mr. Phillips, moves second reading of Bill No. 123, "An Act to amend The Cemeteries Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

DISABLED PERSONS ALLOWANCES ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 125, "An Act to amend The Disabled Persons Allowances Act, 1952."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

COMMUNITY CENTRES ACT

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW moves second reading of Bill No. 126, "An Act to amend The Community Centres Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

LOAN AND TRUST CORPORATIONS ACT

HON. MR. FROST, in the absence of hon. Mr. Porter, moves second reading of Bill No. 127, "An Act to amend The Loan and Trust Corporations Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

FIRE MARSHAL'S ACT

HON. MR. FROST, in the absence of hon. Mr. Porter, moves second reading of Bill No. 128, "An Act to amend The Fire Marshal's Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

ONTARIO HOSPITAL, PORT ARTHUR

HON. MR. FROST, in the absence of hon. Mr. Porter, moves second reading of Bill No. 130, "An Act respecting certain lands in the City of Port Arthur occupied by the Ontario Hospital, Port Arthur."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE LIQUOR LICENCE ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves second reading of Bill No. 132, "An Act to amend The Liquor Licence Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE PHARMACY ACT

HON. MR. PHILLIPS moves second reading of Bill No. 133, "An Act to amend The Pharmacy Act of 1953."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TRAVELLING SHOWS ACT

HON. MR. FROST moves second reading of Bill No. 134, "An Act to amend The Travelling Shows Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE ROYAL CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC, TORONTO

HON. MR. DUNLOP moves second reading of Bill No. 135, "An Act respecting the Royal Conservatory of Music, Toronto."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I ask you now to revert to Orders of the day.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

UNVEILING PLAQUE TO HON. ROBERT BALDWIN

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, it will be the pleasure and privilege of the hon. Leader of the Opposition and myself to unveil, on behalf of the members of the House and the Government of Ontario, a plaque commemorating the life and work of hon. Robert Baldwin, whose picture hangs at the head of the stairway outside of this Chamber.

In honouring hon. Robert Baldwin, I wish to make reference to his family, who have made a great contribution to Canada from the very beginning of our modern history—if I may put it that way—starting with the formation of the Province of Upper Canada in 1791.

The original Baldwin was Robert Baldwin of Summerhill. He was the grandfather of the man whom we honour today. He, like many other great men, was an Irishman, and migrated to America in 1799 with his family. It is interesting to reflect that those were different days and there were different issues which were as pressing as we think issues are today. The terror of that day was not the atomic bomb, but it was Napoleon Bonaparte, whose forces were expected to land in Bantry Bay. Robert Baldwin used to barricade his house at night, and arm his servants against the possibility of such a landing. I think that feeling was pretty general, not only in the southern part of Ireland, but on the coast of England.

Coming to Canada, he brought his family. The hon. William Warren Baldwin (1785-1844) was one of them. It is his son, the hon. Robert Baldwin (1804-1858) whom we honour today.

The distinguished Baldwin family is now numerous in Ontario, and it has kept up its interest in, and contribution to, the public service. It is always difficult to choose outstanding members of a great family.

We have in the gallery to my right, descendants of the original Baldwin; and descendants of hon. Robert Baldwin we also have sitting under the gallery at my left. One distinguished family member is Warren Baldwin, who was a member of this Press Gallery for many years, and is now the representative of the Southam Press in the Press Gallery at Ottawa. We have here, Mr. Hamilton Cassels, Q.C., who has a very distinguished record, not only in the field of sports at the University, but as a leading lawyer and counsel in Ontario. Among the things which distinguish him is the fact that he is the General Counsel for the Presbyterian Church in Canada, which in itself is a great accomplishment.

Mrs. A. F. Barr, a great-granddaughter; Mrs. John Lash, also a great-granddaughter, Mr. Peter Lash, a great-great-grandson, I believe; Mrs. Walter Berle, a great-granddaughter, and her daughter, Mrs. Powell, a great-great-granddaughter; Mr. Herbert Wilcox Garwood Baldwin is a grandson, and his brother, I believe, is the head of the Baldwin clan in this country.

There are others here whom I am unable to mention because I have not been successful in getting all the names, but I believe all the family has been invited and is probably present today.

I might remind you, Mr. Speaker, this afternoon, when we unveil the plaque, that a few feet from where we will be standing, is a memorial containing the names of several nursing sisters who gave their lives in the first Great War. Among them is that of Nursing Sister Dorothy Mary Garwood Baldwin, who was killed in action at Apalle, in 1919, in an incident, which is very familiar to many of us here—when that great hospital was bombed. She was a great-granddaughter of hon. Robert Baldwin; and her father, another Robert Baldwin, lived in Paris, Ontario.

I am going to ask that the members of the Baldwin family, after the unveiling of the plaque, will please attend at your office, Mr. Speaker, and there sign the visitors' book which is a record of distinguished visitors to this Legislature. We will, indeed, be proud and honoured to have their names inscribed on the records of this House.

In referring to the work of hon. Robert Baldwin, one of those who contributed to the development of responsible government in Canada, may I refer to a radio broadcast I made on the 9th May, 1950, when I officiated at the opening of Mackenzie House, substituting for Rt. Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, then Prime Minister of Canada, who was prevented from attending by reason of illness.

There are things which contributed to what I am going to say. One of them was that on such an occasion, for the purpose of honouring William Lyon Mackenzie and dedicating his home, the honours would be done by one who is said, at times, to be a "Tory Premier of Ontario." But I can say perhaps it was because I am a Progressive Conservative that this opportunity presented itself. Afterwards, Mr. Mackenzie King graciously wrote to me approving what I said, which he had heard over the radio. I have asked his literary executor, Mr. Fred McGregor, if I might use a sentence or two from that letter today, and he kindly consented.

I was particularly pleased when I was informed that you had consented to perform the official opening, but more pleased than ever when I listened over the radio to the words of your address.

I think I can say that, in the course of my public life, I have aimed at substituting conciliation and understanding for perpetuating antagonisms in matters that have long since passed into the realm of history.

Those were Mr. King's words, and I might say his letter, which was written two months before his death, is one which I value very highly. I am glad, indeed, that what I said on that occasion met with his approval, because I was substituting for him. I should like to read these words, because I think they relate to what we are going to say and do here today.

In my radio broadcast, I said:

We are not here today to weigh the merits of the controversial figures of those days—the zealous reformer, Mackenzie; the Governor, who had but little training for his complicated task; nor indeed those moderates, who probably represented the majority—Baldwin, LaFontaine, Hinks, Morin, Draper, Ryerson and others.

We are concerned today with the broad principles and what was accomplished out of it all.

In 1834, when Mackenzie became the first mayor of the then little City of Toronto, the scene was vastly different from today. The perspective was not the same.

War with the country to the south, in which French and English had united in the common defence of this land, was still fresh in men's minds. Indeed, the American Revolution, with all of its controversy, was still within living memory.

Political parties had not taken upon themselves the traditional forms which were to dominate the political life in ensuing generations. Lord Elgin's biographer remarks, "There was no real political life; only the pale and distorted reflection of it which is apt to exist in a colony before it has learned to look within itself for the centre of power."

About that time a famous statesman spoke despondently, referring to Upper and Lower Canada, of two nations warring in the bosom of a single state.

Upper Canada was very new. The stream of Loyalists from the States had been joined by the great immigration from the old land, which peopled what is now the Province of Ontario.

It was with that background that the men of that day groped for a method of government which would develop the nation then faintly envisaged. It matters not now who was right or who was wrong in the controversies of those times. What matters is what they achieved.

From it all came responsible government. From it came a working partnership between the French and English communities. To those things the men of those days devoted themselves. As a result, they brought into being the idea of responsible government, which was to be the cornerstone of the British Commonwealth of the future.

On the foundations laid by the men of the 1830's — Mackenzie, the Governor, Baldwin, LaFontaine, Hinks, Morin and the rest, Macdonald and his great lieutenant, Cartier, and those other fathers of Confederation, working through the ensuing 30 years, in 1867, were able to build the Dominion of Canada, which became a pattern for the British Commonwealth of Nations and, indeed, we believe, a pattern for world government in the tomorrow.

That is the background in which we should view the man we honour here today.

Robert Baldwin was a moderate. It can be fairly said that he sided neither with the Governor and his advisers, because he recognized that there were great reforms and changes to be brought about, nor did he side with the zealous Mackenzie, whose methods, he felt, could not contribute to the solution. Baldwin was a moderate who felt that reforms had to come about by way of understanding. This was his position in the revolution of 1837.

As a result of the investigation of Lord Durham, the union of Upper and Lower Canada was proclaimed on February 10, 1841, and the elections were held shortly afterward. Lord Sydenham invited Robert Baldwin to head the government forces for Canada West. He accepted, but made the public pledge that government of the united provinces would be carried on in accordance with the principles of responsible government. Baldwin felt that he could not continue in office until this principle was accepted, and accordingly, resigned. The first Baldwin-LaFontaine ministry did not take office until the 16th September, 1842. In the meantime, Louis LaFontaine was defeated in Terrebonne, and Baldwin, in one of the first great moves to bring about understanding between the two basic races in Canada, offered him a seat in the fourth riding of North York, to which he was elected by a very large majority.

In the course of these troublesome times, Baldwin himself was defeated in Hastings in 1842. He ran in the second riding of the County of York and was again defeated. It then became LaFontaine's opportunity to reciprocate Baldwin's kind act. Several French-Canadian members offered him their seats. Baldwin accepted the offer of Mr. Borne, the member for Rimouski, to which constituency he was elected on January 30th, 1843. Thus, we have the great example which laid the foundation for Confederation a quarter of a century later—a constituency in York County electing Louis LaFontaine and the riding of Rimouski electing Robert Baldwin.

The first ministry resigned on November 26, 1843, over the question of patronage. LaFontaine and Baldwin maintained that the principle of responsibility of the executive to the representatives of the people was not being fully recognized. The resignation of the LaFontaine-Baldwin ministry was no ordinary event—the whole principle of responsible government was staked upon the issue.

When Parliament was dissolved in 1847, the second Baldwin-LaFontaine administration was returned to office and lasted from that time until the retirement of these two great leaders.

On June 30, 1850, Robert Baldwin, then only 46 years of age, tendered his resignation and retired to Spadina, where he died a few years later. LaFontaine resigned in 1851, then only 44 years of age, and died some dozen years afterwards in retirement.

From the work of these two great men, who, I said yesterday, started Canada on the path of nationhood, both of them young men, showed to the people of these days, that it was not necessary, in the words of Lord Durham, that two nations should war in the bosom of a single state. They showed that they could live together with and among themselves. Since that time, French and English, and now other races, have been living and growing up together. We have come to know and esteem one another; minorities are respected. While individual racial and religious characteristics are preserved and, indeed, encouraged, we are united in our national ideals, and with what wonderful results. I believe we can say humbly that we in Canada provide an example to this perplexed and dangerous world, where the lack of understanding among races is one of the fundamental difficulties. Canada has provided the answer. In these past years, and in this year, 1954, we are continuing the development of this ideal. Our province had declarations contained in statutes and had enactments which are not oppressive, but come from the hearts of the people. We have provided that there shall be no discrimination in our province on the grounds of race, colour and creed.

Today, we are armed with the experience of our fathers and their faith. We believe that our experience in Canada can be the experience of others. We believe that we are on the right road to orderly world government, to the abolition of armed conflict and to the betterment of the conditions of human life.

Today, in honouring Robert Baldwin, and unveiling a plaque which is placed here to his memory, we are honouring great ideals which have resulted in the formation of our country and the creation of free and independent nations with the British Commonwealth under one Sovereign. Responsible government, toleration and understanding are the foundations of all of this. We therefore are contributing to the world ideas and ideals which can contribute to and solve the difficulties mankind faces in these perplexing and dangerous days.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure this afternoon to join with the hon. Prime Minister in honouring the life and memory of Robert Baldwin and to welcome to this Chamber those who come after him and who have made, in their way, a great contribution to the life of this country of ours.

Robert Baldwin lived well over 100 years ago. He was, in those days, a great reformer. He was one of the architects of responsible government in this country and he lived at a time which called for great decisions on the part of public men. Anyone who has read history at all will know that this is so. The days in which Robert Baldwin lived were days in which Canada was either going to be made or unmade—days in which the decisions that these great men took had the power to weld this country into one unit and reach her present greatness. I was much impressed, as were all hon. members, with the remarks of the hon. Prime Minister concerning Robert Baldwin and others of his day, pointing out that they laid for us the great foundation on which we have been able to build. In other words, that the people of this country, though they may be of different race, can live in harmony together.

If Canada has anything to offer the world, it is this example of how different races can live together in harmony, and plan together to enhance the greatness of the country in which they live.

Certainly, in that picture the name and the work of Robert Baldwin stands out, and that is one reason why we honour that name today. I often think that we, in this day and age, have no very real appreciation of what men like Robert Baldwin were up against in the early days of this country and it is to the everlasting credit of such men that, when decisions of supreme importance were to be made, they made them, and 99 times out of 100 the decisions were in favour of Canada and of welding this country into one great unit.

Another point which might be stressed this afternoon is the fact, as the hon. Prime Minister himself emphasized, that as far as the great political work of Robert Baldwin was concerned, it was accomplished before he had attained the age of 50.

To me, it is a remarkable thing that in this young country a man could have made such a mark for himself, and could have contributed so much to the building up of this country, and have done it all before he was 50 years of age. I certainly join with the hon. Prime Minister in honouring the memory of Robert Baldwin, and saying, with the one voice of all of us here this afternoon, that in that life well-lived, and in the lives of those who have descended from that great man, Canada has indeed been richly blessed.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, it is a pleasure for me to be able to join with the hon. Prime Minister, and the hon. Leader of the Opposition, in paying honour today to one who was a great leader in our country a considerable number of years ago. Today, looking back on that period, we do not ask ourselves to what Party Robert Baldwin belonged; all we recognize is that he was a man who belonged to Canada; who belonged to Ontario; a man whose sole endeavour was to build up the country he loved. We owe much of what we possess today to Robert Baldwin.

In other words, Mr. Speaker, the man we are honouring at this time was a statesman. Too often those who engage in work on behalf of the state today are politicians, not statesmen. I think we ought to recognize the fact that this man, Robert Baldwin, was an outstanding statesman; a young man who contributed much to the welfare of Ontario, and to the welfare of Canada as a whole; a man who left his mark; and we are very pleased indeed to see so many of his descendants here, and to know that they can look back with a great deal of pride and respect to a forefather who was an outstanding Canadian.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, there is little that one could add to the very eloquent and moving address of the hon. Prime Minister, on the life of Robert Baldwin and his place in the history of Canada. If I do rise, sir, it is for two very specific reasons; first, in order to make certain that the record will speak clearly of the unanimity which prevails in the House—and I believe outside this House—in paying tribute to the memory of one of the great architects of this country; and, second, because I have the privilege of representing a riding where the name of Baldwin is very well known. I think the only street in Old Toronto which bears the name of "Baldwin" is within a block of where I was raised. The first explanation of the life and place of Robert Baldwin was given to me, and other children, in the Lansdowne School, Spadina Crescent, by one of the teachers. She told us that Robert Baldwin lived on Spadina Avenue, and pointed out that it was on the corner of Spadina and the present Baldwin Street. We, of course, were very much impressed by this information.

I have learned, since then to understand that history is not merely a recording of facts, but an interpretation of events, and when it comes to historic interpretation, of course, there is room for a great deal of interpreting.

Some people argue that perhaps "The Little Rebel" was more correct than others—and when I speak of "The Little Rebel" I am referring to William Lyon Mackenzie, to whom the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) referred as the "zealous champion of responsible government." I think that history will record him forever as "The Little Rebel," the man who headed that movement. However, that is a matter of historic interpretation. The fact remains that Robert Baldwin, like so many others, recognized that the easiest course is not always the most correct nor wisest. It is always easier to conform with, and abide by, the leadership of the powers that are in the saddle of authority and government. Robert Baldwin, like so many others, questioned, disagreed, and fearlessly raised public questions, which resulted, in the long run, in the establishment of a united country and responsible government. It is that position that I am sure, he will occupy in the annals of history of this great and growing country.

The references which the hon. Prime Minister made to his role in uniting the two national groups, to me, is extremely important. Mr. Speaker, you know, I believe, that I am of an immigrant family, and I assure you that those of us who come from immigrant families are proud of the country that is our home, and eager to see it grow and flourish, and become the pride of all who live in it, and those who are to follow. We may disagree in how this is to be accomplished, but all of us feel the loyalty and the love for the country that is ours. We proudly pronounce that. It is therefore another great credit to him that he made so important a contribution to the uniting of the two nations in a single state.

I think we should recognize that Canada is a bi-national state. We speak sometimes of this "great nation," and, generally speaking, I think it is correct. Scientifically, however, it is more correct to say that this is a great country, a great state, in which are united two nations, plus the other groups who have come and are merging with the population of the country as a whole. And we should always try to attain that co-operation; that basis of understanding for joint effort on the part of all for the welfare of every section of Canada.

I am very, very happy, and I consider it a privilege to have the opportunity of joining with the hon. Prime Minister, the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and the hon. House Leader of the CCF group, in paying tribute to the memory of Robert Baldwin, and to his descendants, and in that way, I think, to all those who, with Baldwin, made their great contributions to the growth and the development of our city, our province, and our country.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I ask you to declare it 6 of the clock, and we might then move into the rotunda and unveil the plaque. May I add, sir, that when the House reconvenes at 8 o'clock, I shall be moving that you do leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply, so that we may consider the Estimates of the Department of Planning and Development, followed by those of the Department of Public Welfare.

Being 6 of the clock, the House took recess.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 31, 1954.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

The House resumed.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, I move that you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

THE CHAIRMAN: Page 65, Department of Planning and Development, Vote 114, Main Office, $65,500.

HON. W. K. WARRENDER (Minister of Planning and Development): Mr. Chairman, I am very pleased at this time to present my Estimates to the House after a year and a little more of tenure in office, of the Department of Planning and Development.

I should like to start with the Community Planning Branch of this department.

COMMUNITY PLANNING BRANCH

Planning Areas: Of the 30 new planning areas defined in 1953, 6 were joint planning areas, 4 were subsidiary planning areas within joint planning areas previously defined, and 20 more were single, independent planning areas. In addition, the boundaries of a joint planning area previously established were redefined to accommodate the definition of a new joint planning area.

Including the 30 new planning areas defined in 1953, there were 159 planning areas of all types at the end of the year, embracing all or parts of 238 municipalities which together contain a population of 3,440,000 persons, or 77 per cent. of the total in the province.

Official Plans: Nine new official plans were completed and approved in 1953, bringing the total number of official plans in effect in the province to 47. In addition, 55 amendments to existing official plans were approved during the year. The population of the 47 planning areas having official plans now totals 2,298,000 persons, or 51 per cent. of the population of the province.

Areas of Subdivision Control: During 1953, 18 additional municipalities, comprising 3 cities, 4 towns, 3 villages, 7 townships and 1 improvement district, enacted by-laws designating areas of subdivision control.

As of December 31st, 1953, such by-laws were in effect in 146 municipalities with a population of 1,890,000 or 42 per cent. of the total population of the province.

Plans of Subdivision: Of the 6,875 applications for approval of plans of subdivision submitted up to the end of 1953, 1,211 were received during 1953. This represents a 35 per cent. increase over the figure for 1952.

In view of the rapid development of land in many parts of the province, I am pleased to report that, through the co-operation of developers, surveyors, planning boards, municipal authorities and others concerned, the standard of design and the provision of services on new subdivisions have consistently improved in accordance with the accepted principles of good planning.

Street Names: The street name index maintained by the branch covering 23 municipalities in the Metropolitan Toronto area continues to operate successfully in preventing the duplication of existing street names in the process of registering plans of subdivision. It is also being used by some of the municipalities concerned when a proposal to change the names of streets by by-laws is under consideration.

Zoning By-laws: The volume of restricted area (zoning) by-laws upon which the branch is invited to comment continues to increase. In many cases, the branch is given the opportunity to consult with the municipality while the by-law is in preparation, and in almost all cases copies of by-laws submitted to the Municipal Board for approval are referred to the branch as to their fulfilment of any conditions which may have been imposed in the approval of plans of subdivision or as to their conformity with any existing official plan.

During 1953, 469 by-laws were examined, compared with 398 in 1952. To the end of 1953, more than 1,500 zoning by-laws or amendments to zoning by-laws were reviewed by the branch since it first undertook this function.

Committees of Adjustment: The following disposition was made of the 452 decisions submitted by the 15 committees of adjustment in the province in 1953:

Approval granted	355
Referred to Municipal Board	19
Appealed to Municipal Board	28
Returned to Committee of Adjustment	35
Action pending at end of year	15
	452

This compares with 343 decisions received in 1952 and brings to over 1,000 the total number of such decisions submitted to date.

Applications are made to committees of adjustment when, in view of the special circumstances relating to a parcel of land, the enforcement of a zoning by-law without adjustment is considered inadvisable. This device strengthens the zoning by-law by making it adaptable to special needs and circumstances which could not be foreseen when the by-law was passed.

These committees are performing a very valuable service to their communities. In each instance they must examine the application submitted to them in the light of the owner's rights and interests as well as those of his neighbours and the general welfare of the community as a whole.

Miscellaneous Activities: In discharging its responsibility of encouraging and guiding municipalities and groups of municipalities in carrying out planning in their local areas, the branch has engaged in the following activities in 1953:

1. The issue of 14 publications, consisting of pertinent extracts from the Statutes and articles on various aspects of planning;

2. The attendance by members of the staff of the branch at many planning board and council meetings. Also, many day-to-day consultations were held in the department with municipal officials;

3. The convening of 3 planning conferences for the purpose of discussing problems relating to the planning of suburban areas, the subdivision of land, zoning and the co-ordination of the activities of various provincial and local agencies concerned in community planning;

4. Continued co-operation with the University of Toronto in planning matters, particularly in regard to the graduate course in town and regional planning being conducted by the university;

5. Continued assistance, with the Department of Municipal Affairs and the Presqu'île Park Commission, in the direction of a general survey of lands included in the park.

Future Activities: In the year before us, we propose to increase our activities relating to the development of more comprehensive planning programmes on the part of local authorities in order that they may be of greater service to their respective communities. We shall continue to assist planning boards, municipal authorities and other persons engaged in planning functions in making more effective use of the instruments of planning available to them under the provisions of The Planning Act.

As examples of the type of assistance which we expect to have available, may I mention 2 activities which will take place in the very near future. First, on April 5th and 6th, more than 100 Ontario land surveyors from all areas of the province will attend a course in subdivision design convened by the Community Planning Branch. This is a continuation of our activities of last year when a similar 2-day conference on subdivision analysis was held in November, attended by 130 members of planning boards and their staffs.

The second activity concerns regional planning. This is a matter in which there is now wide interest. As reported in the House on March 3rd last, an Eastern Regional Planning Conference will be called early in June. By meeting on the larger regional basis we hope to gain a better understanding of some of the problems which demand more than local consideration.

We have now arrived at the point where local planning boards, where constituted, are actively assuming their responsibilities. The role of the province is to provide the leadership, guidance, specialized information and overall co-ordination which the local boards require. With help they may be eminently successful in performing a vital service to their own communities and to the province. It is the responsibility of the Community Planning Branch and myself, as Minister, to ensure that the necessary guidance and support are available and that no local planning effort shall fail for the lack of them. The resources necessary to accomplish this are comparatively small, but experience has shown that there is no field in which a small investment will yield such large financial returns, as well as returns in the form of better public health, safety, convenience and welfare.

HOUSING BRANCH

I will now report on the activities of the Housing Branch.

As stated in the Prime Minister's Budget Speech, the general level of residential construction in Ontario in 1953 rose above that for 1952 by 30 per cent. for starts and 28 per cent. for completions. In spite of this improvement, however, the problem of the housing shortage remains with us. There is still an acute shortage of adequate housing accommodation and serviced land for families in the low and middle income categories. It is also true that the standard of much of the housing that is available is of inferior quality. As private enterprise alone has not yet been able to cope with the problem, your government has continued to render assistance under the Housing Development Act of 1948 and amendments thereto.

During the past year, repayments on account of the 14,680 second mortgage loans have almost without exception continued to be made on the due dates. Under the contract these loans are repayable in equal annual instalments over a period of 20 years. Up to February 28th, some 3,480 loans had been paid in full, of which 1,104 have been discharged during the year.

The Housing Branch in 1952 facilitated the purchase by the Township of Larder Lake of 85 war workers' houses from Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation by advancing the sum of $110,500 to the township. I am glad to report that the township has met all payments as they have fallen due and has repaid $54,500 to the end of February, 1954.

Grants to the Toronto Housing Authority in respect of Regent Park North were continued on the same basis during the past year. In my report last year I reported that a total of $548,000 had been contributed on the basis of $1,000 for each dwelling unit completed. During the year an additional 102 units were completed so that the total grant made by the province to date stands at $650,000. It is expected that the project, comprising in all 1,274 units, will be completed during the ensuing fiscal year.

As in past years, the main activity of the Housing Branch has been to participate jointly with the Federal Government through its agent Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, under the provisions of the Housing Development Act and of the National Housing Act. In regard to these federal-provincial housing projects, it will be sufficient to say that we are still making available to urban municipalities with a housing shortage 3 types of joint housing projects: (a) land assembly projects, (b) fixed rental housing projects, (c) subsidized rental housing projects.

It has again been apparent that the lack of serviced land for residential building purposes is a major obstacle in overcoming the problem of the housing shortage. Our land assembly projects have been designed to help overcome this problem. To date 22 municipalities have signed agreements which in the aggregate will provide some 9,316 lots for sale at reasonable prices to private individuals and builders. A number of these lots have already been sold and houses constructed on them. The 22 municipalities, and the approximate number of lots to be provided in each, are as follows:

*Arnprior (43), Amherstburg (31), Atikokan (565), *Brockville (1,100), Guelph (203), *Kenora (255), Kingston (492), Kitchener (960), London (379), *London Township (850), Lindsay (58), Midland (32), *North Bay (55), Ottawa (665), Owen Sound (38), Peterborough (1,770), *Renfrew (46), *St. Thomas (280), Sarnia (1,200), Stratford (122), Stamford Township (57), Trenton (115).

Negotiations are being had with another 6 municipalities which, if completed, will provide another 5,323 land assembly lots. These municipalities are: Barrie (13), Cobourg (850), Cornwall (1,280), Hamilton (2,000), Kingston (800), and London Township (380).

*Agreements signed during the year.

†Rental projects completed during the year.

In my last report I stated that, although federal-provincial housing projects had been initiated in many municipalities throughout the province, we had been unable to make any progress in the Toronto area. I expressed the hope at that time that with the creation of the Metropolitan area, many difficulties we had encountered would be overcome. During the past year a number of concrete steps have been taken to try and relieve in part the housing shortage in Greater Toronto area. Land has been acquired in 3 municipalities within the Metropolitan area, namely Etobicoke, North York and Scarborough, to a total of 2,288 acres. Surveys of the properties and initial planning are now being carried out and it is estimated that eventually some 9,000 serviced lots will be made available.

I would like now to express both my appreciation and that of my department to the honourable member for Rainy River for the complimentary remarks made by him on seconding the motion of thanks for the Speech from the Throne in respect of federal-provincial partnership activities in Atikokan.

We are still making available rental housing projects to urban municipalities having a population of 5,000 and over who desire this type of housing project. To date construction of rental houses in 25 municipalities has been arranged; these are as follows:

Amherstburg (25), Arnprior (25), Brockville (80), †Dunnville (25), †Fort William (122), Fort Erie (28), Galt (50), †Goderich (51), †Guelph (70), *Hamilton (496), Kenora (25), †Lindsay (20), †Midland (30), North Bay (54), Owen Sound (40), †Port Arthur (40), †Prescott (10), Renfrew (30), Smiths Falls (24), †Stamford Township (70), †Stratford (40), †Sault Ste. Marie (100), St. Thomas (40), Trenton (25), and Windsor (325).

Altogether the agreements provide for the construction of some 1,845 rental houses and of these 1,275 have already been constructed and occupied. Negotiations are continuing with another 9 municipalities, namely: Barrie (25), Galt (50), Hamilton (250), Napanee (21), Orillia (25), Preston (25), Prescott (25), Stratford (45), and Windsor (104) which, if completed, will provide for the construction of another 574 rental houses.

The majority of the rental houses that have been constructed under the joint federal-provincial housing partnership to date were on a full-recovery basis, so that the province can expect to recover its investment in full from the rents collected over a period of 50 years. The average rents in our full-recovery projects vary between $60 and $65 per month inclusive of payments in lieu of taxes. In our subsidized projects the average rents are appreciably less and average from $47 to $52 per month inclusive of payments in lieu of taxes.

During the last few weeks, as was announced by the hon. Prime Minister in his Budget Address, we have also been approached by the Toronto City Council to redevelop the Regent Park (South) area as a subsidized rental housing project of some 960 units under the federal-provincial housing partnership.

All our rental housing projects are being administered by local housing authorities consisting of 5 public-spirited citizens of each community who are not members of municipal councils and who give freely of their time to administer and manage the rental houses in their own areas. In my last year's report I stated that this was a new experiment for us in Ontario, and I am now glad to report that the experiment is proving a great success. During the past year an excellent record of rent collection was maintained in all our rental housing projects and no vacancies occurred.

Up to 31st December 1953, the province had contributed $3,892,963 as its share of the total expenditures on housing projects.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Was that for one year?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: No. That is from the commencement of the joint partnership scheme.

It is anticipated that total expenditures for projects under our present agreements and those in the negotiation stage, as I have already referred to, will total $9,233,037. With this in view, a sum of $10 million has been placed in the Estimates for the ensuing year.

The Conservation Branch of this department is concerned with organizing conservation authorities under The Conservation Authorities Act, appraising the conservation problems of the watershed after the authority is established, and directing and assisting in the work as required by the authority.

Since the Act was passed in 1946, 15 authorities have been established, including 20 watersheds, with a total of 256 municipalities and an area of 10,505 square miles. The latest authority to be established includes the Rouge River, Duffin Creek, Highland Creek and Petticoat Creek, which now brings all that area encircling Metropolitan Toronto from the Etobicoke River to Duffin Creek under organized authorities.

Three other watersheds are presently considering the formation of authorities, one of which is in Northern Ontario, and to make it possible for such areas to organize, I am recommending that the Act be amended at this session.

The past year has seen the completion of important projects on three of our rivers and the commencement of a new one. The completed projects are the Fanshaw Dam on the Thames, the Deloro Dam on the Moira and the Luther Marsh Dam on the Grand. These, together with the projects on the Thames, Etobicoke and Ausable previously completed, bring the expenditures on flood control and increased summer flow projects to $7,394,873. A new project which has been commenced since I last reported to this Legislature is the Conestogo Dam on the Grand, at an estimated cost of $5.4 million. For all these works this government has contributed 37½ per cent. for some and 75 per cent. on others. On three the Government of Canada has also contributed 37½ per cent.

The second most important work is reforestation. This is carried on, where large areas are concerned, under an agreement between the authority and the Minister of Lands and Forests. Nine authorities have made such agreements. During the past year, 7,600 acres have been added to these forests, which brings the total to 17,788 acres and an expenditure up to the present of $440,000. For such work this government pays half the cost of the land and plants and manages the forest for a period of 50 years.

During the year there has been interest and considerable activity in acquiring and developing recreation areas for the people of the authorities. The fringe areas acquired for the Fanshaw Reservoir bordering the lake of that name have been developed into a beautiful park. The Grand Authority has acquired an area near Elora known as The Gorge, so that this wooded canyon, which is unique in Southern Ontario, may be preserved and protected. The Ausable Authority has done preliminary work for acquiring The Pinery, a 4,066-acre tract of woodland with $4\frac{1}{2}$ miles of Lake Huron beach, which is still the same as when the white man first saw it. Other authorities are also considering acquiring smaller recreation areas. To expedite the development of such needed areas where authorities have been established, I have recommended an amendment to the Act which is being submitted during this session.

In addition to the three major activities already mentioned, the authorities carry out a programme of general conservation including farm ponds; the rebuilding of old mill dams; little valley studies, in which a group of farmers in a small valley are encouraged to practice the control of soil and water erosion on their farms; the loan of tree-planting machines for private reforestation; woodlot protection; and a programme of public relations and education including lectures, radio, movies, school activities, field trips, and stream improvement competitions. Towards this general conservation programme, the government contributes dollar for dollar with the authority.

When an authority becomes sufficiently active to justify the appointment, a member of the Conservation Branch technical staff is assigned for work on the watershed, as a full-time or part-time fieldmen. At present 7 such men have been assigned to the Ausable, Don, Ganaraska, Grand, Humber, Moira, Napanee, Saugeen and Upper Thames Authorities.

From the brief report which I have given you of the work of the Conservation Branch, it will be seen that the people of our province have appreciated the new approach to conservation which the Authorities Act provides and are eager to help themselves in carrying out this important work.

THE TRADE AND INDUSTRY BRANCH DEPARTMENT OF PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

Function: The Trade and Industry Branch was established in 1945 to promote the economic growth of the province through the development of its trade and industry. The branch provides municipal and industrial statistics; advises manufacturers about the establishment or expansion of their industries; assists them to select suitable industrial locations, obtain raw materials and develop their domestic and export trade. The branch serves manufacturers in the mid-western United States through its new office in Chicago, Illinois; and those in Great Britain and Europe through the Trade and Industrial Department at Ontario House, London, England.

Activities, Industrial Development: The branch since 1945 has co-operated in the establishment of over 600 new Ontario manufacturing industries. During this period over 1,500 expansions or branch plants of industries already established in Ontario were built and in many of these the Trade and Industry Branch was of assistance. These new industries and branch plants were not confined to the large industrial centres. Each succeeding year a greater proportion of the new industrial plants are located in the smaller municipalities spreading the industrial growth across the whole province.

Since 1946 over $2.7 billion has been invested in Ontario in new and expanded manufacturing industries; manufacturing production has increased from $3.7 billion to $8.9 billion annually, and employees in manufacturing have increased from 498,000 to 635,000.

The year 1953 was a record year in Ontario's industrial development. Records are not entirely complete but it is known that 136 new industries came to Ontario, 32 from Great Britain, 49 from the United States, 4 from West Germany, 4 from other European countries and 47 from the other provinces in Canada. In addition over 500 major expansions to existing industries were built and 30 manufacturers from other parts of Canada and abroad bought substantial interests in established Ontario manufacturing firms.

In 1953, preliminary Estimates indicate that new capital investment in manufacturing industry equalled or exceeded the record total of $492 million reached during 1952. It is also estimated that during 1953 the number of workers employed in manufacturing increased by 35,000 reaching a record total of 635,000. Gross value of manufacturing production increased from $8,398 million to $8,867 million—the highest value ever reached by Ontario's manufacturing industries.

Chicago Office: The steadily growing demand for information on the industrial opportunities in Ontario and the increasing requests for service on branch plant establishment from manufacturers in the mid-western United States made it necessary for the Trade and Industry Branch to open an office in Chicago in May of last year. This office is presently in contact with approximately 300 active prospects and in 1953, 30 new Ontario industries were established by manufacturers from these States. It is expected that as a result of the opening of this Chicago office—the first industrial development office to be established in the United States by any Canadian province—an increasing number of new industries will come to Ontario from that area.

Municipal Industrial Promotion: The municipalities of Ontario are playing an increasingly important part in promoting the industrial growth of the province and are looking to the Trade and Industry Branch for leadership in planning for and attracting new industries to their communities.

During 1953, in order to support this municipal effort, the branch sponsored 4 intercounty municipal industrial promotion conferences at which 76 municipalities were represented by 240 delegates. In March 1953, the fourth industrial promotion conference—municipalities of Ontario—was held, to which 325 delegates came from 117 municipalities all over the province. Between January and March 1954, it is planned to hold 11 regional conferences. Consultants from the branch are continuing their frequent visits to Ontario municipalities to act as advisors on industrial development, to conduct conferences or to accompany manufacturers interested in establishing new industries.

Information Services: The branch prepares and publishes resource information, statistical reports and promotional literature. The branch issues an annual industrial review which is now recognized as the official record of industrial development in Ontario. In it are listed the new industries, branch plants or expansions built in the province during the year. Some 3,500 copies were distributed upon request during 1953.

Industrial Research: The branch sponsors the Department of Industrial Research Services of the Ontario Research Foundation which provides scientific and technical information based on laboratory research to industries in Ontario. In 1953 the department handled 4,452 inquiries. Of these 1,828 required technical information only, 1,619 involved the services of field engineers and 1,005 required laboratory research.

The Trade and Industry Branch plays a very active part in the administration of the International Trade Fair.

In association with the trade and industrial departments of the other 9 provinces the branch participates in the activities of the Provincial Governments of Canada, Trade and Industry Council which held its annual conference in New Brunswick in September, 1953.

IMMIGRATION BRANCH

Another responsibility of the Department of Planning and Development is the operation of a moderate immigration programme assisting those coming to our province from Great Britain. In this regard may I mention that at least 52 per cent. of all immigrants coming to Canada settle in Ontario; January of 1954 shows 55.6 per cent. of all newcomers were destined for Ontario. Last year assistance and information was given by our offices to over 20,000 intending immigrants.

Our offices at 12 New Burlington Street, London, England, provide specific information about Ontario on working and living conditions, employment opportunities, etc. Last year (1953) this office had 5,324 personal interviews and 15,214 queries by correspondence.

The Toronto office gave establishment assistance to about 5,000 British newcomers and a proportion of other nationals. Also continued on a more thorough scale was the normal function of co-operation with, and co-ordination of the efforts of other agencies working in the immigration field in the province. The cost of these services to our new citizens averaged less than $10 per person.

The industrial immigration plan has been active, particularly in the case of the aircraft industry, banks and hospitals. In some cases employers sent representatives to England to secure skilled help through our offices. During the year approximately 300 immigrants were placed through this service.

The National Employment Service still has a unit in our Toronto office and their facilities are available to us throughout Ontario.

A very wide range of trades and professions are represented in these newcomers. They include doctors, engineers, physicists, machinists of every kind, draughtsmen, nurses, physiotherapists, stenographers and many others.

Currently demands have been registered for specialized female workers in several fields where acute shortages exist. Hospitals and institutions are actively recruiting much needed nurses and assistants. The current school teacher shortage is under discussion from a standpoint of assistance through British immigration.

A survey of available manpower as related to our future needs indicates that shortages for a volume of skilled workers may not occur rapidly, but a constant demand will exist in most fields. The numbers of young people coming out of our schools, colleges, and universities are sufficient only to replace normal losses through retirement of our senior citizens and losses in our labour force for other reasons.

It is the undertaking of the Immigration Branch to fit our manpower needs to expansion, seasonal shortages and surpluses and to augment our human resources on a longer-term-basis; so we can meet our commitments and maintain balance in our future population. Keeping in mind the province's basic economic need for domestic consumers.

RESEARCH COUNCIL OF ONTARIO

The Research Council of Ontario has continued to expand and consolidate its activities during the year 1953. The work of the 8 committees of the council composed of some 275 people representing the provincial and federal governments, universities and industry, have become more and more effective. They are increasing the co-ordination and exchange of research information. This is particularly effective in bringing together provincial and federal government research people.

During the year 1953, the Research Council finished its survey of research work that is being carried on in the interest of the province and has submitted a report of their studies and recommendation to the Provincial Cabinet. During the past year the value of the scholarships given to university graduates has been increased. These scholarships continue to play a most important part in the post-graduate training of young scientists.

The co-operative committee on water and air pollution set up by the council in the Sarnia area, representing both industry and government, is doing a very excellent piece of work towards the solution of the pollution problem.

The Industrial Research Services established by the council and functioning under the auspices of the Research Foundation has been of great assistance to small industries in the province.

In several instances projects supported by the council have reached the stage of pilot plant trials in order to obtain sound information in regard to commercial development.

In general, the council is satisfied that progress in its research activities is satisfactory, but it is aware that in such matters progress of necessity must be slow. Looking towards the year 1954 the council realizes that, with the tremendous growth of research organizations both in Canada and other countries it is most essential to develop closer co-ordination between provincial and outside research groups. At the same time it is satisfied that whatever expansion takes place within the province should be largely in the field of practical application.

In the current year the RCO is assisting research in special projects recommended by its advisory committees, principally in the fields of forestry, fisheries and wildlife, mines and metallurgy, agriculture, and industrial waste.

Grants-in-Aid: At the Ontario universities the assistance totals $188,000; at the Ontario Research Foundation $260,000, which includes $85,000 for the foundation's extension of technology to small industries; and in government departments $40,000.

Group Research: In co-operative research with industry the council expended $19,000. This was mainly on two sizeable projects, one on pollution in the Sarnia area, the other on spruce forests in the Thunder Bay area.

Scholarships: 64 science students were assisted in post-graduate training at a cost of $50,000. By encouraging the additional training needed for research these scholarships are of great future importance.

Scientific Liaison: This year meetings of the council were held in Ottawa with the National Research Council, the Department of Agriculture, and the Department of Mines and Technical Surveys. These agencies perform the bulk of our federal research for civil purposes. The object of this liaison, which the council plans to increase, is to improve the exchange of research information between federal and provincial scientists.

Recommendations: A tabulation of research expenditures made by the Research Council last year emphasized the very considerable amount of research done by our federal government.* To profit by this research the council urged that the province expand developmental or pilot-plant research. If much of the research findings now available are to find practical uses the gap must be bridged between the laboratory stage and the application in industry or resource management.

There is one more aspect, and that is Ontario House in London, England, which confines its activities solely to the province itself, as clearly defined originally in the British North America Act.

It is primarily a clearing house for all specific information regarding the province, advising and directing people on trade, commerce, immigration, tourism, and many other matters. Supervision, as I say, is under this department. The Agent General is the senior official, representing the government,

*In 1953-54 estimated to be $60 million, as compared with about $3 million for Ontario (both figures excluding research in medicine, national defence, and private industry).

and accredited to Her Majesty's Government.

Broadly speaking, the work divides itself into 4 main divisions, for which separate departments are established: Trade and Industry, Immigration, Public Relations and Administration. The Trade and Industry Department works in close harmony with the Trade and Industry Branch in Toronto, and the Immigration Department has its link with the Ontario Immigration Branch. The practice is for the other governmental departments, such as Agriculture, Mines, Lands and Forests, Labour, Health and Education, to deal directly with the Agent General on many problems concerned within the departments.

Mr. Chairman, it has been drawn to my attention today by my colleague, the hon. Minister of Mines (Mr. Kelly), that some time ago he sent to Ontario House a large number of maps showing the mineral development in the Province of Ontario, and that Major Armstrong, the senior official in Ontario House, has received literally hundreds of replies from those who received such maps. I have a sample of them here, and on looking through them I find replies from the United Kingdom, many European countries, and even countries in South America.

I should like to pay tribute to the cartographer in the hon. Minister's (Mr. Kelly) department, and employee who has turned out the first mineral map of this kind in the history of that department. With that map, Mr. Chairman, and through the good offices of Ontario House in London, England, we are helping to keep Ontario to the fore.

In conclusion, may I pay tribute to my staff, the directors and those who serve under them, for the great assistance they have given me during the tenure of office since I was sworn in on January 20th, 1953. Without their help I know I could not have contributed what I have to the department. I have learned a great deal, and I must confess the longer I am there the more I realize I have a great deal to learn, and I want at this time to pay tribute to those who have given so much help to me.

On Vote 114, Main Office, $65,500; agreed to.

On Vote 115, Community Plannings Branch, $120,500; agreed to.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): Mr. Chairman, in regard to the Community Plannings Branch, I want to compliment the hon. Minister for the very excellent survey made in our district, and I was wondering if he would enlarge for a moment, and enlighten us, on the plans he is making for the new town site in the Manitouwadge mining site.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Mr. Chairman, I cannot be too specific, because I do not know too much about it. I have promised, and our staff has agreed, to go into the Manitouwadge area this spring, as early as possible, to size up the situation and see what is required.

The hon. members will recall that we went into the Atikokan area where some work had been done in the vicinity of Steep Rock, and we were able to catch that in time to prevent some rather wild developments. We have it under control now.

When we go into the Manitouwadge area, we hope to size up the situation completely, and assist the people to establish, perhaps not just 1 town site, but 2 because I understand the area is about 70 miles long and 10 miles wide.

So whatever is required we will give our attention, and if we can be of any assistance, we certainly will give it.

On Vote 116, Conservation Branch, $263,000.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On Vote 116 can the hon. Minister tell us how many River Valleys Conservation surveys have been made in the last year.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: The hon. Leader of the Opposition is speaking of this year only?

MR. OLIVER: The past year, yes.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: None in 1953, I am informed, but there is one coming up this year.

MR. OLIVER: Where is that?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: The Rouge, Highland and Duffin creeks.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on 116, the Housing Branch. I think, Mr. Chairman, we are obliged to face the hard facts of life, that despite all the minor and ineffective "stabs" taken at the housing problem, basically the crisis in housing is as serious as it ever was, indeed, in some areas, it is more critical today than it ever was.

I listened as attentively as I could to what the hon. Minister had to say about the Housing Branch activities, and I gathered that since this work was begun, and this branch was established—somewhere around $9 million has been expended—I suggest, Mr. Chairman, the trouble is the government does not appreciate that this is a crisis that demands unusual, energetic and dynamic action, instead of "doodling."

I know you are participating in the Regent Park development. I know the government has also entered several of the smaller areas of the province, but what are we to think of a situation, which is admitted, in the Greater Toronto area for instance, to be more serious than it ever was?

The president of the government-owned Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation admitted that the Toronto housing crisis is worse than it ever has been, despite the enormous building carried on by private enterprise, and despite the Regent Park development—which is important in itself, but nevertheless is simply a drop in the sea of housing requirements in this city. The situation is not only expressed in the physical hardship—which, of course it is—but it threatens us with the most evil social consequences. This is now recognized in our city. I am not in a position to know whether the situation is the same in other parts of the province, but certainly in the City of Toronto. All authorities—all people who are actively in touch with the Departments of Housing and Family Welfare—agree that we are on the verge of a tragedy in our family life, insofar as enormous sections of the public are concerned.

Let me, Mr. Chairman, quote one such generally-recognized authority, who spoke, it seems to me, with well-chosen words, when she said—and I am quoting Miss Florence Philpot, of the Toronto and District Welfare Council, who spoke as recently as the 16th of this month. She said:

No one in this room—addressing the annual meeting of the Toronto and District Welfare Council——can be complacent about the number of families who are housed in basements and other sub-standard accommodations, where there is not proper ventilation, refrigeration, toilet facilities or privacy. We have ample opportunity in the Welfare Council, and it is now known to this community, that there is a direct relationship between over-crowded conditions, lack of privacy, lack of opportunity for entertainment and the breakdown in family life.

Miss Philpot has felt the same undesirable conditions are related to juvenile delinquency and social deterioration of the individual, and is costly in terms of family and individual life.

Well, Mr. Chairman, this person whom I quoted, who is a very highly-regarded person in her field of work, is not just "sounding off," nor issuing idle alarms, but she is convinced that tragic consequences are developing as the result of the crisis in housing.

More than that it has been recognized in the Greater Toronto area, that due to the housing crisis, and the enforced overcrowding, the loss of life in fires is becoming seriously shocking. A little while ago, toward the end of 1953, there was a fire which spread like lightning in one house in the eastern part of the city, and the coroner's inquest jury decided the fire was started in a home in which 5 people lost their lives, "due to over-crowding of tenants in this house; 25 people living in a 9-roomed frame dwelling."

I suggest, Mr. Chairman, this is tragic, and this is challenging to all of us—25 people crowded into a 9-roomed frame house.

These are some of the consequences of a lack of adequate housing, and over-crowding.

In Scarborough, another one of the Greater Toronto communities, a fire swept through a one-roomed home, and two small children—a boy and a girl—died in the fire. Actually it was not a house, but a garage. This family, whose husband was a member of the armed forces overseas when the tragedy struck his home, was compelled to move into a garage because there was no other accommodation. When the fire started, it spread like lightning and killed two small children.

I could go on and cite cases of this character, but I doubt whether it is necessary. It is sufficient to say the crisis is acute. We are not overcoming this matter, but according to the general opinion, we are not even holding our own in regard to housing.

I suggest with all due respect to the hon. Minister, who is a young man and undoubtedly is desirous of making a contribution and doing all he can—that neither he nor the government will make any appreciable advance, so long as they display the present lackadaisical attitude to the housing crisis. They approach the housing crisis as just another one of the problems of government. Government has the problems of highways, by-ways, rural telephones, homes for the aged, and housing is just another one, which they have placed in the same category. So long as it is approached in that manner, we will get nowhere very fast and the index of tragedies will rise very sharply.

Now, what is being done about it? The Ottawa Government is, in my opinion, definitely not doing enough. No government is, as a matter of fact. The latest legislation enacted at Ottawa—I suppose the newspapers which support the Ottawa Government will not mention this, and I doubt whether the papers supporting this government will mention it, because it is a fact that their respective governments will be criticized, and so I think the government is quite safe, even if I continued saying what I am about to say. Some papers will print what I have to say, if they can say that I was deliberately prevented from speaking, and that I was being sabotaged—they will print that.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: What about the Tribune?

MR. SALSBERG: What I want to say is the latest legislation enacted in Ottawa will not help the situation, because its net result is an increase of interest rates for financing housing, and as a result houses will cost more under the latest Ottawa legislation, than they do even at the present time. The total cost will be greatly extended.

What seems to be overlooked in both Ottawa and Queen's Park is this elementary fact that there are houses people can buy today and tomorrow, provided they have the money to buy them. But the bulk of the population which has the most serious need of housing, cannot afford to buy houses for $10,000, $15,000, or $20,000.

You can buy $25,000 houses in Toronto now very easily, that is true, but the average working man cannot afford it. He has not the money.

The way to tackle and solve the problem is to undertake a large-scale low-rental housing scheme for families which have not the money for the down payment, nor are their earnings sufficient to meet the payments which are required of them, even if they purchased with a low down payment.

For that group of the population, the neediest group, we must provide low-rental housing. The hon. Minister did mention some low-rental housing project, and I would appreciate it if he would enlarge upon it when I am through. I hope he will understand that while I heard him, I nevertheless feel, his reading the speech from the back bench, did not quite convey all the information which I am sure he is able to impart. If he would not look into his notes, but just speak, man to man, so to speak, we will have a better understanding.

It is true you have some low-rental housing, but not enough, and surely not in Toronto. That is one group of housing accommodation we need, the low-rental housing. That means government financed. The second need is for a low interest rate of money.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Is the hon. member talking about subsidized rental?

MR. SALSBERG: To go back to the low rental housing proposition, I speak about low-rental housing, even if it means subsidization.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: All right.

MR. SALSBERG: Right. If they cannot pay for it, let the government subsidize, and it will save us money in reformatories, jails, hospitalization—

MR. HANNA: And race tracks.

MR. SALSBERG: And race tracks, Mr. Representative of the Race Track Commission, since he brought it up.

The second need in overcoming the housing shortage is low interest rates for mortgage money to purchase houses. There is no use saying that a working man who may have put aside \$1,000 that if he buys a house at present prices of \$15,000, and because he will have 20 or more years to pay for it, that it will eventually belong to him. But the interest rate will be $5\frac{3}{4}$ or 6 per cent. and more, especially if he needs a second mortgage. Interest charges will eat him alive, and he will find that he cannot spare that money.

What we need is low interest mortgages. This province had gone into the second mortgage field and then stepped out of it. I know the hon. Prime Minister has, on a number of occasions, explained that Ottawa as much as made him get out of the field, I confess and I may be duller than most hon. members of the House, but I could never figure it out, and I am still of the belief that if the government desired, it could enter the second mortgage field tomorrow, and lose no money on it, if we granted second mortgages at the low interest rate of $2\frac{1}{2}$ or 3 per cent. at the most.

If we were to provide such financing, then we would begin to get places. Not doing that, of course, we only nibble at the problem. We are not solving it.

Only recently, the Canadian Congress of Labour told the Ottawa Government that half the wage earners cannot buy a home. Union asked for subsidies. That is true, with the result that little bits are done here and there.

As I said, the government nibbles at it, a few houses here, some arrangements with a community there, but nothing substantial is being done, and the crisis is not escaped. We cannot escape it, it is with us.

I know the government has gone into the land assembly field. That is better than nothing, but it is not good enough. For two reasons. First, I would respectfully suggest that the land assembly proposition in North York is too far from the city. I do not know how the hon. Minister will explain it, but I have examined this project quite impartially, and I have the feeling it is so far removed from the city centres or from the areas of industrial activity that it will be a hardship on people who may find themselves obliged to go out there. There is no industry there, and the subway, as you know, does not go above Eglinton Avenue.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: We have the answer for that.

MR. SALSBERG: I would be very glad to hear it, but I have not found an answer. And whatever answer the hon. Minister may have, it would not provide the transportation and the movement of people from miles outside the northern-most extreme limits of the city to places where they will earn their livelihoods.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): May I ask a question?

MR. SALSBERG: Yes.

MR. STEWART: I have been very attentive here this session, and I think every one of the hon. Ministers who spoke, has revealed something about our way of life. I would like to ask the hon. member for St. Andrew if he knows of any province or any other country that has better living conditions, and better opportunities, than we have right here in the province of Ontario? Everything which has come before the House this session, the hon. member has spoken of in terms of condemnation. Does he know of any better place?

MR. SALSBERG: Well, Mr. Chairman, my answer to the question of the hon. member is this: the government has 70-odd members out of 90—

MR. STEWART: That is not the answer. Do not "duck" the issue.

MR. SALSBERG: And all the hon. members seek opportunities to praise the government. I am here as one of the Opposition, whose task it is to pressure the government into doing more than it is doing in every field, particularly the fields of human welfare, and housing is one of them.

MR. STEWART: Where is there a better place than here? Where? Name it. The hon. member cannot and he knows he cannot.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member does not have to act as if he were a high school lad, "You cannot"; "I can." Do not act like that.

MR. STEWART: The hon. member knows there is no gas chamber in Ontario.

MR. SALSBERG: Let us be adult. Let us be grown up. We are tackling an important social problem. Of course this is a great province, and this is a great city. What does that have to do with it?

The fact, however, is that the crisis of housing is more severe in this town than in most other large centres in the province. The hon. member (Mr. Stewart) represents a riding in Toronto where it is also critical. I am not denying some accomplishments of the government in housing. I acknowledge they have done a little bit here and there, but I maintain this is just nibbling. In face of the crisis, it is "doodling," when action is necessary.

May I say this: there was a time when the Conservative Party in this Legislature, had men with some social vision, who recognized the housing problem earlier than many hon. members now in this House.

I have here a very interesting old document. I know the hon. Prime Minister is interested in "old documents" and I will let him look at it. It is the report of the Housing Authority established in Toronto before the First World War. The hon. members will like this, if they will wait a minute. They do not know how good it is going to be.

This is the report of a company established as a result of legislation adopted by the Legislature during a Tory regime, as a result of the interest which the late Mr. W. J. Hanna, the then Provincial Secretary, took in the housing situation. He is the one who introduced legislation which led to the formation of the Toronto Housing Company. Here, for the hon. members who get a little impatient with me and think I am criticizing for nothing, let me read what Mr. Hanna said in 1913, in a foreword to this report. He said:

Canada should do more than banish the slums. The old countries are doing that. Society is responsible for the slums and society must pay for their removal, which will require something in the nature of a surgical operation on the body politic.

But better housing has a far wider application than the slum problem. It means better living conditions for the great masses of wage-earners, and will bring with it a toning up of our whole social and industrial system. Enabling legislation will be necessary in every province. We, in Ontario, have made a beginning, and the results set out in this pamphlet, obtained under an Act passed this year, would indicate that we are on the right track.

I agree with the statement that every Canadian workman of steady habits should be able to own his home. The advantage is as much to the State as to the individual, for the home must always be the starting point for strengthening and elevating the social conscience and the national life.

(Signed) W. J. HANNA

The Provincial Secretary's Office,
Parliament Buildings,
Toronto.

I must say, the hon. Prime Minister I know would like to look at this "old document." If I were to have said this, without saying these were Mr. Hanna's words, I would be accused of uttering almost subversive thoughts. The State is responsible. Why, of course, the State is responsible, and Mr. Hanna recognized it in 1913—40 years ago.

I will conclude by saying that the land assembly plan may have some merit, but I am afraid the Toronto scheme will take it too far from the areas of industrial and social activities for the people for whom it is intended.

Secondly, I am afraid that the land assembly scheme falls short of a very important element, in that the assembly is handed over to private builders. I must say that a chorus of cries against profiteering in housing seems to be rising throughout the country now. One of the labour organizations of Toronto, only a couple of days ago—the A.F. of L.—had a meeting of the vice-presidents, and, according to the press, they claim that profits on small homes are altogether too excessive. They deny that labour costs are mainly responsible for the high prices of new homes, and say that as much as $3,000 and $4,000 is made on a single small house.

There may be some hon. members here who are in the building construction business, and they can correct any statements which have been made by me on the basis of what other responsible people have said.

In conclusion, I want to appeal to the government and say, for goodness sake, stop looking upon housing as just one other problem. I appeal to the government, the hon. Minister immediately involved, the hon. Prime Minister, and the entire Cabinet, to take some emergency steps. I think it would be excellent if the hon. Prime Minister were to issue a statement now calling an emergency conference of federal, provincial and municipal representatives from the Toronto area to deal radically with the housing crisis. I think the people would welcome that, the people would applaud that, and as the result of such energetic action, more than these picayune efforts will be made.

We need large-scale efforts, we need large-scale construction, we need a special effort in the direction of low-rental housing on the one hand, and mortgage money at low interest rates for those who want to buy a house, but cannot otherwise afford it, on the other hand.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: I want to say a few words to the hon. member who has thrown in several extraneous matters to colour the issue. We are not "doodling" along in the field of housing. This is not a "picayune effort," as the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) states. I think we are doing a tremendous job. I am prepared to admit that in the Metropolitan district of Toronto there is an acute housing shortage, but throughout the rest of the province there is no acute housing shortage and Mr. Monsur himself made a statement to that effect. Figures show that in 1952, in all of Canada, there were 83,246 starts in that year. There were 30,016 starts in the Province of Ontario. In Canada in 1953 there were 102,409 starts and in Ontario 38,873. I got those figures from the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. There has been a very gratifying increase from year to year, showing that we are gradually catching up with the housing shortage.

Furthermore, so far as the Toronto area is concerned every hon. member here knows we spent a lot of time dealing with Bill 80, the Bill which brought into effect the Toronto Metropolitan municipality. One of the great motivating factors behind that bill was that there were no large tracts of land in the City of Toronto where we could build houses. As a result of the Metropolitan Bill, we were able to begin to assemble lots to relieve this acute housing shortage in the metropolitan area, and already we have assembled nearly 9,000 lots, and we are going to get several more acres of lots in the near future which will still further relieve this housing shortage.

We could do nothing about this before the Metropolitan Bill was passed, except quietly assemble lots in preparation for future building. But in other parts of Ontario we have not been "doodling around." We have been extremely active in co-operation with the Federal Government. I may say that our relations with the Federal Government have been extremely good. And we are getting things done. As an example I want to point out to the hon. member for St. Andrew that there are 33 municipalities with which we have agreed to undertake housing projects. Nine municipalities are expected to enter into agreement. We have undertaken to provide leasehold projects in 1,845 municipalities. The number of housing units under expected agreement is 1,695, and so on.

I think that is a good job which has been done. It must be remembered that every time we relieve the housing shortage in a municipality we help those people who are living in poor accommodations to move into better accommodations which is being vacated.

May I make one other point? The hon. member for St. Andrew talked about setting up a certain committee composed of federal and municipal representatives. We cannot go to municipalities and insist they come into a deal with us. We make it known to them that we offer our joint services. We say: "Come in with us if you want land assembly plan or a rental plan. We will help you set it up." We are glad to do that, and the figures show we have been doing it.

The hon. member for St. Andrew intimated that this land which we took up in North York and other places is too far out for the convenience of the workers who will live in the new houses there. In answer to that, I would tell him that we could not get land in other parts of the city. As I intimated a while ago, all the land in the City of Toronto is taken up. It is already held. The land within the northern perimeter of the city has been bought up by certain persons who are holding it for high prices. We did not want to feel that we were paying prohibitive prices for this land, so we went further out, and took up land at prices were believed to be reasonable. Sometimes we paid as low as between $600 and $800; sometimes as high as between $1,400 and $1,500 per acre. These we thought to be reasonable prices. We are making that land available for about $250 a lot. In that way we hope to keep final prices within reach of people's ability to pay. If we could get any closer to the City of Toronto itself and buy land at reasonable prices, we would do it, but viewing the future at long range, and bearing in mind that Metropolitan Toronto is expanding rapidly and will need large residential areas, we have taken up this land which is outside the high-priced area and we are holding it for the people who will need it in the very near future. But we could not do that until the Metropolitan Bill went through. I could go on to answer the hon. member for St. Andrew further, and give many more details of what we have been doing in the field of housing. But from what I have already said, I think the hon. member should retract his statement that we have only been "doodling" and have not accomplished anything for the people of this province.

MR. OLIVER: In assembling all land for housing development, the hon. Minister has, under the Planning and Development Act, the power of expropriation.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: That is correct.

MR. OLIVER: Have you used that power to any extent?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Mr. Chairman, I have used that power on two occasions. The first, as I mentioned a while ago, was at Atikokan. We faced a situation there where we wanted to develop a large area of land, and where a certain interest was standing in our way. We could not get on with the job because of the prohibitive prices being asked for land. I signed an expropriation order in that case. We stepped in and got a difficult situation under control, and we are now planning that area for a population of between 20,000 and 25,000 people, within the next 8 to 10 years. That worked very well, and everybody was apparently satisfied except of course the particular interest concerned.

The other occasion where I used the power of expropriation under the Housing and Development Act, was at Scarboro where we filed against 1,800 acres in the township. Since that time we have had persons coming into our office negotiating agreements with us at reasonable prices. But I must still confess there are a considerable number out there who have not yet come to us, and offered to settle on some reasonable basis. We are still hoping we may negotiate in the near future. Those are the only two occasions on which I have used the power of expropriation. Since that time we have been able to assemble a great many more acres of land in the province on a negotiated basis.

MR. SALSBERG: To follow up this question of expropriation. It is a fact that the method of expropriation was resorted to in the Greater Toronto area when it affected certain farmers. If we are using it where farmers are concerned, why are we hesitant to employ the expropriation tactic against land speculators whose land is much closer to the city? Why are they a privileged group?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: They are not a privileged group. If you expropriated any given area, the price is going to be established by the market price in that area. The market price has definitely been established in this case. If we expropriate, and go to the Municipal Board, we would find that the price for the land is already established, and we do not want to pay what, in our opinion, are prohibitive prices.

MR. BEECH (York South): In view of the apparent reluctance on the part of private enterprise to get into the limited dividend housing field, I wonder whether the department might consider doing it?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: I cannot say we have considered this, Mr. Chairman, but we are willing to co-operate with all those who might wish to enter this field, service clubs and so on.

Vote 117:

Salaries $22,500

MR. OLIVER: On Vote 117, are we spending money to bring immigrants out now?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: No, we are not spending money, Mr. Chairman. What usually happens is that people in London, England, go to Canada House where they have to be documented and so on, they have to indicate whether they wish to come to Ontario. The usual procedure is to send them to our branch on Burlington Street and there we find out what their skills are, if any, and we try to have them placed in Ontario before they reach here. We make no contribution to their fare, but when they get here, if they need a little assistance we provide the odd train fare, or perhaps a meal or two to help them get to their destination.

MR. SALSBERG: Do we still carry on a publicity campaign in the British Isles?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Yes, there has been some publicity carried on. I would not say directly. But we try to point out the advantages of coming to Ontario. We are still getting 52 per cent. of all the immigrants who come from the British Isles. They seem to like it here, too.

MR. SALSBERG: I am glad that is so.

MR. T. D. THOMAS: I am glad, Mr. Chairman, to think they are doing a good job at Ontario House. But this morning I was browsing through the Public Accounts for the year ending 1953 and I came across some items appertaining to the salary and allowances of Major Armstrong. It seems that he receives a living allowance of $2,500, a representative's allowance of $4,500, travelling expenses and subsistence of $1,506, and salary of $10,000, making a total altogether of $18,670. This is much more than the Prime Minister of Ontario is getting, and I wonder whether the hon. Minister would tell us whether the hon. Prime Minister is getting too little or whether Major Armstrong is getting too much.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Major Armstrong gets $10,000 basic pay. He is living in London, England, and like others over there, gets representative's allowance and expenses for travelling. Major Armstrong, who is Agent-General over there, has to make a great many journeys, not only in the British Isles, but in Western Europe, and his travelling expenses are quite high.

Vote 117 agreed to.

On Vote 120, Trade and Industry Branch, $136,500.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 120 may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) relative to an article in the Star of the 27th of March? It is a report of a speech of Dr. Faludi on "petroleum." The doctor enumerated the advantages of this new zoning plan they had in mind, and I notice in particular one statement in which he said that when the new set-up is working, two municipalities in a zone vie for an industry, the province will decide on the site.

Is it intended to go that far, that the province will decide where an industry is to go?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: No, that is not correct, Mr. Chairman. We do not decide where any industry goes. As I indicated in my remarks a while ago, we try to assist them, we try to guide them, but we do not direct them into any particular municipality.

I might add that, if and when this new regional set-up materializes, it will operate only in an advisory way; it will be used only to guide industry into an area. But certainly I want to state emphatically that we do not now, and will not, say to any industry, "You must go into this area or that area", because if anything went wrong, they would come back and say to us, "You directed us into that spot; the conditions are not advantageous for our particular industry, and we are going bankrupt. Now, what are you going to do about it?" So, as I say, we guide them, but we do not direct them into any particular area.

MR. SALSBERG: On Trade and Industry Branch, I should like to suggest to the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) that I think the time has come for that branch to expand and to reverse its objectives. What I mean is, that until now the emphasis has been on attracting industry from other countries or other parts of Canada into Ontario. Primarily, however, the objective was to get industry from outside of Canada.

I suggest that we should utilize our Trade and Industry Branch to open markets for Canadian agricultural and industrial products, rather than to emphasize predominantly the attractions we have to offer to industry, because the economic conditions in the country, and in this province, I think, dictate some such change in the approach to the task of this branch.

I remember 6 or so years ago when I visited Ontario House, we discussed this problem. At that time Mr. Armstrong and his staff told me that they could sell a lot of Ontario products in Britain, if the British Government would only let them; in fact, they had a few displays of Ontario products, but it was no more than a show; the people could not buy. Today, I think the possibilities are a bit better than they were, and I would suggest the department begin working in the direction of creating markets, in other words, emphasize everywhere the things we have to sell, and the things we can buy in exchange.

We have discussed in this House, on numerous occasions, the effects of the economic recession on our people here, particularly in agriculture. That is a serious problem. Frankly, I would like to see the Ontario Trade and Industry Branch in the British Isles concentrate on campaigning for Canadian cheese, Canadian bacon, and other Canadian farm products to be sold, rather than to spend so much time attracting perhaps another branch factory here.

I think, furthermore, that the activities of this branch should be extended to the Continent, and, indeed, to wherever there is a likely opening for trade and exchange of commodities between Ontario and other areas of the world.

Mr. Drew came back from the British Isles last fall, I believe, and he said that he could not find an ounce of Canadian cheese anywhere in London, when he went shopping for cheese. If that is the situation, then it is, of course, very bad. I know there was a sale of cheese recently, but the reason I am bringing up this example is to emphasize what is most important insofar as our economic picture is concerned.

Mr. Chairman, that is true, also, of our industrial products. When the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) was in Europe—and I was hoping he would give us a word picture of his impressions of the European scene, and especially with an eye to benefitting the Province of Ontario—from what I read, he was very much elated over the possibility of another branch factory locating here. That is perfectly all right, but that is not the main thing. We have factories here which are partially or completely idle because they have no markets for their products. That is the situation, and the need is to find markets for agricultural machinery, for textiles—and there are countries we could sell textiles to; I do not mean Britain, but other countries—for our agriculture products, and so on. That should be the policy to be followed in the department.

Some hon. members may find it a little far-fetched, and may think: "We have never done it before." I suggest there is quite a hangover from the old colonial days when the idea was to put up posters in Europe showing barns with lots of cows in front of them, big tractors and Belgian horses, and suggest the people come and pick up land in Canada. That is still all right, but that is no longer the essential requirement. An office in Chicago may be of some value, it may attract another branch factory. Frankly, I would sooner see more British branch factories open here than American. It is not because I am anti-American, may I say, before somebody rises and says, "You do not like the United States." I do like the United States.

HON. W. GRIESINGER (Minister of Public Works): But they do not like you.

MR. SALSBERG: The fact is, we are now paying to the United States from this province in interest rates and dividends every year, more than this province is spending on welfare services to all our people. Do hon. members know that?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: My department has no control over that.

MR. SALSBERG: No, but it does not stand in the same relationship with the British Isles and other countries. In short, what I suggest is that this branch be not closed, nor even reduced. I should like to see it expanded, but I should like to see the emphasis placed on selling and trading and exchanging Ontario products for products of other countries, who are ready and anxious to deal with us.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Chairman, could the hon. Minister (Mr. Warrender) give us a little more information about the Chicago Branch? This is the first time we have had an Estimate for that, is it not?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: No, last year was the first.

MR. NIXON: How much did you spend last year?

HON. MR. W. K. WARRENDER: $25,000.

MR. NIXON: Just the same amount. Who is the head of that branch?

HON. MR. WARRENDER: We have a man by the name of Mr. Harry Slay. He was a member of our staff here in Toronto, and we persuaded him to go over there. He did not wish to do so, he did not want to live there, because he was well settled here with his family and his mother. However, we persuaded him to go there, and open the office, and he has done a splendid job, has become pretty well acquainted with people over there, and rather likes it, so we are hoping to keep him on another year or so. In the meantime, we are endeavouring to train a young man to take his place.

The office was opened in May of last year, and as I indicated in my few remarks, we have had many calls and enquiries about Ontario, and we have actually taken a very active part in the settling of 12 rather large industries here from the midwestern states, and we think it is doing extremely well, and it certainly should be carried on.

ESTIMATES—DEPARTMENT OF THE PROVINCIAL SECRETARY

HON. G. A. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Chairman, in presenting the Estimates of the Department of the Provincial Secretary, as hon. members are all aware, this is not a revenue-producing department, in the sense that a great many of the other departments are. However, I am very happy to say that we had the best record this year, from a revenue-producing point of view, and also in the volume of business done, in any year in the history of the department since its inauguration.

The revenue this year amounted to $1,267,000. The anticipated revenue for the month of March is about $41,000, making a total for the fiscal year in excess of $1,300,000, representing an increase of $400,000, or 3.6 per cent. over 1953.

The increase in the number of companies reflects directly the progress and the growth of this province.

This year we incorporated 3,455 companies, which is an increase of 1,342 over the number incorporated last year, which was 2,113.

Our forecast of revenue this year was $790,000. Due to one or two very large companies, with very large capitalization, which came to the province of Ontario, in competition with the other provinces, and with the Dominion, and with various states in the United States, our revenue exceeded our forecast by a very large sum indeed. The incorporation fee of one of those companies amounted to $50,135, and that of another amounted to $50,270. When these companies complete their organizations, it will result in over 100 companies coming to the Province of Ontario, being subsidiaries which also will be incorporated here.

Our expenditures this year were $1,526,000, an increase of $87,000 over the previous year. This was due largely to the increase in commission fees, which cost us in the neighbourhood of $100,000. Our expenditure forecast for next year is $1,365,000, which is a decrease of $100,000. At the present time, in spite of the work which has been piling up in the office, we have actually less people on the staff today than we had at this time last year, and, Mr. Chairman, I would like to take this opportunity of paying tribute to the very, very efficient, hardworking staff we have in the office of the Provincial Secretary.

One of the responsibilities of that office is civil defence, and, with your indulgence, Mr. Chairman, I should like to say a few words on this subject.

The expenditure on our post-conversion programme to date—by which I mean to February 28th—amounted to $769,901, of which the Dominion of Canada are paying one-third and have paid $164,000; 26 counties in Ontario are completely standardized; 3,313,680, or 71.3 per cent. of the population, live in these counties.

Fourteen of the remaining counties and districts have been surveyed. That will leave only in Southern Ontario, the Ottawa Valley, the City of Ottawa, Cornwall, and Northern Ontario.

I think it might be of interest, Mr. Chairman, if I give a brief outline of how this work is done.

Due to the co-operation of the Federal Government, we were able to obtain from the Department of National Defence, originally two lorries. These are actually travelling machine shops, and any of the service people will know what they are, when I say they were lorries used in the heavy-duty section of the Ordnance Corps. We man these lorries with our own technicians, and our own drivers, and we are responsible for their maintenance and insurance. Any major breakdown is looked after by the Department of National Defence. I may say, Mr. Chairman, that the success of this programme is, to a large extent, due to the co-operation of the Federal Government in making these vehicles available to us.

When we started, we organized two survey teams, which consisted of technical people. They go into a town, and with the co-operation of the local fire department, make a complete survey of the installations, including those of industry. When they leave a town, they know exactly how many fittings there are, the size of them, and where they are to be placed, and this information is passed on to the company which produces the necessary fittings for that particular job.

Then the actual working crews come along. In the meantime, the survey has been shifted to another site, and when the working crew comes in, with the co-operation of the local fire department, they put in the installations, and it really does not take very long to do the job.

The City of Hamilton, as the hon. members are aware, is a very highly-industrialized city, as are so many other towns in Southwestern Ontario. Our survey people moved into Hamilton some months ago, and completed their work, then the actual installing people moved in, and the job now is practically completed. It is a big and an important job.

Our thinking, departmentally, on civil defence is completely at variance with some of the other countries, particularly the country to the south. It has been our opinion, and is the opinion of the government, that this money which is voted, is for self-defence, as well as civil defence. We must have our facilities in this country organized to meet any eventuality which may occur. To do that successfully and efficiently, we feel it has been absolutely necessary that any fire equipment we have should be available for use in any part of the province.

Originally, we had 149 different types of hose connections, which were not interchangeable. The City of Toronto for instance, would be unable to receive assistance from any of the towns along the lake. It has been the feeling of the department that in any system which was set up to combat any disaster which might occur, it was absolutely essential that our fire equipment should be able to be used anywhere, and be made available to any municipality which needed it. That is the reason this programme was undertaken, and the reason we are pressing it on to completion as rapidly as is possible. And that is the reason today why the other provinces in the Dominion of Canada are following in our footsteps, and the movement is spreading to the United States, and in the course of the next few years, I am sure we will see that various states of the United States have done the same as we, because it is a primary thing which must be done.

We have always thought that in an attack, there are two major factors. Of course, there are others, but two major ones. One is fire, and the other is panic. This is what we are endeavouring to do as regards fire. We are enlisting and training volunteer firemen as rapidly as possible. We have a fair amount of equipment, which has been loaned to the various fire brigades to enable them to train auxiliary firemen without interference with their regular work in any way.

As regards panic—and that may be one of the great dangers we will have to face. Anybody who was in Europe in the early days of the last war, knows what a very great danger that is indeed—we have our roads mapped and planned, through the efforts of our provincial and municipal police. We know where we are going to get the large number of auxiliary officers required for traffic control, and we are training these men as rapidly as possible, because in the event of an emergency, that will be very important. I think the hon. member for Lambton West (Mr.

Cathcart) will agree they had a slight example of what could happen, at the time of the Sarnia disaster, and that was a very slight example, indeed.

MR. CATHCART (Lambton West): It was a big example.

HON. MR. WELSH: Just multiply that a thousand times, and the hon. members will see there would be chaos, unless rigid and rapid controls could be exercised over our traffic.

We have gone further, I think, in this matter than any state or province on the continent, because it was felt it was an essential step.

Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to speak at any great length about the other activities of this branch, in which it has been engaged. There are a great many of them. But there is one thing I do want to say in all sincerity to the hon. members, that within the past year, we have had a complete change, not only in our thinking regarding civil defence, but in regards to the methods which resulted in this change of thinking.

At the time the Americans dropped the bomb on Hiroshima, that bomb, pound for pound, was 25 times stronger than all the T.N.T. bombs which had been developed by any nation in the world. It increased by 25 times, the potential destruction.

The bomb the Americans dropped in the Pacific not so very long ago is 1000 times more powerful. In fact—and I do not think I am committing any breach of security in saying this—it not only destroyed the island upon which it was dropped, and blew the island to “smithereens,” but it created a crater in the floor of the ocean where the island had been, 175 feet deep.

To illustrate the danger of potential destruction we are facing, if one of these bombs today, of a size which can be carried by our enemies, were dropped on the City of Toronto, for a radius of 3 miles from the zero point of the dropped bomb, there would be absolute destruction, with not only no survivals, but no buildings left standing. For the next 4-mile radius, the destruction would be about 50 per cent., and for a 3-mile radius beyond that, the damage done would be considerable.

I do not like to speak about these things. I have never been one who liked to disturb people or create panic, but I think the time has come when we can no longer bury our heads in the sand, and say “It cannot happen here,” because it can happen here.

As the hon. members know, we have only one potential enemy in the world—one potential enemy. We are not preparing to attack anyone, but this potential enemy of ours is building long-range bombers, with a very heavy weight-carrying capacity. They should have no fear of attack, but I leave it to the judgment of the hon. members of this House as to why they are devoting a great deal of their expenditures on armament, to this one particular type of aircraft.

I can say this to you, Mr. Chairman, and through you, to the hon. members of this House, that in spite of all the radar screens we can build, in spite of all the ack-ack defences we can set up, in spite of our ground observer crews, some of those bombers will get through. I do not think any Russian, in his right mind, would pick on a city like Toronto upon which to drop a bomb, when there are so many more important targets available, within easy reach, which would destroy homes and cripple industries. In fact, I do not think there is potentially, any city in the Province of Ontario which would offer such a target. But, the hon. members must remember this, that the pilots never go out on a bombing raid with only one objective in view. They have a couple of alternate targets, and if, for any reason, they cannot get to the original target, they are supposed to attack one of the alternative targets, and, may I say, Mr. Chairman, that we have some “dandy” alternative targets in the Province of Ontario. In fact, we have one in Toronto, and there are others in Hamilton, Windsor, Kitchener, and many other places.

There is one way only by which we can defeat the enemy and that is by not being passive, but active. Civil defence must go on to attack, and the way they can do that is this; one of these bombs with a potential destruction, we will say, of 100,000 lives and 5 acres of industrial plants—and I put that figure very conservatively indeed—but we can help beat him by attacking in this way; if we can reduce the casualties he causes, and the amount of destruction caused by fire, or by other means, we are on the attack, and wars are only won by attacking.

That is why, in presenting these Estimates now, Mr. Chairman, while the amount of money in our civil defence Estimates is very reasonable indeed, when we consider the results we are obtaining from it, we are spending, I know, more in this province than any province in the Dominion of Canada—and our efforts at the present time, must be to see that steps are taken to prevent panic and fires, and that we be well organized, and we hope by another year, that will be achieved. Then we can go on to other things.

I do not want to take up the time of the House, Mr. Chairman, in elaborating on these, but as we come to the hydrogen bomb, we changed our emphasis. We put the emphasis on the work done by my colleague, the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) because the welfare problem becomes more important with the new conception of what might happen to us.

Mr. Chairman, I would like every hon. member in this House to give serious thought to this very vital subject, and not only give thought to it, but lend his best efforts, because in the final analysis, the greatest defence we can build up in this country is the moral and the spiritual strength of our people in adversity.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, I am interested in the welfare of the page boys in this Assembly, who have been away from school for 7 or 8 weeks. What provision is made for continuing their education?

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Chairman, that is a matter in which I think every hon. member of this House is interested. These boys are chosen for their academic ability, in the first place. They are all extremely good students in their classes. When they come in here, arrangements are made for their education to be continued, by their attendance at classes in the mornings, and I think I am safe in saying that their experiences here are not only very valuable to them, but their education is not being handicapped in any way.

MR. THOMAS: Who provides the teacher, the Board of Education of Toronto?

HON. MR. WELSH: No, Mr. Chairman. We provide the teacher, who is, of course, paid by the board.

MR. THOMAS: What is he paid, Mr. Chairman?

HON. MR. WELSH: The teacher receives $50 a week for his services.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Chairman, do you take anyone the Board of Education sends, or do you request a certain individual?

HON. MR. WELSH: This arrangement is made through Mr. Speaker.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Chairman, have you any idea who the teacher is at the present time?

HON. MR. WELSH: Yes, the teacher at the moment is a Mr. Davies.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 126, Clerk of the Legislative Assembly and Chief Election Officer, $53,700.

Vote agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 127, Session requirements, $499,700.

MR. SALSBERG: On Vote 127, item 8, "Legislative Committee for Art Purposes." I have a personal interest in this item. The amount of $6,000 is voted.

I have been interested in the Art Committee since I became a member of this House. In fact I succeeded in getting a motion through the Art Committee many years ago which was finally approved by the House to purchase annually two or three paintings which were works of Ontario artists. The motion also provided that the Ontario Society of Artists be asked to select the two or three paintings of the year which we should buy, and that we add them to our provincial collection, and build up an impressive collection of Ontario works, which we would use for exhibition here and elsewhere in the province.

That motion was, as I said, carried, and I know that for a few years such paintings were purchased, then the item began disappearing, and of late I do not know what has happened. The last I heard of it was a couple of years ago when the pictures which were purchased were done by an attendant, whose personal hobby was painting, at the entrance to a large hotel, as I understand it, one of his works was purchased. Then another picture which was purchased, I think was done by a former attendant in this Chamber. That is all very good, and I am in favour of encouraging amateurs, although I say the original intention was to get the Society of Artists to select outstanding works of art. Certainly there are, in some instances, outstanding works by people who are not members of the Society, I think in particular of a very fine work done by Mr. Greenaway. One of his paintings was in the office of the Speaker until the hon. Prime Minister snatched it from him, and took it into his own private chamber. Generally, however, I think we are on the safe side if we ask the Ontario Society of Artists to select these works of art.

My question to the hon. Minister—and I deliberately extended the question so he would have time to consult with the members of his department—is how many paintings were purchased this year, last year, and the year before last, and from whom, and for how much money, or have we discontinued the practice which I had hoped was to be a permanent feature of our government?

HON. MR. WELSH: In reply to the hon. member for St. Andrew, the amount expended last year under this item was $3,200. Some of this was for a portrait of a former Prime Minister, and the rest was for the purchase of one or more—I am not sure how many—pictures, which are hanging in these buildings at the moment.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): What did you pay for the portrait?

HON. MR. WELSH: The expenditure for that portrait was $1,500, and the balance, $1,700, was expended on other paintings.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister is not able to tell us at the present from whom the other paintings were purchased?

HON. MR. WELSH: I think—in fact I am reasonably sure—Mr. Chairman, one of these was a seascape purchased from Mr. Greenaway. I do not remember who the other one was.

Vote 127 agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 128, Queen's Printer, $110,200.

MR. SALSBERG: As regards the Queen's Printer, I feel very dissatisfied with the way the reports come through. I do not want to be considered disagreeable on this question—

MR. COWLING: The hon. member is.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very much concerned, even if some member of the "carrier boys' section"—I call them that, because they always say, "Carried," "Carried"—so the carrier boys—may not be dissatisfied.

I feel the lack of printed reports which are important for records and for studying activities of the departments of government, because they are so late in coming through.

My pet theory for a long while was that this delay was due to the fact that most of the printing orders were being channeled into a few select print shops, and if we were to extend the area to which these orders were given, the result would be better and faster service.

The hon. Minister told me publicly here, and privately, that such is not the case. If it is not, I would like to know what it is. Why is it that some reports are delayed in printing for almost a year and a half? I do not want to mention them or single out any one department, but there are some reports which were tabled a year ago, and are not yet printed. Last year's report was now tabled and the one before that is not even in printed form. I think it is a handicap for all hon. members of the House, as well as people outside, who have occasion to refer to the annual reports.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for St. Andrew was kind enough to ask that question before, and I thought at that time I had cleared the matter to his entire satisfaction, but apparently I did not.

When a report is tabled, there is a certain definite number, very small, which is set, and which are printed. If any additional copies are required, the printing is done at the request of the department. If any particular department wishes to have additional copies printed, that is done, but they pay for it. Regarding copies which are printed originally from the tabled report, we receive the necessary instructions for the printing of them, from the Printing Committee of this House.

MR. SALSBERG: I can show the hon. Minister reports which were approved by the Printing Committee a year ago, and the number of copies to be printed was clearly indicated, yet the report in question is not printed. Some departments do manage to "come through" in a reasonable time, within 6 or 8 months, but when reports are a year, and a year and a half, and two years late in coming out, I suggest it is a serious matter, and a justifiable cause for complaint.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The same patronage was followed about 100 years ago, which was going on then.

MR. SALSBERG: If it is "patronage," we should stop it, and give it to the union printing houses which are doing a good job, and turn it out faster.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The Queen's Printer does a good job.

MR. SALSBERG: The King's Printer, or the Queen's Printer, has had orders years ago, and they are not here yet.

HON. MR. WELSH: I have great difficulty in accepting that statement. I would like it to be more specific. I do not like to attempt to answer a generality, because 99 times out of 100, it is not true. We all make mistakes. We are only human.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister should not put me "on the spot," because he knows I spoke to him privately about certain reports. He knows also what answer he gave me, and why I am not mentioning the department. The hon. Minister knows that what I say is absolutely true.

MR. NIXON: If I am not out of order in bringing this matter up, in the report presented to the House from the Committee on Printing, there was a recommendation that several hundred copies of the report from the Select Committee on Cemeteries should be printed. I do not notice any reference to the Committee on Indian Affairs or on Reform Institutions or any of the other Select Committees which were working during the recess, and I was wondering if the hon. Minister could give us any information on that.

HON. MR. WELSH: In reply to the hon. member for Brant, the Committee received a request from the Chairman of the Cemeteries Committee that a certain number of copies be printed, and I can assure him that will be done.

Vote 128 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 129, Civil Defence Committee, $240,400.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): On Vote 129, item 2, "Standardization of Hose Couplings and Allied Fittings," I wonder if the hon. Minister could tell us just how the work is progressing in connection with standardization of hose couplings? We have been doing a certain amount of work each year, and this year the amount in the estimate is $198,000. Just when is it expected we will be caught up with the standardization of hose couplings for the different fire departments throughout the province?

HON. MR. WELSH: I gave the figures rather broadly. I must admit, a few moments ago. All Southern Ontario is completed at the present time, except Cornwall and the Ottawa Valley. Many of the surveys have been made in Northern Ontario. As a matter of fact, survey teams are working up there now. While we have a very large area in Northern Ontario, we have comparatively little work to do, because there are only a few major towns there, and it will not take long. I expect that by the end of this year—I will not say definitely we will be through—but we will be very well along, indeed. We are moving to the Ottawa Valley to commence down there next week.

We will be there for some months doing Cornwall, Ottawa city, the towns in the Ottawa Valley, and then the teams move into Northern Ontario.

I can assure the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett)—and I say this in all sincerity—that we are certainly trying to get this job done as quickly as we can, as we realize it is important, and time is of the essence.

MR. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, do you get any assistance from the Federal Government for the item?

HON. MR. WELSH: Yes, we signed the first agreement with them, and they pay one-third of the costs. But we get a great deal of other assistance, in addition to that we receive from the Federal Government, because, while we do not ask the municipalities to pay anything, we have had wonderful co-operation right across this province from every city and town into which we have gone. In the cities of Kitchener and Hamilton, for example, they placed all their technical people in the fire departments at our disposal, and we got on with the job quickly. We certainly do appreciate it, and I think it speaks highly for the public-spirited citizens and fire brigades in those places.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, I was somewhat disturbed and I think other hon. members may be, by the general remarks the hon. Minister made in regard to civil defence. He painted a graphic picture, and one that might very well be true. If we were attacked from the air, with all the new methods of attack which can be envisaged, the item in the civil defence Estimate, almost all of which deals with the standardization of hose couplings, would appear inadequate. It would appear to me that if the hon. Minister is alarmed, as I think he genuinely is over this matter, there should be much more of an effort put forward to step up civilian defence in this province. I would say to the hon. Minister that if we were in danger of attack, and if our facilities were inadequate before this Vote was put through the House, they will still be inadequate after the Vote goes through.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Chairman, at first glance I can see the reason why the hon. Leader of the Opposition should be concerned at the small sum of money that is voted for civil defence. I certainly did not try to be dramatic about it, when I was presenting the facts as I understand them to be at this moment. Those facts have a secondary implication, to me at least. That is, they have pushed the danger of war back a couple of years. I think that is true, and I think it is believed to be true by all the General Staffs, not only in Britain and the United States, but also in Canada itself. We know that Russia has the atom bomb, comparable to our own. But we also know that we are "one jump" ahead of them with the hydrogen bomb, and I cannot conceive of Russia—and I say "Russia" frankly because it is the only enemy in the world we have to consider at the moment—attempting an attack on the free nations at the present time.

We have not endeavoured to train civil defence workers, but to train civil defence instructors who can take a group of people and give them elementary training which will enable them to save their own lives, and those of their neighbours, and keep the country's protection at its highest peak. I hope we shall never need civil defence in this country, but it is a form of insurance and I think the amount in the Estimates at the present time is adequate to pay the premium for this year.

MR. OLIVER: They are going a great deal further in the United States than we are here. They seem to realize the need for civilian defence in the United States much more clearly than we do in this province. Does the hon. Minister think they are wrong and we are right?

HON. MR. WELSH: As a matter of fact the effort made in the United States has been extremely well publicized. They have marked air-raid shelters, for instance. This is a subject on which, Mr. Chairman, I may be excused if I speak from personal knowledge. I was stationed at Croydon, England, during the war—a suburb on the outskirts of London—and it got the worst "shellacking" of any London suburb. We spent a good deal of time in digging people out of air-raid shelters, and recovering them from bomb wreckage and I think the same as the British, and the same as a great many Canadians, that before we spend any money building air-raid shelters we should know against what we are trying to protect ourselves. Is it gas? Then the shelters must be air conditioned. Is it fragmentation? Then the shelters must have concrete walls. It is carbon-monoxide? In that case a further solution must be found. All these things are important. The Americans went ahead with all this. They set up air raid shelters and now they have found they do not know whether they will prove of value or not.

In Canada we have not made that mistake, but I should not like a single hon. member to think that Ontario is lagging in its programme of civilian defence, because we are not.

MR. SALSBERG: I had no intention of speaking on this item, but I do want to say a word or two. It is because of the "bit of war talk" we heard and which I think was very unfortunate. It is all right, Mr. Chairman, to have our civil defence, in the same way as it is all right to build and maintain a degree of defensive forces. Every country is doing that. But the fact is that there is no defence against atomic attack, and there is no defence against a hydrogen bomb attack.

A newspaper which came out an hour or so ago carries this headline: "One H-bomb could destroy biggest city, Strauss says." Asked whether that applied to New York, his answer was: "Yes, to Greater New York." And I think that while we spend some money—and I have no objection to the Estimate—the greater emphasis should be on the need for peaceful understanding and for arrangements between the powers which will end the threat of an annihilating war rather than that we should engage in labelling one country or the other as the "enemy." This applies especially when the other country mentioned has displayed, on more than one occasion, a desire not only to limit armaments but to reduce armaments.

I suggest to all hon. members we should pay less attention to those who spread hysteria from below the border and take a more rational view and consider the sounder opinions which come from statesmen and great leaders in Europe.

Vote 130 carried.

On Vote 131, Civil Service Commission, Salaries, $102,400.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on item 13, can the hon. Minister tell us why the Civil Service Commission is not established on the basis of what it was originally meant to be, namely a commission of three. I understand the civil service, through their association, has been pressing the government for the appointment of a commission of three, rather than one commissioner. I say this with all respect to the present commissioner. I have no criticism to offer of his work nor of him personally, but it seems to me that the staff has a reasonable argument when they want to have a commission of three, and one upon which they will have the right to be represented.

HON. MR. WELSH: Well, Mr. Chairman, the Act says a commission may be appointed. While the hon. member for St. Andrew makes the statement that the civil servants are exerting pressure in favour of a commission, I want to tell him, Mr. Chairman, that I have never had a request for such a commission. And I think Mr. Foster, the present commissioner, does a good job and that he enjoys the respect of all the civil servants.

MR. SALSBERG: It was not necessary for the hon. Minister to say that, because I said it before him. But the hon. Minister knows that the official journal of the association a few months ago carried an article which argued in favour of a commission of three.

Vote 131 agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report progress and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

THE LABOUR RELATIONS ACT

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario) moves second reading of Bill No. 52,

“An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act.”

He said: Mr. Speaker, this amendment to the Labour Relations Act is a very brief one and it concerns the voluntary revokable check-off of union dues. Under this particular amendment, the employee is protected. As the term applies, the check-off is revokable on the written request of the employee. I believe if the voluntary revokable check-off had been part of our labour legislation, the protracted strike in Northern Ontario would not have taken place.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out to the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) that the one mine which had it, the Preston East Dome mine, was the first to come on strike. How does the hon. member figure that out?

MR. THOMAS: I think the strike would have been shortened generally if that had been agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out that the first mine to go on strike was one with the check-off?

MR. THOMAS: Here we have a situation where the employees will give consent to the employer to deduct government bond funds, contributions for hospitalization and so on. In the City of Oshawa, at the present time, we have a campaign for the extension of the General Hospital there at a cost of $2,250,000, and the employees in our city are giving General Motors and other industries permission to take a certain sum from their wages to contribute toward the hospital campaign. That is entirely voluntary, and this amendment to the Labour Relations Act would enable this to be done more widely. The deduction of union dues can only take place on the written consent of the employee and could be revoked at any time on a written request to that effect.

Mr. Speaker, through an amendment to the Municipal Act, our friends in the rural areas have that privilege now. There again, contributions are entirely voluntary and can be revoked at any time. All labour is doing is asking for the same privilege.

The various unions, Mr. Speaker, have what they call their "citizens fund," and if they so wished the men could contribute to any political Party they chose.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: But they always choose the same one.

MR. THOMAS: That is entirely up to them. It is quite a democratic procedure.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Speaker, all that the Labour Unions are asking for is the same privilege which is extended to those in agriculture. On behalf of the trade unionists, I appeal to the government to grant this concession. If they are prepared to bring in legislation like that, themselves, we shall be very happy to withdraw this bill. I hope the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) will see fit to support it.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, in supporting my colleague on this bill, I wish to point out that I have lived in Northern Ontario where all this trouble took place, for 33 years, this coming summer, and I have had an opportunity of seeing this method of deducting dues in effect. As I have stated to the hon. Minister privately, and have stated in this House on different occasions, I did not at first understand the difference between the unions which did not deduct dues through their employer, and those which did, and I did not understand the difference between the "revocable" and the "irrevocable" check-off.

All that my colleague is asking for in this bill is the voluntary, revocable check-off; that is, union members would have the right to volunteer to have their dues deducted, and they could also withdraw that right or privilege at any time they wanted to, after having given the permission.

However, there is another type of check-off which perhaps is a little more direct in its application on unions. I have seen it in operation in the paper mills for over 30 years. It is the compulsory, irrevocable check-off. That means, that once a man obtains employment in a factory where that practice is carried out, he must, of necessity, permit his dues to be deducted by the employer, and turned over to the union, and the employee has no say whatsoever. The minute he commences work there, he is subject to that provision.

The paper industry permitted that type of check-off many years ago. In 1917, in my home town, this compulsory, irrevocable check-off was put into effect. The other day the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) told me: "But that was by agreement." I admit that. Certainly, it was by agreement between the paper company and the men. But you are dealing with different types of industry. Scattered throughout Old Ontario we have many types of industry wherein management is quite willing to grant some type of check-off, which is just another name for union security. But in certain industries we have management which will not, under any circumstances, grant this concession. In Northern Ontario, we have the great mining industry, and not one group of management will agree to permit the slightest form of check-off. When industry in Old Ontario, including many big concerns, as well as the paper industry, has agreed to some form of check-off, what is there to "union security" which leads the mining operators to refuse it? As ably stated by my colleague, the strike in Northern Ontario last year was due in part to the demand of the men for union security.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): How does the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) get around the Preston East Dome? They had a check-off.

MR. GRUMMETT: They did, but they struck for wages. Their wages were very low.

HON. MR. DALEY: They were the first struck, and the last settled, and they were the only ones who had the check-off.

MR. SALSBERG: What does that prove?

MR. GRUMMETT: That may be, but their wage schedule was away down as compared with Hollinger. In the Porcupine area, the basic rate ranged from 83 cents to $1.01. It is understandable that in a mine with an 83 cent basic wage rate, the men would ask for an increase in wages, and, indeed, they did ask for $1.01, because they knew that only 40 or 45 miles away was a big paper mill at Iroquois Falls, where the basic rate at that time was $1.41. Both union security and wages entered into the strike in the Porcupine, and I am convinced—and I know the hon. Minister (Mr. Daley) feels the same way—that if we had just had to settle the question of wages during that long and bitter strike, we could have settled the difficulties long before we did. But as it was, the men held out for union security, and the mining operators held their ground, and refused to grant any type of security whatsoever.

That was the cause of prolonged suffering in the mining area. This bill is the very mildest form of union security which can be granted. It is the voluntary, revocable check-off, and once established I am sure that it will go a long way toward doing away with bitter struggles in the mining areas. That, Mr. Chairman, is where you are going to find the difficulty; in connection with union security. Other branches of industry are quite prepared to make small concessions, at first, and gradually extend greater concessions in the way of union security. If the government itself would put into effect a bill of this nature, as stated by my colleague, we are quite prepared to withdraw our bill tonight, if the government will tell us that they are going to bring down a measure similar to this one, which will take one short step—one small step—towards giving unions the security they ask, and which we have incorporated in this bill.

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I think the government has made their position in this matter definitely clear over the period of negotiations, and in discussions in this House. In regard to Preston East Dome, the union had established confidence in the minds of management, who were prepared to go along and concede the check-off, which they did. At that time there were two other companies which did the same thing, and between the time that this "check-off," as it is called, was granted, two of the companies closed up, leaving only one which had been willing to concede that "favour"—shall I say—to organized labour, that being Preston East Dome. In spite of the fact that they had union security, that is, the check-off, they still were the first mine to be struck, and in spite of the fact that they had granted the check-off, they were the last mine to be settled, which did not sit very well with them.

The hon. member (Mr. Grummett) mentioned that they struck because of a wage rate of 83 cents an hour. I am not too sure of my figures, because I am speaking from memory, but in a group of somewhere in the neighbourhood of 300 workmen, and there was a base rate of 83 cents, with respect only to a few outside workmen, amounting, I believe, to about 10 people.

MR. GRUMMETT: Classed as labourers.

HON. MR. DALEY: About 10 people, and one of the first things we were able to do was to get the Preston people to agree to wipe that rate out, so that all their employees were raised to the rate, which was then $1.01, or I believe $1.03, and, with the increased amount, to $1.08, which would be the basic labour rate. That was accomplished in my office.

As far as any comparison between what the farmers have, which the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) considers to be a check-off, I personally can see no comparison with that, and a check-off in industry. The farmers get together and agree they will permit a deduction of a certain amount of money to go to the farmers' own organization, which controls this money and uses it for purposes the farmers decree, that is, to conduct the business of the organization, and also for publicity intended to create markets to improve the position of the farmers. It is their own money, and is simply handed to a certain group of their own people to use.

MR. T. D. THOMAS: Is that not true of trade unions?

HON. MR. DALEY: It is not, no.

MR. THOMAS: I think it is.

HON. MR. DALEY: The deductions in industry in connection with hospital funds, and so forth, are voluntary efforts, and I think we should say to management that we appreciate the fact that they will do this, because it is an Act to assist in the raising of funds for very worthwhile purposes. That is not something which continues, it is something that goes on for a period of two or three weeks, or a month, or whatever the length of the term of the campaign is, and then it is done, but a check-off in an industry is a permanent thing. Once it is given, it is there. True, the men can introduce the revocable clause, and if they have the courage to revoke the permission, that could take place, but I am sure once a man signs to have his dues deducted, it is not easy for him to withdraw.

However, Mr. Chairman, be that as it may, we—that is, I, representing the government, and the rest—feel this is a matter for collective bargaining. It is the first step in union security, but it is also an important step in collective bargaining. There is a great deal of value to be derived from keeping it that way.

MR. GRUMMETT: You can only have collective bargaining where there is a will.

HON. MR. DALEY: I have seen many times, in settling disputes between conflicting parties, where the check-off was "sold" for something else. What happens is that the union comes in, submits a list of things they want, and included among them is the check-off; the company says: "All right, we will give you the check-off, if you take something else off. We cannot give you both, but we will give you one or the other." It is a bargaining position, and you are taking something away from one side and making sure that the other has it.

We do not agree with that. We believe collective bargaining is just that, and the parties should sit down together. If a union, by their actions, gains the confidence of the employer—and a great many of them have—after having gained the confidence of a sufficient number of the people who work in that plant, they have no difficulty getting a check-off. Many industries give the check-off because they have dealt with the union; they know it is solid, and that they are going to work with them. They have a mutual understanding of each other's problems, and both are trying to do the best they can for the other. In that case, the check-off comes along naturally. But for us to say by legislation that a company, whether they have any faith in the union or not, is required by law to make this concession, I think is wrong, and I think my colleagues think it is wrong. I say here and now we will not accept the bill which the hon. member (Mr. Thomas) has, I am sure in all sincerity, advanced, because we do not believe in it. It is a matter for collective bargaining, and we intend to keep it that way.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, in this instance, as there has been a number of others, I fail to understand the resistance of the government to popular pressure and popular request.

The question of the check-off is one which confronts this government now, and has for quite a while, and I think it is true to say that an overwhelming number of organized workers have been asking for some such type of legislation. Not only that, but very important people in the judiciary have recognized the justice of this request, and have made recommendations which establish certain formulae and precedents, which are followed quite widely. Yet, this government continues to shut its eyes to an evident necessity.

You see, Mr. Speaker, many fundamental changes have taken place in our economy, which affect the relationship between workers and employers. It is no longer a case of small groups of artisans who band together to form a union, and who work in small groups in shops. Today we are confronted with the employment of masses in single plants, with thousands and tens of thousands of workers, working in a massive industry under one management. That creates conditions which the trade union movement find it difficult with which to cope in the manner which was done years ago.

When the hon. Minister of Labour worked at his trade of carpentry, the system in his union—indeed, I think it is still true today—was that each worker paid his dues direct to the union, or the business agent came around on the job, and collected them. That was true in my own trade. I was secretary of my local union when I was wearing knee pants—

HON. MR. DALEY: Mr. Speaker, I used to enjoy going to the union and paying my dues, and meeting the other members of the union. I think if union men would adopt that policy, and attend their union meetings, pay their dues, and take a more active part in the union activities, we would not get into as much difficulty as we do today. The fact of the matter is, they do not take much interest in their union activities.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree with the hon. Minister that union members should attend their union meetings. When I was secretary of my local union, everybody came to the union meetings, and paid their dues there, but we were a small group in our shop, as the carpenters are, when working on their jobs, and as the printers are when working on theirs.

But the hon. Minister must remember that when the workers organize in plants such as Ford's, or the General Motors, or International Nickel, they are organized in thousands—in 10,000 or 15,000 units—and it becomes physically impossible to collect the dues.

HON. MR. DALEY: Not if the men want to pay them.

MR. SALBERG: First of all, the men must want to pay them, that is true. But it would require somebody at every gate of an enormous plant, like Ford's, to sit there at a table, and when the men come out, stop each one and have him pay his dues. That is impossible.

Furthermore, human nature being what is it, when 10,000 men go out of a plant—or even 5,000—through one gate, they are anxious to get away to see a ball game, or to run home, or go for a glass of beer, or keep a date, and they will not stop to pay their dues, and before you know it there is a terrible backsliding in union responsibility.

It is these new conditions which require a new approach, and I think Mr. Justice Rand took that into account when he was handling the famous Ford case. He recognized the responsibility every worker must have toward his collective - bargaining agency, which brings him the benefits which he enjoys.

Mr. Justice Rand established a formula which bears his name, the effect of which was, if you are not a member of a union, you should be checked off anyway, and the money handed over to the union, because the non-union men benefit from the efforts of the organized men in their struggle for a better living standard.

The Rand formula is widely applied, and what the unions ask this government to do is to enact legislation which will make it obligatory upon the resisting and recalcitrant employers. There is always a small group, a small non-conforming element for whom we had legislation to oblige them to check-off the dues if the workers ask them to do so in writing.

The legislation before us is limited in its objective, in that it also provides for a worker to sign himself out of paying his dues; in other words it is a revocable type of check-off.

There are hon. members in this House who come from areas in which the paper-making industries are established, and they know this policy has existed for a long time.

I think the hon. Minister of Labour forgets, when he argues against this check-off legislation, that in his industry, when he worked as a carpenter, or when I worked at my trade, we had the closed union shop. In other words, if the present hon. Minister of Labour, when he was working with a hammer and saw, did not pay his dues, he was dropped from the union, and he could not work in a union shop. It was a closed shop. That was true in most crafts. If you did not pay, and were not in good standing, you did not work, and everybody "darned well" paid, because that was an important condition for continued employment. The hon. Minister must know this legislation is of a very minimum type, because there are few closed shops, in large scale industries but in those days the thousands of workers who paid their dues directly, had additional protection of a closed shop. There the employees paid their dues to the business agent or the chairman on the job, and unless they paid, they could not work. That is not the type of relationship which exists today. There is no closed shop in large industry, there is not even a union shop, and if you deny them this degree of protection, you are denying them a great deal.

The fact is, so I am informed, that 7 out of 10 provinces have some type of union security legislation in operation now, and that 6 of the provinces—

HON. MR. FROST: 5, I think it is.

MR. SALSBERG: I am further informed that 6 out of the 7 have a check-off of varying degree in their legislation.

Furthermore, Mr. Speaker, the Progressive Conservative members on the House of Commons Committee at Ottawa have dealt with this question, and voted for the check-off to be a part of the National Labour Relations Statute. That is a fact.

As in some other cases, I am obliged to embarrass the government by saying it should follow the lead of its national spokesmen in Ottawa, who have gone on record and voted for the check-off type of legislation.

Furthermore, there are branches of industry operated by this government, where the check-off is in force. You know, of course, Mr. Speaker, the railroads now have compulsory check-off, and I understand the Northland Railway is checking off dues. I am very glad this is so—

HON. MR. FROST: We are doing it right here in this building.

MR. SALSBERG: And you are doing it with the farmers, with the nurses, and the teachers, as the result of legislation enacted here. We enacted a bill a year or so ago which obliged registered nurses to pay a certain amount to their association, or they could not be members of it—

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member is getting away from the argument altogether. It is not necessary to convince us that the check-off be permissible. That, I may say to the hon. member, is the present situation. I do not know whether they have a check-off on the Northland Railway. If such a check-off applies to the railways generally, then it does apply to the Northland Railway, and that is all right.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Justice Kellock gave that in his decision.

HON. MR. FROST: It was negotiated, and we are in agreement. In regard to our employees in the building, we have the check-off granted to them for three associations, the Civil Service Association, the War Veterans Association, and I think there is one other.

I would like to point out to the hon. member, and to the hon. members of the House, that personally I am not opposed to the check-off—by no means. The government is not. The problem involved is as was stated by the hon. Minister of Labour.

The framework of our Act is collective bargaining. Anything can be bargained at a collective-bargaining table—that is, within the law, of course.

I have made no secret of it, and the hon. members of this House know, that 4 years ago I was somewhat disposed to recommend to the House the inclusion of the check-off in the legislation at that time.

But, Mr. Speaker, the problem is this: There are, I think, 8 different kinds of check-off, ranging from the voluntary revocable, through to the Rand formula, the closed shop, union shop, everything.

Mr. Speaker, representatives of labour and industry sitting around a table can have any one of those they want, or any combination thereof—anything upon which they agree.

The hon. Minister of Labour tells me—and I can so assure the House—that there is not in America a collection of experts, men of ability and training, such as we have in the Labour Department, such men as Professor Finkleman, Mr. Metzner, Mr. Fine, and I must include the hon. Minister of Labour himself.

I think the hon. member for St. Andrew will agree with that. He is bound to agree with that. They tell me this, and I think it is a fact, that the framework and basis of our Act is free collective bargaining of anything which is within the law. The minute the government starts to legislate in that field, then you find at once that industry wants something, and then labour wants something, and you narrow it down to where you might arrive at the point where you completely obliterate collective bargaining, and then it becomes a matter of government arbitration.

Mr. Speaker, nothing can be more undesirable than that. It gets down, as the hon. Minister of Labour has said on several occasions, to a question of wage fixing, price fixing, condition fixing, until the whole spirit and scheme of this Act which has worked so well in this province is completely destroyed. That is the problem.

Mr. Speaker, I may say that to put in voluntary revocable check-offs is completely meaningless in this part of Ontario. Here the check-off takes many different forms such as the "Rand formula," something of that sort. This really would have no meaning in the greater part of industrial Ontario.

In fact, if you were to write a declaration in the Labour Relations Act that a check-off is valid, and they can have any kind of a check-off they want to negotiate, there might be some meaning to it. But that is the law now. Why repeat something that is already the law? To put in voluntary revocable check-off, which, as I say, is meaningless in the greater part of industry today, and has no relationship to the agreements they are negotiating, simply to show that you are in favour of the check-off, is, I think, on the side of being silly.

These various types of check-offs are there. They can have them, and they can negotiate them, but the minute you begin legislating in the collective bargaining field, you do irreparable damage to the set-up which has worked so satisfactorily in the past.

I point out to the House that in the last 10 years, since the first Act was passed, it has gone through a period of experimentation. After all these years, I would like to say something to the credit of the predecessor of the hon. member for Ontario, the hon. Gordon Conant, who had, in his day, to do with the framing and drawing of the first Act, and he did a very conscientious and good job for which he received credit. Certain conceptions such as the Labour Court and several other things were proven by experience, not to be the best method of treatment. Nevertheless, that was the commencement of our Labour legislation back in 1943.

Over these years when you consider the tremendous industrialization of Ontario, where we have changed so radically to an industrial economy with the unionization of workers by the tens of thousands—indeed, by the hundreds of thousands—we have in this province a record that is not paralleled in all America.

It is true there are sections which may require amending of course: there always will be. You will never reach the point where everybody will be completely satisfied, but the advances which have been made in labour jurisprudence, and in administration, are really phenomenal. I say again, as regards check-offs, I do not think there is anybody on the government side who expressed any opposition to check-offs. The opposition is to such action which would spoil the picture by doing something which upsets the present operation of the Act, and what it means. That is the point.

MR. SALSBERG: I can just say they must understand we disagree on this question.

Motion negatived.

HON. MR. FROST: In connection with the 21st Order, which is the bill proposed by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). I may say I would like to further consider it, as I think there might be some merit in that bill.

MR. NIXON: I can assure the hon. Prime Minister there is great merit in it.

HON. MR. FROST moves Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee: Mr. Dent in the Chair.

THE CORPORATIONS ACT, 1953

House in Committee on Bill No. 65, "An Act to amend The Corporations Act, 1953."

Sections 1 to 30 inclusive agreed to.

On section 31.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Chairman, you will notice that there is an amendment required to section 31. The bill has been reprinted, and the amendment is in the reprinted form.

HON. MR. WELSH moves the section be amended as in the reprinted bill.

Section 31, as amended, agreed to.

Section 32, as amended, agreed to.

Section 33 and 34 agreed to.

On section 35.

HON. MR. WELSH moves section 35 be amended by adding thereto, the following words:

Section 286 of The Corporations Act, 1953, is amended by striking out the word "to" in the seventh line and inserting in lieu thereof the word "may" so that the section shall read as follows:

286. Every corporation, unless otherwise expressly provided in the Act or instrument creating it, has and shall be deemed to have had from its creation, the capacity of a natural person and may exercise its powers beyond the boundaries of Ontario to the extent to which the laws in force, where the powers are sought to be exercised, permit, and may accept extra-provincial powers and rights.

Section 35, as amended, agreed to.

Section 36, formerly 35, agreed to.

Sections 37 to 40 inclusive, agreed to.

Section 41, as amended, agreed to.

HON. MR. WELSH: The amendment is in the reprinted copy.

I move the bill be amended in accordance with the reprinted copy.

Bill 65 reported.

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 77, "The Child Welfare Act, 1954."

HON. MR. FROST: Does the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) want this bill held over?

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, I do not like to ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) to do so. This is the second time, but the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) wanted to speak on this bill, and if it could be held over, I would appreciate it.

HON. MR. FROST: It will be held over.

MR. OLIVER: Thank you.

ONTARIO FUEL BOARD

House in Committee on Bill No. 94, "An Act to establish the Ontario Fuel Board."

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, there have been so many amendments to the bill in its revised form, that I think some explanation by the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) might help.

HON. MR. PORTER: There will be explanations when we come to them.

MR. SALSBERG: Actually, they are all through it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Each one might require a separate explanation. In order to convince the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) it would require three or four explanations.

MR. SALSBERG: That is quite true. The hon. Minister's (Mr. Porter) explanations require elaboration.

HON. MR. PORTER: No, just repetition to din them into the hon. member's head.

Sections 1 to 13 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 14.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, 14 and 15 are the sections which set out what the board may do. I did not have a chance to speak on second reading. I do not remember the circumstances, but I think it was understood that the bill was going to committee anyway, and we would be able to deal with some of these problems, when the bill came back.

I suggest the Act, as it now stands, establishes a committee which will have very little relationship to what was anticipated by the people, as a result of utterances made by spokesmen for the government, namely, that we would have a publicly-owned utility for the distribution of natural gas within the borders of this province.

As the Act is now before us, these two sections make it clear that all this board will have power to do is to regulate the construction, location, spacing, etc. of the pipeline. I do not think we are doing our duty, and I do not think the government is doing its duty, when it fails to set up a board of this sort as a commission to operate the natural gas distribution in the province, as a public utility.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, I wish to point out that this is quite out of order, because the principle involved in this bill was thoroughly discussed on second reading, and the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) raised that point and argued it, and I attempted to answer his arguments, and the bill was passed. I cannot see how this is relevant on this particular section in committee. It is just a repetition, simply a dull, boring repetition of what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has advanced before.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) dislikes it so much that he stays away from the House days at a stretch.

HON. MR. PORTER: I was just tired of listening to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. SALSBERG: We got on so well when the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) was away, because we did not have so many silly interruptions. I do not know who sent for him, because we were doing very well without him. I heard no complaints, and nobody rose to question where the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) was.

AN HON. MEMBER: We all knew he was on public business.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: Unless the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) has something constructive to offer, will he please sit down.

MR. SALSBERG: What I propose, Mr. Chairman—

THE CHAIRMAN: The principle of the bill has been approved in committee, and the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order. Please sit down.

Sections 14 and 15 agreed to.

On section 16.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, on 16, I would like to ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) one question. In this section the board has the power to fix the rates to be charged to ultimate consumers of natural gas. Is that in reality the position of the board, that they want the power to fix the rates to the ultimate consumer?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, I should think in many cases they would deliver the gas to a public utility within a municipality, and then the utility in turn would—

MR. OLIVER: Deliver it to the consumers?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, but the board's main power in fixing rates will be with respect to the rates the utility charges to the customer in the municipality itself. That is where the public needs protection, with respect to the spread between the price paid and the price they are charged for it. That happens now, of course, in South-western Ontario with the Union Gas, and the Dominion Gas, and the various other companies there. Under the present legislation their rates are fixed. Very often the municipality and the company are able to come to some agreement which is endorsed by an order of the official in charge who has power to fix the rates, but nevertheless all those rates have been fixed for many years, and the pattern has been well established. This section merely broadens the power to any new utility which may be set up.

One exception now is the Consumers Gas Company. They have a private charter. They operate under a private Act which was passed many years ago, and under that Act I think there is some limitation of the dividend they can pay, or something of the kind.

MR. SALSBERG: 10 per cent.

HON. MR. PORTER: Also, the City of Toronto has some measure of control over their activities. However, this section will put them, as well as everybody else, under the board.

Sections 16 to 22 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 23.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, 23 really takes the power from the board and vests it in the government.

HON. MR. PORTER: It does not do anything of the kind.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, it does not say the government, I beg your pardon, it says the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, which, of course, we understand.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is, in a sense, an appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council from orders which might be made by the board.

MR. SALSBERG: That is what I am saying.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is not what the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) said at all. He said, "it takes all power away from the board."

MR. SALSBERG: Well, that is right.

HON. MR. PORTER: It does not take all power away from the board. Anyone can appeal.

MR. SALSBERG: Anyone can appeal to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, and the Lieutenant-Governor can set aside the board's action, and can make such other decisions as he sees fit, and impose them on the board. That is what the section says, "impose them on the board and all affected parties."

AN HON. MEMBER: Well, is that not right?

MR. SALSBERG: Then you might as well have no board, and just have the Cabinet handle it.

HON. MR. PORTER: This is simply an appeal.

Sections 23 to 27 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 28.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, these are very wide powers which we are giving in this section, and we are giving them to "any member of the board, or any inspector or other officer or employee of the board." And what they do under this Act is "enter upon, pass over, take up or use any private property or the property of any municipality or local board thereof, or of the Crown or any agency of the Crown." Does the hon. Minister (Mr. Porter) not think we are going a little too far in extending it, certainly to an employee of the board? It should be tied down a little bit there, because these powers are very sweeping.

HON. MR. PORTER: Those powers, of course, are limited to the scope of the Act itself, and would have to be invoked for the purpose of carrying out some order that the board might properly make, under its powers. It is necessary to have such a section as this to enable the board to enforce its orders. But, of course, the orders can only be made within certain limits, within the scope of the Act, and "for the purposes of this Act" are the governing words of that section.

MR. OLIVER: Oh, yes.

HON. MR. PORTER: After all, the board is not empowered to build a pipeline, and expropriate property for the purpose of building a pipeline, or that sort of thing.

MR. OLIVER: It would seem to me that "any member of the board, or inspector or other officer" should be sufficient, without putting in "employee."

HON. MR. PORTER: An "employee" implies an "authorized employee"; someone who has definite instructions to carry out an order of some kind.

MR. OLIVER: All right.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston):
An authorized agent.

Section 28 agreed to.

On section 29.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, I should like to hear the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) on section 29. It gives power there to step in and take over abandoned wells, and sell the equipment. What is the purpose of that? It would seem to me, in most cases, the salvage which would be retrieved would not be worth the effort expended. In many cases, at least, the amount recovered would be pretty small in comparison with the effort. I do not understand the purpose of it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, that section is carried over from one of the other Acts which are incorporated into this one. Perhaps I can obtain an example of this principle being applied. It is perhaps not used very often, and only in a very limited way, but it is one of the Statutes which is being incorporated.

MR. C. E. JANES (Lambton East): That is quite understandable. There are cases where a pipe is sticking up, and the company refuses to move it.

HON. MR. PORTER: Hazardous situations may arise and the board should have the power, if it becomes necessary, to carry out anything considered to be in the general interest.

Sometimes, these small companies go out of business, and leave its equipment, the well, and everything that has to do with it, in a state which might be called "hazardous." It is that sort of thing which was in mind when this section was originally drafted. It has been carried forward, and there has been no suggestion it should be limited in any way, in the light of circumstances under which it has been used in the past.

Sections 29 and 30 agreed to.

On section 31.

MR. SALSBERG: I wonder why this section is necessary. It provides that:

No person shall use natural gas for any industrial purpose unless he is the holder of a permit for such purpose.

Does that mean, for instance, that a little jeweller who is continually using natural gas when working at his bench, would have to get a permit to carry on his trade?

HON. MR. PORTER: This applies to industrial trades.

HON. MR. FROST: It was in the old Act. The basis of the Conservation Act was that gas was used for home purposes primarily. I think during the last war, the emphasis was changed to industry, because of a shortage of power, but with the withdrawal of controls, it reverted back to the old system.

MR. OLIVER: Are permits presently required?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes, for industry. But this legislation is dealing with a practical situation which exists today. With the importation of western gas, it may be desirable or necessary to remove some of these things, but we must remember that western gas is not here as yet, and we have to conserve our own supply.

MR. JANES: That has always been one of the headaches we have had, that is, to secure the permits. It is very difficult to get them and there are many of them requested.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, and there is a great backlog of requests from domestic consumers. If too much is allotted to industry, it denies gas to the domestic consumers. It is part of the whole conservation policy which has been carried out for many years with respect to natural gas which is produced in our own province. It is considered necessary to limit the industrial use, where there is not enough gas to go around.

MR. SALSBERG: Is that not sort of a nuisance?

HON. MR. FROST: No, it is very necessary. In the war days, tens of thousands of heating units were taken out of houses to enable gas to be used for industry.

MR. SALSBERG: As an emergency order.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes. I suppose there are still thousands of those units still out, and an effort is being made to replace them.

At the present time, the emphasis is being changed from house heating to industry. I think it is better to leave it the way it is. It may become desirable to take it out, if we get the natural gas—as I hope we will—from the west, in the quantity we require, but it does not interfere with conservation at all.

MR. SALSBERG: By this Act, such a business as a print shop, with a small jet on the press, would require a permit.

Sections 31 and 32 agreed to.

On section 33.

MR. OLIVER: Is that a new section, or an old one being brought forward?

HON. MR. PORTER: It is being carried forward.

MR. OLIVER: Is that true also of section 34?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes.

Section 33 agreed to.

On section 34.

MR. J. F. EDWARDS (Perth): Mr. Chairman, getting away from gas, and down to coal; what protection has the consumer to assure he will get the right kind of coal at the present time—I mean the retailer and the customers both. I refer to the number of B.T.U. units. During the war, they sold everything, and what protection does "John Public" now receive for the coal he is purchasing?

THE CHAIRMAN: This is a gas bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know of any steps which have been taken.

HON. MR. FROST: He might change his dealer.

HON. MR. PORTER: This section, which has been carried over from a former Statute, has been exercised to deal with emergencies, and not with the ordinary course of business.

MR. EDWARDS: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry, but they repealed the Fuel Act—

HON. MR. PORTER: The measurement of coal is under the Municipal Act.

MR. EDWARDS: What about the B.T.U. units?

Section 34 agreed to.

On section 35.

MR. SALSBERG: It may be a bit too late, but I would ask the government to pay some attention to the question raised by the hon. member for Perth (Mr. Edwards). It was my task at one time to be the chairman of the Fuel Committee of the City Council, and we found we had many problems we could not solve as a municipality, because the higher levels of government did not offer sufficient protection to the consumers.

THE MUNICIPAL FRANCHISES ACT

The House in Committee on Bill No. 96, "An Act to amend The Municipal Franchises Act."

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: Does that protect the municipality? I mean the municipality affected; would it have anything to say about it? This gives the company a right to pass through a municipality which may be necessary, but what do we offer to the municipality in the way of protection?

HON. MR. PORTER: There is authority for the gas line to pass through municipalities.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not opposed to that, but I suggest there should be some protection to the municipality, or that it be given some voice in determining how it passes, where it passes, under what conditions, and so on.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know how you can blow hot and cold on this. If you are going to give the power to have a gas line go through a municipality, which does not intend to distribute gas, and the municipality says, "No," or imposes some conditions, you will not be able to have the line built.

HON. MR. FROST: Damages are available to private owners in the municipality.

MR. SALSBERG: I agree, as everyone does, that the pipeline has to go through a populated area. But I think the municipalities should be given some voice in deciding the route and the conditions under which that will be done. Otherwise, a utility like this would ride roughshod over the municipalities.

We had the same situation in Moore Park, where a number of citizens banded together and were up in arms because Hydro was going to erect poles in that area.

This will apply to the smaller towns, where this utility can ride roughshod through the municipality, just as they see fit.

Bill No. 97 reported.

MR. SALSBERG: May I ask the hon. Attorney-General if the municipalities affected have the right of appeal?

HON. MR. PORTER: That section has been passed.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh, come on; do not be behaving that way. Will the municipality have a right of appeal?

HON. MR. PORTER: This is only an amendment to one subsection.

MR. SALSBERG: Then the hon. Attorney-General does not know?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report certain bills with, and certain bills without, amendments.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report one bill with amendment, and five bills without amendment, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: There are one or two bills with which I would like to deal at this time. Order No. 26 might be advanced. It is a private bill.

THE BOARDS OF THE BAPTIST CONVENTION OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

MR. OLIVER, in the absence of Mr. Nixon, moves second reading of Bill No. 24.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I make this suggestion to the House, in connection with the Election Act, the Voters List Act, and the Controverted Election Act. They relate to various sections of the Election Act, and might be discussed better in committee than on second reading. I think there will be some additions, including the bringing in of a provision for permitting Indians to vote. If they were advanced tonight, they would be in committee stage, and could be dealt with there. I would like to request, Mr. Speaker, that these three orders be advanced.

THE ELECTION ACT, 1951

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 136, "An Act to amend The Election Act, 1951."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE VOTERS LIST ACT, 1951

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 137, "An Act to amend The Voters List Act, 1951."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CONTROVERTED ELECTIONS ACT

HON. MR. PORTER moves second reading of Bill No. 138, "An Act to amend The Controverted Elections Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE UNEMPLOYMENT RELIEF ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves that Order No. 43 be discharged and the bill be withdrawn.

Motion agreed to; Bill No. 67 withdrawn; the Order discharged.

MR. SALSBERG: Is it proper to ask why, Mr. Speaker?

HON. MR. FROST: The Act provides for the levelling off of contributions by the Civil Service; it also provides for the government matching these amounts.

Upon looking into it, we found the government, first of all, was subsidizing the payment of interest. We have been paying above the rate of interest which is normal, in the form of subsidies.

In addition to that, we are placing in the superannuation fund, as we have done previously, the sum of $1 million, and it was decided it would be better to review the whole matter, rather than put it through at this time.

Mr. Speaker, tomorrow I would like to deal, first of all, with second reading of the Fair Accommodation Practices Act, which is No. 62 on today's Order paper; the Municipal Act, No. 63 on today's paper. This may be followed by further debate on the budget, and Orders 28 and 29 on today's Order paper, dealing with reports by the committees on Reform Institutions, Indian Affairs.

Tomorrow night, we will proceed with Estimates and bills.

Mr. Speaker, I move that when this House adjourns the present sitting thereof; it stands adjourned until 2 of the clock tomorrow afternoon, and that the provision of Rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended insofar as they apply to this motion.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I beg to table answers to questions 40, 43, 45 and 53.

HON. MR. FROST moves the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11.52 of the clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1954.

2 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: We are very happy today to welcome several groups of visitors to our galleries: pupils from the Blantyre Public School of Scarborough, students from the North Simcoe Public School of Oshawa, students from Owen Sound Collegiate of Owen Sound, and we are particularly glad to welcome students from the University School of Nursing. To the latter, I would say you have been called to a very high profession and will render a splendid and continuing service to relieve the sick and to help the suffering, and we wish you every possible success.

We have a very interesting group with us also. I do not know whether I should announce this group at all, but they are the ladies of the Women's Conservative Association of Orillia. My position being strictly non-political, I must just make the announcement which has been given to me here.

I might tell the ladies from Orillia that we are in between two fires in this House. The hon. Prime Minister talks about the "good old days," and speaks of the great town of Orillia where, I understand he has his name on a tree which some people would like to cut down. On the other hand, we hear of the glories and the beauty of Lindsay. However, I think we can safely say we are very happy to welcome the ladies from Orillia. You can feel justly proud, all Party feeling aside, that our hon. Prime Minister comes from your very fine and friendly town.

MR. S. F. LEAVINE: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present the second and final report of the Standing Committee on Health, and move its adoption.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Leavine, from the Standing Committee on Health, presents the committee's second and final report as follows:

Your committee begs to report the following bill without amendment:

Bill No. 123, An Act to amend the Cemeteries Act.

Your committee begs to report the following bill with certain amendments:

Bill 133, An Act to amend the Pharmacy Act, 1953.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Motions.

Introduction of bills.

THE ONTARIO CANCER TREATMENT AND RESEARCH FOUNDATION

HON. MACKINNON PHILLIPS moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to amend the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation, 1943."

Motion agreed to: first reading of the bill.

He said: Mr. Speaker, the Act of 1943 provided for a body corporate to consist of not less than 7 members nor more than 10. This amendment provides it shall consist of not less than 7 members, who shall be appointed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, and omits the maximum number.

We all know how fast this great province of ours is growing. The Ontario Cancer Research and Treatment Foundation have now installed in Ontario two cobalt bombs. The first in the fall of 1951 was installed at London, the second in the fall of 1953, at Toronto, and the third is now being installed in Hamilton. I am very glad to be able to tell the House today that we have every reason to believe we will have the one in Windsor by the end of April in the stage of installation, and the one at the Head of the Lakes before the end of May.

One year from then, we hope to have two more cobalt bombs, one at Kingston and the other at Ottawa.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in relation to this bill introduced by the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) which provides for the enlargement of the board, I have in mind an appointment to the board, provided of course, the House approves of the bill. I always like to take the House fully into my confidence in everything I plan to do.

It is our intention to appoint to the board as soon as possible, Mrs. Egmont Frankel. There will then be 2 women on the board. Mrs. Frankel's work not only in the Cancer Society, but in the general work to unite the forces against this disease, has been outstanding. She is one of the dynamic members of the Ontario Cancer Society. This organization makes it possible for men and women in every walk of life to do their part.

Mr. Bradley Heintzman, a young man of great and outstanding ability, who is the head of this society, recently was appointed to the board, and with Mrs. Frankel, will form a very strong liaison between the Cancer Society and the Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation.

Mrs. Frankel's work has not only been dynamic and forceful, but she possesses that sympathy and personal interest which is exemplified in the work of The Little Red Door, which makes her contribution indispensable.

Mrs. Frankel is really one of the great driving forces of this province, and her organization, particularly of women, is something very outstanding. To put her energy and her great abilities behind the work of the Research Foundation and the work in connection with cancer, is something which will add to our forces very measurably.

THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND

HON. MR. FROST moves first reading of bill intituled, "An Act to authorize the raising of money on the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund."

Motion agreed to; first reading of the bill.

MR. NIXON: How much this time?

HON. MR. FROST: $100 million. I have discussed this matter with the Treasury Board, and others, and I think that the amounts which are unused with relation to previous bills which have been passed, total in the neighbourhood of $150 million. I would be very glad to give the actual particulars tonight.

However, the amounts which are left over from those authorizations are in odd sums, for instance $23 million or $35 million, and in the event of loans of, say, $50 million, it is more convenient to have the amounts in one bill, and have the authorization there, than to refer to several different Acts.

HON. G. A. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): I beg leave to present to the House, the following:

Annual Report of the Commissioner of the Ontario Provincial Police from January 1st, 1953, to December 31st, 1953.

Report of the Secretary and Registrar of the Province of Ontario for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1953, with respect to the administration of The Companies Act and the Mortmain and Charitable Uses Act.

Report of the Secretary and Registrar of the Province of Ontario for the calendar year ending December 31st, 1953, with respect to the administration of The Extra Provincial Corporations Act.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I should like to refer to a matter at this time, which seems to be about as convenient as any to refer to it. It is with reference to the Vote or amount we have granted to the University of Toronto, for the School of Dentistry in the Supplementary Estimates a couple of weeks ago. At that time, I said a special grant of $1 million would be paid to the University of Toronto to provide for the extension of the College of Dentistry. Hon. members will realize there is a close relationship between dental and medical health.

In Canada, there are only 5 dental colleges, the largest of which is in Ontario. Ontario's increasing population growth, makes expansion necessary. With the additional demands from the other provinces, the need is immensely magnified. A substantial increase in the dental teaching facilities of Ontario is desirable, therefore, not only from the standpoint of this province, but from that of Canada.

Because of the nation-wide benefits which will result from our extended dental teaching programme, and the recognition that dentistry contributes to good health, it is hoped the Government of Canada will join with the Province of Ontario in making a substantial contribution to the cost of this undertaking. In making this special grant of $1 million, a few days ago, we are contributing in a very real way towards the betterment of dental health in Canada.

Please note again that there are only 5 dental colleges in Canada, of which ours is the largest. Our college, the Royal Dental College, therefore must make a greater contribution. Being the largest one of 5, it follows that it must make a greater contribution to dentistry in Canada, than any of the other colleges. This college, as it now stands, has to bear a major share of the load. This is a Canadian project. The need is urgent, and we are anxious to make our contribution here in Ontario as fully and as effectively as possible.

On behalf of the government, and I am sure on behalf of every hon. member in this House, I now state, on this 1st day of April—which by the way, is the birthday of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) to which the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will no doubt refer in a moment—that we are prepared not only to make this special grant of $1 million which I believe has already been paid, but we are prepared to match, in addition any sum the Federal Government will make to this institution.

If they will make a special grant of $1 million, we will give another $1 million, or even match $1½ million, which I would like to see.

MR. OLIVER: We will have a new building before long.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. May I point out that there are moneys set aside for health expenditures in Ontario which cannot be spent economically. This has been explained and is clearly understood. My suggestion is that, without increasing this appropriation at all, the Federal Government might apply some of the money which has been set aside for grant-in-aid funds to the University of Toronto to support the great cause of dentistry and we will immediately match the amount. That, I think is the practical and proper way of meeting this situation, which is really of fundamental concern in this country.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, I am quite aware that I did not give you the customary notice in respect to this question. I did not have the time, as a matter of fact, but I am sure the hon. Prime Minister will not object to taking my views into consideration in regard to this matter. It has to do, Mr. Speaker, with an answer to a question on the Order paper yesterday. The hon. Prime Minister answered a question of mine, No. 40. The question was this:

What logging taxes have been collected in each fiscal year applicable by (a) Mantane Contracting Co.

and it lists a number of other companies. Then it goes on to say:

What corporations taxes were collected from the incorporated companies for each year 1951-53 inclusive?

The hon. Prime Minister replied to the question on the Order paper, suggesting I see R.S.O. 1950, chapter 216, section 34. After some searching, I did locate what I was supposed to look for, to find the answer to that question, Mr. Speaker. Section 34 of chapter 216 of the Revised Statutes of Ontario reads as follows:

Every person who, while employed in the services of His Majesty, has communicated or allowed to be communicated to a person not legally entitled thereto, any information obtained, under this Act, or has allowed any such person to inspect or to have access to any written statements furnished under this Act, is guilty of an offence, and liable on summary conviction to a penalty of not more than $200.

I am glad that the penalty is not more severe than $200, but I would say in all sincerity, Mr. Speaker, to the hon. Prime Minister, surely that is not an answer to the question. In the second place, surely hon. members of the Legislature are entitled to what is—and what I always considered to be—public information.

That was all I asked for in this question, and it is hardly an answer, to be referred to a Statute. The Statute has no relation at all to an hon. member of a House asking a question, but has to do with giving out information to some irresponsible person, to some person who is not entitled to that information. However, when a member of the Legislature asks for information on a public matter, information which should be available in a governmental department, I suggest in the first place, he is entitled to it, and it is not the answer at all to refer him to a Statute. That does not apply in the case of an hon. member of the Legislature.

HON. MR. FROST: This Legislature, in its wisdom, many years ago, imposed what are known as "secrecy bars" to the giving of information relative to taxpayers. The hon. Leader of the Opposition knows the penalty is $200. My legal adviser is not here, but I suppose it provided upon failure to pay, under The Summary Convictions Act, those who do such-and-such can be imprisoned. I do not think the hon. Leader of the Opposition would want me to violate a Statute of this House, which was passed by this House, and put myself in such a position.

Another thing I would like to point out to the hon. Leader of the Opposition is that this information, being given by way of question and answer, becomes public, and is available then to the public—quite properly so—and to the press of this country. This same provision is in the Income Tax Act of Canada. How would the hon. Leader of the Opposition like someone to go to Ottawa and ask that his income tax returns be laid on the table? That is the fundamental part of this question, and I would tell the hon. Leader of the Opposition I am quite prepared to do this.

I do not think this will be a violation of the Statute, but I will consult with the law clerk to make sure neither he nor I, nor any member of the treasury staff, will be affected by it. I would be glad to give the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) in confidence the answers to his question. As a matter of fact, I had, in all innocence, the answers ready for him. I then discussed the matter with the treasury staff who pointed out that it would be a clear violation of the statutory provision imposed by the Legislature itself. I do not want to withhold any information from the hon. Leader of the Opposition. I am prepared to give him the information confidentially. Then he will know the situation, but I think he will realize it would be totally unfair to give the amount of taxation, and make that information public, because it would be a violation of the Act in revealing information, which we must get from taxpayers in confidence, in order to make assessments against them.

MR. OLIVER: If the hon. Prime Minister will read the section I referred to he will find that it does not refer, nor can it be made to refer to hon. members of the Legislature.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition will appreciate, surely, that if the information is given in this House it is tantamount to telling everyone.

MR. OLIVER: If an hon. member of the Legislature takes the responsibility of asking the question in order that the public might become acquainted with the information, it is certainly not proper for the government to say the public should not be informed on these matters.

HON. MR. FROST: If that principle were recognized it would mean that any person's income tax returns could be made public if questions were asked about them. Surely that was never intended.

HON. MR. CHALLIES (Minister without Portfolio): Perhaps I should make a comment on report of the accident which occurred at the Richard L. Hearn steam generating plant.

About 6 o'clock this morning number 1 generator, for some unexplained reason, exploded. I am pleased to announce to the House that the accident is not as serious as first thought or as it has been reported. No. 2 generator will be in operation within a day or so. No. 3 is being converted to 60 cycles. No. 4 was in operation soon after the interruption. The accident did not affect the capacity of our lines in any way, but it has underlined the advantage we have in the interconnections recently made between Detroit Edison and ourselves at Sarnia and Detroit. I say, with emphasis, that the accident was not as serious as at first reported.

MR. SALSBERG: Was anyone killed, or was there any serious accident among the staff?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No one was killed. Information was given that the building had been seriously damaged. That is not so.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Before the Orders of the day, Mr. Speaker, I should say I know the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) is always loath to have this mentioned in the House. Maybe, because of the passing years, one grows more sensitive as time goes along. During the years I have been in this House, it has been customary to wish him many happy returns on this day—It is the 1st of April.

I am sure the hon. member for Brant has warned the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) to say nothing. He would not wish to split the Liberal Party in any way. That is the reason perhaps why the hon. Leader of the Opposition is saying nothing about this. But I am under no such restriction. I am glad to offer the hon. member for Brant, on behalf of all hon. members, our good wishes on this occasion. I might say that the hon. member for Brant was first elected to this House in 1919, 35 years ago, and he has been a distinguished and fine member of the House ever since. We certainly wish him many years of health and happiness and many happy returns of this day.

MR. NIXON (Brant): Mr. Speaker, this comes rather as a surprise. I thought that after an hon. member reached the age of 60 there was an unwritten law that his anniversaries, which come at that stage with such alarming frequency, should not be brought to his attention, or at least to the attention of the public. On this occasion, however, I will forgive the hon. Prime Minister for bringing the matter up. When I first came to this House my youth was a matter which embarrassed me seriously. But I find that with the passing of years, that embarrassment has quite changed, and now proceeds from the opposite cause.

I do wish to thank the hon. Prime Minister and hon. members of the House for their very kind words, good wishes and felicitations to me on this occasion.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

FAIR ACCOMMODATION PRACTICES

HON. MR. FROST moves second reading of Bill No. 139, "An Act to promote Fair Accommodation Practices in Ontario."

Motion agreed to.

He said: I do not think, Mr. Speaker, there is much that I can add to the detailed statements which I made on Monday on the introduction of this bill. As I said then, I believe this will strengthen the legislation already on our Statute Books relative to the matter of discrimination. Yesterday afternoon, when we were speaking of hon. Robert Baldwin, I pointed out, as I have done on previous occasions, that one of the great contributions Canada has made to the world is that we have learned to live with ourselves and among ourselves. The birth of Canada and our rise to the status of a great country was only possible because French and English were able to work in partnership from the beginning. The Baldwin unveiling yesterday was just a recognition of that fact. Since this co-operation began in Canada, we have made progress in avoiding discrimination by means of Statutes which, I repeat, are not oppressive, but designed to lead people to regard them as declarations of public intent, and provide ways and means of avoiding incidents which might create resentment. They provide ways in which conflicting points of view can be reconciled. But, ultimately, they provide that there shall be an application to the courts in the event of what we might assume to be flagrant and intentional violation of the law.

I will not elaborate on this, beyond saying that in connection with this particular enactment I received a good many representations. I have a list here of, I suppose, 50 organizations which are interested in this matter. There are just

2 of them to which I will refer, apart from the great labour organizations. I have a letter from a great Roman Catholic churchman who refers to this measure as "People seeking vindication of human dignity as befits free men." I have another letter here from the Reverend Canon Judd, who was here with the deputation which approached us last week, and I believe this resolution was sponsored by the Most Rev. R. J. Renison, who is one of the great Canadians. Here was a man who had a great parish and a great connection here in the City of Toronto, but who was prepared to give that up to go out to a great missionary field in the north country as the Bishop of Moosonee—I believe that is his title—who also referred to this matter.

I may say that about a week ago a deputation waited on this government and was received in one of the committee rooms. The deputation was sponsored by the Civil Liberties Association or organization, and at that time there were people present from all races, creeds and colours. Many of them were clergymen from our churches, representatives of all faiths, and there were also present many of our coloured citizens of Ontario. Now, Mr. Speaker, I was very much impressed, as I know my colleagues were, by a very short speech made by a coloured gentleman, with that deputation, Mr. Don Moore, who represented the Negro Citizenship Association. He told about his people in Canada, the contribution that he and his people were endeavouring to make to the welfare of our country, of his religious beliefs, and his philosophy of life in general. I said I could not see at that time why anybody should wish to discriminate against a man like that—a great citizen, a man with whom one should be proud to be associated, in this country, a man of great ideas and great ideals. I told him that but for the fact that I had a luncheon engagement which I was obliged to attend I would have been delighted and honoured to have invited him to lunch. If the opportunity arises again, I shall do that. I would welcome him to my home. He would be a distinguished guest on any occasion.

This, Mr. Speaker, is just one of the things which are meant by this enactment. It is not intended to be a harsh measure which compels people to be just and fair. It is intended, if it is possible, to conciliate and bring people together.

I know the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) who is busily making notes up there, is going to ask me which hon. Minister is going to take over the administration of this Act.

MR. SALSBERG: No. I am just noting down the very fine words which the hon. Prime Minister has just been uttering.

HON. MR. FROST: It is my intention to approach the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley) and persuade him to take this over. He is a man of broad views, who has had great experience in conciliation which involves bringing people together, to secure agreement. I do that, with the consent and approval of the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) who, with his able law clerks, drew up this legislation—legislation which, I believe, can be held up as a pattern for other jurisdictions. I am quite satisfied, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Minister of Labour, with his generous point of view, will agree to combine this administration with that of the Fair Employment Practices Act. It will be another opportunity for him to use his great abilities, and those of his department, in bringing people together. It is with a great deal of pleasure I move the second reading of this bill.

MR. OLIVER: With the intent and purpose of this bill, I am sure the hon. members of the Legislature are in full accord, as another step forward in the panorama of progress in this province. It is well, I think, that we should remember in welcoming a bill like this that forward-looking legislation is not the prerogative of any particular government as I think the hon. Prime Minister will agree. Back in the days of the former administration there were many instances of forward-looking legislation and this government has carried on in the same way. This bill marks another chapter in removing from this province the discrimination we do not want to tolerate, and which we will not tolerate in Ontario. I think that in Ontario we are looking forward to the day when we can say—and mean it—that there is no discrimination, either racial or in any other form. In my opinion that represents a great opportunity for the people of this province in more ways than one. It is a great thing for the people of Ontario to be able to say: "We have removed every vestige of discrimination, and our people are equal from one end of the province to the other." But it should have far more importance and a far more significant application than that. When Ontario, as a great part of Canada, and Canada as a whole, is taking an increasingly large share of world responsibility. As our statesmen go to other countries of the world, seeking to lay the foundation for a better era and a better way of life, there will be no better argument they can use than the right to say that in Canada we have removed racial discrimination, that our people are equal no matter what race they come from or what creed they profess. I doubt if we could forge a better instrument for taking our real place in world leadership than being able to say that. This law is a further step in that direction.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, this Act, as has been said, is one step forward in doing away with racial discrimination in Ontario. The Statute has been long desired by our people, and I congratulate the hon. Prime Minister on introducing the Act. As the hon. Prime Minister himself pointed out, the discrimination sought to be overcome by this Act is discrimination in connection with the entering of public places such as theatres, picture houses, skating rinks and so on. But there are other places in which discrimination is equally rampant. I refer to housing projects and rental projects, where the owners refuse to permit people of different races to enter. I am sure the hon. Prime Minister will say we cannot interfere with the private rights of the owners of rental housing units and such places. But I think we can.

HON. MR. FROST: Might I point out to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) that orders have been given by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development (Mr. Warrender) to all public housing authorities in Ontario that there shall be no discrimination of any kind.

MR. GRUMMETT: Well, why not incorporate something in this Act to that effect? The orders given by the hon. Minister of Planning and Development would cover big housing developments, but it would not cover the ordinary renting of housing units. A man may, for example, own 2 or 3 houses. He then is in a position to discriminate between tenants, on the basis of race.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member will recognize the difficulty of dealing with that problem.

MR. GRUMMETT: I recognize it quite well, but I think the government should do something to limit it. As long as we have this feeling directed against people of different racial extraction, we are giving these people a feeling of inferiority. I would like to see the government go further than it has done, though I admit that this bill is a step forward. I congratulate the government on bringing it in. At the same time, I recognize what has been left out.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I welcome this legislation, but, in welcoming it, I must say I do so with mixed feeling. I would prefer that no such legislation was necessary. I would prefer that the relationship between all citizens of our province was such that no law was required to oblige them or to compel them to do what should be the natural and human thing to do. But, unfortunately, that is not quite the level of our attainment yet. That being the case, such legislation is necessary, and being necessary, its introduction is, of course, to be welcomed. I wish to join with those hon. members who have spoken until now in extending my appreciation to the government for the bill which is before us.

The hon. Prime Minister will remember, that only a few weeks ago I asked him to release one of his many followers in the House to second a bill of mine against discriminatory practices. The hon. Prime Minister sent me a note saying: "If it is a good bill, I would rather introduce it myself." And I am glad he has now introduced a bill himself.

You see, Mr. Speaker, the recent effort for anti-discrimination legislation, as far as I am aware, goes back to 1943 when I came into this House and when the Conservative Party took over the reins of government. It was my privilege to raise this question with Mr. Drew when he became Prime Minister. I repeat what I have said in the House many times, that he displayed a great deal of interest. As a result of my approach, we discussed the problem and, at his request, I provided him with a memorandum on the type of legislation I thought was necessary. I think it is to the credit of Mr. Drew that he did introduce the first anti-discrimination bill in the House.

Mr. Speaker, I am always ready to make this acknowledgement to him despite all the other differences and they are many and deep, which I have with the national leader of the Conservative Party.

On another occasion, I congratulated the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) who had the good fortune to introduce another bill which further narrowed down discriminatory practices. I told him he was fortunate to sponsor such a bill, and I think I am correct in saying it will stand to his credit for many, many years when other deeds of his have, perhaps, been forgotten.

The question always raised when requests for legislation against discrimination were made, was whether it was possible to legislate the behaviour of people. I want to say on this occasion that we should recognize that the vast majority of our people are sound, healthy, good people and their relationship with others is all that could be desired. It is unfortunate, however, that blind and unintelligent prejudice still exists in certain areas, and it is against such prejudices that we must have legislation. Let us take the most shocking experience of all, that of the Town of Dresden. There is no question about it that legislation is necessary for a community such as that, where a few people were able to drag a whole community into doing what is wrong and harmful. It is not the whole community which is at fault. It is a few people who have succeeded in creating an atmosphere intolerable, oppressive and uncondonable. I was in that town and I spoke to a number of people, including ministers of the church and members of the town council, and I know the majority did not want that situation to exist. But it takes courage to stand up and say so. I know of a minister of a church there who had to leave the town shortly after he had spoken up. In addition I know of a member of the council who had to give up his grocery business and move out of town because he spoke up in council against that situation.

It is against such conditions as this that we need this legislation.

There are other remnants of discrimination which we should remove from our midst. I am wondering whether we should enact legislation which would make it a condition for the granting of any licence that the holder of such a licence shall not engage in any type of discrimination against anyone regardless of race, colour or religion. I think such a requirement should be a condition of granting licence for taverns in every municipality and indeed for every type of business which caters to the public. I am hoping that this legislation may correct the situation which prevails at present. If it does not, then, I think, an additional amendment may be required in the near future to make sure that it does: just to make sure that any holder of a licence from any level of government will be obliged to use that licence on the basis of equality for all who may care to enter his establishment.

Mr. Speaker, I was shocked to find that only until quite recently in a larger town than Dresden, but close to it, there was an unwritten law that no Negro could live in the town, nor could he own a home. I was impressed by the fact that the local paper of that town wrote about it. It is a credit to that paper and undoubtedly a reflection of the majority opinion of the people of that town, that the paper disapproved of that unwritten law. That paper, in writing about the Dresden affair, said: "the citizens of this town should remember their own shortcomings," and I was happy to learn that a week ago, when the delegation, about which the hon. Prime Minister spoke, was here, and when I discussed the status of the Negro in that community, that the "unwritten law" has not been in force for the last 2 years. It is a good development, but it did exist.

I have in my mind an application for an automobile insurance policy, brought to me only a few days ago by a citizen, who asked, "how come this application asks the religion of the applicant?" I do not know what religious beliefs or affiliations have to do with buying automobile insurance, but that is what they are after.

Another citizen brought me a folder issued by an American operating a tourist business in our province who boldly points out that he has a restricted clientele, and describes the restrictions unashamedly. I want to say that some of the serious offenders and violators of our existing fair employment law are the large insurance companies.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant):
What are the restrictions?

MR. SALSBERG: "Gentiles only." I have had many young persons—most of them young girls just out of our commercial schools—who after applying for jobs, came to tell me that after filling out their application forms in an outer office, where no questions were asked as to nationality, race, colour or religion, which was in accordance with the law, then a member of the personnel department would come out and ask those questions verbally. In one instance, a young girl, who just graduated from our High School of Commerce, told me she told the gentleman "that is against the law," and the gentleman simply smiled, and cynically said, "that is why we do not have it on our application form, and why I am asking you verbally."

I mention these instances just to indicate what is still before us.

I want to say that when we enter a period of economic recession, the danger of demagogic racial agitation always arises. That was our experience everywhere, including this province. I recall some very unhappy experiences in the days of the big depression. What happens when there is no employment, and people are disturbed and worried is that always a certain reactionary, pro-fascist type, raise racial issues, and seek to antagonize one group of people against another.

HON. W. K. WARRENDER: They are mostly the Communists.

MR. SALSBERG: I think the hon. Minister does not know what he is talking about.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: I have heard it so many times in council, that I know what the hon. member is driving at.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister does not understand the difference between class difference and racial difference.

HON. MR. WARRENDER: Mr. Speaker, I think I know a great deal more about it than the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister has a great deal to learn, and I hope he learns it in time, for the good of his own people.

MR. SPEAKER: Order.

MR. SALSBERG: The legislation being introduced in this bill, is a revision of the 1944 Act, and becomes broadened out. I think it is more satisfactory than was the 1944 Act. However, it leaves a few questions in my mind which are unanswered.

First, whether the penalty clauses are sufficient for those who want to persist in discriminatory practices. This is most important.

The second question is whether you should not provide for the establishment of a commission—and on this point, I would like to have the attention, if I may, of the hon. Prime Minister and the hon. Attorney-General. I am wondering whether there should not be an addition to the bill to provide for the establishment of a commission against racial discrimination, and that commission should be charged with the task of carrying on public education against all forms and types of discrimination.

You see, Mr. Speaker, it is quite true, as some people may say, that laws alone will not do away with the evil about which we are speaking. I, for one, subscribe to that, because I think economic and social conditions breed discrimination. Unless we have a more sound economic system we will never do away with discrimination entirely. The law in itself, will not perform miracles. We do, however, need to go to the people and to point out the evil character and harm of discrimination of any type; in other words, a continuous education, utilizing our schools, our public forums, our press, round-table discussions, trade unions, business organizations, churches, and so on—yes, even political groups of all kinds—so that there may be a complete dissemination of the idea of equality for all people.

Mr. Speaker, in the United States, as the hon. Prime Minister undoubtedly knows, many States have anti-discrimination legislation, and some have such commissions. In the State of New York, for instance, they have a commission of 5 members, who are paid $10,000 a year each. They are full-time servants of the state, and their task is to carry on public education to eliminate all forms of discrimination.

I am not suggesting we establish that type of commission in Ontario. I am, however, suggesting to the hon. Prime Minister, who introduced this bill, that he add to the bill, a clause establishing in Ontario, an anti-discrimination commission, which should be appointed by the hon. Minister in charge of the enforcement of the Act. This commission to work gratis, that is, to receive no payment for its work. It should plan and carry on educational activities to eliminate discrimination as is done elsewhere on this continent.

I would go further, and say that this provincial commission should have local commissions under its jurisdiction, situated in the main industrial areas, commissions which the hon. Minister will set up. I think they will perform a very important function, because it is not the law alone: there are many other things, and education is one of them. In completing my remarks, Mr. Speaker, I do so by requesting the government to add to this section of the bill. If it should not be led to do so, I will remind it again when we reach the bill in committee stage. But whether it will agree to include that now, I hope it will see the wisdom of it at a later day. I appreciate, of course, the step forward this legislation takes, and welcome it, as I am sure it will be welcomed throughout the province, and I will, of course, vote for the bill wholeheartedly.

MR. R. JOHN YAREMKO (Bellwoods): Mr. Speaker, I count it a privilege to be able to stand in this House this afternoon, to unreservedly support the measure before the House. It is my opinion that the representatives of the people who have been in this Chamber on several occasions in the past years, when legislation of this kind was brought before the House, and put into Statute law, were very fortunate, indeed.

It is my belief, in regard to this measure, that we are putting into words, the will of the people. When, in the preamble to the bill, it states, "Whereas it is public policy in Ontario, that places to which the public is customarily admitted, be open to all, without regard to race, creed, colour, nationality, ancestry, or place of origin," that is, indeed, expressing the voice of the people, an expression growing out of the way of life which has been developed in this province, and this nation, that all citizens, men and women, shall have equal rights and equal responsibilities.

It is through the representatives in this Legislature, that the people arise with one accord, and speak in unison on behalf of the bill.

The only regret I have, Mr. Speaker, is that one who rises to support a measure such as this, is compelled, either by force of habit, or deliberate intent, in speaking of this non-discriminatory legislation to resort to smears. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) referred to some group, known perhaps to his mind alone, as "pro-fascist." I can think of no other purpose in using that phrase than to be speaking in a derogatory manner.

Mr. Speaker, this type of legislation on the Statute books of this province is an indication to the people of the belief of all representatives that all men and women have the same rights. I do not think it is conducive to the well-being of legislation of this type to have any labels whatsoever placed on any group in this province.

Mr. Speaker, that phrase alone, to my mind, mars what, to me, would have been otherwise a completely momentous occasion.

I think this bill is proper. I, too, do not subscribe to the sentiment that discrimination is something that can be legislated against, but it is an indication to the people as a whole, that the majority are in favour of anti-discrimination legislation.

I believe that it is through mutual understanding: through a realization of the fact that each one has his own way, and should be accepted, that these words which are now in the Statute, will become integrated into the life of each and every citizen throughout the province. I do not think we should be blind to instances which occur. Mr. Speaker, we should not be blind to any instance, no matter how slight, where any aspect of discrimination occurs. But I do not believe in such a militant aggressiveness which only adds heat, and, instead of bringing people together, divides them.

Mr. Speaker, as is well known, in this province, there have been the 2 great basic races. In the past 50 years, or more, there have been added, many races, in many thousands. I wonder if the hon. members of this House realize that within this Province of Ontario alone of a population of some 5 million, to the basic British and French stocks have been added others, totalling almost 1 million people. We have joined together to make this province what it is today, a province which it is admitted—perhaps in one case under some pressure—and agreed on by all hon. members of this House, the like of which there is no other in this world.

Mr. Speaker, ours is a province, one of 10. I believe the same feeling exists throughout the whole Dominion.

This matter of discrimination is one which all citizens throughout the province should look at from the personal viewpoint. Each of us, at some time during our life, has known a sense of loneliness, perhaps from passing through some strange town, or strange part of a large community. How lonely we are, if we are not accepted. And how happy we are, and how pleasant it is when we establish a contact, no matter how small it is, and we feel that we are a part of a community.

But, Mr. Speaker, think of the hurt and the loneliness of someone who belongs within a community as of right, but is not accepted in all aspects.

This legislation comes at a time, as has been referred to, when this Province of Ontario is attracting many, many peoples, and has attracted many within the past few years. Individually, as families, or as groups, they find themselves in a strange land, and not only under the difficult circumstances of a strangeness, but handicapped by an entirely different background, handicapped as far as language is concerned, unaccustomed to understand our routine way of life, and strangers in the spot in which they find themselves.

Mr. Speaker, think of the loneliness of such a person, when he is not accepted; think of the hurt when not only is he not accepted, but sometimes refused. But, Mr. Speaker, think of the happiness when that person or that group finds himself or itself accepted in all aspects.

Many whom I know intimately have, within this period, taken out Canadian citizenship. One in particular stands out in my mind; a man who, some 2 months ago, received his certificate of citizenship, which, to him was the most valuable document he could ever hope to attain. I mention him, Mr. Speaker, because it was a race between him and his unborn son as to who should attain Canadian citizenship first. How glad the father was that he on one day received by grant Canadian citizenship, and on the next day, his son, born 24 hours later, obtained citizenship by birth, father and son equal. Mr. Speaker, think of the happiness, the well-being of one who realizes that he has been accepted by the community at large.

This Assembly yesterday heard the eloquent words of our hon. Prime Minister in referring to a great Canadian of this province, a man who lived in this province more than 100 years ago, a man who stood by certain principles. Yet such is the nature of the development of our traditions that those principles for which he stood are handed down not only to that long line of his descendants, and to those of his contemporaries, but to everyone within this province.

In introducing this bill, the hon. Prime Minister gave a review of new principles, which this House has accepted, to determine the relationship of man to man within this province. Mr. Speaker, this is a tribute to all those who initiated and carried out these measures. I recall the hon. member for St. Patrick (Mr. Roberts') debate in reply to the speech from the Throne, brought this matter to the attention of the House very forcefully and very clearly. We owe a great deal to those of the delegation which attended upon the hon. Prime Minister, to bring to him in a concrete method the will of the people.

Mr. Speaker, it is to the greatest satisfaction of all of us here, regardless of Party, that the Leader of this Assembly, our hon. Prime Minister, is a man who, when presented with a fair and proper proposition, will accept that proposition, and act upon it. Mr. Speaker, I think that this day will prove to be a source of great satisfaction to you, in the years to come, that you presided over this House, and to all of us present as hon. members of this Legislature, that we sat here, putting a little more body to a great ideal.

MR. SALSBERG: May I make a correction? I am sorry the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) misunderstood my words. I was not desirous of snearing anyone, nor of creating disagreements on this question before the House, but I did refer to fascist groups, to whom racism and race discrimination is an essential tenet of their whole outlook. No one in this House likes, or approves of that. However, I must tell the hon. member that there are such organized groups in our country whose publications, unfortunately, carry on racist propaganda at this time, and it was to such groups I was referring. I am sure he was aware of it.

MR. YAREMKO: I know, Mr. Speaker, that you will not permit a debate, but in reply to the hon. member for St. Andrew, I expressed my belief to the hon. members of this House that if any one of the other 89 hon. members sitting in this House were to contest a riding against a member of the Labour-Progressive Party, the Party to which the hon. member belonged, in Ontario would be labelled as "fascist."

MR. SALSBERG: That is such utter rot and such utter nonsense.

MR. CHARLES E. JANES (Lambton East): Mr. Speaker, I only came into the Chamber, and I had no intention of taking part in the discussion on this bill, until I heard the slur thrown at one of the nicest towns in my riding by the hon. member for St. Andrew.

I would like to tell the House, I intend to support this bill, and I am quite sure, with the diplomatic hon. Minister of Labour in charge, there will be no difficulty. I am also quite sure the people in the Town of Dresden in my riding will fall behind this bill and support it, but I do want to say this: any trouble which we have had in Dresden, one of the finest towns in Ontario, has been caused and agitated by someone like the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): That is true. I happen to know.

MR. JANES: I have had many letters sent to me on this question, and they were all sent from Detroit. They were the people who were causing the trouble. There are two restaurants in Dresden which refused to serve coloured people, but I know they will fall behind this. There was no barber shop into which they could enter, but that is because these agitators have been coming in and causing trouble. I have had letters from Detroit telling me what they were going to do. They came to me and said they were going to organize gangs to smash windows in restaurants, and I advised them to go back to Detroit.

I know the hon. member for St. Andrew went up there and caused dissension and trouble. It is not being caused by the coloured people in Dresden, because they are the finest people in the world. They are lovely people. I could take the hon. members any time, and show them Boy Scouts and Girl Guides working together. I have seen them many times when they were all serving at tables, and there is no happier group anywhere.

I could take you into the schools and into the streets where they play together, and show you the older people visiting in the streets, as happy as can be.

I have no hesitation in saying that none of this trouble is caused by the coloured people of Dresden. I agree with them there should be no discrimination. We have Uncle Tom's grave there, and the people of Dresden are proud of it. We have a number of the best farmers up there, who are coloured, and we are very proud of them. I want to make it clear to the House I will stand for no slurs on the people of Dresden.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, this was a reflection on me, and I must have an opportunity of replying to it. The reflection was I went to Dresden—

MR. SPEAKER: I will not give the hon. member the floor, I do not think I should, because he has already spoken, and taken a great deal of the time. I gave him a great deal of leeway, and much of what he said, I am afraid, was irrelevant. I thought for the sake of the House, we would save time in committee if I allowed him to speak at this time.

MR. SALSBERG: On a point of order—

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry, I have the floor.

MR. SALSBERG: May I rise on a point of order?

MR. SPEAKER: After I am through speaking, a point of order may be raised. I think I have been very generous. The hon. member intimated if this was not carried through on second reading, it would be repeated again in committee, and I will have no control over that, but I think I have been very fair, and the House has been very tolerant, and listened to a very long speech, much of which, I am afraid, was quite irrelevant, as only part of the speech dealt with the bill. I think we have had enough discussion, and I think I have been very generous with the hon. member.

MR. SALSBERG: On a point of order, the hon. member who just spoke (Mr. Janes) stated that I, having gone to Dresden, was responsible in some way for the discrimination trouble in that town.

I want to refute that, sir. It is a reflection on my character in saying that I, in any way, was involved in causing the difficulty.

I went to Dresden in 1949, after every newspaper in the country had written about it for weeks. I addressed no meetings. The Labour Progressive Party has no organization in Dresden, and I knew no one in Dresden, but went to see the mayor, and discussed it with him. I discussed it also with several ministers of the church privately, and with the editor of the paper, and then left the town.

For the hon. member to come here and charge me with responsibility for what happened in Dresden is most unfair and I know the hon. member in question does not want to be unfair.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE MUNICIPAL AMENDMENT ACT

HON. MR. DUNBAR moves second reading of Bill 140, "An Act to amend the Municipal Amendment Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

He said: In recent years with the rapid development surrounding urban areas there have been more and more cases of urban municipalities annexing substantial areas of the surrounding rural municipalities which have become largely urbanized.

Where the annexation is to a municipality that forms part of a county for municipal purposes, the annexation does not affect county revenues and the loss of assessment is confined to the township from which the area is detached.

This may, where the annexation carries with it a large amount of industrial assessment, very seriously affect the financial position of the township. This has been made very apparent in the cases of the recent Hamilton and London annexations which have been before the Private Bills Committee at the present session of the Legislature.

In addition, where the annexation is to a city or a separated town, the financial position of the county in which the township from which the area is detached is situated, may be very seriously affected.

The Municipal Board until now, has had no power to make any provision to compensate the local municipality and the county in such cases.

Under the amendment to The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953, which was incorporated in Bill No. 120, one phase of this problem has been dealt with in that the township is given for a period of 5 years after annexations ordered on or after December 31st, 1953, the per capita grant based on the population of the annexed area that it would have received had the annexation not taken place. Where the per capita grant to the annexing municipality exceeds the per capita grant payable to the township, the annexing municipality receives the difference between the 2 per capita grants for the period of 5 years.

This provides a solution to one part of the problem but does not assist the county.

Under the amendments to The Municipal Act proposed in this bill, provision is made for an agreement between the annexed and annexing municipality or between the annexing municipality and the county, under which the annexing municipality will pay compensating grants to the annexed municipality or county where a loss of assessment of 15 per cent. or more is shown. Any such agreement may be approved by the Municipal Board, or if no agreement is reached the Municipal Board will have authority to order such payments.

The provision in relation to the county is made applicable not only to annexations but also to amalgamations, as an amalgamation of a municipality forming part of the county with a city or separated town will result in the loss of assessment to the county.

These provisions are carried out in subsection 1 of section 1 of this bill.

The other phases of this bill relate to the objections to a decision of the Municipal Board granting an annexation or amalgamation. Under subsections 14 to 16 of Bill No. 56 the present procedure under The Municipal Act was continued. Under this procedure, if a notice of objection signed by 10 per cent. of the resident ratepayers in the annexing municipality or in the annexed area was filed with the Municipal Board within 28 days, the order of the board was suspended and was not to come into force until the objection was withdrawn or until the order was confirmed by a special Act.

This procedure resulted in applications to the Legislature for private Acts confirming the orders of the Municipal Board, with the result the Private Bills Committee of the Legislature was, in effect, sitting in appeal from the decision of the Municipal Board.

The defects of this system have become more apparent in recent years due to the number of annexations involving a substantial area. The time at the disposal of the Private Bills Committee during a session does not permit of a thorough and complete hearing of all the evidence relating to the annexation or amalgamation with the result that the government feels that the present procedure does not produce a result which is essentially fair to all parties concerned. This is not a reflection upon the operations of the Private Bills Committee in any way. The point is that it is utterly impossible for the committee to reach a finding when it does not have the opportunity or the time to hear and consider all the relevant evidence.

Under the provisions of this bill the former provisions are repealed and new provisions substituted. Under the new procedure, where the Municipal Board makes a decision in favour of an application for annexation or amalgamation, the Municipal Board will be required to make its decision in writing, identify the area to be annexed, and affix the date of the proposed annexation or amalgamation. Copies of the decision shall then be sent to the clerks of every municipality concerned, including the county, and to such other persons as the Municipal Board may direct.

An opportunity is then provided under which a notice of objection signed by 10 per cent. of the resident ratepayers of the applicant municipality or of the annexed area may be filed with the Clerk of the Executive Council. Upon the receipt of the objection the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may follow either one of two courses, namely, either to confirm the order of the Municipal Board or to direct the Municipal Board to hold a re-hearing.

Before arriving at its decision the government will investigate the matter in such way as it deems advisable. This may involve an investigation by the government itself or the appointment of qualified persons to investigate and advise the government. Having determined whether the order of the board should be confirmed or whether there should be a re-hearing the government will then make the necessary order.

If the order is confirmed by the government the decision of the board shall be final and no appeal may be taken against that decision except that any right of appeal conferred in respect to a matter of law may still be exercised.

If the government determines that a complete new hearing should be held by the Municipal Board it will designate the members of the board before whom the new hearing shall be held. It is the intention that not less than 3 members of the board shall sit on the new hearing and for the most part it may be found desirable that the new hearing be held before members of the board other than those who held the first hearing. On the other hand, it may be highly desirable that part of the membership of the board at the new hearing should consist of persons who had heard the original application.

Where a new hearing has been ordered, the decision of the board on that hearing is made final and is subject only to the normal rights of appeal on a question of law.

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

Resuming adjourned consideration of the Report of the Select Committee on Indian Affairs.

REPORT ON INDIAN AFFAIRS

MR. R. ROBSON (Hastings East):
Mr. Speaker, I want to say how much

I enjoyed serving on this committee under the very able chairmanship of the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Hon. Mr. Goodfellow). I think that when we went out to investigate the way the Indians live, we learned much from them. I was much interested the other day, in listening to the speech of the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett). I have in my own riding one of the more advanced bands of Indians. They were greatly interested in the committee which investigated their conditions, and I feel that we have done a lot of good. Both the Indians and ourselves have benefitted by this exchange of experience. So the day on which the report was presented to the House, it was my privilege to entertain some friends of our Indian band in the House, and they went back to the reserves feeling happy about what had happened.

With regard to the sale of intoxicants, we found, as has been stated before, that some of the Indians were much against having intoxicants on the reserve. That is to be expected, because in every hon. member's municipality we find the same opinion expressed. So it is natural to find it also on the Indian reservations. I feel that when we give the Indians the right to go into beverage rooms, we are only extending to them a privilege which should belong to them. The majority of the bands are going to appreciate that privilege, and feel, as a consequence, that they are not being discriminated against.

During our trip we had the opportunity of observing the educational system at work among the Indians. I was rather astonished at the schools. Many of them were thoroughly modern, though, it must be admitted, others were not so modern. I think the Federal Government has been responsible for some great advances in the last 4 or 5 years in the field of Indian education, and, I believe, if the Indians are given the same privileges in education that we are given, great things can be expected in the future. It is possible we may bring them along to our own way of thinking and living.

Mr. Speaker, I wish to say once more what a privilege and pleasure it was to serve on the committee under so affable a chairman.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I was not a member of the Select Committee, and I do not come from a riding in which there are many Indian citizens, but I think that this is a general problem and I would like to make a few comments.

I want to say the report and the recommendations represent a step forward, and to that extent they are to be welcomed. I would state frankly that, in my opinion, this report and its recommendations constitute some measure of atonement for the sins which were committed a long time ago against the Indian population. I would further state there is much more to be done if we are to atone fully for the offences of the past.

The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) who spoke most eloquently on every occasion about Indian affairs, drew the attention of the House to outstanding Indian leaders as illustrations of the contribution which Indians have made to Canada's well-being. He mentioned Pauline Johnson. It so happened that I read about Pauline Johnson only last week in a good article in the Canadian Tribune. I would like to say, having had my mind refreshed somewhat about the life of this great woman, that while she was undoubtedly a gifted poet and one of the ablest writers in this country it was primarily as an Indian that she wished herself to be known. She said herself she wished to be regarded as a singer of her own people. And I think that, at this time, in memory of this great Indian woman and poet, it should be stated that her poems dealt with the problems of her people. One of them is known as "The Cattle Thief." It is not unfitting that a few lines from it should be read on this occasion:

You have cursed and called him a Cattle Thief, though you robbed him first of bread—

Robbed him and robbed my people—look there, at that shrunken face.
Starved with a hollow hunger, we owe to you and your race.

What have you brought but evil, and curses since you came,

How have you paid us for our game,
how paid us for our land?

In that poem there are more lines which I had better not read because they would certainly not add to anyone's happiness in this House. There is another poem called "A Cry from an Indian Wife" which should be read now when we are dealing with the question of the Indians. I will read only a couple of stanzas:

They but forgot we Indians owned the land

From ocean unto ocean; that they stand

Upon a soil that centuries agone

Was our safe kingdom and our right alone.

They never think how they would feel today,

If some great nation came from far away,

Wresting their country from their hapless braves.

Giving what they gave us—but wars and graves.

Mr. Speaker, I read those few extracts from Pauline Johnson's poems in order that hon. members might recognize that the Indian population still feel very deeply about the wrongs committed against them. I would say, therefore, that we should try, all of us, to free ourselves of any feeling of superiority towards these people. As Pauline Johnson said, they were the noblest of people to be found on earth. They were a kindly, friendly people and I do not think we should have any air of superiority toward them. I certainly do not think we should approach this problem with anything which resembles condescension.

I therefore suggest to the government that it should not consider this report, and the recommendations which are before them, as the completion of the task, but, in justice to the Indians, it should convene an assembly of democratically elected representatives of every Indian community in the province, and present the report to them and ask them to express their opinions on it and to make recommendations about all the matters contained in it which affect their well being.

I would hate to think, Mr. Speaker, that any Indian should feel that we were handing down something to him, granting some rights or withholding other rights. I believe that in the spirit of justice and equality we should let them make all final decisions about what they think should be done for their section of the population, and not leave this whole matter with the government and trust that it should act favourably towards them. I think such a move as I have suggested would be welcomed by the Indian population. I assure hon. members that it would be the right way to bring about the equality of which so many of them have spoken. It is impossible to bring about equality if you deny the right to participate in the formulation of policy and laws to those people whose rights are being established.

MR. J. A. PRINGLE (Addington) : Mr. Speaker, I did not know this afternoon that we were going to have a debate on Indian affairs. However, I wish to express my appreciation for having had the opportunity to serve on this committee. It was a great honour to have been able to visit these people, who were the first citizens of this land in which we are so proud to live. I should like to thank the hon. Minister of Public Welfare (Hon. Mr. Goodfellow) who was the chairman of our committee, who expressed the feelings of every member of that committee in the remarks which he made to this House. After he finished, I thought it quite unnecessary that we should make any comment on the report at all, because he had so thoroughly and faithfully carried out the duties which the hon. Prime Minister had placed upon him.

After a good deal of travelling about this province, we reached that great County of Hastings where the Tyendannaga reserve is situated. Up till then I had felt pretty good because the chairman, and myself, and all the other members of the committee could easily be distinguished from the Indians we were supposed to interview. But, after arriving at Tyendannaga reserve, all that was changed. I did not see an Indian there who could be readily distinguished as such. They were just white people, and it surprised me that those people, whom one could not distinguish from other Canadians, were still living on a reserve and demanding that $4 or $5 a year, for the one and only purpose of avoiding land tax. The Indian is entitled to everything we give him, but I do believe that the purpose of this committee and the purpose in the mind of the Federal Government, is to bring these people to realize that they have a responsibility as Canadian citizens. That day will come, though it may be a long way ahead. But I think, by proper education and proper environment, the time will come when they will take their place in society and assume their responsibility as Canadians. I have a feeling that there are a few things we could do to help in this direction.

We are deciding to give them the franchise. It is a word they do not really understand. So we simply have to say that we are going to give them the vote. For the most part, they are happy about that. There are, of course, some bands who feel they would not exercise that right to vote if they had it and I have a feeling that they will not exercise it for some years. But the Indians are not so slow as some people think they are. They are very intelligent people.

It made me feel proud when I saw so many schools, so many well kept churches, that we really were doing something for them. I want to say this in favour of the Federal Government: that it is taking great interest in the welfare of the Indians today. The schools were, in general, well equipped. In fact, in one respect I thought they were over-equipped, inasmuch as there was a predominance of pictures of our good friend down in Ottawa, the hon.

Walter Harris, rather than pictures of the Prime Minister of Canada or of Her Majesty our gracious Queen.

MR. SALSBERG: Was he framed or unframed?

MR. PRINGLE: Very well framed.

I did note, however, that there was a shortage of maps in those schools, a shortage of things which are more essential than some of these pictures. I know hon. members must be rather tired of listening to speeches about the Indians, but this was a great thing for me in my riding. In the two counties of Addington and Frontenac we have communities of "Indians," as hon. members know. We did not need to tell our "Indians" that they have the right to vote. They all vote. Nor do they need to be concerned about the right to go into beverage rooms. They go into beverage rooms already, where beverage rooms exist.

The Indians will take their places if given the opportunity. In Cornwall, on the reserve there, over 40 pupils are going into Cornwall daily to the Collegiate. Over 10 per cent. of the employees in the Indian Affairs Branch at Ottawa are Indians, which I think is a good thing. As fast as the branch can educate them, they are endeavouring to take them into the Indian Affairs Branch. This, to my mind, is a fine thing, indeed.

I want to congratulate Mr. Morris, and others of the original Indian Affairs Committee, who gave us every co-operation possible. In all, I do not know who will learn the most, the Indians or the committee which visited them. It was really enlightening to us to see these fine fairs on the Six-Nation Reserve and going about, and observing the conditions under which the Indians live.

It is unfortunate they do not do much in the way of farming. It is too bad to see some of the finest land in this province, simply growing weeds, unless they rent it to non-Indians, as they frequently do. When that occurs, from this land has come some of the finest crops in the province. I believe it is simply a matter of education for the Indians. There is no coercion to have them vote; they simply go and vote, and if they want to go to a beverage room, they do that. If they do not want to vote they do not have to.

But they all wanted the committee to recommend to the Federal Government that they be allowed to take "packaged goods" into the reserves. I have nothing to say about that, because it is a federal matter, but I do feel that, the Federal Government in their wisdom, should permit the carriage of packaged liquor goods by the Indians, same as the white people. I see the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) smiling, but may I say that we did not see a drunken Indian on our whole trip.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): How about the Indians? Did they see any of the committee that way?

MR. PRINGLE: No comments, sir. I will not become embroiled in any argument with the hon. member for Oxford (Mr. Dent).

I can assure you that every member of the committee tried to do the job for which they were appointed, and, through the untiring efforts of our chairman, we feel that we did a good job and performed our duties to the best of our ability.

MR. SPEAKER: There being no further speeches on the Report of the Committee on Indian Affairs, I declare the discussion ended.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. S. F. LEAVINE (Waterloo North): Mr. Speaker: In proceeding in the Budget Debate, and the bills related thereto, so much of the work of this session has been so acceptable to me, a stanza from Edgar A. Guest will summarize my attitude:

So little time on earth to stay,
So little time allowed to play,
It seems too bad fault-finding should Destroy the splendour of the good.

I would briefly comment on a few items included, and some not included, in which I am particularly interested.

The grants for active hospital beds in use as of December 31st, 1953, the increased statutory payment for indigent patients, and the increase to $2,000 per bed for charitable institutions, are all commendable. It might be well to review some not-too-well recognized factors, as to why such a move is imperative.

It is granted that a rapid growth in population and marked increase in the scope of medical treatment, as well as an older age group and increased hospitalization plans would make pressure upon existing institutions great, indeed, and call for expansion and rehabilitation. To this must be added a change in our social customs. Much medical work could still be carried on in the home, but the cost of housing, both as to capital cost and maintenance, is so high that actually, in most homes, there is no space for adequate care of the sick. This naturally carries over into the older age group.

In other days the parents would reserve a couple of rooms in their home and turn the remainder of the house over to one of their children. Here, in old and familiar surroundings, they were part of the family, kept themselves occupied with many duties such as gardening, and rounded out a long, happy and useful life. Now, because of shortage of space, they, too, often find their way into an institution. There is a great opportunity for churches, lodges and clubs to get into this field of endeavour.

The statutory payments for indigents may not meet the cost of operating a hospital, but I do not think that it is ever desirable to write a blank cheque. There must be some economic leverage to procure efficiency. In my many years of working in hospitals, I know that it has always been a difficult task to obtain a uniform accounting system. Happily, this is not as true as formerly, and the Department of Health and the hospital associations are to be commended for their work in this regard.

I doubt as to whether we will ever know the whole story of operating a hospital, until some organization, be it government or not, embark deliberately on the construction and operation of a hospital. And a first to be recognized is that such is not just another business. There are services that cannot be bought with money, and it is this spirit that must be captured in the operation of any hospital or charitable institution.

The grants to our universities or schools of higher learning meet with my whole-hearted approval. As one who actively participated in soliciting contributions to my alma mater, and now again as a contributor to the centennial of Queen's medical school, I am surprised at the difficulty in collecting funds. In the main, I would attribute the defect to two facts. Firstly, our income taxes limit the amount that is reputedly tax exempt, to 10 per cent. of one's income, and this is not enough. Secondly, the subtraction takes place at the wrong end of the book-keeping. You subtract it from your income and then compute your tax. If you computed your tax without subtractions, and then deducted your charitable exemptions from the tax payable, it would make a great difference, and stimulate charitable giving again. Also, there is a widespread belief in many communities that the proper way to raise money is as a tax levy. Frankly, I am adverse to giving twice and still believe that the idea expressed the other day by the Deputy Minister of Municipal Affairs that ability to pay is the correct practice.

The programme the hon. Minister of Public Welfare first announced on February 22nd, 1954, on rehabilitation work is impressive and laudable. The fact that the initial study is to include the Counties of Wellington, Peel, Halton and my own County of Waterloo seems reasonable. These counties will provide material in the four departments, namely: Health, Welfare, Education and Labour. From my own experience, I know the complexity of the problem and know a number of cases falling under the jurisdiction of each department. This is a work about which I can be most enthusiastic. I know full well that with reasonable effort it is bound to succeed, and the dividends in happiness and productivity will exceed the most optimistic expectations of the sponsors. A happy vocation is much more important than a pension, no matter how laudable the last may be. I speak with some personal knowledge on the subject, for my paternal grandfather was blind and deaf at an early age, and was known as "Blind Joe" in the counties of Leeds and Frontenac. He made a meagre living and was happy until a ripe old age. Might I state that chronological age is no valid base for retirement.

I will mention a subject that involves the spending of some money but is of vast importance in my own riding. I refer to the advertising of the movie theatres. The Kitchener-Waterloo Record is a family paper and an excellent one. They are perturbed by the tendency of taking their directives from the Toronto office of theatres. While I am not a theatre-goer, I must admit I wholeheartedly subscribe to the move to clean up the pernicious advertising. I hope that the assurance that the following announcement be made in a special column of the Telegram, "Ontario movie censor O. J. Silverthorne has ordered stricter application of theatre and exchange advertising regulations will be strictly enforced." I consider the whole practice is likely to be the death blow to a sick business, and one which under ordinary circumstances is capable of immense good.

Asking for some latitude, Mr. Speaker, I propose to deal with a subject of great interest in my riding, namely the check-off. I am told the first check-off in Canada was in Nova Scotia, and it was for church dues, sponsored by the Presbyterian and Catholic Churches of Cape Breton. I think we will admit that was a very commendable procedure. On returning to Toronto, after obtaining that information, I enlisted the help of a particularly efficient civil servant to get me the Statutes of Nova Scotia for the year 1900. It is a most interesting volume but I did not find a clue to the check-off. The same civil servant suggested the national headquarters of one of our better known churches and find out what they knew. This appears to be the fact in Springhill, Nova Scotia, there is a practice that the mines do collect church dues not only for the Presbyterians and Roman Catholics but thankfully also for the Anglicans and Baptists. I suppose it was only an omission that the United Church was not mentioned.

Certainly the motive was of the best. I find the great and indispensable farming industry asking for what amounts to a check-off. It is a worthy cause, and I am prepared to support it, if a majority of those concerned favour it. Labour in my own riding is worthy, and they are not among those who were so obnoxious to the Prime Minister and the Minister of Labour. I can see nothing particularly wrong with the idea. I admit management believe it is a matter for negotiations; they are entitled to their opinion. In our local Federated Charities drive deductions are made by employers, and it would seem only just that a worker could make an assignment of dues for a specific purpose. While I am not committed on this subject, I have expressed myself as not being adverse, provided it was not to mean a vote to defeat a good government. I would rather think that management would have less objection if the unions were corporate bodies, and frankly, I think as organizations grow in stature both as to numbers and influence, there should be no great objection to incorporation.

I would like to mention something which has been under discussion briefly in regard to the Health Estimates, having to do with the expenditure of some $285,000 for pre-natal examination.

Obviously I am not speaking on behalf of the government, I am speaking as one who practices medicine, even if though this particular phase of my activities is somewhat on the decline.

I may say it is my impression—and is confirmed by my colleagues—there has been no definite stage at which patients appear for examination.

I rather suspect that a great campaign has borne fruit, a campaign which has gone on for a period of 10 or 15 years, to get the patients to the physicians earlier. Therefore, in my experience, as I see it, I see no great difference, but my colleagues tell me it is very definitely improved, and they point out that so great is it, that sometimes you even see the patients in the doubtful stages.

There is a general agreement, I think, amongst all the people with whom I have spoken that a great section of this particular service—which is not, over all, perhaps too great in importance, but for whom we are desirous of seeing that they get the best possible service—and that is, the unmarried mothers. They certainly come in for examination and treatment at an earlier age, and I think that arrangement is all too the good.

It is pointed out to me also, that there is still in the practice of medicine some 5 per cent. or 10 per cent. of maternity patients who are not in a position to pay, and the only fee collectable, is the $5, which is the total sum received for the service. I am not saying whether that should or should not be so. As to whether they receive credit for the $5 the province has paid, if you mean a receipt showing that the $5 has been paid by the province, I would say, "No". I would say that practically all of them receive, for this $5, the physical examination, and the cost of the Rh factor on blood, or directly in estimation of the final fee, and the total bill at the end takes into the consideration the $5 which has been paid. So, while it makes no difference to me as to what the government does, or does not do, in this regard, I would say that up to date, they perhaps have received fair value for the service, and I would think that the physician himself, and ultimately the Department of Health will be able to utilize the results of these examinations for very worth-while statistical information.

Personally, in that regard, I would say that I am very certain about this, that the toxemia which arises from their condition, can be recognized at a much earlier stage.

THOMAS PRYDE (Huron): Mr. Speaker, before commencing my remarks with respect to the budget, permit me to express my deep regret at the passing of 3 of our colleagues during this session of the Legislature. Surely this is unprecedented and I want, publicly to extend my sincere sympathy to their families in their bereavement.

I regret particularly the death of one who has been my seat mate during the life of this 24th Legislature, Mr. Gordon MacOdrum. We have lost an able member and this House and his own constituency in particular are the poorer because of his untimely death.

I would like to speak for a few moments about Provincial Revenue, as it has been laid before us in the budget recently presented to the House.

We have heard, both within this House and in the public press and otherwise observations such as this—"All the money you get comes out of the pockets of the people." That is a truism. It does, but it does not come in equal amount from everybody.

I want to analyze the source of revenue, not as a financial expert, or in detail, but in a general way. There are 5 major sources of revenue, and a number of minor ones:

Tax Rental Agreement, $123 million.

Gasoline and Motor Vehicle Licences, $103 million.

Succession Duties, $20 million.

Lands and Forests, and Mining, $20 million.

Liquor Control Board, $45 million.

I haven't heard anyone say that we should go to Ottawa and make an agreement which would give Ontario a lesser amount.

GASOLINE TAX

There has been no criticism lately—that will be reserved until election time—of the amount of the gasoline tax. All and more of this money is being spent on roads. It is surely fair to ask those who use them to pay for them and in the main nobody objects so long as the tax is used for road improvement. If you don't drive a car you don't pay this tax.

LANDS AND FORESTS

In its wisdom the government has a policy with respect of Lands and Forests which gives us a revenue of $16 million, plus $4 million for licences, leases, etc. Presumably, another government might change this policy, but the general public directly or indirectly pays very little of this tax.

LIQUOR CONTROL BOARD

Considerable revenue is obtained from this source, but what is the alternative? Would it be the right thing to reduce the price of this commodity, so that the government would collect less revenue? I don't think so. Thousands pay nothing directly, because they don't use the goods sold by the Liquor Control Board. We don't have to contribute to provincial revenue in this way if we choose not to.

SUCCESSION DUTIES

About $20 million is collected from estates of persons who have died.

It might be of interest to know that 85 per cent. of the estates of people who died in Ontario last year paid no tax. Of the $20 million collected, half of it was paid by 2 per cent. of these estates which were taxable—a very few paid this tax.

What I want to point out is the fact that such a large percentage of the revenue of the province is not paid by the average citizen.

Most people think of their taxes as the municipal tax and income tax which are paid directly. Ontario does not impose an income tax. The municipal taxes one paid last year would have been 45 per cent. higher if there had been no grants from the Ontario Government.

EXPENDITURES

In the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture there appears an item of $100,000 for Junior Farmer extension. That is money well spent and I want to mention one activity which is assisted in this way—I refer to the 4-H Club work.

This is a Junior Farmer boys' and girls' work. There are 1,700 clubs in the province with an enrolment in excess of 19,000. Its objectives are to make farm life more attractive and influence farm people to adopt improved practices.

The principles of 4-H Club work is "learn by doing." Each member is responsible for a project—such as calf clubs, swine clubs, poultry, grain, tractor maintenance, etc. The girls' special interests are nutrition clubs, clothing, home furnishing, garden club—names indicate their nature.

These clubs are of immense value and are providing the leadership which is so essential in a country growing as we are at the present time, and so many New Canadians coming amongst us.

In Huron County, 4-H Clubs are being organized in every township and I am pleased to do what I can to assist them.

Last December on the annual "Achievement Night" which is a sort of a graduation ceremony, over 1,000 young people, together with their parents, were present on that occasion to receive the trophies and other awards won throughout the year. This was a most inspiring event and brought great credit to all connected with its preparation.

The organization of this work is in the hands of the agricultural representatives, and entails a tremendous amount of work. In Huron, both the representative and his assistant are out almost every night of the week. These men together with other older men act as club leaders.

The county home economist in charge of girls' work is equally faithful in the discharge of her duties. These people are performing a splendid service to the agricultural community and, if like the armed forces, medals were awarded, it could be said of them they perform a service far beyond the call of duty.

You may be interested to know that the emblem of these clubs is a 4-leaf clover with the letter "H" in each leaf and the motto is: "Head, Heart, Hands, and Health."

HIGHWAY SAFETY

A brief reference to this, as so much has been said on this subject, heretofore.

Education and strict enforcement of the law are two factors which will have some effect.

The Minister of Highways said, when presenting his Estimates, that it was hard to understand why a person could be such a gentleman in the living room and such a "cad" when driving a car—that is the point one can't explain and I would apply a much stronger word than "cad" if parliamentary rules would permit, to describe the conduct of some drivers.

Some $210,000 is included in the Estimates under the heading of "Safety Publicity" and I think a splendid job is being done to educate the driving public. However, all of us have a responsibility and the kit left on our desks a short time ago, with suggestions for use when we are called upon to speak in public, should be widely used.

"The constant drop of water wears the hardest stone" is an old proverb and it is still true.

It is said that a complete examination of all drivers is impossible, but I have a suggestion to make which I think is practical. Why not have examination centres established throughout the province where a medical check can be made, eyes tested, car tested for mechanical defects and competent examiners on hand to test your driving ability? The OPP could make "spot checks" at any time and require the driver to report to one of these centres for examination. It could be done courteously and with every effort being made to accommodate the person who has been stopped.

I fully believe a plan of this kind is practical and would have a salutary effect. The penalty for failure to report for examination as arranged would result in cancellation of driving privileges.

I have motored from coast to coast and I can truthfully say, that in my opinion, nowhere are highways better marked and with repeated warnings of intersections ahead, curves and other hazards. I think of one main intersection near my home where there are 7 warning signs within 1,000 feet. Yet more than one fatal accident has occurred at that point.

Special mention must be made of the local paper in my home town of Exeter in its conduct of a safety campaign.

It won both the national and provincial trophies for the promotion of highway safety sponsored by an insurance federation.

By editorials, pictures and other articles it carried on an endless campaign for months.

In a check with the local OPP I found there was a 20 per cent reduction in the number of accidents reported in the area, in the course of the year.

In addition to this safety campaign, the local OPP had increased its patrol services.

My conclusion is this, that education plus strict enforcement will have some effect on the number of accidents on the highways.

Coming from a rural community, we are quite concerned with the concentration of industry along the 60 or 70 mile strip centered on Toronto and bordering Lake Ontario. We want to have something done to spread this activity over a greater area which we believe will result in benefit to all.

The various municipalities have organized an Industrial Advisory Board on a county-wide basis and I may say, townships as well as towns and villages are co-operating. Their duties will consist of co-relating all information as to the county labour pool—existing industries, housing situation, natural advantages and all other information required by industrial prospects. It will publicize the whole county, but it will remain for individual councils or boards of trade to sell their own individual community.

I want to pay tribute to the Industrial Promotions Branch of the Department of Planning and Development for the assistance and guidance given in the creation of this county board. The County Plan is a new idea and is a real example of co-operative effort. Obviously smaller towns cannot do much in this field on their own, but co-operatively, as a county they can do much. "In union there is strength." Light industry would find a plentiful supply of contented labour, ideal living conditions, no traffic problems, a few minutes from home to work and vice-versa, new modern schools second to none, churches of all denominations and all the amenities of city life. Nearly every town has artificial ice rinks for winter sports. Nearby are lakeside resorts for summer living and I might add, we expect pretty soon to have that last natural lakefront summer playground developed for the enjoyment of all the people. I refer to what is known as the Pinery stretching along the shore of Lake Huron south from Grand Bend for about 10 miles.

We anticipate definite action to acquire this in the near future, through the provisions of the Parks Act introduced here this session.

In conclusion may I say that the budget of 1954 is outstanding in this respect:

There are no new taxes—petty nuisance taxes are avoided such as are in existence in many other jurisdictions.

As I pointed out we have 5 major sources of revenue, a great proportion of which does not affect the average citizen.

On the other hand, the use to which it is put is a sincere attempt to lighten the burden of all the people in obtaining those services which must come from the state.

Particularly do I like the term used by the Prime Minister, "Human Betterment."

To this end he has earmarked approximately $150 million for the advancement of the causes of Education, Health and Public Welfare.

This is surely a foundation on which to build a strong Ontario—the aim and purpose of this government.

MR. C. H. LYONS (Sault Ste. Marie): Mr. Speaker, each day that I sit in this Legislature I am rewarded by being able to study the diligence and constancy that you apply to the task of performing your duties as Speaker.

And it does require diligence and constancy, to repeat, day after day, what might be considered routine matters, such as the prayers you pronounce each day, and still have them appear as though they are a brand new text, each time that you are ushered into this House—and that you are pronouncing them to a brand new audience each time.

I am certain that all those within sound of my voice, hope that you will be spared for many years in order to continue your important work.

From the Great Lakes to the farthest limits of our northern hinterland, from Quebec to the Manitoba border, this empire known as Ontario is on the march—developing its tremendous resources, harnessing its incalculable power, fashioning a story of progress more exciting than any other spot on the globe today. Across the land we are marching ahead, hand in hand, to the rhythm of the motor, the drill, the hammer and the machine.

Vast iron ore deposits, vital uranium, new prospecting potentials all around us, more precious metals, mountain moving developments, new factories and industries pointing hundreds of new tall chimneys to the skies in the north, the south, the east and the west, the whirling wheels and clattering hammers of industry; all these things sing the song of this great province.

Last year personal income in Ontario reached the colossal figure of $7.1 billion, an increase of 305 per cent. over the year 1939. Today Ontario's personal income is approximately 40 per cent. of that of the entire Dominion of Canada. It is estimated that every man, woman and child in the province in 1953 received the equivalent of $1,460.

Combined private and public investment in Ontario last year reached $2 1/10 billion. This type of investment in Ontario is now 38 per cent. of the Dominion's total. Of this, $2 1/10 billion, only $403 million is to be attributed to institutional services and direct government spending, while primary industry and the construction industry accounted for $198.3 million, manufacturing accounted for $457.2 million, utilities $454.8 million, trade, finance and commercial services $182.7 million, and residential housing $358.5 million.

Under the impact of this dynamic expansion, the hon. Provincial Treasurer finds himself obliged to cope with increased expenditures all along the line. The total bill for education will rise to $79.6 million this year—an increase of $7 million. Likewise, the expanded programme of health services will increase $2.4 million over last year to a total of $48.3 million, and public welfare will command an expenditure of $26.8 million. In the Highways Department the proposed capital expenditure for 1954-1955 is $65 million. Maintenance and administration expenses will require an additional $40,763,000, while the Municipal Roads Branch will require $18,584,000—making the total Highways expenditure $124,347,000 before allocating the $21½ million in the Highway Reserve Account.

To municipalities, under a revised grant system, and to local school boards and associated agencies, there will be paid in the current fiscal year an estimated $134 million. A large part of this huge assistance is a straight endeavour on the part of this government to hold down the municipal tax bills of our citizens. I am very pleased, Mr. Speaker, that the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs sponsored legislation whereby the amount of this assistance will be plainly shown on municipal tax bills, so that our citizens will be fully aware of the part this government is playing.

I wonder, Mr. Speaker, if, when the hon. Provincial Treasurer rose in this House to present his first budget 11 years ago, he visualized the titanic increases which are represented by today's totals? Last year, when he presented his budget, he quite openly announced that he was exercising his native caution and was trying to foresee the possibility of a slackening in the pulse of business throughout the province—that caution, sir, was not warranted. He predicted net ordinary revenue of the government for the year at $334,548,000, but due to the outstanding leadership of the people of this province by their government, and the great optimism created by such good leadership, expenditures by the people in certain lines of commodities actually expanded beyond his Estimates—and he was able to report a surplus for the year now ending of $58,454,000. What did the hon. Provincial Treasurer do with that surplus?

First, he placed $40 million in the Highway Reserve Account, then he applied $18 million to the Sinking Fund, thereby reducing the amount of capital expenditures debt, or, as the hon. Provincial Treasurer so aptly said in the House himself: "I paid off the mortgage on Old Man Ontario's farm."

What a man! I tell you, Mr. Speaker, if I owned an enterprise doing $350 million worth of business a year, and I knew of a man who could make $58 million for me, I state most emphatically that the first thing I would attempt to do would be to hire that man—even if I had to pay him as much as the Province of Ontario pays him.

During his term as Provincial Treasurer over the past 11 years, the hon. Minister has seen the physical assets of this province increase by $467 million. That amount represents the actual value of new highways, buildings, conservation projects and rural power extensions. But the most amazing feature of this great expansion is the fact that 65 per cent. of its cost has been paid for out of yearly surpluses over ordinary expenditures. Now in the language of a business man, surplus means only one thing—it means the profit that is set ahead after all operating expenses are paid. In a commercial business this surplus is used either as additional working capital or it is ploughed back into the business in the form of capital expenditures to provide new plant and equipment in order to keep up with the expansion of its business. And here we see the hon. Provincial Treasurer adhering to the same businesslike principles—simply tearing his hair to keep up with the great expansion in this province. Last year it meant construction of the new Workmen's Compensation Board building. An addition to Macdonald Institute at the Ontario Agricultural College, the food terminal building at Etobicoke, the Lands and Forests Research building at Maple, agricultural schools at Ridgetown and Kemptville, new registry office for the Attorney-General's Department at Sudbury, the chief forest ranger's headquarters at Sault Ste. Marie, to name a few. This year it will mean a new demonstration farm at New Liskeard. A new registry office building for the Attorney-General at North Bay, an additional 25 housing units for members of the Ontario Provincial Police, more office space for the Department of Highways at Cochrane and Owen Sound, a new office building for the Mines Department at Swastika, a new reception centre at Niagara Falls for the Department of Travel and Publicity; expenditures at the school for the deaf, the school for the blind, teachers' colleges, hospitals and reform institutions, plus all the expenditures on highways, schools, hospitals, welfare buildings, etc.

What a man! What a government! I only wish that a copy of this budget could be sent to every single Communist in the world today, and then there would not be any Communists. It isn't any wonder that this government has so little opposition in this House. Old Man Ontario does not hire a man to do a job like the hon. Prime Minister is doing, and then hire someone else to hinder him. And believe me, sir, the hon. Prime Minister can be Old Man Ontario's hired man just as long as he wants to be.

Now, sir, it is difficult for me to utter a discordant note in the presence of such delightful symphony. Yet, you yourself know, Mr. Speaker, from a strictly vocational point of view, of course, there are many pitfalls on the path to paradise.

Whilst the economic sea appears calm and unruffled on the surface, a few shoals are commencing to appear ahead. Farm prices have been receding, sales of farm implements, textiles, electrical appliances and steel have slowed down considerably. A few months ago the business decline appeared to be a phase of inventory adjustment brought about at manufacturers' level. Consumer spending was still high. But sales at consumer level have been slipping more recently. They dropped 2½ per cent. in Ontario in the month of January. Carloadings—a usually reliable barometer of industrial activity—dropped 11.2 per cent.

Bank loans are declining. There was a drop of $56 million in ordinary loans in the last quarter of 1953, compared with an increase of $18 million in the fourth quarter of 1952.

Canada's position as an exporter is becoming weakened because our quotations are higher than those of our competitors. With our limited markets at home we can't permit that to continue.

Assertions that everything is all right, or must be all right shortly, will not help the economic position of this country. Everything is quite obviously not all right. Contraction of business is already becoming serious.

The Federal Government at Ottawa, which is basing its opinion that things will be all right, on its estimate of capital expenditures, will find too late that its opinion can be wrong. Capital expenditures is the most elusive bird in the forest. Capital expenditures can be withheld at the eleventh hour. Two things are certain:

1. New capital expenditures are rarely undertaken when demand for products is declining.

2. New capital expenditures are rarely undertaken when lower prices and lower costs are anticipated. The investor invariably waits for the better bargain.

There is no sense in retreating from one fading hope to another. We must subject ourselves to the discipline of facts.

There is only one way to bring prices down and send values up. More productivity per man hour. Any trend towards less effort and less efficiency is serious.

Both management and labour bear a heavy responsibility to see this is done.

No act of government can increase the national wealth, or raise the living standards of the people, unless that act helps to bring about a higher productivity per man hour. Only by higher production of goods and services per man hour can we provide higher wages, shorter hours, longer vacations, and still retain our export markets.

Every labour leader in the land knows that if a tailor who is earning $1.00 per hour can make a suit of clothes in 20 hours, that $20 is added to the cost of the suit. But if the tailor takes 40 hours to make the suit, then $40 is added to its cost. It is as simple as that: 2 plus 2 makes 4 whether Einstein says it, or Lyons. On the other hand, working men generally can not be blamed for opposing gross inequities or inequalities.

Workers on piece-work often go slow because they fear that if they go fast their rate of pay per piece will be cut down, and they will find themselves just where they were so far as earnings are concerned. Such things have happened all too frequently in the past.

There is a small core of wilful men both in the ranks of labour and of management, who are being dragged into the last half of the 20th century, screaming and kicking. They are still fighting their Boer War. To these I say: Both sides must make certain that all rules which hold a man down to doing half a man's work must be abolished. We can't build a strong Canada with half-men.

We must have job security in Canada. We must strive to give our workers continuous employment. Where that is not possible we must develop a sane, sensible programme for more adequate unemployment insurance.

In a nation where the ballot box is still the deciding factor in the direction of our economy, it would appear that greater good would result through education rather than opposition to suggestions for closer co-operation.

LANDS AND FORESTS

And now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to pay tribute to the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests for presenting to this House his White Paper on forestry which, as he so aptly said, constitutes a blueprint for the future management and welfare of that great natural resource. Administration of this large and complex field is of prime importance to all of us here, as well as to future generations.

It gave me great pleasure to hear the hon. Minister — with a gesture of modesty so characteristic of Ministers of Mr. Frost's Cabinet — credit the foundation of this work to the hon. member for Peterborough under whose regime as Minister of Lands and Forests, it started.

The hon. Minister's appreciation of the part played by members of his departmental staff is also worth noting. I can only say to all of those who have contributed to that monumental work, well done gentlemen, well done.

The first thing we have to learn here in Ontario regarding our forest resources is, that they are not what they used to be. Today we are at the crossroads in regard to those resources. The huge stands of white and red pine upon which the saw-milling industry depended in the past are gone. True it is that there are still certain areas controlled by a few mills that will keep those mills operating for a short period into the future: but, as the hon. Minister stated when presenting his White Paper, these will last no longer than about 17 years. It is my personal opinion that some of them will succumb much sooner than 17 years. In less than a century the once great pineries of this province have gone the way of the buffalo and the carrier pigeon.

The lumber industry in Ontario commenced in a modest way in the first half of the last century, being then confined to the lower Ottawa Valley and a fringe along the front of Lakes Ontario and Erie. It expanded rapidly up the Ottawa, and in the latter half of the century covered Southern Ontario and progressed up through the Parry Sound district, along the north shore of Lake Huron to Sault Ste. Marie. This rapid development was due in large part to the settlement and building up of the mid-western portion of the United States; around the turn of the century the vast Minnesota lumbering operations projected themselves across the border to the white pine and red pine forests of the Great Lakes, and commenced eating their way eastward.

It is timely to note that the history of forest operations in this province, with few exceptions, has been that of, "cut out, and get out."

The white pine stands of the Ottawa Valley now support only a handful of operators, whereas in the hey-day of that area over 1 billion feet of white pine were produced per year. It will take upward of half a century to restore the pine industry of that area—and then only if vigorous and comprehensive restorative measures are taken.

The white pine and red pine forests of the Georgian Bay district are no more, and it is doubtful if they are likely to be, or indeed ever can be, restored in any measure approaching the density or quality of the original stands. They, along with the equally valuable stands of the north shore of Lake Huron, disappeared in about 3 decades, with a very considerable portion of the raw product exported to the United States in the form of unprocessed logs.

The Trent Valley watershed and adjacent areas, once one of the finest white pine areas in the world, now present hundreds of thousands of acres of wasteland as mute testimony to man's extravagant methods of exploitation.

There were large areas of white and red pine west of the Great Lakes, but these too have disappeared. A few small areas remain, only because of their inaccessibility under the methods practiced when the stands surrounding them were removed.

Now sir, for those who may think that the Canadian timber operator was an especially devastating fiend, let me make a comparison between cutting operations in Ontario and those in northern Michigan where approximately the same stands and conditions of pine existed.

The peak of our production in Ontario came about 1908—at least the highest Ontario cut ever recorded was in the year 1908, when 800 million feet were sawn from Crown lands. Then followed a steady yearly decline until the total cut in 1951 amounted to only 150 million feet.

The peak of production in northern Michigan seems to have occurred a few years sooner than it did in Ontario. Practically all lumber cut west of Sault Ste. Marie, Michigan, was shipped by water and had to pass through the ship canal at the Soo. Here we find that the year of peak shipments was 1899, when 723 million feet of pine passed through the Soo Canal on its way to market. Then the decline commenced; in 1906 shipments had dropped from 723 million feet to 447 million; in 1915 it dropped below 100 million; and by 1924 it had fallen below 12 million.

This, Sir, tells the story of lumbering in the early part of this century, and it applies with equal force to both Ontario and Michigan, the two great pine-producing areas of the continent. But, Mr. Speaker, cutting operations are only part of the sad story of forest decimation: there have been many ills which have contributed to our present distress.

Settlement of lands which were unfit for cultivation, together with the settlement which invariably followed in the wake of lumber operations, resulted in disastrous fires by those engaged in clearing the land. These vast conflagrations completed the ruin of the residual forests left after the white and red pine had been removed. To replace these forests and to rehabilitate the soil and the streams will be a long and costly process, but nevertheless we must guard against handing down to posterity our remaining forests in a similar condition.

And now, Mr. Speaker, permit me to make another comparison of conditions between Ontario and Michigan. Fires swept through northern Michigan during most of the early years of this century too—between 1913 and 1918 they occurred every year—one of the most memorable blazes occurring in 1918. This disastrous fire, which started south of Duluth, snuffed out many lives. The years 1920, 1922, 1923 and 1925 saw bad fires throughout most of the northern state; and in 1926 occurred the last great conflagration, which wiped out the entire watersheds of the French River, the Knife, the Beaver, the Baptism, the Manitou and the Cross Rivers. Not until after that demoralizing disaster were better methods, more vigilance and newer fire-fighting equipment employed in that state. Even as late as the middle 1930's, I noticed, while driving through the area along the scenic coast road of the south shore of Lake Superior, that a continuous forest of blackened stumps stretched for mile after bleak mile.

During the years 1921, 1922 and 1923 vast fires also swept through Northern Ontario. I can well recall the devastating fires at points along the CPR in the White River area during the summer of 1923, at about the time that the UFO Government was being defeated by the forces of the late Hon. G. Howard Ferguson. The chaos attending the attempts of the Forestry Department to fight that fire was unbelievable. Whilst the fire-fighting forces stood by helplessly awaiting equipment, a carload of fire hose would arrive without nozzles; next day the shipment of nozzles would turn up 50 miles away—without any hose. Tents for the fire fighters would be delivered to one railroad station, blankets would arrive at another, and cooking and messing utensils would be delivered to yet a third destination. It was only due to the rugged character of the men and their exhausting efforts that headway was made against the blaze at all.

One of the first acts of the Ferguson Government the following year was to organize the provincial air service and to construct the aircraft hangar at Sault Ste. Marie. From this main base, sub-bases were set up at various points throughout Northern Ontario such as Sudbury, Biscotasing, Gogama, Remi Lake, Fort Frances, Kenora and Oba Lake, to name some of them. Aircraft for the detection and suppression of fires were allocated to each base, together with forest rangers, fire pumps and hose, and other equipment. This, I believe, was the first such system for fighting forest fires ever set up by any government in the world; and I take great pleasure, Mr. Speaker, in saying that it was instigated by my late father who was then Minister of Lands and Forests in the Ferguson Government.

From that early start—a tremendous step in those days—has grown the present huge and efficient fire-fighting organization. Today this organization is one of the largest and most efficient on the continent, if not in the entire world. Its organization includes the services of 40 aircraft: during the process of fire suppression they provide a rapid means of transportation of men and material to the scene of the fire. The service keeps permanent watch during the fire season from some 320 towers strategically placed throughout the 110 million acres of forest land included in the fire area.

The yearly number of fires which the service is called on to fight averages close to 1,200; and for this purpose it has, among other things, 7,083 pumps, 2,319,000 feet of hose, 1,150 canoes, together with hundreds of trucks, boats, motors, as well as sufficient tents, blankets and utensils to take care of the needs of a brigade of men. Interesting, and most important to the men of the Forest Protection Service is the modern and extensive communications system which spans the province, linked by radio, and supplemented by about 3,500 miles of private telephone line.

So efficient has this organization become that I have no doubt that if a fire were reported to the hon. Minister at this hour, he would simply reach under his desk and push a button; then he would no doubt lean back in his complacency, light a $2 cigar, and commence to look worried that the fire was not reported extinguished.

Up to the present, Mr. Speaker, I have been speaking of the saw-milling industry and its relationship to white and red pine timber. But a large segment of the industry is dependent upon spruce timber as a source of raw material.

Just what the situation is going to be in regard to the spruce-dependent mills,

I cannot clearly foresee. Today, a large percentage of our publicly-owned accessible forested lands are controlled by the pulp and paper companies.

Too many of Ontario's spruce saw logs are located on these pulpwood concessions, both domestic and export. It is difficult to see how the spruce-dependent saw-mills can continue to exist without access to these logs.

It is true that many saw-mill operators did not provide themselves with limits while they were available and are largely to blame for the situation in which they now find themselves. It is the citizens of Ontario, however, who will be the chief sufferers if we permit these lumbermen to be eliminated by timber starvation in the next 20 years or so.

Although it is true that most of the pulpwood concessions originally provided for the production of saw-logs at the request of the Minister of Lands and Forests, most pulp and paper companies, and pulpwood exporters, are reluctant to divert saw-log material from the production of pulp and paper to the production of lumber.

The traditional relationship between the pulp industry on the one hand and the lumber industry on the other is analogous to the relationship which existed between the cattle herders and the sheep rangers in the good old Wild West days—each accuses the other of despoiling the forest, so they go their separate ways, each disliking the other. Still much patience and an abundance of good faith on behalf of both these parties will be necessary if the saw-milling industry is to survive in Ontario; and if this co-operation is not forthcoming soon, the lumber industry will continue to diminish in importance to such an extent that in the next 20 years or so it will be classed as a minor industry—which would be a major tragedy, not only from the point of the saw-mills themselves but because of the high mortality rate amongst secondary industries dependent upon saw-mills.

And now Mr. Speaker, I would like to say a few words about the pulp and paper industry. Unlike the saw-milling industry, the utilization of wood for the manufacture of pulp did not assume any considerable proportions until after the turn of the century. The fundamental difference between the two types of operation are immediately noticeable. In the case of the lumber industry, most operators considered their mills expendable; the cost of a saw-mill was much lower than the cost of a pulp or paper mill. The saw-mill operator cleaned the timber off his limit and moved on to another tract, usually taking his saw-mill along with him. Due to this convenient arrangement, the lumberman rarely attempted to obtain large tracts of timber land in advance of his requirements.

On the other hand, the pulp-mill operators were confronted with a tremendous capital outlay, roughly equivalent to from $80,000 to $90,000 for each ton of daily production. On this basis a 500-ton mill would cost about $40 million to $50 million—this figure of course is much higher today. Therefore it was a matter of great concern to them to obtain extremely large areas of wooded lands to maintain their mills in perpetual operation. As a result of this policy, together with their keen bargaining ability, a large percentage of all the accessible publicly-owned forested lands are in their hands.

As I just stated, Mr. Speaker, pulpwood operations did not commence in this province until the turn of the century, yet by the year 1951 the annual production of pulpwood was approximately 3 million cords. This, Sir, places the cropping of pulpwood close to the position of the pine industry in the year 1908—it may be perilously close to the peak of what the forests will stand. The damage is not yet irreparable, but the present state of our former pine stands indicates the need for amended treatment of our spruce stands.

The steps to be taken, as outlined in the hon. Minister's White Paper, are of great encouragement to me; yet I can foresee the day when a government might find it feasible to call back to the Crown all outstanding concessions, so that the areas could be re-grouped and re-allotted on a more uniform basis, commensurate with the actual requirements of the operators, and still permit them to operate forever. It is my personal opinion that where concessions are larger than required, the incentive for fullest utilization of wood, on the area, is absent.

The pulp and paper industry in Ontario has not advanced nearly as far as elsewhere in Canada in the utilization of species other than spruce. This may be due to the relatively low carrying charges on limits, as well as the lack of a down payment at the time they were leased, or to the relatively low stumpage rates on spruce, which is undoubtedly the most desirable species from the standpoint of the pulp and paper maker. The ratio of jack pine to other species used in Quebec is more than $2\frac{1}{2}$ times that in Ontario.

The cutting of quantities far beyond the actual annual growth under current silvicultural practices is common on many limits, particularly amongst the export group. Conversely, other large areas of limits are not developed to an extent approaching their possible sustained yield because the present manufacturing capacity of the limit holders concerned cannot utilize the annual growth of such large areas.

We have learned in practice that annual depletion cannot exceed annual growth if our forests are to be maintained. Therefore cutting operations must be carried out under expert supervision, in some places by selective cutting, in others by clear cutting. No large areas can be left barren. Harvesting must be balanced so that trees are growing in various stages of maturity on every part of the limit except where cutting is actually under-way. Also, cutting should be planned to leave conditions suitable for the regeneration of valuable species.

This regeneration process, or "tree farming" as it is sometimes called, means more than just planting. It means, first, gathering cones, drying them and extracting the seed, cold storing, raising seedlings to plant, and then planting them. It means protecting the young trees from disease; it means fighting fires. It involves choosing the proper soil, controlling soil desiccation, upgrading seed-bed conditions, seed-tree spacing and otherwise intensifying tree culture. But all this is necessary if we are to save our forests.

Sometimes we tend to forget that our biggest industry is still based on the nation's trees. Canada's pulp and paper industry pays more workers more wages, and has more capital invested, than any other business in Canada.

I made reference a few moments ago to the disappearance of the buffalo and the carrier pigeon. One of the last strongholds of the carrier pigeon was in the region of Petoskey, Mich., a district about 125 miles south and west of Sault Ste. Marie. Up to 25 years ago there were still people in that district who could recount tales of this marvellous bird; they could describe the annual slaughter that took place throughout the orchards and wooded lands of the district.

The rookeries were closely watched until a day or two before the young birds were sufficiently developed to be able to fly. Then large gangs would go out in the early dusk, set bonfires ablaze, shout and yell, pound the tree trunks with clubs, create an unbearable noise by beating sticks against tin cans or metal containers. This din so frightened the young pigeons that they scrambled out of the nests, and, being unable to fly, became an easy prey for the harvesters, who quickly despatched them, threw them into large containers and carted them off to market.

Today if the older Indians of the district are questioned about the disappearance of the carrier pigeons they are liable to tell you that one dark cloudy afternoon the birds flew away over the horizon and were never able to find their way back again. Some may tell you that they joined the buffalo far over the horizon and they will never return.

Let us be thankful, Sir, that in the case of our forests, we know that, with the type of handling which this government proposes to lend to them, they can and will be prevented from disappearing over the horizon.

I wish to thank the hon. Minister of Education for the good things he has blessed my riding with. He has been most generous with grants for new school construction, and we are hopeful that we will again be on his list to partake of a portion of the $61.4 million in grants during the coming year.

The hon. Minister of Health has been a tower of strength to the two hospitals in Sault Ste. Marie as well as the Red Cross outposts at Hornepayne and Haunts Junction. It is to be hoped that hospital construction in the Soo will be able to remain reasonably static for a short period of time at least.

The hon. Minister of Public Welfare spear-headed construction of the first and one of the finest homes for the aged that is to be found in the province, and, arrangements have been made to add to its capacity this coming summer.

The various provincial welfare services administered by the hon. Minister of Public Welfare covering old age assistance, blind persons' allowances, mothers' allowances, and public assistance for unemployed persons, brings the staff of his department into direct touch with many residents of my riding. I wish to take this opportunity of commending him on the outstanding job they are doing. Not only does this apply to members of the staff housed here in Toronto, it applies with equal force to those clothed with the responsibility of carrying out the work of his department in the riding of Sault Ste. Marie.

MINES

And now, Mr. Speaker, I wish to congratulate the hon. Minister of Mines, not only on behalf of the riding of Sault Ste. Marie, but on behalf of all of Northern Ontario, for his interest in the development of mining access roads in the north.

The broad over-all plan for mining access roads entails the linking up of existing bush roads, district roads, and highways, so that northern municipalities and whole areas, which are now cut off from normal communication with each other and with the outside world, may be linked with the rest of the province. These roads, Sir, do not require to be standard specification highways, they require to be only what I have called them—"access roads." It will be seen by the Preliminary Report of the Department of Mines for the 12-month period ending December 31st, 1953, that these roads can be constructed for a fraction of the cost of standard provincial highways.

When I listen to the consistency with which Northern Ontario members of this Legislature dwell upon the subject of roads and highways, I often feel that hon. members from the southern areas must think that we all have one-track minds. Yet the fact is that many small tightly corseted areas are growing up in the north, and the growth is causing them understandable pain. Now Sir, there is a certain pain-killer that can assuage this pain, if the government will administer it in somewhat larger doses and at slightly closer intervals.

It must be remembered that this government, and this Legislature, are the nerve centre and the pulsing heart of a great province. Blood must be pumped not only into the compact core of the body, but to the very extremities that stretch far beyond the compact core. In the case of Northern Ontario, this life blood consists of connecting roads—you may call them access roads, or colonization roads, or any other name you wish providing they are outlets.

Much of the great and growing northern empire has been opened to human occupation within the working lifetime of men now no more than middle-aged. Towns which possess every amenity of urban living are still without highways or railways connecting them with "the outside," and depend on air service for their contact with the world.

Last year the hon. Provincial Treasurer said in his Budget Speech that he wouldn't countenance any small-scale nibbling of highways construction: and, whilst we in the north are always thankful for any attempt to unlock our great store-house, it does seem to me that the construction of these access roads is following the pattern of the little boy who wanted to cut off his dog's tail—but he didn't want to hurt the dog—so he cut it off an inch at a time.

Surely Sir, this great province doing $350 million worth of business a year and making $58½ million profit can afford to underwrite a powerful growing community like Northern Ontario that is destined to become the prime money-maker of the future.

Now, Sir, on page 52 of the Budget Report, under the heading of "Capital Highways Expenditures," there is an item which reads, "Mining Access Roads—$1 million." On page 53 is another item headed, "Unallocated amount in Highway Reserve Account—$21½ million." It occurred to me that, with the assistance of the Provincial Auditor, the item on page 52 might be increased from $1 million to $5 million; the item on page 53 would then be automatically reduced from $21½ million to $17½ million—and the books would still balance.

Mixed up with all the other millions as it is, this item of $1 million must feel somewhat like the ham sandwich that found itself at the champagne banquet.

HIGHWAYS

And now Mr. Speaker, I wish to pay tribute to a man who has an enviable record of achievement, not only in Northern Ontario but throughout the entire province—the Hon. Minister of Highways.

Never in the history of Sault Ste. Marie have we been participants in a highway programme of such magnitude and of such promise. Highway work is actually involved on 40 miles of Trans-Canada Highway within the riding. Appropriations have been made, and work is under way in the Michipicoten area. The highway which the entire world has been holding its breath to hear about, the famous Lake Superior Highway, is under actual construction, and by late summer will have broken through one of the wild rock barriers which has hitherto been such a formidable obstacle to its construction; the burning desire that has smouldered in the hearts of men for a third of a century has finally taken materialistic form.

Sir, I have heard the ugly charges of brain-washing, and McCarthyism, levelled against the hon. Minister, and attributed to the hon. member from Kenora. I submit, Sir, that the only McCarthyism apparent to me is the type practiced by the hon. member for Kenora himself. I am not, Mr. Speaker, comparing the hon. member with United States Senator Joseph McCarthy, but with another well-known member of the McCarthy family—Charlie McCarthy—and I should like to ask the hon. member from Kenora who the Edgar Bergen is who pulls the strings that make his wings flap and his jaws waggle.

Why does not the hon. member cease his subterfuge and come out in the open and tell this House who is the group of puppeteers that is pulling the wires? If these charges are being made on the hon. member's own volition, then I ask to be delivered from the most terrible tragedy in existence—energetic ignorance. There is nothing as dangerous, Sir, as a man with a little knowledge; and I am convinced that, even at this late hour, the hon. member wishes he could shut his mouth and make it retroactive. He is attacking a man who will pluck the spear from his very wounds, and will turn around and slay his adversaries with the same weapon.

And now Sir, because I am unable to add one cubit to the already towering stature of the hon. Minister, I beg your gracious permission to resume my seat.

MR. S. J. HUNT (Renfrew North): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this Budget Debate, I would like again to congratulate you on the efficient and impartial way you interpret the rules of order and preside over the deliberations of this Assembly.

I would like, too, to extend a welcome to our comparatively new members and say how much we appreciate the contribution they are making. While we welcome new blood in this Legislature, we do regret that so often it comes as the result of our losing valued and highly esteemed members. I am sure we have all been awed by the passing of 4 of the highly respected members of this body in only a few short months and we feel keenly the loss of their help and comradeship.

Too, I am sure I speak for all members of this Legislature when I say that we regret that for many months now, our colleague—Hon. F. S. Thomas of Elgin, has been incapacitated through illness. I would like him to know that he is not forgotten by his colleagues here and that we are wishing him a speedy recovery. Only 10 days ago I called on Mr. Thomas and had a very nice visit with him. I found him greatly improved and taking a keen interest in what was going on in this House.

Mr. Speaker, I think that the record of this government has been commendable and assuredly has met with the recent approval of many of the citizens of this province as evidenced in the by-elections at Niagara Falls and Simcoe County.

AGRICULTURE

Mr. Speaker, as a farmer, representing a riding largely rural I feel I should say something on behalf of the rural people of Ontario, or more precisely the agricultural industry of this province.

We have all, at times, heard it stated that agriculture was the basic industry of this province or this country, and that if our agricultural industry were not prosperous, that it would have a detrimental effect on our whole economic structure. In spite of the growing importance of our mining, and other industries in this province, if we take into account the number of people engaged in the production, the processing and distribution of agricultural products, we will find that agriculture is still the basic and most important industry of this province. I think, Mr. Speaker, we can go one step farther and say that if part of our agricultural industry is suffering that as a result the whole industry is not going to flourish and such is the case I believe at present.

There seems to be an inverse ratio between what the farmer gets for his produce and what he must pay for every commodity he buys, and more particularly, at present farm implements which comprise a very large item in the farmers' budget, while the price of farm produce has steadily declined over the last 2 years there has been a steady increase in the price of every commodity he has to buy. In short, there is too great a spread between what the producer is getting for his produce and what the consumer in the urban centre is paying for the delivered product.

If we look at the values of farm properties today, we will find that farm real estate is selling at less than it was 30 years ago. I bought a farm in the County of Renfrew 30 years ago this spring for $20,000. Since then, on the farm, I erected a new steel-clad barn and several other outbuildings. Today, if I were to put that farm up for sale, I would have to take a great deal less than what I paid for it in 1923. The value of every other type of real estate in this province has been greatly enhanced during that length of time, and I submit there is something wrong when the values of farm properties have depreciated to such an extent.

Now a word for our rural municipal governments. I have before me a schedule of the unconditional grants to be paid to municipalities in Renfrew County, amounting to $59,000 for urban and $46,680 for rural municipalities, which at first glance appears to be, if figured on a percentage basis, very favourable to our rural districts. No town in our county receives more than $2 per capita and I take it that these figures would hold good approximately for all counties like mine with a large rural population. We are all aware that municipal governments and more particularly rural municipal governments have only one way of raising revenue, a direct mill rate on the assessable property. Now I would like to assure the Minister of Municipal Affairs that our municipal governments will be very grateful for this assistance, and that it will be faithfully applied. I think this is one way of equalizing the money collected by indirect taxation, and returning a portion of it to where it belongs.

If it were not for the market made available by our agriculture industry, such gigantic industries as Massey-Harris out here on King St. in Toronto, and many others I could mention could not exist and carry on business. The farmer provides the market but derives nothing directly from taxes paid by such large corporations or their employees.

Now, Mr. Speaker, if a farmer wants to install a water system, or some means of fire protection, he must pay 100 per cent. of the cost himself. And many of our rural municipalities where small unincorporated villages are located have been particularly hard hit. It has not been possible to provide organized fire protection, and as a result much higher fire-insurance premiums must be paid. In most of these cases no grant has been paid for fire protection prior to this year which explains the higher percentage increase. The farmer must pay his school rates both elementary and secondary, pay for his hydro rates, his municipal tax and every other tax the same as the urban dweller. I don't know what yardstick was used in compiling these grants, but I feel there is too great a spread between the $1.50 paid in rural Ontario and the $4 paid in large urban centres.

Mr. Speaker, I would submit to this House that the agricultural industry of this province is not flourishing. The value of farm properties except those immediately adjacent to large urban centres is below what it was 30 years ago, while the values of all other real estate have been greatly enhanced. If the buying power of the rural population is reduced, and it has been, the reaction will shortly be felt in every industrial centre in the province. I am not advocating the paying of subsidies as a solution to our agricultural problems, but I would like to see more assistance provided for the rural sections of this province, and more money provided in our Provincial Budget for our agricultural industry to assist the farmers to solve their own problems and do a better, and more economical job of producing for the whole province made possible by providing more county agricultural representatives, supplying more leadership and guidance to our agricultural people.

All departments of this government are important to the well-being of our province, but some departments affect, more closely than others, ridings such as the one I have the honour to represent, and it is with only a few of those that I propose to deal.

I believe that one of the shortcomings of this government has been its failure to let the people of the province know what has been done and why; and to explain more precisely why it has been impossible or undesirable to do certain things. I know there are several pamphlets and circulars sent out, but often these do not reach the masses of the rank-and-file of our citizens. I feel that a greater use might be made of radio and our local papers as a medium of enlightening the people of this province.

First of all, I would like to mention the Department of Education because I feel it is one of our most important, if not the most important department of government. As I stated last year, I think this province is indeed fortunate to have a man of the calibre, the wide experience and practical experience of Dr. Dunlop heading our Department of Education. Dr. Dunlop from experience knows, I believe, the educational needs of our province right from the elementary schools to the highest level of our colleges and universities, as few men in this province do. He not only understands our educational problems, but he has the courage to advocate and put into effect policies which he believes to be in the best interests of our schools, even when he realizes that such policies are going to be unpopular and receive criticism. I feel he is trying to do the most good possible for the most people in this province with the money we have available for educational needs.

I believe that if the people, the taxpayers of this province, were better informed as to the great increase in our school population, necessitating as it does the provision of hundreds of new classrooms each year to accommodate these additional pupils, that they would not feel that our Minister of Education was taking an arbitrary stand when he states that we cannot subsidize the building of auditoriums, gymnasiums and other non-essential adjuncts of our schools, desirable as they may be. I believe that our Minister of Education is to be commended for the stand he has taken and for a job well done.

As we all know, there has been a great dearth of teachers in this province. The teaching profession is, I am sure we are all agreed, one of the most important professions, but for several years too few of our young people have been entering the profession to keep up the supply of trained teachers needed. The only way we can correct this situation, I believe, is by making the profession more attractive. This can only be done by making provision for adequate salaries and a greater sense of security on retirement. I was glad to see that additional money was provided in the Estimates to bolster the Teachers' Superannuation Fund and provision made through new legislation to improve the Teachers' Superannuation Scheme. I feel that we can go still farther in this direction by providing greater superannuation benefits for retiring teachers, and I might say for retired teachers and the dependents of retired teachers, and I would suggest to the Minister that this matter be given further consideration.

Again I say that this government is blessed with having a man like Dr. Dunlop who has had so many honours come his way and who ordinarily might be expected to take life easy, give so freely of his time and experience to this very important department.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure I am no different than the majority of hon. members of this Legislature, when I say that during the past year, I have had occasion to call on our hon. Minister of Health on very many occasions. During the year 1953, we had a new hospital with provision for 150 beds, which was opened in the Town of Pembroke, and also a wing was added to another of our existing hospitals providing 50 beds. These rather costly undertakings were only made possible because of the very generous assistance provided by the government of this province, through the Department of Health.

The hon. Minister of Health, on more than one occasion, has paid a visit to my riding to give his valuable advice and assistance to our local hospital boards, and I can assure you this advice was greatly appreciated. I, like many of the other hon. members, have had many problems to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister of Health. Many of them might have been considered minor problems, but no problem was too small or too large for our energetic Minister to attempt to solve, and he has the faculty of generally coming up with an answer which is satisfactory to all concerned.

I have here an editorial from one of our leading Ontario dailies, which suggests the battle against one of the most dreaded diseases, polio, has been practically won. This, I might say, is good news for a great many of us here in this Legislature. This article also suggests we may be reasonably hopeful that the other dreaded scourge, cancer, may be counteracted within the next 2 or 3 years.

Because of the large and generous grants provided for our cancer clinic here in Toronto, where a great deal of research work has been and will be carried on, a great deal of the credit must go to the Provincial Government and the hon. Minister of Health for the personal interest which he has taken in that clinic. I have been amazed, as I am sure many of the other hon. members of this Legislature have been, at the hon. Minister's apparent inexhaustible energy in dealing with health problems and visiting the respective ridings.

I would like to turn now for a moment to one of the other departments, that of Lands and Forests. I am sure all the hon. members of this Legislature listened with a great deal of interest to the White Paper presented by the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests. It is, in my opinion, the most far-sighted and far-reaching policy ever attempted by any government of this province. The people of my riding are particularly interested in what the Department of Lands and Forests is trying to accomplish. The lumbering industry has always been, and is still, one of the leading industries in Renfrew, and we have at the present time, 3 large saw-mills as well as the Eddy Match Company, and the Canada Veneer Co. plant, all dependent upon our forest industry in Pembroke.

Another governmental policy which will make provision for the perpetuation of these industries is of vital concern to the people of my riding. The policy outlined in the hon. Minister's address will have the effect of making available, to these industries, the resources so vitally needed over a long period.

It has only recently been announced that the Eddy Match Company is establishing its head offices for this company in the Town of Pembroke, and an office building costing $250,000 is being erected. This is as a result of such governmental policy which will ensure that there will be a perpetuity of resources needed in support of these industries and is to be commended by all the citizens of this province.

I was gratified to hear, when the budget was presented, that money had been specifically earmarked for conservation projects, because I feel reforestation is something which has definitely been long overdue in this province. Reforestation should be undertaken in the Ottawa area, and it was enlightening to learn that of 34 million seedling trees, 15 million were supplied for reforestation projects on privately owned lands, from what I can learn. I understand we have reached almost the maximum output in our existing nurseries, and I would like to submit to the government that funds be made available out of the monies voted for this purpose.

I understand, Mr. Speaker, that our Estimates have nearly all been passed, but considerable has been provided for Lands and Forests and for the Department of Highways which has not been specifically set aside for one particular project. I would like to submit through the government to the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests that funds be made available for the extension to existing nurseries, or the building of new ones, to supply the trees needed to reforest both the privately owned and Crown lands in this province, or more particularly, in the older parts of Ontario. I think in Northern Ontario, a policy of regeneration may solve the problem. That land is lying idle at the present time, and is suitable only for the growing of trees.

Some years ago, a provincial Statute was passed vesting authority in our county councils to pass by-laws regulating the growing of trees on privately-owned land. A great many of our county councils today have failed to take advantage of this privilege, and in many other cases, by-laws have not been enforced.

Since such a large percentage of the trees made available are being planted on private lands, I feel the time will come when more drastic measures will of necessity be taken to prohibit the cutting of immature stands of timber on these lands, along the same lines as have been followed in some European countries.

I might draw to the attention of the House that portions of Addington, Frontenac, Hastings and Renfrew Counties are being denuded of the last stands of pine. At the present time, we have large tracts of sub-marginal land in Renfrew County, and I would like to see the government provide funds for a new nursery in our own County of Renfrew.

Renfrew County has always been considered one of the foremost pine—both white and red pine—counties, and I think it is the natural thing to expect that the government would establish a nursery there to provide white and red pine seedlings to be supplied, not only in that area, but over the whole of the province.

In our Department of Highways, we have as hon. Minister, a man with long and varied experience. Long before taking his seat in this Legislature, he took a keen interest in road and highway matters, more especially municipal roads.

He understands our road problems as few men do in this province, and during his term in office as hon. Minister of Highways, he has done much to assist township and county councils in solving those problems.

Perhaps this is the wrong time to make mention of bridge problems, but for many years, we have been endeavouring in Renfrew County to have a bridge across the Ottawa River. It is a project which we have been considering, which would make for better relations between our English and French speaking elements in this country.

During the last year, we have made considerable headway towards the consummation of this project, and have been assured that this government and the Government of Canada at Ottawa that funds will be available for their share of the project as soon as consent is given by the Province of Quebec.

I might say that, when the budget was presented last year, the hon. Prime Minister of this province earmarked a certain amount of money for the construction of that bridge.

Just the evening of the day the budget was presented, the Ottawa Journal in bold headlines across the front page, stated: "$300,000 For The Allumette Island Bridge." I took it upon myself to ascertain where they had authorization for printing that headline, and, I have it on pretty good authority that any time the Province of Quebec is prepared to sign on the dotted line, the Ontario Minister of Highways is prepared to pay Ontario's share, and we appreciate that very much.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: That is quite correct.

MR. HUNT: The only thing holding it up is the reluctance on the part of the Government of the Province of Quebec to make any definite commitment as to what they are prepared to pay, or intend to do.

I would suggest to the hon. Minister of Highways that we proceed with the building of the Ontario part of this structure and I am sure that the Government at Ottawa will assist with that undertaking.

Now I come to another part of this little speech. I hesitated to refer to it, but I am almost forced to do so.

I have an editorial from one of our Ontario dailies, which is not always unfriendly to this government, and I would like to quote briefly from the editorial, appearing in the Ottawa Journal of March 12th, where it says:

Word from Toronto is that out of $124 million for highways in Mr. Frost's budget, $17 million will be for roads in Eastern Ontario. Perhaps it should be added here that when it comes to highways, Eastern Ontario is a sort of Ontario poor farm—not in a class with Western and Central Ontario with their magnificent roads. It is true that some good work has been done recently on some of our Eastern Ontario highways. Nevertheless, it is a fact that Eastern Ontario highways by and large are bad and that the Frost Government has not been notably vigorous in trying to make them better.

I have no hesitation, however, when I say that I am not in agreement with this editorial, but I think it should not be passed by unnoticed.

In the county I represent, there is a small community, and I refer to the Village of Killaloe. Many times since I have been a member of this Legislature, I have been asked: "Just where is Killaloe?"

We have another village which is still more important, about which a very few members of the Legislature have ever heard, and that is the Village of Golden Lake. It is important, because it is the terminal of 3 of our provincial highways. I have with me an Ontario road map and upon it the hon. members will see that Highway No. 41 is shown as running from Picton to Golden Lake. If any hon. member in this House knows where Golden Lake is, I would like him to raise his hand.

Then Highway No. 60 is shown running from Huntsville to Golden Lake and Highway No. 62 from Madoc to Pembroke, but actually it ends up at Golden Lake, as well. Between North Bay and Arnprior, a distance of 200 miles, we have not a single highway linking Highways No. 2 and 7 with Highway 17, which serves the Ottawa Valley. We have lakes and streams which might attract many tourists to that area, and we have many delightful summer resorts.

I submit, Mr. Speaker, to this Legislature, that it is not altogether fair to motorists in Southern Ontario to provide highways, and then terminate them at Golden Lake, a distance of some 20 miles from the nearest provincial highway. The motorist suddenly finds himself at the end of the paved surface, and back in the woods, and he either has to find his own way, or ask someone to direct him.

I have another editorial from the Eganville paper, which is not always too friendly toward this government.

This is from a letter submitted by Mr. J. J. Foran, who was at one time quite prominent in Renfrew South, in fact, he was one of our candidates some years ago in the riding of Renfrew South.

In his letter to the Eganville Leader last week, Mr. J. J. Foran, for many years reeve of the village, contends that when the road was built from Eganville to Pembroke it should have been continued as the northern end of Highway No. 41 as first planned, and for which the highway was originally intended by the late hon. E. A. Dunlop. To turn this road back to the county to control and maintain was most unfair, and Mr. Stanley Hunt, Renfrew North's representative should lose no time in telling the department so, and demand that it be returned as an integral part of the Highway Department and as such receive proper summer and winter maintenance. Eganville and the townships through which this road runs, as well as the Town of Pembroke to which it is an important business artery, should get busy and bring pressure to bear to insist that it be taken over as a part of Highway 41. Surely the Highways Department owes this section of the country as much attention as it is giving to other sections of the country.

Again I say, Mr. Speaker, I would like to pass this on to the hon. Minister of Highways. I am not responsible for the editorial, but I think it should be brought to the attention of this House, because it came from a very reputable citizen of Renfrew South, who a great many hon. members of this Legislature know.

I do feel, personally, that some attention should be given to it, and I would like to draw this fact to the attention of the hon. Minister of Highways, and ask him to extend at least 1 of these highways, to provide an outlet for at least 1 of the 3 King's Highways mentioned, so the motoring public can go from Highway No. 2 or No. 7, through to Highway 17, without having to travel over a portion of township or county roads. I think it is only fair to the motoring public, and since my attention has been drawn to this, I have no alternative but to bring it to the attention of this government and to the hon. Minister of Highways.

In conclusion, Mr. Speaker, I would like to give the hon. Prime Minister a word of advice. I think possibly it will be necessary to call by-elections in some of the ridings in the near future and I would suggest that a by-election be called in Essex North. It is unfair to the people in that riding not to be represented for so long a period of time in this House.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before you call it 6 o'clock, I would like to call one or two bills. Today is the birthday of the hon. member for Brant

(Mr. Nixon) and I feel disposed at the moment to accept the principle of his bill, subject to an amendment which we are discussing, which gives the municipality some power in connection with the drive-in theatres, instead of leaving it wholly to the discretion of the licencing board. It will provide for the consent of the municipality, as a part of the arrangement.

THE THEATRES ACT, 1953

MR. H. C. NIXON proposes a second reading of Bill No. 124, "An Act to amend the Theatres Act, 1953."

Motion agreed to; the second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: Now, Mr. Speaker, would you revert to "motions."

HON. MR. WELSH moves that, owing to unavoidable absence of Mr. Manley, Mr. Oliver be substituted for him on the Select Committee appointed to consider the questions of expense accounts payable to members of Select Committees sitting in the interval between the sessions.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I refer for a moment to the matter of prorogation? I have discussed this with the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and also with the Government Whip.

First of all, it was felt the House could prorogue on Friday but only by pressing the business through, and sitting until very late hours, so it was thought desirable that prorogation might take place some time on Tuesday, or at the very latest, on Wednesday. It probably will be on Tuesday.

I wanted to explain that to the hon. members of the House, because the question of their own personal arrangements enter into the picture.

MR. SPEAKER: It being 6 of the clock, I do now leave the Chair.

It being 6 of the clock, the House took recess.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

THURSDAY, APRIL 1, 1954.

8 O'CLOCK P.M.

The House resumed.

HON. LESLIE M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, I move you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee; Mr. Thomas R. Dent in the Chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF THE PROVINCIAL TREASURER

Vote 133, Main Office, $387,500.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I do not propose to say anything about this department. No doubt, there are questions hon. members may desire to ask, and I shall be glad to answer them.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I wish to ask a question on Vote 133. I note that the figure for "Public Indebtedness" amounts to $39,875,000. I wonder whether the hon. Treasurer could tell us approximately what percentage of that goes to pay for loans from the United States?

HON. MR. FROST: I would say to the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) on that point, that I gave the figures in the budget. My recollection is that about 17 per cent. of our borrowing has been done in the United States, and the balance in Canada. Of the figures here respecting foreign borrowing, most of that is for hydro and is reimbursed to us. That is the gross figure. I suppose the question the hon. member has in mind is why we should go to other markets for money rather than to our own. Taking the figures from the budget, my recollection is that in the last 10 years we have borrowed, for new works and provincial refundings, in the neighbourhood of $1,600 million. Of that great total, only about $250 million has been borrowed abroad. The hon. member will see the necessity of this when I explain the position further. By borrowing in Canada, we are constantly filling portfolios of loaning institutions and individuals with our securities—provincial guarantees, hydro guarantees and other guarantees such as, for instance, the Ontario Northland Railway. We reach the point at some time when people think there should be some diversification.

In the spring of 1951, I think it was, we went back into the New York market, after staying out of it for many years. The purpose was this. It is quite apparent, as we view it now, we are going to require, in the next 7 or 8 years, when we proceed with the St. Lawrence scheme—and we expect that will be the case—another $600 million or $700 million. Hon. members should realize that if you borrow in one market, you have a tendency to drive up the cost of money. In other words, there is a certain resistance arising from the fact that individuals and corporation investors have too many of our loans in their portfolios. That results in the interest rate on our loans increasing.

For that reason, in the spring of 1951—the matter was discussed here in the House at the time—we turned once more to the New York market, after remaining out of it—for perhaps 15 years—anyway, since the days of the Hepburn Administration. It was done so that in view of the great demand for investment in this country, we would have another string to our bow; in other words, that we might diversify our affairs somewhat.

At the same time, we have been interested in establishing a market in Europe, if we could. That has been difficult, because of the problem of convertibility of Sterling, which we would like to see accomplished, but it is a technical matter which is beyond us. We are interested, and have discussed matters with certain Swiss bankers. As you know, in Europe there has been a tendency for capital to flow into Switzerland. I was talking to a Swiss banker on Monday of this week, and I learned they have passed through a situation, where, from having comparatively little money a few years ago, and high exchange rates and other difficulties, they have reached the position where, in Europe, they have a large amount of money. It is not revealing a secret to say that the Swiss people have been investing in Canadian basic securities, and other such securities that are based upon the broad requirements of the country, but they have not gone into government loaning, because their interest rate is on the high side.

I believe I am correct in saying, in respect to our last loan in New York, that due to the high credit of this country as a whole, determined by its people, its assets, and its ability to pay its way, and that governments generally in Canada, provincially, federally and municipally, are balancing their budgets—were able to effect a loan there, the interest rate of which I shall not give you, although it can be obtained. The rate was so favourable that our statisticians have calculated that, if the Canadian exchange immediately fell by 10 per cent.—and remember we are at a premium now of around 2¾ per cent.—and that situation last during the currency of the loan, which would be around 18 years, we would still be ahead over Canadian rates. That has been, generally, the basis of our financing in the American market. We are in a favourable credit position, due to the fact that we have not only been balancing our budget, but have been paying surpluses—or what some hon. members might call “surpluses”—into sinking funds, and establishing our credit, which has enabled us to maintain our credit at a very high level.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, in pursuing this question, I want to thank the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) for his painstaking reply. However, it is quite well known that we have before the House an amendment to the main motion on the budget which deals precisely with this question.

HON. MR. FROST: That is the motion of the —?

MR. SALSBERG: That is right, of the Opposition. It is a reflection, in my opinion, of the general feeling across the province that we are going too heavily into the American market for money when there seems to be no shortage of funds in Canada.

The Ottawa Government seems to have no difficulty whatsoever in getting money and selling bonds on a popular basis, so much so, that it is now recalling two Victory Loan Bond issues much earlier than they would normally mature, in order to save money. The question thus arises, why this Government of Ontario could not do the same thing. It may be that Ottawa is getting some loans in the United States. If so, we would like to hear it.

HON. MR. FROST: Our position, and that of the Federal Government at the present time, are quite different. The Federal Government has been able, I believe, generally speaking, since the termination of the war to finance its undertakings from ordinary account. It has been able to finance without borrowing; other than the Canada Savings Loans or Bonds. I do not believe there has been anything in the form of federal loans for some years. It has been strengthening its capital position. Among other things, for instance, it has assumed, federally, from surplus, the indebtedness of the Canadian National Railways. The government has transferred into superannuation funds very large sums of money, because it had these surpluses to strengthen the capital position.

Our position in Ontario is different. While we were conserving our resources in war days, our position now is one of expansion and development. As I have explained to the House, it is unreasonable to ask our people to pay all of that money from current account. It is fair and reasonable it should be amortized over a period of years, and, therefore, our situation is not comparable with that of the Federal Government. It might be said that our positions, as between war time days, when they were borrowing on a large scale and paying off capital indebtedness, and the situation as it now exists, have been reversed.

To be frank, Mr. Chairman, I would be interested in establishing a third or even a fourth borrowing market in the United Kingdom or in Switzerland. Competition is the life of trade, and it is due to the fact that we are not confining ourselves to one market, that we are able to get money cheaply.

As regards the amendment before the House, I can assure the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that I am hopeful the explanation I have given the House will save the government from defeat when we vote on it next week. I think the explanation I have given is endorsed by every financial adviser in this country as being a sound method, and a sound approach, to this problem.

MR. SALSBERG: I wish to make it very clear, Mr. Chairman, that I am quite confident that I have not in any way exhausted the arguments which I am sure the official Opposition will present against the government's borrowing policy.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Has presented.

MR. SALSBERG: Has presented—well, I am sure they will continue to do so before the debate is finalized, and that that will result undoubtedly in the upsetting of the government. That is not a prediction, Mr. Chairman, it is an expression of opinion.

HON. MR. WELSH: A pious hope.

MR. SALSBERG: But to continue our discussion.

HON. MR. PORTER: Of what?

MR. SALSBERG: It is evident, also, that the policies pursued until now have not necessarily resulted in borrowing money at the lowest rates. I still maintain that Ottawa is getting money now at a lower rate than we are.

HON. MR. FROST: It always does.

MR. SALSBERG: It is getting it mainly from the Canadian public for re-financing, and saving a lot of money in the process. I think there are a lot of things we could do to the benefit of our own Treasury and the people of Ontario. Some years ago I suggested, and I now repeat, there should be a provincial bond sold directly to the people of the province, and to certain organizations, perhaps through the savings offices of the government. When the Northland has to pay $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., as I found the case to be on examining its last report—that is money borrowed for it by the government and guaranteed by the government—that is a rather high interest for a government-guaranteed bond. I think $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. would be considered an excellent return by the hundreds of organizations—farm organizations, workers' organizations, credit unions, and others of a similar nature—who would gladly invest their surplus funds in government-saving bonds or certificates, whichever you wish to call them, and receive $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. in return. I do not think they are getting that much out of their ordinary investment. Instead of paying it to the American bankers, let us pay it to our own credit unions, co-operatives, trade unions, and other people's organizations. Frankly, Mr. Chairman, I was shocked when I found that the Ontario Northland was called upon to pay $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. on a government-guaranteed bond.

HON. MR. FROST: May I point out we bought those bonds from the Ontario Northland Railway?

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) did that, then he is certainly overcharging the Northland.

HON. MR. FROST: I would not say that. It owes us $30 million.

MR. SALSBERG: But you collected \$17 million and never gave it any credit. You put it in the Treasury. I happen to know that; you had better straighten out the books with the Northland. What I was told was that the government sold bonds for which it is called upon to pay $4\frac{1}{2}$ per cent., and I say you should give the people's organizations of this province a chance to buy those bonds. I am sure bonds amounting to many millions of dollars would be taken up.

HON. MR. FROST: We have never borrowed money at that rate of interest.

MR. W. H. COLLINGS (Beaches): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) a question? Is it not a fact that when we go into the American market, or even go abroad, as you suggest, we are then leaving more money available in Canada for industrial expansion and first mortgage bonds?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. We are not drying up the market.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, I think we all appreciate the benefits that flow from broadening the basis of our borrowings to a certain extent, and particularly when we need to borrow money in quite large sums, as we have in this province the last few years. But the point which concerns me—and I am sure the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost) can make this very clear—he said, I think, that we went into the United States market again in 1951. The story which one hears, and I want to know just what the factual basis for it is, is that since 1951 not only have we gone into the United States market for our borrowings, but we have gone into it quite extensively.

HON. MR. FROST: Some $250 million.

MR. OLIVER: I should like to hear from the hon. Minister the percentage figures on the amount we have borrowed in the last 2 years in Canada and in the United States, because I can appreciate the advantages of going into the United States market, but I do not want to come to the place in this province when we go whole-heartedly into the United States market, and leave our own particular field in Canada.

HON. MR. FROST: Probably I can give the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) the actual figures. We have still borrowed more in Canada in that period of time, than we have in the United States. The purpose of going there was to avoid affecting or "drying up" our own market, to keep the public demand in our own bonds, and also because of very favourable interest and repayment conditions we were able to effect.

I may say it is heartening to realize the financial position in which this province is at the present time.

The hon. Attorney-General has just returned from New York, being a member of our organization which was there effecting the last loan. It is very heartening to realize the high credit rating of this province. All Provincial Governments, the Federal Government, and a fairly good number of Municipal Governments have borrowed in the United States for various purposes, in some cases for refunding, and in other cases to obtain new money.

Over the last 10 years about 17 per cent. of our money has come from the United States, and the balance from Canadian investors. In the last 4 years, we have borrowed in Canada $700 million, and in the United States $250 million.

Vote No. 133 agreed to.

Vote No. 134, Bureau of Statistics and Research, $63,500, agreed to.

Vote No. 135, Comptroller of Revenue, $1,023,000, agreed to.

Vote No. 136, Ontario Racing Commission, $188,000.

On Vote No. 136.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, on Vote 136, I was going to say that heretofore we have been handicapped in our consideration of this Estimate, because of the abstract way in which it was presented. Fortunately, we have an hon. member of the House who is also a member of the Racing Commission, and I think it would be extremely helpful to hear his views pertaining to matters in connection with racing.

MR. SALSBERG: We want some good "tips."

MR. JOHN W. HANNA (Huron-Bruce): Mr. Chairman, I would like to say at this time that a great trust was imposed in me, and it is very pleasing to be a member of the Racing Commission. I am only a junior member of the commission, but we have a great chairman, and a great organization of 4 members. No doubt now, racing will attain a high standard in this province, and as time goes on will prove to be "big business" for Ontario.

MR. OLIVER: Does the hon. member mean to say it has not been of a high standard formerly?

MR. HANNA: It has always been on a high plane. I would like to say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, as he comes from a racing country in Western Ontario, he knows there are a great many good tracks, and that good horses are bred, and a great deal of pleasure is afforded to the rural people as well as those living in urban municipalities.

At this time, may I say I am very happy to have this appointment. I did not know whether all the hon. members of the House knew about it, so I thought

I would say a few words regarding racing.

One great feature up to the present time, since I have been a member of this commission, is the fact that there will be effected this year a saving to the bettors of somewhere in the neighbourhood of $495,000. As the hon. members know, betting is a very high-class financial transaction.

It will be the duty of the committee to see that the public gets fair play, and is provided with good, common, clean, sport, and we are proud that the government is now taking some part in racing.

MR. SALSBERG: I thought they were taking a big part of it.

MR. HANNA: I would like to say to the hon. member for St. Andrew, that I hope to see him and to have him bring some of his money to the tracks. I am doubtful if he has ever been at a race track. I do hope to see him with some of his friends from Spadina, who own a great many race horses.

It does make me happy to be on this board, with men like the chairman, Magistrate Bigelow, Mr. McGee, and Mr. MacIntosh. Our headquarters are in the Royal Bank Building, and have been provided with very lovely offices, and you can secure all the information you desire there.

MR. OLIVER: Is that right?

MR. HANNA: If you do not know your way around, come down and see us sometime.

While on this commission I am going to endeavour to be what might be called "an ambassador of goodwill" to attract more people to the tracks, and to endeavour to make many good friends. I have a great many friends now, and I trust I always will have.

I might say that we have not a large budget, but I do expect that racing in the future will be, as I said, "big business" in the province.

Now, if there is anything further any hon. member would like to know, just mention it.

I can assure you that we will stand for no nonsense.

I think you will find in the future the public will be provided with honest, common, clean sport. I am very happy that the hon. Prime Minister has seen fit to appoint me. I feel that it is a job which will require considerable energy on my part, and I do hope I will be of some value to this government.

MR. SALSBERG: May I ask the member of the commission whether it is true that the organization of which he is an august member is planning for night racing in this province?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

MR. SALSBERG: I have heard rumours to that effect.

HON. MR. PORTER: We only have that in the Legislature.

MR. SALSBERG: As far as I am concerned this is a salt mine. I just slave around here. Has the member of the commission any statement to make, which might be quoted?

MR. HANNA: I would like to answer the question by the hon. member for St. Andrew, by saying that if the government ever changes its policy, I will be glad to inform the hon. member of that fact.

Vote 136 agreed to.

Vote 137, Post Office, $369,000, agreed to.

Vote No. 138, Provincial Economist, $80,400, agreed to.

Vote No. 139, Tabulating, $82,000, agreed to.

Vote No. 140, Theatres, $114,400.

On Vote No. 140.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Vote No. 140—"Theatre Branch," I do not want to press the hon. Treasurer for any lengthy speech, although we all enjoy listening to him, but if he cares to make some remarks about one aspect of this problem, I think it would be appreciated.

I think the hon. member from Stormont (Mr. Manley), spoke earlier in the session on the showing of certain pictures which he thought were of a doubtful character—I am very mild.

This affects our Censor Board.

I want to confess, Mr. Chairman, that I am always torn betwixt and between when it comes to discussing the Censor Board. On general principles, I am not very happy about the ideal of having all the performances, theatre productions, and movies we seen censored, or that it should be the prerogative of a small handful of people to determine what the public at large should, or should not see.

On the other hand, I am bound to acknowledge the fact that for many years there has been a Censor Board in existence, and certain responsibilities have been placed upon it. I appreciate fully the difficulties of the Censor Board. On the one hand, it cannot satisfy all segments of society and groups, and, on the other hand, it cannot escape the wrath of certain segments of society and groups.

I think they recognize, as do the hon. members of the Legislature, there is no ideal situation at the present time. There is, however, considerable dissatisfaction, and there has also been considerable complaint about the extremes to which certain theatre owners are going with their displays, and in the way they advertise the movies they are showing. I think most of the American pictures—I think that is true; "most of them"—are not of a very ennobling character, and many of them perhaps should never have been shown at all to the public, certainly not to the younger members of our community.

For myself, I want to further state that I go to see more British and other European pictures than American—

MR. JANES: How about the show in this Chamber?

MR. SALSBERG:—I do not know the feelings of others about it, but I think a great number prefer the British pictures, which are more natural, more human, and even when they are not of a very high cultural character, nevertheless they seem to be more acceptable, and more natural and more human than these pieces of artificiality and vulgarity which comes from the south. In most European pictures you see human beings, and reality; you do not see the "kewpie dolls," the cardboard lovers, and the misleading description of life, which is often very harmful. I understand that they are now making Spillane's trash into movies, and all you will see will be something like "I kill," "he kills," "she kills," and finally "we kill."

I appreciate their difficulties, and it is a hard job they have. In fact, I have said on previous occasions, I would like to see the government increase—and increase considerably—the salaries of the members of the Censor Board. I repeat it now, I would like every member of this board to receive sufficient income to enable him to live in comfort, and to be beyond approaches which may be attempted on the part of anybody in the business. I think the hon. members of this House would unhesitatingly approve a policy of that sort.

But on this subject, I think a few additional words should be said. There are people who think our younger children should be kept away from all the American pictures. I do not know whether that is the correct viewpoint or not. I think, though, we should establish more consultive bodies of such organizations as the Parents-Teachers Associations, Home and School Clubs, and others, who will advise, assist and pass judgment to the board. I think there should be more care taken in the selection of pictures shown on Saturday afternoons to our children.

The new grading of pictures is something about which there are conflicting opinions. Some people think they should be graded with the possibility of showing what are termed "adult pictures," but which are not meant for mass circulation. I have heard others say that it is merely an advertising promotional proposition. I am not in a position to take a stand either way.

I saw the picture about which the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) spoke, and I would like to correct the statement, for the record, and state to the hon. members of the house that it was not a French picture. It was a German-made film, and what is worse, it was made by one of Hitler's chief movie-producers, and it carries with it the degeneracy which prevailed in the days of Hitler. It was not necessarily a lurid picture, but rather a picture in which life was described as being without a spark of hope or promising outlook. It was typical of the mentality of the men around Hitler. Whether that picture should have been shown or not, I am not here to judge and determine. I think though one should make these few remarks in order to perhaps hear something from the hon. Provincial Treasurer and Prime Minister of the province, who is "saddled" with this branch. I do not know whether it is the happiest part of his duties, but I have addressed myself to the hon. Prime Minister and now, may I say to him, "it is all yours."

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I think admittedly that censorship is a very difficult problem. The censor—and sometimes, in appeal, the Treasurer, I must admit, is not too good a Court of Appeal, but nevertheless is a Court of Appeal—receives complaints from various people. There are a great variety of opinions. There are parents who vary in their attitudes to pictures, some who resent censorship; some who want censorship. There is a variance in the attitude of adults.

It is interesting sometimes in Boards of Appeal, which were set up to hear complaints against these pictures, drawn from representative organizations in the province relative to pictures, to hear the points of view they express.

I remember a year or two ago we had a French picture Le Ronde. There was a tremendous controversy about it.

MR. SALSBERG: What was the name of it?

HON. MR. FROST: Le Ronde. I saw the picture and I thought it was silly myself, but that is only my opinion. We set up a very large Board of Appeal, at that time. The Deputy-Treasurer was on it, and we had representatives from across the city.

My recollection is that, by a majority vote, they passed the picture, but some of the reactionaries, like myself, cancelled it. That is one of the difficulties which have to be faced in that type of thing.

The hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) has made one declaration from his standpoint, the hon. member for St. Andrew has made his declaration from a completely different standpoint. He does not like the picture The Sinner—which, by the way, I have not seen—but, seeing there is so much controversy about it, I must see it.

However, I want to give you a third opinion—an opinion with which most hon. members here will know and respect—by Mr. Alex Barris. Everybody knows Mr. Barris is not one who is influenced by opinions. He is a man with an individuality, and I think it is worthwhile reading his opinion. I notice the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg), with his voluminous clipping system, obviously has the item.

MR. SALSBERG: I have.

HON. MR. FROST: I will read it to the hon. members of the House. Mr. Barris says—

MR. SALSBERG: The first time the press is really quoted in this House.

HON. MR. FROST: Yes. This is written by a man of great experience and unquestionable ability, and with a point of view which I think is worthy of recognition and consideration. He wrote:

The question of motion picture censorship was raised in the provincial Legislature the other day in a speech by Peter Manley (L., Stormont) in which he charged that the Ontario Censorship Board had adopted "a lower moral standard" for Toronto theatres than for the rest of the province.

The film that stirred Mr. Manley so was The Sinner, which played for several weeks recently at the Odeon-Hyland Theatre under a "restricted" category, which means that nobody under 18 years of age was admitted, with or without parents. The Liberal member commented that after seeing it he didn't think anyone under 80 should have been admitted.

Mr. Manley is entitled to his opinions, of course, and if he feels, as he said, that the film was "obscene and obviously catering to low moral standards" he is perfectly justified in saying so in the House.

But we don't happen to agree—either with Mr. Manley's opinion of the picture or, what is more important, with his views on movie censorship. It is generally conceded that Ontario has the most enlightened film censorship on this continent, and the showing of The Sinner supports this stand.

Consider for a moment the effect of the establishment of this new restricted category for films. Hitherto, the only existing categories for films (other than outright rejection of them by the board) have been either blanket approval for all audiences or the "adult entertainment" tag put on films considered wrong for children. This "adult entertainment" label served only as a guide for parents—there was and is nothing to stop parents from taking their children to such pictures if they so desire. It need hardly be added that a good many of them do so.

Because some parents ignore the guidance of the censor board, the board had only two alternatives: either to allow children accompanied by parents, to see adult pictures; or to reject entirely films that would be acceptable to adults and, indeed, in some cases beneficial.

The setting up of the restricted category has changed that. It has by no means been shown that the restricted category has worked as a green signal for all kinds of sensational and immoral films. There have been only a handful of them, anyhow, and at least some of them have been intelligent, honest films dealing seriously with serious themes. Among these, we would include Intimate Relations, based on a Cocteau play, and the aforementioned German-made movie, The Sinner, which showed with frankness the degeneration of a young woman whose standards were lowered by the environment in which she grew up, but which certainly did not indicate approval of those standards.

Another of the restricted pictures was The Moon Is Blue, a light comedy which could hardly have corrupted the morals of an adult and which, incidentally, has been shown elsewhere—both in Canada and the United States—where no such restricted category exists, which means that quite probably a good many children saw it. Even Dr. Hugh Flick, who administers film censorship in New York State under the state's Department of Education, has said that he considered Ontario's film censorship superior to that in his own state. However, he has no authority to change regulations.

The restricted category, therefore, serves two purposes. First, it tends to cut down the number of minors attending films that might prove harmful to them in some way or other; second, it makes possible for adults the viewing of pictures that might not otherwise be shown at all.

As to the complaint that the Censor Board has set different standards for Toronto from those for smaller communities, that hardly stands up. The board's decision on any film applies to the whole province—any theatre owner, in Toronto or Espanola, is then free to show or not show any available picture. Every theatre operator must consider the preferences and prejudices of his particular audience.

Some censorship is a necessary thing. But too much censorship, of the kind which, as Mr. Manley suggests, would make films forbidden "for any one under 80," can do a lot of harm, too. It can stifle artists and industries, and result in a public's being robbed not only of entertainment but of intellectual stimulation.

I read that because it gives another point of view. We have 3 of them, one by the hon. member for Stormont, a different one by the hon. member for St. Andrew, and one from a critic on one of the great newspapers, who is very well known. I suppose the hon. members here could present many more opinions which would vary in some degree.

It is that particular field in which the Motion Censorship Branch must operate. It must operate to do those things, which in the opinion of the branch, are best calculated to meet the needs and requirements of our 5 million population, and at the same time recognize the standards which are set by great organizations, like the Legion, for decency, and others, as well as our own wishes and desire to keep the motion picture industry clean, not harmful, but indeed, beneficial for our people. I think that is the answer.

On Vote 141.

MR. OLIVER: We have not passed 140 yet. It has not been called.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Yes, we have.

MR. OLIVER: In connection with the Junior Farmers.

HON. MR. FROST: That is statutory. I suppose the hon. Leader of the Opposition wants to speak about the Ontario Junior Farmers Establishment Loan Corporation?

MR. OLIVER: I did, yes.

HON. MR. FROST: I would say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, the other night in my room I read in a newspaper the irate comments of some of my own supporters, who are men of individuality. The hon. Leader of the Opposition knows I try to stimulate, within bounds, the differences of opinion and the views of various people. The hon. member for Middlesex North (Mr. Patrick), for example, was one, and there were others who had something to say about this organization. I read with great interest what they said.

I would say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that I felt what was said there—although I was not at the committee meeting conducted under the chairmanship of the hon. member for Riverdale (Mr. Macaulay)—deserves the most serious consideration, and I can assure the hon. Leader of the Opposition, it will be carefully considered.

I think the gist of the objection was that the board is a bit too "tough" I put it that way, "the board was tough." That, perhaps, is not a bad fault to start with. The hon. Leader of the Opposition was in this House in the days when the Agricultural Loan Board functioned, and nobody was more critical of the—I was going to say "liberality," but perhaps I should not put it that way, because I would not want to draw politics into it—so I will say "generosity" of the old Agricultural Board—

MR. OLIVER: I am afraid all the "liberality" was in the early 30's.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, but you have to start safely and soundly. As a matter of fact, we still have about $5 million of the old agricultural loans which was passed 25 years ago, outstanding. I think it is now amply secured, and the province will ultimately receive this money, in the course of liquidation.

But I think it advisable to suggest that a new organization of this sort be careful. I would frankly admit to the hon. Leader of the Opposition that perhaps the officers of this corporation have been a bit too careful. We will look at it. I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition will admit it is a good fault at the start of things to be very careful. I repeat, we will look this over and if we can safely do so, will make it more generous, and I think it will serve a very great purpose in this province.

MR. OLIVER: It is a little unusual, though perhaps just as effective, to have the answer before the criticism is made. But I say this in all seriousness regarding this particular agency of government that I doubt whether there is any agency which is further away from meeting the needs of the people it is intended to serve than this Juvenile Farming Loans establishment. When the hon. Prime Minister says that the board "started off tough," and he tells hon. members that that was the right way to begin, I must remind him that the board did not "start off tough." It started off in a generous way, and then got progressively tougher until, at the present time, a man needs to have his farm paid off and money in the bank before he can apply for a loan from this organization.

I wish to say to the hon. Prime Minister, and I think he is genuinely interested in this, that in my opinion one of the faults lies in the board itself. The chairman has a full-time job apart from running this institution, and another member of the board is our good friend Doctor Walters. One place for which Doctor Walters is not suited is a position where money is being spent, because he does not want to spend money; he would really prefer to hang onto it like a leech, and a spending organization is just the wrong place for Doctor Walters, for whom I have a very high respect.

I think the board itself should be reorganized and it should have a full-time chairman. I do not know whether the hon. Prime Minister is himself conversant with the activities of this board. I do not know if he knows what has been going on in the last few months in the province. But a lot of young men, who have asked a reasonable amount from the board, have been told they could be granted half that sum. Half of that amount was no good to them. It discouraged the young men and we are not getting anywhere with a programme of that kind. This programme could have met a very serious need among young farmers of Ontario.

HON. MR. FROST: You mean: "Will meet."

MR. OLIVER: It will, perhaps, if we change our ways. But it is no use as it is now. We allowed $10 million in the budget for this, and we only spent a small proportion of that sum. I do not think $10 million was too much to put out in a single year to assist young farmers and I suggest the hon. Prime Minister might well examine the situation relative to the activities of this lending organization. I have enough confidence in his impartiality to think that there will be in future a great change in connection with this organization, if he does so. At the present time it is not serving any useful purpose.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. Leader of the Opposition has drawn a very gloomy picture, but, after all, it is just 2 years ago that the corporation was formed. Out of the $10 million at its disposal were to be made loans for the following purposes: To assist Junior Farmers, as described in the Act in the acquisition of land for farming; the paying off of existing charges against land; the consolidating of outstanding liabilities; providing drainage; for livestock, and other purposes relating to the establishment of young farmers. Remember, Mr. Chairman, this is something which had never before been attempted in Canada. It was a new project. On the Board of Directors were Mr. J. C. Steckley, Doctor C. S. Walters, and Mr. E. J. McLoughrey, a member of the staff of the Department of Agriculture. As of January 29th last, loans to the value of $3,797,000—nearly $4 million—had been authorized. As of March 11th, about $3,300,000 had been advanced. The largest loan is $15,000. The lowest is $2,000. I think it can be said that this corporation, and this new type of loan, will serve a very useful purpose in Ontario.

MR. OLIVER: They are turning down 50 per cent. of the applications.

HON. MR. FROST: I would not say that. I will look at this when I have an opportunity shortly, and see what the situation is. But I am quite satisfied that, as I say, this organization will serve a very useful purpose in Ontario.

MR. OLIVER: Well, I am quite frank in saying that if the hon. Prime Minister will look at it, the situation will be better.

MR. SALSBERG: On the subject of housing mortgages. I wonder if the hon. Treasurer can announce at this time a change of policy in this regard? I think this item refers to the second mortgage field in which the government was engaged. I think the re-entry of the government into that field, particularly if they were to do that on a low interest rate, would perhaps make quite a contribution to the partial solution of the housing problem for many working people who cannot buy a house because of the high cost of finance and, in particular, the difficulty of getting a second mortgage.

HON. MR. FROST: This section is the old second mortgage loan. The National Housing Loans are up to 90 per cent. That does not leave us much room to step in.

MR. OLIVER: How much is outstanding of these old second mortgages?

HON. MR. FROST: The original loans were $16,610,000 and the principal outstanding is about $10,574,000.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WELFARE

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Mr. Chairman, the Estimates of the Department of Public Welfare for the coming year make provision for a great many needy persons in this province. Through legislation and administrative experience, we have been able to develop a system of public welfare services which deals with almost every contingency of dependence and need—social assistance for children, families, the disabled, the aged and infirm. While we are progressive in our public welfare legislation, our prime concern is to maintain a high standard of living for all citizens; and this can only be assured through the continued development of our private enterprise system—a reliance upon production and economic expansion throughout this province.

The past year has been a good year. We have enjoyed an exceptionally high measure of prosperity, and the potentials for further growth and development in this province are unquestioned. We have a reliable and energetic people who have a very great measure of initiative. I believe we have only begun to tap and utilize our great natural resources which are there for the benefit of all citizens. There is a notable contrast between this favoured land and province of ours, and some European and Asian countries. The extremes of wealth and poverty which exist in some of those areas are almost beyond belief. I believe we are all conscious of the fact that elsewhere in the world, untold millions live in absolute want and dire need; without proper food, clothing and the necessities of everyday life; where life is nothing more than a struggle for survival against overwhelming odds. We are fortunate, indeed, to live in a province and a country where it has been possible for us to take positive steps, and to develop ways and means of assisting persons in need. For, despite the continued economic expansion and development in this province, some of our citizens are unable to reap the benefits of our private enterprise system for various reasons beyond their control—conditions of dependency, disability, infirmity and age. Meeting needs which result from these conditions is, of course, the job of the Department of Public Welfare. In this way, our citizens, as a whole, have accepted their responsibility to those less fortunate than themselves.

In looking over our welfare legislation in this province, one cannot help but be impressed with the progress which has been achieved. New welfare measures have been developed—especially in recent years—and many amendments have been made to continuing Acts. All have contributed towards improving and strengthening our welfare services. This, of course, is a continuing process—a job which is never ending.

I would like to pause for a moment to mention a matter which is of concern to me—particularly as a farmer—(and, incidentally, I must confess that my first love is and always will be the farm). I believe that most of us are aware of the surpluses which have been created in certain dairy products. The importance of the dairy industry in providing economic security for a very large number of producers, related industries, and people, cannot be stressed too much. The butter surplus, for example, is increasing; and I would seriously propose to the Government of Canada that steps should be taken to issue this surplus butter to persons and families who are at present in receipt of the various forms of public welfare assistance, as well as to the various public and private charitable institutions. It is most unfortunate that huge stocks of surplus butter should remain in storage when it could be readily made available, with great benefit, to needy persons and institutions. We would assure the Federal Government of the co-operation of this province in the distribution of this important commodity by means of any plan which they might care to adopt.

There is some concern with reference to the increased measure of unemployment which has been experienced during the past few months. Now I cannot see the development of anything like the depression of the thirties ahead of us; nor do I propose to join the unhappy ranks of those who seem to be trying to talk us into a depression. This is a time when our thinking should be straight, clear and objective. It is my view and the view of this government that the Government of Canada should assume full responsibility for rendering assistance to persons who require help because they are out of work.

(1) The Government of Canada is the only government in a position, financially, to develop an adequate programme to assist the unemployed;

(2) The Federal Unemployment Insurance offices possess the administrative machinery, with full knowledge of unemployed persons in their respective jurisdictions, including their qualifications;

(3) this plan will avoid duplication of effort and services;

(4) uniform standards of assistance across the country would be ensured;

(5) provincial and municipal revenues are inadequate for such a major undertaking;

(6) welfare programmes lending themselves to provincial administration are already in effect; and

(7) finally, the adoption of the Federal Unemployment Insurance scheme recognizes the principle of federal responsibility. If the existing scheme is not adequate in its scope, then it is well within the powers of Parliament to extend it to meet today's conditions.

Much of today's unemployment is of a seasonal nature. The province, year in and year out, carries on an increasing programme of public works largely related to hydro expansion, highways and public buildings. In the light of our resources, this programme will be continued, perhaps enlarged. Possibly, the Federal Authority could assist by enlarging its programme along similar lines. We have co-operated willingly and cheerfully with Ottawa in all matters relating to the welfare of our people. This, we shall continue to do; but it is obvious to all of us that, if there should be any large measure of continued job shortage, then the immense revenues and resources of the Federal Government must be brought to bear upon the problem. There is no doubt, of course, that the movement of natural gas to Ontario will have a stimulating effect on industry, and the St. Lawrence Seaway and Power project will be one of the major employment programmes in the history of the province.

In referring to the additional funds which the province is contributing in the form of unconditional grants to municipalities, I would like to quote a statement of our Prime Minister, which he made in his Budget Address. He said:

The new (unconditional) grants can be used by the municipalities for any purpose; but they are related as closely as possible to the responsibility assumed by—(municipalities) for health, welfare—and other similar services. They represent a unique attempt to provide for the equitable distribution of the burdens placed upon the municipalities through the assumption of these responsibilities.

I would like to add that these unconditional grants will undoubtedly be of great assistance to municipalities, particularly in meeting their share of the costs for the welfare services which remain on the local level.

Traditionally, private social agencies, including those founded by churches, fraternities, and other specialized local community groups, accepted responsibility for services to needy persons. Many of these services are now rendered by governments through public welfare departments, and I think the reasons for this gradual transference from private to public sources are quite obvious. Yet, this movement of responsibility upwards to the larger units of government does not mean that private organizations have no further responsibility in the field of welfare. Indeed, it is most desirable that every encouragement should be given to the many private agencies which still remain dedicated to the cause of welfare. They are in a particularly strategic position to provide the individual attention and intensive service which some cases require, and which a public programme by its very nature, cannot provide.

There is one particular organization which I would like to single out for special mention, the Canadian National Institute for the Blind. This private agency has accepted responsibility for a group of persons who require specialized attention and service. At the present time, this nation-wide organization is raising funds to establish new headquarters, more adequate for their purposes, in a property located in Toronto, formerly called "Divadale," near Sunnybrook Hospital. I anticipate that this campaign will be successful, and I commend it to your attention. The Province of Ontario has contributed $250,000 for this purpose; but most of the funds will come from private sources. Needless to say, any highly successful organization, such as the Canadian National Institute for the Blind, must have a capable director with zeal, foresight and ability to guide the agency in the development of its programme of service. Such a man is Colonel Eddy Baker, who, without doubt, has done more than any other person in service to the blind in Canada, and, indeed, his influence has been felt in other parts of the world on behalf of the blind. I wonder, at this time, whether the Board of Governors of the Canadian National Institute for the Blind should perhaps consider giving recognition to the accomplishments of this extraordinary man by renaming "Divadale" the "Edward Baker Hall."

I firmly believe that private welfare organizations are an indispensable part of our democratic way of life. The Atkinson Foundation is continuing its notable contribution in the fields of health and welfare. Many private organizations would have found it exceedingly difficult to carry on their work if funds had not been made available from this foundation. I have been most impressed by the work accomplished, and by the many areas into which the funds of the Atkinson Foundation have been diverted with great benefit to the persons served.

Another important piece of work is being done by the Mason Foundation. The citizens of the Sudbury area have benefited greatly through the foresight of the founder, William E. Mason.

On this occasion, I would also like to pay tribute to the Law Society of Upper Canada in providing free legal services for needy Ontario citizens. Throughout the province, I have received many favourable comments with regard to the organization established by the legal profession to protect the rights of those who have insufficient funds to meet the costs of legal services, and, surely, this is an important part of private social services. All these examples which I have given (and there are many others engaged in the various facets of welfare) indicate the scope of private organizations and how much can be achieved for the betterment of all through private effort.

In the Department of Public Welfare, we are not unmindful of the professional training for social work which is given at two universities in Ontario. The University of Toronto School of Social Work is recognized by the department through the provision of substantial grants which have been made in the way of bursaries to students to enable them to continue their training, particularly in the second year of post-graduate work. I am especially pleased to learn of the growth of the University of Ottawa School of Social Welfare (Saint Patrick's College). This newest school is also being encouraged by the department in the provision of a grant of $4,000 for the current year. The Ottawa School is under the direction of the Rev. Swithun Bowers, and is specializing in the training of graduates for child welfare and institutional placements. Saint Patrick's College does not have the financial support which other universities have. I can assure the Legislature that we require more graduates from schools of social work than are available at the present time, particularly for the child welfare field. I would therefore commend to the attention and consideration of private donors the excellent work being done by Saint Patrick's College in the training of persons for the field of social welfare. The support of private donors is needed in order that their work may be continued. This school is a credit to Ottawa and Eastern Ontario, and many of its graduates are serving in agencies throughout this province.

CHILD WELFARE

In this session of the Ontario Legislature, we have witnessed an historical event in the passing of the new Child Welfare Act. The importance of services rendered to children through our network of Children's Aid Societies in this province cannot be over-emphasized. The children receiving these services include:

- (1) Children with difficult behaviour problems—unable to adjust at home, in school, or in the community;
- (2) runaway children;

- (3) children in detention homes or training schools;
- (4) juvenile delinquents;
- (5) children from broken homes;
- (6) mentally retarded, physically handicapped, and emotionally disturbed children;
- (7) over-protected and pampered children — rejected and unwanted children;
- (8) unmarried mothers, and children born out of wedlock;
- (9) children needing protection of person or property;
- (10) neglected, abused and abandoned children; and
- (11) children needing guidance or placement in foster or adoption homes.

Insofar as possible, services are provided to any child who needs such services, and there is no discrimination with reference to race, colour or creed.

It is my earnest wish to see the Children's Aid Societies strengthened, and I feel that a forward step has been taken in the passing of the new Child Welfare Act. This new Act will undoubtedly prepare the groundwork for the development of further financial assistance for child welfare work. The funds already appropriated for these services have, of course, greatly increased in recent years. Yet, I do not feel that we can make a more worthwhile investment of money, time and effort than in our children. I am convinced that children today are the finest generation in our country's history, and the investment in their future is a must. We are therefore determined to render every possible help to Children's Aid Societies in the great work they are accomplishing in this field.

DAY NURSERIES

This province is making a sizeable contribution towards the maintenance and operation of public day nurseries in several Ontario centres. No other province shares in the expenditures for this type of service, and only two states in the United States—namely California and Massachusetts—are financially engaged in such a programme. There are also many private day nurseries in Ontario carrying out excellent programmes for children. All day nurseries are subject to inspection and licencing under the provisions of The Day Nurseries Act of this province.

MOTHERS' ALLOWANCES

Ontario's programme, whereby allowances are granted to mothers with dependent children, is still the most advanced legislation of its kind in Canada, with regard to qualifications and rates of allowances provided. Amendments in recent years have made it possible to extend assistance to a very large number of families not previously covered. Provision is made under The Mothers' Allowances Act for special or supplementary assistance for those families who require more than the basic rate of allowance to meet their needs. Additional amounts are also provided for fuel allowances during the fall and winter months. I note that during the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1949, our expenditure for special assistance amounted to $107,000, and for fuel allowances, $157,000. During the fiscal year just ending, our expenditures for special assistance will have amounted to $547,000, and for fuel, $505,000. I would again emphasize that these amounts have been made available in addition to the basic rate of allowance provided under the Act.

The granting of Mothers' Allowances assistance is one of the most important social services coming under governmental auspices. Through this programme, it has been possible for many families to maintain themselves as units, and for the children to grow and develop within the normal family setting.

DISABLED PERSONS' ALLOWANCES

I would like at this time to refer briefly to our newest social welfare measure—the Disabled Persons' Allowances programme. It has been of considerable personal satisfaction to me to learn of the intention of the Government of Canada to design a similar programme for disabled persons across Canada based upon the pioneer work we have done in this province. I have stated many times that we could not have developed a more worthwhile welfare programme, and this becomes so evident when one receives a letter like the following—a portion of which I would like to quote:

I wish to thank you for the cheques that you have sent me. After 32 years with my Dad supporting me and all the money they have spent in keeping me from getting any worse than I am, I am very grateful for what you have done by making me feel that life after all with me will be worth living. . . .

In another letter, a recipient stated:

Please convey to those concerned my sincere thanks and appreciation for this allowance. It has made such a difference in my feeling of security. I shall always be grateful for this allowance.

I am sure that these brief statements from letters sent by recipients give some indication of the needs being met by our Disabled Persons' Allowances programme. One cannot help but feel repaid many times over for the efforts being made on behalf of our disabled citizens.

OLD-AGE ASSISTANCE

In reviewing the statistics related to the ever-increasing number and proportion of older persons in our population, some rather notable features are revealed which explain the reason for the increase. In the first place, the death rate has decreased markedly even during the last 25 years. For example, the death rate for Canada in the years 1921-1925 was 11.3 per 1,000 of the population. In 1952 this had decreased to 8.6 per 1,000 of the population. It is also of interest to note that a person born in 1901 had an even chance of reaching 46 years of age; while in 1950, the normal expectation of life had risen to 65 years of age, an increase of 19 years. The trend towards longer life has become most apparent in the increased proportion of the population 65 years of age and over. According to the census figures for 1951, the percentage of persons 65 years of age and over was 9.0, which is to be compared with 6.8 in 1931, 5.6 in 1911, and only 4.6 in 1891. These rather startling figures serve to point up the major problem which we face today, and which we will continue to face, even more acutely as time goes on—that of providing assistance, and developing various types of care for the elderly persons who are requiring such services in increasing numbers.

During the past fiscal year, the number of persons who qualified for old-age assistance showed a slight increase. The question has often been raised concerning supplementary allowances. I believe our Prime Minister placed this question in a proper perspective when he stated that if the Government of Canada would see fit to raise the maximum basic rate of old-age assistance, the Province of Ontario would be most willing to share such an increase on an equal basis with the federal authority.

At the present time, arrangements may be made for supplementary assistance through municipal sources for needy cases requiring additional funds over and above the monthly rate of assistance. The Province of Ontario and the municipality concerned share equally in the cost of such supplementary assistance up to a maximum of $10 per month.

The Federal Government by legislation establishes the standard of living for old-age assistance cases in providing that the maximum rate of assistance shall be $40 per month. In accordance with the terms of the agreement, Ontario shares 50 per cent. of the cost of this assistance. It would appear that the Government of Canada is not in favour of making provisions for increased benefits of any kind in connection with any of the welfare programmes for which they have assumed either whole or partial responsibility. In opposing any measures which would lead to increased welfare benefits, the Minister of National Health and Welfare was quoted on one occasion as stating:

I do not want steps taken now which might result later in a serious reduction of . . . any . . . social welfare measure. That has happened in Great Britain; it is happening today in France. That has happened in Belgium and in at least 4 other European countries. It has happened in at least 3 Latin-American countries that I know of.

I feel that this is a rather pessimistic view to take. I would again state that we are prepared to go along with the Government of Canada in increasing the maximum payment for old-age assistance cases.

HOMES FOR THE AGED

I have already expressed the fact that we face an acute problem with reference to the increasing numbers of persons in the older age group who require specialized forms of care. We must continue to direct our efforts towards the development of various types of programmes to give assistance to this group of persons. Several measures, of course, have already been undertaken in this connection, and I would like to review them briefly:

(1) You will recall the recent development of the Elderly Persons Housing Aid programme which is financed mainly by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation with the Municipal and Provincial Governments sharing a small portion of the costs. I feel I must express some disappointment over the fact that only a few municipalities have taken advantage of this legislation to provide low rental housing units for elderly persons. An outstanding example of the type of accommodation constructed under the provisions of this programme is the Beech Apartments in York Township. This form of housing meets a definite need for those elderly persons who are quite capable of managing their own affairs, but who cannot provide suitable accommodation for themselves. I am hopeful that other municipalities will see the merits of this plan and will soon establish many more low-cost housing units for our elderly citizens.

(2) Our many private charitable institutions—particularly those sponsored by church organizations and other private groups—are making an important contribution in the care of aged persons. An amendment to The Charitable Institutions Act will raise the capital grant for new construction, or for additions to existing buildings from $1,000 to $2,000 per bed. There is a great need for increased activity in this area by private institutions, and we are prepared to lend every assistance to them in the expansion of their programmes to care for more elderly persons. Undoubtedly, the increase in the capital grant, which I have just mentioned, will have a stimulating effect upon this work.

(3) The Homes for the Aged programme has continued to expand and enlarge with many fine new homes constructed in recent years with others in the process of construction or in the planning stage, as well as additions to existing homes. I would assure the members of this Legislature that these homes are vitally necessary for the care of many of our aged citizens. Indeed, if we did not have these homes, a very large number of elderly persons would, of necessity, be continuing hospital cases and would seriously hamper the active treatment process. Needless to say, the problem of overcrowding and the shortage of hospital beds would be even more acute without our homes for the aged. Adequate supervision and necessary attention are provided for the persons residing in these homes, and much has been accomplished in the development of uniform standards of care throughout the province.

(4) Regardless, however, of the great strides which have been made in the development of our Homes for the Aged programme, I feel that we must take other steps to meet the growing problem of providing care for elderly persons. I believe the time has come when we should augment these efforts by the introduction of a new measure which will really be a counterpart of the care provided in the Home for the Aged setting.

It is evident that many individuals who would qualify for admission to Homes for the Aged might receive adequate care and attention in a private dwelling if financial assistance could be made available for that purpose. I, therefore, propose to develop a programme of special home care for elderly persons, and I am having regulations drawn up to put this scheme into effect.

This special home care for the aged should be most acceptable in the larger centres. By way of explanation, I should point out that the persons who would qualify for this special type of care would be the same persons who would qualify for care in a home for the aged. In the City of Toronto, for example, I would visualize aged persons making application for special home care at a central intake which would actually be an adjunct of the home or homes for the aged in the Toronto area. Providing the applicant was acceptable for admission to a home for the aged, consideration might then be given to the possibility of placing that applicant in a special home-care placement. Coupled with the intake section, there would necessarily have to be a home-finding service for applicants who might be cared for in this way.

I am also proposing that the province would share the costs of maintenance in these special home placements on a 50-50 basis with the responsible municipality up to a total maximum of $60 per month. This special home care for elderly persons would, of course, be optional and at the discretion of the home for the aged and the municipality concerned.

Almost all homes for the aged have waiting lists of persons who desire admission, and I feel certain that many of these persons might be quite adequately cared for in a private dwelling, under the scheme I have proposed. Undoubtedly, there are many people who would be willing to accept elderly persons for care on a room and board basis. I might add that the home for the aged, and the municipality entering into this plan, would necessarily have to be satisfied that the private home placements were suitable, and in the best interests of the persons accepted for such care. The key point in this whole scheme will be a carefully developed home-finding service. The elderly persons placed in these private quarters will have medical services made available to them in the same manner as if they were actually residents of the home for the aged.

I am convinced that this scheme is practical and workable. I was quite interested to see a report from one of the district welfare supervisors of my department which touches on this point. He stated as follows, and I quote:

Mrs. S. has now decided to take into her home an old couple if available. I called the superintendent of the home for the aged, and he promised to keep her in mind. If the situation should arise where he has applicants with no home of their own, unable to gain admission because of lack of space for the time being, he said he would direct them to the home of Mrs. S.

To sum up, then, I believe that the adoption of this plan for special home care for elderly persons would mean:

- (a) a saving in capital costs of construction, as well as depreciation costs;
- (b) a flexible two-way programme of admission and re-admission insuring continuity of care—that is, if it was considered advisable, a person might be transferred from a home for the aged to a special home-care placement or vice versa;
- (c) a way of providing adequate care for the aged in homes in the community, and out of institutions; and
- (d) possibly, a more economical way of providing for the increased proportion of the aged in our population—particularly those who would qualify for admission to a home for the aged, but who are able “to get around” without aid.

As I have mentioned previously, the problems of providing for the ever-increasing number of aged persons must be tackled in many different ways, and I have not exhausted the possibilities. Certainly, one of the things I would urge strongly is that industry should provide employment for as long a period as possible for the older worker. Indeed, I believe that this will be seen as “a must” as time goes on. Furthermore, I would make an appeal for more families to accept responsibility for their older members. Most of us look forward to as long a life as possible. Consequently, we all have a stake in old age, and a share in finding satisfactory solutions to the problems which present themselves as the life span continues to increase.

CONCLUSION

In conclusion, I believe it is fair for me to say that in my department, we have a well-knit staff under a capable group of directors. There is a fine relationship and spirit of co-operation between the personnel of the various branches.

In dealing with the cases which come to our attention, we endeavour to look beyond all the necessary forms and documents required by legislation to the person applying for assistance, and to regard him as an individual entitled to every possible consideration and attention. Naturally, it is our concern to grant assistance to all persons who come within the provisions of the various welfare Acts and regulations. In some instances, we find that certain cases, for various reasons, do not qualify for aid at the time of submitting the applications. The members of the Legislature know that the circumstances of individuals and families frequently change—sometimes within short spans of time. We, therefore, welcome the opportunity of reviewing cases at any time to determine whether the altered circumstances will permit us to render the assistance which we were originally unable to render.

Furthermore, any applicant for welfare assistance to my department should feel free to request reconsideration of, or to appeal his case at any time, particularly if he has reason to feel that some error has been made in the reaching of the decision with respect to his application.

I might add that the field staff of the department is carrying a very large responsibility in connection with "out" cases. They make, on the average, some 12,000 visits monthly relating to applicants or to recipients of the various forms of assistance.

I think I can sum up, best, the approach we have tried to take in the department towards persons who require social welfare services by quoting an old proverb:

Sometimes, that which is given with a kindly hand is more acceptable than that which is given with a full hand.

HON. MR. FROST: Before calling the first Estimate, I would like to inform the House of a change in the order of calling future Estimates. Instead of dealing with the Department of Public Works tomorrow, we will deal with the Department of Reform Institutions, and the Department of Public Works, and the Department of Travel and Publicity will be dealt with on Monday.

Vote No. 142, Main Office, $394,100.
On Vote No. 142.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): I would like to speak about item 24, "Marian Hill Charitable Institution, Pembroke, $9,500." It is a new item. I do not recall ever having seen it in the past. Would the hon. Minister explain what that is for?

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): Item 24, and also 23. There is no provision in the Charitable Institutions Act whereby we can make provision for grants to a charitable organization in connection with renovating an old building. For very obvious reasons, it was not thought advisable that we should make that provision, because there were a great many old buildings in this province which might be taken over by charitable organizations, which, when renovated and rebuilt, would still not be worth the money spent on them. We felt that we had to control this, in view of the fact there are some buildings which do lend themselves to renovation and re-building, and we thought we should give consideration to making a grant to an organization building accommodations which actually are new, for the elderly people.

In the case of the Salvation Army, item No. 23; that is a grant to the Salvation Army as part of the purchase price of the old Galt Hospital, which is not being used for hospital purposes, since the new hospital was built. It is a good building, and we felt we were justified in assisting the Salvation Army by making this grant.

The other is a good building in Pembroke, which the diocese of Pembroke was renovating, and which will accommodate a large number of the aged people in that area. We do not propose to make these grants statutory, but to consider each case on its merits, and this will enable us to make the grants where we think they are justified.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Before asking my question, I would like to express my thanks to the hon. Minister and his staff for the very excellent co-operation we have received throughout the year. I am quite sure I voice the opinion of all hon. members of the Legislature when I say we do appreciate the co-operation received from the hon. Minister of Public Welfare and his staff.

The other day the hon. Prime Minister said that his Minister of Labour, and the Department of Labour was the best in the world. That is covering a great deal of territory, but I will say that the hon. Minister of Public Welfare and his staff have been very courteous and helpful during the past year.

The item upon which I would like to speak deals with the burial of immigrant indigents, in accordance with a provincial agreement.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: In reply to the hon. member for Ontario (Mr. Thomas) we have an agreement with the Federal Government on a 50-50 basis, whereby we assume the responsibility for the burial of any New Canadian who has not had 1 year's residence, and is, therefore, not qualified under the residence rule, as far as a municipality is concerned. That also applies to hospitalization which might be required by a New Canadian.

MR. THOMAS: Is the fee for the burial still $75?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There is no stipulated fee at the present time.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, on Vote 142, item 6: This is a long item containing many different portions, and I want to refer chiefly to "Transportation of Deserting Husbands."

The total amount in this item is $3,000. In that I presume is included the return of deserting husbands back to their homes for prosecution for deserting their families. Is that considered an appropriate amount to look after this item?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We feel it is. There are not too many of them. We have brought back a few, but most of them can pay their own way back.

MR. THOMAS: Mr. Chairman, my question would also come under item 6. Could the hon. Minister tell us how many municipalities are paying the supplementary pensions to those on pension?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I understand there are about 1,000. The municipalities are granting supplementary assistance to about 1,000.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): One thousand people or municipalities?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: One thousand people. There are not that many municipalities.

MR. OLIVER: That is not very many people either.

MR. THOMAS: About how many municipalities, Mr. Minister?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There are about 100 municipalities, assisting about 1,000 people. We do not advertise this too much, so there are not too many.

MR. OLIVER: I do not think it would stand much advertising, anyway.
Vote 142 agreed to.
Vote 143, Child Welfare, $2,455,300.

MR. GRUMMETT: Item 4. Mr. Chairman, away down the page is "Maintenance for children from unorganized territory, committed to the care and custody of the Children's Aid Society, under the Children's Protection Act, and the Juvenile Delinquents' Act, $273,000."

These children are mainly brought in from unorganized territory. Owing to the fact that the husband and father has deserted his family, I believe it is becoming rather a burdensome expense on the province, arising from fathers having deserted their families and leaving them in necessitous circumstances.

As the hon. Minister knows for some years I have been advocating more strict measures for those who desert their families, and I would like to see pressure put on them, to compel them to return and look after their families, or punish them for having deserted.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We have adopted sort of a "get tough" policy. I may say I understand the incidence is much heavier in Cochrane than any place else.

MR. SALSBERG: Would the hon. Minister tell us why?

MR. GOODFELLOW: There is a great deal of low-cost housing there, and these people move in from other places. I am told it is not the local people who are deserting.

We have succeeded in bringing a great many deserting husbands and fathers back. In some cases, the wives object; they would much rather we did not try to find their husbands, for very obvious reasons, because if we are paying Mothers' Allowances, and we find the husbands and bring them back, we have to discontinue the Mothers' Allowances. We have no other course to follow, because the husband is back, even if he is no good, and will not work.

We have to use a great deal of discretion in getting husbands to support their families.

MR. GRUMMETT: Do you not think some municipalities would rather see you not do anything to bring the husbands back? After 1 year the family is taken off municipal relief, and the province takes over, and the municipality is relieved from all further responsibility. The wife and mother may be on Mothers' Allowance for 10 years, and the municipality has no further concern over the family.

Vote 143 agreed to.

Vote 144. Day Nurseries, $324,500, agreed to.

Vote 145. Mothers' Allowances, $7,003,400, agreed to.

MR. THOMAS: I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister the case of a lady who applied for Mothers' Allowance in my riding about 2 weeks ago. This lady's husband was drowned last year, and had left his widow and 2 children, one aged 4, and the other aged 8. The husband had some insurance which provided, on his death, the payment of $50 per month.

After 12 years there was a cash payment provided of $5,000. Now she has limited assets of less than $1,000 and has applied for Mothers' Allowance.

The department's decision was this: that she had to commute that $5,000 over the next 12 years. It would have increased her monthly pension to about $60. Now the husband, when he was alive, took out that insurance policy in order to provide the children with an education when they became 18 years of age. The decision of the department means, of course, that she must now commute that insurance, and I would like to ask the hon. Minister if there is some way in which a position like this may be dealt with? If the pension is commuted now, it will mean that the children will be without the benefit of this money, at the very time when they need it the most.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It has always been the policy that any estate over $1,000 has to be put into a controlled account to be liquidated. It used to be when a child reached the age of 16. Now the age limit is up to 18. A line must be drawn somewhere. How much insurance would the hon. member say a husband should leave to provide for his wife and family, on an annuity basis, before we should have to consider paying Mothers' Allowance? I feel we definitely have to draw a line. I would be glad to look into this particular case, but there are thousands of mothers in this province who have no assets of any kind. It is just a question of how far we should go in respect of assets which are left by way of insurance.

MR. SALSBERG: On this question of Mothers' Allowance, I would like to draw the hon. Minister's attention to the policy being followed in that department which theoretically sounds very convincing—I find it difficult to argue against it—but in practice there have been instances where it has caused hardship. I refer to the policy of not paying mothers who work more than 50 per cent. of the time. The theory behind this decision is to provide proper maternal care for the child, and that is sound, because we are not supporting or aiding mothers, widows or deserted wives because they are mothers or wives, but because they have to take care of their children. That being the case, a policy which seeks to provide the maximum of maternal care and personal attention is laudable, and, so far, I go along with the department. But I want to suggest that while it is true, as the hon. Minister has said that the staff is very helpful and considerate, the regulations ought in some way to be softened up and made a little more flexible, because I suspect that as it is being applied at present we are weeding out and eliminating from the roll families who otherwise would be entitled to our assistance. I think the number of cases carried by the department is smaller than it was a year ago, though I do not see any figure here in the Estimates. On the other hand, the cost is higher. That would speak well for the department, since in other words there are fewer cases and more money being spent on them. But I suggest there are cases where the application of this rule is causing hardship. I have in mind a case where a mother is told not to work more than 3 days a week. She may find it difficult to get employment for 3 days, but she may get a job for 4. Of course we all understand that even with the aid of our assistance, plus her 4 days' earnings, she is still not in a very enviable position. She barely gets by. But if we insist on no more than 3 days, and if she cannot get a job for 3 days, then the problem is clear. Either she must give up the work and live on Mothers' Allowance only or she must give up Mothers' Allowance and live on 4 days' earnings only.

As I say, I agree with the policy. It sounds reasonable. But I do suggest that we need flexibility in its application, and there are instances where the demand for a rigid adherence to the new regulation creates an impossible condition. I have in mind one family where the mother, working in a seasonal trade, may find herself obliged to work more than 3 or 4 days for a very short period, after which she may be unemployed for some weeks. I say that in such cases we should certainly apply our policy very flexibly and with the utmost consideration for the families involved.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The hon. member for St. Andrew almost succeeded in convincing me at one point in his argument. I am not so convinced now. I think our policy is reasonably good.

We did adopt a policy of getting a bit "tough" with those mothers who were working full time. We found there were hundreds of mothers across this province who were drawing Mothers' Allowance benefits in such circumstances, and in many cases they were receiving much less in salaries and wages than they should have been receiving. Employers were taking advantage of them to some extent. I may say we only obtained a reaction from about only 50 full-time working mothers after they had been informed that they would have to cut their working time so as to qualify for the allowance in the proper way.

I do think, however, Mr. Chairman, that a point has now been reached, as we have eliminated a lot of these cases, where we can become a little more flexible and use a little more discretion in dealing with cases on their individual merits.

Vote 145 agreed to.

On Vote 146.

Old Age Assistance Branch—salaries, $280,300.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): In connection with Vote 146, I see, Mr. Chairman, that the total vote is headed "Old age pension grants," but that included in the Vote we have assistance to blind persons and the Blind Persons Allowance Act. In some places expenditure in respect of blind persons' allowances is set out in addition to expenditure for old-age assistance and I was wondering if it would not be possible to divide completely these items in future. It is headed "Old Age Assistance" and why should not this be restricted to a separate item?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There will be no difficulty in doing that. We will do that in future.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, on Vote 146 I should like to say that this is an item upon which I feel very strongly and I commence the few remarks which I intend to make, with the full knowledge that I will bring the wrath of the government and its supporters down on my head. But I can assure the government and its supporters that I am fully conditioned to that, and quite immune. Their disapproval will not hurt me, and they can go ahead. As far as I am concerned, I will not even begin to apologize for what I am going to say.

My remarks on this matter will not be directed to the head of the department, nor to its officials, nor to the hon. Minister. In fact I should be happy if the hon. Minister would sit there and not attempt to answer me, but let the hon. Prime Minister answer instead, because I think this is a matter for which the whole government must take the responsibility.

I refer to the question of old-age assistance. I am glad to see the hon. Prime Minister taking his place in the Chamber. I would also be glad to see old-age assistance given on a scale which would not result in starvation in a great many cases. When that is the situation, one cannot dispose of it by any formal presentation of the case, nor by any humble petition to the government to take it into consideration or to give it attention.

It is true, Mr. Chairman, that I have raised this on previous occasions, and I expect some hon. members on the other side will say: "Why do you not say something new?" But I will continue to say what I am saying, in the House or outside the House, as long as this government persists in a policy which results unquestionably in starvation in many cases.

The present old-age pension is $40 a month. In view of the changes which have taken place in the province during the past few years, the government is actually spending less on assistance to our aged citizens than it has spent in previous financial years. For this year the Estimate is for $5,406,000. That is for old-age assistance, and allowances for blind persons. Last year the Estimate was for $5,526,000; the year before that it was $6,240,000, and for the fiscal year 1951-52 it was $11,300,000. Of course, the $11,300,000 was the year before the introduction of the universal pension for 70 and over, and then there was the big drop. But the drop continues, and the government, on the one hand, is spending less on this most important of services; and on the other hand records increasing surpluses during the same years.

I couple those two things because we have no earthly excuse for refusing to supplement our old-age pensioners by at least as much as other provinces are doing, no financial excuse and no moral excuse. I know the government will say they are ready, and indeed are already sharing with some municipalities a supplementary allowance up to $10 a month on a 50-50 basis. I say that is wrong, first because the municipalities are in no way able to assume additional burdens, whereas the province can discharge this responsibility without the assumption of any burden; and, second, that because of the financial position of the municipalities it is reasonable to assume that they will hesitate to assume this additional cost.

The result is that in a city like Toronto there are 572 old-age assistance recipients who are getting a supplementary allowance up to $10 a month in the form of rental assistance. In other words, where an aged person, who has no other income, comes to the City Welfare Department and shows them that the rent is so high that it leaves very little for food, the city then allows them up to $10 a month to help in paying the rent, and charges the province half of that amount. I think it is wrong.

I cannot speak for the whole province, but I can speak with some degree of knowledge of the situation in this Metropolitan area, and in this area, Mr. Chairman, the facts of life are that it requires a minimum of some $62 a month—a minimum, mind you—to live. And that is on a minimum budgetary basis, as worked out by the Welfare Council. These are inescapable facts, and when we expect them to exist on $40—shared by the city—increased by $10, we are still insisting that some of them starve.

I know “starvation” is a bad word, but there is no other word for it. Mr. Chairman, it is only 3 or 4 days ago—to be exact the 26th of last month—that the Toronto Telegram, a supporter of this government, carried a story on the front page with the following heading:

“Old Folk Hungry On $40 Pension” and the story starts out as follows:

Is it possible that people are going hungry, even to the point of starvation in Toronto? Welfare authority said today it was not only possible, it was inevitable. They quoted statistics to show there must be hundreds, perhaps thousands, of old-age pensioners in the city, and more in some of the suburbs, who cannot possibly be getting enough to eat. Welfare figures show that an old-age person, living entirely on the $40 a month pension, must pay at a minimum for subsistence $7 a week, or $30.33 for a room; $25.84 for men, and $22.50 for women on food; $7 a month for personal care such as laundry soap, toothpaste and such incidentals. Mrs. Jean Good, Secretary of the Division on Old Age of the Toronto Welfare Council, said today: “If they have to pay $30 of their $40 a month for rent—and sometimes they pay more than that, very seldom less—then that leaves them with $10 for food.”

Mr. Chairman, I have quoted from the report of this evening paper to illustrate to hon. members that I am not trying to make a case against the government, as sometimes certain hon. members feel that all I do is criticize. As I have told them in the past, I am quite sure that all the praiseworthy deeds of the government are getting sufficient praise, and I am not called upon to add to the laurels that are handed out to the government by its supporters. I am not making a case, I am merely bringing to the House what other very responsible, very capable and authoritative people in this field know to be the truth.

And Mr. Chairman, may I say to those hon. members who come from the rural areas and who may feel that the situation in their area is different and therefore perhaps have a little less patience with me than maybe some city members; to them may I say that the situation in their areas unquestionably is different. The cost of living is lower, rent is lower: In a small town or village or in a farm area there are certain items that an old-age pensioner, or a couple, will be able to obtain for a fraction of what it costs in a city like Toronto, Hamilton or Ottawa. I therefore ask them to please understand that in a big metropolitan area like this, if one has no relatives to fall back on, but has to rent rooms, then the present pension spells starvation.

I read into the record a year ago statement emanating from the Toronto General Hospital, of cases of elderly people who collapsed in the streets of Toronto, and were diagnosed, after their recovery under hospital care, as having suffered from malnutrition. The records of those cases showed that they had no other source of income, and therefore could not put aside enough money for adequate food to keep themselves in health.

Now these are not stories; these are not things picked from thin air, they are established facts brought to light by those bodies and groups that are created and financed for this purpose.

It means very little, Mr. Chairman, to be told that it is entirely the responsibility of the Federal Government. I am prepared to support the government with everything I am capable of in their efforts to get Ottawa to give more to old-age assistance recipients. But what I insist on, and will continue to insist even though it causes unhappiness maybe among some in the Treasury benches, is that so long as Ottawa does not do it, we, with more money than we know what to do with, must come to the assistance of these people. That is all there is to it.

And I suggest there is no escaping the proposition that I am making.

There is another point that should be hammered away at, and that is that what I am proposing is already in effect in other provinces. In British Columbia, until now there was $10 monthly supplement, plus hospitalization care. Now that province is increasing the supplement to $15, bringing the total up to $55 where proven necessity is established, of course, plus hospitalization. The Province of Alberta gave a $10 supplement, and they are now increasing it to $15, making $55. The Province of Saskatchewan, by no means as wealthy as the others, also gives a supplement which was, to my last knowledge, $2.50 a month, plus hospitalization. But we, in this province, can sit back and say, "Well, Ottawa should do more"—which I agree with, they certainly should—"But we cannot undertake that if Ottawa refuses, because it will create a situation where later on we may have to discontinue certain social welfare services."

I think very highly of the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow), but I must tell him that I could not follow him when he, in his introductory remarks today, advanced this line of argumentation, and quoted, I believe, from the Right Hon. Mr. Martin, about the difficulty of introducing higher pensions because later on we might have to reduce it. I cannot follow that at all.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I was simply saying what the man said.

MR. SALSBERG: I know that, and, of course, it is not a wrong method of presenting one's position, if one can buttress it by what the right hon. gentleman says. But I do not agree with Martin, and I cannot agree with the hon. Minister of Welfare (Mr. Goodfellow) here, and I cannot keep quiet when we are told of such cases of suffering. I cannot keep quiet.

Now, Mr. Chairman, last Saturday I had a very unhappy experience. Two elderly ladies, whose knowledge of the English language is rather poor, came to my office very happy with a clipping of the Toronto Star clutched in their hands, and saying: "Mr. Salsberg, we hear we are going to get more money, and we need it badly. When do we start?"—or words to that effect. I said: "But who told you that?" "Well, a gentleman living in the house gave us this clipping from the paper and said: 'You are getting more money'." When I unfolded the piece of paper, of course all it said was that I had had an argument, I think with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), on the matter of increasing old-age assistance, and that was all. So this gentleman had told them I was trying to get it, and as far as they were concerned, they came down to collect it.

Now, those two elderly ladies need the supplement very badly, and such people exist in every riding in every large centre.

One could say: "Well, I have done my duty, I brought it to the attention of the government; what more can I do", and then go home and have a clear conscience or at least rationalize oneself into a condition where one's conscience is almost clear, and say: "That is all I can do, I tried and the government refused."

Mr. Chairman, I confess that I cannot rationalize it that way for myself. I cannot condition myself to a state of mind that would let me be at peace when people in my and your ridings are evidently not eating enough food, and knowing that there is all the money necessary to provide them with that food. I cannot rationalize it, and I cannot sit down and say: "Well, I have spoken."

I hate to press the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost). I have done it before, and I have done it to those who preceded him. But I should like to hope that there will be a change of policy. I want to say to him that every time I hear him say, when asked about the $58 million surplus: "Well, we are paying off the mortgage," I want to tell him, every time he says that, that he may be paying off part of the mortgage but he is starving his grandparents in the kitchen. I do not think "Old Man Ontario" wants him to pay off a mortgage like that. Besides, we are paying off the mortgage very well without starving anybody. But as it is, I suggest we are starving old people. In addition to providing the extra millions that we have set aside for disposing of the mortgage, you are able to throw in another $20 million there and another $10 million here. But what have you got for those old people? You are saving money on old-age assistance, that is where you are economizing.

The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), who is not in his place, thinks this is a very hilarious matter, and he laughs.

HON. G. H. CHALLIES: We were not laughing at the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. SALSBERG: I want to tell the hon. Attorney-General that he should be ashamed of himself for laughing when these arguments are advanced.

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): I did not hear that.

MR. SALSBERG: He ought to be ashamed of himself, coming back from Wall Street, as he has, too.

MR. W. M. NICKLE (Kingston): Why does not the hon. member go over, and get arrested?

MR. SALSBERG: I leave it to him to get arrested. The hon. Attorney-General is excellent at arresting, and what he arrests mostly in this province is progress. I want to tell him that—

THE CHAIRMAN: Would the hon. member stick to the Estimates, please?

MR. SALSBERG: I am sticking to old-age assistance, and that is the item, and what an item, an inescapable item which is called "146".

I would like to have a very fine public discussion with the hon. Attorney-General in his riding. I would love to go down there and rent a hall—

HON. G. H. DUNBAR: The hon. member would get an audience for the first time.

MR. SALSBERG: Do not worry about my audience, let the hon. Attorney-General and I discuss this question before the people of his riding. Let no one be complacent about it.

MR. J. W. HANNA (Huron-Bruce): Give us a bedtime story.

MR. SALSBERG: This is the type of bedside story which should keep the hon. member awake all night if he has a conscience.

MR. NICKLE: He does stay awake all night.

MR. SALSBERG: If he does stay awake all night, it is not because of what he hears from me, but for other reasons, and they are not such good reasons either. He just cannot sleep.

I conclude for the moment with an appeal to the government to alter its course, and to at least follow the example of other provinces such as British Columbia and Alberta, and provide a supplementary allowance of at least $15 a month; and to also improve the hospitalization services for the aged, and in that manner do the minimum which we are capable of doing for the most deserving section of the population.

In conclusion, I want to say when I suggest a $15 a month supplementary allowance, I am not suggesting a maximum figure.

In discussing this matter with the Commissioner of Public Welfare for the City of Toronto, he told me that in his opinion what is necessary is $20 a month supplementary allowance if the aged people are to get along. I said, "Well, thank you for being so frank in expressing your opinion to me." He said, "My dear sir, that is not meant for you alone. I have said this publicly and if you want, you can quote me."

I agree with him. I am arguing at the moment we at least should do what British Columbia and Alberta have done.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): On that item, I had a case brought to my attention which I am mentioning because I think it has a wide application. It is the case of a woman who is living in a village about 30 miles from Ottawa. As she was widowed, she decided to live with her daughter in Ottawa. She had a house in her village, and through the good offices of a conveyancer, she managed to sell that house, but on a monthly basis.

I am speaking from memory, but I think the purchase price was $3,500, payable $25 a month, plus interest. She is 60 years of age, and she made application for relief.

I understand the policy of the department as agreed upon between the Dominion and Provincial Governments is that a pensioner may retain $1,000 at the age of 70, and draw the pension of a Federal Government thereafter. The balance is to be apportioned in equal shares between her present age and until she reaches 70 years of age: In this instance, the balance between $1,000 and $3,500, or $2,500, is the amount, and as this lady is about 60 years of age, it means that the sum of $2,500 is to be divided in 4 portions, making about $600 a year.

On that basis, since your regulation is to the effect that they may receive $40 provided their income does not exceed $20 a month, it means that the contribution of your department is about $5 a month.

Mr. Chairman, this lady has a security, which brings her about $30 a month. She cannot live on that security, and whereas she should be entitled to $60 a month, actually what she receives is $30 a month. Surely there should be ways and means devised so this lady should be entitled to receive the $60 a month to which she is entitled. I do not know if it would be by transferring to your department that security, or whatever means you may devise, but I think there is real merit to that case. I would like to hear the hon. Minister tell me if there is any method of solving such a problem, because I think this problem is not an isolated one and has probably happened in other cases.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, in the first place, I might say I do not like any part of our old-age assistance programme for people between 65 and 70 years of age, for the very obvious reason that it is unsatisfactory to a great many people. The reason for that is, you cannot explain to them why they have a very restricted means test between 65 and 70, and then the Federal Government becomes Santa Claus at 70 and they get $40 a month regardless of any income or assets they might have.

We have a great many such instances because under the present formula we have to compute any assets over $1,000 by the number of months until they are 70 years of age, and consider that as income under the means test.

We did bring forward at the recent conference we had with the Federal Government, several other suggested formulas, one of which we would hope the Federal Government might consider and adopt, which would take away that very restrictive and unfair computation.

A great many people, without knowing they are in receipt of old-age assistance, perhaps get to a point where they cannot look after themselves, and they sell their home. As long as they have their little home, only 5 per cent. of the assessed value is computed as income. The minute they sell that home, in a great many cases, we must cancel the allowance because they have a sale, yet it might only be a mortgage receivable. In some instances, they might possibly have an arrangement whereby they could get so much a year, but they do not realize, when they do that, they are jeopardizing their assistance.

However, that is the way the computation is at the present time, and I would hope from the discussions which we had at the conference with the federal authorities, that some other system of computing cash and real values might be considered.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On that point, I have a question I would like to ask the hon. Minister.

I hope the hon. Minister will agree with respect to the means test and its severity, that this government has been master in its own house up until now. If it is severe, then it provided the provisions which made it severe, and this government can relax.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We never established the means test.

MR. OLIVER: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We never established the means test.

MR. OLIVER: There is no means test between 65 and 70?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That is set by the Federal Government.

MR. OLIVER: That is right.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Right across Canada.

Votes 146, 147 and 148 agreed to.

On Vote 149, Disabled Persons' Allowances, $2,840,500.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): On Vote 149, would the hon. Minister please tell us how many there are under disablement pensions at the present time?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: As of the present time, there are approximately 5,500. There have been 6,000 who have qualified and about 500 have been transferred or are deceased, or what have you.

MR. THOMAS: That is quite a jump from last year. I think the hon. Minister stated that last year there were 3,300. With the entry of the Federal Government into the scheme, does the hon. Minister think there will be any relaxation of the regulations, does he think there will be an opportunity for more people to qualify and that the total of permanently disabled included will be increased?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I would say that in my opinion the Federal Government is going to follow our present set-up in connection with the administration of disabled allowances almost to the letter. Many of the provinces at the conference were not very favourable to broadening the programme. They wanted it to be more restricted than our own, and until experience has been gained, both by the Federal Government and by the various provinces I think the administration is going to be rather restricted.

Vote 149 agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: moves the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report that it has agreed to certain resolutions and asks leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker. There are 3 private bills for second reading. One of them is the Hamilton bill. I think they might be advanced in committee where they might be dealt with better than on the second reading.

THE CITY OF HAMILTON

MR. COWLING in the absence of Mr. Elliott moves second reading of Bill No. 5, "An Act respecting the City of Hamilton."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. OLIVER: With regard to that bill, Mr. Speaker, I presume the hon. Prime Minister will agree that the amendments shall be printed in with the bill so that they may be considered by hon. members. There may be important amendments.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh yes.

THE CITY OF LONDON

MR. T. PRYDE in the absence of Mr. Robarts, moves second reading of Bill No. 10, "An Act respecting the City of London."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE TOWN OF OAKVILLE

MR. T. PRYDE in the absence of Mr. Hall, moves second reading of Bill No. 31, "An Act respecting the Town of Oakville."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. FROST: There are 3 other second readings in government Orders. If there is going to be any extended debate on the Farm Products Marketing Act, I will hold it over.

FARM PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary) in the absence of Mr. Goodfellow moves second reading of Bill No. 109, "An Act to amend the Farm Products Marketing Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY ACT

HON. MR. PORTER (Attorney-General) moves second reading of Bill No. 129, "An Act to amend the Legislative Assembly Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

HON. MR. PORTER: It is possible an amendment may be introduced in committee, depending on the report of the select committee which was set up to consider certain phases of this bill.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ACT

HON. MR. WELSH moves second reading of Bill No. 131, "An Act to amend the Public Service Act."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

The following bills were read a third time, and passed, and intituled as in the motions:

Bill No. 27, An Act to incorporate the London Foundation.

Bill No. 65, An Act to amend the Corporation Act, 1953.

Bill No. 94, An Act to establish the Ontario Fuel Board.

Bill No. 95, An Act to amend the Public Utilities Act.

Bill No. 96, An Act to amend the Municipal Franchises Act.

Bill No. 97, An Act to amend the Gas Pipeline Act, 1951.

Bill No. 110, An Act to amend the Labour Relations Act.

HON. MR. DOUCETT moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

THE MILK INDUSTRY

House in Committee on Bill No. 68, "An Act respecting the Milk Industry."

On section 1:

MR. OLIVER: May I ask a question of the hon. Minister responsible for this bill? The government promised they would leave this matter before the committee for some time. They have done that. They have kept their promise in that respect. I want to ask the hon. Minister if there has been, of late, any real objection on the part of organized agriculture to the bill as it is presently written, or as to these amendments? If the hon. Minister can tell the House there has not been much objection to it, then there will not be much objection to it tonight, as far as I am concerned.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): I can say that this bill has the whole-hearted support of the 4 producer groups.

Section 1 agreed to.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: There are still 2 amendments to be made.

I move:

1. That section 28 of the bill be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

28. The local boards constituted under the Farm Products Marketing Act and known as the Ontario Cheese Producers' Marketing Board, the Ontario Cream Producers' Marketing Board, and the Ontario Concentrated Milk Producers' Marketing Board are continued as local boards under this part.

2. That section 51 of the bill be struck out and the following be substituted therefor:

51. O. Reg. 100/51, as amended by O. Reg. 17/54, O. Reg. 101/51, as amended by O. Reg. 308/52, O. Reg. 146/54 and O. Reg. 18/54, O. Reg. 102/51 as amended by O. Reg. 309/52, O. Reg. 19/54 and O. Reg. 31/54, Regulations 98 and 99 of Consolidated Regulations of Ontario, 1950, and O. Reg. 40/54, O. Reg. 411/54, and O. Reg. 42/54 shall, except in so far as they are inconsistent with this Act, be deemed to have been made under part III of this Act.

Motion agreed to; bill amended accordingly.

Bill as amended reported.

THE CHILDREN'S PROTECTION ACT, ETC.

House in Committee on Bill No. 77, "An Act to Consolidate and Revise the Children's Protection Act, the Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and the Adoption Act."

Sections 1 to 15 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 16.

MR. OLIVER: On section 16, Mr. Chairman, there has been some objection to certain parts of this provision. Apparently, under this section, the wardship is now removed at the age of 18 except in special cases. Representations have been made to me that it would be better to continue wardship until the wards are 21, but to allow a judge to terminate that responsibility at any time, before a ward reaches that age, if he has reason to do so. What does the hon. Minister say to this?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The people I have consulted on the drafting of this Act—the people who should be conversant with child welfare organization in the province—can see no reason, except in certain circumstances, why wardship should not terminate at the age of 18. After all, it is at the discretion of the judge in any particular case as to when wardship should end. In certain circumstances, unless you have a provision such as is now suggested, a ridiculous situation can arise. You may have a girl who is a ward of a Children's Aid Society and she marries at the age of 16 or 17. She may have a home, and 2 or 3 children, but nevertheless she remains the ward of the Children's Aid Society until she is 21. We feel wardship should be terminated at the age of 18, unless there are special circumstances, and the judge will decide that.

Sections 16 to 18 agreed to.

On section 19.

MR. GRUMMETT: This section provides that a child who is the ward of one Children's Aid Society may be transferred to another Children's Aid Society in the municipality to which the child actually belongs. What is the object of making such transfer?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, may I give you a concrete example? A child, for whom there is a charge-back for maintenance to the town of Sioux Lookout, is a ward of the Toronto Children's Aid Society. In the Kenora district, the per diem rate is, I think, about $1.20 a day, whereas the per diem rate in the City of Toronto is over $2 a day. It seems most unfair, in this particular case—and I am only citing one case, we have several of them—unfair that Sioux Lookout should have to pay the Toronto per diem rate, when a suitable home could be found in the Kenora district, where the child had residence, and where the charge-back is on the municipality of Sioux Lookout at the present time.

MR. GRUMMETT: That is, it may be possible to secure a foster home for such child in his own local municipality?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That is right, a suitable home.

MR. GRUMMETT: What confused me was the wording of the first line, which reads:

Where it is in the interests of the welfare of the ward.

That was why I asked the question.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It is a little misleading, but that is the purpose of it.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, it is a little misleading.

Sections 19 to 26 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 27.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) would explain the purpose of section 27?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I think I had better consult my notes, I never like to get into legal phraseology if I can avoid it. There is no change in that section, Mr. Chairman. It is the same as it was in the former Act, and has always been in effect. That is the reason I have no notes on it, because the only notes I have is where there has been some changes effected from the old Act to the new.

MR. GRUMMETT: I should like to get some explanation of subsections 4 and 5, which have to do with the religious faith of the child, after it is committed.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Of course, they have always observed that very closely, as far as religious faith is concerned. The child takes the faith of the father.

MR. GRUMMETT: It cannot be committed to a family of a different religious faith?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: No, it cannot be. That is followed very closely.

MR. GRUMMETT: The next section, Mr. Chairman, is along the same lines, but I was wondering if that is a very good policy to follow. It provides that the judge, in making the order, may consult the child. A child, 8, 9, or 10 years of age would be under the influence of a foster parent. It may have been boarded out in a home, and could be under the influence of a foster parent of a different religious faith, and when the judge is making the order, such child could be influenced into asking that it be allowed to be brought up in a certain religious faith, which may be different from that of its father.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That would only come into play under very peculiar circumstances. The judge would always first ascertain what the religious faith of the child was. Personally, I do not think that subsection means too much, because I quite agree with the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) that the wishes of the child should not be taken into account in that respect.

MR. GRUMMETT: I would suggest the wishes of the child be disregarded until that child is released from the Children's Aid Society—at least 16 or 18 years of age.

Sections 27 to 30 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 31.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, there was a suggestion from one of the Children's Aid Societies that reducing the age to 10 years was putting it down too low, and that the courts and Children's Aid Societies had formally considered that 14 or 15 years was the earliest age at which a child might be considered competent to decide for itself. I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) should say what is the reason for making that 10 years of age.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: This is in connection with a situation where children have been neglected. It simply makes it an offence to leave any child under 10 years of age unattended for an unreasonable length of time. It is aimed at irresponsible parents, who leave small children unattended, which sometimes results in tragedy of some kind.

MR. GRUMMETT: Mr. Chairman, I wish to commend the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) for this section. I think it is a very good section indeed, and I am glad to see it in the Act.

Sections 31 to 34 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 35.

MR. GRUMMETT: In some of the smaller municipalities, it would be quite difficult for the judge to have separate quarters, other than the magistrate's court, for the hearing of this application. This section might put a very undue burden on the municipality, might it not?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It would not be the intention to enforce it to that extent. They would have to use their judgment in that connection.

Sections 35 to 37 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 38.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on section 38 and a few sections following, I would like to draw the attention of the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) to an item I raised during second reading, which, if approved, would, in my opinion, make a good bill much better.

The hon. Minister will recall that I raised the problem of financing the unmarried mother before confinement, during confinement, and immediately afterwards.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) if, instead of proceeding with his question at this time, he would move the adjournment of consideration of this bill? There are a number of small items on the Order paper which I should like to dispose of, and let this bill stand over.

MR. SALSBERG: I would be glad to accommodate the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost), but this will only take me a minute, and then I shall be through.

HON. MR. FROST: There are 80-odd sections.

MR. SALSBERG: There is only this section in which I am interested. It is entirely up to the hon. Prime Minister, I will gladly leave it over.

HON. MR. FROST: All right.

MR. SALSBERG: What I suggested at the time was that if the government would provide the financial requirements to take care of those special cases, we would, in my opinion, close the door to black-marketeering in babies. I do not want to repeat the argument I made on that subject, as it is on the record. The hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) then replied that I was misinformed, and that there is ample provision through private agencies to take care of such cases. I have since then written, and have received from the Canadian Welfare Council in Ottawa a copy of the policy statement on the residence requirements as they affect unmarried mothers, and it seems that my information was generally correct, that they have made a special study of this, and have come to conclusions that are very, very definite. They recommend:

That provincial governments be requested to assume entire financial responsibility for the maintenance of unmarried mothers and their children where economic assistance from the public funds is necessary.

and so on. I repeat, therefore, the appeal, and if the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) has not that booklet—

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I have had dozens of them.

MR. SALSBERG: I would appeal to him to consider it, because as I said then—and I do not want to prolong the discussion now—most instances of so-called black-marketeering in babies come when the prospective unmarried mother, hesitant to go to some private charitable or religious institution, will go to private people who will finance her, and then take the child from her after she has recovered. If we were to assume financial responsibility in such instances, I think the need for going to private people—whether they be doctors or ordinary citizens—would be done away with. And if the government is not ready to act on it now, I do hope we shall act on it pretty soon.

MR. GRUMMETT: I know the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) has asked to have this bill laid over. Perhaps I could move that it be laid over, because I have one or two more questions.

HON. MR. FROST: That is quite satisfactory.

MR. GRUMMETT. However, at the same time I should like to reserve the right to go back to section 37. My main question is on that section.

HON. MR. FROST: That is all right. It is an important bill.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT moved adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I think we might dispose of a number of non-contentious bills in a few minutes, which would give us additional time for debate and consideration of other important bills later on.

Before proceeding, I would like to refer hon. members to Bill No. 78, the re-distribution bill. I shall mention this again tomorrow when the House convenes. Every hon. member should look at the description of his own riding. As I understand it, the law clerks have modernized the descriptions of the various ridings, by putting in the names of villages and other areas which were not mentioned in the descriptions of 1933, 21 years ago. I suggest each hon. member carefully check over the description of his own riding, to see that it is correct.

Mr. Chairman, I beg to inform the House that the Hon. the Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the proposed resolutions, recommends them to the House.

ASSISTANT CLERK: Resolution by Hon. Mr. Goodfellow, that, the Lieutenant - Governor - in - Council may direct payment out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund to assist in defraying the cost of establishing and erecting new homes for the aged in territorial districts and of additions to or extensions of existing homes for the aged in territorial districts, as provided by Bill No. 121. "An Act to amend The Homes for the Aged Act."

Resolution concurred in.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Resolution by hon. Mr. Welsh, that,

Where fees of the office of a registrar of deeds are insufficient to pay into the Public Service Superannuation Fund the amount required in respect of past services, the balance shall be paid into the Public Service Superannuation Fund out of the Consolidated Revenue Fund, as provided by Bill No. 131, "An Act to amend The Public Service Act."

Resolution concurred in.

THE REGISTRY ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 114, "An Act to amend The Registry Act."

Section 1 agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER moves that section 2 be struck out, and that sections 3 to 17 inclusive, be renumbered accordingly.

HON. MR. PORTER: We have had certain representations about that section, and I think it is perhaps premature.

Amendment agreed to.

Section 2, formerly 3, agreed to.

Sections 4 to 6 inclusive, agreed to.

New section 7 agreed to.

On section 9 (formerly section 8).

HON. MR. PORTER moves that subsection 4 of section 52(a) of the Registry Act, as indicated by section 9 of the bill be repealed, and the following substituted therefor:

(4) This section does not apply to an assurance made to or for the benefit of

(a) A corporation that is licenced or registered under the Insurance Act, the Investment Contract Act, or the Loan and Trust Corporations Act, or

(b) A bank to which The Bank Act (Canada) or

(c) Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation.

Section 9, as amended, agreed to.

Sections 10 to 16 agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER: May this bill be held over? There is another proposal which has just come to me, at this moment, and I must have some time to consider it.

HON. MR. FROST: Do not report the bill. Hold it over for further consideration.

MR. OLIVER: Is the hon. Attorney-General in the mood to consider other amendments?

HON. MR. PORTER: We are open until the last minute, and then we have to close.

THE LAND TITLES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 115, "An Act to amend The Land Titles Act."

Sections 1 to 7 inclusive, agreed to.

Bill No. 115 reported.

THE MUNICIPAL SUBSIDIES ADJUSTMENT ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 120, "An Act to amend The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953."

Sections 1 to 3 inclusive, agreed to.

Bill No. 120 reported.

THE HOMES FOR THE AGED ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 121, "An Act to amend The Homes for the Aged Act."

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive, agreed to.

MR. GRUMMETT: I did not have an opportunity of looking over this bill, but I notice section 1 will permit one municipality, which may be separated by some considerable distance, to go in with another municipality and support a home. That is liable to cause certain confusion, because a municipality which might be of great assistance to one area, might want to transfer its allegiance to another municipality because it might feel the rate would be lower in the other area.

I am thinking of Timmins, for instance, where they are building a home for the aged. Some town which would be in another part of the district might feel it would be to its advantage to transfer its allegiance to Timmins and support the Timmins home, rather than stay in the remainder of the district and be assessed under the general scheme, as applicable to the remainder of the district.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It was designed to take care of the peculiar situation which exists in the City of Port Arthur, which proposes to build a new home for the aged. The Town of Nipigon is also interested in that home, which is to be built in Port Arthur, but the contiguous municipalities between Port Arthur and Nipigon may not be interested.

By this provision, Nipigon can go in with Port Arthur in connection with the home for the aged.

MR. GRUMMETT: Would there be any control over the transfer of allegiance by one municipality to another? What I am getting at is this: Would you be able to say to a municipality, "You have to remain in your part of the district, you cannot transfer to another area merely to escape what might be a heavier assessment"?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: They could not transfer to another district.

MR. GRUMMETT: To a section of the district?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: We might suggest, in our opinion, we would not think it would be advisable, but there is nothing in the act to say they cannot.

MR. GRUMMETT: It might completely upset the remainder of the district. I know the hon. Minister is familiar with Timmins. It is going ahead and building a home of its own, and the remainder of the district is considering a proposition of building a home as well. Suppose one town in the remainder of the district decided it would go in with Timmins. That might completely prevent the remainder of the district building a home. It could take a large assessment into the Timmins area.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: I know the particular situation to which you are referring, and I think in those municipalities adjacent to Timmins, it is only logical and right they should go in with the Town of Timmins. It is much better for the old people to be near a centre like Timmins.

MR. GRUMMETT: I agree it would be for those municipalities contiguous to Timmins, but I am thinking of one or two other municipalities which might have a high assessment, and might feel it would be to their advantage.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It would require the approval of the Minister.

MR. GRUMMETT: As long as the municipality would be required to have the approval of the Minister, I am satisfied.

Sections 5 and 6 agreed to.

Bill No. 121 reported.

THE GRAND RIVER CONSERVATION ACT, 1938

House in Committee on Bill No. 122, "an Act to amend the Grand River Conservation Act, 1938."

THE COMMUNITY CENTRES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 126, "an Act to amend the Community Centres Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

Bill No. 126 reported.

THE LOAN AND TRUST CORPORATIONS ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 127,
"an Act to amend the Loan and Trust Corporations Act."

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill No. 127 reported.

THE FIRE MARSHAL'S ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 128,
"an Act to amend the Fire Marshal's Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.
Bill No. 128 reported.

CERTAIN LANDS IN THE CITY OF PORT ARTHUR

House in Committee on Bill No. 130,
"an Act respecting certain lands in the City of Port Arthur, occupied by the Ontario Hospital, Port Arthur."

Sections 1 to 6 inclusive, agreed to.
Schedules A and B agreed to.
Bill No. 130 reported.

"an Act respecting the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto."

Sections 1 to 8 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill No. 135 reported.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumes; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT: Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report it has come to 2 resolutions, and reports certain bills without amendment, 1 bill with amendment, and progress on 2 bills.

Report agreed to.

HON. R. FROST: Mr. Speaker, as
I reminded the House, this evening, tomorrow we will consider the Estimates of the Department of Reform Institutions. During the afternoon we might be able to dispose of item No. 9 on today's Order paper, the further consideration of the Report of the Select Committee appointed to inquire into conditions concerning the Reform Institutions.

If there is any time left, we might go into committee on some bills, but I rather doubt that.

HON. MR. FROST moves adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 11.20 of the clock p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

FRIDAY, APRIL 2, 1954.

2.00 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister) moves that the Provincial Auditor be authorized to pay the salaries of the civil servants and all other necessary payments pending the voting of Supply for the fiscal year commencing April 1st, 1954, such payments to be charged to the proper appropriation following the voting of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that when this House adjourns the present sittings thereof, it does stand adjourned until 2 of the clock Monday afternoon, and that the provisions of Rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended so far as they might apply to this motion.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. MR. WELSH: Mr. Speaker, I beg leave to present to the House, the following:

The Report of the Minister of Lands and Forests of the Province of Ontario for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1953.

HON. MR. FROST: Before the Orders of the day, I again remind the hon. members of the House to look at the provisions of Bill 78, respecting the representation of the people in the Legislative Assembly.

In the report of the committee, the great majority of ridings are unaltered in their boundaries. Regarding this bill, the law clerks and others have endeavoured to bring up-to-date the descriptions of municipalities within the various ridings. It may be that the status of a village has been changed, in the meantime, to that of a town, or there may be an improvement district, or something of that nature.

Every hon. member should read over the description of his own riding, over this weekend, carefully to see there are no errors or omissions, which might easily happen, because there are 98 ridings outlined in the bill.

The following bills were moved a third time, passed, and intituled as in the motion:

Bill No. 68, An Act respecting the Milk Industry.

Bill No. 115, An Act to amend The Land Titles Act.

Bill No. 120, An Act to amend The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953.

Bill No. 121, An Act to amend The Homes for the Aged Act.

Bill No. 122, An Act to amend The Grand River Conservation Act, 1938.

Bill No. 125, An Act to amend The Disabled Persons' Allowance Act.

Bill No. 126, An Act to amend The Community Centres Act.

Bill No. 127, An Act to amend The Loan and Trust Corporations Act.

Bill No. 128, An Act to amend The Fire Marshal's Act.

Bill No. 130, An Act respecting Certain Lands in the City of Port Arthur occupied by the Ontario Hospital, Port Arthur.

Bill No. 132, An Act to amend The Liquor Licence Act.

Bill No. 134, An Act to amend The Travelling Shows Act.

Bill No. 135, An Act respecting the Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto.

THE ONTARIO CANCER TREATMENT AND RESEARCH FOUNDATION ACT, 1943

HON. MR. M. PHILLIPS moves second reading of Bill 141, "An Act to amend The Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation Act, 1943."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

THE CONSOLIDATED REVENUE FUND

HON. L. M. FROST moves second reading of Bill 142, "An Act to authorize the Raising of Money on the Credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund."

Motion agreed to; second reading of the bill.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Is this the same amount as last year?

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know whether it is the same amount as last year, but it is the "small sum" of $100 million.

MR. OLIVER: I see that.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I would like to vary the Order, I announced yesterday, and instead of proceeding at once into Estimates, to call Order No. 21. There are a few matters which are non-contentious, and may be dealt with in committee stage.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of the Whole; Mr. T. R. Dent in the Chair.

BAPTIST CONVENTION OF ONTARIO AND QUEBEC

THE CHILD WELFARE ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 77, "An Act to Consolidate and Revise the Children's Protection Act, The Children of Unmarried Parents Act, and the Adoption Act."

On section 37:

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I would like to have the hon. Minister explain why this section is necessary in the bill. What is the object of bringing children from other provinces into the Province of Ontario, to be cared for by the Province of Ontario? Why is that section necessary in our Act?

HON. W. A. GOODFELLOW (Minister of Public Welfare): I am sorry I did not hear the first part of the question.

MR. GRUMMETT: As I understand this section, it provides for permission to be granted organizations to bring children into the Province of Ontario from other provinces, to care for them within the Province of Ontario. What is the reason for this procedure?

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: What section is that?

MR. GRUMMETT: Section 37.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: That is not a new subsection. That practice has been carried on for some time. Children are brought in who have no relatives to look after them, and the societies assume the responsibility for those children until they are 18.

MR. GRUMMETT: This does not relate to bringing them in and to handing them over to relatives. As I read it, it is handing them over to organizations.

Section 37 to 85 inclusive, agreed to.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On section 85, may I ask the Minister to explain this point. There is a new power here given to the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to make regulations and prescribe provisions to be included in the by-laws of Children's Aid Societies. That is a new venture on the part of the government, is it not? I always understood that Children's Aid Societies were self-governing. This seems to be an invasion of a field which heretofore has been left to the societies.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: The purpose of this, Mr. Chairman, is to enable uniform by-laws to be drawn up for the societies across the province. It is being done at the request of a great many societies.

MR. OLIVER: This says the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may prescribe provisions to be included in the by-laws. That gives the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council the power to vary the by-laws and put something in them from a government point of view. That is different from what the hon. Minister has said. He said the purpose was to supply the societies with by-laws of a uniform standard. If that is the purpose, why not say that? It looks here as if the government could prescribe certain by-laws for some of the Children's Aid Societies and different by-laws for other societies. This does not lend itself to uniformity.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: It will be our purpose to make the by-laws uniform, but there may be certain provisions we may wish to put into the by-laws.

Sections 86 to 89 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill number 77 reported.

THE REGISTRY ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 114,
"An Act to amend the Registry Act."

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): Mr. Chairman, when this bill was last in consideration we got to section 9, and I have a further amendment which I wish to submit. I move:

That subsection 2 of section 52 of the Registry Act as enacted by section 9 of the bill be amended by inserting after the word "corporation" in the fifth line the words "by the Attorney-General for the purpose of executing such assurance on behalf of the corporation in accordance with the provisions of this Act."

This amendment is entirely for the purpose of convenience in registering documents. Sometimes it was inconvenient to obtain the signature of an officer of a company, and if there is a general power of attorney registered enabling a certain person to execute documents or make affidavits on behalf of a corporation, that should be sufficient. This question has arisen particularly in connection with the considerable amount of business being done with oil and gas leases and affairs of that kind. I see no objection to allowing this simpler way of doing business.

Section 9 as amended agreed to.

Bill No. 114 reported.

THE HIGHWAY TRAFFIC ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 83, "An Act to amend the Highway Traffic Act."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Chairman, I would like to move an amendment that section 3 of the bill be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

Subsection 4 of section 19 of The Highway Traffic Act is amended by inserting after the word "vehicle" in the second line the words "or farm tractor" and by adding at the end thereof the words "or to a trailer or other object or device when drawn directly across a highway by a farm tractor."

Section 3 as amended agreed to.

Section 4 agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: On section 5, Mr. Chairman, I wish to move the following amendment:

That subsection 1a of section 28 of The Highway Traffic Act as enacted by subsection 2 of section 5 of this bill, is amended by striking out the words "highways applicable to all highways" in the fourth line and inserting the words "any highway or portion of a highway."

Also I would wish to move:

That subsection 2a of section 28 of The Highway Traffic Act, as enacted by subsection 2 of section 5 of this bill, is amended by striking out the words "the council of The Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto" in the first and second lines.

Section 5 as amended agreed to.

Sections 6 to 9 inclusive agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I wish to move an amendment to section 10, as follows:

Every penalty collected for an offence committed on the King's Highway outside a city, town or village and on any portion of the King's Highway that is designated as a controlled-access highway shall be paid to the department and every penalty collected for an offence committed on any other highway, including any portion of the King's Highway that is not designated as a controlled-access highway within a city, town or village, shall be paid to the local municipality in which the offence was committed.

MR. A. K. ROBERTS (St. Patrick): Mr. Chairman, with reference to the amendment in section 5, the amendment striking out the words "the council of the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto." Does that mean the municipality of Metropolitan Toronto will not be able to pass by-laws allowing a speed greater than 30 miles an hour?

HON. MR. DOUCETT: No. This amendment will make it clear that the municipality has the power to do both. I think the amendment which deleted the reference to Metropolitan Toronto was section 86 of the Municipality of Metropolitan Toronto Act, 1953, which gives the Metropolitan Corporation all the powers conferred upon a city under The Highway Traffic Act so that it would have the same powers as a city as to decreasing and increasing speeds with respect to Metropolitan roads.

Section 10 as amended agreed to.

HON. MR. DOUCETT: Mr. Chairman, I wish to move that section 11 of the bill be struck out and that section 12 of the bill be renumbered as section 11 and that a new section 12 be added as follows:

12. Section 106 of The Highway Traffic Act is repealed.

Section 11 as amended agreed to.

Section 12 as amended agreed to.

Sections 13 to 16 inclusive agreed to.

Bill No. 83 reported.

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 112, "An Act to amend the Municipal Act."

On section 1.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) a general question upon which there has been some discussion in the press and elsewhere, whether he will say anything as to the eligibility of certain deputy-reeves who sit in County Councils? Has the hon. Minister given that problem any study, and is there any clarification of the position in any amendments to the Municipal Act this year?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: No. There was no discussion in any County Council regarding that at all. In the Improvement District of Ajax, the Chairman of the Board felt he had business affairs to attend to at a certain time of the year when the County Council was meeting. There is no trouble in making the other man chairman, the man he wanted to vote in his place, and the other vice-chairman. So there is no need to change the Act for the whole Province of Ontario.

Sections 2 to 11 inclusive agreed to.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, on section 11, I wish to move an amendment, and I ask your permission, Mr. Chairman, to explain the purpose of the amendment. It is intended to make it abundantly clear that a citizen should have the right to ask a police commission for an explanation of why the commission revokes, or refuses the granting of licences.

As matters now stand, the police commissions are not obliged to inform an applicant of the reasons why he has his application refused, and this refusal may be based upon information provided by police officers or others. Sometimes that information may justify a refusal.

HON. MR. FROST: What section is that?

MR. SALSBERG: Section 11. At other times the information may be inaccurate and as a consequence a citizen might be unfairly denied the right of conducting a business and earning his livelihood in the manner he chooses. The people affected are those who apply for licences to operate restaurants, taxi cabs and so on. The police decline to furnish them with reasons why a licence has been refused. I believe that under the law they are entitled to do so.

I want to acknowledge, Mr. Chairman, the need for carefully scrutinizing applicants for such licences, particularly in the larger centres. Those holding licences of this kind should not permit the use of their business establishments for gatherings of thieves, gangs of underworld crooks and so on. Nevertheless, I suggest citizens should have the right to ask for an explanation of the reasons why an application for the licence has been refused and therefore, Mr. Chairman, I move that subsection 1 of section 11 of the bill be struck out, and the following substituted therefor:

(1) Subsection 4 of section 263 of The Municipal Act is repealed and the following substituted therefor:

(4) Subject to the Theatres Act, 1953, the granting or refusing of a licence to any person to carry on a particular trade, calling, business or occupation, or of revoking a licence under any of the powers conferred upon a council or a board of commissioners of police by this or any other Act, shall be in its discretion, and it shall not be bound to give any reason for refusing or revoking a licence except that a board of commissioners of police, upon request by the applicant or holder of a licence, shall give to the applicant its reasons for the refusal or revocation.

Amendment put from the Chair.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I hoped the government would indicate its intention of this and not just let it go by a vote. May I say that this matter is of general concern. Some newspapers in our city have editorialized on it. I want to bring it to the attention of hon. members so that they may express their opinions upon it in view of the public interest in this section of the bill. I do ask that the government should express its opinion on this question, and if it is not in favour of the amendment, I hope it will explain its point of view. On the other hand, if it agrees with me, let us incorporate the amendment in the bill. It is in the interests, I think, of all citizens in our community.

MR. R. J. YAREMKO (Bellwoods): I do not want to take part in a debate, Mr. Chairman, but the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) stated that the newspapers editorialized on this matter he referred to in his amendment. I have been following the newspapers very closely, and I do not think that any of the newspapers have commented on this question in the past month. I have seen no reference to the subject matter of his amendment.

MR. SALSBERG: I am inclined to disagree with the hon. member. I am trying to find the references.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Was this bill amended in committee?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, it was amended in committee. I think the hon. member for Bellwoods (Mr. Yaremko) himself moved an amendment, and it was carried, that the revoking of a licence could be appealed.

MR. OLIVER: How would the hon. Minister argue that one should grant an appeal in one case and not in another?

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Well, revoking a licence and issuing a licence are quite different things. I think a police commission should have great powers. If you are issuing taxicab licences you have to see that they are issued only to persons whose character is good enough to enable licences to be granted without risk to the public. We certainly must put some faith in the police commission. Its members are leading citizens of the community, and we have got to trust them to this extent, I think. If the right to question a refusal were granted, the commission would have to reply: "Well, you have been in Kingston"—and so on.

MR. OLIVER: If an applicant had been in Kingston penitentiary, he would hardly think it worthwhile to appeal.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member for St. Andrew's (Mr. Salsberg) proposed amendment does not touch the point that the hon. Leader of the Opposition is raising. All the amendment does is to say that the police commission has complete discretion, but it must give reasons for what it does if someone wants to know why his application has been refused.

I cannot understand how that is going to give an applicant any satisfaction or do him any good. But there is a fundamental distinction between the granting of licences and revocation. The police commission under this section, and under the section as it was, has complete discretion as to the number of taxicabs which should be permitted on the streets, and who should be allowed to drive them. Its members have to make up their minds as best they can, on the information they get, about the qualifications of any man to drive a taxicab on the streets of any particular city. A provision under this Act allowing an appeal to be made would simply mean that a Supreme Court judge would substitute his discretion for that of the police commission. I submit to this House that this is really not the sort of case which should properly go to a court.

It seems to me that this is a question of municipal policy—how many taxicabs should be allowed, and what the terms and conditions should be—in order to protect the public. The police commission must have a free hand in acting upon any sort of information it can gather about any particular applicant. On behalf of the public, it should not take risks in deciding who should be permitted to drive taxicabs when it has some reason even to suspect that an applicant is not a fit and proper person to drive such a vehicle.

When an appeal from that sort of decision arises, the court sometimes decides that it must see what the evidence is if an applicant had no conviction against him, or if the evidence appeared to the judge as being too slight, he might use his own discretion.

I maintain that this is really a matter of municipal policy which should be in the hands of the commission. On the other hand, once a licence is granted it can be presumed that a man has invested money in the taxicab and in the business. Once the commission has decided that, so far as it can see, he is a fit and proper person to carry on that business. If the question of revocation arises it is quite a different matter and it seems to me proper that the onus should be shifted and that the commission should have very strong ground for revoking the licence.

Once they have given a man an interest and a financial stake, something he has had to pay for, and by the loss of which he might lose his livelihood. The loss is something which could be dealt with on appeal. But when a man first applies for a taxi licence, he has no interest built up, and is in a different position. That seems to be the explanation of the difference between these two situations, and I think they are sound.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I want to point out that the hon. Attorney-General spoke mainly about the taxi business to illustrate the point he wanted to make. I have no quarrel with that. I agree, if the Act is amended it will give a person, whose licence has been revoked, some recourse. But I cannot, for the life of me, see why a citizen who desires to enter a business—which in many cases is a small business—should not have the right to be told by the police commission—even in private—why the application was refused.

HON. MR. FROST: What possible good would that do?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, what good would it do?

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs said the police have all the evidence before the commission, but I suggest the police record may not always be a correct one.

HON. MR. PORTER: The commission does not act only on police records.

MR. SALSBERG: It acts on information from various sources channelled to it by the police. We cannot assume the police are infallible, or that there may not be some personal motivation. It is not impossible that could be the case.

It seems the least a person could expect, would be to be told, or his counsel be told for him by somebody in the police commission, why he is not given the right to open a cigar store, or operate a restaurant, or something like that. That is not interfering. I would say, with the normal operations of the discretionary powers of the police commission.

I agree with that. All I am saying is, that it is reasonable for a person to be told why he is deprived of the opportunity of earning his livelihood in a given business.

If the information is wrong, he might then re-open the case with the police commission, and perhaps convince the members they were wrong. As a result, he might get his licence.

The amendment negatived.

Sections 11 to 18 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 19.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Chairman, on section 19, clause 7, on page 10: I notice that the hon. Minister has increased the capital cost—the subsection E reads:

The capital cost or a part thereof to be levied against lands under clause "A," shall be raised by a special levy against the lands in not more than 5 years in accordance with the schedule attended to the by-law.

I would like to congratulate the hon. Minister for raising that from 1 to 5 years. There was some discussion in committee about extending it a little more, up to 20 years, or 10 years at the least.

I was wondering if the hon. Minister would like to comment on that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes, it is quite simple. The Ontario Municipal Association discussed it fully, and recommended it be raised from 1 year to 5. That is what I was asked to do, and I agreed.

I am afraid if it were raised to 20 years, somebody would suggest 40 and make a "racket" out of it. A man could then buy a lot which would increase in value so much over a period of 20 years, he'd be able to hold it at a fixed assessment, or be able to pay for it in 20 years. He could not buy it on his own volition, but would have the municipality buy it for him, and he would pay so much money a year. I think that creates a very dangerous situation. When it was discussed in the meeting of the Municipal Association, it was pointed out that 5 years should be the limit.

MR. COWLING: I suppose when the parking situation is changed from month to month in all areas, further consideration will be given in another year.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Oh yes.
Sections 19 to 39 agreed to.
Bill No. 112 reported.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 113,
"An Act to amend The Assessment Act."

Sections 1 to 12 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 13.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment, which reads as follows:

13. (1) Where, by reason of an annexation or amalgamation or the incorporation of an urban municipality or metropolitan municipality, undue hardship is placed upon veterans holding land in a local municipality under the Veterans' Land Act (Canada), the council of the local municipality may by by-law, subject to the approval of the Ontario Municipal Board, provide that such lands shall be assessed for such percentage of the actual value as the by-law provides.

(2) A by-law passed under subsection 1,

(a) shall apply only to lands held by veterans on the day this Act receives Royal Assent; and

(b) shall cease to apply to any land as soon as the veteran's ownership thereof is established.

We might as well give credit where credit is due, and I will tell the hon. members that this is known as the "Beach-MacKenzie Amendment."

MR. SALSBERG: Will the hon. member explain the purpose?

Section 13 as amended agreed to.

Sections 14 and 15 agreed to.

Bill No. 113 reported.

HON. MR. FROST: Is there any objection to calling Orders 28 and 29?

MR. SALSBERG: No, go right ahead.

THE CEMETERIES ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 128,
"An Act to amend the Cemeteries Act."

Section 1 to 3 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 4.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, is there any reference to the percentage to be used for perpetual care? I have not had an opportunity of reading the Act. Just glancing through it, I cannot see any reference to percentages.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, perhaps I may explain to the hon. member that a full and complete report of the committee was presented. I think the hon. Minister of Health, (Mr. Phillips) felt, as did all of us, that there should be some immediate controls effected, therefore, this bill now before the House was introduced.

This does not profess to be the last word. The situation is being given careful study, but, in the interim, it was thought this matter should be held under control during the ensuing year, otherwise it might run wild.

Sections 4 to 7 inclusive, agreed to.

MR. THOMAS: Before the bill is reported I think the government should lose no time in setting up a commission.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. THOMAS: There are some of these cemetery operators who are really running "hog wild."

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. That is what we intend to do.

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: That will be done.

Bill No. 128 reported.

THE PHARMACY ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 133, "An Act to amend the Pharmacy Act, 1953."

On section 1.

MR. SALSBERG: Is that not the same Act as last year with one amendment?

HON. MR. PHILLIPS: That is about it. There are actually two amendments.

MR. SALSBERG: We enacted this law a year ago, but it was not proclaimed.

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive, agreed to.
Bill No. 133 reported.

THE FARM PRODUCTS MARKETING ACT

The House in Committee on Bill No. 109, "An Act to amend the Farm Products Marketing Act."

Sections 1 to 5 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 6.

MR. SALSBERG: I would like to direct a question to the hon. Minister. Is there anything in this Act which would help the tobacco growers of the Delhi area, who are at the moment in a veritable uprising against the methods of the tobacco corporation, which is a part of the entire marketing set-up? From the latest information I have, the buyer section of the industry is attempting to dominate the board in that very important field. The result is that the Delhi, and other papers of that area, are treating this as a major issue. The farmers are extremely disturbed and upset, and I am wondering if anything in this Act will provide some protection for the tobacco growers in that field.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: Mr. Chairman, all the Act does is to set up the machinery so that a group of producers of any commodity can form a marketing scheme, provided they secure a sufficient number of producers to support it. This provides the machinery for them to market their own products.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): The marketing of tobacco is not in that agreement.

HON. MR. GOODFELLOW: No. They had a vote on it about a year ago, but it did not carry.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 131, "An Act to amend The Public Service Act."

On section 1.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Chairman, I have an amendment which I would like to present.

I move,

That subsection 5 be amended by striking out the words "in any year" in the first line, by striking out the words "in that year" in the sixth line and by striking out the words "in that year" in the eighth and ninth lines.

These words are deleted in order that all persons, affected by the new provision may be dealt with alike, including a small group who have already made full payment in respect of their past services.

Bill No. 131 reported.

HON. MR. FROST moves the committee rise and report certain bills with and certain bills without amendment.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Chairman, the Committee of the Whole House begs to report 9 bills without amendment, and 4 bills with amendment, and moves the adoption of the report.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

ESTIMATES: THE DEPARTMENT OF REFORM INSTITUTIONS

HON. JOHN FOOTE, V.C. (Minister of Reform Institutions): Mr. Chairman, this has been a very interesting, difficult and instructive year for the Department of Reform Institutions. In some years we have had, in addition to our regular routine programme, riots, jail breaks, and other notorious incidents. This year we have had a Select Committee of the Legislature.

It has been a difficult year for us in many ways; firstly, because it made very heavy demands upon my staff, which had to be met, in addition to their arduous and demanding routine tasks. I should like to say most emphatically that my people have been equal to the demands made upon them, and have cheerfully and efficiently co-operated with the chairman and his committee. I think the chairman of the committee (Mr. Stewart) will agree wholeheartedly with this laudation.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Hear, hear.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Secondly, I think it must be realized that because most of the hearings have been public and open to the press, many irritating observations have been made as the enquiry proceeded, which were never intended by the committee to be taken as final conclusions. Discontented employees, ex-employees, inmates, both current and post-graduate, have had ample opportunity to express their views, whether they were sound or unsound, foolish or sensible. Every detail of administration has been examined, and every weakness as well as strength brought to light.

I think this is as it should be. But in the process it caused a certain amount of dissatisfaction at times, which was inevitable. It is never pleasant to be criticized, and it is not conducive always to sweetness and light to have all one's weaknesses brought under the fierce light of publicity. Nevertheless, it is necessary, and it is right. It is the procedure which ensures respect and confidence in our democratic way of life.

I want to say that the chairman of this Select Committee had no easy job, nor did he have an easy time of it. I think at times he could have been much more suave and popular if he had made this enquiry an occasion for eulogizing this department or the government, and by giving a disproportionate emphasis to the things that were good and constructive. But what he did was an honest, diligent, fearless and intelligent piece of work which, if it uncovered weaknesses which were embarrassing, it also created public confidence in the government, and gave to this department a blueprint for the future, which, if it is followed, will assure to Ontario a plan second to none in the field of penology.

Perhaps one of the most difficult tasks that will follow a study of this report, will be the effort to be in complete agreement with the committee, and, at the same time, in complete agreement with the hon. Provincial Treasurer (Mr. Frost).

What I say of the chairman is also true of the committee. To begin with, let me remind hon. members that this committee was not "wished upon us," it was proposed by the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon), who, in his own day, administered this department. It was accepted by me as an honest proposition, to study a field which is admittedly controversial, and extremely complex. I was sorry that the hon. member for Brant was not a member of this committee, but the hon. members of his Party were good representatives, as were all the members of the committee, whether Opposition or our own.

Their gifts and abilities have been applied faithfully to the problems set before them. They have been frank, and I may say, at times unpredictable, but they have done a job which has received the acclaim of the public, and most of the press, and I thank them today most sincerely for it.

Before I finish with the committee, I wish to make an observation which I hope the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle) will take in good part. I see he is not in his place today, but I spoke to him about it yesterday, and told him what I was going to say. He spoke of the "mess" which I had inherited. I think what he meant by that was that in the stage of our development in the department, we have been faced by many problems which had sprung upon us, due to the very rapid growth in population, and which it had been difficult to foresee or estimate, or sometimes cope with. I do not think the hon. member for Kingston would overlook the tremendous contribution which has been made in the field of penology, going back to the ministry of the hon. Mr. Hanna, and continuing through the ministries of the present Vice-Chairman of Hydro (Mr. Challies), the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar), and the former hon. Minister who represents the riding of Wellington South (Mr. Hamilton), and the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon).

I shall never be able to repay my debt to the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) for the very kindly and wise counsel he has given me, ever since I assumed the position as Minister of the department. The vision which he has shown in the department in the days when he was not only Provincial Secretary but also Minister of Game and Fisheries and of Municipal Affairs has been truly amazing. Following his studies of systems in England and Europe, he established Brampton on the Superior Borstal Plan, an institution which met, I believe, pretty well with the unqualified approval of the Select Committee.

More important, I think, we are indebted to him for his conception of the industrial farm system, whereby those who formerly languished in jails were transplanted to open institutions, where they could work at healthful employment, and be subject to reform influences which would turn them out, if they had any good response to make, as citizens who possess a new outlook on life. This was a wholly new conception of penology in this province, which I think should win for the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs a lasting memorial, and be, some day, a crown to his long and distinguished career as an hon. member of this House, and as a Minister.

I have here quite a volume of observations that I could make, based on studies on this subject which date back in the province from the time of Egerton Ryerson, through a campaign waged by the hon. S. H. Blake, Q.C., in 1896, on to the various committees up to the famous and valuable Archambault Report. And I think at this juncture I should say a good word for the hon. member for Kingston (Mr. Nickle), and pay tribute to the very excellent work he did in connection with that report, and to the valuable influence of his distinguished father.

There are many interesting things in my file here, but I am not going to take the time of the House at present to deal with them. I am going to content myself with saying that in the first place I agree in the main with the Report of the Select Committee, and I shall do my best, during my tenure of office, to implement it.

Secondly, in the Estimates which I shall place before the House, I sincerely believe we are "going the limit" to put these principles into practice this year. We shall have a current expenditure of nearly $9 million, plus a capital expenditure of at least $2 million, which, in fact, may run higher. This, to my way of thinking, is the maximum proportion of our provincial income, to which the department is entitled, and I think it is in line with the suggestions of the committee that we adopt a progressive programme of augmentation of these suggestions, and I think the committee should take it as an act of good faith on the part of the government and of the department that this year's expenditure does provide a beginning for this programme.

When we attempt to evaluate our responsibility to the people of Ontario, I think our first consideration is to create a healthy, economic condition in which the young people of our province may find jobs and opportunities. I do not want them to be handicapped by spending an undue proportion of our income on people who are weak and unworthy of their responsibilities. I will treat all our unfortunate inmate population as fairly as I can, and I know that this will be the policy of my staff. I will encourage all those who want to accept a new way of life, and who will fight their way back bravely to the position of confidence which they have lost by their own betrayal.

I have heard a great variety of opinions expressed about the way to do this work, and indeed everyone who has a point of view seems to have great convictions and is very sure that he is right. I have said sometimes it is a little irritating to find people who know everything about everything. I have not heard the committee, though, say very much about the field of theology, and if I do not know much about reform institutions, I have had some training in theology, and about 20 years' experience in the ministry, and I will tell you it is theologically correct and sound that no person ever reformed anybody else. People are reformed by the Grace of God, and by their own determination to change their way of looking at things, and their outlook on life.

"Reform institutions" is a peculiar name; a name which I have never liked because it assumes that you could take the people of this province who were the least worthy and who have caused the most trouble—some of them with a career that has extended over half of their lifetime or more—and if you had a good institution and a good staff, you could turn these people out with a normal outlook on life as decent, honest citizens. The truth is you can do nothing of the kind; all you can do is to help the people who want to help themselves, and that we intend to do. We will be as fair and as constructive as we can, but no matter what opinions are expressed, and by which we may be bombarded, I will not pamper nor "toady" to those who make demands which are unsound and unreasonable—and I am speaking of our prison population.

As far as possible, there will be discipline and control, without sentimentality or weakness, and those people who find their way into our institutions will have to learn that no rehabilitation is possible unless they learn respect for authority and discipline, and are prepared to give something, and to work for the common good, with regards to the rights of persons and property.

The people who form the solid backbone and framework of our democracy are entitled to protection on the score of their persons and property. I think that is a lesson which many people have to learn.

I have confidence the probation system will take the strain off our jails, and prevent some of the overcrowding that we have, but I think this field of probation may have some limitations. I think that is realized by the people who advocate it. It will be for people who are guilty of minor rather than vicious crimes, and who will be in for short periods. I think it should relieve the pressure by caring for those who have received relatively short sentences.

Mr. Chairman, there are many subjects left with which to deal, of which I could speak at this time, if it were not for the realization that, as we proceed with the Estimates, these subjects will come before you for consideration. I shall be glad to take time for a full and comprehensive discussion of whatever may engage your attention. So, with your permission, we shall now proceed to the consideration of our programme for the coming fiscal year.

THE CHAIRMAN: Item 10, Workmen's Compensation Board, Awards and Costs, $7,000.

Item 10 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Item 11, Grants, $203,000.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, Vote 164, item 11, covers grants. I presume these grants to training schools totalling $173,000, are to training schools which are not wholly under the jurisdiction of the department. Is that correct?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: As the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) knows, we have private training schools, which are run by the Roman Catholic Church.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes. This has nothing whatsoever to do with the training schools which are under the department?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: No, just the private ones.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, referring to item 11, I was shocked when I learned that children as young as 7 years of age are committed to these training schools.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: What age did the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) say?

MR. SALSBERG: Seven. I found this to be so at the meeting of the committee where the training schools report was given, but it is contained also in the report of the department on page 38, "Training Schools Committals and Admissions for the Year Ending March 31st, 1953."

I think it is somewhat alarming to find that children of such tender age should be taken away from home environments and institutionalized in training schools which, in my opinion, are unfit and unprepared to treat children of that age. The report of the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) gives the ages of children committed during the year as follows:

7	years	of	age	-	2
8	"	"	"	-	5
9	"	"	"	-	11

and so on; the numbers keep on rising until at the age of 15 we have 173, so the largest number come from ages of 14 and 15.

I must confess I was not very much impressed by the presentation made to the Committee on Commissions from the representative of the Advisory Committee, I think it is called, or the Advisory Board for Training Schools. The gentlemen on that board are undoubtedly well meaning, but I doubt they have the necessary approach to deal with the problem of juveniles of such tender age. I was further inclined to this conclusion, when the spokesman for the Advisory Board told us he believed it would be necessary to establish more recreational centres, but, he hastened to assure the committee, he was not suggesting the government spend money on them, but rather that we go seeking public-spirited financiers to establish such centres, in order to keep children of that age away from training schools and other institutions. Frankly, I do not "go for that," I think it is an extremely antiquated approach, an unprogressive approach which does not help.

So much for the Advisory Board, and the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) may want to say something about that, whether it is performing any function, whether it is necessary, or whether it should be abolished.

We are told at that committee meeting that they have to approve every transfer of a child from the training schools to private homes and farms. I suggest, Mr. Chairman, it is physically impossible for them to have any knowledge as to what the individual case is like, what it requires, and to what place they are sending a child. They have to be guided by reports of officers of the training schools—I think that is correct—and that being so, I would be inclined to think that the department itself should assume responsibility and designate a capable person or persons to really have the responsibility, rather than to hand it over to this type of board which meets periodically and serves as a rubber stamp.

That is one aspect of the problem of training schools.

Secondly, I submit to the hon. Minister that we must find another way of handling children of that age. I know they are committed, and I know that no one would commit a child of 7, 8 or 9 years of age, without some conviction that his home environment is more harmful than an institution might be. I am not quarreling with that, but I suggest that children of 7, 8, 9 or 10, who have already committed some minor offence—and that is how I understand this happens, after they have committed some offence and are brought to court, and then are committed to a training school—I suggest they should be placed in the hands of some Children's Aid organization, an agency which is trained and capable of supervising the further development of children, who, through no fault of their own, but because of environmental conditions, social and economic conditions, have, perhaps, been roaming the streets, or have been associated with other unhappy youngsters of the same neighbourhood, and thus got into difficulty.

We do not solve anything by taking a "kid" of 7 or 8, and sending him away to a training school. Such children are not of a type to be given training for a trade, taught to be bakers, shoemakers, and things of that sort. I feel this is so antiquated an approach that it is high time we changed it. Children of that age should go to specialized institutions, trained personnel should take care of them, and wherever possible they should be put in foster homes, instead of being sent to training schools at that age. But not necessarily out on the farms, Mr. Chairman; I mean approved foster homes, where they will find an environment that is warm, that makes them feel at home, that will help them to overcome the problems which led them, in the first place, to some violation of the law. I do not think the training schools are the ideal institutions for children 7, 8 and 9.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I do not think the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) should be surprised to find there are children in children's training schools. That is what they are for. We do not want them in such a school, if there is a suitable home or if there is any possibility of keeping them out. When such a child comes to the school, if he is young, he goes to a school for that age group, and the people who run the schools are trying to do exactly what the hon. member says should be done. They are trying to understand the child, and correct any incorrigible tendencies he may have.

There is no question of teaching a small child to be a baker, as the hon. member says. These children go into a training school, and they go to school just as other children do. They have what we hope would be the understanding direction of supervisors and house-masters, and of psychologists. They have psychiatric treatment, through the co-operation of our own Ontario Hospitals, and other specialists whom we have engaged for that work. But if the hon. member says that what he means is that the way the work is done in the schools is far from perfect, I agree. We have a lot to learn, and a lot depends on the staff. We have our own troubles, we have people who are utterly unsuitable, and whom we have to get rid of, but we try to recruit people who are suitable, and we have a great many who have been very successful in this work.

As regards the Advisory Board, it has stood for a long time in a legal relationship to the child. The child is a joint ward of the Advisory Board and the government. There are people on that board who give their time, without any remuneration at all in the way of salary or expenses, and I am told that over the years these people have acquired very good skills in dealing with the children, through the records.

The Select Committee pointed out they thought this was a weakness, that the board did not see the children, and had not close enough contact with the school. I agree with that. However, I have not been too much worried about it, because the board takes, by and large, the advice of the superintendent and the people who have been dealing with the child. They have a report there, and in most cases they agree that a child shall go out for placement in a home just as soon as the school authorities say he has made a suitable adjustment.

I would certainly agree that a home is much superior to any institution for a child. Our placement officers do select these homes, not on the social position or wealth of the people, but on the basis of how the child is going to be fitted into the family life, and that they are people who show some affection and regard for him.

Again, all the foster homes do not work out well. Some are changed and taken off the list, and others are found to be excellent, and are used.

I do not think the hon. member is saying very much with which we do not agree ourselves, but a school such as this is the last resort. It is not as good as a home. If the home is possible at all, it is certain we will do almost anything to keep the child there, but it is a great blessing, when he has no suitable environment, that he has a place to go, where he has enlightened attention as far as we can give it to him.

I agree that the more you improve the social environment for these children, the less trouble you will have. However, a great deal of it is mental. We have retarded children, those with very low IQ's, and we are inclined to think there is a certain type with whom we will have trouble no matter where we put him.

Admittedly, the better the social environment you can get for the child, the less trouble you are going to have with him. I do not take any exception to the remark made by the chairman of the board. He was not asking the government to immediately create these things. I think it is a good thing for our citizens who have the means, to make contributions to civic recreation centres.

As the hon. member knows, the government has also made its contribution to encourage these recreational centres. Surely all of us in public life have seen enough of the opening of these centres to be amazed at the number. It seems to me we have been continuously attending openings.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I wish I could say I agree with the hon. Minister, but I cannot, because he does not get the point I am trying to make, which is, while there are instances where you have no alternative but to send a juvenile to an institution, as you say, temporarily, I suggest that below a certain age, they should not be put in an institution at all.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Where would the hon. member put him?

MR. SALSBERG: At 7, 8, 9, or 10 years of age, put them in private homes. I suggest the department should have a list of homes to which a child of that age could go. The hon. Minister said a moment ago some of the children may be mentally retarded. That is true, but I venture to suggest quite a number of these youngsters are extremely bright and get into difficulties, not because they do not know better, but because they give unconscious protest to their environmental conditions, and are "hitting back" at society by doing some damage to property or to individuals. They require an appreciation of their difficulty.

If you put a bright youngster, who is "hitting back" blindly—hurting himself as well as he hurts others—with a retarded youngster in an institution, you help neither. The child with a high mental quotient will perhaps "take it out" on his retarded neighbour, who may be in the same building.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: They are not put together. They are separated as far as possible.

MR. SALSBERG: The point I want to make—and I repeat I am ending now with this—is the department should adopt a policy that below a certain age, children be not institutionalized, but rather they be placed in foster homes where more help will be given them to overcome their difficulties, and assume a normal way of life.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I assure the hon. member that if we can place these children in homes, we will be very glad to do it. But I also assure him, these schools are as good as they can possibly be, and a great deal can be done for the child by people who know their business. It is not considered altogether a tragedy that children are sent to the junior schools. At the T.C.S. in my own riding, for instance, they are institutionalized, and in the Old Country, in England, the public school system has made a tremendous contribution to the life of the country by producing people who have been very sturdy and have been able to stand up to a great deal, and some people think it is the result of—

MR. SALSBERG: Cricket did that.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Some people think it is the result of putting children in schools such as that. To my mind, that is no more heinous than to send them away from home at an early age, to a boarding school. If we can send them to a home, that is where they will go.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): I think if the hon. member for St. Andrew had been on the committee and interviewed some of the students in training schools, he would realize the problem which is faced by the training schools. Many of the students are not amenable to discipline of any kind, and if they were placed in private families, I am afraid they would disrupt the orderly living of such private families.

To tell you of one instance we ran across, we were in a certain institution and saw a 7-year-old boy there. To us, that was shocking, as expressed by the hon. member for St. Andrew. When we saw this boy, we felt shocked to think he was confined in this institution; but upon inquiry as to the boy's background and history, we realized there was no other place for the boy. He had no home to go to, and had never been amenable to discipline.

MR. STEWART: He was chased out of his home.

MR. GRUMMETT: He was chased out of his home, yes, and in the institution, the boy was more than a master for boys double his age. In fact, in a quick snappy combat, he would drop 15-year-old boys; he could put them out.

That type of boy cannot be sent to a private home and be expected to be kept there. There is no other place than an institution for him. There were other similar boys whom we found in the same type of institutions, and that is the only place you can put them.

You cannot hope to have private homes take them in, and have children of this type mix with their families. It cannot be done, and much as it is to be regretted that children of that age have to be sent to institutions, we must face the fact that is the only place where they can receive the proper training.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): On Vote 164, item 11, "Grants to Different Organizations." Is any portion of that grant given to the John Howard Society?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: $10,000 is given by the Province of Ontario, and I think the Federal Government gives them $8,000 in addition. The rest comes from private supporters.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): That is out of the $13,000.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Yes.
Vote 164, agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 165, Board of Parole, $75,000.

MR. SALSBERG: On Vote 165, could the hon. Minister at this time tell the House how we stand with the Parole Board? I have not seen any announcement in the press or anywhere else, but I understand from what I have heard around the building, that the Parole Board has been disorganized, and that the chairman has resigned. I was not able to find out whether there was a new board constituted or whether a new board will be constituted. If I missed the statement in any public announcement in the press, I will stand corrected, but I have not seen anything about it, and I think it would be very good if we were enlightened now.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Mr. Chairman, the chairman of the Parole Board retired because he had reached the retirement age: in fact, he stayed 2 years longer than the regular period. That is the reason for his resignation, and for this vacancy.

MR. NIXON: When did that take effect?

HON. MR. FOOTE: I think January 1st.

MR. SALSBERG: Was there an announcement made of his retirement anywhere?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: In the press?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Not to my knowledge, but it certainly was not hidden. There was nothing secret or furtive about it. I did not announce it—

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Minister will permit me, the reason I asked whether it was announced, was because I have not seen it anywhere. In view of some irritation which had developed during the committee's hearings, between the committee and the former chairman of the Parole Board, failure to make his retirement public might lend itself to some speculation as to whether he was asked to leave because of failure to co-operate, and so on. I do not say that is the case, but I failed to see any statement anywhere about the man's retirement.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I will make the announcement now, even if it is belated, that the retirement of the chairman was routine. It would have happened, whether he had agreed or disagreed with the committee. That had nothing to do with it.

We have not made any appointment because the government had decided to await the report of the Select Committee before considering this. As you know, in the recommendations of the committee, there is one that this matter of parole, probation and rehabilitation, might be handled by a commission. We have not decided what to do in regard to that, but in the meantime, the board may appoint someone to act as chairman.

I know it is not a very satisfactory situation and I hope we shall deal with it as soon as possible.

MR. STEWART: I would like to say in answer to the hon. member for St. Andrew, that the Reform Committee must accept a full measure of responsibility for the delay in reconstituting the board. The other gentleman, the former chairman, had completed his term of service, and the hon. Minister was quite anxious to make a re-appointment, but we expressed the opinion we were studying the matter, and out of deference to the committee, a re-appointment to the board was delayed. I repeat, that was our full responsibility.

MR. SALSBERG: How many members are there on the Parole Board now?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: Six. The Act calls for 7 but due to the chairman's resignation, there are now 6.

Vote 165 agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 166, Ontario Reformatories, $2,905,000.

Vote 166 agreed to.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 167, Mimico, $742,000.

MR. A. H. COWLING (High Park): On that Vote, during meetings of the Standing Committee on Conservation this year, there was some discussion about using prisoners, and people in reformatories to assist generally in some of these great conservation projects throughout the Province of Ontario.

Many of the hon. members were of the opinion that possibly time could be very well and very constructively spent in assisting in this outside work. It was brought out in the Select Committee's report that one of the worst things they have to contend with is idleness in these places.

It seems to me—and it seemed to be the opinion of many of the members of the committee—that these people could be transported from the jail, in care of an armed guard, and perform a very useful duty, and at the same time, do healthy work outdoors, and do some good to the province.

I know that in many of the United States, I think particularly in Florida and Michigan, it is my understanding some types of prisoners are used for this conservation work.

MR. SALSBERG: That is called "the chain gang."

MR. COWLING: I wonder if the hon. Minister would care to comment on that?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: The hon. member is speaking of prisoners from jails. Does he mean jails or reformatories?

MR. COWLING: Either.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: To begin with, you cannot take prisoners from jails, who are awaiting trial and have not been found guilty of anything, and put them to work anywhere, unless they want to. There are some awaiting appeal, and others accused of serious crimes but not convicted, whom we cannot take out.

In the reformatories, there seems to be a mistaken idea that we have a great excess of people who are not doing anything.

Perhaps one of the reasons these people are used more in the United States for conservation work than here, is that in the United States, they do not have the industries we have in our system.

For one thing, the trade unions have been very much against it in the United States. I have said a great many times, we have fine understanding and co-operation with the trade union people in this country, which has enabled us to go forward without very much difficulty. On the other hand, in return for that co-operation we try to keep our people out of competitive labour. It sounds good to say we should take these people from Mimico, and launch them on a conservation programme, but I do not want to do that, while there are men out of work in Toronto. Let them go there and be paid for this work.

We have no surplus of labour, in fact, at times we are very short of labour, because it is only the young, strong, healthy men who can do a great deal of the work which we have in our factory production. We have old men who have bad hearts, bronchitis, asthma, and all sorts of things, who simply cannot go into a productive line of work. Maybe these people could go into such a camp as the hon. member mentioned, and "putter about" if we could arrange to have supervision for them.

It is an interesting observation, but in practice, in the industries we have not too many men who can do a hard day's work. We are often short of these people.

We may investigate the possibility of sending some of the older ones out on the type of work you mention, but again, you are getting into competition with outside labour. Perhaps we could have the opinion of the hon. Minister of Labour on it, but it seems to me it is a point which you cannot press too far.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): It is nothing new at all. These men worked on the road from Matheson into South Porcupine. Prisoners were used on the building of that road and it was very unsatisfactory. It took more guards to watch them working through the rough land and bush, than there were men working, and the people in general, in the Province of Ontario, were not satisfied.

The road between Kapuskasing and Hearst was partially built by prisoners from Burwash, and the people in this province were not satisfied with that, and said they should not be used for the work, because they were taking work away from the ordinary good citizens, who were unemployed.

MR. FISHLEIGH (Woodbine): Mr. Chairman, I do not think the hon. member who has just spoken had any idea of promoting chain gangs. As a matter of fact, I have visited Westchester in the United States not far from the City of New York. They have some 500 or 600 acres of farm land where a great many activities are carried on. They have a dairy farm, a laundry, an old folks' home and an isolation hospital. They are all there as one big happy family. They cooperate. They do work for each other on the farm, in the laundry, and in the hospitals. They really cut down the overhead costs. I understand perfectly well why it is not possible to do that here. It is because we have so many departments—the Health Department, the Reform Institutions Department and other departments, and they are not properly meshed together. But I will say again that these people can be put to work, because I have seen them put to work in the United States at Westchester, New York.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I see that we had better have another Select Committee and put the hon. member for Woodbine (Mr. Fishleigh) on it. I think it should be remembered that industrial output from Guelph alone is greater than the combined output of all the federal prisons in Canada. If the hon. member for Woodbine, and other hon. members, would go to Guelph, they would find all those things happening which he was talking about. That is the trouble of this department. Very few people know what is being done, even hon. members of this House. I assure the hon. member for Woodbine that he will not be disappointed with the work we are doing there. We have a 1,000-acre farm where we are doing all those things. At Burwash, we have direct control of an even larger area, and there is a lot going on that I wish hon. members of the House would see.

MR. SALSBERG: I think there is total agreement that the inmates of our institutions should be given every opportunity to be occupied in doing useful work. I think what the hon. Minister said is absolutely true. He might have mentioned the brickyard in Mimico, and a lot of other things which are being carried on. But I hope we will never resort to what might be termed chain-gang methods. It is degrading and brutalizing to take men who are sentenced to 6 or 9 months out in gangs to work on highways or on conservation projects. Certainly a great conservation job was done in Guelph. Some of the most beautiful grounds that one can drive through are situated around Guelph, not to speak of the farm. But generally, men should not have to work outside. I think that would represent a return to the Middle Ages. They are only doing that in some cities of the Southern States of the U.S.A., and it is to be deplored.

MR. STEWART (Parkdale): The committee had no thought whatever of criticizing the industry being shown in the reformatories. The idleness complained of was confined to the jails, some in industrial farms, in circumstances which the hon. Minister has described. In days gone by, the jail had a smaller population and the inmates raised their own vegetables. Now they have not sufficient plots to enable them to do this. We are saying, however, that there should be some industry wherever it is possible to provide it. In one industrial farm the services of a part-time doctor are employed. But when an inmate reports sick, what are you going to do about it? He says he is not well enough to go to work in the fields, and there is little that can be done about it. The committee had in mind the production of food for consumption in our own institutions, and something in the way of light industry. There is plenty of industry going on in the reformatories. The idleness complained of existed on one of the industrial farms where men were reporting sick.

The committee deplored to a man the conditions which are found in certain other countries, such as chain gangs. To introduce such conditions was the farthest thing from their minds. Persons in some of these institutions asked us: "Give us a chance to get out and work." I extolled the industry being carried on at Mimico and Guelph, but there is idleness in the jails, and I believe something should be done to deal with this situation.

MR. COWLING (High Park): Mr. Chairman, my comments were not critical of the hon. Minister, either. I was simply bringing to the attention of the House the discussion we had in the Committee of Conservation. Certainly, this is something which could be studied and thought over. As for chain gangs, that sort of thing may be going on in places like Russia and Siberia. But that is certainly not my idea. If hon. members can think of something more pleasant than working on a dam up in the Humber River in August, I would like to hear about it.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I think there has been a general feeling for some time that Mercer should be torn down, and a modern institution for female prisoners should be built elsewhere. Has the department any plans for Mercer?

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I am not in favour of tearing down buildings because they happen to be 50, 60 or 70 years old. If we cannot build so that our structures are going to last for 100 years, we may as well revise our building methods.

There is nothing wrong with Mercer from the point of view of the building. The location is not everything that might be desired, but this applies to many buildings in downtown Toronto. On the other hand, it has certain advantages. It is close to the source of expert medical and psychiatric services, and it is easy to obtain staff because of the central location. I do not think there is anything wrong with Mercer, and I would like to read the Grand Jury's report upon it:

On Thursday, September 17, 1953, the Grand Jury visited Mercer Reformatory. Every moment from our entering the grounds to leaving the institution was extremely interesting, informative and pleasant. The superintendent, Mrs. Burrows, and her staff deserve public recognition of their services. The entire atmosphere of the place is sunny and cheerful, no sullen faces here, but many busy hands.

Girls cutting and raking the grass, polishing windows and floors, painting walls and ceilings, operating a custom-type of laundry, sewing and kitchen equipment. There are class rooms, a hobby room, library, gymnasium, two chapels and many more wonderful facilities to assist the girls to regain their sense of values, and learn to live normal, healthy lives. Our recommendation concerning this institution is that the general public should be enlightened as to the entire appearance and character of Mercer, and the meaning of the word "reformatory."

This was from a presentment made by the Grand Jury to Hon. J. C. McRuer, Chief Justice, and is signed by Mrs. J. Marie Ironsides, foreman.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I am glad the hon. Minister read that. I could give him a statement made by the former Minister in charge of Reform Institutions in 1948, in which he said he had already selected a new site for a Mercer institution, and this one would be torn down. I am not going to read it, but I am sure the hon. Minister does not question it. That was what the former Minister said, and I agreed with him.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I do not wish to be put in a position where I am disagreeing with my predecessor. I think he meant that the facilities for women in detention in the province should be enlarged. I think Mercer would be a good building to keep. I do not say the use being made of it today is the final use which will be made. I feel that later on we should have, for the women, a place which corresponds to Brampton. But I think we need these other facilities too. Mercer should be kept as a centre, and good use made of it.

MR. STEWART: The hon. Minister has agreed to give serious consideration to developing an institution for women on the lines of the one we already have for males at Brampton. At the same time, I think it would be well worth while for any hon. member of this House to go out to the Mercer institution and see it for themselves. It is spotlessly clean, well lighted, and under the care of a kindly matron. When you step inside, it is like stepping inside a ladies' college. The dining room is just as good as would be found in a ladies golf club. This atmosphere extends everywhere. It is only when one turns aside in the corridor and sees a row of old cells, that one realizes the purpose of the building. It is clean, it is cheerful, it is a credit to the province, having regard to the age of the premises. Though I believe that as, and when the proper time comes, the institution should go to a new location, hon. members should bear in mind that there are many law-abiding citizens who are not living under such good conditions as are to be found in Mercer.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Hon. members may be interested to know that we had an offer from an industrial firm for the Mercer building. We felt we could, perhaps, get enough money from the sale to construct an entirely new institution outside the city. I went so far as to persuade the hon. Minister of Public Works (Mr. Doucett) to expropriate land out at Maple in preparation for a move.

The first thing that happened was this: John Public intervened. No person wanted the Mercer out in York County. So I withdrew. We considered another site, and we met with similar objections. I was not finding fault with Mercer, but I did think that if we could get enough money from its sale to build a new institution, that would have been good business. But I have never condemned Mercer. I am well pleased with what is being done there.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs may have had in mind a good financial transaction. But in his public statement he said that Mercer did not offer possibilities for segregation. He said there were some "tough ones" in Mercer, and, for that reason, he wanted another institution where there would be opportunities for segregation and for the better treatment of the inmates.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There is only one way in which you can have segregation. That is by building more institutions. And the Minister answered that question by saying it depended upon the hon. Treasurer supplying the money. It is no use talking about segregation when you have not got the institutions.

ONTARIO TRAINING SCHOOL FOR GIRLS, GALT

Vote 177, Salaries, $150,000.

MR. SALSBERG: On the subject of this Training Schools for Girls, I think it is time we should get some clarification on a matter which has become a public issue, and a bone of contention between two daily newspapers. The issue is whether the committee reported truthfully on conditions at Galt, or whether the committee did not report honestly upon them. One newspaper alleged that public funds are being squandered and that the girls of that institution do not even wash their own clothes.

MR. STEWART: We did not say that.

MR. SALSBERG: I said one of the newspapers said it. On the other hand, another newspaper, in an editorial, claimed that the first newspaper was libelling this excellent institution in Galt. We are given further information from a person who works on a Galt paper and who evidently was with the committee when it visited the institution. She denies the charges of the other paper. I overheard one hon. member, some minutes ago, ask why we should enter into a fight between newspapers. I have no such desire or intention, but we, as hon. members of this House, should certainly read what newspapers say about institutions for which we are responsible as representatives of the people. When we read the Estimates, it is our duty to make inquiries so that the truth should be made available and no misunderstandings and confusion arise in the minds of the public at large, and I think at this juncture we are entitled to some clarification of that issue.

MR. STEWART: As far as the committee is concerned, we are passing no judgment on the newspaper articles. Here are the facts. I prepared an analysis of various institutions, asking for the unit costs, medical care requirements, training and so on. The figures in this report were inserted by the Department of Reform Institutions, who co-operated splendidly. I have in my hand a complete list of all the articles supplied to the girls, and the department's own figures.

Here is the wording, "Total cost of clothing while in custody, an average cost per inmate per year." There it is. $205.82.

We did not say they did not do their personal laundry, we saw them doing that, and we gave them full credit. But these young ladies are potential mothers and housekeepers, and the committee was of opinion they should be encouraged to do more of their bed and table linens. I have a list of each article given to the girls, and it works out $205.82 per year.

MR. SALSBERG: Did not the report say?—and I am reading now from an editorial in the Globe and Mail:

The average taxpayer must wonder at such cost, and make comparisons with what he can afford to spend on clothing for his own family, even when he realizes the clothing for the girls was purchased at wholesale or special prices.

If the committee did say that, it raised a serious question about the policy the department is pursuing in that institution. If it was merely to record cost, without comment, then you could say it reported its finding, and it is up to the hon. members of the Legislature to draw their own conclusions.

MR. STEWART: Would the hon. member care to read page 246 of the report, and he will get the context?

MR. SALSBERG: I have the report, but the question is, if it made that statement, it questioned the policy of the department. If it did that, I think the House should be informed of that fact at this time.

MR. STEWART: Informed as to what?

MR. SALSBERG: As to whether there was unnecessary expenditure of money.

MR. STEWART: Mr. Chairman, may I answer the hon. member? The committee took this position: are the girls being furnished with clothing at an average cost per inmate, amounting to more in dollars and cents than the average family could afford when these girls are at home.

If the hon. member will not read the report on page 246—I will read it—

MR. SALSBERG: There is a definite implied criticism of the department. I am not saying whether it is justified or not.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: You mean by the newspapers, or by whom?

MR. SALSBERG: If the committee gave the newspaper the information upon which to base its whole case in the extract from which I quoted, I say that part of that report certainly is implied criticism. I am not, for a second, agreeing or disagreeing with that. All I say on this occasion is that the matter should be clarified.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: I think the matter is quite clear. There is no question but there was criticism of the department, and its policy regarding the Galt School, by the Select Committee. That is what the committee thought after studying these things, and making its recommendations.

I have said I intend to carry out many of the recommendations which have been made, aside from newspaper criticism. It was recommended that the per capita cost in that institution is too high, $4.30 per day, as compared with $2.50 per day for another school. I think it was $2.30 per day for a third one. That is the criticism, and I think there is something in it.

I believe we can cut those costs, and already we have made some effort to do so. I am not here to fight with the committee, and certainly it is not for any of our staff to engage in any controversy with either the newspapers or the Select Committee. I accept the guidance of this House, and the committee.

MR. STEWART: Mr. Chairman, it is quite easy to lift out an extract from a report, and use it, without reading the full text. If the hon. member will read page 73 of the report regarding the training school at Galt, he will see:

Page 73 (d) Clothing: The committee found that much the same situation exists for clothing as for food. Inmates are adequately clothed but two questions must be considered: Are they too expensively clothed, especially in training schools? Is there any justification for the disparity in clothing costs from institution to institution?

As with food, the aim for clothing must be adequacy without excess. This aim is carried out satisfactorily in adult institutions, but in the 3 provincial training schools there is cause for doubt.

At the Ontario Training School, Galt, an average of $201.01 is paid each year for clothing for each girl. This figure includes $144.52 for clothing during a girl's stay in the school—an average of 11 months—and $56.49 for clothing issued her on discharge. Officials at the school point out that most girls have practically no clothing when they arrive and have to be completely outfitted; that it is in the interests of effective reformation that they be well dressed; that it is essential to successful rehabilitation that they go out into the community, on discharge, with proper clothing so that they will be much the same in appearance as other youngsters.

Nevertheless, the average taxpayer must wonder at such costs and make comparisons with the amount he can afford to spend on clothes for his own family, especially when he realizes that the clothes for Galt girls are purchased at wholesale or special prices. While the committee is most anxious not to interfere in any way with policies that are conducive to reformation, and are, therefore, economical in the long run, there can be no doubt that clothing costs at Galt are altogether too high. It should be noted that the cost of clothing children in foster homes, admittedly lessened by the use of hand-me-downs from older children in the families, is about $70 annually.

Then in another place we give the Galt school full credit for what it is doing.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I want to make this clear—I want it understood—

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You have made it abundantly clear.

HON. MR. PORTER: If you have not by now, you never will.

MR. SALSBERG: I believe that the girls of the school should be clothed properly, so that they won't be ashamed when they return home, or have to rush out to find the money for essential clothing.

But there is an implied criticism, and I am sorry the hon. Minister indirectly admitted there was a possibility of reducing the cost, because the department which has handled the situation well until now—and I hope it will continue—is being criticized. We must remember, Mr. Chairman, that I am not criticizing it for spending too much, but the hon. Minister has admitted, I believe, that there was over-spending.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: There is no mistake about that. The committee suggests that the per capita cost is too high, and wants it reduced. I also want it reduced, and I have issued instructions that the matter be very carefully examined.

MR. STEWART: There is no division between the hon. Minister and the committee in regard to that matter.

HON. MR. FOOTE, V.C.: One of the ways in which we consider the cost might be lowered is by having a uniform for the school. That may be objected to by some people as not being wise, but it is not objected to in the private schools where suitable uniforms are issued. I do not mean to supply these girls with anything ugly. A great deal of the increased cost is due to buying different garments.

Mr. Chairman, there is not, or will there be, any effort to avoid the issue in this regard. The criticism is there, and we will see what we can do about it, having in mind the good of the girls and the school.

ON REPORT OF COMMITTEE RE. REFORM INSTITUTIONS

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I will make a few brief remarks about the report. My remarks will be shorter than I intended them to be, because they follow the Estimates of the Department of Reform Institutions.

I want to say that I, like everybody else, welcomed the report, and I, like everyone else, want to congratulate the committee, and its hard-working chairman, for its diligence and devotion to the task assigned to it. I think it certainly took its task seriously, and I think also that its handling of its work was done in such a manner that it barred the door to no one who had anything to say or anything to offer in this field, and that is very commendable.

I also join with those who congratulated the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon)—who, unfortunately, is absent, as is his whole group, from the House—but I congratulate him anyway, for having placed on the Order paper, the motion for setting up the Select Committee.

Mr. Speaker, you will understand I am not entirely unjustified in trying to place a few facts on the record. First, while it is true the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) moved the motion, this humble member for St. Andrew has been advocating the appointment of either a Royal Commission or a Select Committee of the House for a number of years before the motion, by the hon. member for Brant. I recall very well standing in my place and appealing to the government to appoint a Select Committee or a Royal Commission. I argued that riots, burning of institutions, and sending appeals to me, and perhaps to other hon. members, was indicative of something which required looking into.

Unfortunately, the government did not agree with my view, and, still more unfortunately, there were many hon. members who had no patience with my repetitious insistence on the appointment of a committee, and very often showed their displeasure at my suggestion by asking me to "Cut it out, and stop talking about it."

At one time, I was even told in this House by an hon. Minister that, "the Borstal system has nothing to teach us in Ontario; we ourselves are the most perfect in regard to reform."

I must confess, Mr. Speaker, that I went to the newspapers and pleaded with them to use their extensive influence to bring about the appointment of either a Select Committee or a Royal Commission, because I said, "When prisoners send me petitions signed by 300 or 400 of them, it is indicative that something is wrong, and the least we can do is to investigate it fully."

Every time I made a statement in the press, I was attacked by certain newspapers for trying to besmirch the good name of one of our institutions. One newspaper, the Sudbury Daily, went to the extent of printing a series of articles to prove that Burwash was an ideal institution, and that prisoners there live better than taxpayers.

MR. STEWART: Some of them do—most of them. In fact, they all do. They all live better than many of the law-abiding citizens.

MR. SALSBERG: With that I will not agree.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Why does not the hon. member go up and see for himself?

MR. SALSBERG: The Sudbury paper, which had criticized me as if I were "digging up" trouble in that institution, really made it appear that nobody wanted to get out of there.

MR. STEWART: Some do not—and said so.

MR. SALSBERG: After having appointed a committee, and the committee having gone into a thorough examination of all phases of the work of this department, I think its conclusions more than justify my pleas for a number of years. That is the point I am trying to make, Mr. Speaker.

I am trying to make the point that I was not seeking to make a case against the department. Every time I arose in this House, I prefaced my remarks by saying that the present hon. Minister of Reform Institutions is more amenable to new ideas about reform, than any previous hon. Minister, to my knowledge. I was not blaming him. But I never went as far as the committee in regard to some of its findings. All I did was to say that I have these facts and this information, which disturbed me, and disturbed everyone, and which called for a thorough examination.

Mr. Speaker, to the hon. members who are still in the House, I want to say at this time that when I come forward with a proposal, they should not be so quick to unhesitatingly reject it. -

I am conditioned, Mr. Speaker, to this sort of thing; that I advance an idea; it is first rejected; it takes a year or two, and then is given some consideration; then, after a couple of years more, it is taken over. Unfortunately, when it is taken over, I cannot recognize the original thought or suggestion. But, at any rate, it is taken over, and I am glad it is. I appeal to the hon. members to bear this in mind when I next come with a proposal for a Royal Commission or a Select Committee to investigate something, Mr. Speaker, I want every hon. member of this House to believe me when I say I have no personal design, intention, or interest, when I carried on for a few years the fight for a Select Committee. Please believe me, when I come again. It is not personal, and I would ask the hon. members not to be so hasty in their rejection of my proposals.

While other members of the committee who have spoken were very lavish with their praise of the other members, and their appreciation of what the committee had done, I want to say that during the session, I had some very disturbing moments. I think I was not the only one who had a feeling of alarm, because some of the members of the committee had expressed some very far-fetched, outlandish and undemocratic thoughts and ideas. I think that should be taken note of at this moment, when we are finalizing our consideration of the report, and generally expressing our opinions.

MR. STEWART: None of those thoughts are in the report. They were facetious remarks which were made at the time.

MR. SALSBERG: I hope they were only that, but some were very disturbing. Some people thought we should establish a woodshed in every court—

MR. STEWART: No, we never said that. A woodshed has its merits, but there should be no whitewash brush in it.

MR. SALSBERG: Somebody said we should establish a woodshed, and take some of these people who were charged with offences out into the woodshed and give them a good, old-fashioned spanking. I was shocked that such a statement was made.

MR. GRUMMETT: I think the hon. member would far rather put them up against a stone wall and have them shot.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. member who has just spoken (Mr. Grummett) seems to feel that the cap fits him, so let him wear it. I am sorry if it does. I have not mentioned any names.

MR. GRUMMETT: The cap would not fit you.

MR. SALSBERG: It was the hon. member who has just spoken who suggested the woodsheds.

MR. GRUMMETT: I did not.

MR. SALSBERG: If he did not, I am very glad he did not speak as was reported in the newspapers.

MR. STEWART: He said the woodshed had its merits, and with that the committee agreed. It still has.

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry to have to interrupt the discussion, but may I suggest to the hon. member we are discussing a report before the House. I do not think we should have references to every little item which was in the report, or which appeared in the newspapers. The report is being discussed, and the institutions were being investigated. If we have to listen to all that, I think we will have gone far beyond good reason, tolerance, and patience.

The hon. member for St. Andrew has done a great deal of speaking on these matters this afternoon and I would request him to confine his remarks to the report which is before the House.

MR. SALSBERG: I view of your suggestion, Mr. Speaker, and the lateness of the hour, and the statement by the chairman of the committee that none of these ideas were incorporated in the report, I will conclude on that. But I do say that I do not agree with the report when it suggests that the failure to utilize corporal punishment was the cause of the riot in Guelph.

I do not believe that corporal punishment at any time prevents riots or outbursts, or that it educates or cures people. Hon. members may disagree with this, but that is my opinion. Corporal punishment has not yet reformed a single prisoner anywhere. I hope the committee takes that into account, too.

I should also like to make the suggestion that the report's treatment of drug addicts be improved insofar as any implementation of it is concerned, I have felt for a long time that the drug addict should be handled as a sick person, who should be treated rather than punished. I would go so far as to suggest that one or another department of the government be empowered to announce that any drug addict who is willing to be cured, may come and register with the department, place himself or herself in their hands, and then in the process of curing be given the drug so long as the department considers it necessary. I think if that were done, many unfortunate, miserable, people, who are victims of this habit, and who will steal and murder in order to get money for the drug, if they knew that they could come and get, under medical supervision, as much of the drug as the medical supervisors would consider necessary to give them, and to lead them from there on to full treatment and recovery, we would have less hold-ups, thefts and other offences committed. I recommend this thought to the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) and to the government as a whole. I know it would require special legislation and I do not even know if we could do it without some arrangement with Ottawa. However, that is a legal matter about which I am not speaking. I do think, though, that this is a serious aspect of our problems, and it should be looked into.

In conclusion, may I say that the report has made two very outstanding recommendations. I think it was worthwhile having the committee, despite the criticism I would like to make against its utterances—but those are secondary items—if only for those two recommendations. The first is that there be a panel of experts who will help the court determine the sentence for first offenders, and not leave it only to the judgment of the magistrate or judge. I think that is an excellent thing. It was advocated here before. I among others suggested it, and I hope this recommendation will be implemented as quickly as possible. I believe it will save many first offenders from becoming repeaters.

The second very important recommendation of the committee is the extension of probation. I think it is a shocking fact that the present jail population of this country and this province as well, is as high as it is. I think probation will not only be a good thing from an economy point of view, but that it will do a great deal to rehabilitate the people. I think these are excellent, worthy recommendations.

In conclusion, while expressing my appreciation of the work of the committee and its report—I could add many things and subtract many things, but so could every other hon. member if given a chance to do so—may I say there are some fundamental recommendations which, if implemented, will go a long way towards improving the situation. And I think the hon. Minister (Mr. Foote) who is at present in charge, is as likely to respond favourably to those suggestions as any other member of the government side could be found to be.

MR. SPEAKER: There being no further speakers on this subject, I declare the discussion closed.

HON. G. H. DOUCETT (Minister of Highways): Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of the House.

Motion agreed to.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Before the Orders of the day, Mr. Speaker, I would like to ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) about another explosion in the Richard L. Hearn Generating Plant. This is the second explosion, as I understand it, within a very few days, and it calls for the most exhaustive examination.

May I ask the hon. Minister to make a statement about it, and also to say whether this plant was just last week put into operation after being changed from 25- to 60-cycle power.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I will answer the last question first. No unit has as yet been changed from 25- to 60-cycle. The unfortunate accident to No. 2 unit was practically the same as to No. 1 last week. Although the explosion was not as great, it is difficult to say whether it was fire then the explosion, or the explosion and then the fire. We have not been able to ascertain that as yet, but I will say the damage was not quite as severe as was reported last week. Both units are totally destroyed.

In order to help us, on account of the insurance, and in order to find out what caused the trouble, we left the first unit as it was after the fire. We are still under warranty with the manufacturers, and they have sent their engineering experts over. They are taking the first unit down to find what was the cause of the fire, when the second explosion occurred. They were both rushed over to the plant, and they are there yet.

We do not know, and we cannot explain as yet, the cause of these explosions. They are the experts and it will be up to them to report the cause of the fire. The commission decided the best thing to do would be to close down the plant completely to prevent any further damage until we are able to find out exactly what the remedy will be. It is unfortunate, but because of this we have had to use tie lines to get 160,000 kilowatts from the Detroit-Edison, and 20,000 from the Niagara-Mohawk as emergency power. Unless there is some unforeseen emergency, we expect to carry on our load over the peak.

The warm weather and bright sunshine are helping us out to some extent, but there is no use minimizing the unfortunate circumstances. It is one of the things over which we have no control, but we hope to get the answer from the experts.

MR. OLIVER: We understand the machines are covered by insurance?

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): How many units are there?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Four.

MR. NIXON: Half of them are out now?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Yes. The third unit was the one which was being converted from 25- to 60-cycle. A fourth was in operation. It was carrying its load, but, because of the accident, we decided to shut the whole plant down.

MR. OLIVER: Does Hydro carry its own insurance?

HON. MR. CHALLIES: We generally do, but in this case, the boilers are insured privately because they require special insurance, and the plant and units are carried with a certain amount of private insurance, as well as our own contingency reserve. The generators are covered by the manufacturers to date.

MR. G. C. WARDROPE (Port Arthur): I wish to bring a matter to the attention of the House, not with the idea of prolonging it unduly, but because I feel, as a matter of record, I would like to bring to the attention of all the hon. members, a tribute to the head of this government, who is also the hon. Provincial Treasurer.

The remarkable thing, Mr. Speaker, about this tribute is that it springs from a source of opposition to this government's policies, and one which rarely pays tribute to any members of the administration. Mr. Speaker, the tribute comes editorially from the Toronto Daily Star.

It appeared in the Star last week, and while it only reiterates qualities of the hon. Prime Minister which we on the government side have recognized all along, I feel I should quote it in full because it is brief and to the point. It is headed "Done With Natural Graciousness," and reads:

There was no doubt some justification for the resentment expressed at the city hall when it was announced that Premier Frost, and not Mayor Lamport, would pull the lever to open the subway, a purely Toronto enterprise. But when the time came, Mr. Frost did a gracious thing when he varied the programme by calling the mayor over to join hands with him in that operation.

It was good politics. Of course it was. But it was more than that. It was the act of a kindly man whose natural impulses are friendly. He does the generous thing without affectation.

That, alas, is one of the things that make him so hard to defeat.

Even the hon. members of the Opposition will admit in all graciousness, I am sure, that the Daily Star is accurate on all counts in its tribute to the hon. Prime Minister, whose kindly actions and friendly impulses are well known far and wide by the people of Ontario. I sincerely recommend the final sentence of the editorial to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and the other hon. members of the Opposition, with whatever comfort they can derive from it.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. member, Mr. Speaker, how he figures the Star can be so dead right in this, and so dead wrong in everything else?

MR. SALSBERG: He has not figured that out yet.

The following bills were read a third time, passed and intitled as in the motion:

Bill No. 10, An Act respecting the City of London.

Bill No. 14, An Act respecting the Town of St. Marys.

Bill No. 24, An Act respecting the Boards of the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec.

Bill No. 31, An Act respecting the Town of Oakville.

Bill No. 77, The Child Welfare Act, 1954.

Bill No. 83, An Act to amend The Highway Traffic Act.

Bill No. 109, An Act to amend The Farm Products Marketing Act.

Bill No. 112, An Act to amend The Municipal Act.

Bill No. 113, An Act to amend The Assessment Act.

Bill No. 114, An Act to amend The Registry Act.

Bill No. 123, An Act to amend The Cemeteries Act.

Bill No. 131, An Act to amend The Public Service Act.

Bill No. 133, An Act to amend The Pharmacy Act, 1953.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK:
Notice of Motion No. 7:

Mr. Frost (Victoria): Resolution that a Select Committee of the House be appointed to study the problem of highway safety in all its phases, including the methods of accident prevention now in general use, methods of public education and control of traffic and to examine and consider any proposals designed to reduce the number of highway accidents submitted to the committee and to report on methods for the better control of highway traffic in the interest of greater public safety.

And that the Select Committee have authority to sit during the interval between sessions and have full power and authority to call for persons, papers and things and to examine witnesses under oath, and the Assembly doth command and compel attendance before the said Select Committee of such persons and the production of such papers and things as the committee may deem necessary for any of its proceedings and deliberations, for which purpose the Honourable the Speaker may issue his warrant or warrants.

Said committee to consist of 11 members, and to be composed as follows: Messrs. Nickle (Chairman), Allan (Haldimand-Norfolk), Leavine, Yaremko, Child, Root, Beech, Edwards, Manley, Gordon, Thomas (Ontario).

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, in moving this motion, and presenting it formally to the House, in view of what has been said in the House, I do not think it is necessary for me to elaborate very greatly on the necessity for such a committee.

The matter was referred to very directly by 2 hon. members, both of whom are members of the committee. It was also mentioned to a very great extent by the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in his address last week.

My recollection is that we had between 1,000 and 1,100 deaths on the highways last year. I am quite conscious of the fact that the number is proportionately less, having regard to the number of motor vehicles, than was the case a few years before. The hon. Minister of Highways mentioned that, but, in addition, there were a great number of people who were injured and a very great amount of property damage occasioned. The hon. Minister of Highways mentioned the sum of $25 million in property damage. That is a tremendous loss.

This is a matter to which much attention has been given, and a matter which concerns all America. In the House of Commons at Ottawa, the subject has been raised as affecting all the provinces of Canada. It was felt at that time, as mentioned by Hon. Mr. Garson, that the problem was one which probably came within the sphere of things provincially, and therefore, the matter should be in that field.

Of course, the Criminal Code, in various sections relating to manslaughter, criminal negligence, dangerous driving, and things of that sort, covers to an extent the subject matter.

However, it is a problem which concerns not only Canada, but all America. This was evidenced by the discussion in the House of Commons. It is something which very vitally concerns us in Ontario, when we have suffered between 1,000 and 1,100 deaths, approximately 24,000 injured and some $25 million property damage.

I could not help but be impressed by what one of the hon. members said, that if you had an epidemic which took that number of lives, or caused casualties to that extent, it would be enquired into without delay. This is an opportunity for constructive statesmanship on the part of this committee. The opportunity for full investigation is there to bring this matter out and place it on the table, and let everybody see what the problem is. I should say that the publicity to this problem alone would do what the hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) said relative to this problem, when speaking here a few days ago, that in the conferences in the United States they had come to the conclusion that it was very largely a question of individual care. I think I am quoting the hon. member correctly, at least that is the tenor of what he said. If it is true, Mr. Speaker, that the cause of this huge toll is individual carelessness, the very fact that it is being brought out into the open will have a good effect.

In moving the motion, I do so for the reasons I have mentioned. As I say, it is an important subject, and one upon which we could elaborate to a great extent. But it seems to me the reason for such a committee is there. It has been raised, and this is a great opportunity to let the people's representatives examine the problem and tell the public what it is all about.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I would like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I welcome the appointment of this committee, as the hon. Prime Minister has suggested. I think there is a very great job to do there.

I was going to suggest to the hon. Prime Minister that I think the committee will have to look outside the province, even outside the other provinces of Canada, in order to get a composite picture of this entire matter. In the United States they have had the problem in its serious stages, I suppose, longer than we have, and in many of the states of the Union, they have some very advanced ways of dealing with it.

Anyone who has read the recent issue of Life magazine—I think it was the issue before last—will get some idea of the way in which they are tackling this problem. In my judgment, we would have to do a great deal of studying across the line, because they have accumulated a good deal of experience there.

HON. MR. FROST: In response to what the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) has said on that point, I agree there has been a great deal of work done on the other side. The hon. member for Haldimand-Norfolk (Mr. Allan) mentioned attending a conference convened by the President of the United States himself, as a representative of the Good Roads Association. Representatives attended that conference from all over the United States and in a number of cases, I believe, the Governors were present. These things give us the opportunity of considering and discussing this problem, and I am quite in accord with what the Leader of the Opposition has said in that regard.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I had intended to move another two motions, but I find that an amendment is required to the second motion, so I will hold them over for a short time.

Mr. Speaker, I move you now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

THE THEATRES ACT

Bill No. 124, "An Act to amend the Theatres Act, 1953."

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I take this opportunity of saying what I should have said before the Orders of the day. There will be a night session tonight.

On section No. 1.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): I move an amendment, Mr. Chairman, that sections 1 and 2 be struck out and be replaced by the following:

1. The Theatres Act, 1953 is amended by adding thereto the following section:

54a. The director shall not approve the plans for the construction of a "Class D" theatre unless there is submitted with the application for such approval a copy of a resolution of the council of the local municipality in which such theatre is proposed to be constructed authorizing the construction of such theatre in the municipality, and such approval shall not be deemed to be a licence under section 12, and that section 3 of the bill be renumbered as section 2 of the bill.

THE CHAIRMAN: Shall the bill be passed as amended?

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, may I say, before we pass the bill, I think it is a good bill. I think it is one which is reasonable and sensible. Drive-in theatres have become something of the way of life we are leading, whether this is a good thing or not. I would say to the hon. member for Peel (Mr. Kennedy) that it is part of "the rural way of life," but it is inflicted on the rural people anyway. In some localities there does not seem to be any objection, while in others, there is very great objection, and I think it is desirable to give a Municipal Council something to say about it.

The board has endeavoured to do that in the past, but there have been some legal obstacles in the way. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) has referred in this House to the situation in Brantford Township. In that case one of the difficulties was a legal technicality. The Board of Censors has been in the habit of consulting the municipalities, but in this case the municipality had not been zoned. And therefore, I think, there was an application for a writ of mandamus to make the township issue a licence.

This bill rectifies that situation and gives a township the right to say whether it wants a drive-in theatre or not. I can assure the hon. member for Brant that since this matter comes under the Treasury Department it has caused me a great deal of concern. I would not care if they never allowed one. But some people and some localities want them. Others do not. I think this gives a field for self-determination and I am in favour of it.

MR. NIXON: I may say, Mr. Chairman, that in the Province of Quebec they have never allowed one of these drive-in theatres to become established. I have here an interesting report according to which certain interests sought to circumvent the law there, by establishing a drive-in theatre on an Indian reserve. But Mr. Duplessis said he would not permit this to happen.

The ban in Quebec on open-air theatres was applied in 1947, and persons wishing to stage an open-air showing limit it to a single performance.

In the case I have in mind, certain interests sought to establish a drive-in theatre last year, east of the City of Brantford, but this intention became public knowledge and the people objected very strenuously. It was found that the area was zoned. Last November certain promoters appeared before the Township Council without anyone having any advance knowledge that this was in the offing. They asked for a building permit, and, by a strange coincidence, the clerk of the township had been advised by long distance telephone from Toronto that afternoon that the Theatres Branch had approved this application. Therefore, the Township Council had no option whatever but to give the building permit to the interests concerned. On the strength of that, and their local advice, they passed a resolution. When the report of those proceedings appeared in the local newspaper the next day, it was the first time anyone in the community learned of the drive-in theatre being established. The whole community, although it had been known as "Tranquility" for 150 years, rose in righteous indignation against it. The proposed building was to be established in a growing section of Brantford Township. The population in that district is increasing rapidly and a very large school was recently built there. Two large supermarkets have been established in this area.

The outlet for the proposed new theatre opens onto a main road, so the project was regarded as a road traffic hazard. Ultimately, the council revoked its resolution granting the permit, but in spite of that the interests concerned still proceeded to build the theatre and its approach road. This was rather amazing. I arranged for a deputation to go and see Dr. Chester Walters of the Treasurer's Department, as I was unable to get the hon. Prime Minister on the telephone for two days. Certainly the residents of Brantford Township regarded the matter as extremely serious. One drive-in theatre was already established in the same township, just west of Brantford.

The deputation came back satisfied that the theatre was not going to be forced upon the citizens. The next thing was this motion for a writ of mandamus, which was issued as a matter of course, under the law as it stands under the Theatres Act.

I consider it very unfair to make the Township Council the "goat" in this matter. The wrath of the residents was centred on the council, but when the writ of mandamus was issued it had no option.

These are the circumstances which motivated me in introducing the amendment to the Theatres Act, and I am very glad indeed that it has been possible to agree on this form of amendment, which, in my opinion, covers the situation satisfactorily.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Will the bill make it possible for a municipal government, county or township, to refuse to renew a licence, and in that manner put out of commission an existing theatre?

HON. MR. FROST: No.

THE ELECTION ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 136, "An Act to amend the Election Act, 1951."

Sections 1 and 2 agreed to.

MR. OLIVER: In section 3, it says that section 17 of the Election Act, 1951, is amended by striking out the words:

Or who is maintained in whole or in part as an inmate receiving charitable support or care in a home for the aged or house of industry.

I agree with that, but I want to ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) what machinery is provided in order that these people may exercise their vote? Is there any change in the Election Act which would facilitate their voting?

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): They would be enumerated in the same way as any other voters. An arrangement could be made to have a polling subdivision right in the institution if this were warranted.

MR. OLIVER: That is where the residence is?

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, they vote where they happen to be—in the institution where they are.

Section 3 carried.

Sections 4 to 7 inclusive carried.

MR. OLIVER: On section 8, can the hon. Attorney-General say how he intends to appoint these returning officers? May they be appointed in "staggered time"?

HON. MR. PORTER: Either one at a time, or 9 or 10 at a time, or all in a bundle. That is the ideal situation.

MR. OLIVER: Why does the hon. Attorney-General say that that is an ideal situation?

HON. MR. PORTER: Because it gives great flexibility and provides for cases where an early appointment may not be desirable. In some cases no one is ready to take the job. This is a much better system, I submit, than having to appoint at the time the writ is issued. I think it a very effective way of improving the situation which exists at the present time.

MR. THOMAS L. KENNEDY (Peel): I think it is most desirable to have your returning officers appointed early in some places. In an election we had 2 weeks ago there were 1,102 votes in 1 polling subdivision because the deputy returning officer did not have time to divide it into 3 or 4 subdivisions. When new subdivisions are being created, you must have a man appointed some months ahead at least in order that he may have time to separate the old polling subdivisions into new subdivisions which will cater equally for the voting population.

MR. ALBERT WREN (Kenora): Has every endeavour been made to secure a returning officer who is resident in the riding concerned at the time a writ is issued? I have in my own riding a situation where, in the last 2 elections, a man has been brought in from Southern Ontario. He was at one time a resident, but he has got out of touch with local conditions, and, as a result, there is constant confusion in the setting up of polling divisions. Has consideration been given to requiring returning officers to be residents in the riding? I think it should be.

HON. MR. PORTER: The difficulty, of course, in confining the qualifications of a returning officer to residence within his own riding, is that very often there is not a suitable person who is willing to act, while there may be one in some neighbouring riding. And if there is not one available even there, what is the difference, as long as he carries out his duties properly, as to where he happens to reside? We want a good job done, that is all.

MR. WREN: It has not been done, though.

MR. OLIVER: It seems to me, Mr. Chairman, the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren) has a point here. Surely in every riding in this province there is a man with capabilities of being a returning officer, and surely there is a man possessing such capabilities who is willing to take the job. I think it is a reasonable request, to say that every returning officer should be a resident of the electoral district for which he is returning officer.

HON. MR. PORTER: That was not the report of the committee, Mr. Chairman, and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) was a member of that committee.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): This was not the committee's report either.

HON. MR. PORTER: The committee's report on the point that the hon. member (Mr. Wren) is speaking of at the moment, was that it should not be necessary for returning officer to be resident in the electoral district.

MR. NIXON: I thought we were going to have permanent returning officers. That was the committee's point.

MR. OLIVER: You turned the picture all around.

HON. MR. PORTER: This is a much better solution.

MR. OLIVER: In all seriousness, Mr. Chairman, I want to argue with the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) about this. After all, according to the hon. member for Port Arthur (Mr. Ward-robe), he is a reasonable man. I think there is some substance in the argument that every returning officer should be a resident of that electoral district.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Does the hon. member (Mr. Wren) know of any case where that has not been the case?

HON. MR. PORTER: It often happens in Toronto.

MR. OLIVER: If there are cases where that does not apply, then what it does is point up the fact that the riding is not possessive of a man capable of being a returning officer, and no riding is going to admit that, surely. There are lots of men in every riding who have the capabilities and who would be willing to be returning officer.

Moreover, the man who is returning officer in the electoral district has the advantage that he knows that riding much better than anybody coming in from outside possibly could. In all seriousness, I ask the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) to consider that.

HON. MR. FROST: If I thought there was any possibility of someone from outside Grey South being appointed returning officer there, I would at once come to the support of the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver).

MR. NIXON: How about Victoria-Haliburton?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right, there would be a revolution.

HON. MR. PORTER: Could it not be left to the good judgment of the chief election officer?

HON. MR. FROST: I think the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will see it might lead to complications and difficulties. In a city like Toronto, for instance, where we have, what, 11 members?

MR. A. KELSO ROBERTS (St. Patrick): 13.

HON. MR. FROST: There are 2 or 3 in Hamilton, and some other places. In a number of cases, they have municipal people, the clerks, for instance. There is nothing political about the City of Toronto, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows, and the result is it might be desirable in such cities as Toronto, Hamilton, and Windsor, there should be a wider discretion given than simply to follow the definition of the riding boundary. I have never heard of a case in a rural constituency where a resident of that constituency was not appointed as returning officer. I think the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) would agree it would be a fatal thing for any person to nominate a person from outside the riding.

MR. WREN: Mr. Chairman, might I point out to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) that it has happened on 2 past elections in the Kenora riding, and there has been a great deal of confusion as a result. There are up there a good many capable people, even Progressive Conservatives, who can carry on that job. As you know, Sir, in the next election there will be for the first time the Indian vote. There are some 7,000 Indian residents in my riding; in fact, I have the largest Indian population in Ontario. If the same kind of man is selected again, having been brought from 800 miles away to be returning officer, it is going to compound a confusion.

HON. MR. FROST: When did this happen, may I ask?

MR. WREN: In the 1951 and 1948 elections.

HON. MR. FROST: And from where did he come?

MR. WREN: From somewhere around Orillia. I am not just sure of the town, but I think it is in the hon. Prime Minister's riding.

HON. MR. FROST: I plead not guilty, Sir.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, not only do I want to support the objection raised by the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver), but I want to suggest that even in Toronto the practice should be one of appointing a returning officer who resides in the constituency. If we really want to have a staff composed of people who know the district they are responsible for, then we should go out of our way to get such people. I might say in my riding the Tories found no difficulty in getting returning officers who live in the riding, in fact they had battles on their hands. However, I speak now on the general principle of the matter, and I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) another point which I raised when this bill was before the House on a previous occasion. That is, that we appoint returning officers who are as impartial and as objective as can humanly be found. In other words, that we do not give these appointments to political supporters and political hangers-on, but that we select people in the community who are known for their fairness and objectivity. I suggested on a previous occasion that perhaps ministers of the church could be chosen to be returning officers. Not that there are not ministers who are partisans and who are very active in politics—in fact, I am sorry to say there are a few here on the government side; I would not resent it so much if they were on the Opposition side—I would not mind taking a chance on people of that sort to establish and operate an impartial election machinery rather than to proceed as we do now, and have some of the experiences we have had for instance in the riding of St. George on a previous occasion. That matter, hon. members will recall, came to the attention of this House. While I do not blame the hon. the Attorney-General (Mr. Porter), who comes from that riding, for all that happened or transpired there, nevertheless, it was a very unpleasant experience, and there was quite an investigation of what happened.

I think we would do away with all that if we were to go outside the ranks of political supporters of the government of the day, and find people who can be depended upon to give a very honest election to the candidates and citizens involved.

MR. W. H. COLLINGS (Beaches): Mr. Chairman, may I point out this section received quite a discussion at the committee, as I am sure the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) will recall. It was indicated in the larger sections, especially in Toronto, a person very capable of being a returning officer might move from the riding into the Greater Toronto area, and we thought it would be advisable to word the section as it is today in order to cover such cases.

MR. NIXON: Mr. Chairman, one would think that Kenora is one riding, of all ridings in the entire province, where a resident returning officer would be almost essential.

HON. MR. FROST: Certainly one would.

HON. MR. PORTER: That might have had something to do with the result of the last election at Kenora. It may not have been entirely due to the qualification of the hon. member who is now sitting there, in fact I should have thought he would be the last person to complain. However, we will see next time, perhaps, that we do not have a man from 800 miles away, and then the hon. member will be "licked."

MR. WREN: I assure you, Mr. Chairman, it was not the reason that I won or lost. I gained a Tory seat. The expenses of conducting an election in Kenora, for all Parties, are very great, and the means of getting around are very difficult, and all that is being accomplished by sending up men from the "Banana Belt" to look after our election is—

HON. MR. FROST: I quite agree with the hon. member (Mr. Wren). I do not think that should be the case.

MR. WREN: I do not think so either, but why do you not correct it?

HON. MR. FROST: However, I should imagine there is an explanation for what the hon. member mentions as having happened there. Probably the man was a returning officer, and perhaps moved away to live with his mother-in-law, or something of the sort, and then came back to conduct the election. I do not know whether that was the case or not, but I suppose there was some particular circumstance about it. Certainly, I agree thoroughly with the hon. member (Mr. Wren). I think returning officers certainly should come from the riding. I am sure there are people who are capable of doing the job, and I know that I would not like it very well if someone were brought in from some other riding to Victoria, and I know other hon. members here feel the same way.

The only point is that the situation does affect the larger places, and perhaps there should be some elasticity. But when you do that it is difficult to get it right down into words without causing some difficulty. However, I can assure the hon. member (Mr. Wren) that we will—particularly in view of the fact that there is some opportunity given now for appointing a returning officer beforehand, see that these situations do not occur.

Sections 8 and 9 agreed to.

On section 10.

MR. F. R. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) the definition of "private building"? I supposed that would mean the residence in which the returning officer had his office. It might be a private house, it might be his office, it could mean that the nomination of candidates would be held in the returning officer's office, could it not?

HON. MR. PORTER: It could mean that, yes, although it is not limited to that. It may be that the only convenient place available might be some private dwelling which is rented for the purpose of holding the nomination meeting. I think the point of the section is to broaden it as much as possible in case the court house, municipal hall, or public building, for instance, might not be available. I might point out the section is exactly the same as it was in the old Act in that respect.

MR. OLIVER: There has been no change, then?

HON. MR. PORTER: In that respect there has been no change. The only change occurs at the very end, and has to do with the time.

MR. OLIVER: Yes.

Sections 10 to 21 inclusive, agreed to.
On section 22.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Chairman, section 22 deals with the dissemination of information. I feel there can never be enough dissemination of information to the electors, but have we thought of dissemination of information for the candidates? What I mean, Mr. Chairman, is this, I think if a candidate in any election has always been urging the electors to come and vote, whether they vote Liberal, Conservative or CCF is immaterial to me, as long as they exercise their franchise, but I think it is a common experience that even at best, the proportion of electors who vote is 55 per cent. It has been thought, at one time, to make voting compulsory. I do not think that is the solution. I do not think we should compel people to vote if they do not want to vote.

HON. MR. PORTER: We are not doing that, of course.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Oh, there is a way of encouraging them to come out.

MR. CHARTRAND: Perhaps, in the hon. Minister's (Mr. Dunbar) riding. But I have been wondering for some time if it would not be a good idea to have disseminated the information as to the people who are voting and those who are not voting? I think it could be easily arranged for the deputy returning officer to send each candidate a list of prospective voters and next to each name would be an "X" to indicate those who have exercised their vote and those who have not exercised their vote. I think that would be a dissemination of information which possibly would encourage, all but compel, people to exercise their franchise. I think possibly we have reached a stage in The Election Act whereby an amendment may not be in order if the government does not want to accept it. Nevertheless, I think if the government would look into this matter and arrange for dissemination of information as to who is exercising the franchise and who is not, we would be going a long way toward having people exercise their franchise.

HON. MR. PORTER: I can assure the hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) that the government will look into the question. Whether the dissemination should be artificial or natural, I am not prepared to state.

Section 22 agreed to.

On section 23.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I feel that this clause is totally inadequate, will in no way meet the requirements, and will permit the continuation of the illegal practice that has been traditional until now.

HON. MR. PORTER: What practice is that?

MR. SALSBERG: You see, Mr. Chairman, the section provides that a report be made of moneys collected, contributions made, and so on, in excess of the amount of $50, and that a detailed statement be given. I think it is universally recognized that the "old line" Party candidates spend enormous amounts of money which are never included in their official reports to the chief electoral officer. That is so federally, and that is so provincially. Not only that, it is universally acknowledged that the "old line" Parties never make public their "slush" funds, or election campaign funds, or whatever name one may give to those accumulated amounts of money which are used in time of election to help re-elect or elect the followers of a government Party. To be more specific, Mr. Chairman, it is generally known that the "old line" Parties gather millions of dollars which they use at election time, and that those amounts of money are never accounted for publicly. I have yet to see the Liberal Party or Conservative Party give an annual financial report to the public, and print it in all the newspapers, of how much money they collected from one corporation or another, or all, and what they did with it. Yet everybody knows that these millions of dollars are collected for the purpose of electing the "old line" candidates.

Some of the candidates, of course, feel they are violating laws, and that they are engaged in something unethical, and that they are, in fact, breaking the law. I quoted at an earlier date in this session from an article in Maclean's dealing with this question. The author of that article quoted members of both "old line" Parties who confided that they felt very unhappy about it; that they felt they had started their parliamentary careers in a dishonest way; that their first report was dishonest because they did not give a truthful and accurate accounting of the money they had collected or the sources they had collected it from, nor how they had used it.

I think this is, of course, an evil with which it is about time to cope. I, for one, believe you will not eliminate it entirely, so long as there are privileged interests who have a good reason to want to influence legislation, and to retain a determining voice over government policy. So long as that exists—

HON. MR. PORTER: It would be of very great interest to this House, if we knew something about the financing of the Communist Party in this country, and from where the funds are coming.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General is not original. In his absence, a humble supporter of this government raised the same question. I made a reply, and I will make it again. Any candidate who runs on the Labour Progressive ticket will be glad, at all times, to make known to the government and the public at large, the source of every dollar used in the election, and from where it comes. It is known that the working-class candidates have, as a rule, no large election funds, and that the money collected usually comes from the pockets of the working people in dribblets, of dimes, quarters, and half-dollars, and there is a great deal of free labour involved in an election.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is what the hon. member says.

MR. SALSBERG: I am telling you at the time of an election, I have people who work day and night distributing literature, and being around the committee rooms, for which they receive no pay—

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member is not the only one who does that.

MR. SALSBERG: As I say, they work without pay, and besides that, they make a contribution to the campaign. We have people of artistic talent who come in and draw signs, and other things, and they not only do not get paid, but they make their own contributions, whereas the candidates of the old-line Parties know they have to pay for every step taken by their supporters—

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, the statement by the hon. member for St. Andrew is entirely untrue.

MR. SALSBERG: If it is untrue—

HON. MR. PORTER: It is as untrue as most of the other statements made by the hon. member, since he has taken his seat.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General reduces the value of most of his statements by recklessness and the making of sweeping statements.

MR. GEORGE PARRY (Kent West): So does the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: Thereby he nullifies anything he may be saying. If it is true that the old-line Party candidates do not spend money for most of the work done for them in an election campaign, then they are misleading the banks, and misleading the large corporations to whom they go for election funds.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): We do not.

MR. SALSBERG: One of the back-benchers says "We do not."

MR. STEWART: Why does the hon. member not speak for himself?

MR. SALSBERG: Perhaps the hon. members from the back benches do not, but the hon. members on the Treasury benches do. I am quoting now, Mr. Blair Fraser—

HON. MR. PORTER: Who is he? What does he know about it?

MR. SALSBERG: He is one of the outstanding journalists in the magazine field. He is not a politician, to my knowledge, let alone a supporter of my Party.

MR. HARRY NIXON (Brant): Where did he run?

HON. MR. PORTER: What does he know about it?

MR. SALSBERG: He does not run. He watches. He wants to know what makes it run, and who is greasing the chariot at the time of an election.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: He does not know any more about it than the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: You say Mr. Fraser does not know? Will the government members deny that they collect election funds? Or are they just elected on their good looks?

HON. MR. PORTER: Because we give a good government.

MR. SALSBERG: Do they get page after page of advertising space in the dailies and weeklies, free of charge? Do they get every available space on the radio free of charge? They do not get these things for nothing. When they put in these page-long ads, they pay for them, and they run more than one page. We know that in the past few years the Progressive Conservatives had all the money. At one time the Liberal Party had it. But, recently, that Party cannot afford all this advertising. Do not tell me you are getting all this advertising and radio time for nothing.

HON. MR. PORTER: The hon. member is changing his mind, just "slithering" around.

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. members cannot deny they are paying, then they must get the money from somewhere. Then you are misleading the public, and not telling them the whole story.

I will cut this short. Mr. Chairman, and say this section does not solve the evil. If it is left pretty well as it is now, that means that funds will be accumulated. Parties will go to the sources from which they have received their money in the past, and probably secure more.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member for St. Andrew gets better all the time.

MR. SALSBERG: They get full-page advertising, and never report it; they get radio time, and it is never reported, and the electors do not receive honest reports which this section leads them to believe they will receive.

I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, to have to go into such lurid details. I had no intention of doing so, if it had not been for the hon. Attorney-General—

HON. MR. PORTER: We have not had a single detail as yet—

MR. SALSBERG: It is acknowledged, however, that they pay—

HON. MR. PORTER: —by the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General wanted the details, and I have given them to him. I hope that will get as good results from him.

Sections 23 and 24 agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, I would like to introduce an amendment which will be numbered "25," which reads as follows:

Paragraph 2 of section 18 of the Election Act, 1951, is amended by striking out the words, "double indent," whether he or she is not an Indian, franchised or unfranchised, and of wholly or in part of Indian blood, in the 7th, 8th and 9th lines.

New section 25 agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, I wish to introduce a second amendment, and I move a new section, which will be numbered 26, be added to this bill, as follows:

That section 22 of the Election Act, 1951, is repealed.

Those 2 new sections are to provide for the right of Indians to vote.

HON. MR. FROST: The emancipation of the Indians.

HON. MR. PORTER: I further move, Mr. Chairman, that sections 25 and 26 in the bill be re-numbered: "27" and "28."

THE MUNICIPAL ACT

House in Committee on Bill No. 140, "An Act to amend the Municipal Act."

On section 1.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): On section 1, Mr. Chairman, subsection 8, where it gives the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council power to confirm the decision of the Municipal Board, or to require the Municipal Board to hold a new public hearing, before such members of the board as the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may designate: What is the purpose of putting that in? You have 7 members on the board, and you might say there should be 2 designated to hear a case. Why limit it to 2?

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): The hon. Leader of the Opposition has just turned it the opposite way. Our intention is, there might be 2, sitting on the board, and making a decision, and we might order there be 5 or 7 and that the chairman must be present. It is to increase the number on the board, not to decrease it.

MR. OLIVER: It will work both ways.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. Leader of the Opposition knows that no government would decrease the size of the board.

MR. OLIVER: Well, I am not sure about that.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): There is no intention, by this amendment, to designate members of the board by names?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: We might not mention them by names, but we might say "the chairman." I will speak very plainly; I want the chairman to be present at the hearings—the senior man.

I would expect the candidate to say that the chairman should be present at the re-hearing. That would be reasonable, I think.

Sections 1 to 4 inclusive, agreed to.

MR. ARTHUR CHILD (Wentworth): Is there not an amendment to come into this particular bill?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: This had to be passed, before we came to the Hamilton bill.

MR. CHILD: It comes into the Hamilton bill?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Yes. This was done in order that it might fit in. Bill No. 140 reported.

THE CITY OF HAMILTON

House in Committee on Bill No. 5, "An Act respecting the City of Hamilton."

Sections 1 to 3, inclusive, agreed to.

MR. R. E. ELLIOTT (Hamilton East): I move,

(1) That section 4 be struck out and the following substituted therefor:

4. [1] For the purposes of subsections 14 to 20 of section 14 of The Municipal Act, the order of the Ontario Municipal Board dated the 31st day of December, 1953, P.F.M.—1175 shall be deemed to be a decision providing for an annexation, and a valid notice of objection shall be deemed to have been filed with the clerk of the Executive Council, and subsections 17 to 20 of the said section 14 shall apply mutatis mutandis to the decision and the notice of objection.

[2] If,

(a) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council confirms the said order of the Ontario Municipal Board; or

(b) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council orders a new public hearing in respect of the annexation and the Ontario Municipal Board thereupon orders an annexation of part of the Township of Saltfleet to the City of Hamilton, any lands of 2 acres or more, in the portion of the Township of Saltfleet annexed to the City of Hamilton, used on the effective date on the annexation for agricultural or gardening purposes, shall, so long as so used, be assessed in each year for a period of 5 years at such amount as may be agreed upon by the Corporation of the City of Hamilton and the person assessed or failing such agreement as shall be determined by the Ontario Municipal Board.

(2) That schedule F be struck out.

This amendment removes the section of the bill that confirms the Municipal Board's annexation order set out in schedule "F" of the bill. The effect of the new section 4 will be to make applicable to the board's orders the new provision under which the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council may authorize or confirm the decision of the board or require the board to hold a new public hearing.

MR. CHILD: Mr. Chairman, in regard to the amendment, I would say that I am very well pleased with the over-all picture, because at one time we were rather concerned, both in Hamilton and Saltfleet, that the ruling of the Private Bills Committee might have gone through. My own opinion is that it is much better to deal with it this way, that is, by sending it back to council, than to the Private Bills Committee. There, of course, we did not have sufficient time to study it.

On these two applications, from Hamilton and London, which were more or less brought in together, I was wondering how it is going to affect future annexations, which may be brought up, because I feel that Hamilton will, in another year, be asking for another 1,000 acres from another township.

It is quite possible, in fact, it is almost certain, that will happen.

I would like to suggest, Mr. Chairman, as a solution of this annexation problem, with all due respect to the Cabinet, that it could better be handled by a planning authority, and that we amend the Municipal Act to take the annexation hearings away from the Municipal Board, and set up a planning authority, to look after the interests of all annexation applications all over the Province of Ontario. The Municipal Board could be consulted regarding the financial aspect of annexation.

Possibly a man like Doctor Faludi, who is an expert in planning, might help this authority.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Then you would pollute it all right.

MR. CHILD: I understood that Doctor Faludi was a consultant to the Department of Municipal Affairs, but I could be wrong in that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Not that I have ever heard of.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): It says so in the paper.

MR. CHILD: There it is on March 27th, in the Globe and Mail. It says, "Dr. E. G. Faludi, planning consultant for the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs."

MR. SALSBERG: Sometimes a clipping is a good thing.

MR. CHILD: I am beginning to see that there is something in these clippings after all. I suggest that possibly an authority composed of an engineer, a doctor, one lawyer—no more—an educationalist, a medical health officer, an industrialist, and a farmer, should be on the board. Let those people decide regarding all annexations.

I say that for a very good reason. One of our council members—and I will not mention his name for obvious reasons—when asked if his opinion on the need for annexation, was based on the study of expansion experience in Ontario generally, replied, "My opinions are based on information supplied by our officials. I am not interested in Ontario, but only in Hamilton and its surroundings."

It seems a rather ambitious local or municipal politician might have an annexation put through council, not in the best interests of the province, but in the best interests of his particular municipality. For that reason, I would suggest something along the lines of a planning authority to be set up in the future.

As I said, these present applications could possibly go through if we had a set of standard rules, the same as for the Liquor Licence Board, providing that before you could apply for an annexation, for instance, the taxpayers in both municipalities should be consulted by way of a referendum.

Every one of us here trusts the electors at the time of election. What is wrong with trusting them with something which will affect the dollars and cents in their pockets? They are the people who have to decide. We have a great deal of faith in them when it comes to an election, and I see no reason why we should not trust them with something which deals with their pocketbooks.

All efforts should be exhausted before they apply for arbitration. Some of them do not even bother to arbitrate, but feel they are too big to talk to a small municipality.

Another rule we might have would be that if a municipality does have an annexation application granted the people in the small area—the small home owners—should not be put in a position where their taxes could be doubled and tripled overnight, simply because one day they live in the township and the next day, when the annexation goes through, they live in the city, and their taxes are automatically increased.

We have many cases of previous annexations, 4 and 5 years ago, where people still do not have city services, but their taxes have been doubled and tripled. In one area, bus service has been taken off because the roads are so bad the bus company refused to operate. Those people are taxed city rates, and are paying city taxes, but they have no water, no sewers, and now, no bus service.

I submit the same thing as has been mentioned in relation to agricultural land should apply. It is an excellent idea, but I do believe we can go farther, and protect the little fellow, too, because many of these people who moved out there are carrying on on a strict budget. They have budgeted for 5 or 10 years, and $150 makes a great deal of difference to them.

We have, I believe, taken a step in the right direction, but, I firmly believe, had there not been a certain amount of controversy and fight put up as far as Hamilton and Saltfleet are concerned, we would not have had this legislation. It is all for a good cause, and I do believe is in the interests of the province, not of any one municipality.

I think an authority should be set up so that hereafter decisions will be taken out of politics altogether. I do not believe there should be any "lobbying" at all, but a set of 4 or 5 rules should be complied with first.

Another rule might be that 75 per cent. of all previous annexed land must be serviced with sewers, water, and reasonable roads, before application for another annexation; otherwise, some municipalities could be annexed, and the council putting through the annexation 2 years from now might not be the same council, and there would be a tremendous burden left on the taxpayers for 15 or 20 years.

I am very pleased with the amendment and I hope it will be carried farther than this at some time in the future.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Section 4, subsection 1, states that the hon. Minister may require the officer to inquire into the complaint of any person that a contravention of this Act has taken place. Why not amend the Act so that the Minister "shall" require the officer to make the inquiry?

HON. MR. PORTER: These sections dealing with procedure, I believe, are identical to the procedure which was set up in the former Act, "The Fair Employment Practices Act." I think I am correct in this, although I have not it before me, I think the word "may" has been used throughout because it gives the Minister some discretion as to whether it appears to him to be a frivolous case or otherwise. That was adopted before and I think it has worked out.

MR. SALSBERG: It was questioned when the other bill the hon. Attorney-General refers to was before us. The government at that time insisted on retaining "may" rather than "shall."

Sections 4 to 7 inclusive, agreed to.

On section 8.

MR. GRUMMETT: In section 8, this refers to a penalty for a conviction of a violation of section 3. Section 3 is the section covering the old Act, but section 2 is the new part, which was put into this Act, and I do not find anywhere in the Act where there is any penalty for a violation of the new section of the Act. Why not, then, amend section 8 by saying, "Where a person has been convicted of a violation of sections 2 and 3, the Minister may apply by way of originating notice to a judge," and so on.

HON. MR. PORTER: I think the difficulty would be this; section 8 provides for an injunction to prevent somebody from doing something.

MR. GRUMMETT: From carrying on a violation.

HON. MR. PORTER: Yes, to prevent someone from doing something, as described in section 3, of publishing or permitting to be published or displayed. It is a positive Act which can be restrained by injunction, but it is somewhat different, where a person refuses to admit somebody. The proper remedy would be a mandamus, if anything, and that would be a very inappropriate and impossible remedy under these circumstances. It would be a double negative, an injunction to prevent people from preventing people from coming in.

MR. GRUMMETT: Why not put in another subsection to section 8 providing for the offence which might be committed under section 2?

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not think it is appropriate to have either an injunction or a mandamus to apply to that sort of offence. I do not think it would be workable. It is a very simple matter to make an injunction workable to the offence of putting out a sign by saying, "You must not have that sign there, and you are prevented from doing that as long as the order is in effect," but to conceive of an injunction which says that you must not prevent certain types of people from coming into your premises, that is a very vague type of order which I think would be almost impossible to enforce.

It is for the reason of practical difficulties, that that type of procedure was not applied to this case, any more than it is applied to the Fair Employment Practices Act.

Section 8 agreed to.

On section 9.

MR. SALSBERG: I want to move an amendment, and I would just say a few words before doing so, in the hope that the government will agree to it.

I have already had occasion to welcome this bill, and give full acknowledgment to the government for introducing it.

THE CHAIRMAN: Would you mind putting your amendment so we will have something to speak to?

MR. SALSBERG: As you say. In response to the request of the chairman, I will now read the amendment.

"I move that the following additional section to be known as section 9, following section 8 of the bill, be added:

The Minister shall appoint a representative anti-discrimination commission whose members are to serve without remuneration and whose duties it shall be to plan, promote and carry on educational programmes on a province-wide scale, explaining the spirit and purpose of this Act as well as of those other Acts which seek to eliminate discrimination practices, with a view to eliminating entirely the incidents of any and all forms of discrimination from our midst and that the Minister shall further appoint local or regional anti-discrimination commissions wherever necessary to work under the guidance of the provincial anti-discrimination commission, and that sections 9 and 10 as now printed in the bill be changed to sections 10 and 11."

Mr. Chairman, the purpose of the amendment is quite evident. As I said before you called on me to read the amendment, while having welcomed the bill and given full acknowledgment to the government for introducing it, I do say at this time it can be strengthened by the appointment of some such commission to carry on the necessary educational work among the people of this province against the evils of any and all undemocratic practices engaged in by any section of our population against another.

As I have already stated, in the United States there are commissions appointed in a number of states, and there are full-time commissions, paid to devote themselves entirely to this type of activity. I am not suggesting that we have a paid commission here, but I do suggest that the government appoint a committee of representative citizens of all walks of life and of all sections of the populace concerned with this problem, to carry on this task in this province.

I was hoping the government would agree to the amendment. If it does so, I shall be very happy to let it stand in the name of the government or any member of it. If not, I do feel that I am duty-bound to move the amendment in my own name.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I may say concerning the principle of what the hon. member wants, which is to continue the education of the people along the lines of anti-discrimination, that I am in favour.

The hon. member must remember, however, that the problem which we have in this province is really quite different from that in the State of New York, for example, and many other places. I think it unnecessary to set up a commission of that sort, without pay, and, to an extent, without power, other than that it would have powers of propaganda. We are really getting the benefit of that now, Mr. Chairman, through a great many organizations, the churches, schools, and other agencies.

I think the benefit of legislation of this sort is that it is educational. It is, as a matter of policy, that the people of Ontario say there should not, and shall not be discrimination. I think that is as far as we need go at the present time. This information is always a matter of interest to the public, to our great agencies, the churches, schools, universities, service clubs, and all kinds of organizations who keep this problem before the people.

With the objective of what the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) has in mind, I am in agreement. But I do not think we need go as far as he suggests. If we should find, later on, that something of this sort is required, it can then be done. At the moment, we have this declaration. The other day, in moving the second reading of this bill, I referred to what a great churchman had said on this subject. He told me that he felt a declaration by this government and this parliament was sufficient to meet the situation generally, for this reason, that if we were to leave the question with the municipalities, for example, it would be found that small segments of certain municipalities would, perhaps, assert certain points of view. It might then be difficult to overtake that in the municipality itself. But once we say: "This is the policy of all of the people," then people will gladly accept it.

I think that was apparent in some of the big department stores on the other side. The stores did not employ coloured girls to wait on their customers. That was an old tradition which had grown up, I think, over a great number of years. They were fearful about changing it in case it might have some effect on their customers. But when the State itself—the State of New York—changed the law and made a declaration of policy on the part of all people, then the stores themselves were delighted to accept it and to go ahead with abolishing discrimination in their shops.

The general declaration, Mr. Chairman, has been provided. In this case I do not think we need to add machinery and complications to such an Act. Our experience has been very satisfactory under the Fair Employment Practices Act and we think this will work satisfactorily now. I have discussed the matter with the hon. Minister of Labour (Mr. Daley). I said the other day I was hopeful he would take over the administration of the Act. He has now agreed to do so. So we can count on there being no discrimination in this question.

Amendment rejected.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: May I ask you, Mr. Speaker, to revert to the presenting of reports by committees.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker. I beg to submit the first and the final report of the Select Committee appointed to consider the question of allowances for expenses payable to members of Select Committee sitting in the interval between sessions of the Legislature, and the provisions of section 63 of The Legislature Act, and move its adoption.

THE CLERK OF THE HOUSE:

The Select Committee recommends that the per diem allowance payable under section 63 of The Legislative Assembly Act, be raised from the present twenty dollars ($20.00) to thirty dollars ($30.00) for members of the committees, and thirty-five dollars ($35.00) for chairmen.

The Select Committee further recommends that in the case of inspection tours made by such Select Committees, provision be made to pay the members' actual transportation costs, including sleeping accommodation, while travelling, in lieu of mileage.

The Select Committee further recommends that the present mileage allowance be discontinued, and, in lieu, twenty dollars ($20.00) per diem be paid, as a travelling allowance, and out-of-pocket expenses for berths, meals, gratuities be paid, on voucher, excluding payments for transportation by rail, plane, bus or boat.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, I am very sorry but I cannot vote for this motion or approve of this report. I want to say right at the outset that I have always recognized the increasing cost which must be borne by hon. members from out of town when they serve on Select Committees, and I have always felt that their remuneration should be higher than the remuneration paid to hon. members who live in the City of Toronto. I still believe that it is a sound approach. At the present time, however, I do not think that we are morally justified in increasing the per diem allowance, regardless of the facts which may be presented to justify such an increase, so long as we expect old-age pensioners to live on $40 a month. I cannot in my own mind justify an increase to $30 a day when we have old people who are asked to live on $40 a month. Certainly, the disparity is glaring and will, I believe, meet with general disapproval in view of the failure of the Legislature to bring about an increase in the allowance for old-age pensioners.

MR. SPEAKER: I am sorry to have to bring the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) back to the discussion. But the discussion is concerned with the rate of expenses which should be granted. I do not think there is anything concerning old-age pensioners under discussion. We must stick to the report of the Select Committee which is before us.

MR. SALSBERG: If I bring in the case of the old-age pensioners, it is only by way of comparison, and I think such a comparison is absolutely necessary. As long as we expect a very large and important section of our people—and, as is generally recognized, a most deserving section—to live, or exist, on $40 a month, then we cannot increase the per diem allowance of hon. members on our committees to $30 a day.

MR. SPEAKER: I must ask the hon. member to comply with my wish, and with my ruling that this discussion must take place on a specific item. We cannot allow hon. members to wander all over the place. We must deal either with the old-age pensioners or with the matter of the $30 allowance.

MR. SALSBERG: In view of your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I will discontinue making any remarks. I think I have made my position clear, and I have given my reasons why I shall vote against the report of the Select Committee and the motion which is before us.

Report of the Select Committee agreed to.

HON. MR. WELSH (Provincial Secretary): Mr. Speaker, I wish to table the 46th annual report of the Ontario Municipal Board to December 31, 1951 and the 47th annual report of the Ontario Municipal Board to December 31st, 1952.

HON. MR. FROST: I see a notice of motion standing in the name of the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). Now that the hon. member has obtained everything he wanted, perhaps he will withdraw this.

MR. NIXON: When I placed this notice of motion on the Order paper, it was with a view of getting material to support the amendment which I proposed earlier on. Having received the co-operation of the government in getting that amendment passed, it is rather pointless to press this matter, so I move that the notice be withdrawn and the Order discharged.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I wonder if the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett), having obtained substantially what he wanted with regard to Order No. 7, would agree to move for the discharge of that Order?

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, I entirely disagree with the hon. Prime Minister when he says I have obtained substantially what I wanted. I have obtained approximately one-half of what I wanted.

HON. MR. PORTER: That is substantial.

MR. GRUMMETT: A half is never substantial, hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter). I wanted the same attention paid to houses as has been given to public places and places of public accommodation, but in view of the fact that the government has brought in the bill I move that the motion standing in my name be withdrawn. Perhaps next year, the government will be willing to amend the Act to cover the other point I had in mind.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Since such a complete state of unanimity appears to exist in the Legislature today, I wonder if the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) would like to follow a similar course in connection with Order No. 4?

MR. SALSBERG: Cannot that be tabled?

HON. MR. FROST: I will make that an Order for return. I will see if we can lay it on the table.

MR. SALSBERG: I will gladly accommodate the government. I saw no reason why I should have placed it on the Order paper, except that I was advised, more or less, to do so by the department. But I wanted to see what the responsibility of the department was toward these workers.

HON. MR. FROST: I would point out to the hon. member that there is apparently no seconder of this motion, and it would, therefore, automatically go by the boards.

MR. SALSBERG: I do not know that. I shall have to appeal to hon. members. This is a very simple matter.

HON. MR. FROST: Well, we will let it stand for the moment.

I have here answers to some questions—numbers 9, 30, 50, and 51.

There is another matter here, if hon. members should desire to look at it. It can stand until tonight, or tomorrow morning, but this gives an opportunity of getting it before the House. I move, Mr. Speaker, you do now leave the Chair and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee; Mr. Dent (Oxford) in the Chair.

THE LEGISLATIVE ACT

Bill No. 129, "An Act to amend the Legislative Act."

Sections 1 to 9, inclusive, agreed to.

HON. MR. PORTER moves that sections 10 and 11 of the bill be re-numbered as sections 11 and 12, respectively, and that the following be inserted as section 10:

SECTION 10.

Sections 63 and 64 of The Legislative Assembly Act are repealed and the following substituted therefor:

63. There shall be allowed to each member of the Assembly in respect of 4 trips per annum from his place of residence to the seat of government at Toronto, 10c. for every mile of the distance between the place of residence and Toronto, which distance shall be determined and certified by the Speaker.

64. (1) There shall be paid to each member of a committee of the Assembly, other than the chairman thereof, an allowance for expenses of $30, and to the chairman thereof an allowance for expenses of $35 in respect of every day during the interval between sessions of the Assembly (a) upon which he attends a meeting of the committee or (b) upon which he is absent from home and is engaged on the work of a committee, other than days spent travelling to and from meetings of the committee.

(2) There shall be paid to each member of a committee of the Assembly an allowance for travelling of $20, and his actual disbursements for berth, meals and gratuities for each day spent travelling to and from meetings of the committee.

(3) In the case of an inspection tour by a committee of the Assembly, there shall be paid to each member thereof his actual disbursements for transportation, and sleeping accommodation.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, I wish to repeat my opposition to these amendments, on the same grounds that I opposed the committee's report, namely, that so long as we continue to expect our old age pensioners to live on $40 a month—

THE CHAIRMAN: The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order here.

MR. SALSBERG: He is not out of order, Mr. Chairman.

THE CHAIRMAN: I believe Mr. Speaker ruled the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) out of order on this subject.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg the Chairman's pardon, you cannot rule me out of order. I am not out of order.

THE CHAIRMAN: You never were in order.

MR. SALSBERG: Pardon? On what grounds, Sir?

THE CHAIRMAN: Go ahead.

MR. SALSBERG: I ought to know whether I am in order, Mr. Chairman, not you, and I assure you I am in order, and I want to repeat that my opposition to the amendments is on the same grounds that I opposed them before the committee that so long as we expect our old age pensioners to live on $40 a month—

THE CHAIRMAN: We are not discussing old-age pensions. The hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) is out of order.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, this was voted on, and the same matter was discussed before.

MR. SALSBERG: Well, I give the same reasons.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): I think it should be pointed out, Mr. Chairman, in view of the remarks of the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that this is not an increase, when the whole picture is studied.

HON. MR. FROST: That is right.

MR. OLIVER: When the mileage is done away with, as it is under this bill, and the increase established from $20 to $30 a day, I defy the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) to say it is an increase, because in all cases it would be a decrease from what hon. members were getting before.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Chairman, I should like to ask the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) for clarification of subsection 2. How does he interpret the last two lines?

HON. MR. PORTER: Mr. Chairman, I must say I understood that this was a recommendation of the committee. Was the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) not a member of that committee?

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member (Mr. Grummett) is wondering about the wording of it.

MR. GRUMMETT: Yes, of subsection 2.

HON. MR. PORTER: Allowances for travelling?

HON. MR. FROST: What is the point the hon. member (Mr. Grummett) raised?

MR. GRUMMETT: How do you ascertain the day? It says "for each day spent travelling to and from meetings of the committee."

HON. MR. FROST: The Provincial Auditor would cover that. I think "a day" is considered as a day or part of a day. If it takes a day and part of another day to reach home, that would be two days.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know whether it would include night.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): No, there is no double pay or overtime.

HON. MR. PORTER: I do not know whether it includes night, it says "day." It is in the present Act.

MR. OLIVER: It is in the present act. We never understood what it was there, either.

Sections 10, as amended, agreed to.

Sections 11 and 12, formerly sections 10 and 11 respectively, agreed to.

Bill No. 129, as amended, reported.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Chairman, I move the committee do rise and report a bill with amendment.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed, Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole reports one bill with amendment, and begs leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, it is now my turn to participate in the Budget Debate. In rising at this time I am conscious of the fact that the session is in its last days, if not hours. That all it can expect from history has already been accomplished, and, that of necessity, subjects which perhaps earlier in the session required a lot of elaboration, will no longer require it. I am therefore going to make brief observations in retrospect, take a sort of backward glance at the session which is now coming to an end, and make a few general suggestions for the government's consideration, even though they may not be adopted by the government until after the session.

At the start, Mr. Speaker, I think we should take note of the fact that the motion of the Official Opposition to the Budget Address is of a rather unusual character. I doubt whether any time before in the history of the House has a motion of that type been made. I want to refresh the memory of hon. members by reminding them that the motion of the Opposition is critical of the government for its extensive borrowings in the United States of America. I doubt whether ever before was a government criticized on the budget on those grounds. I think this motion is an indication of the changes that are taking place in our midst, changes in thinking and changes which have produced a greater national consciousness and eagerness to stand on our own feet rather than permit the process of rising U.S. influence, and rising U.S. controls in the country from proceeding unchecked.

I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I fully agree with the motion. I could have suggested to them perhaps the inclusion of other items, but they did not ask me for advice, and I consider the motion as it is, a very important contribution to public thinking and to government policy, and will therefore support it.

Speaking of the Official Opposition, I want to say that we in this House are fully aware of the fact that there is a leadership race taking place among the supporters of the Liberal Party. That, Mr. Speaker, is a good as well as a bad feature. It is good because the race obliges the candidates to seek issues and to arouse public attention to themselves and to the issues they raise. As far as that goes, therefore, it is a welcome development. But I feel that it also has its disadvantages in that the several candidates vying with each other are apt to make statements and pledges which they do not necessarily live up to.

For instance, on the question of the check-off. The first statement in favour of the check-off policy was made by the hon. member for Kenora (Mr. Wren), and he was soon followed by a statement of the House Leader of the Liberal group (Mr. Oliver) along those lines. That was good, but both failed to vote for the bill for the check-off, and that is bad.

I think that experience could be duplicated or could be extended in other fields. On the highway issue I might say that I think those in the Liberal group who make this the dominant issue before the electors, are making a grave mistake. I do not think even the supporters of the Liberal Party will agree that the highway issue, important though it is, should be allowed to overshadow the very many critical social and economical issues which confront the people in this province at this time. Failure to deal with other issues does not apply with equal force to all the candidates for leadership of the Liberal Party, but it does apply to some of those who are candidates.

Insofar as the government and its supporters are concerned, I am obliged to say that I sense a certain frustration among the government's supporters. I think they are sort of getting into each other's hair, and are causing many of their friends to stumble over each other. It is due, on the one hand, to the very large number of government supporters in the House, and on the other, to failure of government to come to grips with some of the problems which the hon. members feel in their constituencies are dominant and important.

You see, Mr. Speaker, there are many supporters of the government who feel they cannot wait much longer before they get elevated. Quite a number have expected elevation, and a move to the Treasury benches. So far, that call has not come, and that causes impatience, frustration, irritability, ill-humour, and a general disagreeableness. I think, Mr. Speaker, that it is generally recognized that there is a need for re-organization.

I am not going to be personal; I am not going to mention any member of the Cabinet as requiring a change or release from heavy duties. But I think it is generally recognized that there is a need for re-organization of the Cabinet, and a moving up of people who have been clamouring at the door, some with their fists, and some wooing with such intensity that it sometimes becomes embarrassing, I am sure, to the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost).

There is a persistency in that demand. I have my own idea that the failure of the hon. Prime Minister to re-organize the Cabinet is due to the fact that we are going to have an election this year. I want to say to my very good friend, the hon. member for Renfrew North (Mr. Dempsey) who spoke about the need of holding by-elections here shortly, that he is mistaken. There will be no by-elections, even though there is a need for having no less than 3 of them immediately. I want to advise the supporters of the government—and I think my advice will prove to be very sound—that there will be no by-elections, that the government is not prepared to test public reaction at this time, and that they had better get ready for a general election some time in the fall, preferably around November.

HON. H. R. SCOTT (Minister Without Portfolio): That's the time to hunt.

MR. SALSBERG: That will be the biggest hunt of the season, I assure the hon. Minister (Mr. Scott). I think the government, because of the many things that have been touched upon in this House during the session, is afraid to test the reaction of the people in a by-election in 3 constituencies. It would rather take the plunge as a whole before the Opposition Parties get into stride. The Liberals will elect a leader in another week or so; the CCF has only recently elected its leader, and I think the government will allow the present vacancies to remain vacant.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): That was a leader at large they elected. He was captured the night before last up at Parry Sound.

MR. SALSBERG: And he will have an election in the fall. There was an occasion here when I told the supporters of the government there was going to be an election, and they were so sure there was not, they offered to lay wagers. But I am not a gambling man, and I never take bets. You should have seen the surprise on their faces, when, out of the blue, without prior warning to Caucus or anywhere else, the then Prime Minister, arose in his place in this House, and in a dramatic fashion on a certain Friday afternoon, announced a general election, and stalked out of the House to repeat the same performance for the movie cameras the next morning.

The hon. members were surprised; even the hon. members of the Cabinet were surprised, because not every member of the Cabinet was taken into the confidence of the then Prime Minister.

The present hon. Prime Minister will not handle it so roughly; he will, undoubtedly, inform the Cabinet, but the "back-benchers" are getting their information from me now, and they had better pay attention, and be guided accordingly.

I repeat, there will be no by-elections; there will be no re-organization of the Cabinet at the present time; there will be a re-organization late in the summer, and there will be an election in the fall.

These irritations and frustrations, of which I have spoken, amongst the hon. members of the government benches, have expressed themselves during this session in their inability to accept criticism.

I want to remind the hon. members of the House, that there is a numerically small Opposition, and there is really no reason in the world for the government to be impatient, or to show impatience toward any hon. member of the Opposition, even this humble member of the Opposition, though I may speak more often than some government supporters consider necessary.

The tempers of the hon. members of the government are getting so short, and their unhappiness is evidently so great amongst themselves, that it makes itself apparent in such a situation.

If I speak about the need for extra funds for cultural activities, hon. members shout that I am making a "subversive proposal—a Communist proposal," not realizing that they are making culture almost subversive, by so doing. That is how far their irritation goes.

We had an example of that when I was referring to the crime comics. The hon. members will recall how unreasonable the government supporters became when I spoke about it, forgetting there are important segments in the Conservative Party who feel the same way, and Mr. Fulton, a Conservative Member of Parliament, is actually leader in the House of Commons in regard to the same problem for which I am endeavouring to win support in this House. But the outcry was terrific when it was raised in this Chamber.

This applies also to much more important issues. For instance, we have a Committee on Commissions. That committee was agreed upon in the House a few years ago, as a means of acquainting the hon. members with the operations of government commissions, which are in charge of tremendously important phases of public activity. Until that time, we really knew very little about the work of the commissions, such as the Hydro Commission, the Liquor Commission, the Ontario Northland Railway and so on. This Committee on Commissions was appointed as a Standing Committee, and it was my good fortune this year, to be put on that committee. But I am obliged to say, with all due respect to the chairman of the committee, who is one of the very earnest and well-meaning hon. members of the House, that my impression of the Committee on Commissions is that it does very little more than sniff and smell around, and, at best taste little bits here and there. In no instance did the committee sink its teeth into the work of any given commission. That is not entirely the fault of the hon. members. There is this irritation and resistance to anybody in opposition trying to open something which the supporters of the government consider a private preserve. This, I think, results in the very ineffective work on the part of the commission.

If a member of the Opposition raises a serious question, or expresses a desire to go deeper into some of the workings of the commission, he is immediately met with resistance and hostility, as if it were not the business of a member of the Opposition to ask such questions, or seek to do what he is striving to do.

I have a feeling it would be far more valuable, if we had a roving Committee on Commissions, which would function between sessions, and spend a few weeks on one commission's operations, and become familiar with every phase of that commission, rather than proceed the way we are doing now.

We may consider Hydro as an example. Hon. members on the government side take the attitude that if a member questions the operation of Hydro, he is an enemy of Hydro, which is, of course, an unwarranted accusation. Speaking for myself, Mr. Speaker, I reject any suggestion that I am opposed to Hydro. I take a second place to none in my support of Hydro, but I do say, and I will continue to say, the Committee on Commissions notwithstanding, is ignorant of the work, the operations, and the methods of The Hydro Electric Power Commission of Ontario. And in saying that, I am not opposing Hydro. I reject any idea that Hydro is synonymous with any individual, whether he be a Cabinet Minister, the chairman, or the manager of Hydro. There is no such situation.

Hydro has gone on, and will go on, regardless of changes which may take place in government, and in the personnel at the head of Hydro.

I repeat, we do not know enough about it, and I have a feeling we are remiss in our duties, if we do not seek to acquaint ourselves with every aspect of the operations of Hydro.

At a meeting of the Committee on Commissions, we have two hours at the most, to hear a report, which takes an hour at least. Then we ask questions for a few minutes, and then go from the meeting. That is the end of our dealing with Hydro. Mr. Speaker, I think it is very unsatisfactory.

We must bear in mind that Hydro is now in the midst of a reconversion programme, which will require the spending of over $1½ billion. Yet the representatives of the people cannot in all honesty rise before any audience of electors, and say, "I know how Hydro functions." I repeat for the thousandth time, that in saying this I am not endeavouring to make a case against Hydro, and I repeat for the "nth" time, that if I were chairman or vice-chairman of Hydro, I would welcome the appointment of a Select Committee of this House to go into the minutest examination of the work of Hydro.

There are many questions which are asked, and, I suggest, the answers given are not covering those questions.

I listened attentively to the report of the vice-chairman of Hydro, as given to this House. He gives it every year. I must say that while the facts and figures he presents are valuable, it is not the type of report that should be given to the hon. members of this House. I say so, with all due respect to the vice-chairman of Hydro.

The chairman of the Hydro Commission gives substantially the same facts many times during the year, at local Hydro conferences, and on many other occasions.

The vice-chairman should tell us the things which hon. members of the House generally want to know. Not simply as statistics, in regard to the increase in kilowatt hours, for instance. Yet, that is what we get.

Let us take one example: I raised in this House earlier in the session—and tried to raise it in Committee on Commissions—the question of giving the bulk of the reconversion work to one company, namely, the Canadian Comstock Company Limited. I pointed out that contractors have been complaining that they are not given an opportunity to engage in the conversion work, that they sent a complaint to the chairman of Hydro, but there is still a great deal of dissatisfaction.

The chairman of the Committee on Commissions, said there were such complaints, and that he had written to the Electrical Contractors' Association, and his latest proposals were quite satisfactory.

Well, Mr. Speaker, these explanations are not satisfactory, and I have been advised by responsible members of the Electrical Contractors' Association that the replies of letters sent to them are not satisfactory to the association.

Mr. Speaker, I am not standing here as a defender of, nor representative of, the Contractors' Association. Of course not. In any dispute between Hydro and the contractors, I am with Hydro, but I do not know enough to say the contractors are wrong. That is the point. Nor do I think does any hon. member of this Legislature.

The fact is, the Canadian Comstock Company has become an enormous corporation, even though it came into being very recently. The Canadian Comstock Company Limited, under its present ownership, and administration, was re-organized in 1944, a time which corresponds with a coming into power of the Party which is still in power in this province. That does not necessarily mean that there is anything wrong, but it is a fact this company, which was re-organized in 1944, when the Conservative Party came into power, has received and retained the bulk of Hydro work, and has grown into an octopus which controls many corporations. While it is a private corporation, and does not publish all its profits, it is known it now has assets running into many, many millions of dollars, whereas the capital structure of the company and its reorganization was very modest, only about $25,000 or so.

How come this corporation has managed to grow and become so decisive in industry, practically solely on the work of Hydro? Contractors now claim that Comstock, because of its enormous profits from Hydro work, is now able to under-bid them for private electrical work. Competing contractor firms say Comstock is able to under-bid them, because it pays less income tax. We have not the answer to that. The session is coming to an end, and we are not any farther ahead than we were on this question. Yet we have no answer, and I think we should have.

I do not know why the headquarters for conversion is in St. Catharines. I do not think St. Catharines is the logical centre for the reconversion programme, but that is where its headquarters are. I have heard it said, that it is because Comstock owned the building there, and we are paying rent for a building to Comstock for the headquarters of conversion in the province.

I have not the answer to that, and I do not know that any hon. member in this House has. I suggest this is our business. I am told it costs Hydro a very large sum of money on account of the headquarters not being in Toronto, but in St. Catharines; that the telephone bills are running into astronomical figures, which are all incorporated in conversion charges.

I suggest, if any part of this is true, there is a great deal of explanation owing to the people of Ontario, and to this House.

A question was asked today of the vice-chairman of Hydro concerning insurance on a plant which had an unfortunate experience just a short time ago. I might tell the vice-chairman of Hydro that I have heard complaints, and plenty of them, about the inability of insurance companies to secure business from Hydro, and that companies have to be favoured in order to gain a portion of Hydro's insurance. Matters such as these cannot be delved into on less than one hour's discussion on Hydro, in the Committee on Commissions. I repeat, it is necessary, in my opinion, for either a Select Committee, or a Committee on Commissions, to work between sessions on one—and one only—of the several spending commissions, each summer. I recall, Mr. Speaker, the words of the hon. Minister of Highways the other night. In his efforts to explain some of the developments in his department, he said—and I think he should have said it—that the increase in expenditures on highways has grown so vastly that it was impossible for the department to perhaps keep apace, organizationally speaking, with these new expanding enterprises which the department was involved in. That sounds reasonable to me.

If you jump from a $30-million to a $40-million budget, to a budget of $130 million, you do need a reorganization of the whole department in order to avoid any misdeed, mistakes, or miscarriages. When the hon. Minister of Highways said that, I thought to myself how much more does that apply to Hydro, which is now spending not $130 million, but expenditures running into astronomical figures. How do we know it has kept pace with the new responsibilities it has undertaken? How do we know?

Mr. Speaker, in answer to the dissatisfaction coming my way from the other side of the House, I say in all earnestness that we do not know, none of us, but we ought to know.

There is another commission which came up before our committee, and that was the Ontario Northland. The Ontario Northland is something of which we are all proud, just as we are all very proud of Hydro. Let me tell you, Mr. Speaker, and through you, the vice-chairman, that when I am outside the province, I boast as much as anyone else about our Hydro and our Northland.

HON. G. H. CHALLIES: The hon. member should leave Hydro alone when he is outside the province.

MR. SALSBERG: I will not leave Hydro alone. I do not think it should be left alone. It is not a private affair of the hon. Minister.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The hon. member should leave Hydro alone outside the province, and it would be better for Hydro.

MR. SALSBERG: To you, "leave Hydro alone," means to leave it to you.

HON. MR. FROST: He says "leave it alone outside the province."

MR. SALSBERG: If I go elsewhere and I have occasions to speak to Hydro, I will speak of its great accomplishments, just as anyone else in the province, and I will not ask the vice-chairman for permission.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I question whether you could get into Hydro projects.

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Minister is becoming nasty.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: No, just factual.

MR. SALSBERG: He is becoming very, very nasty, and very ungentlemanly, and he becomes very unfair.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: Just factual.

MR. SALSBERG: It is true I am criticizing a field of work in which the hon. Minister is mainly responsible as a Cabinet Minister, but that is no reason for him to be unfair.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: I am not unfair, I am just factual.

MR. SALSBERG: I repeat, I am as proud of Hydro and the Northland as any person in this province, but I doubt again whether we go into the Northland sufficiently. Remember, in Hydro, as well as the Northland, the Provincial Auditor does not examine the books.

HON. MR. CHALLIES: The Provincial Government appoints the auditors for Hydro. There again, I say, "be factual." In Hydro, the auditors are appointed by the province, and they report to the Provincial Government direct.

MR. SALSBERG: My position on the auditors has been at all times—and I have never been told that it was wrong—that there is a private concern auditing Hydro, and that hon. members of this House cannot have access to Hydro operations through the Provincial Auditor, as we can to any ordinary department of government, and I think we should have that.

About Northland, it is true that while it has a wonderful record, we do not have enough information. If I talk a lot, that does not mean I am the only one who raises these questions. They are raised by me in the House; they are raised outside often by other members. We have not had a chance to go in and find out whether it is operated most economically, whether certain lodges established are necessary, whether they are profitable, whether it was necessary and advisable to build a new private car when we had an old private car. After all, it is a small railroad. I think a committee should have an opportunity of going into many such things.

MR. ROBERT MACAULAY (Riverdale): I wonder if the hon. member would allow me to speak on a point of privilege in relation to the committee which he has discussed. I do not think the hon. member would suggest for a moment that as chairman of the committee, I at any time cut off any questions he wanted to ask. I also think it is fair to point this out to him, and he will admit it, that the chairman of the Hydro, the chairman of the Ontario

Northland Railway, and the chairman of many other groups who appeared before that committee, indicated to the hon. member who has just spoken now, that if he had any questions, all he had to do was request that information and they would be delighted to see him and tell him anything he wanted to know.

MR. SALSBERG: In reply, I can say that the hon. member (Mr. Macaulay) as chairman of the committee, was as fair or fairer than any chairman before him. I cannot say he "cut me off" regarding Hydro, but I can say that I did not finish my questioning. I think that will be an honest statement. That I did not finish my questioning because we had to leave, and so on.

May I say, Mr. Speaker, to the chairman of the committee (Mr. Macaulay) that I was hoping the committee would convene and make a report. I did have reason to think that was everybody's intention, rather than let it, like the old soldier, not die, but just fade away. I do not think that committee should fade away. I think that committee should make certain observations to the House as a result of its sittings and its experience.

MR. MACAULAY: Mr. Speaker, the hon. member has made reference to not letting the work of the committee just die, and I think every member of the committee agrees with that. Therefore, tomorrow, if my friend had shown the patience he shows in other matters on other occasions, he would have noted that I intend to table the minutes of the committee, which were kept for that purpose. I think the minutes and the reports which came forth from this committee will then be printed and sent to the departments concerned, and I think they will produce much of great value in any event.

It is an innovation; it is a new problem, a new type of committee, which has not much tradition behind it. I felt this was the best way of dealing with our committee this year. Next year, if the chairman thinks he should call the committee and offer resolutions, he may do so, but I do not think the hon. member should suggest the work this year is going for nothing, because we kept elaborate minutes which along with all the statements, will be tabled.

MR. SALSBERG: I am very glad to hear it. I did not want to be critical of the chairman, because he is a very zealous, eager and sincere hon. member of the House, and whatever committee he is on, he wants to be of service to the province.

I do not want to be critical of him, and while the presentation of minutes is better than was my experience in the past, my own individual opinion is it would have been still better if the committee had collectively expressed certain opinions, and presented them to the government.

In speaking about Hydro, or the Northland, or the Committee on Commissions, I want to be very frank and say this, that I am not imagining my remarks at this time will change anything during the session. As I said at the outset, I speak in retrospect—

HON. MR. FROST: May I say to the hon. member we constituted the Committee on Commissions simply to meet the situation which the hon. member has spoken of here. I am certain this committee has given the fullest opportunities to the hon. member to ask questions and to probe into the operations. When the chairman of these various commissions told him they would be glad to give him any further information, what more does he want? It is an opportunity which never existed before in any government enquiring into these commissions.

In the days of previous governments, the hon. Minister (Mr. Challies) was a member of one of those. I do not think the hon. Leader of the Opposition was a member at the time, but the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) was, and I am telling you, Mr. Speaker, they did not tell you very much about those things. We did have a Select Committee on Hydro, but that was for a specific reason.

Now, you can ask all manner of questions, and examine in any way you like. What does the hon. member want anyway? He always wants a little bit more.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, if the hon. Prime Minister had waited a moment, he would have heard me say this: That the Committee on Commissions is certainly an improvement, and that the opportunity of asking even a few questions is an improvement.

HON. MR. FROST: The hon. member was able to ask all the questions he liked.

MR. SALSBERG: No, you cannot.

HON. MR. FROST: Oh yes, you can.

HON. MR. PORTER: Who ever stopped the hon. member?

MR. SALSBERG: What I was going to say was this: that speaking at this late hour of the session, and bringing the attention of the House in retrospect to what happened, I do so, not with the illusion that changes will take place in the next couple of days, but simply in order to leave some of these thoughts with the hon. Prime Minister.

I am very frank in saying this in the hope that he will, after another day or two, when this session is over, perhaps give some thought to some of these suggestions, and perhaps implement part, if not all, of them in days to come. I have a feeling one must continuously plough and seed. If one seed out of 100 thrown into the ground will rise, then it will have been worth-while. That is all.

That is all I have in mind. I would like things to be different, I might say, but I think it would have been wrong not to touch, not only on Hydro, but on the Committee on Government Commissions.

Certainly, we had a good chairman, but there is the need for more. An hour and a half on Hydro is just a snuffle, a whiff, when what we need is an opportunity to sink our teeth into it.

Let me go to the budget itself. I must say that the whole session and the budget underlines very markedly the absence of two essentials; first, the absence of independence of thinking and action, and secondly, a failure to give leadership.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): Does the hon. member know anything good about the session?

MR. SALSBERG: Quite a few things. I will in good time mention them, but not necessarily now or here.

MR. STEWART: Is anything right in the world?

MR. SALSBERG: No, but we must try to make it ideal.

MR. STEWART: Is there anything right?

MR. SALSBERG: We must try to make everything perfect. At the moment, we can by our striving for perfection, try not to slide back.

MR. STEWART: The hon. member is a good slider.

MR. SALSBERG: By drawing the attention of the government to the two shortcomings which, I think, are underscored by the budget, I am trying to say this: It is one thing to be partisan, but it is another thing to lack independence.

MR. STEWART: And be verbose.

MR. SALSBERG: I am not advocating a partisanship of the type we have had in years gone by in this House, but I do say that it is shocking to find that on the most cardinal question before us, this government trails behind Ottawa. It is a lack of independence which, to me, is shocking and which must be labelled as an indication of the fact that the two old-line Parties, on basic questions, are really not apart from each other.

We are confronted with the threat of a crisis which has already assumed serious proportions. All that we are told and have been told until now is that we are waiting for Ottawa to indicate the course, that as soon as Ottawa tells us that it is serious we will undertake measures to meet that serious situation. I think that is a reflection of trailing behind Ottawa, and a reflection of lack of independence of thinking and action on the part of this government.

What we need is bold action, bold policy, to meet new challenges which have arisen. The budget does not contain any awareness of these changes which have taken place. The government members are happy that they have the biggest budget ever, and that we did not increase taxation. With all due respect to all hon. members who emphasize this point, let me say this: the amazing thing is not that we did not increase taxation; the amazing thing is rather we did not reduce taxation, because with an income of that size, we should have been able to reduce taxation.

However, I do not advocate reduction of taxation. I think the bigger and more important thing at the moment is the utilization of the surplus of the very buoyant financial position of the government to meet the social welfare conditions of the people. That is what I thought should be done. I said when we discussed the bill here, that I disagreed with the way we are hastening the paying-off of the mortgage, when old-age pensions are kept down. I do not think the people want that.

The question was one of using the surplus for the basic needs of the people of this province, so it is not a wonderful accomplishment not to increase taxes. It would have been more logical to reduce them. But above everything, the budget does not reflect this awareness of the situation, and I want to speak for a few moments about unemployment.

The unemployment situation is serious when there are over 500,000, close to 600,000, unemployed. Ottawa fails to recognize the seriousness of the situation, and I do not think Mr. Howe should set the policy for this government.

I think this government and this House should act independently with regard to the growing difficulties of an increasing number of people. Let me say on this question of independence of action, as opposed to trailing behind Ottawa, that there is a woman who is, in my opinion, the wielder of perhaps the shrewdest journalistic pen in Canada—I say this with all due respect to others—and her name is Judith Robinson. She has a little column that I clip and I should like to read a short extract from that column. It is called “Gone are the Days,” and this is very appropriate. She mentions the fact that a member of the House of Commons tried to remind the Conservatives of their past. Judith Robinson says, with reference to this member:

He gave them Sir John A. He gave them Sir Robert Borden. He gave them Sir Thomas White and he gave them R. B. Bennett. They tittered. He reminded them of days when their Party was more interested in preserving a free association of British people than in preserving the orthodoxy of the Canadian banking system. They laughed.

He recalled a time when Conservatives did not hang around with the Liberals waiting for fiscal handouts from Washington's back door. They laughed louder. He quoted them line and paragraph from the words of Tory leaders in greater days and gave them the hour and the occasion of deeds that matched the words. They laughed and laughed.

“Wherefore, Cacullus, wherefore dost thou delay to die? Or if you must live wherefore not start a public subscription for the purpose of buying Tory MPs, those that can read, a copy apiece of Creighton's Life of Sir John A. Macdonald?”

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is a lot underlying those words. I am not, of course, making it my job to revivify the virtues of the Conservative Party. But I am obliged, as a member of a House dominated by the Conservative Party, and one which has a Conservative government, to bring such quotations to the notice of Ministers in the hope that they will stop hanging around, at the doors of the Liberals who go to Washington, for a little handout. I hope they may inspire Ministers to act independently, and recognize that Mr. Howe does not today present the national picture as it really is. There is a crisis. Hundreds of thousands of people are not working. Delegations have come here and some of them looked underfed, hungry. I am sorry the hon. Prime Minister was not able to go down and see the delegation of Toronto unemployed. I am not blaming him. I am told he was busy, and I was also told the delegation did not have a proper appointment with him. But had he gone down, he would have seen the faces of hungry men who had been given a bowl of soup in the morning at the Scott Mission, and who went in the afternoon for a cup of tea at another Mission. And, afterwards, at 7 o'clock in the Victory Mission, they stretched out on the floor for the evening.

There is no reflection in the budget of difficulties such as these. No sign of independent action, no suggestion that we are going to deal with the question of creating employment opportunities for our people. No provision of funds to take care of those who are exposed to the pangs of hunger because they have no other income, neither unemployment insurance or anything else. There is no provision in the budget to give cash relief to these people or to share with the municipalities the cost of supporting the unemployables who must go to the municipalities for assistance; no indication of any effort on our part to open markets for our agricultural and industrial products; no indication that the government is going to press for a radical solution of the housing crisis which in itself would provide employment for thousands. Finally, I suggest, no leadership in the fight for a seaway and an all-Canadian pipeline of a sort which would guarantee not only continued and permanent control of these two very important developments, but which would also provide jobs for our unemployed.

I am sorry that this is so. I feel we should draw the necessary conclusions now that we are nearing the end of the session. Again, I am not suggesting, Mr. Speaker, that this government should declare war on Ottawa. But I am suggesting that this government should stop waiting for a lead from Ottawa. I see that an Anglican Board for Social Services has appealed to the hon. Prime Minister to take some action on the question of the unemployed. The unemployed themselves are doing this. The unions in Toronto are calling a special conference and inviting all hon. members of this House to attend and discuss the plight of the unemployed. I mention these things to indicate the seriousness of the situation and to suggest that the time has come to take bold steps.

Mr. Speaker, I have on the Order paper a motion for which I hope I shall find a seconder. What is the motion which I have on the Order paper? I would plead that the hon. Prime Minister should take it over. It suggests, that, in the opinion of this House, an emergency conference of the Government of Canada and the governments of all the provinces should be convened forthwith to deal with all aspects of the problem of price recession, depression, unemployment, and so on. I would like this government to take over this motion, and carry it in this House tomorrow. I think if the government were to do that it would arouse national interest in this problem more than any single speech in this House could do. And that is exactly what is lacking today — government leadership and action. Why should not the hon. Prime Minister make a speech on a motion like mine? Why does he not say tomorrow that he calls upon the Ottawa Government to agree to convene a conference of all provincial governments, together with the Federal Government, to deal with this critical situation, and find a solution to the major national problems before us? Will the government do that? I do not know. I hope it may do so by tomorrow. That will not be a declaration of war on Ottawa, but it will be an action which will certainly compel Ottawa to change its present position of indifference and refusal to face the realities of the national situation. It will compel Ottawa to come to grips, even at this late stage, with the problems before us. And so I appeal to the hon. Prime Minister to read the motion I have put on the Order paper and to agree to introduce it in the name of the government. I predict, further, Mr. Speaker, that if the government fails to do that it will have good reason to regret its failure. I am not threatening the government. I am not in a position to threaten the government, but I assure hon. members that if nothing is done about this, the government will have reason to regret its failure to take a leading position on this important question.

In conclusion, may I list a number of actions which I think are necessary in the face of the present situation.

First, the calling of a national conference of the Government of Canada and the government of all the provinces to deal with the serious situation in the field of unemployment, the question of markets, the agricultural situation and all matters which apply to that central issue.

Second, that we increase the assistance given to the old age pensioners by $15 a month as a supplementary allowance.

Third, that we should provide complete medical, dental and hospital care for all old-age pensioners in our province.

Fourth, that we increase Mothers' Allowance by 50 per cent. in order to meet the rising cost of living and the immediate requirements of such families.

Fifth, that this government undertake the responsibility for developing a housing project which will result in the building of at least 25,000 low rental and subsidized homes a year in the next 5 years.

Sixth, that no less than 50 per cent. of the cost of education in any municipality be paid by the Provincial Government to the municipalities.

Seventh, that we relieve the municipalities of all costs of unemployment relief, hospitalization costs for indigents and post-sanitaria care of tubercular patients.

Eighth, that we eliminate the amusement tax. We do not need it.

Ninth, that we impose a tax on all nickel production in Ontario, the revenue from this tax to be used for welfare and educational needs.

May I remind hon. members of this House that the International Nickel Company has, in the last 25 years, paid over $700 million in dividends to its shareholders, the vast majority of whom are not residents in this country. The headquarters of the International Nickel Company are, as hon. members know, literally in Wall Street. I suggest that a tax on nickel would be a very well worthwhile tax and would provide funds for useful purposes in the province.

Tenth, that we place a tax on an increase basis on all iron ore exported from the province, and take all necessary steps to halt the alienation of our resources to foreign interests, and to compel the processing of our natural wealth to a far greater degree in our own province, and help establish a steel industry at the Head of the Lakes.

Eleventh, that this government undertake independent and aggressive action to open markets everywhere in the world for our agricultural and industrial products.

Twelfth, that this government establish a Forestry Resources Commission, as promised to the people of this province, so as to administer the forest wealth of Ontario in the interests of its people now and in the future. This is a matter about which I have spoken every year since 1944.

Mr. Speaker, I appeal to the government to pay some attention to these proposals. In totality they constitute, I respectfully submit, a programme of independent action in the face of a serious national crisis now developing. Failure to do so will, of course, mean that this government surrenders all independence, trails behind Ottawa, ignores the needs of the people and agrees to allow the continuation of suffering and hardship in many important areas. Failure to take action will mean failure to maintain what the hon. Prime Minister has on many occasions referred to as the most important of all our resources in this province—its human resources.

The hon. Prime Minister usually ends his budget speeches in a very moving way. The last speech ended with a quotation which was referred to many times. I suggest we should popularize it everywhere, and ask our people to insist on such policies, and give reality to these words.

On another occasion the hon. Prime Minister referred to Ontario as being equivalent to the Biblical land described as "a land of milk and honey," and I agree that this province has all the natural resources for providing its people, and many more, with all that is required for a happy life. But I must also remind the hon. Prime Minister that it is, indeed, a tragedy if in this province, which is a land of milk and honey, people are allowed to go without bread and without a roof over their heads. Then of course, we appear as guilty, and as failing in our elementary obligations. I hope the government will take all the steps necessary not to remain so guilty.

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): Mr. Speaker, I would be most remiss this afternoon if I did not express my regret at the passing of 3 very able hon. members of this House, the late members for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey) for Leeds (Mr. MacOdrum), and for Russell (Mr. Nault). I would like to express to their loved ones my personal sympathy, and, I know, the sympathy of every hon. member of the House.

The first duty of any government, federal, provincial or municipal, is to look after and plan for the peace, prosperity security and happiness of its people.

This, the present government in Ontario is doing in a magnificent manner. Far reaching legislation has been presented during this session and passed almost unanimously, proving beyond a shadow of a doubt that everyone in this House believes in what the government is trying to do. The general principle of the main bills has been acceptable to the Opposition and that is a healthy sign and a sure sign that the government is moving in the right direction. The government has proved to be a benevolent one, over the past 11 years, since almost 35 per cent. of our revenues have been passed on to the municipalities, helping them keep down municipal tax rates. If it weren't for the municipal road subsidies, unconditional grants and generous grants to education, the taxes on real estate would be almost twice what they are at the moment. However, I would like to see the government go further, by assisting municipalities in meeting the increased costs of operating Children's Aid Societies in this province. This cost has increased tremendously over the past few years. In the County of Simcoe it was $16,000 a few years ago and today it is well over $120,000 and the municipalities are finding it increasingly difficult to carry this burden. I note that the cost is larger due to the number of children coming from broken homes and I would like to congratulate the counties in setting up family courts, as I know these courts mend many a broken home, and take the children off the Children's Aid rolls.

I would suggest that we do something more definite by introducing in our secondary schools a course that will provide our children with information about marriage and I also suggest that we do something in a very real way to remind parents of their responsibilities. In this way we might in the long run overcome a very serious situation in the province.

I would like to congratulate and commend the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) on the forward-looking policy of his department. During the past 10 years, great advances have been made and the promise to pay 50 per cent. of the cost of education has been carried out. More important than the cost has been the goal of providing an equal opportunity to every child in the province to get an education and this objective has been realized. During the past 10 years over 2,000 new primary and secondary schools or substantial additions to these schools have been built, and not only that, but the curriculum has been modified and brought up-to-date instead of lagging behind as it did for so many years. Ontario now stands in the forefront as far as education facilities are concerned. As you drive about this province, you cannot but be proud of the school buildings, and the type of education provided.

During the past 5 years, 3 new area high schools have been built in my constituency—in Alliston, Orangeville, and Collingwood—and 75 per cent. of the cost of constructing these schools has been paid by the province. These 3 schools are modern, efficient and well-equipped, and the young people who attend them are given there the equipment to face life mentally, morally and physically.

Just to remind you what the Department of Education has done for the province, I would like to say that in 1942 only $13 million was given in grants by the department, whereas this year over $80 million will be distributed. In 1942, $1,800,000 was given to the universities of the province and in 1954 over $5 million will be given to the universities. I would like to congratulate the hon. Minister on this great record, but I would like also to recommend that free text books be provided for every child in the schools of Ontario. I know from experience that a great many parents find it difficult to provide the text books necessary. The provision of free text books would not only overcome this difficulty, but make it possible for every child to have a text book in reasonably good condition.

I read the other day in the press that we are looking forward to finding 500 new teachers in England for the schools in Ontario. I am not making any criticism of that move; we have got to find teachers somewhere; the school population is increasing; the number of school-rooms are being added to almost daily, and we have got to do something. However, I think we could do something to help the teaching profession here. I think we could, perhaps, encourage young people to go into the teaching profession, and, if the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) does not mind, I should like to pass along a few ideas along that line.

First of all, I think the entrance requirements could be raised. Let us put education on a competitive basis with all the other professions. I do not think the teaching profession is a challenge today, and, because it is not a challenge, our young people do not want to enter it. It is not a question of money, it simply does not represent a challenge.

Secondly, the public must be educated. Do hon. members know that we have a wonderful branch in the Audio-Visual Section of the Department of Education? We have marvellous films which I think could be sent all over the province to parent teacher groups, so that the parents might, through the films, see the advantages of the teaching profession.

I think, too, there should be graduation exercises at the end of the teachers' training course which would serve to emphasize the importance of the profession, and draw the attention of the public to it.

May I throw out the suggestion, too, that we give all our teachers a uniform text book to keep them informed on the subjects they are going to teach. In talking to teachers, I find a great many of them cannot find the data they need to assist them in the preparation of the course of study for their pupils. They have not got the information at their fingertips, and if we had some sort of "teachers' help," something which had the seal of the Department of Education upon it, it would help the teachers a great deal.

The children should be trained to do more on their own than they are doing today. We are spoon-feeding our children. I think we should let them express themselves in statements, not just using one word. I believe there is a little book used in the schools which is called: "Think and Do," where all the child has to do is answer yes or no—they can guess at half of it. Let us give the child an opportunity to express himself in statements.

Above all, a child should be taught to read our language properly. I am not entirely in favour of doing away with homework, although I think sometimes they get too much of it. Homework has its value, it links the home and the school, but we should not give the child too much.

I agree with the hon. Minister (Mr. Dunlop) as far as "frills" are concerned. In the past we glorified physical education in this province. I think sometimes we have even gone the limit and put a premium on physique and a penalty on brains. We keep quiet about the bright child, the clever boy or girl, and pay tribute to the athlete, the sport. Let us pay more attention to the bright boy, and the bright girl.

Then, I think, perhaps we are over-doing things in our efforts to help the subnormal and below-the-line boy or girl. We are going overboard in this direction. Why not bring our standards up to the level of the top student, and enable the brilliant children to progress, allow them to bring their own ideas to the fore?

This may not have general acceptance, but I would bring back the Entrance examination. I do not think the teachers are equipped, either to write the examination or to mark it. There is a lack of uniformity all over the province, and I do not think we are going to get that uniformity back until we have a general provincial or departmental examination.

And while we are talking about "exams," I think the examinations in teacher training should be made a lot more difficult than they are. The idea should not be allowed to prevail that anyone can pass the teacher training examination. If we are going to keep education in the forefront, something must be done, and done quickly. I am not offering these suggestions in criticism at all; I am simply passing them along as ideas.

I would like to pay my tribute to the hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) and to say that we, in this province, appreciate the great things he is doing for the people of Ontario. We have an excellent record in the field of health. Our Department of Health is alive to the needs of the people of Ontario. It is giving more in grants to hospitals and putting more effort into the promotion of public health than ever before.

Under a previous government in 1942, health expenditures in this province were about $9 million. This year, over $60 million will be spent, made up of $48 million on ordinary expenditures, approximately $7 million on rehabilitation grants and $5 million for construction. In other words, our Department of Health is giving to the people today, almost 7 times as much as it did 10 years ago and despite population growth and the rising cost of services, our annual per capita expenditure on health in the past 10 years has risen from less than $3 per capita to nearly $12 for every man, woman and child in the Province of Ontario. The department has raised the standard of care and vastly increased the grant to public and general hospitals. In my own particular area, Orangeville will receive a special capital grant of $75,000 and a special capital grant of $300 per bed will be given to Alliston, Collingwood and the Crippled Children's Home, amounting to $9,600 for Alliston, $19,500 for Collingwood and $13,200 to the Crippled Children's Home. These grants will vastly improve the service rendered by these hospitals.

For the control of cancer, we have two government agencies, one for the investigation of cancer remedies and reports on remedies that claim value in the treatment of this disease, and the Cancer Research Foundation. In 1953, over $2 million was given to that foundation. We have also provided $8½ million for a cancer radiotherapy centre at the Wellesley Street Hospital. Under the foundation's guidance 8 cancer treatment centres and 3 cobalt bomb cancer treatment centres are operated in Ontario, and I want to say that, just as soon as personnel and equipment become available, several additional centres will be opened up. The object of the cancer control programme is to find out, just as early as possible, history of the patient's disease and to encourage citizens generally to avail themselves of the services provided for in the diagnosis of the treatment of cancer. That is the first thing, and the second thing is to continue to search for newer and better methods to detect and combat this dreadful disease. There are as many as 10,000 new cases of cancer each year and our citizens must be trained and educated to make use of the services provided. Under the present hon. Minister of Health (Mr. Phillips) great advances have been made and I would like to commend the hon. Minister for the great work he is doing in the Province of Ontario. Along this line, may I say that the hon. Minister, has made it possible to establish wards in hospitals, in order that disturbed patients or mental patients, need not be kept in jail, awaiting the verdict of the magistrate, or awaiting the decision of two doctors for certification and then be transferred to mental hospitals.

We have at Orillia an Ontario hospital for the children. I think every hon. member in this House realizes that the waiting list for that hospital is tremendously long. One has to wait three and six months to have a child admitted. I submit, Mr. Speaker, there is a great need for another such hospital, it is long overdue. I believe there are twice as many children awaiting admission, and who need the same sort of treatment, as there are at present in the hospital. We have a fine place for such a hospital at the Town of Collingwood, on the Blue Water. However, I would not quarrel with the hon. Minister (Mr. Phillips) if he were to build it in Owen Sound, in his own riding of Grey North. That would be a perfect setting, too. I would like to see another hospital constructed for the children of the province who need it, and I plead with the hon. Minister of Health to have such a hospital built.

I would like to commend the Department of Health for the increased grants to our hospitals and for the extra special capital grant of $300 per bed, which amounts to over $7 million.

Again we can pay tribute to the Hydro-Electric Power Commission. Hydro has made great strides and has contributed much to the welfare of our people. In 1941, only 16 per cent. of the farm people in the County of Dufferin had hydro. In 1953, almost 80 per cent. were enjoying the benefits of hydro-electric power in that county. There are still other things of course that I would like to see done. I would like again to plead—I have been pleading for this for years and years—for equal rates in the Province of Ontario as far as hydro is concerned, so that industry can locate in the smaller centres. The small villages and towns in this province have the right to expect a similar rate to the one that exists in the larger cities. These smaller communities are interested in having industry located in their areas, but how can industry locate in these smaller towns, when they have to pay from 25 to 50 per cent. more for power than is charged in the larger cities? Not only would equal hydro rates enable industry to locate in smaller centres, but would make for much sounder economy. Many of our towns are one-industry towns and that is a very serious situation when there is a slump. Then we should be thinking of the future as a whole. It is time that industry was decentralized. When one thinks of the tremendous power of the hydrogen bomb, you have a good idea of what I mean when I say we have to decentralize industry for our own preservation—industry should not be centralized in the larger centres. If there were equal rates for hydro power, the towns in my constituency would be able to secure industries and thus provide employment for the citizens, and the movement from the smaller communities to the cities would end. In general, people would rather live in smaller communities.

Now, I would like to say a word regarding our shipbuilding and Canadian coastal trade. Canadian coastal trade is the carriage by water of goods or passengers from one place to another in this country. Our Canadian coastal trade operators do not enjoy the same protection that foreign ships, operating at a much lower cost as to salary and wages and so forth, enjoy. I know of course that Commonwealth ships are supposed to have equal access to one another's coastal trade, but Australia and New Zealand narrow the opportunities by requiring ships engaged in their coastal trade to pay wages current in their countries and to comply with rules and regulations that have the practical effect of confining the business to their own ships. We have no such regulations and foreign ships operate at will on the Great Lakes. Our high-wage Canadian ships cannot compete with these low-cost vessels on the Great Lakes. In 1953, two ships the East Dale and the East Side, operating under British registry, with crews made up of non-Canadians, spent the season carrying grain on the Great Lakes, between Porth Arthur and Collingwood. The crews, as I say, were foreign crews and not Canadians. As a result, many of our Canadian sailors could not find work. The crews on these ships were also made up of non-union men, not complying with union rules and regulations—yet I have never heard a word about this situation from the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: I would have mentioned it, had I known of it.

MR. DOWNER: I bring it to the attention of the hon. member now.

MR. SALSBERG: I am glad you are doing that.

MR. DOWNER: In the U.S.A., only ships built, owned and registered in the U.S.A. can enter the coastal trade. For Canada, with the St. Lawrence Seaway pointing to further access to our inland waters by foreign ships, unless something is done, all the shipyards on the Great Lakes will be closed, except for repair work.

We should make strong representation to Ottawa to have laws enacted that will give protection to our Canadian sailors and Canadian shipyards. Ships are now being purchased in Italy and Germany for inter-coastal shipping, and, due to the lower standard of wages and living, these ships can be purchased at a much lower rate than they can be built for in our shipyards at Collingwood, Port Arthur, Kingston or Midland.

Now about the Department of Public Welfare. I do not think any of the government is closer to the majority of the people than this department and the hon. Minister is to be congratulated on the very excellent and efficient manner in which he is carrying on his work. However, there are two or three things that I would like the department to consider.

As far as old-age assistance is concerned — that is, assistance granted to people between 65 and 69. I have found that when the application is made, their assets are then in a sense frozen and the pension is paid from that moment, on the basis of what they possessed at the time of application. It is understood that conditions change sometimes very quickly, and it is my view that if a person on application has assets of $3,000 by way of a house, bonds or cash, and then because of sickness or a change in condition the assets are spent, then the case should be reviewed and the pensioner get an increase in pension according to his financial position. I know of one case where a man was receiving $24 a month, because of his assets. The following year he spent all of his assets as a result of medical bills and hospitalization, but he was not able to get an increase in pension. I would like the hon. Minister to look into this whole matter.

I would like also to ask for the Disabled Persons Allowance Act to be reviewed and I would plead that the basis for assistance be substantially widened.

This legislation is fine in theory but in actual practice it does not go far enough. At the present moment you almost have to have your death certificate in your hand before it is granted. I would also like to suggest that the payments from this source should be continued to the disabled persons while they are in hospital or in nursing homes. There is no need for me to elaborate on this, because every hon. member knows the difficulty and the need.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, may I point out to the hon. member (Mr. Downer) that it is 6 o'clock. If he would like to continue, we might continue after the recess. He could complete his address, and then the House could consider the remaining Estimates tonight. However, if the hon. member expects to finish very shortly—

MR. DOWNER: It will take me about 10 minutes.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, would you then call it 6 o'clock.

MR. SPEAKER: It being 6 of the clock, I do now leave the Chair.

It being 6 of the clock the House took recess.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

MONDAY, APRIL 5, 1954.

8 O'CLOCK, P.M.

The Committee resumed; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

ON THE BUDGET (CONTINUED)

MR. A. W. DOWNER (Dufferin-Simcoe): When the Act was introduced it was said that this allowance would remove many from the relief rolls of the province, but if the allowance was continued while the disabled persons were in hospital, it would substantially cut down on the indigent costs of the municipalities. I have known of several cases where the allowance was refused and at the same time no ordinary person could say other than that the person was disabled. In one particular case, a young man had his right leg off at the knee and his left arm off at the shoulder, and yet the application was refused. I know that we should not pay an allowance to people in the Ontario mental hospitals, but I believe legislation could be introduced to look after this situation.

Human life is the end product of everything and human life can be of little value when you cannot enter into the ordinary activities common to all. Therefore I plead with the hon. Minister (Mr. Goodfellow) to broaden the basis of this allowance.

There has been some criticism of the Department of Highways during this session, but I think everyone will agree that the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) has done a fine job for the Province of Ontario. Our highways have been improved year by year and compare favourably with any highways anywhere in the world. The hon. Minister of Highways knows this province better than any other former Minister of Highways has ever known it.

He is the only Minister of Highways who realizes their needs and requirements, but he also is trying to meet these needs, and this government has given greater assistance to the country and municipal roads than any other administration. Each one of us is interested in his own area, and I would like to ask that definite consideration be given to some roads in my constituency. Consideration should be given to roads where there is a very heavy volume of traffic and to roads that connect villages and towns to the main arteries of travel in the province. For example, we have a county road leading from Angus, at Camp Borden, to Creemore and connecting with Highway No. 24 at Maple Valley. This road carries a very heavy volume of traffic and should be included in the highways system.

Then we have Highway No. 89, connecting Highways No. 27 and No. 10. This road is completed except for 10 miles between Rosemount and Primrose and is a vital connecting link between Western Ontario and the new four-laned highway to Barrie. I believe that if this road were completed, it would take a heavy volume of traffic from the roads that run further south. I would particularly ask the hon. Minister of Highways to give this road priority as far as construction is concerned this year. It is also my opinion that villages of at least 500 people should be linked by provincial highways to the main highways. We must not allow the suspected irregularities in the Department of Highways to overshadow the fine record chalked up by the Minister. I am sure that a Select Committee will sort out the trouble and get to the bottom of the matter, and the sooner this is done the better. Let's get on with the job. There is no need for charges or counter-charges in this House. Either there are irregularities, or there are not. If there are, then those responsible should be brought before the courts and prosecuted to the full extent of the law. If the irregularities are the result of poor methods and laxity in administration, then it is up to the government to see that the situation is rectified. I am sure that this will be done. I have absolute confidence in the hon. Prime Minister of this province and in his honesty and integrity. There are hundreds of law-abiding employees in the Department of Highways and I would like to pay tribute to the excellent men in that department. I have every confidence in the government and, I am sure, this matter will be completely looked into and dealt with to the satisfaction of every citizen of Ontario.

We have great problems in this province, and the one having to do with highways is not the greatest by any means. The figure $17 million was mentioned here the other night. I venture to say that the irregularities are so small they will sink into insignificance when the report is tabled in this House a year from now.

We have problems in the province, but one of the greatest problems today is with agriculture. The prosperity of this Dominion depends upon the prosperity of the farmers. You cannot raise the standard of living unless the purchasing power of the farmer can be increased. I remember a statement of Dr. Christie who said that if the farmers of Canada were getting reasonable prices, they would put every factory in the country to work on a 24-hour day. Something must be done to guarantee the farmer a fair return for his produce. If the farmer is given an adequate return on his labour, unemployment will shortly disappear. This government has done much to improve the lot of the farmer and I believe that representation should be made to Ottawa to prod it to seek new markets for our farm products. Unless our farmers are prosperous our economy is bound to suffer. The farmer is not asking for charity, but for justice. We should have trade missions in every country where there is a possible chance for a market for our farm products, and also for the products of our industrial plants.

Every hon. member of this House should be vitally interested in this subject. England, of course, is our greatest potential market, but we are finding it difficult to deal with due to non-convertibility of sterling. I believe we could work this out and sterling could be made convertible if we really were serious about it. Our farmers must be given a fair return for the produce they have to sell.

I would like to revert back to the hon. Minister of Welfare, not to offer any criticisms, or say anything derogatory about his department, but just to commend him for something he said the other night. He mentioned the debt we owe to the charitable foundations in this province, particularly, he pointed out, the debt we owe to the Atkinson Charitable Foundation. I would like to mention the J. B. Bickell Foundation as well, because the Bickell Foundation is doing comparable work, too. I would like to pay tribute to the Atkinson Foundation myself, because I have read its report, which is magnificent. In 1953, some 167 boys and girls received bursaries in our schools and in our universities from the Atkinson Foundation. Some $41,000 was given towards youth development and youth culture. Substantial grants were made to the Boy Scouts, and there is no finer organization in the world than the Boy Scouts.

Grants were given to the Ballet Guild, Shakespearean Festival at Stratford. Tremendous amounts of money were given to health and health practices. Some $158,000 was given by the Atkinson Foundation to medical research, and $38,400 was given toward medical education. When it comes to nursing education, there is a sad lack of nurses in this province, and we found that the foundation gave $100,000 towards the School of Nursing, and 62 nurses or prospective nurses have benefited thereby. Grants were given to a multitude of hospitals to buy hospital equipment and to replace obsolete equipment. Grants were made to rehabilitation research of $61,000 and last, but not least, substantial grants were given to the Canadian National Institute for the Blind.

I commend these foundations, the Atkinson Foundation and the Bickell Foundation, and I would like to remind you of a great philanthropist of this province, no longer living, the man who made possible, the Sick Children's Hospital. He was the owner of the Evening Telegram, John Ross Robertson. You and I will never be able to pay the debt owed him, and his memory should be kept green in this province forever.

In closing, may I say that it was my privilege along with many other members of the House to attend the Coronation of the Queen in London last year. In common with the others, I came back with a keener and deeper sense of the responsibilities of our parliamentary institutions than when I left. However, I am deeply alarmed at the loosening of the ties that bind us to the Motherland. The Fathers of Confederation had an ideal of a Canada loyal to the Crown. It was part of their plans to sever our connections with the Motherland. During the past 20 years, however, Canada has abolished appeals to the Privy Council, removed the word "Dominion" from the title of our country, taken the word "Royal" from the mail boxes and the Crown from the badges of the Air Force, and is now seriously considering changing the flag. I believe that all these things loosen the ties that link us with the Motherland. Let us always remember that Her Majesty the Queen is also the Queen of Canada. How does she feel about the cutting of the ties that bind us to her? I believe that the ties instead of being severed should be made stronger. In these days when so many new people are entering our country, it is more and more important that we keep these ties strong and remind them of our precious heritage as part of the Commonwealth.

Canada must remain a part of the Commonwealth. The old flag, the Union Jack under which this country has grown, developed and prospered, and holds the vision of a great and expanding future, is the keystone of the Commonwealth. I say—hands off the flag. This trend towards separation tends only towards one thing—the erection of an independent state. It has happened in other parts of the Commonwealth—it must not happen here.

I would like to quote the words of Rudyard Kipling:

No easy hope or lies,
Shall bring us to our goal,
But iron sacrifice,
Of body, will and soul.
There is but one task for all,
One life for each to give,
What stands if freedom fall,
Who dies if England live.

In the words of Sir John A. Macdonald, our first Prime Minister:

A British subject I was born,
A British subject I will die.

We are fortunate indeed to have a man such as hon. Mr. Frost for Prime Minister. Under his guidance and direction, Ontario will remain strong, her people happy and contented. Our hon. Prime Minister has produced another balanced budget with no new taxes. This is the eleventh balanced budget—a record unsurpassed anywhere in the world. I am sure "Old Man Ontario" appreciates a government that is strong, progressive, humane and dependable and British to the core.

MR. W. MURDOCH (Essex South) in the absence of Mr. R. E. Elliott moves the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, before moving that you do now leave the Chair, I would like to table answers to Question No. 59.

HON. MR. FROST moves that Mr. Speaker do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee of Supply; Mr. T. R. Dent in the Chair.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

THE CHAIRMAN: Page 80, Department of Public works, Vote 151, $900,200.

HON. WM. GRIESINGER (Minister of Public Works): Mr. Chairman, in presenting the Estimates for Public Works at the last session for the fiscal year ending March 31st, 1954, I gave a brief outline of the work projects that were under way at that time. Now, I should like to inform the hon. members concerning the progress that has been made during the interim. May I first of all deal with:

OFFICE ACCOMMODATION IN TORONTO FOR ALL DEPARTMENTS

Yardley Building: The Yardley Building is being renovated and upon completion will be occupied by the Department of Labour and other units, the Ontario Labour Relations Board having been temporarily accommodated on the seventh floor and will shortly occupy the main floor of the annex section, which is now being fitted up to suit their purposes.

Ontario Government Building—70 Lombard Street: Renovations to the building at 70 Lombard Street have carried out and the Registrar-General's Branch was moved into this building last November. The building is of fireproof construction and is suitably located in the downtown area for citizens requiring birth, marriage or death certificates. An addition is now under construction to provide accommodation for the rapidly increasing records of this branch that should take care of its requirements for a number of years.

New Treasury Building: A contract has been awarded for the construction of the new Treasury building to house the Treasury and Audit offices. Excavation work is now being carried out and rapid progress will be made with the approach of milder spring weather.

This building will be 6 storeys and basement in height, of stone construction, and will make an imposing addition to the government office buildings around Queen's Park Crescent.

New Government Office Building—Queen and York Streets: The province has acquired during the past year ownership of such parcels of land not previously vested in the Crown in the block bounded by Queen, York, Richmond and University Avenue in downtown Toronto.

A portion of this block fronting on Queen and York Streets has been cleared and a contract awarded for the erection of a new office building, which will accommodate the Public Trustee and other units of the Department of the Attorney-General, and will relieve congestion at Osgoode Hall.

No. 7 Queen's Park Crescent: The School of Nursing of the University of Toronto, which has occupied No. 7 Queen's Park for a number of years, vacated this building last September. This large residence building has been renovated and fitted up for office accommodation.

Athelma Apartments: The Athelma Apartments located on the north-east corner of Grosvenor Street and Surrey Place, adjacent to the East Block, was purchased last October. This purchase was considered essential to secure the area adjacent to the Parliament Buildings for future government expansion. It will be operated as an apartment building until required for governmental purposes.

Wellesley Street Property: To provide also for future expansion, a block of land known as 70-72, 74 and 78 on the north side of Wellesley Street between Bay Street and Queen's Park Crescent, has been acquired.

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Favourable progress has been made with construction of the new Ontario Food Terminal Building in Etobicoke Township and it is expected that this project will be completed and ready for opening early in the new fiscal year. We hope that may be sometime round the latter part of May or early June.

At the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, a continuing programme of new construction has been in progress and the construction of a large addition to Macdonald Institute has been completed with interior finishing work now being done. This addition will provide facilities for setting up a 4-year degree course in Domestic Science.

A contract has also been awarded for the erection of a seed processing laboratory building and work at the site is under way.

Plans have been prepared for the construction of a 500,000 gallon water reservoir to provide an adequate water supply for fire protection. Tenders are to be called for this project in the near future.

Preliminary arrangements have been made for the construction of a new sewage disposal system that will serve both the Agricultural College and the Ontario Veterinary College.

At the Agricultural School, Kemptville, construction was completed this year of the new Agricultural Engineering Building which was officially opened on January 5th, 1954.

At the Western Ontario Agricultural School, Ridgetown, an assembly hall, with seating accommodation for 400 persons, was built this year and turned over to the Department of Agriculture on June 4th last, and a contract has been awarded for the erection of a school building which will provide classrooms, library, offices, etc.

A contract has also been awarded for the construction of a fruit inspection station at Schomberg on the new Toronto-Barrie highway, and work will be started shortly.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT

Considerable progress was made on a continuing programme of new construction for the Ontario Provincial Police. District headquarters buildings, detachment buildings and housing units for field personnel are included in this programme.

At Chatham, a building was purchased and renovated to provide a new headquarters for this district in place of the old quarters in leased premises. At Port Arthur, a site has been selected and preliminary studies are being made regarding plans for a district headquarters building in place of the present quarters in the court house.

Detachment Buildings: A detachment building with cells and a garage is being provided at Little Current.

For the Pembroke detachment, a 3-car garage with living quarters above is now under construction.

At Smooth Rock Falls, Longlac, Ignace and Sioux Narrows, sites have been arranged and plans prepared for the construction of new detachment buildings in 1954.

Housing Units: A start was made on a large-scale housing programme to provide living accommodation for field personnel of the Ontario Provincial Police. Sites were acquired and commitments made in respect to some 35 units at points in Northern Ontario.

Registry Offices: Plans and specifications are being prepared for the erection of a new registry office at Port Arthur, and, at Sudbury, renovation of the registry office building and construction of a new addition is well advanced.

A contract has been awarded and the work started on construction of a new registry office at Bracebridge on the same site as the old registry office building. The rear section of the new building will be completed and the registry office temporarily accommodated in this part of the building. When this move has taken place, the old building will be demolished and the remaining portion of the new structure completed.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Plans have been prepared and a contract awarded for the construction of a new Toronto Teachers' College on a site on Carlaw Avenue adjoining the existing Normal School on Pape Avenue in Toronto's east end. Construction work is expected to start shortly.

A site has been selected near McMaster University for the erection of a new Teachers' College, and plans are being prepared.

The new Junior Residential School with hospital wing at The Ontario School for the Blind, Brantford, was completed and opened last September.

Continued progress was made on the erection of a 1-storey addition to the Provincial Institute of Textiles at Hamilton.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS

At the request of the Dominion Government for defence purposes, the province is vacating the buildings occupied by Division 6 of the Department of Highways and other departmental units at 1200 Sheppard Avenue, and favourable progress has been made on the re-establishment of these offices in new buildings located at Keele Street and Wilson Avenue in North York Township. Three of the buildings were completed, the garage, the paint shop and display building, and the heated and unheated storage building, and these have been turned over to the Department of Highways. The remaining 2 buildings, the central storage building and the office and laboratory building, are now under construction.

An addition was constructed to the Ontario Government Building at New Liskeard to provide additional office space for the Department of Highways at that centre.

DEPARTMENT OF LABOUR

Construction of the new modern office building for the Workmen's Compensation Board at 92 Fleet Street was completed and officially opened on September 15th.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

New construction and improvements to existing buildings and works were carried out for the several divisions of the Department of Lands and Forests.

Division of Fish and Wildlife: At Codrington, a new fish hatchery building was erected, outside rearing tanks were constructed in concrete, and other improvements made. Major reconstruction work was started at the fish hatchery at Sault Ste. Marie, and this work is now in progress.

Division of Forest Protection: A new Chief Rangers' headquarters building was recently completed at Trout Lake near North Bay providing offices, work shop, garage and storage facilities. A similar building for a Chief Rangers' headquarters was also constructed at Sault Ste. Marie.

At Port Arthur, work is continuing on the renovation and remodelling of a building acquired to provide a district headquarters for the Forest Protection Division.

Division of Research: A new forestry Pathological Forest Building at Maple was completed.

DEPARTMENT OF MINES

Cobalt-Temiskaming Testing Laboratory: Alterations were completed to establish a Mines Rescue Station in the basement of this building, and office space was provided on the second floor for the geological staff.

DEPARTMENT OF PLANNING AND DEVELOPMENT

At Markham, a 2-storey brick house was purchased and fully renovated to serve as a dwelling for the mechanic in charge of maintenance and repairs of the department's machinery and equipment.

Two new buildings were erected at Markham this year, one a storage building, and the other a workshop building.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Port Arthur: Construction work was continued on the new Ontario Hospital at Port Arthur which, when completed, will provide a total of approximately 1,200 beds. The first unit, providing 394 beds, is now being equipped to turn over to the Department of Health. Work on the second unit is well advanced and this comprises two more patients' pavilions of 360-bed capacity, and a laundry building.

Smiths Falls: Work was continued on the 2,200-bed hospital school for mental defectives in Montague Township near Smiths Falls.

The second hospital group, known as "A-2" group, was completed and, with the exception of one wing which is being used for Public Works offices and stores, has been turned over to the Department of Health for patient occupancy.

Group "A-5" buildings — medical, clinical and surgical group—was started in December, 1951. Structural work has been completed and interior finishing work is in progress. This group will have bed accommodation for approximately 400 patients.

Group "A-6," garage building, was completed in February.

Group "A-8," Nurses' Residence, and Group "A-9," Administration Group, were started in September, 1953, and work is in progress.

Construction of 2 root houses was started in August, 1953, and this work is well advanced.

Brockville: At the Ontario Hospital, Brockville, continued progress was made under a programme of expansion to provide accommodation for an additional 700 patients and a new central kitchen and dining rooms along with related facilities.

Major expansion work is also being carried out in respect to the various services, including the power plant, water supply, sewage disposal, distribution of water, steam and electric current and laundry. A surgical operating unit is also being provided.

The progressive programme of fireproofing and re-modelling of the main building was continued.

North Bay: Following a decision to establish a new 1,200-bed Ontario Hospital at North Bay, surveys and tests and other preliminary work is being carried out in connection with the selection of a suitable site.

I may say, at this point, that the original site selected at North Bay was rejected due to a request by the Air Force, who felt that it might be a little too noisy for the patients. This was concurred in by the Department of Health, and we have now chosen another site between North Bay and Callender which we hope will be suited to our requirements.

Kingston: The progressive programme of fireproofing of patients' quarters at this hospital was continued.

A number of important capital improvements have been, or are being, carried out including an extension to the coal dock at the water front, installation of stand-by electric generators for emergency power and major improvements to the power plant.

Orillia: Construction of a fireproof extension to the main kitchen and dining room is under way.

A progressive programme of fireproofing, similar to that undertaken at other Ontario Hospitals, has been continued. One of the larger fireproofing jobs involves cottages "L" and "B," and the work will be started as soon as arrangements can be made for the temporary moving of patients.

Major improvements to the heating system are planned, and initially, an automatic steam generator unit is being installed. Contracts have been awarded and the work is well under way on the construction of a reception and dormitory group; also an isolation building. These new buildings will provide a total capacity of 376 additional beds.

Toronto (Queen Street): Preliminary steps have been taken to effect major improvements to the steam generating system at this institution and will involve the placing in operation of 2 new complete steam generating units.

Contracts were recently awarded and the work started on construction of a new administration and reception building. This building will provide administrative offices on the main floor and facilities for reception, treatment and diagnosis on the two upper floors, with bed accommodation for 100 additional patients.

General: In addition to the above new-bed programme, many major capital improvements were carried out at all Ontario Hospitals as required, including fireproofing of buildings and fire prevention work.

DEPARTMENT OF REFORM INSTITUTIONS

A site has been acquired, and plans have been prepared for the construction of a new jail at Millbrook, Ontario.

For the industrial farm at Burwash, plans and specifications are being prepared for the construction of a new fireproof dormitory building at Camp 5 which will replace an old non-fireproof building.

Arrangements are under way for the construction of a new central heating plant at Camp 2. An addition to the public school at Camp 2 is now under construction.

For the Ontario Reformatory at Guelph, the new 53-bed hospital for inmates has been completed and is being supplied with the necessary furniture, furnishings and equipment. Major improvements to the power plant were carried out, which included the installation of a new steam generator unit.

For the Ontario Reformatory, Mimico, a new dormitory building providing accommodation for 120 inmates is under construction. Inmate labour was used to some extent on this project.

DEPARTMENT OF TRAVEL AND PUBLICITY

Plans are under way for the erection of a new tourist reception centre for Point Edward near Sarnia.

Re Dams, Docks and Locks: In addition to the construction of new buildings, this department has under its direction the carrying out of various engineering projects, mostly in the northern parts of the province and consisting of the construction of dams, docks and locks. The building of storage dams serves the important function of maintaining water levels for navigation, hydro, for aid in the propagation of fish and wildlife, and also in the interests of Ontario's lake-shore summer residents generally. It should be noted that this type of work has great value in assisting to promote tourist traffic throughout Ontario's summer vacation areas.

This year, favourable progress was made with the reconstruction in reinforced concrete of the main locks at Port Carling. The reconstructed locks are fitted with steel gates, steel stoplogs and external sluice valves and its operation will be entirely electrically controlled. This project is of considerable importance since it will assist in maintaining navigation by steamer, tug and pleasure boat between Lake Muskoka and the upper lakes.

Reconstruction of 7 storage dams was carried out or for the most part completed this year in the following districts: Victoria County, Nipissing, Thunder Bay, Muskoka and Algoma.

At the Provincial Forester's Station at Orono in Durham County, a start was made on the reconstruction of the dam and bridge as well as major repairs to the embankment.

To continue this work programme, including the many capital improvement items too numerous to mention, the sum of $20 million has been placed in the Estimates under Vote 161, item 1, and in addition the sum of $7,525,000 has been added to start new projects, making the total amount to be voted for public buildings and works $27,525,000.

NEW WORK TO BE STARTED DURING FISCAL YEAR 1954-55

These new projects will include items for the development of the mental hospital new-bed programme, other large additions to many of the existing institutions, as well as renovations, fireproofing, and other capital improvement work, which is briefly mentioned as follows:

DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph:
New vehicle storage building.

New paint shop.

To start new science building (preparation of plans and preliminary work).

Sewage disposal plant.

Ontario Veterinary College:

To start new clinical building for Department of Medicine and Surgery (preparation of plans and preliminary work).

Demonstration Farm, New Liskeard:

Construction of a new administration building.

Miscellaneous items for capital improvements for all agricultural buildings.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT

Ontario Provincial Police:

District Headquarters Building—to start construction of 2 new headquarters buildings.

Detachment buildings—to start construction of 2 new detachment buildings at Essex and Kaladar.

Housing—to provide an additional 25 units.

Registry Offices—alterations and improvements to office at Fort William. To start new Registry Office building at North Bay.

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Ontario School for the Deaf, Belleville:

To start construction of a new heating plant.

Ontario School for the Blind, Brantford:

To start construction of a new assembly hall wing to the main building.

Miscellaneous items for capital improvements for all educational buildings.

New sites for teachers' colleges, as may be required.

DEPARTMENT OF HEALTH

Ontario Hospital, Hamilton:

To start new patients' building to accommodate 600 beds and a new nurses' residence for 125.

Ontario Hospital, Kingston:

To start construction of a 500-bed unit which shall include an administration building, medical-surgical building, 2 infirmary buildings, and a new central kitchen and dining hall building for the whole institution, as well as a new assembly hall and nurses' residence of 30 beds.

Ontario Hospital, Brockville:

To start construction of 2 buildings for disturbed patients, each to accommodate 130 beds.

Miscellaneous items for capital improvements for all hospital buildings and works.

DEPARTMENT OF HIGHWAYS

To provide office accommodation for Division No. 16 at Cochrane.

To start construction of an office building for Division No. 5 at Owen Sound.

DEPARTMENT OF MINES

Svastika:

To start construction of office building for the Mining Recorder, Inspector, Resident Geologist and staff.

Alterations to Temiskaming Testing Laboratory at Cobalt.

DEPARTMENT OF PUBLIC WORKS

Construction of a new office building at Kemptville to provide accommodation for staff of several departments.

Renovation of building to provide General Headquarters for the OPP in Toronto.

DEPARTMENT OF REFORM INSTITUTIONS

Ontario Reformatory, Mimico:

Construction of dormitory building No. 2.

Ontario Reformatory, Brampton:

To start a progressive building programme for permanent buildings to replace deteriorated wooden buildings.

Industrial Farm, Monteith:

To start construction of new dormitory buildings with 200 capacity for first unit.

Miscellaneous fireproofing and capital improvements for all reformatories.

DEPARTMENT OF TRAVEL AND PUBLICITY

Niagara Falls:

To provide a new reception centre.

DEPARTMENT OF LANDS AND FORESTS

New district office building at Kapuskasing.

New ranger's headquarters at Pembroke.

Store and restaurant building at Rondeau Park.

Miscellaneous DLF improvement projects.

This brief résumé of our work programme for the new fiscal year will, I trust, give the hon. members of this House an outline of the extensive and province-wide programme of works, not including many repair jobs, that are now under way or are planned to be started during the fiscal year commencing April 1st next.

Mr. Chairman, in closing these remarks may I place on the records of this House my appreciation and thanks for the loyalty and support so freely given me by the senior officers and all staff members of the Department of Public Works during the past year.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 151, Main Office, $900,200.

On Vote 151.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Chairman, just a question in regard to item 4 of Vote 151, "Insurance." I was puzzled by the following fact: the item calls for an expenditure of $13,000 this year; the same item was $15,000 last year, and $40,000 the year before. This means either a reduction in coverage, lower rates—or what is it?

HON. W. GRIESINGER: When the hon. member mentioned the figure of "$40,000," that was 2 years ago, and was covering the insurance premium on this particular building in which we are tonight. It is a 3-year policy, and does not become due until next year.

The insurance item we show at the present time of $13,000, is made up of a fleet policy in the amount of $1,200; a boat on Muskoka lakes for $250—these are yearly premiums; 88 College Street, in the sum of $634.35; 67 College St., $2,478.30; 1200 Sheppard Ave., $1455.92; 72 Wellesley St. (approx.) $127.40; 74 Wellesley St., $41.00; 78 Wellesley St., $213.03. These last 3 items total approximately $380.00 and make a grand total of $6,400.

Then we have a contingency of $6,600, making the total of $13,000. The contingency is for new construction we probably will have, and upon which a certain amount of insurance will probably have to be taken out.

MR. SALSBERG: Just to follow that up, Mr. Chairman, I notice that none of the other departments have any item for insurance. Does that mean that they do not require any, or that the Department of Public Works covers all government-owned buildings and property?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Actually, that applies only to the building we are in tonight, upon which we carry insurance. The rest is carried by the government itself.

MR. SALSBERG: No insurance?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: That is right.

Vote 151 agreed to.

Vote 152, General Superintendents' Salaries, $175,000, agreed to.

Vote 153, Lieutenant-Governor's Apartment, $7,800, agreed to.

On Vote No. 154.

MR. SALSBERG: Just an inquiry, Mr. Chairman. Item No. 4 "A Maintenance Staff," and the figure is a bit surprising in that more than two-thirds of the expenditure goes for temporary or casual labour, and only one-third, or thereabouts—perhaps even less—for the permanent staff.

I may say that in former years we had some lively arguments about this question. We stopped them, and I was hoping by now the majority of employees in that branch have become more permanent than it appears they are.

I suggest that it is not a good policy, and is not fair to a great many of those people working for years without enjoying the benefits of a permanent employee. These figures would indicate this has hardly gone forward.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I could answer that question in this way: The first year of employment is casual; the second year is temporary, and if they are found suitable, then they go on the permanent list.

MR. SALSBERG: After 3 years.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Yes.

Vote 154 agreed to.

Vote 155, Osgoode Hall, $132,000, agreed to.

On Vote 156.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister indicate the estimated cost of the Millbrook institution? What will be the estimated cost.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Around $2 million is estimated.

Vote 156 agreed to.

Vote 157, Ontario Government Branch Office Buildings, $507,500, agreed to.

Vote 158, Maintenance of Locks, Bridges, Dams, and Docks, etc., $100,000, agreed to.

Vote 159, Aid to Drainage, $30,000, agreed to.

On Vote 160.

MR. SALSBERG: On 160, "Miscellaneous." Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. Minister at this time whether his department is the one which keeps tab on all our works of art. As the hon. members know, I display an interest in our art works a few times at each session. I am wondering whether anybody knows what we possess, whether they are catalogued, whether they are indexed, and whether they are numbered, and whether they are recorded somewhere? We have added, in the past few years, a number of original works. As I said on one occasion, it was our hope we would eventually gather a sufficient collection of works of Ontario artists to constitute a provincial collection, which might be used for public displays, not only here, but elsewhere.

MR. SALSBERG: This is as good a night, perhaps, as any, to inquire whether the Department of Public Works is responsible for them and, if so, whether we have a catalogue of them.

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Yes, I think there is a sort of divided ownership, if one wants to put it that way, between the Department of Public Works and the Department of Education. However, I can assure the hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) that we have a 100 per cent. card index system, and we know where they all are and the condition they are in.

MR. SALSBERG: Are they indexed according to titles or artists?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I suppose that is the way it would be done—and artists.

MR. SALSBERG: I suppose an hon. member could come and look at the index?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I shall be glad to show it to the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg).

MR. SALSBERG: Yes.

Vote 160 concurred in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 161, Public Buildings, $27,525,000.

Item 1,

To provide for the construction of new buildings, and works, purchase of lands and buildings, including additions, alterations, equipment and extension of services to existing buildings and works, and the purchase of construction plant and equipment and expenses in connection therewith, $27,525,000.

On item 1.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I have a very simple question to which I confess I have not got the answer. Are the large-scale construction jobs carried by the department itself, through its staff and the use of its machinery, or are they contracted out to private construction firms?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: All the large contracts are now let out for tenders and by contract.

MR. SALSBERG: And the tenders are advertised?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: Yes, they are advertised in the Daily Commercial News, and the Toronto papers, unless it is an out-of-town job, in which case it is advertised in the local press.

Item 1 agreed to.

Vote 161 concurred in.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Vote 162, Dams, Docks and Drainage Works, $320,000.

Item 1, "Municipal drainage, including grants-in-aid thereof, $20,000.

Item 1 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Item 2, "Storage Dams and Docks, $300,000."

Item 2 agreed to.

Vote 162 concurred in.

THE CHAIRMAN: Vote 163, Miscellaneous, $2,155,000.

Item 1,

Grant — City of Sudbury — grant towards the cost of a flood control and drainage scheme, known as the Nolins' and Junction Creek Drainage Works, in the City of Sudbury, $1,000.

Item 1 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Grants, Conservation, $2 million.

Grant towards the cost of further development of works of the Grand River Conservation Commission, $1,250,000.

To provide for grants to Conservation Authorities, as may be approved by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council, in accordance with The Conservation Act, chapter 62 R.S.O. 1950, section 39, $750,000.

On item 2.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Chairman, would the hon. Minister (Mr. Griesinger) say what jobs under The Conservation Act are in progress now, or are contemplated for this year?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: In the case of the Mitchell Flood Control Scheme, there is a total estimated cost of $310,000, and the total estimated grant is $116,250. The St. Marys Flood Control Scheme amounts to $290,000. The Ausable River Construction Authority, estimated Ontario grant is $262,500. Then there is the Conestoga Dam for which we have set up a sum of $1,250,000; the Fanshaw Dam and Reservoir, with a balance of $180,000; a balance on the Brampton Flood Channel of $50,000; Reforestation, $50,000; and Engineering, $35,000.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask one further question? What is the state of progress as regards the dam on the Conestoga? Has it been completed?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I understand the agreement has been signed between the two senior governments, but I do not know whether tenders have been called for the contract work itself. That is done by the Conservation Authority itself.

MR. OLIVER: The work has not started yet, in any event. Not that I know of.

Item 2 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Item 3, "Grant to the Government of Canada of 50 per cent. of the cost of dredging in the Muskoka District, $30,000."

On item 3.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Chairman, may I ask the hon. Minister (Mr. Griesinger) what is the explanation of item 3?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: That is provided in case we have to do any dredging in that district.

MR. OLIVER: Is it an annual Estimate?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: It is set up annually, provided if we have to do any dredging there.

MR. OLIVER: Was any spent last year?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: No, so it is set up again this year. We may have to do some work in there.

MR. OLIVER: Did you ever use any money out of this item?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: I do not think any has been used during my year as Minister, but I understand it has been used in previous years.

Item 3 agreed to.

THE CHAIRMAN: Item 4.

Grants to provide for remedial works to alleviate flooding conditions, erosion of farm lands and other damages, as may be directed by the Lieutenant - Governor - in - Council, $124,000.

On item 4.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, item 4, "Aid—Remedial Works, etc." This year is for $124,000, which is the same as last year. According to the Public Accounts for the year ended 1953, we spent $7,482. Is the hon. Minister (Mr. Griesinger) expecting to spend a lot more this year?

HON. MR. GRIESINGER: The sum of $124,000 is provided in case any serious floods take place, in which a grant can then be made immediately. It is quite true we may not spend a great deal of that sum during any particular year, but if, in some section of the province, a severe flood condition occurs, and we want to make an immediate grant or match dollar for dollar what the Dominion Government will do at the same time, then we have this item set up for that purpose.

Item 4 agreed to.

Note 163 concurred in.

ESTIMATES, DEPARTMENT OF TRAVEL AND PUBLICITY

HON. LOUIS CECILE (Minister of Travel and Publicity): Mr. Chairman, this is the sixth occasion that my privilege has been to address the Assembly in very practical terms about my department, and to ask the Assembly's continued practical support of a work which I sincerely believe has an importance to all our people that could hardly be exaggerated.

Honourable members may be disappointed when I say at the beginning that I am asking for no more monies than were generously voted for the past fiscal year.

Perhaps I should remind the House at the outset that the Rentals Administration matter which has been my responsibility for a few years, has now been resolved in ways familiar to all concerned. My request tonight refers only to the advancement of the "travel and vacation" business which we all enjoy in Ontario, and which, in my belief, brought in to our province at least $225 million last year.

From time to time, Mr. Chairman, it is not a bad thing to remind ourselves of first principles, and to review the legal sanctions under which we act. In the case of my department, the Assembly, in 1946, laid down the following terms of reference:

The objects of the department shall be to develop the tourist industry in Ontario by encouraging and promoting improvement in the standards of accommodation, facilities, and services offered to tourists, and to undertake the publicizing of the tourist industry and of the resources, attractions, and advantages of Ontario.

That is what we try our best to do, and that is all we may do.

The first Minister to hold this portfolio, my friend the present Provincial Secretary (Mr. Welsh), in 1946 set up such a well-considered organization that the 8 years which have passed have indicated no need for any particular alteration. I believe that the machinery of the department is well-gearred to carry out the terms of reference I quoted a minute ago.

Ontario is the only jurisdiction on this continent, provincial or state, which has established a department of government to foster and promote its travel and vacation business.

In our other provinces and in the various states, you will usually find engaged in this work, a bureau or branch of some large department such as "Trade and Industry," "Highways," "Health," or other.

I feel convinced that the decision of 1946 was a sound one for two main reasons. First, I am constantly meeting American officials who say to me: "I wish our state had a set-up like you have in Ontario."

Second—the proof of the pudding is in the eating—we have enjoyed for 8 years an annually increasing record volume of tourist business with all its resultant and wide-spread benefits to all our people. We should not be afraid of seeming to boast in this matter. Ontario enjoys well over half the tourist volume recorded for the whole Dominion, and I may tell you, Ontario is the envy of most of the States of the Union to our south.

Now, Mr. Chairman, do not think for a minute that I am claiming sole credit for my department for this happy state of affairs. Far from it.

If there is any business in the world where co-operative and joint effort brings results, the tourist business is that.

The credit is shared by many—by other government departments, by transportation interests, by chambers of commerce and similar bodies, by municipalities, and, very importantly, by individual operators who now realize they are in a big business with a splendid future. We can all help each other, and we all know it and we all try to do it.

I would be remiss indeed if I did not mention at this time the basic part played in our tourist scene by our network of highways. The question often arises: "Which is cause and which is result?" Or is it sometimes stated: "Which comes first—the hen or the egg?" In this case, do we build highways because the motorists demand them, or do the motorists come to explore the highways that we have already built for them?

Myself, I think the latter, and, looking at the map of Ontario, with the expansion of the last few years in mind, I think we are well justified in believing that the map at which our grandchildren will one day look, will show thoroughfares to the north rivalling our more southerly network.

Just as fine firm highways attract motorists, so do modern hotels and other accommodations attract vacationists. The increase of first-class motor courts here in recent years has shown that.

It is my hope that private capital may once again be attracted to the field of hotel and resort construction of the most up-to-date type for I feel that the future will bring a sure return.

To descend to particulars, I ask you to watch, this year, the traffic over our new road to Atikokan. This gives road access for the first time to the environs of Quetico Provincial Park. That whole area is "a natural" for investment in first-class hotels, resorts and motor courts, and I hope that private enterprise will take advantage of the opportunities.

We have in Ontario about 1,000 hotels, about 1,500 angling and hunting camps, and over 5,000 summer resorts, motor courts, tourist homes and so on, but the benefit of traveling and vacationing is by no means restricted to these operators or to other caterers or retail merchants. The tourist dollar, so-called, passes through many, many hands and creates a benefit at every step.

Particularly let us remember the simple fact that most people eat 3 meals a day, therefore, a great part of the benefit goes to producers and processors of foodstuffs of all kinds, as well as to those who prepare and serve it. Let us remember also the thousand and one articles of equipment and supplies which are used in those big modern industries represented by hotels, motor courts and so on, and also let us remember how our tourist visitors help us through the media of the gasoline tax, the hunting and angling licences, and also through those excise taxes levied by the Dominion Government. With that in mind, it will be seen that the tourist dollar spent in one corner of our province benefits to some degree those who live in the farthest opposite corner. One might even take it farther than that, and in respect of a federal excise and other tax factors, one may correctly say that we benefit here in Ontario from the tourist expenditures made in every other province. I have perhaps laboured this point at too great length and I hope I have not bored the House, but I like to stress it because I so often meet otherwise fully enlightened citizens who think that the tourist business is something that only concerns the operators of fishing camps in the north or summer resorts in Muskoka, or similar special groups within our commercial fabric.

Perhaps at this point I should refer to the well-known fact that during the past few years or so, our own Canadians visiting and vacationing in other countries have for the first time been spending an even greater sum than visitors spend here. I do not think this so-called adverse balance will be quite so pronounced when the final figures for 1953 are announced. In fact, I have been told that the adverse balance has been reduced from $37 million to about $25 million. And in any event, I do not regard the fact with any particular dismay, but rather as a challenge to us here to intensify and improve our promotion and our advertising, and above all the quality of our accommodation and services.

The United States of America, of course, is our principal market and according to surveys which command acceptance, of all the millions of vacation trips taken by U.S. travellers, only 6.3 per cent. are taken to countries outside the continental United States. The American, in other words, has so much to see and so many places to explore in his own vast country that he has to be persuaded to come outside its boundaries for his holiday. Canada, by the nature of things, gets the lion's share of that 6.3 per cent of the business which goes outside the United States, and Ontario gets the lion's share of that quantity.

But you will see, and this is a point I wish to make very forcibly, we have only barely scratched the surface of the vast total potential. In my belief we can build up the business we now enjoy and which is so gratifying and lucrative, to almost any height: but as in every other business we must ensure that our product is uniformly good, that it is attractively packaged and that it is marketed at a fair and reasonable price considering the value received. In other words, the same business principles apply to the merchandising of travel and vacationing as apply to the marketing of any brand name product in any national market. We, in Ontario, certainly have the product, a product of many and varied attractions. It is the merchandising, advertising and promotion that we must all look to. This merchandising and promotion is going on right now on all levels from the Dominion Government down to the individual operator. Our great transportation systems, rail, air, bus and boat are, and have been, contributing with great weight to the total effort. I believe that each one of our provinces is undertaking in fair proportion its share of the campaign. But one of the greatest elements in this merchandising campaign is that represented by the regional organizations, chambers of commerce, boards of trade and the municipalities. I could quote you dozens of examples of fruitfulness of such effort, but I will content my self by naming only one, namely the county in which I was born, the County of Essex. Down there they have a set of men who for a good many years have been engaged in the promotion of Essex County from every point of view but very particularly from the point of view of vacation travel, and since their campaign first got into high gear, they have never looked back, and I do not expect that their efforts will ever decrease because they have seen around them its very manifest benefits.

The promotion of travel and vacationing in Canada has not been spectacular, but it has been steady, and I am glad to say is continuing. For spectacular examples of what can be done, we might well look at the examples of Miami Beach and the State of California to name only two of dozens. It is not many years ago that a group of business men in California founded a body known as the "All-Year Club of California" and made up their minds that they would, by their own efforts, transform that state into an all-year round holiday mecca. I am sure you do not need any particular confirmation of the statement that they certainly succeeded. Then, again, Miami Beach 40 or 50 years ago was nothing but a windswept sandbar, with nothing particular to recommend it except what a few men of imagination could see as a future possibility. I am quite sure that many hon. members have a better knowledge of California and Miami than I have and that no elaboration is necessary of the fact that the tourist business in Florida, particularly, is an outstanding example of what can be done in that line of merchandising backed up by a good product.

I do not think I need point out, Mr. Chairman, that there is increasing competition for the patronage of the American vacationing family. Hon. members, I am quite sure, read the same magazines and newspapers that I do, and will not have failed to note the appeals made by such competing areas as Hawaii, Mexico, and the Caribbean as well as by all the States of the Union, by European countries and by our own sister provinces. However, it is a very friendly competition and those most experienced in the travel business believe that in general everybody wins, provided we can keep the travelling and vacationing habits of the people of this continent ingrained and still more expansive.

We have at our door a potential market that means travelling and vacationing expenditures of $8 billion annually. When I use the quantity $8 billion, I am using the lowest and most conservative estimate made by any responsible authority as the sum spent in pleasure travel by American families each year. I have seen calculations and estimates that place the total very much higher, but I prefer to place the argument at a conservative level because that level is sufficiently impressive.

I will tell you where I got the figure and it was confirmed just the other day. I got it from the Research Department of the Curtis Publishing Company, who as you know publish 4 great magazines, Holiday magazine, Saturday Evening Post, Ladies' Home Journal and Country Gentleman.

MR. SALSBERG: That is just promotion.

HON. MR. CECILE: They have conducted this survey annually for 4 years. It is from these same research experts that I have accepted the figure which indicates that we vacation merchandisers here in Ontario are enjoying less than 5 per cent. of the grand total potential. This, as I said before, is to me a distinct challenge and I hope it will also appeal to the House that way. Our product rivals or surpasses that of any of our competitors, so it is up to us.

The consideration of this vast, barely tapped potential is a consideration which leads me to view the future of Ontario's tourist business with confidence. Since our principal market is in the United States, I read with necessary interest many of the financial and business journals published in that country, and I find in them a wide variety of future prophecies. I will sift out only two. In U.S. News and World Report magazine of January 29th, 1954, I read:

There is no positive evidence yet that any serious recession is in the making—just a slowdown from boom's peak.

Again I read in Fortune magazine for January:

This will be another year of mild re-adjustment for business. But it could also be the second best year U.S. business has ever experienced.

The U.S. Secretary of Commerce, Sinclair Weeks, in his Bulletin of Commerce of January 8th agrees with these journalistic views when he says:

Though 1954 may not equal the all-time record boom of 1953, known conditions and foreseeable prospects offer sound reasons for continued realistic optimism that it will be among the better years of economic history.

So again I say, I believe that everybody engaged in, and interested in Ontario's tourist business may view the prospects for this present year with greatest confidence. But there is one thing the importance of which I cannot overstress, namely that advertising and promotion must be continued vigorously not only on the government level but by communities, local organizations and individual operators. In the modern competitive world, any product whose advertising stops or slows down past a point, soon vanishes from the market. To say that our visitor industry would ever vanish would, of course, be a gross exaggeration, but we wish not only to maintain it at its present gratifying level, but to make further advances and secure further rewards for those thousands of people who depend on it for their living and those thousands more who benefit indirectly or in a secondary sense. And that, I repeat, means all of us.

I should mention here the successful inauguration of scheduled summer flights to Gravenhurst by Trans-Canada Airlines last summer. This proved a distinct advantage to Muskoka and neighbouring districts and I am informed that TCA regard it as a complete success and will continue it. The new scheduled service to Sudbury will undoubtedly have a like effect in the coming year.

Another further development that should bring benefit to the province tourist business was announced on February 9th by Governor Dewey of New York State. He proposed a new north-south express highway which should bring much increased traffic into the St. Lawrence-Thousand Island area. The Trans-Canada Highway and the continued expansion and improvement of the province's own highway system in all sections are additional factors suggesting increased business.

Well now, Mr. Chairman, perhaps that has been a pretty long preamble. I will now get down to business.

I am asking the House for exactly the same sum as it voted to me last year for ordinary expenditures, namely $885,000. We have no capital expenditures. That means a reduced request, for I have to absorb, within it, civil service salary increases, and also increased costs which have crept up in printing, newspaper and magazine advertising space, engraving, and in many other fields. Believe me, we have had to sharpen our lead-pencils in our calculations.

To deal with the smaller items first, members will note that salary items reflect the re-adjustment recently made in civil service schedules, and the absorption of $300 per employee from the cost-of-living bonus.

Items covering travelling expenses are based on the experience of the past 8 years and I assure you are moderate. Travel officials have to travel. They have to attend and address meetings, both here and outside the province, take part in conferences, and so on, in addition to their regular duties on the road.

Maintenance items, of course, include supplies, rentals, equipment, and various services such as telephone and telegraph both of which we use freely where we think it will help the cause. None of these things are getting any cheaper.

Now, in general, Mr. Chairman, it will be noted that we have from the monies granted, been spending, roughly one-half on promotional activities and the other half on services.

The services part include our chain of reception centres of which we are very proud and which we try to keep at top-notch efficiency.

About 500,000 people call at these centres each year, many of them first-time visitors. My annual report, already tabled and now in the printer's hands will give an interesting break-down. This service, I believe, well justifies its cost. We operate 14 such centres. Those at Point Edward, Windsor and Niagara Falls are open all year, the others for 4 or 5 month peak period bracketing mid-summer.

Thanks to the co-operation of our Highways Department, we are to acquire this year, very fine new premises at Niagara Falls of which I think our people will be proud. These premises are adjacent to the American Consular building.

Included in "services" comes also our inspectorate, set up under the authority of the Tourist Establishments Act. We have 10 district offices each in charge of a full-time inspector assisted in the summer by 1 or 2 temporary assistants. We endeavour, through this machinery, to spread the best modern information on operating methods to the industry and also, of course, our men scrutinize the various establishments as to their observance of regulations. Our field men are, in fact, coming into considerable demand from local bodies as, shall we say, counsellors. With that, I am very pleased.

Now for the largest single item in the request I am presenting—that of $370,800 for advertising, publicity, and promotion.

By robbing Peter to pay Paul we have contrived to bump this up a little over last year (by $2,600) and I ask you very earnestly to grant it.

The thing we call advertising, publicity and promotion is an integral necessity for all business as done today on the North American continent. Anyone who disputes that general principle is very much out of step. He would be arguing counter to all the successful producers, fabricators, and distributors, and to all the banks, all the commercial and all the financial houses, and I should add, to all our competing tourist areas. It is the essential vitamin in the economic body, as that economic body exists in 1954.

The backbone of travel promotion is paid advertising, and on that we propose to spend over half the item. The balance will be applied to our printed booklets and folders, and to various forms of special promotion. We will also experiment with radio and television.

We mean to increase our advertising effort right here at home this year, and in the Province of Quebec. I have reason to believe that people from our sister-province are showing an increasing friendly interest in Ontario as a vacation-spot and we hope to develop that further. It was very evident in 1953.

Among the various kinds of special promotion we do, and I will only mention this one as typical, is our annual good-will tour of Ontario, conducted annually for groups of U.S. editors—about 30 on each tour. With the co-operation of the Hotel Association, the Dominion Government, the Railways, local organizations and others, we give these men the best view of Ontario that we can arrange in a 12-day tour. The results have been uniformly good, and we now have a group of some 300 U.S. editors who are pre-disposed to be friendly because they know at first-hand what we are like and what we have up here.

So, Mr. Chairman, as regards the large item I am speaking of, I hope that the House will regard it, as do all others engaged in big business on this continent, not as expense, but as investment.

In closing, Mr. Chairman, I wish to express my appreciation and thanks for the co-operation and support so freely given me by all officers and staff members of my department during the past year.

Vote 178, Main Office, $71,800.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): I should like to ask the hon. Minister about item 4, which reads:

Northern Great Lakes Area Council—membership assessment and expenses of delegates attending meetings, $7,000.

Would the hon. Minister care to explain that item, please?

HON. MR. CECILE: The Northern Ontario Great Lakes Area Council is composed of the Province of Ontario and the States of Wisconsin, Minnesota and Michigan. We form part of it, and share expenses equally.

The council promotes interest in the area specially, provides maps and information, and deals generally with the local tourist advertising in the 3 states, and in the province. We think we benefit greatly by these activities, possibly more than the 3 American states, bearing in mind that we have to pay no more than they do, while our territory covers a much larger area.

MR. SALSBERG: I had not intended to intervene in this debate, but I wish to raise a few minor questions.

First, I suggest to the hon. Minister that while it is very important to extend our publicity to the United States, so as to attract tourists from the other side of the border, the home market should not be as neglected as it has been in the past. The task of this government, as I envisage it, is not merely to bring dollars into the province—though that is one of its functions, I imagine—but rather to educate our people to the beauties of the natural attractions which we have, so we in Canada may enjoy them. I think we are missing many opportunities to bring the benefits of our northern areas, and other regions of the province, to the attention of our own people. I suggest that more could be done by way of newspaper, radio and magazine advertising in Canada—using our own publications and our own radio—to encourage our people to travel, to learn, to explore and to enjoy all the fine things which we have to offer.

I feel every year, when the hon. Minister presents the report of his activities, that this aspect of the work is unduly neglected.

Just one item occurs to me, by way of example, which may illustrate the point. I have, for a number of years, in the debates in this House, raised the question of ragweed—usually on the Estimates of the Department of Agriculture—because I am a hayfever sufferer. I made an interesting discovery last fall. One day, when the fever affected me very badly, I decided I would drive north as far as might be necessary, to get some relief. To my great surprise, I found that relief of this condition started after reaching Huntsville, and that, going a little farther north, the affliction eased off greatly. I do not know whether I happened to strike a narrow area which was free of ragweed, but my hay fever was certainly relieved. I stopped where I found the sneezing had eased off, and said: "I will call this a day." I remained there for a week.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: What brought you back?

MR. SALSBERG: This is not a laughing matter. It is a serious matter. I thought hon. members would miss me, and I did not want to disappoint them.

I suggest the department of Travel and Publicity ascertain the locations of these havens in the North, and make the information available to people in this country, as well as in others. The main thing I want to say is, that we should utilize our own channels of publicity to popularize what we have to offer, to our own people, and to encourage them to make use of these opportunities, not to set our sights on the American tourist.

I note, Mr. Chairman, the figures from Ottawa seem to indicate that, despite all the good work we do in Ontario and Quebec, as well as in other provinces, we are scarcely holding our own, and that Canadians spend more vacation money in the United States than Americans spend in Canada. That is another aspect which the hon. Minister might bear in mind when considering the feasibility of increasing publicity work among our own people.

Vote 178 agreed to.

Vote 179, Publicity Branch, Salaries, $17,000.

On Vote 179, "Advertising, publicity and promotion, $370,800," item No. 4.

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): The hon. Minister correctly stated this is the greatest spending item in his Estimates. I wonder if it would be possible to break that item down into several separate items. There are at least 15 separate items in the list as it is here, but the total has not been broken down into separate amounts. Would it not be possible, in future years, to break down this expenditure, so that hon. members will have a better idea as to where the money is going?

HON. MR. CECILE: I have here a few more detailed figures. For instance, in the United States magazines, we have spent $135,000. That is for Holiday magazine, and others of that description. For space in United States newspapers on a national scale, we have spent $40,000. For Canadian periodicals, newspapers and so on, $53,000; for radio, $10,000. That is the break-down.

MR. OLIVER: Can the hon. Minister tell me what advertising agencies are used by his department, and the amounts each received from the department?

HON. MR. CECILE: Last year, Mr. Chairman, we were dealing with three agencies—the Locke Agency, dealing with all the Canadian work; the work with the United States magazines was done through McKim's, and the United States newspaper work was handled by McConnell Eastman.

MR. OLIVER: I notice that one advertising agency last year received $104,000. It looks as if we are channeling these amounts in one direction.

HON. MR. CECILE: Bookkeeping is the main item. I would be a very happy person if I had only one agency to deal with. It so happened we started with two or three, and although I am not sure, I may be "stuck" with another one this year. We are trying to spread this out as much as we can, but it is very difficult for the staff. I would much prefer to have one, but we set out to deal with a few, and have continued to do so.

MR. OLIVER: What proportion of the hon. Minister's budget is spent on advertisements in the United States?

HON. MR. CECILE: Here are the figures, as I gave them a few moments ago: For United States magazines, $135,000; for newspapers, $40,000 and for radio, $10,000.

MR. OLIVER: How much would be spent in Ontario on advertising?

HON. MR. CECILE: I have not got the Ontario figures. But $53,000 was spent, I think, on Canadian periodicals, mostly in Ontario and Quebec.

MR. OLIVER: The amount spent on advertising in Ontario would be quite small in comparison with the other figures?

HON. MR. CECILE: Yes. Although I might say here in Ontario my staff and I have been attending every possible social function. We have attended meetings of Chambers of Commerce, and other gatherings of that kind, and we have been doing more by word of mouth than by advertising in magazines and newspapers.

MR. OLIVER: I noticed, at their convention last month, the resort operators passed a resolution asking the government to reinstate the grade system for such premises. Is the hon. Minister entertaining the idea of doing that?

HON. MR. CECILE: We have continued our research into this matter. One or two of the associations—I do not think there is really more than one—are pressing the matter, but not too seriously. We have come to find out, from all we have heard in Ontario, that different establishments of all descriptions, hotels, motels and so on, are glad we are out of it.

We are entertaining no idea of going back to grading at the present time.

MR. OLIVER: You have no present idea of re-entering the field?

HON. MR. CECILE: No.

On Vote 180.

MR. OLIVER: On 180: Would the hon. Minister tell us how many of these reception centres he has now, and if any new ones have been opened during the past year?

HON. MR. CECILE: We have 14 at the present time. We have not opened any for the last 3 or 4 years.

MR. OLIVER: Do you plan on opening any new ones this year?

HON. MR. CECILE: No.
Vote 180, Information Branch, $150,100, agreed.

On Vote 181, Development Branch, $154,300.

On item 181.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Chairman, I would like to bring to the attention of the hon. Minister the fact that I have received a number of complaints from a great many people, and these complaints would seem to be legitimate. They are to the effect that hotels and motels in the province end their guest day at odd hours. In some hotels, the guests are told to get out by 12 o'clock or they will be charged an extra day. In some motels, so I have been told, the guests are notified that a day ends at 11 o'clock, and if they are not out by that time, they will have to pay for another day.

I suggest it is not very fair treatment to give to anyone who may come to a hotel or motel at midnight, register, pay for a day, and then be asked to pack up and leave at 11 o'clock in the morning.

I would suggest we amend the Tavern and Hotelkeepers Act to establish a universal time for guests to check out of hotels and motels, so that people will know the day ends at 5 o'clock, or 6 o'clock or 7 o'clock. I purposely leave out any mention of leaving at 11 o'clock in the morning, because I think it is unreasonable and unfair. I do not think it helps attract people to these places again. Generally, I think it is bad practice, and something should be done by the government to have this situation corrected.

HON. MR. CECILE: Mr. Chairman, all I can say about that is, that check-out times vary all over the continents; there is a wide variation in Canada, the United States, and in other places of which I know.

As far as we are concerned, we have received very few, if any, complaints on this score. However, hon. members must realize that some of these hotels and motels are not very largely staffed, and they need time to do their washing, cleaning, and what have you. I believe that the earliest I have noticed was 10.30 in the morning, in some motels and motor-courts.

MR. SALSBERG: 10.30 in the morning?

HON. MR. CECILE: Yes: In most places it is around 12 o'clock.

In the larger hotels, of course, it depends largely upon the train schedules. There are so many variations across the country, that I very much doubt if we could pass legislation which would serve any good purpose.

MR. SALSBERG: There is no question but what we "could" pass legislation, but the question is, "should we?"

If the government does not care to amend the Act, I would suggest the hon. Minister, who has a great deal of influence amongst the people in this field, should consult with them, and ask them to put it on their agenda for a conference at some future time, and let the matter be discussed there with a view of fixing uniform hours for checking out, which would put an end to this present situation. I certainly suggest that 10.30 o'clock in the morning or 11 o'clock, or even 12 o'clock, is altogether too early, for travellers, particularly motorists, who may arrive at a hotel at midnight, and it is unfair to ask them to leave at 10.30 in the morning.

MR. W. J. STEWART (Parkdale): There is the other side of the picture, Mr. Chairman. People are waiting to get the accommodations.

Vote 181 agreed to.

Vote 182, Photography Branch, $27,500, agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, it is necessary to hold one vote in order that it may be dealt with when the budget is passed, if that eventuality occurs. However, should there be any discussion on that vote, it might be well to have it now.

MR. T. D. THOMAS (Ontario): Mr. Chairman, I would like to ask the hon. Minister if the department has vacated the present premises previously occupied by the Rental Control Board on Lombard St. in Toronto.

HON. MR. CECILE: Mr. Chairman, the premises on Lombard St. which we occupied were federal premises, and by an arrangement between the Federal Government, the City of Toronto, and ourselves, we have now vacated it altogether.

HON. MR. FROST moves that the committee rise and report progress.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumes; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. D. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of Supply begs to report it has come to certain resolutions, and moves for leave to sit again.

Motion agreed to.

GOVERNMENT NOTICES OF MOTION

NOTICE OF MOTION No. 8

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Notice of Motion No. 8. Hon. Mr. Frost moves the following resolution:

That a Select Committee of the House be appointed to examine existing legislation and practice in relation to the registration of conditional sales contracts and similar documents of title and pledge, particularly in connection with motor vehicles, and to consider ways of providing for a central registry for the said documents, and for the issuance of certificates of title of ownership of motor vehicles.

And that the Select Committee have authority to sit during the interval between sessions and have full power and authority to call for persons, papers and things and to examine witnesses under oath, and the Assembly doth command and compel attendance before the said Select Committee of such persons and the production of such papers and things as the committee may deem necessary for any of its proceedings and deliberations, for which purpose the Honourable the Speaker may issue his warrant or warrants.

The said committee to consist of nine members, and to be composed as follows: Messrs. Macaulay (chairman), Warrender, Myers, Cathcart, Robarts, Letherby, Jolley, Grummett and Chartrand.

Resolution agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, in referring to this motion, may I say that the changing conditions of business in the province is such that the old system of registering conditional sales is out-dated. The hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) has given some consideration to the problem this year, and it was felt it was a matter which could very properly be referred to a Select Committee, and the matter of the registration of the instruments mentioned in this resolution could be the subject of consideration, tending toward a betterment of the situation, from that which exists at the present time.

In former days, documents of this sort were registered in local offices, which practice pretty well met the situation as it existed then. Now, the chattel which might be the subject matter of a conditional sale contract, might be in another part of the province 6 weeks hence. I am referring particularly to transactions concerning the sales of second-hand cars. A car might be purchased in Toronto, and be sold in Wingham, or some other place.

NOTICE OF MOTION No. 9

THE ASSISTANT CLERK: Mr. Frost moves the following resolution:

That a Select Committee of the House be appointed to study all phases of the plan of organization and methods of operation in the Fort William

Division of the Department of Highways, and in any other divisions of the said department that the committee deems necessary, and to investigate any irregularities or irregular practices in such divisions, and to recommend such improvements in the organization and administrative practices of the Department of Highways which the committee considers necessary to meet the growing volume of work of the department throughout the province.

And that the Select Committee have authority to sit during the interval between sessions and have full power and authority to call for persons, papers and things and to examine witnesses under oath, and the Assembly doth command and compel attendance before the said Select Committee of such persons and the production of such papers and things as the committee may deem necessary for any of its proceedings and deliberations, for which purpose the Honourable the Speaker may issue his warrant or warrants.

The said committee to consist of 11 members, and to be composed as follows: Messrs. Roberts (chairman), Porter, Beckett, Mapledoram, Collings, Janes, Herbert, Dent, Oliver, Wren and Grummett.

MR. OLIVER: Mr. Speaker, this would seem to be an opportunity for the hon. Prime Minister to bring us up to date, as far as he can, in regard to this whole matter.

This motion is for the appointment of a committee which will sit after this session has concluded its work, and it may be some weeks after.

I would suggest, first of all, to the hon. Prime Minister, that the committee should meet as soon as possible after the session, and I do seriously say to the hon. Prime Minister that tonight he should be in a position to give us some information relative to the investigations carried on thus far, and he might be able to say, too, something concerning a matter which seems to be bothering the minds of the public, as well as my own in this regard, which has to do with the list of contractors whose books have been seized by the government.

As I understand the situation, there were two contractors doing work in that particular area, whose books were not seized. It seems a rather unusual procedure to assume that the books of certain contractors should be seized, and the books of similar companies not to be so seized, and I think the hon. Prime Minister could well elaborate on that tonight.

I think, also, it might be said that one of these contractors had very large contracts in that area, and when it came to the question of inflating the amount of material—and I think there has been a great deal of that done—I think an investigation will show this one company was engaged in that type of work, just as much as the others were.

The only thing I want to say, Mr. Speaker, is this—and I think the hon. Prime Minister will perhaps follow me in this argument—that we have now had the books of these contractors under seizure for some weeks, and it would seem the ends of justice would be served if we expedited whatever we have against these particular companies, and if we brought the ones we considered guilty before the bar of justice, and reinstated those against whom there appears to be nothing of a substantial character.

The hon. Prime Minister will recognize we are holding back huge sums of money from these contractors, and it may well be that in the process of these procedures, some contractors may be very financially worried and embarrassed in this regard. I do not think that is the purpose of the investigation. If there are contractors who are guilty in this matter, then let us speed our cases against them, but let those who are not guilty get back to the business of contracting.

HON. MR. FROST: I am very glad to reply to the questions raised by the hon. Leader of the Opposition.

This committee I quite agree should meet as soon as possible. I may say when the House met, the investigation had been carried on for some months, going back to about the beginning of September. I will say quite frankly to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, that I felt, when the House met on the 11th of February, we would be in a position to give to the Public Accounts Committee a statement of the situation, and the problems involved. At that time there were charges preferred against certain individuals, and I felt—as did my advisors, and the Provincial Auditor—that the matter would be in such a position that a statement could be made to the Public Accounts Committee without, of course, prejudicing the trials of those who were charged.

I can say to the hon. Leader of the Opposition, and to the other hon. members of the House, the investigation which has been conducted has been a tremendous affair, full of most unusual difficulties, and I can say that without any exaggeration whatsoever.

In one of the press statements, it was said it involved irregularities in engineering data, and the hon. Leader of the Opposition (Mr. Oliver) will see the problem which arises in checking into those matters, and particularly with some of the conditions which have had to be met, for instance, snow on the ground, which has meant there has been much greater time consumed than was felt would be necessary in the first place.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Would the hon. Prime Minister mind my asking this? He refers to the great amount of checking: is this firm checking in other than Fort William? It is it checking, for instance, in the Blind River division, or in any other division?

HON. MR. FROST: The investigation has not been confined to one division, though I will be quite frank with the House, in saying that the centre point of the difficulty is in the one division. Nevertheless, the investigation has not been confined to that one division, it has been an investigation which has been and will continue to be fully conducted.

In connection with search warrants:

it must be remembered the so-called "seizure of books," by the government, which the hon. Leader of the Opposition mentioned, is not actually correct. These are search warrants which have been issued for reasonable and probable cause. I think the hon. Attorney-General (Mr. Porter) will agree that is the right way to put it. A search warrant would not be issued by the courts simply as "fishing expeditions" which could cover every contractor in Ontario. They were issued because the magistrate was satisfied there was reasonable and probable cause for the issuance of such a warrant.

As far as expediting these proceedings is concerned I am quite in agreement with the hon. Leader of the Opposition. It is not the intention of the law enforcement officers, or anybody else connected with this matter, to hold out any books or records, or to hold up amounts which are payable to persons or corporations, where there does not appear to be any justification for so doing. I think the purpose is to get things moving along as quickly as possible.

To say the investigation has been completed would be incorrect, but I would say, sir, that great progress has been made in the past few weeks in connection with this matter, and we think the whole situation will be clarified for the committee and for others who are interested in the investigation of this matter, within the next couple of weeks.

MR. OLIVER: May I ask the hon. Prime Minister one further question, if he does not mind? He says the fact that warrants were issued for the seizure of books indicates that the feeling was there was something wrong with those particular companies' operations.

HON. MR. FROST: I would prefer to put it that there were reasonable and probable causes for making an investigation.

MR. OLIVER: Yes, that may be, but what I am trying to find out from the hon. Prime Minister is this: does the fact that warrants were not issued for the seizure of the books of these 2 particular companies, which were left out up there, indicate that they were tested and found to be all right? Are they "in the clear"?

HON. MR. FROST: Not necessarily. These warrants are not issued promiscuously. They are issued for reasonable and probable cause. I have no idea as to who the persons or corporations, which the hon. Leader of the Opposition mentions were not included, were, and I would not ask him. I do not think that would be fair. I would say, however, if there were not proceedings taken by way of search warrants, then there did not appear to be the reasonable and probable causes which would justify the issuance of such warrants.

MR. SALSBERG: Mr. Speaker, may I ask a question of the government? The last time I raised the question about the chief engineer of the department, I was told, and the House learned, that he was still out of the country, and that the department was very anxious to have him make himself available for questioning, and for co-operation in the investigation.

Since then, the newspapers have reported that he has returned, and, according to the statement of his counsel, Mr. Joseph Sedgwick, Q.C., he is available, but no one has asked him to appear anywhere or to answer questions, or to be questioned. In fact, it sounded to me like a challenge from his counsel to the government to come and ask him whatever they want to ask him, and that the man is here.

I wonder if the government would care to enlighten the House on this.

HON. MR. FROST: I do not know, Mr. Speaker, that I can enlighten the hon. member (Mr. Salsberg) nor the House. I do not want to comment on newspaper statements here. I note the person mentioned is back here, and I think the matter had better be left there for the time being, and leave it to the law officers of the Crown, and others to deal with the matter.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I think that covers everything at the moment on the Order paper. Tomorrow, there will be third readings of the bills on the Order paper, following which will be addresses in relation to the budget, and I should hope, sir, that at about 3.30 o'clock tomorrow, we shall arrive at the point where a Vote on the budget may be taken.

I am sorry that tomorrow morning there is a meeting of the Lands and Forests Committee at 10 o'clock, but in order to complete the proceedings of the House, so that the Vote can be taken by 3.30 o'clock, and then the formalities of the Supply Bill, and the prorogation, it is imperative that tomorrow the House meet at 10.30. I think on this occasion, the House and the committee will have to sit concurrently for a time at least. I do not know whether the chairman of the Committee on Lands and Forests would care to call the committee a half an hour earlier, at 9.30, but in any event, sir, I should like to move, seconded by Mr. Doucett, that when the House adjourns the present sittings thereof, it do stand adjourned to meet at 10.30 o'clock in the forenoon tomorrow, to rise for noon recess at 12.30 o'clock in the afternoon, and resume at 2 o'clock in the afternoon; and that the proceedings of Rule 2 of the Assembly be suspended so far as they might apply to this motion.

MR. OLIVER: Is it understood that the Lands and Forests Committee will sit concurrently with the House?

HON. MR. FROST: I think that is the only way.

MR. OLIVER: I was under the impression we had to have a motion of some kind to that effect?

MR. SPEAKER: Shall we put this motion first, and then discuss the matter?

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: I have been advised that the understanding as given to the chairman of the Committee on Lands and Forests was that, if the House wished to meet at 10.30 tomorrow morning, the committee would not be called. However, if the House wishes to grant authority for the Lands and Forests Committee to meet concurrently with the sitting of the House, I think that would be in order.

HON. MR. FROST: I think, Mr. Speaker, that motion should be made. I move the Committee on Lands and Forests be authorized to sit tomorrow morning concurrently with the sitting of the House. That I think, will meet the situation, and if it wants to continue, it may do so, and if not, it might adjourn.

I am sorry; I should have added "at 10 o'clock."

MR. W. J. GRUMMETT (Cochrane South): Mr. Speaker, the notice given to hon. members states 10.30. Maybe the hon. Prime Minister misunderstood the notice.

HON. MR. FROST: I thought it was 10 o'clock.

MR. GRUMMETT: The notice of meeting stated 10.30.

HON. MR. FROST: Better leave the motion at 10.30.

MR. SPEAKER: The motion is for 10.30 o'clock.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST moves the House do now adjourn.

Motion agreed to.

The House adjourned at 10.15 o'clock, p.m.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, APRIL 6, 1954.

10.30 O'CLOCK A.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

MR. SPEAKER: Presenting petitions.

Reading and receiving petitions.

Presenting reports by committees.

Motions.

Introduction of bills.

Orders of the day.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, may I point out to the hon. members of the House that on each desk is a printed copy of the Budget Statement, including the schedules. This comprises some 93 pages. I think it is very interesting, as it contains important references to the affairs of Ontario.

We felt if it were possible this year to have the address and schedules printed and supplied to each hon. member, it would afford them an opportunity, at their leisure, to look over the figures.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to file answers to questions 47, 58 and 42.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): Mr. Speaker, may I ask the hon. Prime Minister if he will have answers to the balance of the questions?

HON. MR. FROST: I hope so. There are some questions there, which, as the hon. Leader of the Opposition knows, refer to certain proceedings which have been taken. I think some of these could be made Orders for Return, and referred to the Select Committee.

In the meantime, there will be further answers given this afternoon, and any which remain may be made Orders for Return.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): Mr. Speaker, before the Orders of the day, I wish to rise to express my thanks to an anonymous, but evidently very public-spirited citizen who sent me a very nice attractive copy of Alice in Wonderland. I found it in my letter box this morning, and have since learned that some other hon. members of the House have also received copies. The sender is obviously not only public-spirited, but of a literary flair, who seems to be very close to the House, because my package had no postage stamps attached. It was obviously deposited in the post office below, on the understanding it would be distributed to the hon. members.

I might say, Mr. Speaker, the anonymous, public-spirited citizen had the book open at pages 24 and 25, and inserted a typewritten page which starts with a line from Milton's Paradise Lost, "Confusion Worse Confounded." That is followed by a line which reads: "Profound Study of the Present Session of the Legislature."

HON. DANA PORTER (Attorney-General): He must have been reading the speeches by the hon. member for St. Andrew.

MR. SALSBERG: Page 25 contains the dialogue between Fury and the Mouse, which reads as follows:

Such a trial, dear sir, with no jury or judge would be wasting our breath.

I'll be the judge, I'll be the jury, said cunning old Fury, I'll try the whole case, and condemn you to death.

I think it is a very valuable gift, and a very appropriate designation of the session now about to close. I did not want that action to go unnoticed, and I certainly want to extend to the anonymous sender, my very sincere thanks for a very nice copy of Alice in Wonderland.

HON. MR. PORTER: Perhaps it was the "fictitious Mrs. Smith."

MR. SALSBERG: The hon. Attorney-General is a patron of the arts, and should know something about it.

HON. MR. FROST: There is a resolution which must be dealt with. I move, Mr. Speaker, that you do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of the Whole.

Motion agreed to.

House in Committee; Mr. Dent in the Chair.

HON. MR. FROST: I beg to inform the House that His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, having been informed of the subject matter of the resolution, recommends it to the consideration of the House.

THE ASSISTANT CLERK:

Mr. Frost (Victoria): resolution that, (a) the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council be authorized to raise from time to time by way of loan such sum or sums of money as may be deemed expedient for any or all of the following purposes; for the public service, for works carried on by commissioners on behalf of Ontario, for discharging any indebtedness or obligation of Ontario, or for reimbursing the Consolidated Revenue Fund for any moneys expended in discharging any such indebtedness or obligation, and for the carrying on of the public works authorized by the Legislature; provided that the principal amount of any securities issued and sold for the purpose of raising any loan authorized, together with the amount of any temporary loans raised, to the extent that such temporary loans are from time to time outstanding or have been paid from the proceeds of securities issued and sold for the purpose of such payment, shall not exceed in the whole $100 million; and

(b) such sum or sums may be raised in any manner provided by The Provincial Loans Act or The Financial Administration Act, 1954, and shall be raised upon the credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund and shall be chargeable thereupon, as provided by Bill No. 142, An Act to authorize the Raising of Money on the Credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund."

Resolution agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Chairman, I move the committee rise and report a certain resolution.

Motion agreed to.

The House resumed; Mr. Speaker in the Chair.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Mr. Speaker, the Committee of the Whole House reports it has come to a certain resolution.

Report adopted.

The following bills were read a third time, and passed as intitled in the motions:

Bill No. 5, An Act respecting the City of Hamilton.

Bill No. 78, An Act respecting Representation of the People in the Legislative Assembly.

Bill No. 124, An Act to amend The Theatres Act, 1953.

Bill No. 129, An Act to amend The Legislative Assembly Act.

Bill No. 136, An Act to amend The Election Act, 1951.

Bill No. 137, An Act to amend The Voters' Lists Act, 1951.

Bill No. 138, An Act to amend The Controverted Elections Act.

Bill No. 139, An Act to promote Fair Accommodation Practices in Ontario.

Bill No. 140, An Act to amend The Municipal Act.

Bill No. 141, An Act to amend The Ontario Cancer Treatment and Research Foundation Act, 1943.

Bill No. 142, An Act to authorize the Raising of Money on the Credit of the Consolidated Revenue Fund. House in Committee of Supply.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. R. E. ELLIOTT (Hamilton East): Mr. Speaker, and hon. members, I am going to attempt to give you a picture today as chairman of the Travel and Publicity Committee, of some of the problems they have in the tourist industry in the Province of Ontario. We have now had 3 meetings with the different organizations in Ontario that are responsible for promoting the tourist business and caring for tourists while in Ontario.

The first submission was from the Northern Great Lakes Area Council, presented by Art Widnall, president. This group is composed of representatives from Michigan, Wisconsin, Province of Ontario and Minnesota. In other words, this group—through the department here in Toronto—have met with the 3 states named, and have pooled part of their advertising on an equal basis. As you know, people travelling are probably interested in visiting this province, and the ads promote travel within the 3 states and the Province of Ontario. In the past years each member has contributed $5,000 apiece to the advertising matter. Michigan, Wisconsin and the Province of Ontario have agreed to increase the advertising to $10,000 a year and they hope to get Minnesota to do likewise but—up to now—with no result.

I will give a picture of the advertising done by this group. This is a magazine called Holiday which is sold all over Canada and the United States, for 50c. a copy, and is solely issued for holidayers, and the advertisements are distributed to promote holidays all over the world.

There is one here from the United States Airlines, which cost $8,000. There is one from South America, for $16,000, money spent in an endeavour to get people to go to South America.

There is one from the State of Oregon, for $8,000. One from Europe, for $8,000.

MR. SALSBERG: Who spent $8,000?

MR. ELLIOTT: This is the ad by the Province of Ontario, Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan, for $16,000, the share of the cost to the Province of Ontario amounting to $5,000.

They are asking for an additional $5,000, in order to increase the advertising in this magazine.

Mr. Widnall is president of the association and serves without remuneration.

The next brief we had was from F. W. Butler, Ontario Tourist Courts Association. They are principally the motel operators and have a very fine organization. They are very interested in the Legislative Committee of the Travel and Publicity Department establishing a liason with the Department of Highways so that co-operation can be increased between the 2 bodies.

This association has thought that the licencing of establishments should be carried out from a central authority and removed from the hands of sometimes disinterested and often, greedy municipalities making financial gain for their own coffers in their licencing powers.

Tourist operators' licences under the Tourist Establishments Act are issued at $5 each and there is no change anywhere throughout the province. In unorganized townships and villages the licencing is done by inspectors from the Department of Travel and Publicity. In cities and towns the licencing is done by municipal clerks. There can be no objection to this.

There is a little error there.

The tourist operating licences are, under the Act, established by the department, and each licence is distributed, at a cost of $5. When it comes to the municipalities, where they are incorporated, and have tourist establishments, they come under the municipal clerk.

They are complaining about the business assessment which, as hon. members know, has nothing to do with the department in any way, shape or form.

They suggest a Select Committee should be appointed to look into the complaints to see if something cannot be done.

Mr. Butler in the brief from his association is referring to business licences which are issued by municipalities which come under the jurisdiction of the Municipal Board and the Department of Municipal Affairs. Business licencing in a municipality is not under the jurisdiction of the Department of Travel and Publicity, but a Select Committee on the tourist industry could look into the complaint of unequal municipal business licencing fees.

As you know, we had a three-star grading system and this organization—the Ontario Tourist Courts Association—is much pleased that the government grading has been finally shelved, and approve this action. They claim the developments of the year 1953 and at present are proving that the forces of free enterprise are solving the grading situation in a more relentless and thorough manner than any government body could have done, and at no cost to the taxpayers.

They do, however, wish government help. They highly commend the Department of Travel and Publicity in assisting tourist operators. For example, the short study courses operated by the department. They would like to see this practice continued and expanded. Education of operators in all phases of the business and the general public in the value of the industry can benefit everyone in the province. Two such courses are scheduled in April at Niagara Falls and Kingston.

They believe that travel is beneficial to the promotion of goodwill between Canada and the United States. They believe that the tourist industry of Ontario should compete in a fair and healthy way, to persuade people of this province of the virtue of seeing their own province first and of establishing the habit of holidaying in Canada.

For the past year the department has enlarged their scope of operation and are doing a great deal to try and educate our people to use Ontario for holidaying. The Canadian Tourist Association have started pushing an inter-provincial theme in their advertising and this department is co-operating in every known way.

Two years ago the department prepared a French language colour advertising short with the hon. Mr. Cecile doing the invitation and narration and this is still running in Quebec theatres.

The Department of Highways—through Mr. Doucett—also has a French language short running in Quebec theatres, inviting them to use our highways and the various facilities connected therewith.

The next submission was from the Canadian Trailer Court Association.

The Canadian Trailer Association want trailer parks but are not recommending that the Department of Travel and Publicity go into the mobile home park business. They full appreciate the department's function as providing a promotional and publicity service to the province, but the mobile home travel industry is growing rapidly in the United States and Canada and the demand for new parking facilities is also growing rapidly.

They suggest there is one contribution which this committee could make which would improve the situation—and incidentally make better use of the expenditures of the Department of Travel and Publicity—and that would be to recommend that a Select Committee of the Ontario Legislature be appointed to investigate the mobile home parking facilities of the Province and the potential revenue that could be derived from mobile home vacationists.

The experience of big municipalities in the past has been very bad in connection with Trailer Park situations and has ended up in some cases in a slum condition. What they are thinking about and what they have in mind is developing parks—not in the big or large municipalities—but in park establishments that would have water and full drainage supplied to these mobile homes so they could be run on a basis equal to the camps in the southern United States. They state there is no doubt but that this would bring tourist money to this province if properly organized.

The Department of Highways is at present operating—and has been operating for a number of years—70 parks where mobile homes may stop over night or for a longer period. In addition, there are several operated by the Department of Lands and Forests and referring to the remarks of hon. George Challies made in this House last week, no doubt there will be several more in the near future.

Granted, the Ontario Parks are not as elaborate as most in the southern part of the United States. As our season is much shorter a great deal of investigation would be necessary before authorizing expenditure of the considerable amount of money required for the unit type installation in any of our parks.

The next deputation was the Canadian Restaurant Association represented by Mrs. F. G. Montgomery.

The Canadian Restaurant Association has a membership of 1350 with 550 in the Province of Ontario and are most interested in anything to do with Travel and Publicity.

One of the things they suggested, was the relaxation of regulations regarding female help working after two o'clock in the morning. They find that in the United States, they are able to use female help right through the night and there doesn't seem to be too much complaint there. They feel that this would help considerably in properly serving food from 11 o'clock at night to 7 in the morning.

The Restaurant Association are interested in a Canadian cuisine and the Department of Travel and Publicity have done all in their power over the last 8 years—to promote the use of a Canadian cuisine and have published and distributed a recipe book entitled "100 to Dinner," yet the restaurants themselves still list "Virginia Ham" and "Southern Fried Chicken."

Another thing they stress is an amendment to the Liquor Licence Act, permitting licencing privileges to towns and cities of 20,000 to 25,000 on the same basis as the present 50,000 population centres.

The restaurant owners claim that never in the history of the restaurant business has the common fly and mosquitoes been so well controlled as by the use of Lindane, until new regulations in 1954 prohibit the use of this very effective chemical. Our public health officials—so far—have not suggested anything to take its place. They claim that this chemical is injurious to the patrons and also the help, and that is why it has been outlawed. However, the Department of Health is working very hard on this and I am sure advice to the tourist operators and restaurant owners will be forthcoming very shortly.

The restaurant owners in the large cities where gasoline is not sold in service stations after 7 o'clock at night, claim it hurts the restaurant business. People frequently like to leave their cars at a gas station to get gas and have it serviced while they eat, and in these municipalities the restaurant business has been injured tremendously.

They feel a Select Committee should look into their problems.

The Association of Tourist Resorts of Ontario was represented by their president, Mr. Reg. Handscomb.

The main beef of this association is that they would like to see signs along the highways directing tourists to the tourist establishments. This is one of the points where they claim the Highway Department does not agree. The Travel Department is working very closely with the Department of Highways, whether something can or will be done, we cannot say at the present time. The Department of Highways have stated that it is difficult to get all the various tourist associations to agree on regulations for direction signs on the highway.

The next brief we had was from the Hotel Association of the Province of Ontario presented by Mr. Roy Corbett, managing-director.

They claim that up to now, they have had the very best co-operation from the Department of Travel and Publicity, but they have so many problems that they feel a Select Committee of the House should be set up to look into the whole problem of the tourist industry and they would like to have discussions once a month with this committee.

This has now been asked for by all the interested Associations that are catering to the tourist trade in Ontario.

A brief was submitted to our Committee by Dorothy Drever, Chairman of the Museum's Committee of the Ontario Historical Society. This Society suggested that support should be given to groups and municipalities to assist in the improvement, extension and building of museums throughout Ontario. The Nature Museum at Algonquin Park, for example, in the first year of operation was visited by 52,000 tourists. Fort Henry rebuilt by the Department of Highways have over 150,000 paid admissions during a season.

Assistance in this matter could only be considered after investigation with Community Programmes Branch of the Department of Education and possibly Municipal Affairs so that there would not be any unnecessary overlapping. Again, I can only point out that a Select Committee would be the body to go into this type of investigation.

On March 5th in this House the honourable member from Woodbine referred to the great numbers of people that go to the southern United States on vacations during the winter. He pointed out that something should be done to endeavour to bring people to Collingwood and other Ontario ski centres and to also keep Ontario residents home in Ontario for a winter vacation rather than having them go out of the country.

The Department of Travel and Publicity has done much during the past 7 years toward the promotion of winter vacations in the province. Schools to train ski instructors were operated to provide a nucleus of instructors for the lodges and ski areas and to provide instruction at the many Ontario clubs to help create more and better skiers who could then consider a winter holiday.

Potential ski terrains have been inspected by department staff and decisions made whether ski installations would have a chance of success. Many of the ski tows operating in the province today have been designed or re-designed by department staff.

Part of the department expenditure for advertising has been directed toward potential winter tourists. The department knows that tourists to the south in an area roughly from Rochester on the east to Chicago on the west are as close to adequate skiing by coming to Ontario as travelling in any other direction. They also know that people in New York and Boston and other areas in the east would have to pass better skiing installations than we can offer in Ontario.

Many of the installations in the United States have been built in national parks and state parks with national and state funds. Consideration of the suggestion by the hon. member from Woodbine that the "Government promote," could be studied by a Select Committee of the Legislature. The extension of the tourist industry into the spring and fall and especially the winter would be a prime consideration with such a committee.

We have a bulletin also from the Royal Bank of Canada. It is most interesting and I just want to point out one small section:—"Children in all grades in school might be given as a composition exercise, the writing of letters to their opposite numbers in the United States and in other parts of Canada. These would describe the attractions of the children's environment and features of tourist interest, such as exhibitions."

This has already been done by the department in 1953 and proved very successful. Children sent copies of their letters to the department in either French or English, they were judged and prizes were awarded to the children for the best letters.

The Royal Bank also suggests that if a similar movement was set up by the Department of Education the children of our schools would have a first hand knowledge of the tourist industry.

With the fast travel of today we are in competition in Ontario with all travel bureaux in the United States, Hawaii, Jamaica, Cuba, Mediterranean, Europe, Africa, Japan, the British Isles and on and on. Here are a few suggestions.

An educational programme to stress to the general public the value of the tourist industry should be expanded. A paper or pamphlet should be sent throughout the province requesting everyone to improve the appearance of their houses, buildings, fences, barns, stables, grounds, etc. This would greatly add to the show window of Ontario. The rural area should be stressed as these are the people who often benefit the most from the tourist dollars. The more they eat, the more the farmer will have to produce and each year we have many more tourists than we have residents.

The Department of Education and the Department of Agriculture might set up competitions for the most improved farm building, the best township or village beautifying programme, etc. This may sound like a tremendous project, but we should seriously consider anything that would help an industry that brings close to $300 million a year to Ontario.

As for touring in Ontario or Canada, I believe the farming country has more to offer than any other part of our country. Our cities today are very congested, and parking facilities for the modern automobile are very poor. So the country, in my opinion, offers a great opportunity. Now, if we can get our farmers to develop their buildings, in such a way that they will be a modern showplace, there are hundreds of thousands of children in the cities in Canada and the United States who would just love to see, for instance, baby chicks, ducklings, geese, even baby porkers, cows, lambs, etc. In breeding seasons in Canada our farms could be one of the modern showplaces of our country.

I have seen this to some extent in my travels in Europe. I have never seen any sign of it in Canada or the United States, but in France, Holland and Belgium—particularly in Holland—there will always be a farm included in the tour from Rotterdam, Amsterdam, and The Hague. I spent a week in that country in 1948, and in each tour out of those cities we had the pleasure of visiting a farm. There were always some of the things I have mentioned to be seen, and to my surprise and amazement they pleased the touring public more than anything they had seen in the cities.

That is somewhat of a new thought in touring and developing, and you could call it even promotion, but I believe through the Department of Agriculture or Education farms could be set up for this purpose in and near our cities, and could be made showplaces for our tourists and our own people. They would become very profitable not only to our farmers but also to the general tourist business in our country.

Another thing that is shown, particularly in the last few years, is that tourists are not spending quite as much money as they used to do a few years ago. For instance, here is the figure in Nassau, in 1951: 200,000 tourists spent $20,548,000. Almost 300,000 tourists in 1952 spent less than $20 million. Now in the case of Ontario we find that we not only have a tremendous increase in tourists coming to Ontario each year but the number of tourist dollars spent in Ontario is increasing. In order to bring people to see us and to hold them so that they will come back to see us again and again, we must attempt to show them something. The most important thing we have to show is, I believe, our farms, and our farm show window could be the young animals and young poultry, plus a side show of some of the vegetables, grains and other products which are produced on our farms.

It has been suggested by others of the committees that have presented briefs to us this year that a Select Committee of this Legislature be set up to work on tourist promotion and showmanship work for the Province of Ontario. It has also been moved and seconded in a meeting of our committee that this committee be set up. Now, I leave it with you, Mr. Prime Minister and members of this House, whether you feel this committee could be of any real value to this province. I, for one, feel that it could, and I believe we can increase our tourist dollars tremendously.

There have been thousands of dollars spent in the United States and even coming into Canada to get our people to go south in the summer. Can you imagine anyone being stupid enough to go south in the summer with our beautiful climate, lovely beaches, and so on? Here are some of the things we are up against. Here is a paper published in Chicago, with a whole section devoted to promotion of going south in the summer. Ads from Europe, ads from Hawaii, ads from Jamaica, Cuba, and a four-page ad from Florida, including this. (Demonstration.) This promotion cost the State of Florida, or its promotion organizations, over $4,000, and yet the promoters found that over 5,000 people left to visit Florida in the summer within one week after this ad appeared. That ad appeared in all the cities and towns in the United States and also in Toronto and Montreal, and there is no doubt Canadians travel south in the summer. The state of Kentucky, for example, spends a million and a half dollars annually to promote travel; we only spend $850,000, yet ours is much better than theirs. These advertisements appear every weekend, promoting travel all over the world; therefore, I say the tourist industry is becoming very competitive, and we will have to get to work if we are going to attract tourists to our province. This shows what promotion in newspapers, etc., can do. With the tremendous competition for the tourist dollar in the world today, we must smarten up and educate our people to use our facilities in our own country, at least in the summertime.

MR. ARTHUR FROST (Bracondale): Mr. Speaker: It is a pleasant duty to congratulate the hon. the Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer on the presentation of his eleventh successive budget. His record here constitutes, I think, one which breaks new ground in the annals of this House.

For the incoming fiscal year which commenced last week, our provincial revenue on current account is placed at $354 million. This is a big sum, much larger than was the case just a few years ago. But generous though these revenues may appear, they come from very few sources. The main items are: gasoline tax, and vehicle licences, $108 million; lands and forests, $17 million; liquor profits, $36 million, sorry to say; succession duties, $16 million, and revenue under tax rental agreements, $141 million. There is, of course, considerable miscellaneous revenue which I need not detail.

We have no sales tax in Ontario as have many of the other provinces. The only nuisance tax—if that is the proper designation—which we have here is the hospitals tax related to amusements. This amounts to $6 million a year—and it is used with many other millions in a good cause—that of helping maintain our general hospitals.

On the other hand we might glance at the federal budget. Here under Ottawa management there is a yearly expenditure of close to $5 billion—and of this about $2½ billion comes out of the Ontario taxpayer.

From our $354 million or thereabouts, spent provincially, what do we get? About $50 million goes for health expenditures—the maintenance of nearly 20,000 patients in mental hospitals—grants of $20 million and more to general hospitals.

We contribute about $60 million to education which is very worthwhile. We congratulate our Minister of Education for his excellent work.

Then we have developed one of the finest systems of provincial highways in North America—some 10,000 miles of paved highways and secondary roads comprising our system of King's Highways. Then we contribute about $30 million a year in municipal road grants; as a matter of fact the province pays about 50 per cent. of the cost of maintaining some 60,000 miles of municipal roads.

Our Department of Public Welfare contributes more than $26 million a year toward the job of caring for those who require state aid in greater or less degree. It was this government which adopted the policy of absorbing one-half of all capital and maintenance costs related to homes for the aged. It was this government which adopted the policy of paying 25 per cent. of all costs related to Children's Aid Societies.

The same department established a system of pensions for unemployables.

There have been vast improvements in the operation of the Department of Reform Institutions. As the Report of the Select Committee on Reform Institutions was implemented we shall have a system of reform institutions second to none. Salvage is an important element in commerce and industry. And is it not much more important when dealing with human beings? I think you will agree with me when I say that it is a most important duty of society.

Now let us glance at the very great growth of Hydro. In the 10 years from December, 1943 to December, 1953, the dependable peak capacity of Hydro's generating plants has been increased from 1,565,400 h.p. to almost 4 million h.p.—an increase of 147 per cent. During 1953 alone, an additional 320,710 h.p. was made available. During the next 3 years the Niagara developments will have another 1.6 million h.p., giving a total available supply of 5 $\frac{1}{2}$ million h.p. by the end of 1956.

The hon. the Prime Minister pointed out the other day, 28,000 new rural consumers were supplied with electrical current during 1953. Incidentally, nearly $10 million was spent by the Ontario Treasury for bonusing rural lines. The cost of these lines, as you are aware is borne to the extent of 50 per cent. by the province as distinct from Hydro.

Hydro is one of the very great factors in the growth, in the development, and the prosperity of Ontario. And let me say this. If Hydro is of the utmost importance to Ontario, then Ontario is of the utmost importance to Hydro. The province lends its support and its credit to the upbuilding of one of the world's greatest public utilities.

Now let us glance at the picture from another angle. It may safely be said that Ontario taxpayers contribute something approaching \$2 $\frac{1}{2}$ billions—billions, not millions—to the federal treasury. The individual or the corporation making what we call fairly big money, and not so big at that, contributes about 50 cents out of every dollar earned, to the Dominion Government. Yet, I know that government pays old age pensions, and family allowances.

Our provincial and municipal governments probably provide a dozen services of the utmost importance for every one which is performed by Ottawa. Yet Ottawa gets more than 78 cents of the Canadian tax dollar, leaving less than 22 cents for the provinces and the municipalities.

What governments pay for education, for health and hospitalization measures, for water supplies, for sewage disposal, for roads, streets and highways, for aid to agriculture, for Hydro, for Workmen's Compensation, and for a hundred other items of the utmost importance in our daily lives? You know the answer as well as I do.

We need today a new distribution of duties and responsibilities. We need a new tax deal all around. In the meantime, I think we all realize that our municipal governments are those which are most in need of help. Provincially, we recognize their needs. As has been pointed out we are paying from our Provincial Treasury to the municipalities about $130 million a year to say nothing of the per capita grants authorized at our last session. The most any former government ever paid in this connection was about $18 million a year. These comparisons speak for themselves.

Our provincial credit stands at an all time high. Our debt is well within proper bounds.

About 65 per cent. of incoming immigration comes to Ontario. Our population has passed the 5 million mark. Surely we can conclude that Ontario's horizon was never brighter than today.

I should like to commend the administration for one or two items that are of very real importance to this city and in fact the whole metropolitan area.

We have out on Queen Street a large mental hospital planned by, and built under direction of John Howard more than 100 years ago. Mr. Howard as you will recall, donated High Park to the City of Toronto, and his home and his grave in the same park are visited yearly by thousands of our people. Rebuilt in recent years, the hospital is still regarded as a sound institution, well designed, well built and serving well its purpose. It is all very well to build new institutions out in the country but they bring about transportation and housing problems, and are inconvenient from the standpoint of visitors. I am very glad to know that there will shortly be built at the Queen Street institution a modern, 100-bed unit for diagnostic and early treatment purposes. It will be a welcome addition to an institution which is continuing to render good service to the people of this city.

I should also mention with warm approval the declared intention of the Department of Highways to assist in the construction of a new bridge at the Humber. This most important entrance to the city of Toronto at present constitutes one of the worst bottlenecks in our highways and streets system. I hope the Metropolitan authority will soon have their plans advanced to the point where they will be able to take advantage of the fair and generous offer of our provincial administration.

I should also congratulate the hon. the Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) in pressing forward the work on the interceptor road or by-pass being constructed to the north of this city. This huge project which involves the purchase of much costly land and a major construction problem, will tend to remove through traffic from our crowded city streets. As for traffic destined to enter the city it will tend to route such traffic fairly directly to its ultimate destination, affording still further relief.

The terrific and increasing registration of motor vehicles in this whole huge, but congested area, will continue to pose many problems for our civic, our metropolitan and our provincial authorities. I am sure that their energy and co-operation will enable them to meet and solve these various problems without unnecessary delay.

I again congratulate the hon. the Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer on bringing down a constructive Budget in keeping with the times through which we are passing. I hope that his efforts and the efforts of the Prime Ministers of our other provinces, seconded by the efforts of our municipal governments, will in the near future bring about a new deal as to spheres of responsibility. Also, I hope that there may be an all round readjustment of taxation practices. I know of nothing better calculated to bring about a more prosperous Ontario and a greater Canada.

MR. E. SANDERCOCK (Hastings West): I should like to join with the hon. member for Bracondale (Mr. Frost), Mr. Deputy Speaker, in congratulating the hon. Prime Minister on bringing down so satisfactory a budget. I am sure that in my riding it was very popular. He captured the front page in connection with his announcement of further assistance to hospitals. Our hospital, like all others, was finding it a little hard to make ends meet, but this assistance brought it "out of the red," and all those concerned with its administration were very happy.

I represent, Mr. Deputy Speaker, a riding of which we are all very proud. We have many things of which to be proud, but we have a few problems as well. I would say the major problem we have now is in connection with the completion of the by-pass road around Belleville. We are very happy when the hon. Minister of Highways (Mr. Doucett) decided to begin work on a by-pass, and we are looking forward to its completion in the not too distant future. The traffic problem in our district is very acute. The City of Belleville and the Town of Trenton are 10 miles apart, and the road connecting them is almost entirely built up. In addition, one of the largest air fields in the Dominion of Canada lies in between Belleville and Trenton. During rush hours, the roads are cluttered with miles of traffic, and it is almost impossible, apparently—according to what I am told—for some of the men who work in factories in the area to get out. They only have a limited time in which to go home for their noon meal, and the traffic is so heavy that they are often late in getting back to work. We are looking forward to the completion of the by-pass, because it will take traffic off this road, and relieve this congestion.

I should like to express my appreciation, Mr. Deputy Speaker, of the type of road which is being built. In the rocky section of the riding I represent, the road runs through solid high rock, and a great deal of credit is due the engineers and contractors who have carried out this work with such skill. They have done some remarkably good work, and great credit is due to all engaged in it.

Another question we face concerns accidents on the highways. In our district—and apparently it is the same all over the province—an alarming number of accidents have occurred at railroad crossings. We have had some very bad accidents at crossings in the riding I represent, and many of them occur at night. I think the Highways Department has done a marvellous job in protecting the main highways, but we have so many county and township roads which are not protected, though now-a-days they carry a great deal of traffic. The danger is especially great at night. On foggy and rainy nights, when a motorist is driving with a low beam and following the white line—where there is a white line—it is easy to “sneak up” to a railway crossing. A train can be crossing there, and the motorist may strike it before he has a chance to stop his car. So many accidents have happened that way.

I have discussed this problem with the inspector of the provincial police, and he believes that effective use could be made of luminous paint, to help prevent these accidents on county and township roads. It only takes one train to kill you, and often the train is there. I believe, also, that the efforts of the Select Committee which has been set up to study this question, will do a great deal to ease this problem.

Belleville is a railroad town. I know almost all the railroad men, and they are all interested in the matter of protection which should be given to the public. I have often had the opportunity to ride to Belleville on the afternoon train. The distance is 115 miles, and they cover the distance in 1 hour and 58 minutes, and to see the cars come to a halt at the railroad crossings is, at times, a frightening experience. One would not think the train was going to stop in time. For the engineer it must be nerve-wracking, wondering whether the motor cars are going to stop in time or not. These railroad men at Belleville—most of them—have a most outstanding record of efficiency.

We have one man there who retired as an engineer last August after driving for 45 years up and down the main lines, and never had an accident. That is a record of which he is very proud, and I am sure citizens of this province should be proud of a man who can create a record of that kind.

Mr. Deputy Speaker, I would like also to thank the Department of Education in connection with their school construction programme. In my own riding, since I have been a member of this House, some 12 or 15 schools have been built, and they are a credit to the people of the communities, and to the province.

I was interested about two weeks ago when I came into the Chamber and saw a great many children, to whom the hon. Minister of Education was speaking, and he asked how many expected to be school teachers, and in one little group there were about 8 or 10 who held up their hands. I would certainly "go along" with him, in encouraging the young people to study for that profession. I, with a number of others, would be delighted, I am sure, to have more teachers, and I was very pleased at the step the department took in increasing the pension plan, and I am sure also, the teachers themselves are very happy about it. In fact, I have had several come to see me over the week-end, and they are giving the hon. Minister of Education of this province credit for a very forward step.

Another department of which we are very proud, and which a number of hon. members have mentioned, is the Department of Welfare. I listened very attentively when the hon. Minister of Welfare was speaking, and I have heard him speak at various places, and I agreed with him when he said he would advise the people to endeavour to help themselves, and not depend upon the government altogether. I think he is doing a wonderful piece of work in endeavouring to encourage organizations to co-operate with the Department of Welfare, such organizations as churches, lodges, service clubs, the Red Cross, and women's institutes, all of whom are doing a certain amount of welfare work. They are now, as they have been in the past, more welfare-minded, and such clubs as the Rotary have done a great deal to assist the children, and are doing a wonderful work in that connection.

As I have said, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Minister is encouraging these clubs to do this work, and I think he is making a great contribution in advocating the necessity of these associations and organizations assisting, instead of simply looking to the Department of Welfare for all assistance.

We have in the north the mining industry, which is going forward. We are very happy and proud of the development there.

In my riding, we have the Bethlehem Steel Corporation, and I have been very much interested in its programme, in the size of its operations, and the number of tons they expect to ship. When we look at the figures submitted by that company, we find they are really terrific. It is an open pit development, and the ore will be mined and processed there, raised to a higher grade, and shipped to Picton, where it will be loaded onto boats in pellet form, so it will lessen the danger of it freezing.

To give you some idea of the magnitude of the operations, they expect to spend over $20 million before there is even one pound of ore shipped out.

In the Bancroft district, the uranium find there is a great boon to that district. I understand there are many claims being staked there, and the future looks very, very bright for mining uranium. Personally, I feel it is much better to see mine development where the ore is taken out of the ground, and only requires one hole to be dug in the ground, instead of having to keep cutting down trees, and lessening the natural resources in other ways. Mining is something which is undertaken in the ground, and does not deplete the resources nor destroy the surface of the surrounding country.

Mr. Speaker, we have heard references made to a number of members in the House, one of whom is the hon. Leader of the Opposition. I, for one, cannot see my way clear to ridicule him, and I hope he will carry on as the provincial Leader of the Opposition for many years to come.

The two hon. members of the CCF Party are very fine gentlemen. I have become very well acquainted with both of them.

In regard to the hon. member for St. Andrew; we have heard a great deal about his hay-fever, and listening to him speaking this session, I had about come to the conclusion that he had forgotten it, but last night, he brought it up again.

MR. T. L. PATRICK (Middlesex North): The hon. member was in the wrong department this year.

MR. SANDERCOCK: However, I hope he can secure some relief.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to congratulate you on the very efficient manner in which you conduct the affairs of this Legislature, and wish you well.

MR. W. G. BEECH (York South): Mr. Speaker, may I first of all thank the hon. Prime Minister for his attendance at our function in York Township just recently, which occurred on a very stormy night, and on the night he was destined to leave for North Bay to attend the funeral of the late hon. member for Nipissing (Mr. Harvey). I think perhaps either one of those factors might have provided him with a good excuse, but he attended this function, and opened the auditorium for us, and I am very sure the people were deeply appreciative of his presence at that time.

I also want to thank the hon. Minister of Municipal Affairs (Mr. Dunbar) for introducing the amendment which will allow municipalities to grant some relief to those holding areas of municipal land, and I am certain it is the intention of the government to assist the municipalities in every way possible, consistent with the autonomy of those municipalities.

In rising to enter this Budget Debate may I first of all congratulate the hon. Prime Minister (Mr. Frost) for again reporting to this House a substantial surplus. While there can be no doubt that the era of prosperity through which we are passing is in large measure responsible for these repeated surpluses, neither can it be disputed that good government has been a deciding factor in that prosperity.

The hon. Prime Minister is to be complimented on his happy faculty of not allowing himself to be over optimistic and being stampeded into expenditures that could well reverse the fortunate position in which we now find ourselves.

It is always the unknown factors which upset the best of calculations, and that is why I was surprised when the member from Kenora (Mr. Wren) based his criticism of the Highways Department on the fact that some contracts had cost more than the original estimates. This often happens. The subway in Toronto, for instance, is a good example. The original Estimate was for $29 million but the final figure will be closer to $50 million but there has been no suggestion of wrongdoing in this case.

Mr. Speaker, I am disappointed there has been no further report from the Committee on Provincial-Municipal relations. During the Budget Speech the hon. Prime Minister again mentioned the matter of a Dominion-Provincial Conference to discuss federal-provincial-municipal finances. We had hoped that such a conference would have been held last year. I sincerely hope that all this talk about an election this year will not prevent the hon. Prime Minister from pressing for this conference at the earliest opportunity. Certainly anything that can be done to bring it on this year will have the hearty support of every member of this House.

The hon. Prime Minister whilst speaking about redistribution mentioned the undesirability of disturbing historic ridings and associations of people. With this I heartily agree, and I am very much disturbed at the growing tendency of some municipalities to "gobble up" the best parts of other municipalities by annexation, and with the assistance of this Legislature. While there is no question of the authority, I wonder if we have the moral right to tell the people of Saltfleet Township they must live in Hamilton, or the people of London Township they must live in the City of London, regardless of whether they want to or not.

What would happen if the province of Quebec suddenly decided to annex the rich mineral lands of Northern Ontario? Let us not forget that it was because Germany decided to annex her neighbours that we had World War II, and these annexations in our province are certainly causing disruption and bad feeling amongst the people of the municipalities affected.

There is little danger of annexations taking place amongst the provinces because their boundaries are defined and protected by the British North America Act and we must work out our destinies within the confines of those boundaries. Let us then place upon the Statute Books of this province an Act entitled the "Emancipation of Municipalities Act," define the boundaries of the municipalities and never let them be disturbed except by mutual agreement of the people concerned. Remember it is not size which will make a municipality great, but the united efforts of its happy and contented citizens.

I am sure all the municipalities appreciate very much the generous grants being paid by the province, but I wonder how many are satisfied, and if they will ever be satisfied.

Mr. Speaker, I hope the day is not far distant when this province will give to the municipalities their charter of freedom. When it will no longer be necessary to have a Department of Municipal Affairs to watch over their every move. When the government shall say to them, "You are now on your own. You are a level of government the same as we, with your own responsibilities and the authority to raise money to carry out those responsibilities. From this day forward it will be your job to build roads and sidewalks, provide water and sewerage facilities, police and fire protection, hydro-electric and transportation services, and all those things which are strictly services to property."

The province in turn will supply those things that are strictly services to persons, such as education, health and welfare.

Now, Mr. Speaker, there is nothing original about this idea.

Every member in this House, regardless of Party, every newspaper regardless of politics, every municipal organization and every municipal council has asked for it. This year the province will pay between 45 and 50 per cent. of the total tax levy of the municipality. No one will dispute that roads are a municipal responsibility up to a size necessary to permit uninterrupted access to the properties facing on those roads, provide for delivery of goods, passage of fire-fighting equipment and to provide right of ways for water, sewers and other services. These roads are rightfully a charge against property and not directly against the owners of cars. Despite this we find the province making grants to maintain these roads. I suggest that the municipality should set the width of road necessary to provide the services to property and the province not pay towards the cost of these roads. However, if the width of the road needs to be increased to provide for traffic coming from provincial highways, then the province should pay the total cost of that extra width. Water supply can be made, as it already is in many municipalities self-sustaining, by charging rates against the users. Sewerage can also be made self-sustaining by charging the users either by a meter rate or a flat rate. Hydro is already self-sustaining, transportation should also be paid for by those who use it. I believe the municipalities should provide sufficient police and traffic officers to maintain law and order and to direct traffic on municipal roads, and this should be a charge against property, but I also believe that enforcement of the Criminal Code should be the responsibility of the province assisted by the Federal Government.

Mr. Speaker, I am sure the Federal Government has no set-up for a Department of Municipal Affairs. Municipalities, it is recognized, are "a baby" of this province, and I think we must agree that those babies have now grown into pretty healthy children, and I think it is about time we cut off their allowance, set them up in business, and send them out to look after themselves.

with the government keeping a paternal eye on them.

In the matter of fire protection I had thought that the fire insurance companies should pay for the upkeep of local fire departments, but if the responsibility lay with them, the situation might develop when the department might only attend those fires where the property was insured.

I therefore suggest that tenants and owners alike be made to carry insurance and the proceeds from the premiums be used to cover losses and the cost of fire fighting and prevention.

It will be readily seen that if charges were made against property according to the cost of the services rendered to that property, it would do away with our vexatious assessment problems and the people who try to keep their places in good shape by an extra coat of paint would not find themselves penalized every time the assessor comes around.

The control of education rests now with the province and if we had the amount paid for municipal roads, fire and police, to what we are already paying for education, we will not be far off paying the full cost. Any additional help required for education, health and welfare of our people, should come from the Federal Government.

In the matter of health, it is a foregone conclusion that contributory insurance must be brought in and this if handled properly would help to eliminate the deficits in our hospitals. Let us, however, profit by the experience of the Unemployment Insurance which only collects from those liable to be unemployed. Have the health insurance paid for by everyone, and not only those who are likely to be sick or unable to pay.

The great work achieved by our Workmen's Compensation Act should be a good guide in setting up a plan of contributory health insurance.

Some criticism has been made of Bill 80 because of an anticipated increase in taxes across the Toronto area. In York Township, it is anticipated there will be an increase of 25 per cent. because of the Metropolitan Council's spending. This is not a matter for Bill 80, but a matter for the members of the Toronto Metropolitan Council. There is a need for refinancing the cost of operating municipalities, until such time as the tax rate has been struck and the bills sent out, which adds very considerably to the tax bill.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to suggest that some steps be taken to allow municipalities to issue an interim tax bill based on a percentage of the anticipated tax levy. This should be done in January so that the municipalities could get some funds to carry on, instead of having to go to the banks to borrow money, at a decent rate of interest. I realize now there is some leeway allowed where the people can prepay their taxes, but I think we should have something more definite, so that the municipalities could get funds in time to enable them to carry on before the regular tax bills are sent out.

I do not wish to take up more of the time of this session, Mr. Speaker, and I appreciate your patience while I harp upon this familiar theme. I have to differ from those who feel our government should all be centralized at Ottawa, and sincerely believe that Canada will progress according to the method in which the municipalities develop and prosper and this is only possibly by co-operation of all levels of government.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): I move the adjournment of the debate.

Motion agreed to.

HON. MR. FROST: I think the clock is a little slow.

MR. SPEAKER: It being 12 of the clock, I do now leave the Chair. The House will resume its sitting at 2 of the clock this afternoon.

The House took recess.

LEGISLATURE OF ONTARIO

Speaker: Honourable The Rev. M. C. DAVIES

Major Alex. C. Lewis, Q.C., Clerk

TUESDAY, APRIL 6, 1954.

2.00 O'CLOCK P.M.

And the House having met.

Prayers.

HON. L. M. FROST (Prime Minister): Mr. Speaker, may I ask you to revert to "Reports by committees" and then "Orders of the day"?

MR. SPEAKER: Reports by committees.

MR. ROBERT MACAULAY: I beg leave to present the minutes of the Standing Committee on Government Commissions and move they be printed as an appendix to the journal of the Legislature.

Motion agreed to.

MR. SPEAKER: Orders of the day.

HON. MR. FROST: Mr. Speaker, I desire to table answers to a number of questions: 33, 34, 44, 57, 10 and 45. Answers to questions 23, 26, 35, 36, 37, 38 and 39 refer to matters which are presently under investigation and should be referred to the Select Committee where they can be dealt with.

MR. F. R. OLIVER (Leader of the Opposition): The hon. Prime Minister says they should be referred to the Select Committee. Does he mean there will be an Order for them to be referred?

HON. MR. FROST: I think that may be done.

MR. OLIVER: I think we should have an understanding on that.

MR. J. B. SALSBERG (St. Andrew): My question can hardly fall into that category.

MR. SPEAKER: Order, please, the hon. member has the floor.

MR. SALSBERG: My question stands on the Order paper as question 26 and can hardly be considered as coming in the category of which the hon. Prime Minister spoke. He speaks of things in the past which should be a matter of record, rather than things under advisement or currently in operation.

HON. MR. FROST: What question was that?

MR. SALSBERG: Question No. 26.

HON. MR. FROST: That is one of the answers just tabled.

MR. SALSBERG: It is tabled?

HON. MR. FROST: Yes.

MR. SALSBERG: I thought the hon. Prime Minister listed it with the group to be referred to the Select Committee a moment ago.

HON. MR. FROST: I must admit on casually looking over the question here, I do not see any reason why it should not be answered, but there will be an Order for Return in any event, and it will be taken care of in that way. I do not see any particular reason why it should not be answered.

MR. SALSBERG: That is the way I felt about it.

HON. MR. FROST: There is an Order for Return in any event, and the hon. member can get it that way.

MR. OLIVER: Am I correct in saying the questions which are on the Order paper have either been answered today or there will be an Order for Return made for the remaining ones, which will be made available before the Highways Committee when it convenes. Is that right?

HON. MR. FROST: That is right. Before the Orders of the day, Mr. Speaker, may I refer to a matter to which the hon. Minister of Lands and Forests (Mr. Gemmell) intended to refer. He is absent from the House today due to the fact that he is travelling by air, and was grounded because of weather conditions, and is therefore prevented from being here this afternoon, unless, in the meantime, the weather improves, and he is able to get here.

I should like to refer to this week, April 4th to 10th which is National Wildlife Week. This week is widely recognized in Canada: as a matter of fact, it is the subject of special programmes this week, and it is a week which is directed to arousing the conscience of the people to the desirability of preserving the wildlife of the country.

I think perhaps this matter comes primarily from those who are interested in the work of Jack Miner, who died, I think, in 1944. Mr. Miner was a great conservationist and a great citizen, and one whose work has lived after him. Coupling his name with that of Wildlife Week, I think that was the origin of setting aside the week. I would like to pay tribute to Mr. Miner and his family, and also to commend the week which has been set aside, not only to commemorate his work, but to emphasize the desirability of preserving and conserving our great wildlife assets.

While I am speaking, at the close of the session, as I will not have the privilege or pleasure of speaking to the House at the end of the session—because that is to be taken over by others—may

I say a word which I do not think will be out of place, and thank the hon. members of this House for the great work they have done in the last approximately 8 weeks.

I have been here for 17 years, and I do not know in that period of time how many sessions, regular and special, I have attended. I do not know of any Parliament which has been more devoted to its work, than has this one. In saying that, I include all hon. members, including the official Opposition. I might say, in going back over those 17 years, I can see very little difference in the appearance of both the hon. Leader of the Opposition or the hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon). They both look about the same. Neither of them seem to have any gray hairs on their heads, which may be because of the life they lead. In the days when I sat over there, I had no gray hairs either. Now my hair has become white. Whether that comes about, according to the expression used by our great Indian citizens who are getting the right to vote by action of this Legislature, "Because of the snows of many winters," or some other things; I do not know. Certainly I have been dealt with differently by nature than have the hon. Leader of the Opposition and the hon. member for Brant.

I would like to pay tribute to the hon. member for Cochrane South (Mr. Grummett) who is always so very careful. I was not going to refer to his hair, although he is stroking it. As I said, he is always a careful member of this House. I am sorry one of his bills was rushed through, but I would like to say that was quite unintentional, and when I saw it, I telephoned, telling him we would refer it back to the committee, if he desired, but he had obtained the answer he required in the meantime.

The hon. member for St. Andrew is more meticulous than ever in collecting great volumes of clippings from newspapers and other periodicals to which he refers in the House. I would say to the hon. members of the House they have shown a devotion to work which has been unexcelled in any session of any Parliament with which I have ever been connected. I should like to pay tribute to the hon. members of the House for that.

Our work here has increased very much. I remember the days as do some of the hon. members here, when it was difficult to complete the 30 days, which was then statutory. That was in the days of Whitney, but it was changed afterwards. Now it is with the greatest difficulty we are able to complete our work in 8 full weeks.

I think at this time, it is proper to refer to the work of all hon. members of the government and Opposition in the people's business, to which I think they have devoted themselves in a very commendable way.

MR. SALSBERG: Now that the hon. Prime Minister has said such nice things about all hon. members—and almost said farewell—I would like to ask him whether he intends to call a special session before the election, or whether he has no such intention.

HON. MR. FROST: Both those questions are purely hypothetical. I do not think they require any answer.

MR. SPEAKER: I would like to take this opportunity, on behalf of the House, to welcome the students from the Clinton Street Public School. They are, indeed, very fortunate to be here today, the day of prorogation. If they are here when the House prorogues, they should not be alarmed by what, in accordance with the usual custom, emanates from the Press Gallery. That does not take place every day, but only once during the year when the House prorogues. We welcome you here today.

ON THE BUDGET

MR. E. P. MORNINGSTAR (Welland): Mr. Speaker and hon. members, at this time I feel I should mention the very good work that this government is doing and especially our Minister of Health, the hon. Mackinnon Phillips, regarding the health of our people.

Firstly, I would like to point out the work that is being done in the Welland and District Health Unit, which was made possible by the grants from this government.

This was the fourth health unit formed in the province and was made up of the municipalities of the City of Welland and the Township of Crowland. It was formed through the efforts of the late Harry Lewis, MPP, and Dr. Kirk Colbeck, Medical Officer of Health for the City of Welland and the Township of Crowland at that time.

The first board consisted of Mr. Hugh Henderson and Mr. J. C. MacIver who were members of the Board of Health for the City of Welland previous to the formation of the unit. Mr. Henry J. Foster, representing the Province of Ontario and myself, at that time Reeve of the Township of Crowland.

The first staff consisted of the Medical Officer of Health, Dr. A. R. Doane, who was loaned for the formation by our government's Department of Health, 4 nurses and a supervisor. In addition there was Mr. Frank Dawdy, who had been sanitary inspector for the City of Welland, who continued in the job. Subsequently a secretary was employed, Mrs. Ida Munkittrick, who is still a member of the staff, in charge of records and statistics.

A generalized programme was started at the outset but the staff was handicapped by the lack of transportation and because they had to assume the responsibility for the total public health programme in the area, taking over the duties of medical services to the schools, carrying on a tuberculosis prevention programme, which had previously been under the supervision of the Niagara Peninsula Sanatorium and doing all the other tasks associated with a generalized programme, such as home visiting for maternal and infant hygiene and the school programme. In addition the sanitary inspector did all the inspections as regards food and milk control and general sanitation. The medical officer of health did all of the medical work for the area including school health services, tuberculosis control programme, venereal disease programme and in general supervised the activities of other members of the staff.

In the period, since that time, many changes have taken place in the basic organization and in the size of the territory served. Dr. Doane returned to the provincial Department of Health on the 1st of December, 1945, 5 months after the formation of the health unit. He was replaced by Dr. L. W. C. Sturgeon on his discharge from the RCAF. Dr. Sturgeon is considered to be one of the best, if not the best, directors in Ontario. It would be interesting to point out that Mrs. Geneva Lewis, wife of the late Harry Lewis, MPP, joined the staff shortly after Mr. Lewis's death and now is supervisor of public health nursing. In 1947 there was particular attention given to the supervision of production, processing and distribution of food products, particularly milk and milk products.

During the next 5 years the quality of milk produced on the farms and many milk houses and electric coolers became a monument to these efforts. During this period the very fine regulations established for the control of eating places were promulgated by the Government of Ontario and the improvement in the restaurants in the health unit area is a tribute to our Department of Health.

The Township of Wainfleet joined the health unit in 1946 and was followed by the Town of Thorold and the Township of Willoughby in 1947, the Township of Thorold and the Village of Fonthill also joined in 1947 and the Township of Stamford in 1949.

In August 1947, a unique programme was instituted in the health unit area. This was the first dental public health programme in the province. It was started because of the interest of the medical profession and a committee thereof in charge of dental public health, seeing what could be done to improve the dental situation across the province. This programme was under the supervision of Dr. S. Lee Honey and was financed for the first 3 years by the Ontario division of the Canadian Red Cross Society and then by the provincial Department of Health.

Last year, in the Township of Crowland, we had the unique distinction of having a class graduate from public school where all of the children were completely free from dental defects. It is hoped that more and more schools will show this fine example.

For many years there has been a programme of medical public health which over the years has taken in research, diagnosis and especially the prevention of disease. But this is not true regarding the dental profession, and I know that the Minister of Health will agree with me when I say that not nearly enough has been carried out in the last few years by either the dental or medical profession in the prevention of those conditions in the mouth related to the teeth and gums.

It is now being carried out in 5 or 6 other health units as well as many individual urban and suburban municipalities. Your provincial Department of Health pays a subsidy toward this very important work in dental public health.

The following information should demonstrate what has been accomplished through the efforts of the municipalities working with the provincial Department of Health in the Welland and District Health Unit.

In 1946 the population was 26,711 with 622 births. In 1953 the population was 72,928 with 2,243 births. In the same period, the number of infants dying in the first year have been reduced from 54 per 1,000 live births to 17 per 1,000 live births.

To demonstrate the new advances in the treatment of tuberculosis, in 1946, with a population of 26,711, there were 21 new cases of tuberculosis. In 1953 with a population of 72,928, there were 60 cases which shows that tuberculosis is still a large problem, however, the ratio of deaths is interesting. With a population of 26,711 in 1946 there were 4 deaths from tuberculosis and in 1953 with a population of 72,928, there were only 2 deaths. This is a good tribute to the division of tuberculosis prevention of the Department of Health and the efforts of the staffs of the local sanatoria. The amount of work done by the nursing staff is also of interest. In 1946 they made 4,000 home visits; in 1953 they made 20,118. In 1946, 800 school procedures were carried out, and in 1953—37,763.

Another important part of the programme is the child health conferences which are operated to supplement the efforts of the practicing physicians in the area. These are held in 20 different locations in the health unit and advice is given by nurses as to what the mother should do to avoid trouble. In 1946 there were 1,954 attendances at child health conferences and in 1953 there were 8,936. The school population in 1946 was approximately 5,000 and in 1953 it was 16,400. In 1953 Dr. Honey made 12,922 examinations of school children and pre-school children for the dental health programme.

I feel that the Welland and District Health Unit has demonstrated the ability of municipalities to work together in matters of health. In this they have been very generously supported by grants of money from this government to help them out in enlarging and improving their programmes. We feel that the health unit idea will eventually take in the whole of the Province of Ontario, and should do so. The difficulty of establishing this principle up to date, of course, has been the lack of staff, but this has been helped by the training programmes for nurses, doctors, veterinarians and others which have been established by this government.

In 1948 this government instituted a mental health programme in the Counties of Welland and Lincoln under the direction of Dr. H. D. Mitchell and then in 1952 this government, through the Department of Health, set up a plan of granting public hospitals the sum of $8,500 a bed. The beds to be used for early diagnosis and treatment of mental illness. The St. Catharines General Hospital immediately applied for a psychiatric unit with an out-patient department in order that they might serve better our great densely populated metropolitan area, and may I say in the future we are going to be able to treat and cure many, many of our people who become emotionally and mentally unstable in the early stages of their illness and not allow them to go on to the stage where they have to be committed to an Ontario Hospital. The American Medical Journal states that the Ontario programme for the prevention and early diagnosis and treatment of mental illness is second to none in the world.

There have been 26 health units established in this province since 1943. Also, our province has the lowest death rate, due to tuberculosis, of all the provinces—probably less than 6.5 per 100,000 population in 1953. This has been achieved by the clinics, operated from the various sanatoria in the province, and also the mobile clinics from the provincial Department of Health. The result of this is that some of the sanatoria in the province now have empty beds. In other words, no one suffering from the disease needs to go untreated as is the case in some of the other countries in the world.

I want to congratulate the Prime Minister of this province and his government for their financial aid and their co-operation with the Ontario cancer treatment and research foundation in the setting up of 8 centres in Ontario for the early diagnosis and treatment of cancer.

Let me pay tribute to our Cancer Foundation in the establishment of a Cobalt Bomb at London, Ont., in the fall of 1951, and the second in Toronto in the fall of 1953, and now the third being installed at the present time at Hamilton; and further Cobalt Bombs will be established within the next year at Windsor, Kingston, Ottawa and the Head of the Lakes.

At this time may I pay tribute to the great work being done by the Ontario Cancer Society. Their work is primarily that of education, which is done through the press, radio, television and pamphlets to inform people of early signs and symptoms of cancer, etc. Secondly they do welfare work, which consists chiefly of providing transportation to and from hospitals for patients suffering from cancer, providing boarding and rooming houses, etc. Thirdly, they collect voluntary funds which are largely used for research.

MR. A. CHARTRAND (Ottawa East): Mr. Speaker, in making my contribution to the Budget Debate, I wish to add some general comments, and to deal with particular aspects of the hon. Provincial Treasurer's address, which I feel have not been given the attention due them.

I congratulate the hon. Treasurer on his great restraint in avoiding any reference to this year's budget as a "sunshine one," for there is little sunshine for the people of Ontario as a whole, in the current budget. In fact, after hearing the statement made in the House, and closely studying the budget itself, I believe one can detect evidence of gloom, if not actual foreboding. The fact that the hon. Prime Minister, who is also the hon. Provincial Treasurer, can no longer speak with great exultation about the budget he prepares, is deeply significant. I believe it is an admission that he has reached the point where he realizes there is a limit to the amount of radiation of super confidence, so to speak, he can impart in his effort to make things appear brighter than they are. He did affect a certain amount of optimism, it is true, but it was the sort of optimism which made me feel he was trying to fortify his own courage, and that of his colleagues on the government benches. I am sure it was an optimism he did not actually feel at the time.

One does not have to examine the budget figures too closely to understand why the hon. Treasurer may have some qualms about the road ahead. His own remarks were enlightening enough, I am sure. It was characteristic of him that he introduced the budget with a reference to something he said 10 years ago.

In 1944, he was bringing down his first budget, and he said:

We are planning for a greater population, for industrial expansion, for prosperous farms and for a happy and prosperous people. We are laying the sure foundation for a greater and stronger Ontario.

I agree, Mr. Speaker, with what the hon. Treasurer said on that occasion. It was a time for optimism, although the war still had another year or more to run before the complete capitulation of the enemy. But there was sound reason for thinking, in view of Canada's great war-time industrial effort, this province was headed for post-war expansion, and it was a matter of good business sense to plan for it.

But, I submit, the hon. Treasurer was only dealing at that time with one side of the picture. No thought was given to the other side, either then or since. This government has been planning only for the good times, the happy times, the times of sunshine. Now, when there are indications of another side to the picture, there is a glaring lack of any preparation for it.

I am not an "apostle of gloom," but I maintain, in the interests of the people of this province, it is the primary duty of any government to look far enough ahead so as to plan for any eventuality. Human experience has taught us that those who indulge in spending sprees always have to face, sooner or later, a day of reckoning. History has shown us that every period of good times has been followed by one of depression. We cannot go on indefinitely living in a fool's paradise. Any government which operates on that theory, is only piling up difficulties for itself, and hardship for the people whose affairs it is administering.

It is quite true that since the end of World War II, our population has increased by nearly one million. But it should be noted there is a tremendous increase in the older-group brackets, and in the newly born. The conclusion to be drawn from these facts is that, in the days ahead, we will be faced with an increasing number of those dependent upon the wages, toils and production of our labour force. In short, we may expect a greater amount of check-off at the source of income, and the take-home pay will have to be partitioned amongst a greater number of dependents. This is another illustration of the fact that if an increased population is a great boon to Ontario, we should be willing to accept the bitter with the sweet. Yet, both the Department of Education and Public Welfare are even now given to a policy of reluctance, if not of fierce resistance, towards these objectives. I am afraid, in the future, there will have to be more flexibility and adaptability from these departments, as the hon. Treasurer of this province is wont to say.

We have witnessed a spectacular and most dynamic expansion in our industrial economy during World War II, and the post-war era. Our economy has responded splendidly to demands for war production, the rehabilitation of devastated countries of Europe in the following years, and, at the same time, overtaking the back-log in the home markets. Yet the "soft spots" in our economy, to which the Budget Speech refers, may be an indication that our industrial expansion is levelling off, and the next few years may have to be devoted to a consolidation of our gains. We should never lose sight, in any event of the fact that, whereas the United States is dependent upon 6 per cent. of her national production for export to balance its imports, we in Canada must export about 25 per cent. of our production to balance our importations.

Of necessity, we must, therefore, rely heavily upon foreign-market consumers to keep our political economy on an even keel as it is highly vulnerable, and exceedingly sensitive to any changing conditions in the world.

Our farmers have enjoyed a relative prosperity for a number of years, but their income is now declining due, no doubt, to the high costs of production and, as an incidence, their inability to meet the competition of foreign markets. A slump on the farming front, Mr. Speaker, is usually the forerunner of slumps in other sectors. The condition of agriculture has always been considered the best barometer of changes which lie ahead in the whole economic atmosphere of any country at any time. If there are "soft spots" in the farming communities, you and I cannot help but look at the future with a great deal of misgiving and foreboding.

A very pious hope has been expressed for the happiness and good health of our people, in the opening sentences of the Budget Statement. In this connection, Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out to the government that, as yet, we have no comprehensive plan for a health-insurance programme to meet the demands and requirements of our population. As to happiness, I would ask the hon. members of this House to look at the lot of the old-age pensioners, those who are destitute, and the plight of that portion of our population in the lower-income brackets, and listen to the comments of the people in their respective ridings.

Ten years ago, the hon. Treasurer of this province was informing the House that the government was "laying a sure foundation for a greater and stronger Ontario."

Mr. Speaker, these ideals and ambitions are commendable. But, in good conscience, and with a true sense of realism, the hon. Treasurer of Ontario should also have informed the people of this province that his endeavours were confined within very definite and strict limits without leaving it to the speculation of the minds of those amongst us who knew better.

The whole scope of our best expectancy in this day and age has been very well summed up, to my way of thinking, by Mr. F. A. Fox, in the Queen's Quarterly Review when he states that,

The standard of living of Canadians has always been determined by their success in the low cost, large scale production, transportation and sale in world markets of a few basic commodities such as fish, furs, wheat, forest and mineral products. During the 20th century, it is true, there has been a vast growth in population and in the volume of goods manufactured for this expanding domestic market. Though the fortunes of an increasing proportion of Canadians may seem thus to have been cut loose from dependence upon selling their goods abroad, it is still true that Canadians will prosper as does their export trade. Their response to changes in world markets may be slower, but the Canadian economy remains a very "open" one, indeed.

I think, from the remarks of the hon. Prime Minister in his Budget Address, we can detect a twinge of conscience on his part, and a feeling that the path ahead is not as smooth, as rosy and as bright as he found it in the immediate post-war period of his earlier budgets. He referred to "soft spots" among our chief economic factors. There can be two widely different interpretations put on the words, "soft spots." I do not think, Mr. Speaker, the hon. Treasurer was referring to the "soft spots" of huge surpluses, and free spending in which the present government has been indulging for so long. It is the other kind, the "soft spots" in the road ahead, which mean trouble, and require careful and judicious steering if they are to be overcome safely, and without grief. So I cannot help wondering, Mr. Speaker, if the hon. Treasurer is aware of these "soft spots," why he did not include something in his address to indicate what the government plans to do about them. His failure to do so, can result in only one conclusion—the government has no plan to deal with them.

These "soft spots," as the hon. Treasurer chooses to call them, are the downward trend in farm incomes, slackness in certain branches of industry, creating unemployment, and the plight of the gold-mining industry. The hon. Treasurer acknowledges they are serious dislocations in our economy and I think we can all agree on that. I think, too, we must recognize them for what they are, not temporary disturbances, but fore-runners of depression, warning signs we must heed and with which to be prepared to deal.

Yet the hon. Treasurer assures us that an attitude of confidence is justified because of vigorous elements in our economy, which engenders confidence.

And what are these elements? Because our population is increasing at at rate of 150,000 a year, the hon. Treasurer claims our domestic market is expanding. I really wonder what the farmers, whose income is declining, think about that. I am sure the cheese producers in this province last year would be hard to convince. When the domestic market and this provincial government failed them, they would have been in a sorry plight today, had it not been for the Federal Government's aid in price support and a last-minute contract from the United Kingdom, as the hon. member for Stormont (Mr. Manley) pointed out in his address in this House recently.

The hon. Treasurer also claims the value of capital investment in Ontario will increase this year, from 22 per cent. of all private and public spending, to 26 per cent. Personal income and public spending will advance, and excesses which foreshadowed economic slumps in the past have been avoided. Another abstract idea of his is that any slack in employment will be taken up by such construction projects as the natural gas-pipe line from Alberta to central Canada, and the St. Lawrence seaway and power development. Just another instance of "wishful thinking" in the mind of the hon. Treasurer, to allay his twinge of conscience. I think, Mr. Speaker, there is reasonable doubt as to whether these projects, in themselves, will be sufficient to take up any widespread slackness in industry. Undoubtedly, they will help. But these things are still in the planning stage. In the case of the gas-pipe line, the major part of the work will be done outside this province.

I submit we have to get away from this kind of hypothetical reasoning, and get down to concrete proposals in dealing with the dark side of the picture which the hon. Treasurer has given us, whether intentionally or not. The right kind of confidence is that which is based on proper planning and definite measures designed to do the greatest good to the largest number in times when our economic structure is revealing so-called "soft spots."

Another significant factor which points to the roughness of the road ahead can be detected in the hon. Treasurer's announcement, made the day before he presented his Budget Address. I refer, of course, to what the newspapers have been pleased to call the "province's fiscal brain trust," which is provided for in Bill No. 91, "an Act for the Financial Administration of the Government of Ontario and for the Organization of the Treasury Department." I had hoped this might be the set-up needed to steer the government into saner and surer channels of financial administration. But, after studying the budget, Mr. Speaker, I cannot help but feel it is a vain hope. I am wondering if we are not running away from responsible government, and if this is not an organization set up to bear the responsibility for past mistakes; the "whipping boys" upon whom will be foisted the follies and foibles of the government's financial structure.

The more one looks at the budget, crosswise and lengthwise, the more one is struck by its concern for "Big Business." It is, indeed, Mr. Speaker, "Big Business" in its inspiration. "Big Business" it is, in its endeavour and "Big Business" it will remain, when the full cycle is complete.

We are reminded, for instance, that the ordinary and capital Estimates this coming year will amount to over $509 million, without taking into account the supplementary Estimates. This colossal sum is to be underwritten by direct taxation and by borrowing, which is, in the end, but one form of deferred taxation.

In coming to a true understanding of this budget, and for the purpose of passing judgment on it in an objective, realistic and dispassionate manner, it is essential we should look at its sources of income, and explore its avenues of expenditure. In doing so, I believe we should be guided by two principles which have acquired such general acceptance as to be classified as unassailable criterions and unailing truisms of political economy. The first is that taxation should be looked upon somewhat as partial confiscation by the state of corporation and private incomes, with due regard for their ability to shoulder the burden, for the double purpose of administering the business of the political body, and also creating a redistribution of wealth among the underprivileged classes. The second principle is that the social, political and economical health of a country—or a province—should be measured by the enterprise, the welfare and the living conditions of its people in the lower-income brackets of society.

The hon. Treasurer boasts that the people of Ontario enjoy about the lowest rate of taxation in Canada. In my opinion, that means only one thing: the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer. It is an established fact that a low rate of taxation is of much greater benefit to the rich than to the poor and, under it, the privileged classes derive more opportunities to amass greater wealth, than do those in the underprivileged ranks.

To illustrate the point I have in mind, may I ask you, Mr. Speaker, what is there in the whole length and breadth of this budget, at which the average breadwinner in this province can look, and truthfully say with joy in his heart: "This is for me"? Little or nothing, I am sorry to say. Can he view with delight the mounting expenditures every year, to figures which now have passed the $500 million mark? Can he look with tranquility on the soaring net debt of this province, which now has reached the staggering sum of over $600 million, and a gross debt of over $1 billion, which the hon. Treasurer informed this House would be $1½ billion by 1958 or 1959? Can the average taxpayer take any comfort from the huge sums the government is "salting away" in the Highway Reserve Fund, and other accounts, over which the members of this House have no voting power nor voice as to its expenditure? If the people of Ontario are not already beginning to doubt the wisdom of the financial administration of this government, I say it is high time they should. In any event, I am sure it will not be long before it is impressed upon them in a way that will be plain to all.

Yes, Mr. Speaker, I submit the "juggling" of provincial finances has reached a point where the juggler, no matter how nimble and clever he has been in the past, has found it necessary to bring in 5 assistants. But I doubt if even they can extricate him from the perilous position in which he now finds himself.

I note there is a chapter in the hon. Treasurer's Budget Statement devoted to "Housing." How this government can take any credit for relieving the housing situation in Ontario, is beyond the realm of my imagination. As everyone knows, the housing situation is still one of our most troublesome problems. If, as the hon. Treasurer says, more than a quarter of a million housing units have been built in Ontario since 1944, providing accommodation for a million people, he should give credit where credit is due—to the Liberal Government at Ottawa.

The Ontario Government should hide its head in shame for its failure to take full advantage of the partnership agreement with the Federal Government under the National Housing Act. For 3 or 4 years it did little or nothing about the most acute housing shortage this province has ever experienced, and it tried to "pull the wool" over the people's eyes by foisting the blame for its own shortcomings on to the government at Ottawa. Its efforts in respect to housing have been tangled in planning regulations, and various other limitations, to the point of exasperation. It further aggravated the situation by tossing rent controls out, and placing a new responsibility on the congested and burdened municipalities. Just another instance, I submit, Mr. Speaker, of the government catering to "big business" at the expense of the little fellow.

Now we find further evidence of this sort in the Ontario Government's failure to deal successfully with the serviced land problem. Only a few days ago, the president of the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation, the Ottawa Government's housing authority, told the Metropolitan Home Builders' Association at a meeting here in Toronto, the greatest danger facing an increased volume of residential building is the high price of land, particularly in the Toronto district. It is clear from that statement, land speculators are endeavouring to reap a harvest of dollars by asking absurdly high prices for lots, taking advantage of the housing needs of the people of this metropolitan area.

This could have been prevented to a great extent, had this government shown any real concern about the housing situation, and made any worthwhile effort to aid and encourage municipalities to obtain sites for low-cost housing units.

So today, in the thickly populated areas, there is little prospect for low-cost housing and reasonable rents, and the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation will be forced to refuse recognition of land prices above a certain figure. This, of course, will slow down the building of housing units. Its effect can be seen already in the building rate figures supplied by the Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation which show the building rate in the Toronto area is only 10 for every 1,000 increase in population, whereas, in Edmonton, it is 23 for each 1,000 and in Calgary 21.

The failure of Ontario to join with the Federal Government in providing serviced land for residential construction, has cost home purchasers in the Toronto area alone at least $36 million since 1949, the federal member for Toronto Davenport declared in the House of Commons in January. The people of Ontario will get no crumbs of satisfaction out of the hon. Treasurer's budget reference to Housing, because there are none.

And what of the old-age pensioners? They, too, will look in vain for any supplementary aid from the provincial budget, such as is provided in two other provinces. The hon. Treasurer makes no mention of this in the Budget Statement, of course, but he committed himself in the House on this subject, under pressure of Opposition criticism. His reasons for not supplementing pensions are interesting, if not convincing. He said the government will not consider supplementary allowances for old-age pensioners, because they would be difficult to administer, and might force this province to impose a sales tax to pay for them.

Yet the government will receive $6 million more this year from the tax-rental agreement, millions of dollars in profits from liquor, succession duties and other sources, but it cannot spare even a pittance from this wealth to relieve the plight of thousands of our elderly people who are barely existing under the burden of today's living costs.

Oh, I know, the hon. Treasurer, in his bland way, will say that Ottawa has taken on the responsibility of these old-age pensioners, and that it is a federal matter. But that does not relieve this government's responsibility toward those in this province by one iota, and I challenge the hon. Prime Minister, and his political cohorts, to go out on the hustings in the next election campaign, and make such flimsy excuses as he did in this House on March 18th last, and see what the reaction of the people of this province will be. I do not think he can "get away with it," and no one knows that better than the hon. Prime Minister himself.

This thing the hon. Treasurer has given us is a "preferred class budget." This government is spending millions on hospitals, yet hospital costs are rising so fast only the well-to-do can afford to enter them for treatment. Millions of dollars are going into education, yet school costs are soaring, and our teachers are worried over the increasing numbers of pupils of high school age who fail to finish their courses. Millions of dollars are being spent on super highways, yet motoring costs are reaching the luxury stage, where soon only the rich can afford them. It is no wonder we can detect gloom and foreboding in the hon. Treasurer's presentation of Ontario's financial situation, so he finds it necessary to draw attention to the "soft spots." I say to him that Ontario's financial administration is definitely "on the spot," and, if he does not realize it now, sooner or later he is going to find it out the "hard way."

I could carry the probe into the municipal field, education and other social agencies, but the picture would always be the same. I do not wish to prolong this address beyond the point of its merit. There is not the slightest doubt in my mind, but that the government of the day, with a massive majority at its command, can win the day at any moment of its choosing, thus securing for its members the approval of this budget—"hook, line and sinker."

As a Liberal member of this House, however, I wish to register my vote as a conscientious objector to this kind of budget. I have examined it from its zenith to its nadir. I have weighed it, and found it wanting in humanitarian values and social virtues. My colleagues and myself may appear to be as "a voice crying in the wilderness" at the moment, but there is always the future ahead of us. When the day of reckoning comes in the days that lie ahead, I wish the people of Ontario to remember that at the critical, crucial and psychological moment, I was on their side, and not amongst the missing and/or the absentees. Needless to say, Mr. Speaker, after these remarks, I intend to cast my vote for the amendment, in opposition to the main motion.

HON. G. H. DUNBAR (Minister of Municipal Affairs): Mr. Speaker, in rising to take part in this debate on the budget, I do so with a great deal of pleasure, because I have enjoyed myself with our own hon. members, and those in Opposition during this session.

The hon. Prime Minister mentioned something about attentiveness to duty, by the hon. members, and I would like to say that the Whip has kept record of the figures, and he has handed me the statistics which show that this session totalled 2,700 man hours, the total absenteeism was only 320 man hours, which indicates an 88.2 per cent. attendance at the sittings. I really believe that Ottawa could take a page out of that book, as regards hon. members attending sittings.

I tried to follow the hon. member for Ottawa East (Mr. Chartrand) when he referred to housing, and I was quite interested in hearing him give all the credit to the Federal Government. He said they had been doing such a wonderful job in regard to housing, and then, almost in the next breath, he said it was "in a worse mess than it ever was." Who fell down?

MR. CHARTRAND: Yes, who?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Not this government, because we have not turned down a single offer to co-operate with Ottawa in any way, and when we made a suggestion, we were quietly told to "get out" of the field of advancing funds on mortgages; that they would get the initial payments, and it would not be necessary for Ontario to enter into the field of second mortgages and that conditions were quite satisfactory to encourage housing.

The hon. member (Mr. Chartrand) criticized the hon. Prime Minister for his budget, presented in his capacity of hon. Provincial Treasurer. Some years ago, this is exactly what the then hon. Prime Minister said:

I am laying the foundation for great industrial expansion.

Were not those great words? Has that prophecy not come true? Have we not had a great industrial expansion in Ontario? If not, how is it that our assessments have risen from $3 billion in 1943, to $6 billion in 1953?

One hon. member said, during this session, something to the effect that it would be better if we went back to the one-mill subsidy to assist municipalities. It would be a wonderful thing for the government because our grants to municipalities of $134 million this year will equal 22 mills on the municipal assessments of Ontario municipalities. We are paying 22 mills to the municipalities, instead of only one. And if we had figured the mill rate on the assessment of 1943, we would have been paying 44 mills, so that some of the municipalities would be paying a dividend to their taxpayers.

That is the sort of government we have, and what we have been doing to assist the "little people"—and those are the "little people" in the municipalities.

Now, may we consider the different departments for a moment. First, let us consider the Department of Welfare. It has been said that nothing is being done. I have had requests made to me, and I know the hon. Minister of Welfare has had requests made to him during the last year concerning various localities where there were large homes, where the family has been broken up, which would be very adaptable for the old people, where they could be looked after well, and they would probably be better off, at least in some respects, than in the homes for the aged which we have today. The department has agreed to share in the expense for keeping these aged people in private homes, to the extent of 50 per cent., that is, the provincial government will pay $30 and the municipality will pay a like amount of $30, but this apparently is something for which the hon. member does not give us credit. We are willing to assist the people in these private homes to the extent of $60 a month, not $40.

I want to congratulate the hon. Minister of Welfare on that step. I think that is affording wonderful relief, not only in the towns and cities, but in the country places.

If you go into smaller villages, you will find homes which, on account of their size, do not seem to fit into the conditions which are required, and you will find people living in smaller homes today than formerly, many of them of the ranch type, and they could easily be used to great advantage, and afford a saving of money to the municipalities, as well as a saving to the government.

Also, I want to compliment the hon. Minister on increasing the grant for charitable institutions from $1,000 per bed to $2,000. That will be of great assistance to the charitable institutions. I know it will be of great assistance to the people in Ottawa. There is one Old People's Home, in Ottawa, in particular, which will find this of wonderful assistance, as they will now be getting $2,000 per bed. I think it is a wonderful thing.

Now, let me turn to our Health Department. I think if there is any hon. member or Minister who deserves a star it should go to the hon. Minister of Health. Public Health has been his hobby ever since he was a country doctor in his home town and has continued since he entered this House and became the hon. Minister of Health. He has always felt that something should be done for people who are mentally ill, but not sufficiently to require to be transferred to one of the senior institutions, and he has made provision for accommodation for such people in the general hospitals throughout this province, and has provided places where men and women who are mentally ill, may be treated, almost the same as if they were suffering from pneumonia or some other similar disease. In that way, there is no stigma attached either to the patient or his family. The patients may be taken into hospitals and treated there before being admitted to a senior hospital, if that should become necessary. My own personal feeling is that 75 per cent. of them will never go any further, but will be cured in the general hospitals.

That has been going on all over the province. We have one example of that in my own city of Ottawa, where we have a psychiatric unit in the General Hospital which has 30 beds, and they have received a grant of $255,000, which is $8,500 per bed, for these special units.

Is that not providing a wonderful encouragement for people who are looking after those who are unfortunately mentally ill?

When I was Minister of Reform Institutions, I knew—and the hon. Prime Minister knew—there were people placed in the county or city jails who should never have been there, but there was no place to put them, to see if they could be assisted and perhaps cured, and be sent happily back to their homes.

I was the Ottawa General Hospital of which I was speaking. Also, in the Civic Hospital at Ottawa, we have a unit under construction, which will provide 40 beds, and we have an approved grant of $340,000.

Those two amounts, do not represent simply a small sum of money—$255,000, and $340,000. Again may I ask the hon. members if that is not helping the “little people?” Are we taking money from the poor people, and giving it to the rich? I say not. I believe that more of that should be carried on in this province.

In London, Ontario, at St. Joseph's Hospital, they are providing 33 beds; in Victoria Hospital they have 48 under construction; in St. Catharines, 22; in Toronto 38 at the Western Hospital and 30 at St. Michael's Hospital, and in the Kingston General Hospital, 40 beds.

And, Mr. Speaker, may I remind the hon. members that Ontario is the first province in the world to carry out a scheme of this kind; not the first in the Dominion of Canada, but the first in the world. Therefore, I say that if the hon. Minister of Health does not get a star on this earth, he certainly will have one later on.

MR. OLIVER: Better given it to him here, and not take any chances.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Under the able administration of the hon. Minister of Health, we are “going places” and that progress is going to continue.

The hon. member said we were not preparing at all for the future. I noticed some very black clouds on the faces on the opposite side of the Chamber, when the hon. member was speaking. I cannot see that they are justified at all. I see everything bright and rosy. When I go to Ottawa, or to different towns, and meet people, they say to me, “You are making a great job of it.” That does not mean that I, personally, am making a great job of it, but they are referring to the wonderful hon. Prime Minister we have, and to the great Cabinet he has behind him. And, Mr. Speaker, they are not only speaking that way, but they are voting that way when given the opportunity.

The hon. member for Ottawa East advised us to be fearful, and to be very careful if another election is called. The hon. member for St. Andrew (Mr. Salsberg) warned the House last night that he had some inside information—

MR. SALSBERG: I did not "warn" the House, I "informed" it.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: That is right, the hon. member informed the House that he had some inside information about a snap election.

MR. SALSBERG: I said it would be "in the fall." I said nothing about a "snap" election.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member for Ottawa East also said that this was an election budget. Mr. Speaker, may I ask hon. members if they have ever known one of the 12 budgets the hon. Provincial Treasurer has prepared, which was not an election budget?

MR. SALSBERG: Politics all the time.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: The hon. member for Ottawa East mentioned a statement by the then hon. Prime Minister, in 1944. Very well. But what did the people say in 1945? They said, "We believe in Frost; we believe in the hon. members at that time; we believe in the Cabinet; and we believe every hon. member of the House is sincere, and we will send them back." I was asked recently, "Is there any talk about an election in Toronto?" and I said, "I do not think so," and this gentleman said, "I do not see why you should have one for another ten years, the people are so satisfied."

Now, Mr. Speaker, a word regarding highways. When the hon. member for Ottawa East—

MR. OLIVER: The best part of Ottawa.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: —was expressing his criticisms but not offering any solution, it reminded me of a story, concerning an American soldier who was being punished, and his officer said to him, "Dig several holes, and throw the dirt out." The officer came along a little later, and said, "What are you throwing the dirt up here for?" and the soldier said, "There is no other place to throw it, sir," and the officer said, "Well, dig another hole and throw it in there." I was reminded of that, when the hon. member was speaking, and it occurred to me that he might have to "dig another hole."

The hon. member spoke about money spent by the Department of Highways, and said the House had nothing to say about it. If the hon. member was in the House when the Department of Highways' Estimates were passed, he would realize that there was no money in the Highways Department Estimates which was not voted upon.

A few years ago, that was not the case. The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) brought it up at the time when I was the Acting Minister of Highways, during the unfortunate absence of the hon. Minister. That situation has been changed, and now every dollar spent by the Highways Department is passed by this House. I may also say that we have considerable money this year, as the budget provides $148 million for highways throughout the Province of Ontario and we must not forget there is a little something in reserve, but we do not want to "blow" about all the money we have, because we are going to have some good places to use it during the year. I can assure the hon. members we are going to spend it for the benefit of the "little people," who have shown their appreciation of what has been done for them by sending this government back year after year.

As regards the influx of tourists from outside Ontario; a great number of them are from the United States, and whether the hon. member for St. Andrew does like the Americans or not, the government likes them, is pleased to have them come here, and leave their money. Let me just remind the hon. members that this year, the influx of tourists was 117 per cent. higher than it was in 1945, and I ask the hon. members to consider the value of the dollars they left in this province, to be distributed amongst all the people, in the north, in the south, in the east, and we must not forget the Ottawa River Valley, because they do go down there, too.

MR. SALSBERG: Most of them come to see Niagara Falls and the Park anyway. They would come without any advertising.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There are two people the hon. member for St. Andrew does not like.

MR. SALSBERG: I beg your pardon?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: There are two people the hon. member does not like; the Americans and the police.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh. I would not say that.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: You do not like them. I do not know why.

MR. SALSBERG: Oh yes, I do. I really like them both.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: Now, may we give a few minutes consideration to the question of "Education," and to the work of the hon. Minister of Education (Mr. Dunlop) and how he has been handling the Department, as well he might, with the experience he has had. I do not know whether I offended any person or not on one occasion, when I was speaking at the opening of a school in Carleton County. The hon. Minister of Education was not there, unfortunately, but the hon. Mr. Drew happened to be there, when I said it was the first time in my experience, since I have been a member of the House—even when I was in Opposition—when we had a real educationalist as Minister of Education for the Province of Ontario.

Education is a difficult problem, and made more difficult by the growth of this province up to the present time. For instance, there are about 60,000 new students each year in the schools. That demonstrates clearly the growth of the population of the Province of Ontario, and it is not something which occurs just for one year and then drops off, but it is a steady increase, going on all the time.

During this present session, the hon. Minister has done a very worth-while piece of work in changing the number of years for calculation of superannuation for teachers, from 15 years down to 10 years. I do not know whether the teachers are "taking it out on me," but I have a stack of letters that high (indicating) congratulating the government on this move by the hon. Minister of Education, in reducing the number of years from 15 to 10.

MR. T. R. DENT (Oxford): Good old "Uncle George."

HON. MR. DUNBAR: As a clear indication of the growth of the province, may I say we have applications from 220 municipalities in the province of Ontario to date, claiming their population has increased over 7 per cent. That is since the census of 1951. We may receive applications from others, but at least 220 municipalities have claimed the increase of over 7 per cent.

MR. SALSBERG: Is that because of the government?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: All because of the good government we are giving. When we go outside, I, personally, have been talking to people, and they ask you, "What is wrong with the government?" and I invariably answer, "What are you talking about?" I feel that this province is one in which we should believe. Sometimes, to get an argument started, I have to say something, taking the opposite view, but they do not last very long, because as a rule I am stopped pretty short.

MR. SALSBERG: If the hon. Minister was to speak of municipal affairs, he would soon find out.

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I gave you the figure a while ago about the growth, that is, the increase in assessment, from $3 billion to $6 billion, that is from 1943 to 1953. That is, indeed, a wonderful growth. When you figure out from this chart, you will find in your copy of the municipal directory, it starts back with 1941, when we had a population of 3,509,341, with an assessment of $2,986,105,000. Then, in 1946, people had begun to realize they had a really good government in Ontario, and it began to climb. In 1947, the population was 3,854,496, and the assessment also increased until now it stands at $6,056,808,000. That is as it stood at the end of last year, and as you will notice in the directory, the population is now 4,647,777. I think that represents a wonderful increase.

MR. H. C. NIXON (Brant): How did it start?

HON. MR. DUNBAR: I not not know, unless it was because the people had confidence in this government. The municipal picture of the province of Ontario, of course, has increased, quite naturally. One good reason why the municipal picture would increase, is a recovery from the backlog of work which had been held over during the war years, because manpower was so scarce, and after the end of the war, the backlog had to be looked after.

The gross debenture debt was 9.19 per cent. of the taxable assessment in 1943, and with all these huge increases, that figure has only risen to 10.3 per cent., so you can see our municipalities throughout the Province of Ontario were never in a more sound position financially than they are today. And, with the Lord's help, our hon. Prime Minister will be spared, and his good health will continue, until Ontario is in even a better financial position.

The financial picture of the province is reflected in the financial prosperity of the municipalities, in the tax sections, and that is always a pretty good yardstick by which to go, that is, if the taxes are being collected.

In regard to tax collection; in the cities, 99 per cent. of the municipal current levy was collected last year; in towns and villages, it amounted to 98.9 per cent. of the municipal current levy, and in townships, 97.7 per cent., so hon. members can see, so far as municipalities are concerned, we have nothing to fear.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to say in closing, to the hon. members, that, in my opinion, one of the main reasons for the development of the Province of Ontario is because of the sound financing by the hon. Provincial Treasurer, and I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate him, and the officials of his department for the able budget presented, and for the excellent manner in which the financial affairs of the Province of Ontario have been conducted for the past eleven years, during which the province has always ended the year with a surplus, and has budgeted for a surplus next year, regardless of all expenditures.

Mr. Speaker, there is one thing I have forgotten to mention. May I say to the hon. members opposite, that they probably are aware of the condition of the roads in the back concessions, and it is a poor time for an election, and if I may give them a word of advice, I would suggest that they vote with the government.

MR. OLIVER: I think we will take a long chance.

MR. SPEAKER: Mr. Frost moved that I do now leave the Chair, and the House resolve itself into Committee of Supply.

The hon. member for Brant (Mr. Nixon) moved an amendment in the following words:

But this House does not approve the policy of the government in borrowing hundreds of millions of dollars in the United States, repayable as to principal and interest in United States funds.

The Vote will be on the amendment.

Call in the members.

The House divided.

The amendment was negived on division as follows:

CLERK OF THE HOUSE: The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor doth thank Her Majesty's dutiful and loyal subjects, accept their benevolence and assent to this bill in Her Majesty's name.

PROROGATION SPEECH, LIEUTENANT-GOVERNOR

His Honour was then pleased to deliver the following gracious speech:

HON. LOUIS O. BREITHAUP
(Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Ontario):

Mr. Speaker and Members of the Legislative Assembly:

Before proroguing this fourth session of the Twenty-fourth Legislature of the Province of Ontario, I wish, in the name of Her Majesty, to thank you for your consideration of the many measures that have been introduced and your faithful attention to the requirements of this rapidly expanding economy.

During this session many enactments have been passed. All of them are designed in some measure to promote the province's development, to increase production and income, to assist the municipalities, to improve our educational system, to strengthen the freedoms of our democratic heritage, to extend human welfare and, in short, to make Ontario a better place in which to live.

The government has been concerned not only with promoting an environment conducive to industrial expansion and the creation of employment opportunities, but also with endeavouring always to assure the constant advance of human betterment in all sectors of the province.

A notable advance was made when you approved The Fair Accommodation Practices Act. This is one of several measures that has been adopted in this Legislature in the last 10 years to make Ontario a home of free men, where the peoples of different racial origins and religious faiths may live and work in harmony. By these acts, you have declared your opposition to discrimination. The first act in this series, The Racial Discrimination Act, was passed in 1944. In 1950, The Conveyancing and Law Property Act was amended, rendering covenants void that restrict the sale, ownership, occupation or use of land because of race or creed. In that year, The Labour Relations Act was also passed, invalidating any collective agreement between labour and management that discriminates against any person because of his race or religious faith. In 1951, you gave your approval to The Fair Employment Practices Act, and now you have endorsed The Fair Accommodation Practices Act.

The Select Committee on Indian Affairs has submitted its report containing many recommendations, one of which finds fruition in The Election Act passed at this session. Henceforth, Indians in Ontario—numbering 35,000—will have full voting rights in provincial elections, while at the same time their treaty rights will continue to be respected and preserved for them. The recommendations of the committee will do much to improve the status and living conditions of these people.

The feeling of tension and insecurity that exists throughout the world today underscores the need for a clear recognition of human rights and fundamental freedoms. By these measures you have given unmistakable evidence that the inherent dignity of mankind and the inalienable, and equal, rights of all members of the human family, which are the very foundation of a democratic society, are to be treasured and respected in this province.

In the field of welfare, you have given your approval to the enactment of several new measures. The capital construction grant for charitable institutions has been doubled. Measures have been adopted for increasing the number of homes for the aged. There has been a consolidation into one Act of The Children's Protection Act, The Adoption Act and The Children of Unmarried Parents Act, bringing this legislation into conformity with the most modern practice.

You have approved various Acts providing for new advances in the field of health. Among them is an Act designed to promote community mental health by providing advice and assistance in this respect to hospitals and local public health agencies. You have also authorized public hospitals to extend treatment services in respect of patients suffering from psychiatric disorders.

In education, there has been a consolidation into 3 Acts of various provisions, which were scattered through a considerable number of Statutes. You have also approved an amendment to The Teacher's Superannuation Act which will result in higher pensions for school teachers. To assist in the maintenance of our educational system, increased capital and maintenance grants have been provided for school boards and universities.

Of almost universal benefit to the people of this province is the new enactment providing for an expansion of the provincial parks system. With the growth in our population and the increase in urban development, park lands have become increasingly important for the enjoyment and recreation of our people. The new policy provides for both an improvement of existing parks and for the acquisition of new park areas which will preserve the beauties of the countryside and be reflected in the health and happiness of the people.

The improvement to Ontario's rural telephone service, which was started under The Rural Telephone Systems Act of 1951, will now receive fresh impetus under the bill passed at this session, providing for the creation of The Ontario Telephone Authority. Funds have also been provided to continue the extension of hydro-electric power in the rural parts of Ontario.

With the continuing increase in motor vehicle traffic, another extensive programme of highway construction will be undertaken during the present fiscal year. The Select Committee on Highways will be provided with every opportunity and facility for an examination of highway administration. Another Select Committee will examine into the great problem of highway safety.

To make provision for an extraordinary expansion in the market for natural gas in Ontario, you have authorized the establishment of the Ontario Fuel Board to control and regulate the production and distribution of natural gas and to maintain adequate coal and other fuel supplies in the province in emergencies.

You have approved the setting up of a Committee of Inquiry into the Economics of the Gold Mining Industry.

The work of the Select Committees on Indian Affairs, Reform Institutions, Cemeteries, Companies, Lake Levels, Election and Voters' Lists and Redistribution has been concluded, and the chairmen and members of these committees are to be highly commended for their conscientious and able endeavours.

The Committee on Reform Institutions has submitted its report to the Legislature and it is being studied, and will continue to be studied, with utmost care in the implementation of a long-range programme of prisoner reform and rehabilitation.

The Committee on Cemeteries has made valuable recommendations which have been translated into amendments to The Cemeteries Act, dealing with administration, perpetual care funds and the sale of cemetery lots.

The Committee on Lands and Forests has been giving consideration to the White Paper on Forestry. This White Paper sets out the province's long-term aims for the elimination of indiscriminate cutting, the integration of operations to secure the maximum value from timber resources, the provision of access roads and the strengthening of the forest and game protection and conservation services. At this session, The Crown Timber Act was amended, requiring timber licences to adopt measures to assure the regeneration of cut-over areas.

Special mention should be made of the Committee on Agriculture. This committee has been considering a bill for the consolidation of The Milk Control Act, The Dairy Products Act, The Milk and Cream Act and provisions of The Farm Products Marketing Act and The Farm Products Grades and Sales Act dealing with dairy products. The object of this legislation has been to provide better over-all management and co-ordination of all activities relating to dairy producers and the orderly marketing of their products. Such a wide area of agreement was reached in the discussions that the committee has been able to report back to the Legislature with the result that you have passed The Milk Industry Act, 1954, bringing this programme into effect.

Several other agricultural Acts, such as The Plant Diseases Act, The Livestock and Livestock Products Act, The Bees Act and The Agricultural Societies Act, have been amended and revised.

The work of the Committee on Redistribution has made rapid progress, and on the basis of its recommendations an enactment has been approved, increasing the number of constituencies and members in the Legislature to 98. The effect of this act is to provide additional representation for areas of the province in which large increases in population have been experienced.

The activities of other committees of the House, including the Private Bills Committee, the Committee on Election Laws and the Committees on Companies and Mines, have been carried forward in a diligent and capable manner, and I congratulate all the members of these committees for the contribution they have made to the study and solution of these important problems.

You have amended The Labour Relations Act to clarify and improve the administration and associated powers for dealing with collective bargaining. Another Act provides protection for persons working in trenches by assuring that these be shored and timbered in accordance with appropriate standards.

You have made amendments to The Municipal Act and The Assessment Act, The Municipal Subsidies Adjustment Act, 1953, has been amended in order to provide that a municipality will not receive less under The Unconditional Grants Act, The Fire Departments Act and The Police Act than it received in 1953 in respect of the maintenance and operation of its fire department and police force and the 1-mill subsidy.

You have approved an amendment to The Theatres Act, 1953, providing that no drive-in theatre may be constructed in a township without the approval of the council of the township. An amendment to The Fire Marshal's Act has been passed, putting into statutory form the standards for fire hose couplings and requiring that they be maintained. Amendments have been made to The Corporations Act, 1953, and The Corporations Information Act, 1953. The Juvenile and Family Courts Act and The Parents' Maintenance Act have been revised.

During the present session, you have also passed an Act strengthening the financial administration of the Government of Ontario and providing improved financial control of departmental expenditures.

The large developmental programme of the government has been financed without the necessity of imposing any new forms of taxation or of raising rates of existing taxes. Indeed, amendments have been enacted providing for certain minor tax reductions.

To assist the municipalities to finance their services, the province has provided another increase in its grants to local governments, school boards and public general hospitals. Large capital and maintenance grants have again been authorized for municipal roads and health, welfare and educational services.

Housing also continues to be a subject of active interest and support by the government, and financial provisions are being made to carry on the various programmes available under federal-provincial partnership arrangements.

I thank the hon. members for the appropriation of public funds to carry on the essential services of the government.

I pray that Divine Providence will continue to bless this province and that the legislative programme adopted at this session will enhance the well-being, happiness and security of our people.

HON. A. G. WELSH (Provincial Secretary) : Mr. Speaker, and members of the Legislative Assembly; it is the will and pleasure of The Honourable the Lieutenant-Governor that this Legislative Assembly be prorogued, and this Legislative Assembly is, accordingly, prorogued.

His Honour, the Lieutenant-Governor, was pleased to retire from the Chamber.

The House prorogued at 4.18 of the clock, p.m.
